SPECIAL THANKS TO:

Our Eric for the funniest moment of the year so far – Ooh-Aah. You're dead right love! Andy Cole for effectively winning the lottery (although it isn't him doing the gambling!). Still on football (what a surprise), congratulations to the Mighty Clarets (that's Burnley apparently) for drawing 0-0 with Liverpool but probably getting stuffed in the replay. To Jimmy 'out' Mullen for selling John Deary to Rochdale for peanuts and still insisting on picking Alan (useless old git) Harper every week. To the snow for coming down when we want to go home. To the flu for allowing Neil to have two days off and making him go all funny and shivery (er, what's new there??)

Kingpin

Team 17 are the boys for excellent demos at the moment. Following on from ATR last month we have this special disk. Kingpin is their new Ten Pin Bowling game, previewed everywhere but coverdisked (erm) here. Play five sets in a single player game, then buy the real thing!

ALIEN BREED 3D

Now this may be a rolling demo (not playable to you and me), but it provides a rare and exclusive insight into one of the most eagerly awaited games for a long time. Five(ish) minutes are packed into this demo from Team 17, and during that time you are shown around the locations and dungeons, accompanied by a pumping soundtrack. If you want Doom for the Amiga, (and who doesn't), then you have to see this. Who said it wasn't possible? Shoot them immediately.

VALHALLA: BEFORE THE WAR

To complete our wonderful line up this month is yet another exclusive. Despite ridiculously bad reviews in some magazines we liked Valhalla and so did the Amiga public. Now we bring you an exclusive demo of the follow up. There are more puzzles to solve, and if you enjoyed the last one you'll adore Before the War. Turn to the coverdisk pages for all the help you'll need to play all the demos this month.

Stop! Don't flick through the magazine any further until you've read these pages, because you really are in for an absolute treat this month. Every so often a game comes along which takes everyone by surprise, and in 1994 this game was Valhalla - the selfproclaimed World's First Speech Adventure. In fact, only the mighty SWOS stopped it from becoming our official game of the year. Valhalla: Before the War is the follow-up, and once again you can check out its glories for yourselves in our massive best-part-of-a-full-level exclusive demo. Before that however is the slight matter of Disk One, featuring the latest instalment in Team 17's Alien Breed series - a long, long rolling demo of AB3D, an ultra-fast first person perspective shoot'emup that might well be a cross of Doom and Wolfenstein. It's absolutely awesome, as too is the second demo on this disk - the fully playable and wickedly addictive Ten Pin bowl'em-up, Kingpin. All exclusive to Amiga Action, all magically delicious, and all awaiting that special loading touch that only you can provide.

Alien Breed

Team 17 (A1200 only)

mut Disk One in the drive and select Game One. Wait for a while and the demo loads...

From its humble origins as an atmospheric overhead shoot'em-up in 1991, Team 17's Alien Breed series has gone from strength to strength, and its name is now synonymous with Amiga quality. This second proper sequel breaks away from tradition, adopting a first person perspective somewhat akin to Doom.

Marvel at the speed! Gasp at the huge monsters!

Gaze in wonder at the magnificent backgrounds!

Lust for blood at the sight of heavy weaponry!

Unfortunately this particular demo is reluctant (in that it point blank refuses) to run on an A4000, but that shouldn't worry too many of you, and it will work on the Super Amiga by the time it's done.

Remember, you saw it here first.

Kingpin

Team 17 (AGA Machines)

nsert Disk One into the drive and this time (gasp!) select Game Two before pressing [RETURN]. After a few moments the screen will turn blue and you'll be welcomed to the game, all friendly like. It's another exclusive, another Team 17 demo, and once again another stonker. Full details of the game can be gleaned from the review on page 28, but here's the score with the demo.

It's a scaled down one-player game which allows you to play five sets (half a full game), as a right-handed man using a 14 pound ball.

