RESIDENCY PROGRAM IN NURSING ADMINISTRATION

Planners at the Presbyterian Hospital have developed a residency program for nurses interested in hospital management. Scheduled to begin October 1, 1983, the residency program in nursing administration offers the participant a variety of valuable experiences. During the 1-year residency program, qualified nurses will learn organizational structure, administrative strategies, financial management, and corporate problem-solving skills. Nursing will be viewed as a subsystem within the hospital complex. The residency program will also provide the nurse with exposure to small hospital administration. The Presbyterian Hospital residency program provides a holistic understanding of the health care industry. It was developed to answer the needs of those who aspire to management positions and seek experience that academics alone cannot offer. The residency program is open to master's-prepared nurse applicants, and a stipend is available.
