
About the authors

Cheryl L. Cox, RN, PhD, is currently a research associate for the Department of Public Health Nursing at the University of Illinois, College of Nursing in Chicago. She received her MS from Vanderbilt University in Tennessee and her PhD from the University of Rochester, New York. Prior to receiving her PhD, Dr. Cox was Assistant Professor in the Family Nurse Clinician program at the University of Tennessee Center for Health Sciences in Memphis.

Gretchen Crawford, RN, PhD, is Assistant Professor of Community Health Nursing at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio. Dr. Crawford also received her BSN, MSN, and PhD in Nursing from Case Western Reserve University.

Geri L. Dickson, RN, MSN, received an associate degree from Milwaukee Area Technical College, her BS in Nursing, from Alverno College, Milwaukee, and her MSN in Nursing from Marquette University also in Milwaukee. She is currently Coordinator of the Learning Resource Center at the Milwaukee County General Hospital School of Nursing.

Mary L. Horan, RN, MSN, is a faculty member at Wayne State University in Detroit. She received her MSN from Wayne State University. She is currently a predoctoral student in clinical research nursing at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor.

Helena Lee-Villasenor, RN, MSN, received her BS in Nursing from Alverno College, Milwaukee and her MSN from Marquette University. She is currently a primary care clinician at Milwaukee County Medical Complex.

Judith S. McLaughlin, RN, CNA, is Associate Director of York County Health Services, Inc. She received her RN from the Mount Holyoke College. As a National Health Service Corps scholarship student in community health nursing at Boston University, she completed her master's degree. She has broad experience in clinical practice and administration of community health nursing programs in both community health agencies and ambulatory care clinics. Her interest lies in the development of health promotion programs for rural populations.

Janice M. Morse, RN, PhD, is currently Associate Professor at the University of Alberta in Edmonton, Canada. She completed her diploma of nursing at Grey Hospital School of Nursing, Greymouth, New Zealand. After working in England and New Zealand, she migrated to the United States where she received her BS in nursing and her MS in transcultural nursing from the Pennsylvania State University. Dr. Morse received her MA in physical anthropology, a PhD in transcultural nursing, and a PhD in physical anthropology from the University of Utah.

Marilyn M. Rawnsley, DNSC, RN, CS, received her BSN, from Saint Anselm's College, Manchester, New Hampshire, her MS in Adult Psychiatric Nursing and her Doctor of Nursing Science both from Boston University. She is ANA certified as a clinical specialist in psychiatric/mental health nursing and maintains a small private practice as well as several consultation positions. She is currently Associate Professor of Nursing at the New York University.