Set the power to whatever level you desire by means of the meter to the right of the screen, and then press [FIRE] to set the aim pointer in motion. Press again to let the ball go, and after releasing your finger from the button, push left or right to add a touch of spin and thus affect the trajectory.

When the skittles have been... skittled, the machine will set them up again, and the game computer will suggest where you should aim your next shot for maximum damage. Take heed or ignore, repeat the process, and hey! - you're playing Kingpin.

Note that only limited sound effects are included in this demo, and one or two very small glitches may appear in the graphics.

Valhalla Before the War

Vulcan Software (All Amigas with 1Mb)

Insert Disk Two in your drive and this huge, featurepacked demo of V:BTW loads up all on its own, because it's clever like that. It's kind of a prequel to the original, (in fact it is!),

Control is via the joystick. Walk around and either look at, pick up or use things with the appropriate icons by bringing them up with a quick tap of the fire button. In fact, here are those icons in full:

MAP tells you where you are at any given point in the game enables you to look at things and find out what they are

PICK UP/DROP well, what do you think?

and again...

MOUTH turns off all nonessential speech.

If you're really stuck, then kind souls that we are, we'll provide a handy walk through guide to help you out next month. But do yourself a favour and give it a decent bash first.... we're sure you'll like it.

THE VERY LATEST ON THE COMMODORE BUYOUT

First word

Hello.

Er, we have a lot of previews for you this month. Yes, it's that time of year when game releases are a bit thin on the ground, a time when software companies sit back and take stock of their position and decide which dazzling product to inspire us with next. A time when people like me have to make masked apologies for the lack of games in the magazine, in between phone calls to MooseSoft in Tibet in a vain attempt to get something, anything, in for review. A time when only me and Steve are able to put in a full month's attendance due to a flu bug and the pathetic genetics of the rest of the team! But of course we aren't bitter. Not us...

PAUL

They think it's all over...

Some people at Commodore had signed some stuff! That's about as descriptive as it was, so we called our mates down there to see what was happening. Unfortunately the whole world was sick with flu, but we eventually got through to the UK Amiga Information Hotline, which has been set up for people like us to ring and find out all the latest gossip. Anyway, the last message was going on about the UK management team expecting to sign the purchase contract for the Worldwide Assets of Commodore with the liquidator very soon, initiating the bidding procedure in the US courts. It also went on to say that the management were very confident of getting it through.

Put two and two together and it sounds like the contracts have more or less been signed, so we'll have a lot more to tell you next month. At least we wouldn't be shot in the army for spreading rumours!

Rent boys

If ow do you fancy a shop that will not only sell you the latest games but will also rent them out and even part exchange your old ones for new? Well, if you live in Shirley near Birmingham, you'll know exactly what it's like, because the first Microplay store launched its first UK outlet there in November.

Microplay is an American success story with nearly 130 such shops in the States. And now that they've got a foothold in the UK market, they are hoping to reach the same level of dominance in this country with an expected 15 stores to be opened by the end of the year.

"The latest game release can be hired from Microplay, and if it matches up to the youngster's expectations they can then buy it without fear. Once they no longer want the game we can part-exchange it for a new game or cash. The partexchange programme also applies to games not purchased from Microplay."

Sounds good to us. Watch out for a store opening near you soon.

Bubble Gun

scouring the shelves of your local games store recently for Daze's crocodile fest Bubble Gun following our superb exclusive cover disk and review a couple of months back, you will unfortunately have been so far severely disappointed.

This is because the company responsible for the game, Weathermine Software, have decided to go it alone and market the game themselves, and thus make a great deal more profit in the process no doubt. The game will surely find a niche market for itself.

seeing as it is quite an enjoyable platformer, and more than reasonably priced.

Means that the game will now only be available through mail order from the boys themselves at the exceptional bargain price of £6. If you fancy getting hold of a copy, all you need to do is write to: Weathermine Software, 328 Kingston Rd, Leatherhead, Surrey, KT22 7QE, and send them a cheque (or postal order) for £6 made payable to Weathermine Software. Then they'll sort you out with a copy.

