'Two dramas to knock you sideways'

It's rare for two dramas to come along at the same time and knock me sideways. But I've been left with a spinning head thanks to Years and Years (Tuesday BBC1) and The Virtues (Wednesday C4), both of them – in their own ways – bold and shocking new series. The first finds Russell T Davies imagining a worryingly plausible dystopian near future, the second sees actor Stephen Graham collaborating again with Shane Meadows for a story about a recovering alcoholic struggling after a major setback in his life. Expect to be unnerved and impressed by each show.

It's also a strong seven days for documentaries, with two very familiar faces being frank about their mental health. In Nadiya: Anxiety and Me (Wednesday BBC1), Bake Off winner Nadiya Hussain describes the coping mechanisms she uses to keep the "monster" at bay. And David Harewood is on a journey of self-discovery in Psychosis and Me (Thursday BBC2), as he gets some new insights into why he was sectioned at the age of 23. At one point, the normally eloquent actor finds himself almost lost for words thanks to insights from his mum.

CRACKING DRAMA
Top: Emma Thompson in Years and Years; above, Stephen Graham in The Virtues

But it's not all emotional torment this week as we also welcome the return of The Yorkshire Railway: All Aboard (Friday Channel 5), which is back for a second run. I know it's basically Thomas & Friends for grown-ups, but I won't hear a word against the likes of lovable engine shed manager Piglet and 83-year-old ticket inspector Bertie Blower. It's gentle, nostalgic and perfect company when it comes to winding down at the end of the working week.

WHAT I'M WATCHING...

JOHN SERGEANT

'I have been catching up with the BBC2 series Looking for Rembrandt and I thought, 'I bet we don't find him'," says the former political journalist and this week's columnist. "But with Toby Jones providing the voice of the great man, enhanced by the incomparable self-portraits, this was an artistic bullseye. Who was it who said BBC arts programmes were going downhill?'

I also catch Channel 4 News, which has some terrific correspondents like Lindsey Hilsum and Yousra Elbagir, who is doing great work on Sudan. My great joy is rugby and I will be watching the World Cup in the autumn.'

WHAT WE'VE LEARNT THIS WEEK

We know Tony Hatch as the man who wrote the theme music for Crossroads and Neighbours (and as the no-nonsense judge on New Faces). But this week we learn that he once played piano in a band led by David Jones, aka David Bowie.

WHAT GETS US TALKING...

WILL I HAVE NEWS FOR YOU

Have I Got News for You, BBC1's long-running comedy panel show, has developed a reputation for making some of our politicians a bit more popular than they might have been. Who knows where Boris Johnson and Jacob Rees-Mogg would be today without their appearances on the show, where they went down a storm? And its fame as a crucible for making or breaking politicians has now been fictionalised: in a sequence in Years and Years, Russell T Davies's state of-the-nation drama (Tue BBC1). Emma Thompson's populist campaigner Vivienne Rook gets an important boost on the show in a short scene set five years in the future. And the decision to use Have I Got News was "absolutely deliberate", chortles Davies, who tells RT that the programme was "glad to do it". So much so that the production team shot bespoke scenes, on a specially reconstructed set, with team captain Ian Hislop and host Alexander Armstrong.

A SEND-UP... INTO SPACE

Space, TV's final frontier, is playing host to an interesting reunion of top British talent.

Armando Iannucci is set to start filming Avenue 5, an HBO comedy set on a space ship 40 years in the future. The writer/director has assembled Hugh Laurie (who played Senator Tom James in Iannucci's Veep) to play the captain, Ryan Clark. And Rebecca Front (a veteran of Iannucci's Alan Partridge and political satire The Thick of It) is playing Karen Kelly, a housewife who becomes the "voice of the passengers."

A CRIMINAL GAP IN HIS KNOWLEDGE

You can say a lot about this year's Reith lecturer Jonathan Sumption. Former Justice of the Supreme Court, leading lawyer to the super-rich and royalty, eminent historian, linguist and opera lover. But his TV knowledge needs a little work. As he admitted in a Q&A following the first of five lectures (coming soon to Radio 4), he'd never heard of Ally McBeal, the TV lawyer played by Calista Flockhart (1997–2002). Get that man a box set.

KILLER ROLE

If any of you remember handsome Zac Efron in the era-defining noughties drama High School Musical, one part you'd probably never expect to see him play is the US serial killer Ted Bundy who was executed in 1989 for murdering at least 30 young women. But that is exactly who Efron is playing in the Sky Cinema film, which has just been made available on the Sky platform alongside a limited cinema release. Its title is taken from the words of the judge at his trial (Extremely Wicked, Shockingly Evil and Vile). At the premiere Efron described his casting as "a total compliment... and a bit weird". You can say that again... BEN DOWELL

EXCLUSIVE FIRST LOOK

Surviving Eve?

The waiting will soon be over for fans of Killing Eve – the Jodie Comer spy caper is coming back soon to BBC1, allowing UK audiences the chance to find out what happened to her unhinged serial killer Villanelle. Last we saw, Sandra Oh's MI5 officer Eve Polastri finally tracked down Villanelle – only to end up stabbing her.

Villanelle left the flat, bleeding, and this is where series two starts and, as our pictures show, she has survived the attack.

Emerald Fennell has taken the head writer reins from Phoebe Waller-Bridge and warns us to expect the unexpected. "I never wanted that thing you often have with famous thriller characters, which is, 'They'll all be fine!'" says Fennell (who also played Call the Midwife's Nurse Patsy Mount). "I think it's really important to say, 'If this is a fight to the death, and demonstrably it is with what happened last series, then no one should feel safe.'" BEN DOWELL

JOHN SERGEANT

The BBC is biased...

Perfectly balanced news reports are simply not possible

"The BBC is biased, isn't it?" an angry accuser shouted across the dining room. I had just finished what was meant to be a humorous speech and was taking questions. Thrusting her recording machine in my direction, she exploded: "The BBC is biased against..." She paused and my thoughts switched to some of the usual suspects – the Government, the Church, women. She spluttered: "The BBC is biased against Palestinians." If an Israeli was shot, she complained, the BBC would report it, but not if the victim was Palestinian. This is an important, serious question, but I know it cannot be resolved to everyone's satisfaction.

There are people taking aim at the BBC for allowing the animal rights activist Chris Packham and even Sir David Attenborough to be involved in programmes about the natural world. The management are, in my view, right to allow them to continue. In the news department, the rules are tougher – reporters must never advertise their political views.

In all the years I was a BBC correspondent, accusations of bias were a constant refrain. In the 1970s I was a regular visitor to Northern Ireland, covering the Troubles, and my first foreign posting was to report on the Vietnam War. On arriving in Saigon, I spotted a cartoon in the local paper with a picture of the BBC correspondent, ie me, with a silver dollar in his mouth. The implication was obvious – the BBC was a tool of the United States.

For more than 20 years at Westminster I stuck to the role of the balanced reporter, avoiding taking sides. We took comfort in the argument that bias is in the eye of the beholder. One person's terrorist is another person's freedom fighter. We tried to act in good faith.

ECO WARRIOR Chris Packham joins the Extinction Rebellion protestors

'Unlike Chris Packham, BBC reporters must not advertise their views'

It is not, though, that simple. The truth is that the BBC is biased, but perhaps not in the way you might think. It chooses to cover particular stories, using words and pictures, which are open to criticism, depending on your point of view.

News values are not always virtuous, and sometimes there is even a problem in determining the fundamental question: what is news? The definition that I like is that news is something that someone, somewhere, does not want to see published – all the rest is advertising. But for many journalists it's a matter of intuition. As one famous news editor put it, "News is like an elephant – difficult to describe, but when it walks through the door you know exactly what it is." News is a matter of judgement. It requires skill and experience. And mistakes can occur.

During the Falklands War, a BBC executive declared that a widow in Buenos Aires was just as important as a widow in Portsmouth. This was not very helpful to domestic programme editors, and it was ignored. If a British serviceman was killed, it was given far more prominence than the death of a member of the Argentinian forces.

When I reported on the European Parliament, I refused to agree to an executive request for a weekly round-up for all the member states. It would be too boring, I insisted. My coverage needed a strong British bias, otherwise I would never get on air.

Some of these arguments I put to the woman who accused the BBC of being pro-Israel, but she wasn't impressed. I smiled in a friendly way. The reality is that consistent, perfectly balanced news reports on the polarised, often dangerous world of the Middle East, are simply not possible. The BBC is determinedly fair and impartial, but bias of some sort is inevitable.

WHAT WE WATCHED

In the first half of the 1990s, you couldn't get enough of Clive James's "Postcard" travelogues, in which the Aussie journalist cast his urbane eye over various exotic locations. This time it was Miami, and in an exclusive piece for RT, James described the hardships of long-haul plane travel and the combined delights of both language tapes and a BBC expense account (remember them?).

"In Rio I was ready with the sentences in Portuguese when I met the muggers," he wrote. "I am with the BBC: by all means take my wristwatch, but could I have a receipt?"

WHAT YOU SAID

Long before she revived Poldark so stylishly, Debbie Horsfield was writing other dramas, including the ground-breaking Making Out, which followed a group of mainly female Manchester factory workers. Series two had just ended (there would be one more), and you were in raptures. "An unmissable combination of superb writing and brilliant acting," enthused C Purnell from Newport, Gwent, while Mrs E Brown from London praised a show that "didn't patronise the working class". BEN DOWELL

Could the star of the BBC's new drama ever move into No 10 in real life, asks Mark Lawson

EVEN BEFORE THE TV comedian Volodymyr Zelenskiy recently became president of Ukraine, some very unlikely people were running countries. Donald Trump, with no prior political experience, and Emmanuel Macron, whose party was only founded in 2016, are the current presidents of the US and France, having won elections in which media seers gave them zero hope.

Such previously unfeasible leaders represent the rejection by electorates – shaken by insecurities over economies and borders – of the established orders. The disruptive leaders have no consistent biography – Trump is the oldest man to be elected US president, Macron the youngest to lead France – except for speaking in ways that politicians are not supposed to, and being seen as outsiders, not one of those in power who are perceived to have screwed things up.

Anti-politicians were raised by the failures of pro politicians. When Zelenskiy's detractors despairingly asked how a clown could be allowed to run Ukraine, there came the inevitable reply that it didn't seem to have been a disqualification so far.

In this context of volatile democracy, Russell T Davies's political drama Years and Years explores whether a maverick interloper could end up running the UK. Emma Thompson plays Vivienne Rook, a sweary, scary entrepreneur who, in a futuristic Britain (the narrative spans 2019–2034), builds a new political movement.

Whether coincidentally or deliberately, Thompson, in the run-up to the series, has herself become increasingly politically outspoken. She recently addressed the Extinction Rebellion climate change protest from a pink boat in central London, and has used interviews to decry allegedly "Dickensian" levels of child poverty in Britain.

As the present leaders of America and Ukraine both have significant screen credits – Trump on the US version of The Apprentice, Zelenskiy having once played a fictional president on telly – viewers may find themselves, alongside the main what-if of Years and Years, considering another hypothetical: suppose Emma Thompson should enter British politics?

Thompson spends time in Los Angeles – causing some comment by burning 5,500 miles through the air to lecture Londoners on environmental caution – so it would not be surprising if the possibility of seeking political office had at least fleetingly occurred to her. For Hollywood celebrities, a possible bid for the White House is this year’s fashion. George Clooney, Oprah Winfrey, Kanye West, Dwayne Johnson and Cher are among those who have been touted, by themselves or others, as potential opponents for Trump in the 2020 US election.

IT MUST BE tempting for such celebrities to think that, if a reality TV star can become American president, so might they – and, in fact, Hollywood actors have a track record. Ronald Reagan was a revered two-term Republican incumbent of the White House. He was, though, a minor actor who became a major statesman; subsequently, the equation has tended to work the other way around, with big stars becoming, at best, small leaders. Arnold Schwarzenegger was Governor of California, 2003–11, and Clint Eastwood served two years as mayor of the small Californian town of Carmel, enacting policies that included increasing the availability of ice cream.

Schwarzenegger almost certainly would have run for the White House if the Austria-born actor had not been thwarted by the law that US presidents must have been born in the States. (A political curiosity is that Boris Johnson, born in New York, could technically have run for the American presidency, and is thought to have fantasised about the idea, until he renounced his US citizenship in 2016.)

However, a cautionary note for anyone hoping to swap the film-set canvas chair for a seat behind the Oval Office desk is the story of Sex and the City star Cynthia Nixon. Last year, she ran against the Governor of New York, Andrew Cuomo, in an attempt to replace him as the Democrat Party’s candidate in the 2018 gubernatorial election. The outcome might be seen as a warning of the limits of celebrity political power: though Nixon and her supporters believed that her fame and feminist agenda could unseat a male career politician, Cuomo won 66 per cent of the vote, and was subsequently re-elected as Governor.

For a Nixon counterpart in Britain, the odds are even more forbidding. As Nixon found, progressive positions that are common in Hollywood often lack broader appeal. Populist politicians tend to come from the right for the reason that community-caring, wealth-sharing policies are rarely broadly popular. Thompson seems to understand this, describing Rook as “an absolute monster” and saying: “People find it a lot easier to hate and discriminate than they do to include and to feel compassion and empathy. It’s easy to scare people into feeling loathing and we’ve seen it happen again and again.”

A FOOT IN THE DOOR?
Thompson – an ambassador for Children’s Future Food Inquiry – pays a visit to Downing Street

AS A MULTIMILLIONAIRE environmental activist, feminist, atheist, pro-Palestinian member of the Galápagos Conservation Trust, Thompson might just about become MP in a carefully chosen constituency, but wouldn’t have to worry about forming a government. Glenda Jackson, the nearest British equivalent to Ronald Reagan, held Hampstead for Labour from 1992 to 2015, but despite – or possibly because of – her ▷ ◁ showbiz fame, she rose no higher than two years as a junior transport minister.

Also, at the risk of a civics lesson, it's no coincidence that Trump, Macron and Zelenskiy were all elected in countries with systems that are presidential, with citizens voting for the party leader, rather than parliamentary, as in Britain. Trump was able to go from running for office to running the country in around a year; here, you have to win a constituency first, then spend years moving up through the Commons ranks.

FIGURES FROM THE Electoral Reform Society (ERS) show that 225 UK parliamentary constituencies have not changed party since before 1950, despite the multiple economic and political crises that convulsed other parts of the country. So total is the local/national divide that voters support an MP despite being openly hostile to a PM from the same party. The ERS's pre-election party trick is to announce the number of seats in which the result is a foregone conclusion before the polls open: in 2015, they highlighted 368 out of 650 seats, calling 363 correctly.

These tribal and regional inevitabilities make it almost impossible for an anti-establishment challenger to gain traction, except on a small patch. The Rook-like Nigel Farage successfully secured and then won the EU Referendum, but has failed in five attempts to gain a Westminster seat. The highest-profile recent independent MP, former BBC TV reporter Martin Bell, won Tatton in 1997, on an anti-sleaze ticket, but then lost in Ongar in 2001.

'Thompson has become increasingly politically outspoken'

Public unrest over issues such as Brexit, Southern Rail, HS2 and Heathrow runways make it likely that the next general election will result in unusually large numbers of independent MPs, but, as their trigger policies will be individual and even contradictory, they seem unlikely to form a government. Sally Wainwright's 2006 BBC1 drama The Amazing Mrs Pritchard, in which Jane Horrocks is a supermarket manager who runs as an independent MP and becomes prime minister, had to ignore British electoral realities.

Russell T Davies understands that for a Vivienne Rook to run Britain it would require a collapse of the established parties and of regionalised voting patterns, so in Years and Years he engineers a nightmare scenario in which the usual political rules might not apply. Ironically, perhaps only after the sort of environmental catastrophe that she campaigns so hard to prevent would Emma Thompson have a chance of reaching Downing Street.

MEET THE LYONS FAMILY

T'NIA MILLER

Why did the role of Celeste appeal? She's a powerhouse and really rules the roost. But every time she thinks she's on top of something, as in life, she gets smacked in the face with something else. It's a constant uphill battle. I'm a mother of two teenagers, so I relate to her struggle to be a liberal mum.

Unfortunately, she can slowly see herself becoming archaic when faced with the challenges of having a teenager at a time when technology keeps moving on.

As a parent, are you worried for the next generation? On some levels, it's flipping scary. But ultimately, as human beings, we are good. I'm really spiritual, and I believe that although the world can seem like it's going to st, most people are just searching for their balance and searching for their happiness. And I think that love – it sounds so cliché – for humanity, and our love for each other will survive. We'll survive. We always do. I don't understand why half the things go on but you can't change the whole world, we can only change ourselves. And when we do that, we pass it on like an energy to the next person.

RORY KINNEAR

Why did the role of Stephen appeal? I only got to read the first episode, but there was no way I wasn't going to do it. Emma Thompson and I agreed that you can wait your whole career for something as fully-formed and exciting as this to come along.

What was the Lyons family dynamic like off screen? We didn't have to work at it. We are all very different, but we bonded over a shared sense of humour. Anne was outraged that she was playing my grandmother, not my mother! She also harnessed the powers of the younger generation to help with her iPad and her emails.

How do you feel about your children's relationship with technology? They're eight and five and we're quite Victorian about it all. It's easy to forget that most technology hasn't been around for very long; these things have a period of adjustment.

How do you feel about what's happening, politically, in the UK and the world? Often you just want to put your head under the duvet. But by and large, we're more of an accepting and open community than we were 100 years ago.

ANNE REID

Why did the role of Muriel appeal? Well, it's Russell T Davies, darling. I accepted the role without having read it, so I was delighted when I saw how amazing the scripts were. And I was very relieved not to be dying in it. I won't do roles where I die any more, because it's depressing enough getting old. I try to play life-affirming parts. And Muriel is a pretty life-affirming lady.

What was the Lyons family dynamic like off screen? They're a lovely bunch. I find actors usually are. There aren't many pillocks. You meet the occasional ones, but on Years and Years they were all very nice to me and looked after me, well, like a grandmother.

You're a grandparent, are you worried for the next generation? I have two little grandsons, they're not old like Rory Kinnear… And, oh, doesn't everybody? It's all going to the dogs. It's frightening that it feels like nobody cares about the planet. That's the big issue. Will there be a world left for our great-grandchildren? The politicians – God, what a mess we're in at the moment – will come and go. But the planet, we've got to look after that.

Are you at all optimistic about the future? I try to be. I'm generally an optimistic person but if you start thinking about it, it's too depressing. And, at my age, I can't start doing anything about it. I suppose if I was 20 or something, I might go into battle. But now it takes me all my time to get to the shops!

RUTH MADELEY

How would you describe your character, Rosie? She is the youngest of the siblings, and is a bit all over the place with her relationships and work life. But she's also the light relief; she's very quick-witted, independent, fierce. She's not afraid to say what she thinks, and I wish I could be more like her.

What was the Lyons family dynamic like off screen? We all got on really well – although Rory and Russell were a nightmare! It's so funny, it's easy to believe they're brothers when you see them hanging out together. And Anne Reid is everything I want to be. Not when I'm 80-odd, but now. I could have chatted with Annie all day, every day. It was a joy watching her work.

How do you feel about what's happening, politically, in the UK and the world? It feels like a really scary time and I feel that people in Britain are being let down, with politicians not looking out for our best interests. I find it really sad. But I have hope that things will get better. When a drama like Years and Years comes about, it makes you aware of what can happen, and how precarious certain situations are. I hope that political leaders can get their act together, because as you will see in the drama, things can escalate incredibly quickly.

RUSSELL TOVEY

How would you describe your character, Daniel? He's someone panicking about what's going on in the world. He's on the front line, housing refugees and asylum seekers at a time of xenophobia, with post-Brexit opinions in the press about what these people are like. So it's important to him to be vocal about what he's experiencing, so people get the full story.

In episode one, Daniel says "the human race is getting more stupid right in front of our eyes"… With the way the world's going, it does feel like we are going backwards in some ways. Fake news is a daily occurrence. Politically, horrific things happen every day. But then something even worse happens the next day, and the one before just pales in significance. That's happening to us all the time.

Are you at all optimistic about the future? I'm ever hopeful. Because what else could happen – the world implodes and everyone dies? Even though bad stuff is going on, you still get up in the morning, go to work, go out with your friends, have sex, fall in love, argue. You still laugh, even though horrific things are happening, because that's what it means to be alive. It's just about making sure that you're also doing your bit. Even if you're not demonstrating out there on the front line, it's the way that you treat other human beings.

BRINGING UP BABY
Louis Theroux gets to know baby Jake in a south London mother and baby unit

Looking after Mum

In his latest film, Louis Theroux meets mothers whose lives fell apart after giving birth

NEW MUM
After giving birth to Jake, Katherine began to feel desperate

During his 25-year career as a journalist, Louis Theroux has made documentaries about porn stars, neo-Nazis and UFO believers. There have also been swingers, body builders, Las Vegas gambling addicts and big-game hunters. However, now that the 48-year-old father of three has started to turn his attention away from the stranger fringes of American society to subjects closer to our ordinary lives, such as alcoholism, dementia and mental health. You probably don't know someone who fervently believes in UFOs but you'll know someone – or be someone – who has experienced depression. In his latest film, Mothers on the Edge, he spends time at two specialist psychiatric units in London and Hampshire that treat mothers experiencing postpartum mental illness, which ranges from severe postnatal depression to psychosis, often triggered by birth or the strains of motherhood.

The mothers live in the units alongside their babies as they struggle with a range of serious issues. It's a powerful, moving but hopeful film on a topic that most of us know little about, even though it is estimated that one in ten new mothers in the UK will suffer a mental health issue before their child's first birthday.

What's behind the film-maker's increased focus on mental health? "Since I was quite small I've been fascinated by people whose brains work differently. I've visited friends in psychiatric hospitals and it always struck me that they were fascinating places, where you see life in a very raw and unvarnished way. I wouldn't have had the maturity or journalistic skills to do justice to those stories then, but it wasn't that I wasn't interested in them."

He also says that at the age of 23, when he first started working on TV Nation with film-maker Michael Moore, he fell into a mode of being "tongue-in-cheek" and "faux naive", an exaggerated version of his real self. Over time he became "more sincere" on screen, and felt more drawn to topics that required seriousness. "It's not as though there was a single road-to-Damascus moment where I thought, 'I need to grow up', but it was that over the years the production [team] and I took an approach that was a little more mature."

Theroux cites his 2012 film Extreme Love: Dementia, in which he spent time with those living with dementia and those who help care for them, as the "first time I ever did a story where no one was doing anything the least bit questionable or wrong, they were just people affected by a condition, trying to make the right choices".

It wasn't Theroux's idea to make a film about postpartum mental illness – it was suggested by a pregnant member of his team – but as a father of three he felt equipped to talk to the mums and their partners dealing with such tough situations. "Parenthood is this extraordinary experience full of highs and lows and moments of profound desperation and feelings of failure. I am not comparing my wife's and my experience to profound psychiatric emergency, but I am also aware that a new baby is viewed as a cause for unalloyed celebration and happiness, but it can be much more complicated than that."

'A new baby isn't always a cause for happiness'

There's a scene in the film in which Katherine, a mother staying in one unit, scrolls through her Instagram feed showing Theroux lovely pictures of domestic bliss with her baby and partner, as she explains that this couldn't be further from the daily reality. In fact, she had recently tried to take her own life.

In the film, whenever he gets the chance, Theroux picks up a baby or changes a nappy. "I have a tendency to be quite passive in life and these films make me get involved. If there's a baby in the scene, pick it up, if there's a dog, kneel down and pet it, if there's a nudist event, take your clothes off. I have three boys between the ages of four and 14 [Walter, Frederick and Albert] and I enjoy any opportunity to show off that I have been an active parent. I used to find babies quite frightening but now I get a lot of pleasure out of amusing a baby."

There are moments of light relief in seeing a baby gurgle at Theroux, but for most of the film he is privy to the darkest, most vulnerable moments in these mothers' lives. Does he find it hard to leave the subjects behind when he goes home to his family? "I find I'm able to go home and live my life without feeling upset. When I get home I know those mums and babies are being well cared for in the units, but if I was making a programme about homeless new mums wandering the streets I'd feel much more burdened. I wonder about people who make long-form docs about kids on the streets – I think that would be difficult."

Theroux doesn't talk about his subjects at the dinner table at home in north-west London, where he lives with his TV director wife Nancy Strang and their children. "There's so much going on on the home front. The conversations at home are, 'Who's done their homework? Where are your shoes? Why does your room look like a tip? Are we watching Strictly tonight? Right, time for bed, guys.' And then one of the things my wife has to deal with is that when we're in company, the conversation revolves around my work almost to a disproportionate extent, so when I get home she's not, like, 'Well, what happened today on the mother and baby unit, darling?' I don't always trouble her with the details."

One of the ways he unwinds after a heavy day is by watching, well, intense crime documentaries. Anything more lighthearted? "Oh, yes. Strictly, MasterChef, Bake Off – I love a classic format show I can watch with the family."

Not only has Theroux's focus shifted to more serious topics, he's also become comfortable with the awkward reality of documentary film-making. "When I first got into TV I used to find it quite embarrassing, the idea of disrupting anyone, or arriving late, or unplugging their fridge because it was making a noise. I'd think, 'Not only are we attempting to divest you of your intimate side of life but we're also going to inconvenience you.' That's the trivial end of it, and then the profound end is, 'We might put you at risk emotionally.' And of course it is a risk for these mums to go on camera and talk. At the same time there's such value in us opening up about things to which there should be no shame attached, like mental illness. We shouldn't judge, because this is part of who we are."

With all the pain and suffering Theroux witnesses while making his films, does he have time for the sillier side of life? "As awful as things get, don't let it blind you to how much is happening that's positive. Do what you can to love your families, enjoy your friends, and enjoy life. That's how I approach my time on the planet."

Keeping it in the family

INTERVIEW BY EMMA COX

PEOPLE JUST TALKED about it and it snowballed," says Eve Myles of her drama Un Bore Mercher as it's known in Welsh – Keeping Faith in English – the first series of which reached an astonishing audience with 17 million downloads on BBC iPlayer, almost entirely through word of mouth from dedicated fans. It's a figure that puts it up there with the likes of the Jed Mercurio blockbuster Bodyguard but with a fraction of the marketing, fanfare and – one presumes – budget.

"I have never experienced anything like this with contemporary drama. Even with sci-fi, you get your hard-core fans but this has connected with all sorts of people," adds the actor, whose biggest role previously was Gwen Cooper in Doctor Who spin-off Torchwood. "There was no media campaign. There was no manipulation of any audience. There was no message of 'You must watch this or you are missing out'. We just made something for people to watch and it took on a life of its own. And we grew this incredibly loyal fan base."

Originally transmitted on S4C, in Welsh with English subtitles, in November 2017, the first episode of Un Bore Mercher – starring Myles as solicitor Faith Howell whose husband Evan goes missing while she is on maternity leave – reached an audience of just 46,000 Welsh speakers. Then an English language version of the show, Keeping Faith, was shown on BBC Wales where it was seen by 300,000 – more than a six-fold increase but still modest by anybody's standards.

Yet over the following weeks something extraordinary happened: its popularity grew to such an extent

'We've been together for 20 years... but it was still acting'

EVE MYLES

DOUBLE ACT
Eve Myles and Bradley Freegard as Faith and Evan in Un Bore Mercher/Keeping Faith

that its time on BBC iPlayer was extended. Myles and her husband Bradley Freegard – who plays Evan – watched, amazed, as the figures climbed higher and higher. "It went down well when it aired in Welsh and then it went out in English and it did well again," says Freegard. "Then, week after week, it was the drama pick on iPlayer. We even beat EastEnders for about five minutes! What was nice was the fact people took ownership of it. They felt like they'd found it."

Such is the show's fame that the couple have been besieged by fans when they are spotted out and about; including one particularly full-on experience in Swansea last summer while holidaying with their two children. "We were in a one-way system so we couldn't escape and people were out of their sunroofs shouting, 'So you found him then!'" says Myles. "I had to go to a cave on the beach to hide and I sent Brad to get chips! He has a beard in real life so people don't recognise him so much if we're not together."

THE COUPLE HAVE been together for 21 years, married for six, and have two children, Matilda, nine, and Siena, five. They met at the National Youth Theatre and have acted once together before, at the RSC where they played brother and sister in Titus Andronicus.

Myles got the Un Bore Mercher job before Freegard was also asked to audition. "We do have a bizarre life," says Myles. "We knew he was up for a part and we kept saying, 'Never mind, what happens happens'. Then I was in hospital – a dusting accident, would you believe, I was an action hero for years and not even a bruise, then I attack the coffee table with a Dettol wipe and suddenly I need two operations! Anyway, he came to visit me and said he hadn't got the part he'd auditioned for but he'd been offered the part of Evan instead. My reaction was to ask for more morphine!"

Freegard eventually talked her round, but the job is doubly difficult, as each scene is filmed twice, once in Welsh and once in English. While Freegard is bilingual and has tackled this complicated acting process before in several S4C dramas, it was new to Myles. In the run-up to filming she spent hours holed up in the couple's attic study learning Welsh. As well as using two different languages, the S4C version has adverts while BBC Wales does not: so the Welsh edit is around ten minutes shorter.

They say that being married made working together easier, despite the fact that many of their scenes as Faith and Evan range from quietly tense to downright volatile. "What I'm super grateful about is that I was put opposite a superb actor," says Myles. "Of course we have been together for more than 20 years and we have known each other since we were 16, but it was still acting opposite someone generous. If it was someone I didn't know I'd have to say, 'Do you mind if I…?' whereas with Brad we just threw it out there."

Freegard agrees, "There were no boundaries. Whenever Evie and I were working together, we were just confident we could do anything. And in the second series we explored the silence between a couple, which was very interesting. Sometimes things don't need to be said because you are well aware of what that person is thinking or feeling." ▷

AND OUR NEW PACK'S

PRINCES

THERE FOR YOU, ALL WAYS

◁ Much of the appeal of the show is Faith herself. A mass of contradictions, she is sometimes vulnerable, sometimes tough; often mouthy and sociable, occasionally quiet and distant. Chaotic but determined; funny but sharp. Always a lioness of a mother. When Evan disappears, she's left to untangle a knot of mysteries about what he was up to behind her back, including criminal dealings and affairs with other women.

The show is made in a "hyper-real" style, so characters often talk on top of each other, walk around eating food, and show uncomfortably raw emotions. At any time if filming looks too staged, director Pip Broughton stops the action and tells the cast "Don't make it look like a drama".

Faith has become beloved by fans for her physicality: always kissing her children, often lying on the floor when life gets on top of her: all elements that Myles brought to the character. "I'm very tactile," she explains. "I remember being interviewed on the first series and they wrote in the piece that I'd given them a 'big, over-the-top actress hug' and now I feel nervous about overstepping the mark with people! But I'm naturally like that and I've built that into Faith too.

"When she shows love, she shows it, and makes no apologies for it. As for kicking off her shoes and lying on the floor: that's stuff that people find recognisable but you don't normally see it on TV."

The second series is set 18 months after Evan's disappearance, but flashbacks pick up exactly where the first series left off, with Evan making a shock return to the family home, just as Faith was about to kiss ex-con Steve Baldini [Mark Lewis Jones].

The flashback scenes are electrifying: and without wishing to spoil anything for viewers, one scene in particular is shockingly violent. Myles says: "It was choreographed within an inch of its life because without that, people could get hurt. We went through it like a dance and then you go over it and over it and gradually build up the speed and at any point if you feel unsafe you put your hand up and everything just stops immediately.

"We never wanted it to be a fight sequence because this is Keeping Faith. But what happens is part of a psychologically traumatic evening. I try to be as faithful to Faith as possible and not retreat into my safety blanket. As soon as I do, Pip is ready to rip it off and send me back naked. We are brave with our choices."

It's impossible not to wonder the effect of such intense scenes on the dynamic of Myles and Freegard's marriage. When we meet, they are clearly exceptionally comfortable in each other's company, finishing each other's sentences and laughing at each other's jokes. They describe themselves as "staunchly private" and are keen not to be seen as a celebrity couple: they still live in Wales and their best friends are "a dog groomer, a butcher and a teacher".

'The children are delighted Daddy is now as famous as Mummy'

EVE MYLES

And, they add, working together made no difference to their home life at all. "When you're parents to young kids, there is no time to let work bleed into your real life because you still have to get them to school on time," says Myles. "But the children were delighted to see that Daddy is becoming just as famous as Mummy."

Freegard laughs, "Yesterday we were all in the car and the Cardiff bus drove past us and I'm on the posters as well. So the kids gasped and said 'Mummy and Daddy are both on the bus!'"

The girls visited the set several times, and got on famously with Myles and Freegard's on-screen children. "As working parents, everyone has to juggle, so it was much easier to have the same schedule with this," says Myles. "Plus we were working near home which was a rare treat. Putting the children to bed at night, having my pants in my pants drawer and not in a suitcase! It makes all the difference.

"Our eldest daughter did all of the artwork that you see on the walls and on the fridges in Faith's house. It makes her feel a part of it. The children were all scooting around on their scooters on set which was lovely.

'They do like coming on set but they're in a normal school and they have no interest in the industry. Our nine-year-old is obsessed with neuroscience. She goes to bed with medical encyclopaedias and has been since she was five – she had these big pop-up books with lungs! So I don't think they'll be actors."

Life may have carried on as normal in the Myles-Freegard household since the success of the show but one thing has changed: neither Myles nor her daughters ever wear yellow any more. Faith's famous mac was so popular that the style, from high-street store Joules, ran out entirely. When Myles was interviewed by BBC Breakfast last year, presenters Louise Minchin and Dan Walker wore yellow coats in homage and viewers sent in pictures wearing them too.

Freegard says: "I never get to talk about the coat so I'm going to start this off. I remember series two, going into the Winnebago that we share and seeing the yellow coat hung up. It was like Wonder Woman's cape and I found myself stroking it. It has this persona." And Myles adds: "We knew we'd be doing a lot of night shoots and filming in that grey landscape down by the sea, so we needed to pop with colour so that we'd always recognise Faith from afar.

"I must have tried on 40 coats and then I saw this one and I went, 'Oh, hello'. It was me all over, and it was Faith. It has deep pockets for tissues and bananas for the kids, and a big hood for the weather. It's a hero coat. I call it my cape.

"And now all these men with pints of ale and beards send in pictures of themselves in their Faith macs and I love it. Mind you, the other day we were going camping and my daughter tried to bring a yellow coat and I said, 'I don't think so'. We can't wear yellow now. That's ruined!"

Un Bore Mercher begins on S4C on 12 May in Welsh with English subtitles (and will also be available on BBC iPlayer). The English-language version – Keeping Faith – will air on BBC1 later this year

NATASHA PSZENICKI

Lesley Manville

Having made her name in theatre, Manville, 63, has made films such as High Hopes and Secrets & Lies with Mike Leigh. A single mum most of her career (she has a son with ex-husband Gary Oldman), she was nominated for an Oscar for Phantom Thread last year and is up for a Bafta for her role in Mum for the second time.

WHEN I WAS in my 20s, I had a friend, a very attractive actress in her 60s, who announced she was going off to Russia to meet her lover. And I remember thinking, "Lover? But you're 60!" Of course, there was no reason why this woman shouldn't have had a lover – there's no reason why anyone shouldn't have a lover – but when you're young the idea of love in later life just isn't on your radar. And generally, on television back then, you didn't see it done.

There was that lovely series with Judi Dench and Michael Williams, A Fine Romance, but they were in their 40s. What Cathy and Michael's story is saying, to young people as much as anything, is that you can be 50 or 60, you can be whatever age and still have sexual needs and desires. You still need to be loved and held, to get into bed and be cuddled and touched. All of that doesn't stop once you are over 40. It's very important to give that message.

I love the fact that Cathy is a heroine who knows herself, who is mature and clear and kind. She isn't the heroine because she's stamped on people along the way, but because she's a thoroughly good and decent person, and she rather wonderfully lets everyone around her just be themselves, too. If the series wasn't so beautifully written, she might come across as rather passive but, if you keep with it, you start to see the twinkle in her eye. Stefan Golaszewski has written and shot it so Cathy is always thinking what the audience is thinking. She's got a real, burning sense of humour and mischief, but that's something she only shares with the audience and, occasionally, with Michael.

THE THING ABOUT Michael and Cathy is they've known each other all their adult life (the sub-plot is that he was her deceased husband's best friend). It's not like they've met online, or in a bar, and are trying to figure out who the other person really is. They know each other inside out and that, for me, is a really huge thing. Because you want to get to know people organically, don't you? You want to look in somebody's eyes, hear their voice, and get the whole atmosphere around them. Otherwise we're pretty much lost as a race.

It's also a huge thing for Cathy that her 29-year-old son is moving out to set up home with his girlfriend. I have a son kind of the same age, so I've been through all of that, and it is hard, but you have to let go of their shirt sleeve, just close the door and then cry. Of course it's what you want for your child, for them to be independent and self-reliant and happy, but it's a significant ▷

Lesley Manville and Peter Mullan on the slow-burning romance that makes Mum such a hit

INTERVIEWS BY E JANE DICKSON

PETER MULLAN

SITTING PRETTY

◁ change and it's hard. But you'll never hear Cathy say, 'Oh it's really tough on me that Jason's leaving home,' because she's a good woman and she'd never put that on her son.

I haven't had a frothy career. I've always had a kind of "real-o-meter". If it's real, I'm interested, if it's not, I can't be bothered. It's lovely to be so busy – I've just shot a film with Liam Neeson about a woman with breast cancer, and another about the 1970 Miss World competition where I play Bob Hope's wife. Then there's the new series of Harlots, and I'm about to shoot a film in Canada with Kevin Costner. But I don't think I would have wanted the kind of success I have now when I was in my 20s and 30s. Then, I was doing masses of stuff at the Royal Court Theatre, working with Caryl Churchill, Max Stafford-Clark and Edward Bond, or else I was making films with Mike Leigh, which I absolutely adored.

When I compare those decades of my life with actresses of equal talent and stature who are in their 20s now, they seem so pressurised – they're all pushed to go to America and have their career via Instagram. I want to say to them, "Look, don't worry about the fame thing. Just do the work for the sake of doing the work, and take what you can from that."

I also think that film and television companies are realising there's a huge mature market out there. We want to see stories that deal with women like Cathy, we want to see Meryl Streep leaping about in Mamma Mia!, or Glenn Close playing the title role in The Wife. There's nothing wrong with a bit of escapism – I love a bit of commercial candyfloss when I'm in the mood – but women my age want to see film and TV where we're represented.

Peter Mullan

Born in Peterhead and raised in Glasgow, Mullan, 59, won best actor at Cannes in 1998 for My Name Is Joe. The father of four children (three with ex-wife Ann Swan, one with former girlfriend Robina Qureshi) has also been in Trainspotting, Top of the Lake and US series Ozark, as well as playing Yaxley the Death Eater in Harry Potter.

I was in New Orleans making the American drama Quarry when I was sent the script for Mum, and I couldn't get my head round it at all. I loved the piece, but couldn't picture me in it; there were no dogs to kill, no heads to cut off, just this guy who says nothing and seemed completely wet.

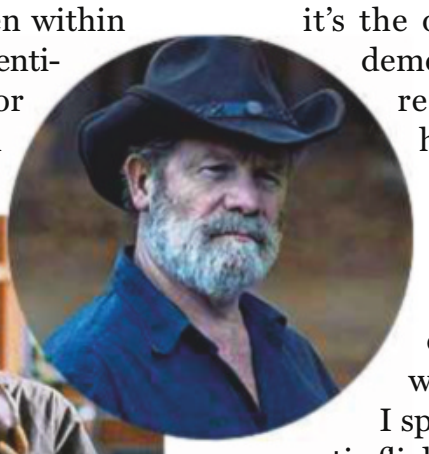
When Stefan and Richard Laxton (who directed the first series) called me, I said to them – and I really meant it, I wasn't being coy – "Look guys, no offence will be taken if it transpires you've got the wrong man. I admire your guts for such left-field casting, but if I'm se, it's your responsibility."

YOUNG AT HEART
In the final series of Mum, the friends edge closer during a week away

It's true Michael doesn't say much, but in his own lost little way, he puts a lot over. There's a great F Scott Fitzgerald quote where he compares good art to a big block of ice on a hot stove – you never know which direction it will run – and that was my abiding image with this show. I hadn't a clue where I was going with it, but as the ice melts, I move accordingly.

Stefan is a lovely writer – there's a beautiful compassion for the characters in Mum, and he's not afraid of the darkness. He's not afraid of the lonely, or the absurd, or the achingly painful, and I love the fact that he's got these two quite naturalistic, rooted characters, Cathy and Michael, surrounded by grotesques. But even within that world of the grotesque there's identifiable grief – they're all grieving for something – and out of that pain comes comedy and real love.

'They're all grieving – and out of that pain comes comedy'



THEN AND NOW
Peter Mullan with Louise Goodall in the 1998 film My Name Is Joe and, right, as drug lord Jacob Snell in TV's Ozark

YESTERDAY AND TODAY

Also, like a good, old-fashioned satirist, Stefan is always punching up. Snobbery is there to be mocked, and in that respect the comedy is robust, but he doesn't punch down. There's no element of social condescension in his humour, nobody is lobotomised. For all their mis-steps and mishaps, people are who they are; they belong to their world, and it belongs to them.

I haven't watched this series yet, but when I do, it'll be in one go, as a three-hour feast. I think it's very interesting the way streaming has changed not just the way we watch television, but the kind of television we watch. Mum is a sitcom, but instead of the traditional episodic structure, you watch it like a single drama unfurling, so you're more invested in the characters and their stories.

I'm not a great believer in golden ages, but there's no doubt that television, going back seven or eight years, is the strongest it's ever been. The quality is astounding and it's the over-40s who are the crucial demographic, because once people reach a certain age, and start having kids, they stop going out to the cinema and watch television instead. When they do go out, the vast majority of people my age will spend a large part of their evening talking about what box sets they're watching. I spend a lot of time on transatlantic flights, and I always take a peek at what people are watching on the plane. Again, it's more likely to be the box sets than the movies. Cinema has taken second place to television.

I'm back in the States now filming another Netflix thing for teenagers. It's called Cursed, and I play a mad monk, running around setting everyone on fire. It's great fun, but I've loved my time on Mum; it's a brilliant cast, and we've all become really close, but I think Stefan has done the right thing stopping it at three series. There's no point, even for a nanosecond, harbouring those "Wouldn't it be nice to take it further?" thoughts. It's a writer's show. When the writer decides "That's it!" we all need to move on.

‘I’m a thoroughbred mongrel’

He’s the Scouser who mixes with Scorsese and De Niro. But what makes Stephen Graham Britain’s most electrifying actor?

THE RT INTERVIEW
BY MICHAEL HODGES

THERE WAS A TIME, not that long ago, when people weren’t entirely sure who Stephen Graham was. “If I was on the Tube a builder would say, ‘Oi, I’ve worked with you. Scouse, innit?’ I’d go, ‘Yes, I am a Scouser,’” recalls the 45-year-old Kirkby-born actor. “And he’d say, ‘That’s right, you’re a scaffolder!’ Then I’d feel embarrassed and go, ‘Sorry, no. You’ve seen me on TV.’ I used to apologise for it. Apologise for being an actor.”

Everybody knows who Graham is now, after John Corbett, the undercover cop he played in Line of Duty, had his throat cut in the unbearably tense fourth episode of the hit BBC1 drama. How did his kids deal with that? “Grace is 14 and Alfie is 12, so they’ve had an understanding about acting from an early age,” he says. “They were both in Pirates of the Caribbean – their mum [actress Hannah Walters] nearly got married to Johnny Depp in the last one. So they know I spend three hours in make-up and the blood pumps out of a tube in my neck. Even so, I think Grace finds it difficult emotionally. ▷ comfortable life performance

◁ Watching your father get his throat cut on screen must be a strange thing."

Graham is compact, but his intense, charged presence permeates the atmosphere when he arrives to be photographed by RT. He wears casual clothes that look expensive and his skin exudes good health. I ask if he's been on holiday. "No, that's my natural colour. My grandad was Jamaican, he was on the Windrush. You know, the first boat to come here."

WE'RE HERE TO talk about The Virtues, the new four-part drama from writer-director Shane Meadows. Graham plays Joseph, a man who must come to terms with a traumatic childhood while simultaneously losing his young son, who is emigrating to Australia with his estranged wife and her new partner. It's a mesmerising performance, light on the aggression with which critics too easily characterise him and marked, instead, with inner confusion and fragility. In the first episode he delivers one of the most moving depictions of a drinking binge you'll see on TV.

"Me and the barman were the only actors in that pub," he says of the extended scene in a Sheffield boozer. "All the other people were locals. We were running late so they'd had free drinks for four hours when we turned up and everyone was well on their way to trolleyed. Shane looked around and said to me, 'Do you still want to do it?'

'I was attacked... My dad got hit with a knuckle-duster'

"I addressed the whole pub, I don't think Shane was expecting me to. I wasn't expecting me to. I went, 'Listen, I love youse all and we're going to have a right laugh, but I want you all to think of me as another fella. I'm Joseph now. Forget Stephen. Call me Joe.'"

Graham and Meadows have history. Graham had been doing well, appearing in Coronation Street, Band of Brothers and Martin Scorsese's Gangs of New York before Meadows cast him as Combo, the near-demented racist skinhead in the 2006 film This Is England, which also featured his Line of Duty co-star Vicky McClure. It was a pivotal role, Meadows recognising a man who is a card-carrying representative of the working class, with integrity and intelligence, an actor willing to go all the way to get it right. In preparation for the 2015 mini-series This Is England 90, Meadows put Graham on the streets. "They gave me £1.25 and sent me out in the middle of Sheffield. I was taken up by a little group of real homeless people."

Graham bought the same intensity of commitment to Line of Duty. "I did a lot of research with a friend who worked for the British Army back in the day and has to remain nameless. He used to be under cover in Northern Ireland, recruiting people for intelligence and information. What I learnt from him is that people working under cover don't get second chances. If he gets it wrong, then that's it. I tried to capture that danger in Line of Duty."

Has he ever been in real danger himself? "I've been in situations where things have been very dangerous. When I was younger, me and my missus and my dad were attacked outside a pub in Liverpool." Why was that? "I don't like to speculate. Did I have any part to play in it? I don't really think I did. There had been a disagreement, but I thought it was settled and left at a place of peace, a place of understanding. And then, when we left the pub, it just suddenly happened. My dad got hit with a knuckle-duster. Hannah has a huge scar on her leg. She actually dragged me away from the car that was going to run me over. So, I can draw upon that."

His eyes, I notice, are wet with tears. "I'm getting upset," he says. "My auntie Vera has just died. I'm going to her funeral on Friday. She was a wonderful woman. Archetypal, really. Old-fashioned, solid, playing bingo, down the social on a Sunday, couple of pints with my Uncle Eddie. I adored her, used to stay with her in Kirkby."

HE'S INTENSELY PROUD of coming from Kirkby, a mid-20th-century overspill suburb built to house the working classes of Liverpool. "It's a fantastic place," he says. "There's a lot of beautiful, lovely people." When Graham played Detective Superintendent Dave Kelly in Little Boy Blue, Jeff Pope's 2017 drama series based on the real-life murder of 11-year-old Rhys Jones in Liverpool in 2007, he chose to stay with Vera in Kirkby rather than a hotel.

"I walked on the streets I'd known as a kid. It gave me an immense feeling of nostalgia and also a sense of obligation to the people. I do take on very diverse characters, but I always try and base them in some sort of truth and reality. And I always try to show the humanity in them."

Graham now lives in Leicestershire, but he has tried to re-create a sense of the Merseyside that made him. "In Liverpool I had loads of mates and loads of older cousins I used to knock about with," he says. "We'd climb over the school gates and play ▷

◁ footie on the pitch. I'll be really honest with you, I climb over fences with Alfie now. Here I am, a 45-year-old dad, and my lad asking, 'Dad, what if we get caught?' And I go, 'It'll be all right, come 'ed.' Some people may think that's terrible, but I want him to have that kind of sense of wonder at being a kid I had."

Graham has had two fathers in his life. "My stepfather, who I call Pops, has raised me from the age of ten, he's been the constant in my life. Plus, I have a great relationship with my dad. He is the Jamaican side. My grandma was from Sweden, my nana was from Ireland and my other grandad was from Scotland. And Pops's forebears were African. So live and let live is my philosophy. If immigrants weren't allowed to come in, I wouldn't have been born. I'm a thoroughbred mongrel."

One blessing of his mixed background, he says, is a complete rejection of racism. "I wasn't taught it at all and neither were my two," he says, tears gathering again. "I don't know why I'm getting upset. There's a bit of pride there, I suppose, and I'm a little bit emotional. But it's that kind of sense of just trying to bring my children up to understand that everybody has a right to be able to live their life. I mean, everybody has a right to exist, to be given opportunities and to be treated exactly the same. I hate bullying. When I'm on a film set I treat the exec producer exactly the way I treat the young girl that's just started as a runner that makes the tea. That's what's been passed on to my children. Alfie stands up for the underdog, so does Grace."

Graham could hardly be more working class, but he has no problem with the privately educated actors and writers that dominate the industry. "Benedict Cumberbatch is a lovely, lovely man," he says. "A wonderful man." And Phoebe Waller-Bridge? "She's unbelievable. The way she opens up to the audience in Fleabag in that beautiful, comedic way. I'd love to work with her. I'd love to be in something she writes. I think she's amazing. Please quote me on that."

He was smitten early by Daniel Day-Lewis, with whom he worked on Gangs of New York. "I did a bit of boxing as a kid and Daniel and I would do some pad work. We didn't spar – he'd kick the st out of me! But there was one scene in particular where we're walking down a street, and I was supposed to run all around him. He looked at me and I swear to God I felt this electricity, something happened to my body. After Martin had shouted 'Cut!' Daniel walked up to me and said, 'Did you feel it?' And I went, 'I did. Yes, I did.' And he went, 'I felt it, too.' It was a 'wallop!' moment for me. Wow."

'If immigrants weren't allowed in, I wouldn't be here'

He compares that experience to his first dramatic triumph, appearing as an 18-year-old at the Everyman in Liverpool playing a boy who had contracted HIV. "There was a point on stage where I left my body. I was up above, watching myself do this in the auditorium, and something happened. I was no longer searching for what comes next, I was just being so in it. And then – zap! – I was back again, and carried on. But in that moment, I realised that there was something else to this. Does that make any sense?"

Only, perhaps, if you believe the spirit is more powerful than the flesh, which is one of the imponderables in The Virtues. Joseph's experiences are, in part, Meadows's meditation on his own Roman Catholicism. "I'm from a Catholic family, but my mum decided not to get me christened. She wanted to me to make my own mind up."

Is he spiritual? "Hannah does mindfulness meditation and I try to do that with her. And I went and did a reiki course not long ago. Not many people would think this of me." Did he laugh? "Not at all," he says, face hardening at the suggestion he might not be utterly committed to everything he does. "We did our Level One. It was a beautiful experience."

Whether meditating, saving his life in pub brawls or almost getting married to Johnny Depp, Hannah is the constant in Graham's remarkable life. She was with him when, after getting no work for months after This Is England, he was about to stop acting and become a youth worker. Then, out of the blue, Scorsese rang. "Marty phoned me up at home and said, 'I want you to come and play Al Capone in Boardwalk Empire'. I turned to Hannah and said, 'It's Martin Scorsese, he wants me to play Al Capone. Fk! I don't know…'"

But, really, there was never any doubt, and ten years later he's about to appear in another Scorsese project, The Irishman, alongside Al Pacino, Joe Pesci and Robert De Niro.

"My advice to any young actor who wants to really give it a go is you need to have a tough kind of resolve and a thick skin for the rejections that come your way," he says. "But also, it has to be bordering on an obsession. It has to be passion. It has to be true."

BBC Africa editor Fergal Keane asks if Mandela's dream for South Africa is dead

I KNEW THEN, IN the middle of it all, that I'd never witness its like again. Nothing could compare to the epic nature of that final struggle for liberation on the southern tip of Africa. What a privilege to be the reporter who, with the opening of the polling booths on 26 April 1994, declared on the BBC morning bulletin: "White rule on the continent of Africa came to an end at seven o'clock local time…" If I'm honest, my life in journalism ever since has been an anticlimax.

I arrived as the townships were burning in the early 1990s. On my first day I visited the Chicken Farm squatter camp in Soweto and saw a mother stand over the body of her murdered son. She placed a piece of newspaper across his chest and face. But the wind came up and blew away this slender cover. I had never before seen anybody so disconsolate or so lost.

Yet in the same period I'd sit with other journalists at breakfast with Nelson Mandela and hear him describe the coming of a non-racial democracy. We were transfixed. Remember, this was the age of Milosevic and Tudjman and the bloody nationalisms of the collapsing Yugoslavia. I had just come from a posting in Ireland where sectarianism and violent nationalism were still killing people. Mandela stood out because he urged a common home for all in South Africa.

We lived on perpetual alert. At any hour our pagers – this was before the smartphone – could go off with news of a massacre. So many mornings were spent driving around the townships trying to separate fact from fiction. We counted bodies. We took testimony. And at night in my comfortable white suburb I could hear the gunfire from Alexandra township a few miles and a world away.

Violence actual and threatened was a constant. The country veered between hope and foreboding. There were threats of civil war from white right-wingers and Zulu nationalists. The townships around Johannesburg became killing grounds. The images are with me still of charred corpses, dogs eating the dead, wild-eyed men on makeshift roadblocks, hundreds of armed Zulus moving in battle formation through ANC-dominated areas, white neo-Nazis armed with automatic rifles, spitting hatred at blacks and any white who saw the justice of non-racialism.

And yet. Through it all there was a will to compromise strong enough to rescue the hour from catastrophe. Negotiations were held. They broke down. Bitter words were exchanged between Nelson Mandela and the white president, FW de Klerk. But the leaders always found a way back to the table. The process of negotiation brought the republic from a race-based oligarchy to what we termed a "non-racial democracy". In retrospect it seems a naive term. How could you possibly make South Africa non-racial when race defined so much of people's lives: where they lived, went to school, what jobs they could get, what resources they could access?

'I asked Jacob Zuma if he was a crook – he was taken aback'

BUT BACK THEN there was a sense of immense possibility. With the resources of the state and a strong economy, the fight to redress the injustices of apartheid could be addressed.

But on the 25th anniversary of the first elections and Mandela's ascension to power we must ask if such high hopes were ill-founded. The economic disparities are stark. According to a World Bank report, the top one per cent of South Africans control 70.9 per cent of the country's wealth, making it the most unequal nation on Earth. There has been some progress in the provision of housing and essential services but government has been distracted by infighting and efficiency undermined by corruption.

The party Mandela led to power has disgraced itself through dishonesty. I had believed that the experience of witnessing the decline of other African nations through corruption might act as a barrier in South Africa. So many ANC leaders in exile had seen first-hand what the looting regimes of the 1970s and 80s had done to the hopes of a generation of Africans.

There were moves to address housing, education and healthcare. But Mandela's government failed to address the HIV/Aids crisis and his successor, Thabo Mbeki, promoted the dangerous fantasies of denialists. This at a time when thousands were dying and infection rates soared. The government's rollout of anti-retroviral drugs was a case study in political failure. Mbeki made grand speeches about an African Renaissance while his people yearned for leadership.

But it was in corruption that the ANC inflicted the greatest damage on South Africa. It is tempting to blame it all on the former president Jacob Zuma, whose misrule has become legend. But the rot exists throughout the party. Corrupt tenders, embezzlement of public funds, contracts for pals. The sordid truth is being revealed day after day at public inquiries and court cases.

I remember when I produced a Panorama documentary on Mr Zuma and asked him if he was a crook. He was taken aback and I know he later regretted giving an interview. There were protests to the BBC from his supporters. A former foreign correspondent who had taken a new role promoting South Africa in the UK accused me of promoting stereotypes of African leadership. He is now an enthusiastic denouncer of official corruption.

I believe the president and party leader, Cyril Ramaphosa, is sincere in his desire to reform. But I fear the ANC is too riven with factionalism and corruption to be reformed. The party of Oliver Tambo, Walter Sisulu and Nelson Mandela has been reduced by carpetbaggers and chancers. It is wrong to imagine there was ever a golden age. South Africa under apartheid was a vicious, morally corrupt republic. And the transition from liberation movement to government was always going to involve difficult compromises for the ANC.

Zulu Inkatha supporters on the move

But there was nothing inevitable about the corruption. Those who stole knew better. And those who stayed silent or by omission allowed the stealing to happen inflicted terrible damage on their country.

The true patriots and source of hope are the activists of South African civil society. They have mobilised around HIV/Aids, environmental issues, civil liberties and, especially, corruption. Jacob Zuma would not be facing his day in court without the country's crusading activists and its dynamic free press. There is, too, a judicial system, which is capable of impartial justice.

What we have now is a fight for the soul of South Africa. It is a new liberation struggle. Let us hope victory is claimed by the honest.

Let's get ready to party

Are England prepared for cricket's greatest summer?

One-Day Cricket: England v Pakistan Sat 10.30am, Tue, Fri 12.30am Sky Cricket/Main Event; Test Match Special (R4 LW); 5 Live Sports Extra

Wisden Cricketer's Almanac is a big, fat serious-minded book. It's not often you laugh out loud at the obituaries or the county reports or the notes from the editor. But I recall doing just that when the then editor, Matthew Engel, reported that England's demeanour at the 1996 Cricket World Cup had been like that of Granny attending a rave.

In the quarter-finals, they took on the eventual winners, Sri Lanka, and scored a calm and measured 235 for 8 in 50 overs – whereupon Sri Lanka easily knocked off the winning score in the 41st over.

Now England go into a World Cup year like the raviest of ravers. Last year they scored 481 in 50 overs against Australia and were disappointed not to hit 500. England will start as favourites for the World Cup, which starts on 30 May, and not just because they are the hosts. They do so as the groovviest granny in town.

'England go into World Cup like the raviest of ravers'

But first the warm-up. England have five matches against Pakistan (three of them this week), and what's required is a series of performances of real authority and conviction. They certainly don't need to be taken down a peg or two; any complacency was wiped out last winter in the West Indies, when they tied a series they were supposed to dominate.