ZEEWOLF FOLLOW-UP ... BASKETBALL VIDS

Numerical sequentiality

It has emerged that Binary Asylum, responsible for one of the most successful shoot'em-ups of last year, Zeewolf, are already working on a sequel. Cunningly entitled Zeewolf 2, the game will see some major improvements over their first effort.

To begin with, the programmers have taken note of all the minor criticisms that they have received and completely overhauled the original. This means that weapons will now no longer lock on to vehicles that you have already destroyed, destroyed buildings and vehicles will no longer appear on the scanner, and all those other niggling little problems that frustrated you will disappear along with them.

The major difference will be the opportunity to control plenty of other different types of vehicle as well as the helicopter that you're used to. Patrol boats, jeeps and the like will make an appearance to give the game far more versatility in a way that will make Zeewolf 2, to quote Binary Asylum's Andy Smith, "like Jungle Strike, but much better."

It all sounds promising and should be something to look forward to later in the year.

WIN SOME BAZZY VIDS! For some reason - or at least if the response to our last competition of this sort is anything to go by - AA readers seem particularly interested in basketball. So, once again we offer you the chance to get your hands on some of the finest slam dunkin' action ever captured on video. We're offering to you hot off the presses (or wherever they're made), basketball videos to the first 10 lucky blighters who can prove they know a thing or two.

NBA Rewind and Clutch City from Fox Video feature some of the fastest, slickest and downright bizarrest action from classic NBA games, and all you have to do to win a copy is fill in the missing

THALION RELEASE,... CORE NEWS... SHARC SQUAD

Core! A big red one at Commodore HQ is the lack of 'meaty' products that are in development for our very most favourite machine. Seemingly gone – hopefully temporarily – are the days when we could reasonably expect at least one decent state of affairs the lack of that are in nost favourite – hopefully then we could to one decent a dventure game a month, but adventurers have had to rely heavily on rereleases and compilations just recently.

Therefore it's good to know that Core Design are gearing themselves up for the release of The Big Red Adventure, already out on PC and rumoured for release soon on the Amiga.

It's being developed by Dynabyte, programmers of the good-but-never-quite-made-it-to-the-shops Nippon Safes Inc., and er, Late Night Sexy TV Show.

Nippon Safes Inc. – Doug Nuts, Dino Fagoli and Donna Fatale – BRA is set in what remains of the present day Soviet Union and centres around a communist plot to reclaim the 'old Russia' and turn it into commie land again. It isn't strictly speaking going to be a feast of historical accuracy, more a comedy adventure whereby you play the role of all three characters in turn in an attempt to prevent an evil doctor from reanimating Lenin. Not entirely sure what time scale we're talking about, but let's hope it's soon, because the evidence here (these PC screenshots we've managed to scrape together) suggests it might be good.

More amber nectar

The older members of our readership may remember that, what seems like 15 or so years ago, we reviewed Thalion's excellent Amberstar follow-up, Ambermoon, fully expecting, as indeed were Thalion, that the game would be released the following month. Well it wasn't, but it is still on the way, as indeed is another game – provisionally entitled Fire Team Alpha – using the same impressive engine.

Played from the familiar 3D perspective, Fire Team Alpha puts you in control of a crack four man team of do-gooders as they embark upon various dangerous missions.

Apparently you will be able to control each man separately or the team as a whole, and Thalion are adamant that their game will take you beyond the usual dungeony confinements and into the open air.

We're promised it'll be quick, and it's likely to be out soon after Ambermoon. Which is set for release "soon". Hmm...

The game that bites

When you are told that the best thing to ever happen to the computer world is about to take place, you generally take it with a pinch of salt. And that's exactly what we did when a Mr. Alan Briggs arrived at our stand at the World of Amiga Show with a press release that sounded pretty spectacular to say the least.