All the same, it has been an astonishing transformation. English cricket has been reorganised to make 50-over cricket the priority, and the policy has produced the number-one team in the world. The team's approach has been revolutionised. It was once based on nudging and nurdling, keeping wickets in hand and a certainty that the most conservative option was always best. Now a batsman who can't play half-a-dozen different kinds of sweep shot is seen as a nostalgic throwback; ramps and uppercuts are not improvisations but much-practised strokes, and batsmen dance all round the crease to exploit gaps in the field.

All this big hitting makes for an exciting spectacle, or that's the general idea: but the batsmen who perform most consistently tend not to be the excitable type – and that's the contradiction at the heart of the 50-over game.

England captain Eoin Morgan can play all the fancy shots while his internal calculator never ceases to function. He doesn't have to summon up the blood to hit a six: he calmly picks his moment to guide the ball high into the stands. That's how modern one-day cricket works; what looks like wild inspiration is in fact cool assessment.

Jos Buttler has the same ability to create mayhem from a base of personal calm: not swashbuckling but applied logic. These two players don't swipe and hope; they make plans and execute them as a matter of cold deliberation.

REX

When England are bowling, their prime asset is leg-spinner Adil Rashid, a bowler who's reasonably easy to face, so long as you don't have to take risks. England's strategy is to put opponents into a position when they have to take risks against Rashid. The rest is just catching practice.

The series against Pakistan is a kind of pre-rave rave-up, and it will give a measure of England's readiness for the big one. England have not only embraced but mastered 50-over cricket... just as it's being eclipsed by T20. England's glorious advances, then, are ever-so-slightly old-fashioned and a little bit behind the pace. Such is the English tradition.

People have been saying for some years that this will be the greatest summer of cricket in history. Time, then, for England to start delivering.

TOUGH JOB
Back to basics as a crash-landed pilot in Arctic

Survival strategy

Mads Mikkelsen has beaten up Bond, been a suave serial killer and created the Death Star. Now he just wants to survive

"I NEVER SAW IT coming," says great Dane Mads Mikkelsen. He's reflecting on his rise to fame, from respected star of European cinema to go-to guy for some of pop culture's most enduring properties. Since playing testicle-bludgeoning James Bond villain Le Chiffre in 2006's Casino Royale, his CV has expanded to include everyone's favourite chianti-loving serial killer Hannibal Lecter (in the gleefully nasty TV series Hannibal), a Marvel movie (Doctor Strange) and a Star Wars spin-off (Rogue One).

We're chatting on a hotel terrace in Cannes where, in 2012, he won best actor at the film festival for Danish drama The Hunt. "It would be strange for me not to say I am surprised [by my career]," he continues. "When you stop and look back, you go, 'What the hell just happened there? Why me? Why am I inventing the Death Star? That's pretty cool!' When you're in the midst of it, you're just working, it's just a film. That's your job, right? But it is quite surreal."

Thankfully, Mikkelsen hasn't forsaken the smaller movies that kickstarted his career more than two decades ago. "That's my base," he smiles, "and if that base invites me back once in a while, I'm really happy."

Take his latest film, Arctic, the debut feature from Joe Penna – a Brazilian first-time director who's a YouTube sensation under the musical moniker MysteryGuitarMan. Arctic's a very different proposition: a contemporary survival movie (in cinemas from Friday 10 May) every bit as thrilling as The Revenant.

In a sparse tale that studiously avoids the heroic clichés usually accompanying such dramas, Mikkelsen plays Overgard, a pilot who downs his tiny plane in the snowy wilderness. The story begins weeks after the crash, with Overgard somehow clinging to life. "It's a survival film but, most importantly, it's telling a story about the enormous difference between surviving and being alive, which is a very, very different thing," says Mikkelsen. "That's what I fell for."

He signed on eagerly, but filming in Iceland proved to be the "toughest" shoot of his career. The production lost six days to extreme weather; in one particularly bad moment, perilously parked on a mountaintop, Mikkelsen opened his car door only to witness it ripped off its hinges by gale-force winds. "It was part of the experience," he shrugs. "Everything was very rock 'n' roll on this film, and I guess some of it became a lot more real than we anticipated."

Despite being in good shape – "a very physical person", he loves playing tennis, basketball and football – Mikkelsen lost weight rapidly, his energy resources dwindling. In one scene, the character breaks down; it was unscripted, the emotions just overwhelmed him. "I came home as a wreck, to be honest. My wife was not happy! But I have good stamina. I shaved and I went in the sun a little and I was ready again." No fancy Hollywood detox for him.

RUGGED YET RELAXED in a leather jacket and red T-shirt, he's showing no residual effects from the shoot today as he sips a beer and smokes the occasional cigarette. The six-foot 53-year-old is friendly and approachable; there's no huge ego or entourage – a consequence, perhaps, of gradually easing towards stardom in his native Denmark, where he spent three seasons in the early 2000s on Nordic police procedural drama Unit One.

Mikkelsen was born in Copenhagen, the son of a nurse and a bank teller, and grew up with an older brother, Lars, who also became an actor (he was recently seen as the Russian president in the Netflix series House of Cards and as a wayward priest in Channel 4's Ride upon the Storm). As kids, they watched movies together, listened to radio theatre and played Lars's collection of Monty Python records. "We could do all the sketches by heart. We had no idea what they meant! We didn't speak English that well."

In his teens, Mikkelsen trained as a gymnast then switched to dance after being invited to participate in a show. "I did that Billy Elliot thing where I started dancing but I couldn't tell my friends," he admits. "So that went on for a couple of years and then my friends figured out what I was doing and they realised there were a lot of girls dancing, so a few of them tried to become dancers as well."

'I came home a wreck. My wife was not happy!'

TURNING PRO, MIKKELSEN met his wife, choreographer Hanne Jacobsen, through the dance world. "It worked out perfectly for me!" he grins. They've been together for more than 30 years, and have two children in their 20s, Viola and Carl. But for the young Mads, dance eventually gave way to drama school and a leading role in Danish crime thriller Pusher. "I actually got kicked out for doing it."

When we catch up by phone, Mikkelsen has just a few more days left on Doug Liman's Chaos Walking, a big-budget sci-fi drama also starring Tom Holland and Daisy Ridley that's based on the books by Patrick Ness. Then it's back to Denmark for Drinking, the new film from The Hunt's Thomas Vinterberg. "It's about some middle-aged high-school teachers who think it would be a great idea to start drinking while they're working and see if they can improve their performance!"

It's yet another example of the actor's deliberate ploy to mix things up. After all, being part of the pop-culture landscape has its price and anonymity is no longer assured. "There are fewer and fewer places I can sit and hide," he admits. "In the beginning it was fine, I could just go to Berlin. And then I couldn't go to Berlin, so I had to go to New York." And now? Well, he can always try returning to the Arctic.

MY MOVIES

The Young Victoria ★★★
Saturday 6.50pm BBC2 (not Wales)

How to be queen

In unguarded moments I sometimes think I have met the Queen. But I haven't. I hosted the premiere of Victoria & Abdul and met Judi Dench, so you can understand my confusion. Queen Victoria's bicentenary is next Friday (she was born on 24 May 1819), and broadcasters are marking the anniversary as you would expect, with a stately procession of programmes and films celebrating our second-longest serving monarch.

On Saturday on BBC2, for example, we have this 2008 film with Emily Blunt as the princess transitioning to queen, sandwiched by documentaries Victoria & Albert: the Royal Wedding and Queen Victoria: My Musical Britain (both with the indomitable Lucy Worsley, see p52). And, of course, Jenna Coleman is back in ITV's marvellous Victoria. Royal watchers will be positively in raptures.

YOUNG ROYALS
Emily Blunt and Rupert Friend

Then again, fans of that series may find it problematic to rewind to this handsome, well-told version of history, only to find Blunt in the role now owned by Coleman and Rupert Friend mooning about as Albert instead of Tom Hughes.

Its costumes and design are exquisite, but you'd be hasty to dismiss The Young Victoria as a dressing-up-box film. Headline-grabbingly co-produced by Martin Scorsese and Sarah Ferguson (yes, that Sarah Ferguson), it's actually a very fine, well-told slice of Anglo-German history from Canadian director Jean-Marc Vallée (Dallas Buyers Club).

Blunt's performance as the feisty future monarch arguably reigns as one of the best of her career, effectively contrasting royal decorum with a more spirited side to the mother of the British Empire. Look out, too, for a strong turn from Thomas Kretschmann as King Leopold. Despite – or perhaps because of – the Duchess of York's seal of approval, writer Julian Fellowes doesn't shy away from presenting court as repressive, and his take on class and manners was undoubtedly good training for Downton Abbey two years later.

DID YOU KNOW? In 2002, Boyz N the Hood was added to the National Film Registry, a Library of Congress programme preserving important works

ANDREW COLLINS

FILM OF THE DAY

Boyz N the Hood ★★★★★

11.45pm-1.35am BBC2 15

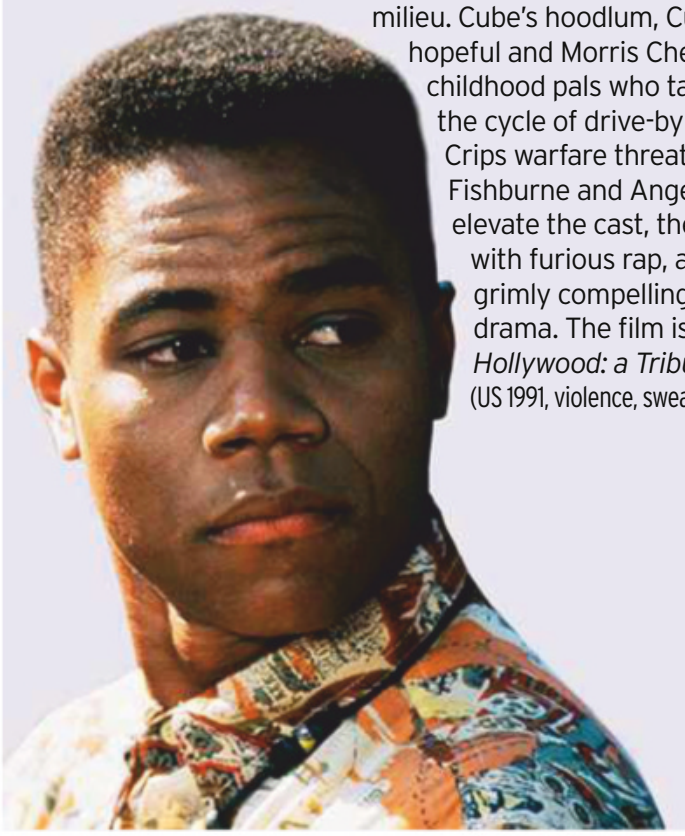
DRAMA Writer/director John Singleton died last month at the age of 51, and there is no finer way of celebrating his talent than a showing of his 1991 debut, Boyz N the Hood. The film rewrote the urban African-American playbook and earned Singleton an Oscar nomination – making him the first black director thus honoured. Spike Lee had made huge inroads in the late 80s, showing young black people in positive roles, but Singleton eschews even a hint of comedy and drops us right into the middle of the gang culture of South Central Los Angeles. Casting Ice Cube from local hip-hop superstars NWA in his first acting role sets the tone: this is a gangsta rap movie with all the macho posturing of that urban milieu. Cube's hoodlum, Cuba Gooding Jr's college hopeful and Morris Chestnut's athlete are childhood pals who take different paths, but the cycle of drive-by violence and Bloods/Crips warfare threatens them all. Laurence Fishburne and Angela Bassett further elevate the cast, the soundtrack is heavy with furious rap, and the result is grimly compelling kitchen-sink drama. The film is preceded by Black Hollywood: a Tribute to John Singleton. (US 1991, violence, swearing, drug abuse, nudity, HD)



DAYTIME

The Happiest Days of Your Life ★★★★ 1.00-2.20pm BBC2 U

COMEDY You can almost smell the school dinners in this wonderful lark. The bones of contention that arise when Margaret Rutherford's academy for young ladies is accidentally evacuated to a building already occupied by Alastair Sim's boys' school are beautifully observed, but the comic highlight is undoubtedly the precision with which the pupils scurry around the school to avoid groups of visiting VIPs. The heads are superb and the performances of Richard Wattis and Joyce Grenfell are top class. DP (UK 1950, BW, HD)

Shrek 2 ★★★★ 5.25-6.50pm BBC1 U

FANTASY This welcome follow-up is every bit as cute, clever and funny as the original. The sequel picks up after the marriage of Shrek (voiced by Mike Myers) and Fiona (Cameron Diaz), and follows their trip to her homeland of Far Far Away. Fiona's parents, King Harold (John Cleese) and Queen Lillian (Julie Andrews), are shocked to discover she's an ogre, so cue assassin Puss-in-Boots (marvellously voiced by Antonio Banderas) to solve the problem. The parodies, pop references, Disney-baiting and Hollywood send-ups are hilarious, and there's plenty of subtle satire and double entendres for young and old alike to savour. AJ (US 2004, HD)

EVENING

Ladyhawke ★★★★ 6.30-9.00pm Syfy PG

FANTASY Michelle Pfeiffer as the title's pretty predator and Rutger Hauer as a legendary lycanthrope give human poignancy to this medieval fairy tale about lovers cursed to shape-change into animals. Richard Donner, who made the 1978 Superman with Christopher Reeve, proves to have an elegant eye for ancient as well as everyday fables, and it's all ravishingly filmed in Italy by Oscar winner Vittorio Storaro. A fresh-faced Matthew Broderick makes an appealing hero. TH (US 1985, edited for violence)

The Young Victoria ★★★ 6.50-8.30pm BBC2 PG

World War Z ★★★ 9.00-11.10pm C4 15

HORROR In the big-budget adaptation of Max Brooks's apocalyptic novel, Brad Pitt plays the troubleshooter scouring the globe to find the cause of a zombie pandemic that sees fast-moving ghouls turn the living into feral fiends in mere seconds. Pitt oozes (a bit too much) serenity in the face of heart-stopping encounters, particularly as the lives of his family depend on his survival. Though zombies are a prolific horror staple, there are plenty of jump-out-of-your-skin moments here, and the epic dimension of the tale (including ghoulish swarms scaling the walled city of Jerusalem like ants) is jaw-dropping. JA (US/Malta 2013, violence, some swearing, HD)

Robin Hood ★★★ 9.00pm-12.10am 5STAR 12

ADVENTURE Ridley Scott's retelling of the Robin Hood legend sees Russell Crowe reunited with his Gladiator director, as deadly archer Robin Longstride, who assumes the guise of Robin of Loxley in order to return to an oppressed England. Scott presents a politically complex vision of the tale, with Mark Strong's royal adviser whipping up hatred in the North to smooth France's way as conquerors. Crowe's romance with an occasionally northern Cate Blanchett (who's 50 this week) is well handled but the film's strengths are the battle scenes, and a strongly realised interpretation of events. AR (US/Jpn 2010, violence, HD)

Happy 50th birthday, Cate!, p90

Bad Boys ★★★★ 9.00-11.25pm Sony Movie Channel 18

ACTION Before he took to bombastic blockbusters, Michael Bay's eye for inventive destruction and cool ultra-violence could be seen in this slick buddy cop flick, in which Will Smith (womanising bachelor) and Martin Lawrence (his married, strait-laced partner) are forced to swap lifestyles to fool the only witness to the crime. However, the plot and characterisation are largely irrelevant – just sit back and feast on the adrenaline-pumping action and the live-wire banter. JF (US 1995, violence, swearing, drug abuse)

Thor: the Dark World ★★★★ 10.20pm-12.05am BBC1 12

ADVENTURE Chris Hemsworth returns as Marvel's hammer-hurling thunder god in this bold second solo epic. No sooner has Thor returned Loki (terrific Tom Hiddleston) to face Asgardian justice post-Avengers Assemble than dark elf Malekith (Christopher Eccleston) emerges to destroy the cosmos. Game of Thrones director Alan Taylor builds on the first Thor film to produce a thrill-packed extravaganza sustained by Lord of the Rings-scale battles, bone-crushing smackdowns and laugh-out loud moments to leaven the doom, gloom and imminent universal destruction. JA (US 2013, violence, swearing, HD)

LATE NIGHT

This Means War ★★ 11.10pm-1.00am C4 12

COMEDY This action romp sees best-buddy CIA operatives Chris Pine and Tom Hardy pitched against each other when they discover they're dating the same woman (Reese Witherspoon). Director McG is aiming for a frothy romance, but the dubious methods employed by the love rivals make for uncomfortable viewing and not enough laughs. Pity, because the three stars are eminently watchable. TeS (US 2012, violence, swearing, sexual references, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

P The Girl on the Train ★★★

9.00-11.10pm C4 15

DID YOU KNOW? As well as being daubed in unflattering make-up, Blunt wore pink, red or yellow contact lenses to indicate whether Rachel was drunk or hungover

MYSTERY Being faithful isn't always a virtue, especially in adapting a novel as popular as Paula Hawkins's The Girl on the Train. Relocating the action from London to New York adds little, but the casting of the usually fresh-faced Emily Blunt as a dumpy alcoholic represents the one compelling deviation. As Rachel, she obsesses about her ex (Justin Theroux) and his new wife (Rebecca Ferguson) while projecting a romantic fantasy onto their neighbour Megan (Haley Bennett), all of whom live by the railway line that takes Rachel into Manhattan. When Megan goes missing during one of Rachel's booze-fuelled blackouts, she wonders if she has crossed a line, and a need to ingratiate herself with Megan's husband (Luke Evans) brings added psychological depth to a formulaic mystery. The truth of what happened to Megan is never as intriguing as the mystery of who Rachel really is – and what she is capable of. It's that particular jigsaw puzzle that draws you along on a winding journey. Stella Papamichael (US 2016, violence, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

DAYTIME

One Fine Day ★★★

2.30-4.45pm Film4 PG

ROMANTIC COMEDY In this warm-hearted but underwritten tale, George Clooney stars as a journalist saddled with parental responsibilities when he's forced to look after his five-year-old daughter while his ex-wife is on honeymoon. Into his life comes Michelle Pfeiffer, who's struggling to hold down a job and bring up a child, and the couple reluctantly agree to help each other out – only to find that what can go wrong naturally does. Clooney, Pfeiffer and Mae Whitman (as Clooney's daughter) are suitably charming, but they are all let down by a very bratty and irritating performance from Alex D Linz as Pfeiffer's hideous son, and the uninspired direction of Michael Hoffman. JB (US 1996, HD)

Gnomeo & Juliet ★★★

3.10-4.55pm 5STAR U

FANTASY This bright and breezy animated adventure uses William Shakespeare's most famous romance for inspiration, only with gnomes and a much happier ending. With Elton John and partner David Furnish among the producers, and featuring many of Elton's famous songs, this cute bit of cartoonery boasts a voice cast to die for. James McAvoy and Emily Blunt play the star-crossed lovers caught up in a turf war between next-door-neighbouring garden gnomes, the Reds and the Blues, but there are also the stellar talents of Michael Caine, Matt Lucas, Jason Statham and Ozzy Osbourne to listen out for. Though a stodgy script means the people at DreamWorks and Pixar won't be having any sleepless nights, there's still much to like about this colourful "gnomance" for kids. DA (UK/US 2011, HD)

P Ruth & Alex ★★

4.45-6.40pm Sony Movie Channel 12

DRAMA In this drama of 70-something lifestyle dilemmas and the New York property market, Morgan Freeman and Diane Keaton play an elderly couple contemplating selling the Brooklyn apartment they've lived in for over 40 years. As the film's original US title – 5 Flights Up – suggests, the stairs may soon get too much for them, but without any clear idea where to go next, an ailing beloved mongrel to contend with, and the pull of so many memories, they're in a quandary. Typically amenable performances from the leads make all this watchable up to a point, but this bitty, slightly exasperating serio-comic offering feels decidedly stretched out over feature length. TJ (US 2014, some swearing)

EVENING

Despicable Me 2 ★★★★

5.55-8.00pm ITV2 U

COMEDY This animated sequel finds the no-longer-despicable former criminal Gru (voiced by Steve Carell) wallowing in domestic bliss with the trio of orphan girls he adopted in the first movie, until he's faced with a new evil threat. Drafted by the Anti-Villain League, Gru has to call upon his cunning of old to scupper the plans of a mysterious, shady figure intent on world domination. Aware of how important Gru's little yellow helpers, the Minions, were to the first film, directors Pierre Coffin and Chris Renaud place them centre stage, at one point turning them against their beloved master. It's a nifty twist that brings added jeopardy to a spectacular romp brimming with laughs. TeS (US 2013, HD)

P The Brothers Grimsby ★★

10.00-11.45pm C5 15

SPOOF Sacha Baron Cohen's latest comic creation is a working-class buffoon from Humberside whose reunion with his long-lost brother (Mark Strong) pitches him into the high-stakes world of international espionage. With his Liam Gallagher haircut, tattoos, England football shirt and nine children, Nobby Butcher is a grotesquely exaggerated working-class cliché, and the film seeks to combine laughter and action while placing him in a fish-out-of-water adventure. While the James Bond-style action proves functional, the remainder too often mistakes extreme vulgarity for genuine wit, while Rebel Wilson and Precious star Gabourey Sidibe are given thankless, one-joke roles. TJ (US/UK 2016, violence, swearing, drug abuse, sexual references, HD)

LATE NIGHT

Valkyrie ★★★ 11.10pm-1.25am ITV4 12

WAR DRAMA In 1944 a group of disillusioned German officers led by the aristocratic Claus von Stauffenberg hatched a plot to assassinate Hitler. X-Men's Bryan Singer turns this footnote in German history into a predictable wartime drama, which is somewhat overwhelmed by the sheer star power of Tom Cruise. Character shading and subtlety is largely sacrificed in an attempt to ratchet up the suspense, but Cruise is supported by the cream of British acting talent, including Kenneth Branagh, Terence Stamp and a top-notch Bill Nighy as his co-conspirators. If you can accept it as a straightforward B-movie assassination thriller, then Valkyrie is a reasonably satisfying effort. AJ (US/Ger 2008, violence, swearing, HD)

Z for Zachariah ★★★

11.15pm-12.45am BBC2 12

DRAMA This thoughtful futuristic tale asks what truly matters when all is lost. Margot Robbie plays a young woman living in a remote valley after the apocalypse, whose world is changed when two strangers (Chiwetel Ejiofor and Chris Pine) walk onto her land. Rather than seeing how many zombies can be killed in an hour and a half, this film keeps the focus on just three characters, and their choices. Director Craig Zobel (Compliance) takes his time getting to a surprisingly abrupt conclusion that may leave some feeling cheated. However, it's still rare to find a post-apocalypse drama with so much to say. JL (Ice/Swi/US 2015, swearing, HD)

Whiskey Tango Foxtrot ★★★

12.10-2.00am C4 15

COMEDY Adapted from American war reporter Kim Barker's memoir, this movie has Tina Fey as a news producer who is sent to Afghanistan after being identified as one of her team's only "childless personnel". Arriving in Kabul, she's inducted into the precarious, hard-partying lifestyle by fellow journalist Margot Robbie. It's rare to see a war story told from a female perspective, and screenwriter Robert Carlock takes aim at the cynicism of modern news output. But it never feels sufficiently scathing, and the trite conclusions don't help, making the movie come across as a touch cowardly for a story that's all about taking the plunge. EAS (US 2016, swearing, sexual references, drug abuse, HD)

Who will really inherit from your Will?

Paul King, Head of April King Legal explains 3 simple steps you can take now to protect your hard-earned assets

1 Avoid unnecessary Care Fee Costs

A lot of people are still unaware that if they need social care in later life, their assets will be means tested by the local authority to help pay for these services. This goes back to the Community Care Act 1990.

If you require social care in later life, the local authority will look to use your assets until you get down to a lower limit, when the local authority will take over the fees.

There are many myths about how people can protect their assets from being used like this. The main one being that a parent should simply sign their house over to the children now, so it won't be taken into consideration for means testing. That's just not true and your local authority will look to see if you've 'deliberately deprived' yourself of an asset by giving property away, going back over any period in time.

Paul King explains how Bloodline Wills from April King can help, "I leave my half of the house to our children but state that they do not inherit my half until both myself and my wife die. This way, if my wife needs care or remarries after my death then my half is safe for our children. My wife does the same in her Will.

It's important to note that nothing happens while myself and my wife are alive and we remain owners of our own home."

April King do not recommend so called Asset Protection Trusts which involve transferring your house to your children during your lifetime. This may be deemed to be deliberate deprivation and create more problems than you're trying to solve.

2 Keep it in the family with Bloodline Wills

Mirror Wills are when a couple leave everything to each other on the first death, then to the children when the second partner dies. But modern family life means these type of Wills leave a lot to chance.

Paul King says: "If I have a Mirror Will leaving everything to my wife and she remarries or goes into care after my death, then either the new husband or the local authority are likely to inherit most, if not all, of my estate ahead of our children. Even if our children are named in my Mirror Will it is by no means certain that they will inherit anything.

This is because a remarriage would cancel the Will my wife had previously made with me and make the new husband next-of-kin. This often comes as a big shock to my clients who had perhaps thought that all was in order and that the family bloodline would one day inherit.

The same is true for thinking that their children (our grandchildren) will one day benefit under our Mirror Wills. If any of our children should die leaving everything to their husband or wife and that son-in-law or daughter-in-law should then remarry, then our grandchildren would be the ones to lose out under the line of inheritance".

Paul continues: "These things can be avoided by having a Bloodline Will. Under these types of specialist Wills from April King your children have complete control and access to the inheritance they receive from you, but they get added protection from the twists and turns of modern family life.

3 Maintain control with a Lasting Power of Attorney

The Lasting Power of Attorney is a relatively new introduction and is divided into two parts – one that deals with finance, while the other deals with health and welfare. In many ways it's similar to a passport; a document that's registered now and one which can be physically handed to the attorneys should the need arise. It allows the attorneys, perhaps the children, to deal with banks and pension companies etc should their parent become incapacitated, but also enables them to deal with matters such as where the parent should live and how they receive care. Your attorneys, again perhaps your children, must legally act in your best interests at all times. You can choose a number of attorneys to act, either jointly or independently, and April King can advise on the various options available to you.

Having a Lasting Power of Attorney removes the burden on children should ill-health happen further down the line. It helps a family deal with bank accounts and so on during a parent's lifetime and ceases on death. Crucially, you have to complete a Lasting Power of Attorney while you are still in good mental health.

If someone becomes ill through say, a stroke or dementia, this option is lost and the family would have to apply for an order from the Court of Protection – a drawn out and expensive process. It is therefore a good idea for clients to plan ahead and remove any future burden from the family. The challenge is to avoid waiting until it is too late, and to act now instead.

"We've worked hard all our lives, why should the local authority get it all?"

FILM OF THE DAY

Chef ★★★★

11.10pm-1.30am Film4 15

COMEDY A winning addition to the subgenre of foodie dramas, Chef is the passion project of Jon Favreau, these days to be found behind the megaphone on Disney live-action remakes including The Jungle Book and the upcoming Lion King. He writes, directs and co-produces this sun-blanched tale of culinary self-discovery, and also plays the disillusioned head chef who quits his job after feeling creatively stifled by restaurant owner Dustin Hoffman. He buys a food van and starts serving Cuban sandwiches to a receptive public, using social media to create a buzz. It does what all good food films should do: make you desperately hungry, as fresh veg is griddled and brisket is barbecued. (US/UK/Rus 2014, swearing, sexual references, HD)

The food's the star, p80

DID YOU KNOW?
Jon Favreau was inspired by Hoffman to revisit his film Kramer vs Kramer to help with the scenes between him and his on-screen son

Emperor ★★★ 1.00-3.05pm AMC (Sky 192, BT 332) 12

WAR DRAMA Tommy Lee Jones stars as Douglas MacArthur, the victorious and imperious general in charge in Japan in the immediate aftermath of the Second World War. It's MacArthur's tricky job to decide whether to have Japanese emperor Hirohito indicted for war crimes, bearing in mind Hirohito's godlike status in Japan, and the possibility of the huge civil unrest that might result from any indictment. The film is beautifully made and finely acted. It's maybe a little on the stodgy side, but, overall, it's a fascinating story. DA (US/Jpn 2012, violence, swearing)

Cop Land ★★★★

9.00-11.05pm 5Spike 18

POLICE DRAMA This movie was a real change of pace for Sylvester Stallone, who appears here in a touching role as an out-of-shape New Jersey sheriff with a hearing disability and zero self-esteem who patrols a community made up of New York City cops. Stallone gives his all (including a dramatic weight gain for the role) as his character uncovers corruption among his major league police friends, and is easily the match of a terrific cast, which includes Robert De Niro, Harvey Keitel and a really nasty Ray Liotta. JC (US 1997, violence, swearing, brief nudity, HD)

White Water Summer ★★★

10.00-11.50pm Talking Pictures TV 15

ADVENTURE A superior coming-of-age story, with a young Kevin Bacon as a bullyboy wilderness guide and Sean Astin as one of four kids he takes into the middle of nowhere to make men of them. The plot kicks in when Bacon gets badly injured and finds his life dependent on Astin, previously the main butt of his bullying. The story veers between a wilderness tale and a psycho-guide drama, but the performances are solid and the scenery gorgeous thanks to the work of legendary cinematographer John Alcott, best known for his collaboration with Stanley Kubrick. DA (US 1987)

Drive Angry ★★★

11.05pm-1.10am C5 18

ACTION A riot of gratuitous sex, full-on violence, gory gunfights and explosive car crashes makes this chase-and-chiller combo a high-energy trash extravaganza. Vengeance-fuelled John Milton (Nicolas Cage) escapes Hell to pursue the cult that killed his daughter and is now set on sacrificing her baby to unleash the Devil. Cage keeps it deliberately one-note to anchor the flashy mayhem, Amber Heard is terrific as the waitress caught up in his quest, while William Fichtner steals every scene as the enigmatic Accountant, charged with getting Milton back to Hades. AJ (US 2011, violence, swearing, drug abuse, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

Van Helsing ★★★

11.15pm-1.50am ITV4 12

HORROR After re-invigorating the Mummy franchise, writer/director Stephen Sommers turned to some more of Universal's classic monsters. Using the original films as a springboard, he delivers an exciting romp that includes Dracula, the Wolf Man and Frankenstein's Monster. Gabriel Van Helsing (Hugh Jackman) is dispatched to 19th-century Transylvania where he comes to the aid of Anna Valerious (Kate Beckinsale) in her battle against the Count. This is Indiana Jones meets Hammer Horror – the relentless action is blended with a knowing undercurrent and dramatic gothic styling. SF (US 2004, violence, HD)

DRAMA Sydney Pollack directs this hard-hitting story about the dance marathon craze that swept America during the 1930s. Jane Fonda and Michael Sarrazin are among the partners dragging themselves beyond the end of their tethers, spurred on by Gig Young's master of ceremonies. Tom Hutchinson (US 1969, swearing, sex scenes, some violence)

Allied ★★★ 9.00-11.25pm Film4 15

THRILLER Intelligence officer Brad Pitt falls for fellow agent Marion Cotillard, but then he is told that his new wife is a German spy and he must test her loyalty. Director Robert Zemeckis could have made more of the psychological subtext, but he opens the stage for some guns-blazing derring-do behind enemy lines in France. Cotillard shines in a role that plays on her doe-eyed, angelic aura, and only the iciest temperament could resist the emotional finale. SP (US 2016, violence, swearing, drug abuse, sex scenes, HD)

Belle ★★★★

1.05-2.50am C4 12

DRAMA This politically charged costume drama established former child actor Amma Asante as a vital British director. Belle has been fictionally expanded by writer Misan Sagay from the sketchy story of the real-life mixed-race daughter of a white naval officer and a West Indian slave, sent to live with her father's aristocratic family in Hampstead in 1765. Subtly played as a young adult by then-newcomer Gugu Mbatha-Raw, Belle is brought up alongside her white cousin (played by David Cronenberg favourite Sarah Gadon) but denied an introduction into society like other eligible young ladies. Intertwining with abolitionism via Sam Reid's liberal lawyer, it's a tale that resonates with our own racially uncertain times. Superb. (US/UK 2013, some violence, HD)

DID YOU KNOW? One of Asante's first acting roles was as Cheryl Webb in the BBC series Grange Hill – appearing on the cast's Just Say No record

Night of the Big Heat ★★

4.00-5.50pm Horror Channel 15

HORROR The ever-reliable team of Peter Cushing and Christopher Lee put a crisp (and crisped!) British cast through its horror-struck paces as mystified islanders are plagued by a winter heatwave caused by energy-starved protoplasmic aliens. Most of the action takes place at a local inn, where the helpless survivors get on each other's nerves. You'll soon know how they feel! The film, unlike most of its characters, rarely catches fire. AJ (UK 1967, some violence)

From Dusk till Dawn ★★★★

9.00-11.00pm 5Spike 18

HORROR Delivering everything you'd expect from a splatter-action horror bearing scriptwriter Quentin Tarantino's name, this in-your-face shocker from Robert Rodriguez juggles sharp dialogue, excessive violence, great special effects and bad taste with stylish verve. Tarantino and George Clooney play two crooks heading south of the border, who end up under attack from bloodthirsty vampires in a sleazy Mexican bar. AJ (US 1995, violence, swearing, nudity)

Hannibal ★★★

10.00pm-12.40am 5STAR 18

HORROR In this long-awaited sequel to 1991's The Silence of the Lambs, Anthony Hopkins reprises his Oscar-winning role as Lecter, this time with his tongue firmly in his cheek. Julianne Moore plays agent Clarice Starling with creditable conviction. Fans of the first film may be disappointed with the lack of mystery, suspense and psychological resonance here, but there's loads more Lecter for the money, and plenty of gory action. JA (US 2001, violence, swearing, nudity, drug abuse, HD)

ADVENTURE A typically intense Edward Norton replaces Hulk's Eric Bana as the gentle scientist whose exposure to gamma rays turns him into a big, green rage monster. COMEDY DRAMA The eternal triangle – two men besotted by the same woman who is attracted to both – is the central ingredient of this classy and witty romantic comedy. However, skilfully interwoven into the mix is an examination of hypocrisy, the inequities of the law and a measure of suspense. Add Jean Arthur, Cary Grant, Ronald Colman and director George Stevens, and what you get is effervescent gold. RK (US 1942, BW)

WAR DRAMA Although its ultimate location is the Dardanelles during the First World War, this landmark of Australian cinema steers between overt pacifism and Anzac pride to focus on the spirit of competition and camaraderie that underpins the national character. Peter Weir refuses to shirk the issue of imperial troops fighting European battles and admirably conveys the chaos and waste of warfare. But his interest clearly lies in the situation of zealous sprinter Mark Lee and his cynical buddy, Mel Gibson. DP (Aus 1981, swearing, brief nudity, edited for some language, violence, HD)

Skyfall ★★★★★

8.00-10.50pm ITV2 12

ADVENTURE With the 25th James Bond movie finally in production and slated for an April 2020 release, let us return to Daniel Craig's third and arguably best 007 outing. Winning two Oscars, for sound editing and Adele's belting theme song, it became the all-time highest-grossing Bond film and topped the 2012 UK box office in the year Craig and Her Majesty parachuted into the Olympics. Now that the dust has settled, I believe it still stands up as a series high point, despite the disappointing London Underground stunt. There's a hot-button cyber-terrorism plot whose topicality is all-too evident when you watch the TV news; Javier Bardem delivering a memorably homoerotic villain who blows up MI6; and a mini-break at Bond's family pile in Scotland. Under serious-minded director Sam Mendes, the result is dark, paranoid and grave, but no less thrilling for that. Craig's fourth, Spectre, also directed by Mendes, was pretty good, too. DID YOU KNOW?
Author James Ellroy called Skyfall "the only profound James Bond movie", crediting it with influencing his 2014 novel Perfidia

Very Important Person ★★★

6.00-8.00pm Talking Pictures TV U

COMEDY The key to this winning film is a witty script that cleverly lampoons many of the conventions and stereotypes of the prisoner-of-war picture. Stanley Baxter gives one of his best film performances as a PoW posing as a high-ranking Nazi in a bid to free scientist James Robertson-Justice, while the deft support from Leslie Phillips, Eric Sykes and the deliciously deadpan Richard Wattis is of a very high order. DP (UK 1961, BW)

The Hatton Garden Job ★★★

9.00-10.50pm Film4 15

CRIME DRAMA The audacious Easter holiday raid in the bowels of London's jewellery district grabbed worldwide headlines in 2015, but this is a relatively pedestrian account of events, and arguably follows heist movie conventions too closely. Cocksure safecracker Matthew Goode is the perp who recruits a motley assortment of old lags (Larry Lamb, Phil Daniels, Clive Russell, David Calder) tempted by "one last job". Director Ronnie Thompson (Tower Block) relies for the most part on the typical freeze-frames, fast-cuts and voiceovers familiar from countless Lock, Stock knock-offs. More time poring over the blueprints could have made this a richer experience. TeS (UK 2016, swearing, HD)

47 Ronin ★★★

9.00-11.15pm E4 12

ACTION FANTASY This blockbuster, set in feudal Japan, stars Keanu Reeves as Kai, an outcast foundling who finds himself fronting a band of masterless samurai, called ronin, in a bid both to avenge their dead lord, and to free Kai's love from a forced marriage to the lord's evil usurper. Blending Japanese myth with Hollywood-style CGI beasties and shape-shifting witches, 47 Ronin both benefits and suffers from its splendid Japanese support cast, who look great, but are obliged to speak in English. Yet it's handsomely staged, is quite moving in its final moments, and all told is a decent alternative to everyday Hollywood action. DA (US 2012, violence, HD)

The Magnificent Seven ★★★

9.00-11.45pm 5STAR 12

WESTERN Director Antoine Fuqua is in reboot mood again, only instead of TV show The Equalizer, it's John Sturges's iconic western that gets the action-injection makeover. The premise is the same: seven hombres with particular skills come to the aid of a community under siege. Taciturn gunslinger Denzel Washington leads the septet, including a wise-ass gambler (Chris Pratt), a sharpshooter (Ethan Hawke) and a knife-throwing assassin (Lee Byung-hun). Washington is his usual charismatic self and his scenes with Hawke provide much-needed substance. Fuqua delivers the quick-fire gunplay and respects his source material; he just can't match the magnificence of that enduring 1960 classic. JA (US 2016, violence, HD)

P First Kill ★★

9.00-11.05pm Sony Movie Channel 15

THRILLER In a low-budget kidnap thriller with low-budget aspirations, Hayden Christensen stars as Will, a father forced to help a bank robber in order to save his son. An interesting relationship develops between Will's nerdy son and his hillbilly kidnapper (Gethin Anthony), who form an oddly sweet bond over video games. Other than that, the story progresses in all-too familiar fashion. Meanwhile, marquee name Bruce Willis as a local cop appears half-asleep during much of his sleuthing. (Can/US/UK 2017, violence, swearing)

The Crazies ★★★★

11.10pm-1.20am Syfy 15

HORROR Even George A Romero admits his 1973 cult favourite wasn't a satisfactory treatment of the devastating effect a biochemical disaster has on a small town. So this upgrade is a much more worthwhile remake than most. In an expert reinvention, sheriff Timothy Olyphant and his pregnant wife Radha Mitchell try to escape the virus that's turning the local population into zombie-like psychos. Not only is the film effective in making points about potential quarantine dangers, but also in how they could be horribly mishandled, and it's all frighteningly underlined by the shocking finale. AJ (US 2010, violence, swearing)

Anne of the thousand raves

P The Favourite ★★★★★ 15

From Mon Sky Store/Virgin Movies (also on DVD, Blu-ray and download)

COMEDY DRAMA The capriciousness of court and the perils of falling from favour are explored in this superb tragicomic take on the reign of Queen Anne from director Yorgos Lanthimos (The Lobster).

Those that flank the ailing and erratic queen (Oscar-winning Olivia Colman) are a dastardly bunch, including her companion Lady Sarah (Rachel Weisz), an astute political puppeteer. The arrival of Sarah's cousin Abigail (Emma Stone) causes further strife, with the fallen aristocrat becoming a rival for the queen's affections.

As expletives fly, bodices are ripped and duplicitous plans hatched. The interplay is divine, imbued with authenticity by a formidable triumvirate: Stone is superbly cunning and Weisz gloriously fearsome, yet it's Colman who stands out as she showcases her many shades. Emma Simmonds (US/UK/Ire 2018, violence, swearing, HD)

DVD OF THE WEEK

Colette ★★★★ 15 Released 13 May on DVD, Blu-ray and download

Keira Knightley was born to play the feminist icon Sidonie-Gabrielle Colette and is in her defiant element in director Wash Westmoreland's elegant and titillating account of a literary figure who became a sensation. All stiff collars, inky quills and heavy drapes, it concentrates on Colette's marriage to Henry Gauthier-Villars (a harrumphingly priapic Dominic West), who published her racy stories under his name for reasons of patriarchal orthodoxy. The mainly British and Irish cast eschew 'Allo, 'Allo accents, and the Hungarian locations, exquisitely shot with sparing use of CGI, evoke provincial France without strain. Andrew Collins RT Offer To order the DVD for £14.99, call 0844 848 7300 (charges apply), quoting ref RT1724. DAVID BROWN

Suitable for parents

David Brown is inspired by his children's viewing habits

I'VE ALWAYS BEEN a sentimental fool when it comes to TV, but even I hadn't expected to get emotional over Blue Peter. But there I was, holding back the tears while my ten-year-old son and I watched Radzi Chinyanganya's last episode. For my son, this was a big deal: he hasn't known BP without Radzi as a presenter. And for me, in that moment, it honestly felt like a chapter was closing on my son's childhood.

Because Blue Peter is that rare thing – a show I recommended to him when he was little that he still likes. Over the past year, I've noticed my influence on him shrinking as he drifts over to online. Instead of sitting on the sofa in front of CBBC, he'll often have headphones on at the laptop. So being hit by the sight of Radzi saying goodbye got me thinking that my son will one day, perhaps sooner than I'd imagined, also bid farewell to Blue Peter. Maudlin? Me?

'My son hasn't known Blue Peter without Radzi as a presenter'

But then, I have seen this scenario play out already. I also have a 15-year-old son who, while at primary school, was a bookish little soul. I encouraged him (some might, cruelly, call it brainwashing) to watch some of the cult shows I'd enjoyed as a child. Robin of Sherwood. The Peter Davison era of Doctor Who. The Star Trek episode "Amok Time" in which Kirk and Spock lamp each other with Vulcan shovels. All the greats. And for a while it worked – I had my Mini Me.

I know, I know. I'm squirming, too, because it sounds naive, ridiculous even. And you can probably guess what eventually happened. Yes, that's right. A couple of years later, I asked him if he'd like to watch Quantum Leap and he looked at me like I'd asked him to set his skinny jeans on fire and went back to bingeing clips of 8 out of 10 Cats Does Countdown on his phone.

So, who'd have guessed it? Children turn out to have minds of their own. But being a mawkish sap, I'll still be mourning when the younger one outgrows my TV guidance altogether. There is something important, though, that I need to keep in mind. In fact, with the teenager, it's become pretty much vital. And that's to let them teach me.

I'd initially imagined I'd be losing my older son to an Americanised, ad-driven world of endless on-demand content that acted like a hypodermic syringe into the arm. But, instead, he's become his own editor. He's tracked down programmes that suit his interests and then introduced them to his dad.

He loves painting, so Portrait Artist of the Year became a fixture. The history of film has become important to him, so he sought out Mark Kermode's Secrets of Cinema. And if my teenage offspring hadn't suggested it, I'd never have had Friday Night Dinner in my life. (A small accompanying anecdote at this point: I had to take my T-shirt off mid-washing-up the other evening because it got wet. My son then walked into the kitchen and said, "It's Martin Goodman! Say, 'Hello bambinos'. Go on, say it!")

AS FOR THE young Blue Peter fan, well, he – like BP alumni Matt Baker and Helen Skelton before him – has now also discovered Countryfile. And, let's face it, if any show can give you a sense of perspective about life and make you feel at ease with outliving your own usefulness, then it's this one. My only hope is that the children don't become too good at recommending TV. I do have a job I'd quite like to keep.

SO LONG, RADZI
The Blue Peter presenter has hung up his scissors and glue

RIVERDALE'S FINEST

Speaking of programmes that unite parent and child, I'm worried about the future of Riverdale (Netflix) now that the late Luke Perry's final scene has screened. Perry's patriarch Fred Andrews (below) was the voice of reason on a series that has become increasingly outrageous. And Fred's last appearance saw him deliver some typically sage advice to son Archie – proof, if it were needed, that he was the town's best father figure. Not that he had much competition in Riverdale, where all the other dads are either Mob bosses or serial killers.

As for Perry himself, he was unusual in being a teen heart-throb whose appeal lasted into middle age. To one generation, he was Dylan McKay, the coolest student at West Beverly High. To the next, he was the lovable Fred. And to 40-somethings with a teenager in the house, he was probably both. I can't help but feel that this new revival of Beverly Hills, 90210 starring the original actors (yes, even Shannen Doherty) will disappoint because of the sad absence of its breakout star.

CULT COMEDY

1 Schitt's Creek

Netflix

Perhaps the ultimate example of "bad title, great show", this comedy has become a word-of-mouth smash. Eugene Levy and Catherine O'Hara give perfect comic performances as the heads of a rich family forced to slum it in a Canadian small town, but picking a favourite character from the droll ensemble is hard. We're now on series five.
Available from 10 May

SINGING THEIR HEARTS OUT

2 Our Dementia Choir

iPlayer (BBC1)

Calm down after Line of Duty by following Vicky McClure in civvies, fronting this deeply moving two-part doc. McClure is an unpretentious, sensitive leader of a group of people from her native Nottingham who have dementia but who might just be helped by music. As scientists track remarkable changes in the participants, the emotional pay-offs are huge.

ANOTHER CHANCE

3 Stephen: the Murder That Changed a Nation

iPlayer (BBC1)

Don't miss another chance to see a meticulous three-part doc on the 1993 murder of London teenager Stephen Lawrence, examining the terrible truths the case and its aftermath told us about society and the justice system.

BACK FROM THE DEAD

4 Lucifer

Netflix

He lives! Here's another US show cancelled by a TV network and revived online, although since it was on Amazon here previously, it's just switched streaming platforms. Netflix is now the home of our own Tom Ellis as the devil, whose sideline as a wise-cracking LA detective causes outlandish supernatural hi-jinks.
Available from 8 May

5 Race across the World

iPlayer (BBC2)

A perfectly executed reality competition, based on a brilliantly simple idea: five teams of two have to travel from London to Singapore as fast as they can, for the price of the air fare but without travelling by plane or using smartphones to guide them. As fabulous European locations come and go and we shout at the screen to suggest more efficient itineraries, all five duos prove to be charming, fascinating or both.
Available until 13 May

6 The Widow

ITV Hub

Kate Beckinsale brings her movie grandeur and unstoppably fabulous hair to a thriller from the Williams brothers, creators of The Missing. She's the titular widow who embarks on a quest to Congo when news footage from the country appears to show her supposedly long-dead husband. Flashbacks, twists and a strong cast (Charles Dance, Alex Kingston, Ólafur Darri Ólafsson) elevate what's really just a glossy potboiler.

LAST CHANCE

7 The Cry

iPlayer (BBC1)

One of the best dramas of 2018, this taut four-parter is never quite what it seems: it shifts from a bleak picture of new motherhood to a disturbing baby-kidnap nightmare to a subtle, bristling psychodrama about the power struggle within a marriage. Through all the surprises, Jenna Coleman excels in a role made up mostly of moments and reactions rather than luxurious chunks of dialogue. It's a fine piece of work.

GROWN-UP COMEDY DRAMA

8 Easy

Netflix

It's part anthology (each episode has a self-contained story), part regular series (key characters re-occur), so this dramedy is one you can dip into or binge on. Either way you'll get a diverse array of modern relationships, often involving something slightly off the norm – examined with a light, open-minded attitude that sets Easy apart from superficially similar US shows. Here's the third and final series. Available from 10 May

DARE YOU?

Netflix

Gird yourself for the subject matter of this cheeky new US comedy: a young dominatrix (Zoe Levin) enlists her old high-school boyfriend – who's now out as gay and is trying to overcome stage fright to be a comedian – to assist her at work. Netflix's content disclaimer warns of "strong sex references", which is putting it somewhat mildly, but as well as the dirty jokes there are nimbly observed moments of vulnerability and self-discovery.

10 HE'S BACK

Sneaky Pete

Amazon Prime

Do you like a naughty thriller about lies, guns and money? Fast-moving, cool and a bit sexy? Get this underrated drama on your radar. Giovanni Ribisi is in the role he was born to play as a conman who, in series one, inveigles his way into his old cellmate's family and begins a fraudulent new life. With Marin Ireland now a co-lead in a cast stuffed with snappy supporting players, there's a brand new grift on in series three. Available from 10 May

YOUR NEXT BINGE

Catch up now, before she comes back...

Some drama is not for the faint-hearted; Game of Thrones, Dexter and Hannibal are a few shows in which blood pours out of bodies and spears are thrust through eyeballs. And then there's Doctor Foster, a show with no gore but for which you still need a soul of steel. The hatred, suspicion and psychological warfare at the heart of this thriller are enough to make you hide behind a cushion.

Suranne Jones (above) plays Gemma, a GP living in apparent domestic loveliness with husband Simon (Bertie Carvel) and their son Tom (Tom Taylor) – until she finds a long, blonde hair on Simon's scarf and starts to obsess about whether or not he's having an affair.

A woman betrayed by a man is a story as old as time. Yet what makes Mike Bartlett's Bafta-winner so exciting is Gemma's powerful, controlled handling of the situation, even as suspicion stalks her every second of the day. The focus is on Gemma and her next calculated move, not her husband.

Gemma bolts down her feelings in a way that seems so unhealthy you want to book her into therapy, but it's fascinating to watch her almost crack, almost burst but then contain herself and continue. Melodramatic, outrageous and gripping, the story exposes the ugliest corners of the human psyche as Gemma and Simon enter into a battle that would make the US military pause for thought.

The second series is more ludicrous than the first, but still great fun – and a third is on the way. Jones and Carvel are excellent, as is Killing Eve star Jodie Comer, who plays a bigger role as the drama goes on. Doctor Foster is a study in revenge, madness and how to wreck the lives of those who have wronged you. Most of us wouldn't go even an inch along the path Gemma and Simon take, but there's something cathartic in watching this couple unleash their fury. KASIA DELGADO

DOCTOR DIGITAL

Achieve a Stark contrast

A recent episode of Game of Thrones, featuring a chaotic battle at night in a blizzard, had many viewers complaining they couldn't see the action.

"People don't know how to tune their TVs properly," GoT cinematographer Fabian Wagner told Wired magazine, adding that many "watch it on iPads, which in no way can do justice to a show like that." He has a point. We now watch TV on a variety of screens, and streaming from the likes of NowTV can degrade quality. Doc Dig spent the entire Battle of Winterfell staring at his own reflection in his laptop, but most LCD televisions are no better.

The problem is that in most TVs, every pixel is always illuminated, even if that pixel is supposed to be black. The result is a grey "haze" that makes dark scenes even harder to see. Modern OLED televisions turn off black pixels for better contrast – and old plasma screens will also out-black many modern sets.

If you don't want to shell out, try changing your TV's picture mode to "Cinema" (or similar) and increase the strength of your backlight (if this is an option in your settings). Resist the urge to ramp up the brightness – it won't reveal more detail and will wash everything out.

Of course, sometimes darkness is an artistic decision. As Wagner said, "Everything we wanted people to see is there." JONATHAN HOLMES

SATURDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

ONE IS AMUSED
Lucy Worsley provides an overview of Queen Victoria's love of music

PICK OF THE DAY Queen Victoria: My Musical Britain 9.00pm BBC2

HISTORY So it turns out that Queen Victoria was amused – by music. Lucy Worsley explores the role music played in both the queen's private and public lives, discovering that it transformed the monarchy from a political power into a benevolent cultural force and made her a popular public figure.

Interspersed with snippets of music that Victoria adored, Worsley's typically accessible documentary reveals the fun side of the queen (although for once it doesn't involve much dressing up). Victoria's diary describes the pleasure she got from ogling "the fine figure" of future husband Albert waltzing (the dance was too risqué for single women to indulge in) and that she was so fanatical about singer Jenny Lind she would cut short formal dinners to rush across town in order to see the "Swedish Nightingale" perform. Later in life she was obsessed with Indian music, but she also loved Scottish bagpipes – although maybe that was partly because she liked a drop of whisky, too. JANE RACKHAM

One-Day International Cricket

10.30am Sky Cricket/Main Event

SPORT This is only the second of a five-match series against Pakistan, but following England's last-minute squad shuffles these pre-World Cup fixtures take on extra significance. With Alex Hales suspended, James Vince comes into the squad on the back of a career-best 190 for Hants in one-day cricket. England's batting line-up is settled and Vince is unlikely to break into the first XI, but with matches coming thick and fast in the World Cup, strength in depth is a must.

This series is just the early sparring before the one-two punch of the World Cup and the Ashes, but there is still much to savour – and more to learn. JAMES GILL

2.00pm BBC1/
4.00pm BT Sport 2, 4.30pm C4

SPORT The final day of the Premier League season takes centre stage tomorrow, but today is all about the egg chasers. The BBC continues its coverage of rugby league's Challenge Cup with local derby Bradford Bulls v Leeds Rhinos (k/o 2.30pm BBC1). The sides haven't met since the Bulls were relegated in 2014, but the rivalry runs deep: Rhinos coach Dave Furner was in the Leeds team who were beaten by Bradford in the Challenge Cup final in 2003.

Then it's time to switch codes for rugby union's Champions Cup final, Leinster v Saracens (k/o 5pm BT Sport 2, C4), a crashing Anglo-Irish affair between the defending champions and the 2017 winners. JG

Ninja Warrior UK

6.30pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT Close but no Segar. That's my verdict on the Ninja Warrior UK contestants who try to outshine the great Toby Segar. A finalist in both 2015 and 2016 and the fastest around the track in any of this year's heats, he's back now for the semi-final. At this stage, the course is longer, the obstacles tougher and everyone's against the clock. So what will the likes of Segar and master showman Jacob Peregrine-Wheller make of new attractions Momentum Shift and the dodgy-sounding Sliding Pole Grasper?

Well, here's a tease: there is a bit of an upset before the credits roll as someone you'd think would be a dead cert to make it through gets an early soaking. DAVID BROWN

Britain's Got Talent

8.00pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT Some say Britain's Got Talent is TV twaddle that at its worst is saccharine and at best just plain silly. And, well, maybe those people have a point. But if you can manage (and, admittedly, it is a push sometimes) to look past the manipulative music, heavy editing and the fact that so many of the acts already have a showbizzy past, BGT is still – whisper it – actually rather enjoyable. Who can argue with the likes of heroic police dog Finn, or Isle of Wight enthusiast Derek Sandy?

More variety acts take to the stage tonight, but will any of them be good enough to impress Amanda Holden who – at the time of writing – is yet to press her Golden Buzzer? FRANCES TAYLOR

BRADLEY WALSH'S CV

Bradley Walsh's career is as long as it is varied. The host of Bradley Walsh's Late Night Guest List (9.15pm ITV) is a former footballer, comedian, presenter and actor.

The versatile 58-year-old virtuoso became a professional player for Brentford at 18, but his football career was over by 1982 when, at just 22, he suffered an ankle fracture. This led Walsh to become a Bluecoat at Pontins, and then a stand-up comedian. He previously told RT: "The great thing about playing football was the team... When you're a Bluecoat you're part of a team, but when you get into stand-up comedy, you're on your own."

In the mid-80s he was a warm-up man for Tom Jones, Shirley Bassey and Barry Manilow before moving into TV in the 90s, with the National Lottery show, Wheel of Fortune and The Chase. Bradley's acting CV is just as lengthy, from Corrie and Law & Order: UK to Doctor Who. FT

Cardinal

9.00pm, 9.40pm BBC4

DRAMA The whispering, brooding and now – after the shocking if not wholly surprising death at the end of the previous series – even more troubled Canadian detective returns to peer balefully at more crimes.

While John Cardinal himself (Billy Campbell) secretly tries to find out who is sending him cruel poison pen letters, his adversary turned close colleague Lise Delorme (Karine Vanasse) is more concerned with a multiple homicide in a posh lakeside house. We know, but the cops don't, that there was a witness...

As before it's a sturdy sleuther set against a chilly, woody backdrop, where the cold nights are an unforgiving jet black. Brrrrr. JACK SEALE

Harrow

9.00pm Drama

DRAMA A fine example of crime drama trope #361: the forensic pathologist who solves crimes themselves. In this melodramatic Australian procedural, first shown on Alibi last year, Ioan Gruffudd hams it up as brilliant, maverick pathologist Daniel Harrow – who wants to know why the person on his slab died, not just how, and he'll bend the rules to find out. And of course he ignores a strait-laced colleague who tells him, "That's the police's job, that's the court's job, that's not our job."

Today that leads him to reopen the cold case of a woman's suicide. It all follows tried and tested lines, but there's a hint at the end that the series could get darker and more interesting. DAVID CRAWFORD

Bradley Walsh's Late Night Guest List

9.15pm ITV

CHAT SHOW This new show hadn't been recorded as RT went to press but, as anyone who saw him on Breaking Dad or who watches him on The Chase knows, Bradley Walsh is such a likeable character it's probably going to be lots of fun. And chaotic.

Holly Willoughby and Piers Morgan are his first guests, although we don't think this means those two are going to pair up as presenters any time soon. And Emma Bunton teams up with – no, not the Spice Girls, sorry – but her partner and fellow singer Jade Jones for a duet. And one audience member will, Walsh hopes, win "some truly amazing prizes". JR

Casualty

9.10pm BBC1

DRAMA The euthanasia debate has played out on Casualty before. Remember when Connie got arrested? Or when Megan asked Charlie to help her die? But then, the medical injunction "Do No Harm" does go to the very heart of a doctor's credo, so it's understandable that the show feels the need to return to the topic of end-of-life care. And at least tonight's drama for Dr Will Noble doesn't come from out of the blue – we've seen him treating young leukaemia patient Toby for some weeks now, so his clash with colleague Archie over the teen's treatment doesn't feel forced.