Out of interest we gave him a call when we got back to our cosy northern hidey-hole and, with a refreshing difference, this guy was keen. SHARC Squad was going to revolutionise the CD32 he said, and we started to believe him.

A factor in this was the news that Commodore (or Amiga or whatever they're called), are planning to combine the title with their new FMV module for the CD32 when it is released in May. The Full-Motion-Video card has been promised for many months, but a date is now actually on the cards.

SHARC Squad's inclusion in the package is set to propel it into many a home in 1995. But why is it going to be so ideal?

Well, Briggs reckons he's developed a system so good that major Hollywood producers are interested in it. The kind of brash quote you'd expect to come away with after a conversation with him goes along the lines of, "I've just been watching clips of the new movie Stargate to see if any of their special effects are better than ours, and to be honest, they're not!"

And who are we to argue? Alan Briggs' credentials are there for all to see. As a retired Hollywood movie producer himself, he knows more about films than most people have forgotten, and he has set out with SHARC Squad to come up with the ultimate in interactive entertainment.

Briggs makes no bones about his product by saying it is not a game, but an interactive movie. PC games of this ilk have had a bit of a bashing in recent months for being fancy but having no real gameplay, but the storyline based around killing a terrible undersea creature at least sounds quite promising.

The game will come on multiple CDs and filming is due to start any minute now. Watch out for a full feature in next month's issue of Amiga Action.

The Alien Breed series has not only firmly established Team 17 as one of the country's top Amiga software publishing houses, it has also demonstrated the power of the Amiga as a games machine. Team 17's Media Manager, Alan Bunker, talks us through the history of Breed and its importance to the company, as well as telling us all about the next in the series, the much gossiped about Alien Breed 3D. Take it away, Alan...

Alien Breed 3D, set to prove to the doubters that games of this ilk are not only possible on the Amiga, but capable of being every bit the equal of other formats.

Assault - what a wally!

ong before I joined Team 17, I was a member of a certain Amiga games magazine. I once had the privilege of reviewing a game from a then not-sofamous company - the game was Alien Breed, the company was Team 17. Little did I know at the time that this was to signify the dawn of a new leading force in Amiga games publishing, and more interestingly, the dawn of a series of games which would grip Amiga owners firmly by the balls and confidently state time and time again, "I'll be back!"

And Alien Breed did come back. In fact, Alien Breed has been reincarnated four times so far with another one on the way. It's a growing family with a captive and appreciative audience.

By the time I left Amiga Action (yes, I had the dubious privilege of working with someone who thinks he is a chicken and refers to himself as such), I had also reviewed and raved over Alien Breed '92, a kind of wide-screen version of the original Breed - it had more levels and more futuristic action and mayhem. It was now that Alien Breed became an institution - a benchmark. AB '92 smashed Gallup records, remaining at Number One in the Amiga software charts for 33 weeks, and even today, it still proudly holds that record.

Alien Breed II followed. Then Alien Breed Tower Assault polished off the love affair we all have with Breed. Breed had grown beyond belief, and it has to be said, is responsible for a large share of Team 17's success.

But why does Breed hold so much appeal? What are the thoughts of the major players involved with the Breed games? Just how important has Breed been to Team 17? And of course, what about the new Breed which everyone is talking about, Alien Breed 3D?

The first roots of inspiration surely derive from Atari's spectacular coin-op, Gauntlet. This was an outstanding top-down frenetic blaster for up to four players. You had to find keys to open doors, potions to restore energy, and then escape via the distant exit. The violence was non-stop and the explosive sounds pounded the eardrums while speech crackled over the top. As you can tell, the similarities are there (although it has to be said that the speech and music in Breed are much better and hugely influential in creating the atmosphere).