Away from the arguments over medical ethics, Charlie and Duffy's plan to renew their vows gets hijacked by Noel, who organises a party in the pub. Personally, I was happy that, for once, the pictures being projected onto the wall didn't look like old publicity shots from the BBC archive. DB

Bay splashes the cash

Bad Boys ★★★★

9.00pm Sony Movie Channel FREEVIEW

This explosive buddy-cop movie (review, p37) marked the film debut of Michael Bay, but the director had already proved he could pull out all the stops in the field of music videos. His most famous promo was for Meat Loaf's I'd Do Anything for Love (But I Won't Do That), which topped the UK chart for seven weeks in 1993. One executive said the eight-minute video "probably had the budget of Four Weddings and a Funeral". But still a modest spend compared to Bay's latest Transformers movie, which cost $217 million. JAMIE HEALY

The call of the wild

Captain Fantastic ★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

This bittersweet, feel-good comedy about a family of social justice warriors is available on catch-up all week. Viggo Mortensen plays the father of six, who keeps his brood out in the wild, teaching them about art, literature and survival. Their mother's death is the catalyst that brings them all out of hiding, but the children run the risk of being taken into care when they attend her funeral. The young cast members are a likeable bunch, shepherded by the charismatic Mortensen, who was Oscar-nominated for his performance. DAMON WISE

Piecing her life together

Puzzle ★★★ 8.20am Sky Premiere, 6.10pm Sky Select

Kelly Macdonald stars here as a bored housewife who discovers a knack for jigsaw puzzles and teams up with Irrfan Khan to compete in a tournament. Given that Macdonald is married, it's hard to root for the romance that develops between the pair, but this is still a very watchable tale of a woman taking control of her life. STEPHEN CARTY

SUNDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

EYES ON THE PRIZE Graham Norton is your host as, from top, A Very English Scandal, Bodyguard and Killing Eve vie for Bafta glory

PICK OF THE DAY The British Academy Television Awards 8.00pm BBC1

AWARDS This year's ceremony attracted controversy before any awards had been handed out, thanks to Killing Eve featuring on the shortlist. Bafta bent its eligibility criteria so that the cat-and-mouse thriller, which actually premiered on BBC America, could be included. Few, though, will begrudge the drama its nominations – most of us are just narked that the time lag between US and UK broadcasts means we're still waiting for season two (see page 6).

Fans of Bodyguard, though, could have cause to complain: Keeley Hawes is up for best actress, but co-star Richard Madden is missing in action for best actor. Personally, though, I feel that Hugh Grant deserves this one for his bravura turn as the lubricious Jeremy Thorpe in A Very English Scandal. My only other plea is that Mortimer & Whitehouse: Gone Fishing wins the Features prize, as it was by far the most life-affirming series of 2018.

Our host at London's Royal Albert Hall, Graham Norton, is set for a busy week: he'll be in Israel for the Eurovision final next Saturday. DAVID BROWN

Premier League Football

2.00pm Sky Premier League*, 2.45pm* Sky Main Event (k/o 3pm)

SPORT Ten matches, one kick-off time: how many screens will you need to keep pace with all that's happening on the final day of the Premier League season? Sky Sports will be showing two matches live, but it will probably pay to have an ear on BBC Radio 5 Live, too, for regular updates. Liverpool host Wolves while Manchester City travel south to Brighton – together these two teams have taken this season almost to the brink, pushing each other to unprecedented levels of consistency. However the day pans out, Gary Lineker will pull all the threads together on Match of the Day on BBC1 from 10.30pm. JAMES GILL

6.00pm BBC1 (not Wales)

GARDENING Even if you don't know a clematis from a chrysanthemum, you can still enjoy the glorious spectacle that is the Chelsea Flower Show. It opens its gates to the masses on 21 May, but today Adam Frost and Sandi Toksvig give us a glimpse of the preparation involved in exhibiting at the biggest event of the horticultural year.

There's also a crowd-free peek at what's on show this year. Among the big names exhibiting are multi-gold medal winners Andy Sturgeon and Sarah Eberle, as well as the winner of Best in Show last year, Chris Beardshaw. They definitely know their hostas from their hebes. JANE RACKHAM

Countryfile

7.00pm BBC1

FACTUAL You may have sat down to a nice roast beef dinner today. Or perhaps you tucked into a tasty poached fillet of wild Atlantic salmon? Either way, there's likely to be something of interest for you tonight in Countryfile.

Anita Rani is in Banchory, Aberdeenshire, to meet farmer Grace Noble, who rears traditional highland cattle (so wearing a bright red mac was perhaps not such a good idea, Anita) and has passed on her love of the breed to her teenage daughter. Meanwhile, Joe Crowley is in Banffshire at the Ballindalloch Castle Estate on the banks of the River Avon to find out why stocks of wild Atlantic salmon are declining so rapidly. JR

Undiscovered Worlds with Steve Backshall

8.00pm BBC2 (N Ireland: Mon 7pm BBC2)

NATURE This really is the Mission: Impossible of natural history series, to the extent that you expect Steve Backshall to receive his assignment via a recording that states: "This tape will self-destruct – in an ecologically sound way – in five seconds..." Like Tom Cruise's Ethan Hunt, he always finds an opportunity to take off his shirt and dangle precariously on a rope. This week, it's at the entrance to an underground cave system in Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula.

First, he has to trek through a scorpion-infested jungle carrying what appears to be the entire contents of a left-luggage office on his back. Why? Because he can. DB

COMING SOON ON ITV...

Both The Durrells and Victoria (pictured) conclude tonight (8pm and 9pm ITV), and while this is the final outing for the Corfu clan, there may well be more ahead for the royal drama. At the time of going to press, ITV say no decision has yet been made about recommissioning Victoria, but writer Daisy Goodwin is recently reported to have said: "I am working on series four at the moment, and that's going to be an absolute humdinger."

New dramas coming soon to ITV include the period drama Beecham House, set in India and starring Tom Bateman (Vanity Fair), Lesley Nicol (Downton Abbey) and Adil Ray (Citizen Khan), and Hatton Garden, based on the real-life raid of 2015 and starring Timothy Spall.

Meanwhile, Rob Lowe will appear in Wild Bill, a fish-out-of-water crime drama about a high-flying US police chief who moves to Lincolnshire. FRANCES TAYLOR

The Durrells

8.00pm ITV

DRAMA Europe is on the brink of war, but Louisa's not fazed. "We're ignoring it and we're not going anywhere." Phew, because a forlorn Spiros is living on the beach and there's no sign of them getting back together yet.

However, shocking news makes Louisa realise it's not safe to stay in Corfu, so the family sadly prepare to leave (yet still find time to put on a theatrical rendition of Homer's Odyssey). They're in reasonably good humour considering that, as Leslie says, "we're swapping paradise for Bournemouth".

This is the last ever episode of The Durrells and your heart will burst with the emotion of it all. Yassou, Durrells. It's been absolutely lovely. JR

Louis Theroux: Mothers on the Edge

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY When reality doesn't meet expectations, it can be a blow to anyone. But add the trauma of childbirth and sleep deprivation into the mix and you can see how the mental wellbeing of new mums can be severely affected when they feel that they're not living up to the myth of perfect, joy-filled parenting.

Here, Louis Theroux, displaying real warmth and insight, visits two specialist mother-and-baby units and gets to know a group of women who have been admitted with depression, anxiety and psychosis. As he discovers, feelings of inadequacy hitting at such an emotional time of life can be particularly damaging. DB

See feature: page 14

Victoria

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA "I should have listened to you," Victoria is told by both Lord Palmerston and her husband Albert.

Quite right, too. The Queen is remarkably clever, instantly solving the problem of poor ticket sales for Albert's Great Exhibition and seeing through Lord Marlborough's wicked assertion that his wife Sophie has "hysterical nymphomania". In a sharply polite confrontation, Victoria insists that Sophie comes to the opening of the Exhibition. And so she does. Problem solved – or at least partly solved.

Daisy Goodwin's soapy drama may not be 100 per cent factually accurate, but it's enjoyable escapism – even if we know it's not going to end well for Victoria's beloved Albert. JR

WELSH WONDER
Eve Myles is back as solicitor Faith Howells

Un Bore Mercher

9.00pm S4C, iPlayer

DRAMA Or Keeping Faith, as non-Welsh speakers know this cult thriller starring Eve Myles. When we last saw solicitor Faith Howells, there were a lot of unanswered questions – mainly concerning her husband Evan (played by Myles's real-life husband, Bradley Freegard), who had mysteriously disappeared (admittedly only for a week), leaving her to cope with crooks, bent cops, kidnappers and financial problems.

As series two starts, it's 18 months since Evan's surprise return and it's clear we're not going to get any immediate answers as to what he was up to. But, as we discover through flashbacks, the headstrong Faith isn't in the mood to forgive him and she is still entangled in dodgy dealings... and, in her role as a lawyer, murder. For non-Welsh-speakers who prefer to watch without subtitles, an English-language version will air in the summer. JR See feature: page 16

Film4 goes under cover

All this week, Film4 celebrates big-screen secret agents as part of its Covert season. Tonight, Arnold Schwarzenegger tries to balance saving the world with his quiet suburban home life in True Lies (pictured). Tomorrow, accountant Kevin Hart is thrust way out of his comfort zone when he is roped into a deadly mission by former school chum Dwayne Johnson in Central Intelligence. And later this week, Brad Pitt is told his wife Marion Cotillard may be the enemy in Allied (review, p41), while Matt Damon and Vin Diesel find themselves dragged back into the spy game in Jason Bourne and xXx: Return of Xander Cage. JAMIE HEALY

New to Netflix this month

Snowpiercer ★★★★ Netflix

This slice of dystopian sci-fi is that rarest of things: a thinking man's action film. It takes place in the year 2031, where the world has been plunged into a new ice age and mankind's last survivors live on a self-sustaining train. Each carriage is split into a different class system, and the poor inhabitants decide to stage a revolt against those in control. Director Bong Joon-Ho (Okja) ensures that the set pieces are both thrilling and visually dynamic, while Tilda Swinton and Chris Evans feature among the international cast. STEPHEN CARTY

A classic on catch-up

The Shawshank Redemption ★★★★★

ITV Player FREE TO VIEW

This moving adaptation of Stephen King's story sees Tim Robbins sent to prison for killing his wife and her lover. He is subjected to regular brutalities, but his existence improves when he befriends fellow lifer Morgan Freeman. Both actors rise to the challenge of portraying world-weary dignity against the odds. ALAN JONES

HOST WITH THE GHOSTS
Mike (Kiell Smith-Bynoe) tries to charm his posh neighbours, but will the spirits play along?

PICK OF THE DAY

Ghosts 9.30pm BBC1

SITCOM All good sitcoms must have one, and this is a very good sitcom, so here it is: the disastrous dinner party episode. Inexperienced mansion-dwellers Alison and Mike meet their neighbour, a shabby toff named Barclay Beg-Chetwynde – played by Geoff McGivern, the modern master of the hilariously untrustworthy neighbour/uncle guest role.

Having invited himself round, Barclay arrives with his spectacular lush of a wife (Sophie Thompson) and sets about conning cash out of his hosts, as well as free food – all this coinciding with Robin the Caveman trying to conduct a noisy ritual to mark the lunar eclipse.

The result is tremendous chaos, with a deluge of beautifully crafted comic and dramatic pay-offs in the last five minutes. There's the best example yet of the spirits who haunt the house being exposed to modern ephemera when Alison tries to distract them with a DVD box set, and a moment of pathos that shouldn't work but, in a script this good, absolutely does. Sublime. JACK SEALE

Tricks of the Restaurant Trade

8.30pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Cookie Monster, Unicorn, Funfair: supersized milkshakes like these, pimped with syrup, marshmallows, sprinkles, cream and other tooth-rotting stuff, are splattered all over Instagram. Simon Rimmer and Sophie Morgan discover that while they look amazing, some contain 39 teaspoons of sugar, so health campaigners argue they should be banned.

One thing many of us are guilty of is food waste: one third of all food produced worldwide is thrown away. But it's possible to access free or cheaper excess food from shops or households, so Adam Pearson experiments with waste-food apps to feed pensioners. JANE RACKHAM

Not Going Out

9.00pm BBC1

SITCOM Lee Mack and his writing team indulge in a bit of showing off: this is a single-scene episode in real time, as Lucy (Sally Bretton) tries to watch her favourite box set and has to endure Lee prattling on. That's it for the whole half-hour, but it's not a drag because this is the show in its purest form, a constant trade of put-downs and wisecracks.

The fun starts when Lee can't place an actor and insists on remembering the name himself, rather than look it up in an excellent listings magazine. Could his lapse be a sign of early-onset dementia, or is that just hypochondria talking? The script pulls every trick in the comic dialogue book to stop the conversation flagging – successfully. JS

One Day in Gaza

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Palestinians in Gaza had already been protesting Israel's land, sea and air blockade of the territory for a fortnight when, on 14 May 2018, the situation turned from tense to bloody. While Ivanka Trump, Jared Kushner and other officials of the Trump administration were in Jerusalem to inaugurate a controversial new US embassy, violence exploded at the Gaza border. The Israeli army claimed to have acted in self-defence; more than 60 Palestinians died in a day, with more than 2,000 hurt.

A year on, film-maker Olly Lambert pieces together an account of what happened, by interviewing political leaders on both sides and drawing on video footage filmed at the time. JS

9.00pm Channel 5

DRAMA New series Catherine Tyldesley, once Corrie's Eva Price, is in the ensemble for this new murder melodrama. She's one of an unhappy brood of 30-something siblings who have returned to a dramatically underlit Welsh country house – Mum has died and there's a will to be read, but an opening flash-forward tells us that in just over a fortnight, someone is getting a shotgun blast to the guts.

Perhaps you're wondering if the family might be a festering cauldron of grief, secrets, emotional abuse, grudges and affairs? Why yes, you're right! After an hour of stilted shouting and glowering, a ludicrous act of violence tests whether you really want to come back every night till Thursday for more. JS

A soap usually clings dearly to its matriarchs because they're so important to family dynamics. An indomitable grande dame is so many things: protector, shoulder to cry on, fount of all wisdom.

So it's a surprise to see that Emmerdale (7.00pm ITV) is giving Lisa such a sad exit. Now, it is actress Jane Cox's decision to leave, but I'd much rather have seen her character head off for a new life in, say, Spain. At least it would allow her the chance to return at some point in the future.

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

But no, Lisa is soon to be killed off and this evening's episode will see her break the news to the rest of the Dingle clan that she's dying. All of which does kind of put the kibosh on the welcome home party that Belle has organised.

And as Lisa's nearest and dearest struggle to process what they're being told, Belle is left hurt when she works out that Charity has already known about the illness for some time. DAVID BROWN

Game of Thrones

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA Game of Thrones' penultimate episodes tend to be the series' biggest moments, focused on notable deaths – Ned and Robb Stark, Princess Shireen – or huge battles, so normally we'd be expecting some brutal scenes in this instalment. However, this year Thrones has confounded expectations. Killing off its main villain halfway through the series was a twist few expected, but now the action has shifted away from the war against the Night King to yet more in-fighting as Daenerys and her allies head south to take on Cersei.

That is, of course, if the cracks within the Targaryen-Stark alliance don't widen now their common enemy is gone and their very different goals become clearer... HUW FULLERTON

A German Life: Storyville

10.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY Born in 1911, Brunhilde Pomsel was an ordinary woman caught up in extraordinary times, becoming secretary to Joseph Goebbels in 1942. Now, when the world is in turmoil and far-right politicians are back in the headlines, it's fascinating to listen to someone, still sharp as a tack at 103 when she's interviewed for this Austrian film, recalling the events of her life.

"Everything that is beautiful is also tainted. And whatever's horrible also has its bright side," she says. "Nothing's black and white." It raises interesting questions about how you continue to function when society around you goes mad. Do you protest, or do you survive? GILL CRAWFORD

Back to Life

10.35pm BBC1 (N Ireland: 11.15pm; Scotland: 11.35pm)

COMEDY DRAMA Miri (Daisy Haggard) has had her share of bad days. Eighteen years' worth, what with the whole being sent to prison thing. But this has to be the worst since her release from incarceration. Already a pariah for killing Lara, she now gets suspected of causing someone else's death. Then she loses her job and is accused of arson.

What's been striking about Miri is her unflagging optimism in the face of all this continued hostility. But I'm now worried that she'll be completely broken by the community around her.

With one episode to go after this, I'm desperately hoping that Miri gets a lifeline and doesn't end up back behind bars. DB

ROYAL WATCHERS
Julie Etchingham and Trevor McDonald profile Queen Victoria

Victoria's Palace

9.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY You ought to be an expert on Queen Victoria by the end of this week, what with the Lucy Worsley documentary on Saturday (see page 52), the series three finale of ITV's drama Victoria on Sunday (see page 63) and now this look at life at Buckingham Palace during her reign.

It's a reverential account from presenters Trevor McDonald and Julie Etchingham and one that wouldn't look out of place as a featurette on a DVD box set of the Jenna Coleman-fronted series.

But there are a couple of gossipy insights on offer, such as the culinary titbit that, in later life, the monarch could polish off a nine-course meal in half an hour.

And I wasn't aware that Marble Arch once stood within a couple of feet of the palace, near the site of where its famous balcony is today. DB

By the end of the day, as many as 60 Palestinians were dead or dying, and over 2,000 were injured, mostly by live ammunition. The food's the star

Chef ★★★★ 11.10pm Film4 FREEVIEW

Even though Jon Favreau's feel-good cooking comedy (film of the day, p41) has quality human ingredients – Favreau himself, Sofia Vergara, Dustin Hoffman, plus cameos from Robert Downey Jr and Scarlett Johansson – he insists it's the food that makes the movie. Favreau enlisted the help of food-truck chef Roy Choi, who sent him to a French culinary school and trained him in his own kitchens. "Eventually," says Favreau, "he just jammed me on the line during a service... That's when he knew I was ready." TOM FOLLEY

A woman scorned

P The Wife ★★★ Netflix

Glenn Close gives a mesmerising performance here as a woman accompanying her husband (Jonathan Pryce) to Stockholm, where he is to be honoured at a Nobel Prize ceremony for literature. She gives every appearance of standing faithfully by her man, yet her myriad subtle looks and glances suggest a lifetime of simmering discontent. Pryce proves unexpectedly heavy-handed as her errant other half, and Björn Runge is workmanlike in his direction, but all eyes are on the triumphant Close. TREVOR JOHNSTON

Violence down under

P Outlaws ★★

10.00pm Sky Premiere

A bloody power game erupts when burly Matt Nable is released from prison in this Aussie motorcycle-gang drama. Stephen McCallum's first feature is inevitably overshadowed by the Shakespearean stylings of the Sons of Anarchy TV series, but there are the bones of a good film here. JEREMY ASPINALL

FUTURE FEARS
A family's world is turned upside down in Russell T Davies's dystopian drama

PICK OF THE DAY Years and Years 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA OF THE WEEK New series Do you worry about the coarsening of our political debate? Technological advances going unchecked? The repercussions of US President Donald Trump's bellicose rhetoric? Then prepare to have all your nightmares realised in this audacious new six-parter from Russell T Davies. In it, we meet the Lyons family, who are first seen in 2019 watching a controversial political wannabe (played by Emma Thompson) polarising the Question Time audience. As concern is voiced about where society is headed, we soon witness that trajectory for ourselves, thanks to a jump forward in time to 2024, where we catch up with the Lyons clan in a worryingly dystopian future.

Comparisons have already been made by cast member Rory Kinnear to Our Friends in the North and Black Mirror, but the voice here is unmistakably Davies's own. As we saw in such dramas as The Second Coming and Doctor Who, he has a true gift for blending the everyday with the incredible and making it all seem completely plausible by giving each of his characters a real, thumping heart. I loved it. DAVID BROWN

Bake Off: the Professionals

8.00pm C4

FOOD If you've recently eaten your own weight in Easter eggs, this week's chocolate theme may not appeal so much. However, the four remaining patissier teams attack the challenges with gusto, frantically tempering, moulding, sculpting and filling exquisite chocolate goodies of all sorts.

The showstopping task requires them to make a masked ball themed display featuring 48 chocolates and a moving part. Before this – in what I think is a first for this series – they're given a previously unseen recipe by Benoit Blin and Cherish Finden to follow. It's a bit like the Great British Bake Off's fiendish technical challenge, then. JANE RACKHAM

Eurovision Semi-finals

8.00pm BBC4

ENTERTAINMENT Eurovision-philes are in for a treat with this week's two semi-finals, presided over by mega fans Rylan Clark-Neal and Scott Mills. Tonight's batch includes San Marino with Say Na Na Na – a sort of classic Eurovision anthem meets football chant – alongside now-permanent gatecrashers Australia (an ethereal operatic effort) and Iceland's Hatari, who look as though they'd be more at home in a Soho backstreet with their unique brand of "techno BDSM".

Thursday sees a further 18 countries competing, including bookies' favourites Switzerland and Russia; plus that is when the UK gets to vote for who we want to put through to next Saturday's grand final. FRANCES TAYLOR

Surgeons: at the Edge of Life

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Every month, some 9,000 seriously injured patients arrive at the Queen Elizabeth's emergency department in Birmingham. Most need immediate intervention requiring split-second decisions without knowledge of the patient's medical history.

For consultant neurosurgeon Ismail Ughratdar that means he has only minutes to treat a 64-year-old with a bleed on the brain. The hospital is a base for military casualties, too, so consultant surgeon and Royal Navy commander Catherine Powell must decide whether to focus on a motorcyclist's internal bleeding or on the badly dislocated shoulder that might cost him his arm. JR

Mary Kills People

9.00pm More4

DRAMA New series A new Canadian drama – often that's a byword for lame and safe, but not here – in the mould of Dexter, Weeds, Breaking Bad or Barry: our anti-hero has a secret that could destroy their respectable existence at any moment. Caroline Dhavernas (Alana Bloom in Hannibal) is Mary, a fresh (and still biting) divorcée with two stroppy daughters, a stressful job as an ER doctor and an even more fraught sideline illegally helping terminal patients to end their lives.

Episode one ambitiously sets a lot of storylines running and just about gets away with it thanks to a deep reserve of black, cynical snark. If you can cope with the subject matter, the prognosis here is good. JACK SEALE

Lofty returns to Holby City (8pm BBC1; Scotland: 10.35pm) but every time someone says he's "lovely" and "dependable", Lee Mead does some 'guilty face' acting. So it doesn't take a genius to work out Lofty's keeping something back about his trip to the US. By the end of the hour, we've discovered exactly what this is – and also who might be waiting in the wings to 'help' with husband Dom's upset.

Now, speaking of Dom, he's also still trying to win Chloe round in the aftermath of that big maternity secret being revealed. But it really does beggar belief that they'd get all prickly with each other while performing surgery. Why can't they leave their personal problems at home? Or maybe just at the door to the operating theatre?

Unfortunately, malevolent Evan is there to aid his ex. You can tell he's a soap baddie because he'll say something provocative, but then add, "No, sorry, forget what I just said," knowing full well he's successfully just stirred the pot. DB

The Bad Seed

9.00pm Alibi

DRAMA New series There's nothing new in the premise of this New Zealand drama: a well-to-do neighbourhood rocked by murder, the veneer of respectability masking a multitude of murky secrets. But I'm intrigued by the duo at the centre of it – two brothers who've escaped a troubled childhood, only for this killing to put one of them back in the sights of the police.

At the moment, obstetrician Simon appears to have more to hide than his arborist sibling Ford. But it's early days and, despite some on-the-nose dialogue ("the worst thing about rot is that it eats away from the inside," says Ford, while scaling a decaying tree in the garden), I'm looking forward to seeing what twists await us in future weeks. DB

Don't Forget the Driver

10.00pm BBC2

COMEDY DRAMA The title of this sad sitcom is so apt, as it refers to much more than just a neglected tips tray. As we've seen, life has left Pete (Toby Jones) behind, his daughter Kayla lived elsewhere until recently and even his own mother has trouble remembering who he is.

But there is a small glimmer of light in the form of Fran (Claire Rushbrook), who obviously wants to share her life with this careworn coach driver. There's a lovely moment in this bittersweet final episode when the pair look at each other as the middle-of-the-road radio station that the whole of Bognor seems to have on in the background plays Listen to Your Heart. Never before have Roxette felt so relevant. DB

First Dates

10.00pm C4

ENTERTAINMENT You'll probably remember metrosexual Jack from a few weeks ago. He's the good-looking serial dater who "lives life by quotes" but who understandably annoyed his date Safina with his laddish chat and alcohol fixation. "A geezer's gotta geez!" he explained, but she wasn't impressed.

He's back, but insists he won't change for anyone, so hairdresser Shauna is in for an interesting time. Tellingly, waitress CiCi isn't thrilled to see him again, but is Shauna warming to his antics? Another second-timer is the diminutive Becky, whose last date was, rudely, more interested in checking the football scores than her. This one actually turns his mobile off so he can concentrate on her. JR

NO PAIN, NO GAIN
David Walliams and Bear Grylls are out and about in Devon

Bear's Mission with David Walliams

9.00pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT It's a wet day in rural Devon, and David Walliams is standing on the top of a dam awaiting the arrival of Bear Grylls. "I feel quite rugged, actually, because I've got my beard and my woolly hat," he jokes, before adding, "but I'm not a fan of mud". And it's not long before he's having to draw on all his humorous reserves, as Bear takes him on a roped-up, rigorous outward-bound crash course. Walliams admits quite early on that he doesn't like heights, so you just know what's coming. But never forget, he did swim the Channel, so there's steel concealed beneath the occasional hysterics.

Inevitably, there's something unpleasant planned for lunch – "No, no, no, no, no" is Walliams's immediate response – but there are quieter moments when he opens up about being a father and handling depression. GILL CRAWFORD

Personal video and audio shows the effect combat had.

Happy 50th birthday, Cate!

Babel ★★★ 5.30pm Sky Drama

Born on this day in 1969 in Melbourne, Australia, Cate Blanchett can boast appearances in nearly 60 feature films, including all six Middle-earth epics with Peter Jackson and as the doomed tourist in Babel. Her two-time portrayal of Elizabeth I proved beyond a doubt her strong grasp of an English accent, and led to the first of three Baftas and six Oscar nods (she won twice). Luckily, along with a weakness for Vegemite and doing the splits, she also admits: "I'm one of those strange beasts who really likes corsets." SUE ROBINSON

The ailing suspects

P King of Thieves ★★★★ Amazon Prime

The Hatton Garden robbery over Easter weekend in 2017 is recounted in this new addition to Prime. Michael Caine gives one of his best performances in years as the pensive, recently widowed mastermind Brian Reader, while Paul Whitehouse and Michael Gambon provide perfectly judged comic relief. But most striking of all is Jim Broadbent, whose cuddly, avuncular exterior gives way to a figure of genuine menace. The Hatton Garden Job, a less starry telling of the story, is on Friday Film4 (review, p45). TERRY STAUNTON

Celebrating Cannes

Force Majeure ★★★★ MUBI

The Cannes film festival begins today and runs until Saturday 25 May. MUBI is celebrating with a season of previous award winners, beginning with 2014's Force Majeure. This blackly comedic offering examines a couple's relationship after Tomas (Johannes Kuhnke) abandons his wife and kids during an avalanche on a skiing holiday. DAMON WISE

WEDNESDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

PICK OF THE DAY

The Virtues 9.00pm C4

DRAMA New series Stephen Graham gave us the big TV surprise of the year so far when his Line of Duty character John Corbett came to a grisly end. And here, we get shocks of a different kind as he reunites with longtime collaborator Shane Meadows to play recovering alcoholic Joseph, who's holding on to life in Sheffield by his fingernails as he faces the prospect of losing the one thing he holds dear.

It's a brutal opening episode, unsparing in its depiction of a crash off the wagon: we're talking blood, retching, vomit, the full works. At times, it feels almost like a documentary, as though Joseph is a real man having his actions tracked by hidden cameras. But reminders that this is drama come thanks to glimpses of his childhood in Ireland. Hazily filmed flashbacks hint at a long-buried secret and, by the end of the hour, Joseph has reached a decision about where his future lies.

Despite the grim tone, you'll want to join him on that journey in order to catch the whole of Graham's blindingly good performance.

Saving Britain's Hedgehogs

8.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY Who would be a hedgehog? Threats are numerous and at every turn: cars, dogs, hedge strimmers, bonfires and even bowling greens.

Young and injured hogs are constantly being brought in to the wildlife centre established by Brian May and Anne Brummer, with the creatures suffering from a range of problems, including disorientation, dehydration and a case of mange that is the worst Anne has seen in 15 years. Not all of the outcomes are happy, but it's hard to think of a more adorable sight than an anaesthetised hedgehog gently snoring. Even Steve Backshall can't handle its cuteness. FRANCES TAYLOR

Nadiya: Anxiety and Me

9.00pm BBC1 (Scotland: 11.05pm)

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK

Behind the smiling face of Nadiya Hussain as she makes delicious food on TV lurks what she calls a monster. She and her husband Abdal are open about how her crippling anxiety affects their lives, which she describes as one of the most lonely and isolating things imaginable.

She has never been officially diagnosed, but wants to learn some coping mechanisms and find a way to cure her panic attacks and reliance on routines and rituals. We eavesdrop on her raw cognitive behavioural therapy sessions and hear why her anxiety started in childhood. It's engrossing and painful, but will undoubtedly help many other sufferers. JANE RACKHAM

Reporting History: Mandela

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY In April 1994, more than 19 million South Africans voted in the country's first multiracial parliamentary elections. Nelson Mandela's ANC party won by a landslide and on 10 May he was sworn in as the first black president of South Africa. "The whole place was convulsed with hope," recalls Fergal Keane, the BBC's foreign correspondent. "It was beautiful!"

In this absorbing, thoughtful film, Keane compares his news reports at the time with how history actually turned out. Like many, Keane was optimistic for South Africa's future, but depressingly finds corruption, poverty and struggle are still widespread. JR See feature: page 30

Taskmaster

9.00pm Dave

ENTERTAINMENT "It's a very rare treat on a television programme to see someone lose their job on a different television programme," laughs Greg Davies after The Chase's Paul Sinha once again demonstrates his deft ability to make a pig's ear out of a seemingly simple task.

This is another hoot of an episode that sees unmentionable items being glued to faces and a brilliant game dubbed "bird grape torch". While the things comedians will do for a laugh never ceases to amaze, tonight's best moment is when Joe Thomas and Sian Gibson meet for the team task. When a programme is able to create real humour from two people simply walking into a room, you know it's doing something right. FT

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

The soap gods have had it in for Carla (Alison King, right) ever since she returned to Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV) in 2017. It's like they've been looking down on her and saying, "Yeah, so you're happy for once in your life, eh? Well, let's see how you deal with kidney failure! Oh, you're still alive. Well, we're now going to kill off your brother! And then we're going to bring the roof of your factory down on some poor unsuspecting bride-to-be. Let's see how you cope with that!"

Well, "not too well" is the answer, oh fiendish torturers of Weatherfield's citizens. But at least Carla is now receiving antipsychotic medication from the hospital doctors before being sent home. But at whose house will she stay? Peter tells Ken that he's moving Carla into Number One. Ken, though, says she's not welcome, pointing out that Peter isn't well enough to look after himself, let alone Carla. Enter Roy with a plan that only infuriates Ken further. DB

Urban Myths

9.00pm Sky Arts

DRAMA A low-key instalment of the celebrity-encounter anthology pitches us into the filthy human stew that is a New York subway train in 1982. Riding it are hot cult artist Jean-Michel Basquiat (Calvin Demba) and his girlfriend, Madonna (Sophie Kennedy Clark) – at this point, she's a cocky but unknown wannabe who's hatching a plan to demand a deal from record company mogul Seymour Stein.

While fending off drunks and racists, the pair provoke and inspire each other, riffing on fame, acclaim, money and how much of each they want. Although the script skims it lightly, the moment where a focused future megastar and soon-to-be lamented lost talent part ways is worth pondering. JACK SEALE

Sliced

10.00pm Dave

SITCOM New series Many good sitcoms have been built around a down-on-their-luck character being unfairly put upon and getting into endless pickles that aren't their fault, and so it is with this new comedy by PhoneShop writer Phil Bowker and actor-writer Samson Kayo. Joshua (Kayo) works at Sliced, a London pizza shop where he and best friend Ricky (Theo Barklem-Biggs) are constantly up against demanding customers and an unstable boss.

There are some snappy lines in the three-part series (episodes two and three air tomorrow and Friday), but it could have been tightened around the edges – perhaps as a result of much of the series being improvised. Still, it's definitely worth a nibble. FT

FA Cup: the Road to Wembley

11.35pm BBC1 (Wales: 12.05am; N Ireland: 12.35am; Scotland: 1.05am)

SPORT Ahead of Watford gamely trying to resist Manchester City in the final this Saturday, here's a look back at the 2018/19 FA Cup. It's been a decent if not classic competition this time round, with Newport County's charge to the fifth round making them the mightiest of the giant-killers, and early exits for several of the Premier League's top clubs ensuring interest in the cup lasted longer than usual for fans of weaker sides.

This isn't your common-or-garden round-up: the host is YouTuber ChrisMD, a presenting natural who is likely to bring you a smartly edited grab-bag of memorable moments as well as all the best goals. JS

MUM'S THE WORD
Will Cathy (Lesley Manville) finally find happiness?

Mum

10.00pm BBC2, iPlayer

COMEDY OF THE WEEK There's a new realisation among today's writers that leaving a hit sitcom while at its peak is the time to bail out. Fleabag, Detectorists and The Inbetweeners all quit while they were ahead – and now Stefan Golaszewski's Bafta-winning comedy of maternal altruism begins its third and final series.

Widowed Cathy (the magnificent Lesley Manville), you'll remember, is the quiet, smiling eye of a family storm, attending to the needs of her crabby parents-in-law Reg and Maureen; unsubtle brother Derek and his queen-of-Sheba partner Pauline; dim son Jason and his ditzy girlfriend Kelly.

Dancing around their tears and tantrums meant that Cathy's almost-romance with Michael (Peter Mullan) always stuttered, but tonight we glimpse a breakthrough when they visit a rented mansion for Derek's birthday.

As ever, the subplot (why are annoying people annoying?) percolates beautifully. The whole series is on iPlayer after the first episode. MARK BRAXTON

from 10am BBC3

A contrived but instructive reality experiment gathers a group of young British women and their mums, then gives the mums a radical restyling in the hope of passing them off as 21-year-olds. The daughters observe as the mothers experience Instagram, Snapchat and online dating from the inside. It's a neat way to get participants and viewers talking about each generation's attitude to the other.

Attack! ★★★★ 3.00pm Film4 FREEVIEW

Eddie Albert is cast as a cowardly US Army captain in this drama, which was at complete odds with his own service record. Before the war, Albert secretly reported on German U-boat activity in Mexico while performing in a circus troupe. In 1942, he enlisted in the Coast Guard, before taking an officer's position in the Navy the following year. It was in that capacity that he rescued 47 men under heavy gunfire during the Battle of Tarawa. His heroism was recognised with the Bronze Star medal with Combat "V", and in 1994 he received the Navy's Distinguished Public Service Award. JAMIE HEALY

New to Netflix this week

Fast & Furious 8 ★★★★ Netflix

Has Dominic Toretto (Vin Diesel) betrayed those closest to him by joining forces with cyber-terrorist Cipher (Charlize Theron)? She does have some hold over him, and it's up to his friends (Dwayne Johnson, Michelle Rodriguez, Tyrese Gibson and the rest) to foil her sinister plans, in another ludicrous but thrilling episode in the motor-mayhem franchise. A turbo-driven spectacle boasting tongue-in-cheek smarts, this is a blast from the opening car race in Cuba to the frozen finishing post in the Arctic. ALAN JONES

The big score

P Gangsta ★★★

10.00pm Sky Premiere

Small-time drug dealers in Antwerp take a leap into the big time in this visually dazzling thriller. Co-directors Adil and Bilall wear their movie-maker influences – Scorsese, Tarantino, De Palma, John Woo – loudly and proudly, as they paint a vivid portrait of the crime scene in modern-day Belgium. JEREMY ASPINALL

OPENING UP
David Harewood digs deep into a painful past

PICK OF THE DAY David Harewood: Psychosis and Me 9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY When actor David Harewood revealed, back in 2017, that he'd suffered a breakdown and been sectioned at the age of 23, his comments highlighted the often indiscriminate nature of mental illness. There must have been some who thought, "Wow! But he's famous. He's on Homeland. If it can happen to him, it can happen to anyone." But could there have been certain factors that made him particularly susceptible? The fact that he was feeling lonely at the time didn't help. Nor did his drinking habits or cannabis usage. And then there's the startling statistic that black men in Britain are ten times more likely than white men to be diagnosed with a psychotic illness.

So, might the theatre reviews that compared him to Mike Tyson and wrote of a "threatening physical demeanour" be connected to his psychosis, too? For the actor, now 53, this is a chance to explore feelings that he's kept buried for three decades. And he admits it's a much tougher experience than he'd imagined it would be. DAVID BROWN

Golf: US PGA Championship

1pm Sky Sports Golf/Main Event

SPORT How do you top the comeback of the decade? By doing it again. Tiger Woods's Masters victory at Augusta was his first Major win in ten years, so it will be fascinating to see if his form continues in the PGA Championship.

The tournament, traditionally golf's final Major of the year, has been pulled forward to May as part of a calendar revamp. Woods will tee off alongside US Open and PGA winner Brooks Koepka and 2018 Open champion Francesco Molinari. Molinari led the Masters going into the final day, Koepka three shots behind. But neither could keep up the pace as Woods completed the fairytale win. JAMES GILL

When I Grow Up

8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY In the last of the instructive social experiments in which kids do adult jobs, the eight-year-olds try out a profession where childish dishonesty and over-competitiveness simply won't be tolerated: estate agency. As the gang take over a top firm in Harrogate, the disparity in their parents' wealth isn't the focus for once – everyone has good and bad qualities, with huge potential underneath.

That leads to some choice scenes, both comic and affecting. Contrived as it may be, when a nervous boy is given the responsibility of closing a telephone negotiation with the office's whole (adult) staff looking on, it's a real hold-your-breath moment. JACK SEALE

The Big Bang Theory/ Young Sheldon

8.00pm, 8.30pm E4

SITCOM With just two more instalments of Big Bang left after tonight, there are many loose ends to be tied up, should the writers choose to do so. Take Leonard's brittle relationship with his permafrosted mum Beverly (Christine Baranski), who pays a visit tonight and shows surprising concern for her son. Is there an ulterior motive?

On Young Sheldon, and not for the first time, Mary helps the grinningly ineffectual Pastor Jeff (Matt Hobby), who's hit a rough patch in his marriage. Sheldon, meanwhile, coerces the congregation into parting with their cash. It's not like the lad to force people to do things against their will... MARK BRAXTON

Superstructures: Engineering Marvels

8.00pm National Geographic

DOCUMENTARY Biblical legend tells of a tower in Mesopotamia, constructed to be tall enough to reach heaven. Today, on the other side of the Persian Gulf, the Burj Khalifa towers above the city of Dubai. But the Burj was made to reach a heaven of a different kind – one of marble Jacuzzis and half-mile-high martinis.

The latest in this series investigates its billion-pound construction and how its unique structure keeps it from spiralling into the dust. To someone who has trouble assembling a flat-pack chest of drawers, it's a staggering achievement. I just feel sorry for the window cleaners. GARY ROSE

There's traumatic news on EastEnders (7.30pm BBC1) as it's revealed that Dinah has taken her own life. A horrible turn of events, to be sure. However, it could also mean that her daughter Bailey gets more screen time – something I'm definitely in favour of. It's an odd thing about child actors: some of them you just know are going to find their roles recast when they hit the teenage years; others, such as Natalie Cassidy (Sonia) and Maisie Smith (Tiff), appear so natural from the off that they make the transition to proper grown-up acting without any kind of problem. I'd put Kara-Leah Fernandes (far left) in the latter camp – she's really natural and a proper asset to the show.

Jamie Borthwick has also proved himself to be a young performer with staying power, but does his character Jay have the same level head? Tonight, Billy is warning Jay not to get caught up in Ben's dodgy dealings. But will Jay listen? Or is he destined to get embroiled in the recent returnee's machinations? DB

Martin Clunes: My Travels and Other Animals

8.30pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY Martin Clunes is soppy about most animals but his real passion is dogs, so ten years ago he criss-crossed the globe learning about the enduring relationship between man and his best friend.

These clips from that series remind us that the beloved pooch is genetically 98.8 per cent wolf, but also show how we often tend to humanise them. In Japan they're dressed up, pampered and even spoon-fed. There's also a wonderful sequence where an Australian dingo called Dinky howls along to Martin's piano playing – it's just as funny as it was first time around. JANE RACKHAM

My Dad Wrote a Porno

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

COMEDY Get enough people to subscribe to your podcast and you can run adverts, but the sign that you've properly arrived is when punters clamour for tickets to see you say your piece live on stage. And if you've really cracked it, TV cameras are there to film it: and so here we are at London's Roundhouse, watching Jamie Morton send his online fans into fits of giggles.

The concept of the podcast is as follows: Morton has discovered a cache of erotic fiction written by his father, so he reads it out, accompanied by bemused comments from his mates James Cooper and the TV/radio presenter Alice Levine. You'll soon get why it's been a massive hit. JS

Great Art

11.10pm ITV (not Border Scotland or STV)

ART As the British Museum hosts a major Edvard Munch exhibition, Tim Marlow looks back to a retrospective, held a few years ago in Oslo, of the work of the master of Nordic angst.

The artist behind The Scream had a troubled childhood, losing both his mother and sister to TB when he was a child, then his father as a teenager; anxiety suffused his earliest works. Depression and alcohol further fuelled Munch's attraction to the extremes of human emotion: though he experimented with impressionism, he had, as the programme puts it, "an ambition to pin down what it means to be a human being". This isn't easy work, but at its best it's undoubtedly moving. GILL CRAWFORD

FRIEND IN NEED
Gemma needs all her personal skills to help an unfortunate patient

Ambulance

9.00pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY It's our last dispatch for now from the North West Ambulance Service and, if we're honest, a warm bank holiday in Greater Manchester doesn't always have the intensity of previous episodes. A few of the cases don't go anywhere. Everyone's OK, the sun shines.

Then, of course, this show blindsides you. The stars for this final outing are Gemma and Clare, who exude humour and compassion through a series of subtly taxing callouts. Gemma bonds effortlessly with a long-term heroin addict who's got nobody else to ask for help; then Clare steps up when an epileptic woman's fit has unexpected emotional consequences that require skills beyond mere medical training.

Finally, they blue-light it to an octogenarian who's been run over. Rounding a corner, they both see her injuries and holler in unison: "OH MY GOD!" JS

iPlayer (expires today)

A documentary first shown in 2016, in which Roger Bannister – who died last year – recalls the motivations behind his historic breaking of the four-minute-mile barrier in 1954. The comparison to Edmund Hillary's ascent of Everest the previous year is not at all glib: the film is very clear on what an immense challenge Bannister and his accomplices undertook.

Man of the year

3.05pm Talking Pictures TV FREEVIEW
If 1992 was the Queen's annus horribilis then 1942 was Cary Grant's annus mirabilis. He not only legally adopted the name he'd been using since 1931 (his birth name Archie Leach being more suited to Bristol boy than Hollywood star). But, just as his 41st movie (The Talk of the Town, review p45) came out, he was also granted US citizenship and married wife number two, heiress Barbara Hutton. Her wealth led to the couple being dubbed "Cash and Cary". SUE ROBINSON

Remembering Andy

Man on the Moon ★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW
Comedian Andy Kaufman died on this day 35 years ago, and his strange, self-destructive career is re-created by director Milos Forman in this off-the-wall biopic. Jim Carrey gives everything he's got to portray the man who found fame as the squeaky-voiced Latka in 1980s sitcom Taxi. And, in an audacious piece of casting, Kaufman's co-star from the show, Danny DeVito, portrays his manager. Those interested in the making of the film should check out the documentary Jim & Andy: the Great Beyond on Netflix. JASON CARO

New today on TCM

The Game ★★★
9.00pm TCM
Michael Douglas stars here as a hard-nosed businessman who is given the ultimate birthday present by his brother, Sean Penn: the chance to play an all-encompassing reality game. This stylish thriller from Se7en director David Fincher cranks up the suspense as it questions what is real and what is not. ALAN JONES

FRIDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

LOOKING FOR CLUES
Can Iris (Crystal Balint) and Hailey (Chanelle Peloso) find Jean before it's too late?

PICK OF THE DAY The Bletchley Circle: San Francisco 9.00pm ITV

DRAMA This is the final episode, but it's currently touch-and-go as to whether Jean will be making it through to the end credits. She's currently bound to a chair in a shadowy, grey room straight out of a Harry Palmer film, with bald Russians in suits looming over her making threats. Luckily, help is at hand.

"Ladies, it's up to us," decides Millie back at base, as she and her fellow code-breakers start mapping out possible locations where their friend could be being held. Honestly, the drawing pin and corkboard budget on this series must be astronomical. Obviously, I won't reveal whether the rescue attempt is successful. But there is a narrative thread deliberately left hanging, should another series be commissioned.

No word yet on whether this will be the case, though I'd be happy to see more of this team, and Hailey (Chanelle Peloso) in particular. She's a tough little scrapper with a hint of sadness about her and has definitely been the stand-out character. DAVID BROWN

Unreported World
7.30pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Central America is not a good region generally for press freedom, and in Nicaragua the position is increasingly parlous.

President Daniel Ortega – he of the Sandinista movement that vexed Ronald Reagan in the 1980s – has, in the past few years, used violence to shore up his power against angry opposition. The media is a key battleground and, as correspondent Sahar Zand finds, independent journalism is a dangerous business amid civil disruption and economic chaos. This film (postponed from 3 May) visits the newsroom of the country's oldest paper, independent TV studios and a blogger's home, as well as reporters who have decided to flee the country. JACK SEALE

John Bishop's Ireland
8.00pm ITV (not Border Scotland or STV; not N Ireland)

TRAVEL In Portrush, John Bishop takes part in a mass dip in the freezing cold sea wearing a big smile... and a rather unattractive skull cap. It's a community-building exercise that he applauds, although he laughingly admits "It doesn't make me want to live here". He then gets a warm welcome in Belfast, where he tells a self-deprecating story about an earlier visit to an appreciative, but small, audience.

It's obvious he loves Ireland – all of it – and so indulges in a brief grumble about how Brexit will affect the place. A local Armagh farmer reveals that he could need to cross a post-Brexit border up to 30 times a day. JANE RACKHAM

Puppy School
8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY New series So, you get a cute puppy. But it doesn't do what you want it to. Instead it chews the rug, poos on the floor and whines or barks when you leave it alone. And you can't let it off the lead because it would run off.

Dog trainers Oli Juste, Hannah Molloy and Katie Patmore take three new owners through some simple training exercises – although, to be fair, it's the owners that need the most training. So, rather than simply shouting their dog's name and hoping that will make it come back, they learn how to achieve recall using a long lead, a bit of energy and a bag of treats. It's remarkably easy once they've been shown what to do. JR

The Yorkshire Steam Railway: All Aboard
8.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY There's a real charm to this series. The scenery is idyllic, the staff endearingly eccentric and the grand old locos are imbued with real character. But as we return to the North Yorkshire moors for a second run, there's trouble trackside due to a summer heatwave. With engines spitting sparks, there's a risk that the countryside could be set ablaze.

Not that everything in this opening episode is so apocalyptic. In fact, most problems get accompanied by a jaunty oom-pah brass band soundtrack, so we know they're not serious. For example, tune in to find out how the team copes with a train's dodgy clack valve. DB

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

What a difference a couple of months make. Over Christmas, it seemed as though Kat (Jessie Wallace) on EastEnders (8pm BBC1) was just going through the motions. All those meltdowns, slanging matches with Alfie and that awful 25 December episode that saw him take a dive down the stairs at the Slaters'. There's no denying that it was all rather hackneyed and flat.

But then along came super soap boss Kate Oates with her talent for spotting hitherto untapped chemistry between characters. And suddenly Kat has a new lease of life after being paired with "Muscles" aka strapping stallholder Kush (Davood Ghadami, left). They're currently trying to keep their affair a secret, while also finding it a struggle to meet up, what with Kush having let Bex use his flat to study. But when Kat invites Kush over to the Slaters' gaff and one thing leads to another, might they end up being busted when Martin and Stacey return home from their anniversary dinner? DB

The Looming Tower

9.30pm BBC2

DRAMA Eager young FBI agent Ali Soufan (Tahar Rahim) makes a striking metaphor in this episode of the fact-based drama, comparing al-Qaeda with Robert Patrick's T-1000 mercury-like killer in Terminator 2: Judgment Day.

Soufan's theory, that striking at al-Qaeda's top brass will simply encourage more would-be martyrs to spring up, is in marked contrast to the CIA's Martin Schmidt, who's convinced that killing Bin Laden will solve everything. Also having problems is the FBI's John O'Neill, who's in hock and marital difficulties. Will giving his local cardinal a box of cigars smooth his path? In Afghanistan, meanwhile, there are some new recruits. And they're Saudi. GILL CRAWFORD

The Last Leg

10.00pm C4

ENTERTAINMENT One of the joys of The Last Leg, particularly versus many other topical comedy shows, is that it's broadcast live. Not only does this add a layer of unpredictability (who can forget Chris O'Dowd's rather "refreshed" appearance last year?) but it means host Adam Hills and comedians Josh Widdicombe and Alex Brooker can react to and discuss news as and when it happens. With the headlines constantly changing at breakneck-speed as they currently are, this is vital.

At the time of going to press, the guests for tonight's episode had yet to be confirmed, although the last run included Sara Pascoe, Victoria Coren Mitchell and Alastair Campbell – along with his bagpipes. FRANCES TAYLOR

The Graham Norton Show

10.35pm BBC1 (N Ireland: 11.05pm)

CHAT SHOW What's this? For the first time in 20 years, there's no Graham Norton! Apparently his flimsy excuse is that he's in Tel Aviv preparing for the BBC's coverage of the Eurovision Song Contest. Standing in for him is Jack Whitehall, who warns us, "Worst case is I will make everyone appreciate just how lucky we are to have [Graham]!"

Sitting opposite Jack on the red sofa is Luke Evans (The Girl on the Train, Beauty and the Beast) who recently started filming the thriller Dreamland alongside Gary Oldman. He's joined by Brienne of Tarth, or rather Gwendoline Christie, who plays the fearsome warrior in Game of Thrones, and Paloma Faith. JR

KNIVES OUT
Oliver Peyton, Andi Oliver and Matthew Fort are ready for the final judgement

Great British Menu 7.30pm BBC2

FOOD Over the past eight weeks the three judges – with a little help from their (musical) friends – have eaten their way through almost every musical genre. There have been culinary tributes to punk, Britpop, grime and glam rock, while the dishes have had some pun-tastic names (my favourite was Fleetwood Mackerel). There have also been theatrical presentations (one chef even rapped a description of his food) although perhaps vintage record players have been used too often.

Overall there have been very few bum notes, with several dishes getting top marks. It's all been in aid of a banquet to mark the 50th anniversary of the last time the Beatles played live together, on the roof of the Apple offices at 3 Savile Row, and tonight we'll discover which regional chefs will be cooking one of the four courses at the Abbey Road studios. JR

A pure sugar hit of entertainment, this American cooking contest is the one where the tiered cakes never stay upright and the bottoms are always soggy. The exceptionally funny Nicole Byer presides as amateur chefs with far more enthusiasm than talent are deliberately set tasks that are likely to be well beyond them. It's time to devour series three, messily.

Infiltrating the KKK

P BlacKkKlansman ★★★★ 8.00pm Sky Premiere

Spike Lee's latest film recounts the true story of Ron Stallworth, the black police officer who infiltrated the Ku Klux Klan in 1972. John David Washington (son of Denzel) rises to the challenge of his first major film role, while the ever-reliable Adam Driver plays his Jewish colleague. The film is as playful as it is political and, although the scattershot approach doesn't always cohere, Lee struts his film-making stuff with ambition and gusto. BlacKkKlansman is also showing tonight on Sky True Stories, a new pop-channel that takes over Sky Drama until Monday 27 May. EMMA SIMMONDS

Friday night frights

Resident Evil ★★★ My5 FREE TO VIEW

A mutant virus accidentally turns the workers at a hi-tech research facility into flesh-eating zombies in this first film in the action horror series, now available on Channel 5's catch-up service. Director Paul Anderson racks up the tension to claustrophobic levels, as Milla Jovovich and a team of commandos move through progressively more dangerous levels to wipe out the ravenous undead. The nerve-jangling score, co-composed by shock rocker Marilyn Manson, gives it an extra frenetic edge. SLOAN FREER

A rare showing

To Each His Own
★★★★ 4.15pm TCM

Olivia de Havilland stars in this fine example of the "woman's picture" genre, and won the best actress Oscar for her efforts. Impeccably directed by Mitchell Leisen, the film casts de Havilland as an unmarried mother haunted by regrets at having given up her baby for adoption during the First World War.

Suzi Ruffell: Postcards to Portsmouth
Sunday 7.15pm Radio 4

This is my time

PHOTOGRAPHED EXCLUSIVELY FOR RADIO TIMES BY LIAM JACKSON

NOT WEIRD Suzi Ruffell on stage and, main picture, sporting a bold animal print with her cat, Velma

"I love comedy in which the comic shows something of themselves, and makes everyone in the room go, 'Ah OK, I'm not weird after all,'" reflects the comedian Suzi Ruffell over a cup of tea in her London flat.

Ruffell moved in less than a fortnight ago, but the place is already immaculate, with not a box in sight. But she is most proud of the tiny spare room into which she has squeezed a chair and an elegantly old-fashioned bureau. "This is my writing room," she says, opening the door with a flourish. "I've waited a long time to have one of these."

Along with examining her working-class roots, Ruffell's stand-up mines her experiences of heartbreak, homophobia and being trolled online – "Years ago, a critic called me a confessional comedian, and I thought, 'Wow, you've worked out what I'm trying to do before I have!'"

Ruffell has since toured with some of the biggest names in comedy, including Alan Carr, Katherine Ryan, Jack Dee and Romesh Ranganathan. She has performed on Live at the Apollo and is a regular face on Mock the Week. In 2015 she launched the podcast Like Minded Friends with her friend and fellow comic Tom Allen, "mainly because we didn't have much work on". Billed as a podcast in which "two homo comedians talk about life, love and culture", it has now reached over a million downloads and prompts a steady stream of letters and emails from young LGBTQ listeners sharing their coming out stories.

On Sunday, you can hear Ruffell visiting her home town in a show that was recorded live at the Station Theatre on Hayling Island. Postcards to Portsmouth begins with Ruffell's mother, Ann, driving her to the venue and gently asking if she could avoid talking about the family.

This plea is cheerfully ignored by her daughter, who discusses her female relatives' love of animal print – "When we all get together it's like an amateur production of The Lion King" – and the reaction of her uncle when she told him that she's gay – "I don't blame you, babe, I wouldn't fancy a geezer either".

Ruffell says she's never officially asked her family if she can use them as material, but wouldn't do it if she thought it caused genuine discomfort. "I like to think you can tell that it comes from love," she smiles. "And I'm usually the butt of the joke."

Ruffell left Portsmouth when she was 18: "I ran away to London because I couldn't quite face being who I was in my home town. I found coming out quite tricky. From the age of 14, when I realised I was gay, to 21, when I started telling people, I carried this backpack of shame. My family were great, but at the time Portsmouth felt quite homophobic, even though now it has this lovely collection of queer people, and a gay bar that has drag nights."

Ruffell's struggles with anxiety also make an appearance in her set. First triggered by her dyslexia plus worries about her sexuality, it now manifests as a more generalised unease which tends to peak in the middle of the night during what she calls her "3am press conference, when all the voices in my head meet up to have a chat".

Ruffell began performing at open-mic nights in her early 20s, inspired by a Lee Evans gig she saw in her teens that left her mesmerised by "this tiny man making two thousand people laugh". Back then, she says, she was "doing an impression of a comedian rather than being myself. That was before I really dug into what I wanted to talk about and who I was. It was only when I started talking about more personal things that people started taking notice."

'From the age of 14 to 21, I carried a backpack of shame'

She notes that ten years ago comedy was a less welcoming place for a working-class woman: "It did feel like a bit of a closed shop. You would realise: 'Oh, that person went to Oxford, and they know that person because they went to Oxford too.' I know people who went to Cambridge so they could get into Footlights. That wouldn't even have crossed my mind."

In recent years she has noticed more diverse voices coming to the fore and feels particularly at home on Radio 4, where she has long been a regular on The News Quiz and The Now Show. "It's a really vibrant place for comics, especially with the existence of Radio 4 Extra. It's a place where up-and-coming comedians are able to cut their teeth alongside more established ones. It feels very inclusive and like they genuinely want to feature new voices that aren't middle-class posh men."

To be doing her own stand-up show on the radio feels like a genuine milestone. "A while ago I read a quote from Chris Rock that stayed with me," Ruffell recalls. "He said: 'You can break too early, and you can never break too late.' Right now, I'm where I want to be and it's taken just the right amount of time. I used to suffer from nerves and worry whether people would like me, but now I look out at an audience and think, 'Don't worry, you're going to love me. We're going to have a lot of fun." FIONA STURGES

PICK OF THE WEEK

Waterlog

Sunday 6.45pm Radio 3

"The warm rain rumbled from the gutter in one of those midsummer downpours as I hastened across the lawn behind my house in Suffolk and took shelter in the moat. Breast-stroking up and down the 30 yards of clear, green water, I nosed along, eyes just at water level."

These are the opening words to Roger Deakin's aquatic masterpiece Waterlog, charting his swim through Britain, from his moat to canals, rivers and, eventually, the sea.

The book inspired an entirely different way of thinking about what we now call "wild swimming", of which Professor Alice Roberts (below), the programme's presenter, is a devotee. Deakin saw it as "open swimming", using water to make a journey from one place to another, that our waterways, like our land should not be blocked off but reclaimed.

Among the many contributors who read favourite extracts from the book is nature writer Robert Macfarlane who recalls Deakin coming to give a lecture at Cambridge University. His sandals squelched as he made his entrance: he'd been swimming in the canals...

AMBRIDGE DIARY

The Archers this week...