Gauntlet sparked a number of home computer spin-offs - Electric Dreams' Dandy, Firebird's Druid, Pandora's Into The Eagle's Nest, the bizarre Ranarama from Hewson, and of course, an official coin-op conversion by US Gold. In 1991, Alien Breed rekindled the fire but with a more up-to-date, contemporary setting space. Sorry? What was that? Inspired by the Alien movies? Er, no, don't be silly!

The initial thoughts and ideas for Alien Breed came from graphic artist Rico Holmes, who was to take up the challenge of designing and bringing to life the game's inhabitants. Rico explains, "My inspiration for Alien Breed came from playing both Rebel Squad on the Spectrum and Paradroid on the C64. I wanted something that took the atmosphere of Rebel Squad and the action and puzzle elements of Paradroid." And we all remember Rebel Squad, don't we?!

"The finished game of Alien Breed was better than first anticipated", adds Martyn Brown, Team 17's Creative Director and two legged dromedary. "This was because I made the decision to go 100 per cent for a one meg only game. This made everything more colourful and much slicker, especially the sound, which was in itself a massive contribution to the overall atmosphere of the game.

"The Special Edition '92 version came about because I felt that the game was so popular - it warranted it. This was much against the feelings of Rico I might add! I actually fell we made a few design errors in the original Breed, the game contained too few levels and they were too hard. The original Breed had only six levels

Trivia #1

We all know Allister Brimble is responsible for the superb Breed sound effects, but did you know it's his mother, Lynette Reade, who provides the sultry speech?

Traging there the disame on the Amiga...'

Kenny Grant, PRODUCER

Debate is still raging as to whether the weapons should appear in front of you on screen

"The response to Special Edition was phenomenal, and personally I was very satisfied with the balance of Special Edition."

This comment is vindicated with the popular specialist press remarking at the time, 'If you enjoy a good shoot'em-up, they don't come better than this.'"

Continues Martyn, "We didn't charge full whack for Special Edition because it was essentially the same game with more levels. And since the original sold poorly (in comparison with what we thought it should have done), we thought we would try it at a lower price. We also did this with Tower Assault although it cost a bit more because we spent six to seven months developing the title – Tower Assault was nearly a complete rewrite in the end."

Not long after Special Edition '92 stormed the stores, rumours began to circulate about a full blown sequel. The rumours soon escalated, but in actual fact, Alien Breed II did not emerge for another 12 months.

"The demand was such after the phenomenal sales of ABSE '92 that it was inevitable Alien Breed II would happen", concedes Martyn. "But the team took a year off to do Superfrog, an entirely different game, so things didn't go stale."

Says Rico, "If you have had success with a game you've enjoyed doing, you really don't want to see it get dated. There is also the aspect of having things in mind while producing a game when you realise that you just have to call a halt on things if you ever want to see it go to market. Whatever game anybody does, there's always something more you can add."

Within the walls of Team 17, Alien Breed II is much respected, but there's a realisation among everybody here that it didn't quite hit the nail on the head. Martyn explains why, "Alien Breed II didn't have the balance and the feeling of the earlier games, and it lost the strategy. We did Tower Assault because I wanted to close the file on the Breed games with a massive, enhanced, perfectly balanced version which didn't play in a linear fashion – to appeal to all the input we've had from the public over the previous three years.

"I was very pleased with Tower Assault, especially as none of the original team worked on it – it gave it an amount of freshness and we balanced the game out well."

Tower Assault was, yet again, a Breed game produced by Swedish talent. Stefan Boberg (coder) is also the man responsible for the widely used LHA compression system, while 16 year-old Tony Senghore modernised and adapted the graphics. And the original Breed team? Well, Rico and Andreas Tadic (coder) were working on King Of Thieves. I say 'were' because KOT has now been dropped and the dynamic Swedish do of Holmes and Tadic are set to begin working on another project which, at this moment in time remains top secret!