Will's shocking behaviour last week is still the big issue, with relations having now broken down completely within the Grundy family. For his part, Will is attempting to brush everything under the carpet, but there's no escape from an uninvited visitor with an axe to grind.

Freddie, meanwhile, is disappointed that his Lower Loxley initiative hasn't paid off in the way he'd wanted it to. Later, Kenton is forced to deliver some harsh home truths about what happened in the time that Freddie was away.

And a cash-strapped Jazzer is disappointed when Ed cancels a shearing job for them both in favour of working with Tim. You can expect tensions to erupt when Jazzer attempts to get in on the scheme and Ed is forced to turn his friend away. DAVID BROWN

GUEST COLUMNIST

Paddy O'Connell

'Push off, love'

Filling an Eddie Mair-shaped gap isn't easy

WE'RE SO SAD to be saying goodbye today to our friend and launch anchor, Eddie Mair." So oozed the silken American radio presenter, live to a million listeners across the USA. She was in Boston, Massachusetts, and Eddie was also live, but in London, England, – the two linked by the airwaves in an innovative new hit radio programme that he and I helped launch.

"For two years we've brought you this fabulous new show across the USA with Eddie Mair our anchor in the UK," she continued "but now, sadly, he's leaving. This is his last show."

As she spoke, the seconds ticked down: "20, 19, 18…" Scores of American radio stations from California to Nebraska, from Texas to Virginia, watched the clock, poised to start exactly as we stopped. The next few lines were scripted for Eddie: "And I've also had the most marvellous time making new friends on the airwaves. Goodbye and thank you for so many happy memories." But Eddie instead replied: "Well that's the first I've heard of it."

'On radio, people take themselves too seriously'

Eddie has long tried to control the manner of his departure. (Ask me to tell you one day about the Radio 4 tribute that was planned and then dropped when he left PM a day early.)

It was he who was in charge of the news that he was leaving his own page here at Radio Times. No more brownies from Susan Rae's hot oven, no more tales of Corrie Corfield strung out on the floor of Broadcasting House, etc, etc. So I hope you'll agree it's right for me to use all the inches I can spare in this guest column* solely for Eddie.

The plain fact is that his Radio Times column was in the same spirit as the man on the air. I well remember Midday with Mair on the BBC's new baby Radio 5 Live, launched to deliver news and sport 24 hours a day. Now, as listeners know very well, all too often news doesn't break, it's simply repeated.

So it was that into one of these stubborn gaps when there was neither news nor sport that Eddie and his team invented "International Doris Day." To make the item really sing, much like Doris herself, they rang her up. The star of Calamity Jane, performer of Que Sera Sera and so much more, picked up the phone. "I'm so delighted to hear that this is International Doris Day," chirped Doris. "And I fully support it."

To explain to the uninitiated how and why this sort of malarkey intensifies real news on the radio would take too long. As a fan of his column, you don't need me to tell you, so let us simply say, "Farewell then, Eddie Mair. Push off, love".

HIS DEPARTURE REVEALS what's missing; yes, these are serious times for the country, and serious heads are needed, but what's all too often offered on the radio are people who take themselves too seriously. And that's a very different thing. Radio Times must think long and hard about what kind of columnist to drag next from the BBC bar. We won't just be listening… we'll be watching.

*In my next guest column, the start of the hugely anticipated new feature Paddy O'Connell Is on the Radio, I shall turn to my pet peeve: radio hosts who say, "I'm sorry, we'll have to leave it there…"

Paddy O'Connell is the host of Broadcasting House (Sunday 9.00am Radio 4,) and is often heard on Radio 2 when nobody else is available

SOUND BITES

BY DAVID HEPWORTH

Dealing with depression

The most uplifting thing I heard on radio recently was the simplest. It was when an edition of All in the Mind (Tuesday 9.00pm Radio 4) which was given over to Clarke Carlisle and his wife Carrie talking about dealing with depression.

Clarke's that rare thing, a former professional footballer verbal enough to be able to analyse feelings that led so many other former players to the bookies, the boozer and an early grave. Carrie's that equally rare thing, a wife who has dealt with it and now crackles with the need to tell other people what she's learned. Eighty-two men, they say, will attempt suicide in the UK in a week. That's why she used to tell Clarke regularly that if he was considering suicide he should at least know he was surrounded by people who loved him.

For his part, Clarke has come to realise that he is living in two worlds. The first was the real world where problems could be scaled and managed. The other was the world in his head where everything appeared black and hopeless.

He now learns how to move himself from the latter to the former mode. The two of them are so keen to pass on their experience that the presenter could hardly get a word in edgeways. Not that they needed to.

Ambridge needs its elders

The passing of Edward Kelsey (below), who played Joe Grundy in The Archers with such distinction for 34 years, forces you to wonder where the programme is going to find its next elderly patriarch. Since the days of Walter Gabriel, Tom Forrest and Jethro Larkin, it seems as though the one consistent element of the programme has been the old countryman who remembered the days of the squire, could tell you how Ambridge celebrated the Coronation, thought that Susan Horobin had no business getting married in white and yet was capable of making their peace with a changing world if that was the price of holding family together.

Bert Fry is still there, of course, but there's a limit to how the writers can keep us up to date with a character with no immediate family. There's Joe's son Eddie, too, but he's still more comic than anything else. There are plenty of senior males in the Bull, but they're all retired landowners or academics who sound as though they wear cravats. What's needed is a character who maintains his trousers with string and keeps up the tradition of the programme at the same time.

Today's Choices

Opera on 3 from the Met
6.30pm Radio 3

The climax of Francis Poulenc's 1957 opera Dialogues des Carmélites is a bit like Haydn's "Farewell" Symphony, except that, where Haydn's orchestral musicians originally dropped out one by one to go on holiday, the nuns in Poulenc's opera stop singing as, one by one, Madame la Guillotine chops off their heads. Based on the true story of 16 Carmelite sisters who were martyred in Paris in 1794, Poulenc's opera was not the first to be set during the French Revolution and Terror, but is the only one to take terror itself – both physical and spiritual – as its central theme. In tonight's Met broadcast, American mezzo Isabel Leonard (above) takes the role of Blanche, the perpetually nervous novice who finally finds the courage to join her sisters in death. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Archive on 4: The New Philosophers and the Death of the Interview
8.00pm Radio 4

Tune into Radio 4 on a weekday morning and you're likely to hear something you will disagree with. So why listen at all? It's a pertinent question that, as Janine Gibson reminds us, has only become harder to answer with the evolution of the internet. Here, the ex-Buzzfeed UK editor-in-chief asks if the unchallenged opinions of podcast polemicists are leaving us blinkered to the views of others. If traditional broadcasters are feeling the heat, spare a thought for Sir Tim Berners-Lee, whose democratising vision for those first dial-up internet talk shows of the 1990s now seems just as antiquated. TOM GOULDING

Today's Choices

11.15am Radio 4

Sound the fanfares! It's back and, unlike Bargain Hunt, the impeccable format has not been messed with for the sake of "change". The first castaway of the new series is the Bafta and RTS award-winning documentary film-maker Louis Theroux (above, see feature on page 14). He talks about his childhood with his famous travel-writing father Paul, and why he wanted to go to boarding school, how he got his big break in television via the American film-maker and satirist Michael Moore on TV Nation – and, of course, his own subsequent series Weird Weekends. Does he mention the mind-boggling Savile interview? You'll just have to tune in to find out...

JANE ANDERSON RADIO EDITOR

When Parents Split
1.30pm Radio 4

Philippa Perry is a psychotherapist who published a must-read earlier this year called The Book You Wish Your Parents Had Read (and Your Children Will Be Glad That You Did). She gets family dynamics and also happens to be married to the artist Grayson Perry. Here she explores the profound effect upon the 80,000 British children whose parents fight for custody each year in the courts – how they so often become "collateral damage" between two warring adults. A tough but important listen. JANE ANDERSON

Today's Choices

The Conversation
11.30am/10.30pm BBC World Service

I am a feminist and a mother of three. I actively seek to see more women getting their voices across in the media. But I have a problem with Mumsnet. It is the bastion of middle-class women who, while using it as a space to share key information, have also turned it into a forum where worried and possibly depressed new mothers end up feeling entirely inadequate. No one is "born" to be a "natural" mum – it's a process of trial, lots of error and, if you are lucky, plenty of joy. So can bloggers and vloggers be of any help? This is the subject up for debate today: do online parenting communities help or hinder new mothers? Two women – one from the UK and one from India – who blog and vlog about motherhood tell Krupa Padhy why they do it, and what the pitfalls and benefits are.

Just a Minute
6.30pm Radio 4

As the 84th series dawns, you'd be forgiven for thinking there's nothing left to talk about, nothing more to delight us about speaking for one minute without hesitation, deviation or repetition. Pish. Tonight there is an argument about what exactly constituted sticky-back plastic. You'll listen in vain for this subject to be raised on In Our Time. And when a panelist manages to speak for 60 seconds without interruption, the thrill remains undiminished. It happens tonight. You'll want to hear it. And in case you miss the old days, bear in mind that Gyles Brandreth has turned into Kenneth Williams.

Now, Brazil has a new right-wing president, Jair Bolsonaro, who has spoken out against the communal rights of indigenous people. As Tim Whewell reports, tribal leaders fear the failure to find the missing plane may be a sign of growing official indifference to their needs.

For generations we've heard stories about celebrities hooked on painkillers, and in the past two decades it's estimated that 350,000 Americans may have died from prescribed opioids such as morphine, tramadol and fentanyl. Now this crisis may be heading the UK's way. A particular concern is that the drugs don't work and may only lead to addiction. While a government review seems not to be addressing the problem fast enough, Anna Cavell asks why there is such an increase in the prescription of potentially dangerous painkillers (14 million in 2008, 23 million last year) and whether pharmaceutical companies must share the blame. Some of those she meets are dealing with addiction. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Iris van Herpen is a Dutch fashion designer whose creations stand out even in an environment where the outlandish and the extravagant are the norm. She's designed for Cate Blanchett, Tilda Swinton and Lady Gaga, and she has a special bond with the singer Björk . The pair – such complete artistic one-offs both – seem made for each other, and in this In the Studio Anik See visits van Herpen at her Amsterdam studio and charts her progress as she designs a dress for Björk to wear at a series of concerts in New York. The dress must be able to move in the way Björk requires and be durable enough to withstand many nights of wear. I don't think it will be trickling down to M&S any time soon. SIMON O'HAGAN

The Essay: From the Source 10.45pm Radio 3

Feargal Sharkey (above) is best remembered as the singer of one of John Peel's championed bands, the Undertones. I was, as it turned out, an unnecessarily devoted follower, "queuing" up at 6.00am in my town to get the number one ticket to their gigs – only to find, three hours later when the record shop opened, only a couple of people behind me. Feargal went on to a successful solo career, and then in the music industry as an A&R and head of UK Music between 2008–11. What I never realised is that he is a keen fly fisherman and an expert on the state of chalk streams. As Radio 3 continues its week-long Along the River season, Sharkey argues eloquently for why these natural habitats and conditions need to be preserved. It is, quite literally, a flow of information that will surprise and shock.

JANE ANDERSON

Behind the Scenes

9.00am/9.30pm Radio 4

Anyone who experienced a radical production of Ibsen's The Wild Duck at the Almeida theatre in north London last year will be intrigued by its enfant terrible director, Robert Icke. The first programme in a new series of the arts strand begins by following Icke as his Wild Duck takes flight, and we discover the techniques he deploys that draw in first-time theatregoers. Juliet Stevenson starred in an Icke production of Hamlet – with Andrew Scott in the title role, and Bob Dylan's music to the fore – and she maybe gets to the heart of him when she says, "He's very easily bored. He has the lowest boredom threshold of anyone I've ever met." SIMON O'HAGAN

When Jeremy Hardy Spoke to the Nation

6.30pm Radio 4

The first ever stand-up comedy gig I went to see was in the mid-80s in a dingy setting beneath London's Westway. The saving grace was Jeremy Hardy (above), who brought us all to our knees with his comedic talent, despite the traffic noise. So many people, especially R4 devotees, were devastated to learn of his premature death this year at the age of 57. Over the course of two programmes, the network celebrates their long relationship with Hardy. His friend and colleague Sandi Toksvig narrates this tribute from his very first appearances through to his frequent turn-outs on The News Quiz and I'm Sorry I Haven't a Clue – as well as the very best of the ten series of Jeremy Hardy Speaks to the Nation and his final solo outing Jeremy Hardy Feels It.

JANE ANDERSON

Ramblings

3.00pm Radio 4

Clare Balding is back and ready to ramble, and this time she is doing it with the Norfolk Broads. All but one of this group of women hale from the Antipodes but married British men and settled in East Anglia. Most of them have been here a good few years now but the accents are still noticeable, as is their astonishment over how fresh and surprising their local environment proves to be every time they go for a walk. As Clare points out, it doesn't really matter if they ever get lost – there are no mountains to retrace for a wrong turning in Norfolk – but the ladies remain adamant that they do like to have a good pub to greet them at the end. JANE ANDERSON

In this performance, recorded in July 2017 in Aix-en-Provence, mezzo Stéphanie d'Oustrac sings the title role of the ill-fated temptress and Michael Fabiano her desperate lover.

FRIDAY Radio

Today's Choices

Friday Night Is Music Night 8.00pm Radio 2

There used to be a story, that might have been a (sub)urban myth, that composer Tony Hatch (above) had a house named Crossroads that was paid for by the royalties from his theme tune for the celebrated soap. If he did, then let's hope he had good Neighbours – another TV series blessed with his knack for a TV earworm. But his talent wasn't restricted to that type of work. Think of someone recording in the 60s and 70s and chances are a Hatch tune was in their repertoire; everyone from Chubby Checker to Morecambe and Wise, but most notably a string of hits by Petula Clark. All of which promises a rich tapestry for this 80th birthday celebration, where deciding what to leave out will be the biggest problem facing producers. TONY PETERS

Radio 3 in Concert 7.30pm Radio 3

Plenty of classical pieces quote other composers' works, but Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra is surely unique in doing so in a spirit of mockery rather than respect. Yet one can perhaps forgive the fun he had, getting his orchestra to blow musical raspberries at the intrusive "invasion theme" from Shostakovich's then popular "Leningrad" Symphony, knowing that this otherwise life-affirming score was among the last works of a dying man. It's contrasted in tonight's BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra's concert with Brahms's monumental First Piano Concerto – a young man's work, yet one that enshrines deep feelings of personal loss. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Face behind the voice

Victoria Polley BBC Essex

Age 25
Current job Reporter, presenter and producer on BBC Essex, and from this Saturday takes over as presenter of cricket show Around the Wicket (2.00–6.00pm). "My dad played club cricket and still does and I grew up watching the game. I love it. In Around the Wicket we report on the local cricket scene and hopefully get under the skin of what's going on."
CV Grew up in Colchester, working at weekends at BBC Essex from the age of 17. Did a degree in journalism at Kent University, graduating in 2015. Has worked full-time at BBC Essex ever since, on air and behind the scenes, but with the emphasis on sports reporting.
Best moment "When Essex won the county championship in 2017, I was sent down to the ground to report from pitch-side. I ran around with the players when they did their victory lap, getting sprayed with champagne and trying to grab interviews!"
Worst moment "One day I was on duty in charge of all the output but I failed to close down one of the mics – and a presenter said the F word live on air. I felt very responsible."
Off air "I live at home with my parents in Colchester – haven't managed to save up enough for my own place yet. Sport is my passion off air, as well. I play netball in two local leagues and I just got a netball umpiring qualification."
First radio memory "On holiday in France with my family during the famous 2005 Ashes series, listening to the commentary on the car radio. And listening to BBC Essex sports presenter Glenn Speller, who's now a colleague."
Favourite broadcasters "I admire Clare Balding for her wide knowledge and the range of sports she covers. Also Kelly Cates, who mixes both TV and radio. Greg James's cricket podcast always makes me laugh."
Ambition "Sports presenting full-time – maybe one day on Match of the Day?"
Dream job "I can't think of anything else I'd rather be doing."
Secret skills "Dancing – from a young age I did ballet and tap, and I just joined a burlesque class." SIMON O'HAGAN

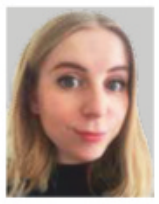
Sarah Gosling BBC Radio Devon/BBC Radio 1



Age 25
Current job Presenter of BBC Radio Devon's BBC Music Introducing (Saturdays 8.00pm) and Radio 1's Mindfulness Mix (Fridays 3.00am).
CV Born in Gibraltar and brought up in Devon. Studied English at King's College, London. Work experience included a spell at the NME, before joining BBC Radio Devon as a broadcast assistant in 2016. Her big break came in January 2018 when she became a presenter of BBC Music Introducing, which focuses on fresh, emerging talent in the area.
Best moment "I love having artists in, playing live sessions. I'd like to think that I am good at 'casual chat' and putting nervous people at their ease. It brings me ridiculous amounts of joy!"
Worst moment "My first on-air insert from an outside broadcast in Torbay. I had been to a wedding the day before, and let's just say I really wasn't feeling very well... Thankfully it worked out!"
Off air "I live in Plymouth and have a boyfriend – he's a drummer – and a beloved cat. I am an ambassador for the Music Venue Trust, 'to help safeguard venues that are closing'."
First radio memory "Listening to Chris Moyles's Radio 1 breakfast show from my bed, and making recordings."
Favourite broadcasters "Lauren Laverne is fantastic – so enthusiastic and knowledgeable. She has all of my dream gigs. I also admire Alice Levine."
Ambition "To start some masterclasses for aspiring acts. I'm extraordinarily lucky to have such a creative job. Where I currently live is a tourist area, and the audiences mostly want to hear covers. I'd like to live in a place where new music is freely performed – beyond Bristol is limited right now..."
Dream job "To do some Glastonbury Festival coverage – my favourite place in the world. If you could mix me together with Graham Norton and Lauren Laverne that would be perfect!"
Secret skills "I take commissions for portrait painting, verging on photorealism. I am learning to use oil – acrylic is my usual choice – but I also love pen and ink." JANE ANDERSON

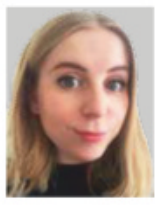
Face behind the voice

Sarah Gosling BBC Radio Devon/BBC Radio 1



Age 25
Current job Presenter of BBC Radio Devon's BBC Music Introducing (Saturdays 8.00pm) and Radio 1's Mindfulness Mix (Fridays 3.00am).
CV Born in Gibraltar and brought up in Devon. Studied English at King's College, London. Work experience included a spell at the NME, before joining BBC Radio Devon as a broadcast assistant in 2016. Her big break came in January 2018 when she became a presenter of BBC Music Introducing, which focuses on fresh, emerging talent in the area.
Best moment "I love having artists in, playing live sessions. I'd like to think that I am good at 'casual chat' and putting nervous people at their ease. It brings me ridiculous amounts of joy!"
Worst moment "My first on-air insert from an outside broadcast in Torbay. I had been to a wedding the day before, and let's just say I really wasn't feeling very well... Thankfully it worked out!"
Off air "I live in Plymouth and have a boyfriend – he's a drummer – and a beloved cat. I am an ambassador for the Music Venue Trust, 'to help safeguard venues that are closing'."
First radio memory "Listening to Chris Moyles's Radio 1 breakfast show from my bed, and making recordings."
Favourite broadcasters "Lauren Laverne is fantastic – so enthusiastic and knowledgeable. She has all of my dream gigs. I also admire Alice Levine."
Ambition "To start some masterclasses for aspiring acts. I'm extraordinarily lucky to have such a creative job. Where I currently live is a tourist area, and the audiences mostly want to hear covers. I'd like to live in a place where new music is freely performed – beyond Bristol is limited right now..."
Dream job "To do some Glastonbury Festival coverage – my favourite place in the world. If you could mix me together with Graham Norton and Lauren Laverne that would be perfect!"
Secret skills "I take commissions for portrait painting, verging on photorealism. I am learning to use oil – acrylic is my usual choice – but I also love pen and ink." JANE ANDERSON

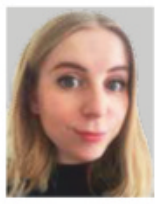
Face behind the voice

Sarah Gosling BBC Radio Devon/BBC Radio 1



Age 25
Current job Presenter of BBC Radio Devon's BBC Music Introducing (Saturdays 8.00pm) and Radio 1's Mindfulness Mix (Fridays 3.00am).
CV Born in Gibraltar and brought up in Devon. Studied English at King's College, London. Work experience included a spell at the NME, before joining BBC Radio Devon as a broadcast assistant in 2016. Her big break came in January 2018 when she became a presenter of BBC Music Introducing, which focuses on fresh, emerging talent in the area.
Best moment "I love having artists in, playing live sessions. I'd like to think that I am good at 'casual chat' and putting nervous people at their ease. It brings me ridiculous amounts of joy!"
Worst moment "My first on-air insert from an outside broadcast in Torbay. I had been to a wedding the day before, and let's just say I really wasn't feeling very well... Thankfully it worked out!"
Off air "I live in Plymouth and have a boyfriend – he's a drummer – and a beloved cat. I am an ambassador for the Music Venue Trust, 'to help safeguard venues that are closing'."
First radio memory "Listening to Chris Moyles's Radio 1 breakfast show from my bed, and making recordings."
Favourite broadcasters "Lauren Laverne is fantastic – so enthusiastic and knowledgeable. She has all of my dream gigs. I also admire Alice Levine."
Ambition "To start some masterclasses for aspiring acts. I'm extraordinarily lucky to have such a creative job. Where I currently live is a tourist area, and the audiences mostly want to hear covers. I'd like to live in a place where new music is freely performed – beyond Bristol is limited right now..."
Dream job "To do some Glastonbury Festival coverage – my favourite place in the world. If you could mix me together with Graham Norton and Lauren Laverne that would be perfect!"
Secret skills "I take commissions for portrait painting, verging on photorealism. I am learning to use oil – acrylic is my usual choice – but I also love pen and ink." JANE ANDERSON

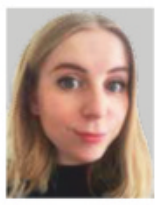
Face behind the voice

Sarah Gosling BBC Radio Devon/BBC Radio 1



Age 25
Current job Presenter of BBC Radio Devon's BBC Music Introducing (Saturdays 8.00pm) and Radio 1's Mindfulness Mix (Fridays 3.00am).
CV Born in Gibraltar and brought up in Devon. Studied English at King's College, London. Work experience included a spell at the NME, before joining BBC Radio Devon as a broadcast assistant in 2016. Her big break came in January 2018 when she became a presenter of BBC Music Introducing, which focuses on fresh, emerging talent in the area.
Best moment "I love having artists in, playing live sessions. I'd like to think that I am good at 'casual chat' and putting nervous people at their ease. It brings me ridiculous amounts of joy!"
Worst moment "My first on-air insert from an outside broadcast in Torbay. I had been to a wedding the day before, and let's just say I really wasn't feeling very well... Thankfully it worked out!"
Off air "I live in Plymouth and have a boyfriend – he's a drummer – and a beloved cat. I am an ambassador for the Music Venue Trust, 'to help safeguard venues that are closing'."
First radio memory "Listening to Chris Moyles's Radio 1 breakfast show from my bed, and making recordings."
Favourite broadcasters "Lauren Laverne is fantastic – so enthusiastic and knowledgeable. She has all of my dream gigs. I also admire Alice Levine."
Ambition "To start some masterclasses for aspiring acts. I'm extraordinarily lucky to have such a creative job. Where I currently live is a tourist area, and the audiences mostly want to hear covers. I'd like to live in a place where new music is freely performed – beyond Bristol is limited right now..."
Dream job "To do some Glastonbury Festival coverage – my favourite place in the world. If you could mix me together with Graham Norton and Lauren Laverne that would be perfect!"
Secret skills "I take commissions for portrait painting, verging on photorealism. I am learning to use oil – acrylic is my usual choice – but I also love pen and ink." JANE ANDERSON

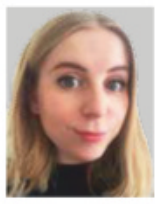
BBC Radio Wales

Face behind the voice

Sarah Gosling BBC Radio Devon/BBC Radio 1



Age 25
Current job Presenter of BBC Radio Devon's BBC Music Introducing (Saturdays 8.00pm) and Radio 1's Mindfulness Mix (Fridays 3.00am).
CV Born in Gibraltar and brought up in Devon. Studied English at King's College, London. Work experience included a spell at the NME, before joining BBC Radio Devon as a broadcast assistant in 2016. Her big break came in January 2018 when she became a presenter of BBC Music Introducing, which focuses on fresh, emerging talent in the area.
Best moment "I love having artists in, playing live sessions. I'd like to think that I am good at 'casual chat' and putting nervous people at their ease. It brings me ridiculous amounts of joy!"
Worst moment "My first on-air insert from an outside broadcast in Torbay. I had been to a wedding the day before, and let's just say I really wasn't feeling very well... Thankfully it worked out!"
Off air "I live in Plymouth and have a boyfriend – he's a drummer – and a beloved cat. I am an ambassador for the Music Venue Trust, 'to help safeguard venues that are closing'."
First radio memory "Listening to Chris Moyles's Radio 1 breakfast show from my bed, and making recordings."
Favourite broadcasters "Lauren Laverne is fantastic – so enthusiastic and knowledgeable. She has all of my dream gigs. I also admire Alice Levine."
Ambition "To start some masterclasses for aspiring acts. I'm extraordinarily lucky to have such a creative job. Where I currently live is a tourist area, and the audiences mostly want to hear covers. I'd like to live in a place where new music is freely performed – beyond Bristol is limited right now..."
Dream job "To do some Glastonbury Festival coverage – my favourite place in the world. If you could mix me together with Graham Norton and Lauren Laverne that would be perfect!"

RENTING IN RETIREMENT

Following a growth in demand for flexible retirement living, Renaissance Retirement is pleased to offer a rental service to prospective owners. As well as offering flexibility, renting can also benefit people who want a hassle-free route to right-sizing and prevents the need to sell an asset, such as the family home.

Renting also gives owners a great chance to try before they buy. With Renaissance Retirement's Rent to Buy, renters have the option to move in and experience all the benefits and lifestyle the development has to offer. If they choose to buy their apartment within the initial six months of your tenancy agreement, Renaissance will refund your rental fees, minus the service charge and any rental payment fees paid during this time.

Security is most important to Renaissance' owners, but we only offer assured tenancies. These give the legal right to live in the accommodation for a period of time - so you will have strong tenancy rights. Tenancies can also be for a set period, such as twelve months, providing you with a flexible but secure route to retirement living.

The Pre-Raphaelites' favourite model is now the inspiration behind the debut of the year...

Book at Bedtime: The Doll Factory
Monday–Friday, 12.04pm, 10.45pm Radio 4

When Elizabeth Macneal's debut, The Doll Factory, won the 2018 Caledonia Novel Award, a Scottish prize for unpublished writers, it secured the author an agent and had publishers beating at her door. There was a 14-way auction, won by Picador with a six-figure advance, and TV rights were snapped up by Buccaneer Media (the company behind the ITV detective drama Marcella).

"It was a totally mad whirlwind," the 30-year-old writer tells me. "I just walked round the flat with my mouth open."

Part historical fiction, part thriller, The Doll Factory opens in London in 1850. Iris, an aspiring artist who works in a doll-making shop, is asked to model for the Pre-Raphaelite artist Louis Frost. She agrees, on condition that he teaches her to paint. Her life is transformed by the bohemian Louis. But Iris has also attracted the attention of Silas, a reclusive collector and taxidermist, who is dangerously obsessed by her red hair and the twisted collarbone she has had since birth.

Both Iris and Louis are fictional characters, but Macneal introduces real-life figures from the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood – the group of young painters and poets including Dante Gabriel Rossetti and John Everett Millais who scandalised the Victorian art establishment. "I tried to be as faithful as I could to the real timeline of events," says Macneal.

Iris herself is inspired by Lizzie Siddal, the model for Millais's drowned Ophelia, who started off working in a milliner's shop and became an artist in her own right.

Central to the book is the theme of female empowerment – as a working-class girl, Iris takes a huge risk to become a model/artist. "There have been plucky and vivacious women throughout time," says Maclean, "but the important thing is it's society that condemns her.

> 'I couldn't plant a modern-day feminist in a historical novel'
> ELIZABETH MACNEAL

So even as she is taking this incredibly plucky and almost modern leap – which of course Lizzie Siddal took – it's her parents who judge her, her sister who cannot understand it, and Louis's charwoman who snubs her. I probably struggled most with the character of Iris," the author admits, "because there was that tension between the character that I most wanted to see on the page, but at the same time I couldn't plant a modern-day feminist on to the pages of a historical novel."

POTTERING ABOUT
Author Elizabeth Macneal also enjoys working with ceramics in her studio

In many ways the women who modelled for the Pre-Raphaelites were the first supermodels. But they also knew the pain of being discarded for a younger muse. "I thought a lot about what Lizzie Siddal must have felt when Rossetti was just resoundingly not marrying her, and was rumoured to have had affairs with other women. I wanted Louis to be a better man than Rossetti."

Macneal set the novel in 1850s London (a place of splendour and squalor) because it was the time of the Great Exhibition in Hyde Park, a vast temporary museum of 100,000 exhibits. "It was the decade when mass manufacture really started to take off and that was pitted against craft," she says.

Born in Edinburgh, Macneal fell in love with the pre-Raphaelites at the age of ten when she visited Tate Britain in London. She spent the earnings from her paper round collecting literary classics in antique editions. Today, they take up a complete wall of the flat in Limehouse, east London, where she lives with her lawyer husband.

She studied English at Oxford, where her dissertation was on clutter in 1850s literature. "I was sending off short stories to anthologies and told my mum I wanted to be a writer. She said, 'You're a good writer, but it's going to be a very long time until you're good enough to be published. So you need to get a career rather than just wafting around and possibly never making it.' Which of course hurt, but it was wonderful advice."

Macneal opted to spend five years as a management consultant. During that time, she signed up for pottery classes. "I loved the peace of it – turning this lump of earth into something functional and beautiful."

She began selling her ceramics (Mary Beard is a fan) and today has a studio at the bottom of her garden. Her savings allowed her to enrol on the creative writing MA at the University of East Anglia, where she began writing short stories.

Realising her story about Iris could actually become a novel, she entered the Caledonia Award with half a manuscript, racing through the last 50,000 words after it was accepted. And then the world went a bit mad.

So far the book has sold to 29 territories worldwide, and will appeal to fans of Sarah Perry and Jessie Burton. Because she's been immersed in the Pre-Raphaelites for years, Macneal wears her learning lightly. "I didn't want it to be an intellectually dense book that you struggled to get into. I wanted to entertain the reader."

The Doll Factory explores what it means to feel stifled, and how to achieve creative freedom – something Macneal understands from her days as a management consultant. But it's also a book about male violence. Silas is a terrifying threat to women. "I did a lot of research into the psychology of stalking and 'incels' [an online misogynist community of involuntary celibates]. One of the causes of stalking is the genuine belief that their victim loves them."

The denouement of The Doll Factory is shocking, but thrilling. "I like endings where everything isn't tied up with a neat bow," Macneal says. If it had been a Victorian novel, it would have been a cautionary tale of a fallen woman, she adds. "I didn't want to write a miserable book. I wanted to write a book spliced with joy and energy and the achieving of dreams."

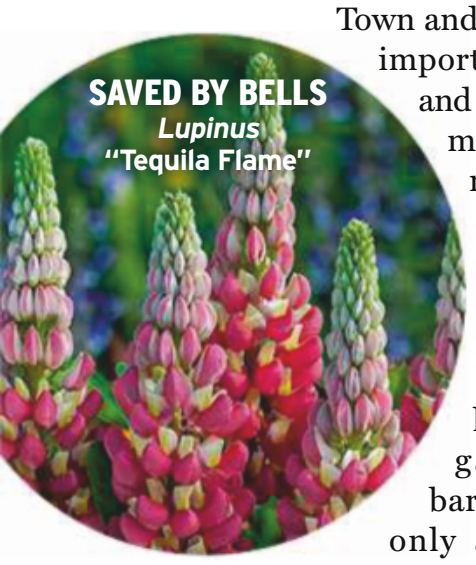
JOE SWIFT OFFERS

Create a BUZZ

Do your bit to save the bees that pollinate our crops by treating them to the plants they love, says Joe Swift

THE GLOBAL DECLINE of bees has been well documented, so most of us are aware of just how important they are for pollinating our food crops; without them we are in serious trouble. Gardeners can play a significant role by providing the right food source at the right time for bees and other pollinating insects, such as hoverflies and butterflies. If you grow edibles, you'll also want to encourage these insects to pollinate in your garden. I also believe that planting with pollinators in mind generally makes for a richer plot, as an extra dimension is woven in. A garden that's buzzing will always feel so alive, and the sound is part of our immersive experience of it.



SAVED BY BELLS
Lupinus
"Tequila Flame"

Town and city spaces are just as important as rural gardens and often host a wider and more densely planted range of flora. Honey produced in city hives is tastier and deeper in flavour because of the varied palette that the nectar has been harvested from. If your garden is mostly a barren paved space, not only are you missing an opportunity to create a haven for yourself, but you're not really doing your bit for bees and other beneficial insects, either. Things are moving in the right direction as many of us now enjoy a more relaxed approach. Looser, wilder gardens with plenty of naturalistic planting seem to be here to stay – and as well as significantly benefiting biodiversity, they are easier and fun to maintain.

There are thousands of great choices of plant for pollinators and they don't have to be native. A couple of general rules will help you choose. Pollinators love daisy- and bell-shaped flowers that are nectar-rich and easy to access (bluebells, Campanula, foxgloves, lupins, poppies, Geum, Rudbeckia, Anthemis etc). They also love certain species, such as roses, geraniums, jasmine, dahlias and verbena. Single rather than double flowers are significantly better, as the tightly petalled doubles have been so highly bred in many cases that they have become impenetrable. Most are sterile as a result, rarely providing nectar at all. Fruit and vegetable growers know that the flowers of many – such as peas, beans, raspberries, apples, currant bushes and most herbs – are extremely buzz-friendly.

There's a comprehensive Plants for Pollinators list at rhs.org.uk/plants. It's divided up by season because we should be looking to provide all year round, not just in the summer. Plants are greedy for nectar the minute they emerge from hibernation. So you know what to do.

BEES ARE GOOD

IF YOU DO ONE THING THIS WEEK

PLANT AN ALLIUM

A gardener's favourite, the allium family contains edibles such as onions, garlic and leeks as well as a huge range of ornamental plants. They appear from nowhere, their buds swelling to bursting point and finally popping to reveal their pom-pom flowers in a range of pinks, blues, purples and cool whites that are ideal for floating across borders.

TOP TIPS

- Plant in the autumn as bulbs; or if purchasing ready-grown ones in pots, plant them now, between perennials or ornamental grasses.
- Plant in a sunny spot with sharp drainage, and if they are happy they will reappear each year and self-seed, too (if you want to restrict them, snip off the flower head after flowering).
- They can do well in pots, but make sure the pots are deep enough and in proportion to the variety you've chosen. Use a well-drained compost with added grit.
- Some, such as A schubertii and A cristophii, make excellent dried flower heads – either left in the border for as long as possible or cut and brought inside.
- Yellow dying foliage – the only downside – can be snipped off, or you could place the alliums so that it's hidden behind other plants.

JOE'S FIVE FAVOURITES

Built to last The purple and crimson dome-shaped flowers of A atropurpureum last several weeks on strong stems from May to June (growing up to 75cm tall).

The starburst I call A schubertii the "firework" allium, with its large unusual blooms up to 12cm across made up of pink, star-shaped flowers in late May/early June (up to 60cm).

A classic A hollandicum "Purple Sensation" (right) has deep-purple pom-pom flowers held high on strong stems (up to 90cm).

Memories of the Med A solid-looking Mediterranean plant, A nigrum has broad, grey-green foliage and creamy white flattish flowers around Chelsea Flower Show time (up to 60cm).

Late starter A sphaerocephalon (left) flowers later than most, in July/August, with deep maroon egg-shaped flowers (up to 60cm).

Wine Country
10 May Netflix

California's most prestigious wine region, Napa Valley, steals the show in Netflix's latest film, Wine Country. Starring Amy Poehler and Tina Fey, it's about a group of old friends who spend a weekend quaffing their way around its lush vineyards and first-class restaurants, toasting memories and spilling secrets.

Less than an hour's drive north of San Francisco, Napa Valley is only 30 miles long but has more than 500 wineries that produce fulsome chardonnays, zesty sauvignon blancs and bold cabernet sauvignons. Its reputation was established in 1976, when a "cab sav" bagged the top prize at a blind-tasting in Paris, beating Bordeaux's finest wines.

This valley now attracts more than 3.5 million wine lovers a year and quickly bounced back after wildfires tore through it in 2017. Visitors are spoilt for choice when it comes to slick tours and tastings, while its quaint towns are stuffed with galleries, boutiques and bistros. Don't go there in search of a bargain tipple, though. Hotel rooms and organised tours start at $100 and signature cabernets are upwards of $50.

If you like the idea of a vine-themed getaway but fancy a more rustic experience, there are a wealth of possibilities closer to home. Wine tourism is booming – no longer the preserve of boffins who know their premier crus from their grand crus. For sublime scenery, it's hard to beat Portugal's Douro Valley or Germany's Moselle Valley, while you'll feel like you've stepped back in time sipping a dinky glass of fino in Andalusia's old-school taverns, or cycling through Burgundy's pretty villages.

SPAIN'S SHERRY TRIANGLE

Cádiz – Andalusia's sun-baked south-west corner – is sherry country, where timeless bars serve bone-dry finos, nutty olorosos and sweet amontillados. Most quintessentially Spanish is Jerez de la Frontera, above, where flamenco guitarists play late into the night in barrel-lined taverns called tabancos. The northern tip, Sanlúcar de Barrameda, is the birthplace of aromatic manzanilla, while the southern corner is El Puerto de Santa María – home to gorgeous Bodegas Osborne, which was set up by an Englishman in the 1770s.

RIDE THE RAILS IN THE DOURO

Although famous for port houses with British names, this Portuguese valley has a growing reputation for elegant red table wines. Yet the star attraction is the ravishing landscape: the vertiginous slopes are crisscrossed with neat terraces that plunge down to the fat, twisting river. Drink in the views at leisure by taking a trip on the single-track railway that hugs the river and meanders from picturesque Porto to a teeny village near the Spanish border – one of Europe's most beautiful train journeys.

CROATIA'S TUSCANY

Most tourists visit Istria – Croatia's strawberry-shaped north-westerly peninsula – for its craggy beaches and delightful coastal towns. Head inland and you'll find undulating vineyards, olive groves and hilltop medieval towns; its nickname is "new Tuscany". Soak up robust reds and fruity Malvasia Istrianas – the kingpin of Croatia's whites – with plates of the local pasta, garnished with truffles from oak forests. Hike or cycle between towns on the Parenzana trail, an old railway line.

BURGUNDY BY BIKE

Bordeaux might be the world's greatest wine region, but Burgundy offers a more bucolic experience thanks to its small family-run estates. The best way to explore it is by bike. Base yourself in Beaune, arm yourself with a baguette and a slab of comté cheese, and pootle along the Voie des Vignes (vine route) to gorgeous stone villages that produce some of France's most expensive crus: Pommard, Meursault, Chassagne-Montrachet, Santenay.

RIESLING COUNTRY BY RIVERBOAT

Germany's noblest wine region, the Rheingau, sits on the Rhine's sunny, south-facing slopes and produces floral, bright rieslings and velvety pinot noirs. Sprinkled with medieval castles and monasteries, this stretch is a highlight of Rhine river cruises and many itineraries also include the Moselle – its stunning tributary – which twists and turns past half-timbered villages and hilltop castles. The lush vineyards date back to Roman times and are so steep, the grapes are still picked by hand.

WINE AND WATER IN CANADA

Four hours' drive from Vancouver in British Columbia, Okanagan Valley offers expansive scenery: a sparkling 83 mile-long lake, hills carpeted in thick forest and endless sky. Before 200 vineyards sprang up here, this was ranch and orchard country, so the wineries serve fantastic farm-to-table menus with their crisp rieslings and sun-ripened reds. Work up a thirst exploring the lake's sheltered coves and bays in a canoe, sailing boat or powerboat.

SAVOUR SUSSEX'S BUBBLY

The soil in Sussex is similar to that of the Champagne region and its fizz has won a glut of international gongs in recent years. The Government has even granted it protected regional status. Named the UK's best winery last year, family-run Wiston Estate near Worthing does wonderful tours. Over in East Sussex, you can make a weekend of it by staying in a luxury shed in the UK's largest organic vineyard, Oxney Estate, or newcomer Rathfinny's Flint Barns B&B. Cut your council tax

You could be eligible for a council tax saving of £325 a year, says Paul Lewis

HOW LOUDLY DID you gulp (or swear) when your 2019/20 council tax bill thumped onto your doormat? This unloved tax has risen by around five per cent throughout Great Britain (in Northern Ireland, householders still pay rates). But millions could pay no tax or get a big reduction.

One of the least well known exemptions is for people with Alzheimer's, Parkinson's, dementia or the aftereffects of a stroke. They can all count as "severe mental impairment", and people with such conditions are exempt from council tax as long as they also qualify for a disability benefit (eg Personal Independence Payment or Attendance Allowance) and the condition has been certified by a doctor (who is not allowed to charge for doing this).

'Millions could pay no tax or get a reduction'

If the exempt person lives alone, their council tax falls to zero. If they live with one other person, that person counts as a "single person" and their council tax is reduced by a quarter – that means an average discount of around £325 a year. The single person's discount is for anyone who lives alone, but it often goes unclaimed. You also count as "living alone" if there are other people living with you who are all exempt. They include full-time students, student nurses and live-in carers – as well as people with mental impairments.

Councils must allow these exemptions to be backdated for as many years as you have qualified, but some try not to. Appeal if yours does. Claims are made to the council that sends the council tax bill. In Wales there is one form for severe mental impairment, covering all councils.

YOU MAY ALSO get a discount if your income is low. It is called "council tax reduction". The rules differ depending on where you live, but all have one common feature: as soon as you reach state pension age (from 7 May that is anyone born on 5 February 1954 or earlier), you'll qualify more easily and the reduction will be bigger. Council tax reduction cannot normally be backdated more than three months, and sometimes less.

For more information, go to your local council website or visit gov.uk and search "council tax".

LASTING POWERS OF ATTORNEY ONLY £399*pp

There may come a time when you are unable to make decisions for yourself, maybe through illness or injury. If that were to happen, who would make decisions about your care or manage your finances?

It's important you make your wishes clear in a legal document known as a Lasting Power of Attorney (LPA).

There are two types of LPA – one that covers your health and welfare and one that covers your property and financial affairs.

A health and welfare LPA deals with your medical care and can only be used once you become unable to make decisions for yourself.

A property and financial affairs LPA deals with financial matters, and can also be used while you still have full mental capacity, for example if you become frail or immobile.

If you're married and your partner becomes unable to make decisions, marriage does not give you the authority to make decisions on their behalf – you will only be able to do this if you're formerly appointed as an attorney.

READER OFFER – SAVE £250

For a limited time, Key Estate Planning is offering to create both your property and financial affairs LPA and your health and welfare LPA for £399. Offer ends 17 June 2019.

Key has a team of estate-planning specialists who can explain and arrange these documents. Key can also offer you a free no-obligation consultation and recommendation on wills and trusts, based on your circumstances and legacy objectives.

WHY A FUNERAL PLAN IS WORTH TAKING OUT!

There's never been a better time to get the right funeral plan for you

A funeral plan is a promise to deliver a funeral in the future, and when choosing a plan provider, you want one that you can trust. Arranging a funeral for a loved one can be extremely difficult, especially given the emotional stress many people are under when someone sadly passes away. A funeral plan can make this time that little bit easier. Furthermore, it will give you peace of mind knowing that your family won't be struggling to find all the funds needed to cover the services in the plan.

Radio Times has teamed up with Dignity, one of the UK's leading funeral experts. Dignity have already helped more than 824,000 people† plan for their funerals in advance and pride themselves on being there at one of the most difficult times of their lives.

The Dignity Funeral Plan lets you pay for your funeral in advance and at today's price. It is a way of taking control of the unexpected, setting out the arrangements and limiting the costs by paying for the services included in the funeral plan upfront. It's practical, sensible and should be a part of your end of life financial planning.

WHY PAY MORE FOR YOUR FUNERAL?
With a Funeral Plan from Dignity, once paid for, you will never pay more for the services included in the plan. Furthermore, your wishes are recorded and your loved ones will get all the support they need, 24 hours a day, 365 days per year so you can get on with enjoying life, knowing things are taken care of.

Having been given 5 Stars by Defaqto again in 2019, you can have the confidence that the Dignity Prepaid Funeral Plan is one of the most comprehensive and best quality funeral plans on the market today.

What's the origin of "tit for tat"? Ryan Stewart, via email

On the face of it, this 500-year-old expression makes no sense at all. Things become a little clearer once the original version is known – which was "tip for tap". Here, "tip" meant much the same as "tap" – a light touch or hit. Both words are probably onomatopoeic in origin. (This "tip", incidentally, may also be the one behind our modern sense of giving someone money, first recorded in the slang of criminals who might tap each other on the shoulder before imparting money or information.)

So it meant "blow for blow", then, or giving as good as you got. By the middle of the 16th century, the expression had morphed into "tit for tat". Over time it softened to include an exchange that was positive rather than exclusively a form of revenge.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

Good call, Casualty

FIRST LINE...
Ian (Michael Stevenson) answers emergency calls on Casualty

The 27 April episode of Casualty (Saturday BBC1) was one of the most moving programmes I have ever watched. Michael Stevenson was superb as Iain Dean, helping members of the public whose calls reached the ambulance control room. Genuine feelings were shown constantly in his facial expressions and his voice; he must have felt drained after completing each take.

It made you realise the importance of call centres such as the one depicted, and the dedication of the people who answer such calls on a daily basis. So thank you to all who do these jobs, and to the Casualty team for giving us, the public, some insight into their vital work.

Norah Holman Fleckney, Leicestershire

Norah Holman wins a Bose SoundLink Micro Bluetooth speaker, in either orange or black. This small but powerful speaker delivers unmatched sound for its size. With up to six hours' battery life, a silicone rubber exterior and a tear-resistant strap, it's portable, rugged and waterproof. RRP £99.95. bose.co.uk

...What a fantastically moving and insightful episode showing the complex nature of depression as well as the wonderful job done by the ambulance call centre personnel in aiding the young policewoman to avoid suicide.

Thank you to actor Michael Stevenson for his exceptional portrayal.

Jan Bartlett Bristol

...Ten out of ten for Michael Stevenson's performance in Casualty. Need I say more, other than he deserves an award!

EXEMPLARY READINGS

Jeremy Irons's readings from The Psalms over Easter (Radio 4) was a delight, giving a clear and intelligent interpretation of even the most opaque passages. Can I hope that the recordings might be made available commercially? I am sad that at the moment it seems as if they can only be heard again for the next month.

Jennifer Zarek Huggate, East Riding of Yorkshire

Jeremy Irons's Psalms are not currently available to buy, so if you missed them or would like to listen again via BBC Sounds, be quick – the first episode won't be available after 19 May.

WHERE'S THE GRIT?

Currently, we are spoilt for choice with TV dramas: of course, Line of Duty (BBC1) has set the gold standard with its great storylines, realistic feel and great acting; another, which has not had much publicity, was the excellent Chimerica (Channel 4), with an engaging story and excellent performances.

But then we have The Widow (ITV), which started off so well, but went downhill towards the final episode. Such a great storyline with much potential, but ruined by Georgia (Kate Beckinsale). She lost her suitcase at the airport, but somehow managed to look immaculate in hot and dusty central Africa: smart clothes changed regularly, hair perfect and not a bead of perspiration on her! So annoying and unrealistic, which ruined it for me.

The only questions remaining are where are all the boutiques she must have been visiting to maintain her chic style? And of course, how many hairdressers did she visit in the jungle?

The producers and directors of The Widow should learn from Line of Duty's Jed Mercurio. A good drama needs authenticity, otherwise it becomes annoying. In that, The Widow succeeded.

Clive Paul Exmouth

COME BACK, EDDIE!

NO, NO, NO! I suppose it's too late to persuade Eddie Mair to stay as an RT columnist? I had a nasty feeling this was coming when he went to LBC, but I'm still very unhappy. Please tell him: goodbye Eddie, thanks for all the laughs and don't tell me you are being replaced by Peston!

Amanda Smith Bishop's Stortford, Hertfordshire

Now that's an idea! We are running a series of guest columnists for the next few weeks and will announce a new regular radio voice later in the year.

SHOWING US THE WAY

I so enjoyed Planet Child (Wednesday ITV) and its premise that young children can be left to their own devices and live to tell the tale. I was amazed at the fact that Michi, a six-year-old Japanese boy, makes the long journey to school every day on his own and even more entranced that when he grows up he wants to be a famous fisherman (what else!).

I watched our secretly supervised little mites navigate their way via playgrounds and more interesting distractions to the London Eye with sheer admiration. They arrived safely clutching their prescribed souvenirs and joyously high-fived the instigator of their remarkable journey. This was very interesting viewing and surely does prompt the question of whether our children are protected too much. Allowing them some independence is a very valuable life lesson.

Judith Daniels Great Yarmouth, Norfolk

JOINT PRECEDENTS

In the RT 27 April–3 May Puzzles, one of the Pointless questions claimed that the word "muggle" originated in the Harry Potter books. In fact "Muggles" was a 1920/30s slang word for cannabis; it's also the title of a 1928 Louis Armstrong recording.

STREETS AHEAD

I've just finished watching the final episode of A House through Time (BBC2). David Olusoga and the production team have once again made a fascinating social history series. It was in turn profoundly moving and inspiring, yet never judgemental or patronising towards the actions and the lives of the people in the stories told, made all the more interesting by its clearly enthusiastic storyteller presenter.

I look forward to any future series of AHTT, or any further projects that the excellent Mr Olusoga is involved in.
N Hails via email

...We rearranged other plans so as not to miss the final episode of A House through Time, an excellent programme. The content is fascinating and we do hope there will be more in the series. David Olusoga is the ideal presenter, enthusiastic and sympathetic, but not dominating the scene as so many presenters do nowadays.
Peter Fisher Great Bourton, Oxfordshire
Good news – RT can exclusively reveal that a third series is indeed in the works. Commissioning editor Simon Young tells us: "A House through Time has swiftly become a treasured part of the schedule on BBC2. It's a vitally important returning series for us, perfectly reflecting our ambition for history programmes that connect the bigger sweeps of our nation's story to individual lives lived all over the country. Having visited houses in Liverpool and Newcastle in the first two series, I'm thrilled that David will delve into Bristol's rich history next."

REPUTATION!

Producer Sue Clark and presenter Tris Penna are to be congratulated on Definitively Dusty (14, 21, 28 April, Radio 2), a perfect three-part tribute series to Dusty Springfield, who died from breast cancer 20 years ago, at the age of only 59. To my mind, Dusty was the greatest female singer this country has ever produced and it was right and fitting for her life and career to have been celebrated in this way.

The tracks chosen and the interview extracts by Dusty herself, telling her story in her own words, were a revealing and riveting way of putting the programmes together, plus of course the input of all the contributors who played their part in Dusty's life. It was gloriously uplifting and wonderfully moving, and by the end I couldn't help but shed a tear. Thank you to everyone concerned.
Peter Walmsley London, SW8

SLINGS AND ARROWS

In The Archers (24 April, Radio 4), Elizabeth's mother said perhaps she should have done more to make her daughter more resilient.

I cannot understand why Elizabeth didn't reply: "Pardon? I was born with a hole in my heart, I had an affair with my father's first wife's married half-brother, I had to have an abortion because of that conman Cameron, when I did have children I had to cope with twins, my husband was killed falling off our roof (which my brother was responsible for), I had a fling with a younger man in a music festival tent and became a laughing stock, my daughter has hooked up with a married man who was deputy principal at her college and my son's just got out of prison for drug dealing in my business premises and home. I think I'm bloody resilient."
Ron Jacobs Farnham, Surrey

THE GREAT ESCAPE

Our family is loving this final series of The Durrells (Sunday ITV), and will miss it when it ends. Four years of sunshine and fun, where everything in the world seems possible!

Please could you tell me which cinema was used for Margo and Maud's visit in the Sunday 28 April episode?
Elizabeth Parry-Williams Chippenham, Wiltshire
The scene was filmed at the Phoenix Cinema in East Finchley in London, which is one of Britain's oldest purpose-built picture houses. The cinema, which opened in 1912, can also be seen in films such as Interview with a Vampire, Nowhere Boy and My Week with Marilyn. ▷

YOU ASK US

How do you give Daters space for romance?

I'd love to know how the people at the dining tables in First Dates (Tuesday C4) are filmed having conversations with each other. Is there a cameraperson standing next to them, recording everything they do and say? Or is it done by static cameras that are remotely controlled from a distance?
Frederick T Searle, Norwich

"There are no camera operators within the First Dates restaurant," explains executive producer Jon Crisp. "It is a 'fixed rig' setup, which means we film the daters using small remotely operated cameras positioned around the periphery of the restaurant.

"We try to ensure that these cameras are as unobtrusive as possible, so as not to distract the daters. It is important to us that they remember that this a real blind date in a real restaurant so they pay full attention to their date and hopefully enjoy some romance!"

FIND IT FRONTMEN

I'm a great fan of Find It, Fix It, Flog It (Channel 4), but I know nothing about presenters Henry Cole and Simon O'Brien. Can you tell us more?
Anne Bradford, New Barnet, Hertfordshire

Henry Cole and Simon O'Brien were paired up by Channel 4 in 2015, and quickly hit it off, despite their divergent backgrounds: Cole worked as a session drummer with rock bands and as a news cameraman in war zones before going on to direct TV commercials, and even a film starring Liz Hurley. He's married, and has two teenage sons and a dog, Jelly Bean.

O'Brien, meanwhile, used to be an actor – his first role was as Damon Grant in Brookside, and in the early 90s he starred in US sitcom Out All Night, alongside Patti LaBelle. A "hardcore environmentalist", O'Brien loves giving discarded objects a new lease of life, while Cole has a love of all things automotive.

Cole and O'Brien are currently filming the new series, to air later this year, but in the meantime you can see Cole – alongside Sam Lovegrove – in spin-off Find It, Fix It, Drive It (Wednesday, More4).

DAYTIME DUO
Presenters Henry Cole and Simon O'Brien

◁ HOLIDAYS ARE SPECIAL!

Looking at my RT (4–10 May), Bank Holiday Monday must have been cancelled. The daytime schedule still has the usual programmes – This Morning, Loose Women etc on ITV, and the BBC is no different.

Whatever happened to airing some special shows? Bring back Fred Quimby's Tom and Jerry, and Laurel and Hardy, I say!
Jan Sakeld Durham

SPIRIT OF THE 70S

Ghosts (Monday BBC1) is very entertaining, but am I the only person who remembers the 1970s Granada TV series The Ghosts of Motley Hall, where five generations of the Uproar family haunt the crumbling family home?

It was created by Richard Carpenter (Catweazle, Dick Turpin) and starred Arthur English, Freddie Jones, Nicholas Le Prevost and Sheila Steafel, with Peter Sallis as the timid estate agent Mr Gudgin. It was one of my great favourites as a youngster.
J Mark Oates Blackpool

MIRACLE MONARCH

Is it a coincidence that the sponsor of Victoria (ITV) is a well-known serum for smooth skin? Even after five children, not a blemish has appeared on the face of the monarch (played by Jenna Coleman, below).

I'm sure any mother would have aged just a little in her day, with maybe a wrinkle or two, but obviously this serum is working for her.
Wendy Hards Crediton, Devon

Wendy wins series one of Home, the Channel 4 sitcom about a Syrian stowaway who starts a new life in Surrey. It's available to buy for £14.99 incl p&p (RRP £19.99) from radiotimes.com/dvds20

The Deep State star watched Fleabag (sex scenes and all) with his sons

How do you watch TV?
In relative peace and quiet. My wife [actress Lucy Scott] and I live about 40 miles outside London in the Surrey hills, which is a bit like living in Scotland. I never thought I’d live in Surrey, I imagined it as large gated houses and golf courses, but it’s amazing. We live by a lake, for crying out loud.

Are you too busy going for walks to watch TV?
No, we watch a lot. We have a drop-down TV screen and a projector. We get the full cinema experience, but in the kitchen we have a good old standard-sized TV, which is less intimidating to watch.

Is TV a family affair at home?
Yes, I’ve got three boys in their mid- to late-teens, so there’s less of the “is that suitable?” question because they’re of an age where they can discern for themselves. It’s really interesting to watch with them as they’re more of a blank slate, and open to anything good.

What do you watch?
We got rather obsessed with Matt Berry’s Toast of London. Narcos was a big hit, as was Spiral and brilliant Paris-set cop thriller Braquo. I watched Fleabag with my eldest son – our jaws were on the floor about how good it is.

Fleabag has quite a few sex scenes, as does your recent show _Sex Education_. Were you happy for your sons to watch it?
The sex scenes in Sex Education come from a real place so they’re not gratuitous. When it came out I told my boys we were going to sit down and watch it. I knew it would resonate gloriously and I wanted to see it through their eyes. But they beat me to the punch – before I got home, they’d watched it on their laptops.

You were in _Night Manager_, series two of _Sex Education_ is on its way and this week you’re in _Deep State_. It’s not a bad time to be a TV actor…
When I was young I never aspired to a film career, I wanted to do TV. While I wasn’t a TV Nostradamus, I knew the power in television storytelling. I had a hunch that TV would elongate, that people would become less afraid to make a series more than six episodes long. It’s thrilling. KASIA DELGADO

Deep State is on Thursday 9pm Fox

NOTHING TO WATCH?

MY BOOK Rain by Barney Campbell, a wonderful novel set in Afghanistan.

MY FILM The Wife, with Glenn Close and Jonathan Pryce.

MY MUSIC My eldest son and I are big fans of Hans Zimmer, he’s so epic and orchestral. When we’re alone we’ll whack that on loud.