After numerous Breed games, has it become a bind for Martyn and the rest. No, it's never been a bind. If it was, we wouldn't have kept on drive

it. If there isn't the enthusiasm for a project, then we will not work on it", says Martyn. "The games have been fairly well spread about and the last version was done by another team, so the original programmers didn't really work on all versions and therefore get tired.

"The series has also been very kind to ourselves, the development team, and we hope it's kept a lot of players happy – which suits us all down to the ground. I do think you have to be very careful about the thin line that means (a) you've done enough, leave it at that, and (b) overkill. I think four games in four years is (a). Breed has its fans and we are here to give gamers what they want, hence the latest version."

Currently in development and a major attraction at the recent World Of Amiga Show held at Wembley is Alien Breed 3D. Doom on PC gripped the world and transfixed the majority of the population to glaring monitors, and at Team 17, excitement is in the air and expectations are high for Alien Breed 3D – everyone is confident that this will be the best Doom style game on Amiga.

The game's producer, Kenny Grant, explains why he thinks Alien Breed 3D will lead the way on Amiga and CD32, "I've seen nearly every game of this genre whether it be PD or commercial in conclusion, I found these produce to be disappointingly unrealistic in respect to the conclusion of the playability depends and the playability depends and all of study will shock, and will store to the second disapplies of the possibility of the second and applies of playable form on the Amiga that their pessimism is totally unwarranted."

In a way, Alien Breed 3D happened by 'accident'. Martyn Brown once more takes the reigns, "We were talking initially about doing a Breed 3D for PCs only, but then Doom got released and so we thought there was no point bothering. Then I was reading through some stuff on the 'Net and read a message by a maths guru at York University. We met, and after I saw his stuff, it was obvious that it could be done on the Amiga, and Breed 3D could live after all.

"Breed fans can expect the best elements from the previous game with the idea that they are being hunted in a 3D universe, a universe that is completely texture mapped and features many breathtaking effects. It's a complete departure from the original in terms of looks, but the atmosphere of being there is greatly enhanced. It's also the closest that the Amiga will come to Doom."

The features list for Breed 3D is immense, looking like the credits list at the end of a Hollywood blockbuster, and some of the main game aspects to enthuse over are as follows...

First and foremost, Alien Breed 3D will feature over 20 levels of super-smooth, 360 degrees 3D movement - no jerks, no 45 degreeonly turns. We are talking full rotational character movement without sporadic jumping.

The graphics, as Martyn has said, will be fully texture mapped and Gouraud shaded. The enemy will consist of aliens as well as a host of other grisly bad guys out to chew your ass. The intelligence of the Breed is something we are working hard to get just right - they will not just aimlessly wander about the gloomy corridors of the 3D environment, they will be able to hear you and thus seek you out through sound.

Someone said something to me about a splitscreen two-player mode. I got very moist. Then some weeks later, someone said to me, 'Don't be silly, that can't be done.' I got very tearful. But there will be a two-player mode, albeit via a serial link. And the great news is that you only need one copy of the game to play via link-up rather than having to buy two versions - yes, you'll be able to back-up your disks and enter into simultaneous two-player co-operative mode straight from the off!

That's not all either. Nah! For the finished Breed 3D is destined to have a vivacious and downright violent Doom style head-to-head twoplayer mode where players pelt around a level, picking up all manner of firepower, first aid kits, and so on. Then you 'simply' track down your opponent and blast them into that other place. known as oblivion! The person who notches up. the most kills wins the match.

A full screen display will envelop the players, drawing them into their eerie, futuristic surroundings. At the moment, the tensioninducing background throbbing that has become an integral part of the Breed atmosphere is also incorporated into Breed 3D. It's very John Carpenter-like – all that's missing is a bald cook staggering around and muttering, '...pure evil." beyond human understanding'.But I can't imagine a Jamie Lee Curtis cameo appearance

In addition, look out for 'real-time inversekinematic objects'. According to those in the know, (ie Team 17's Marcus Dyson), this means the creatures in the game act individually and realistically as part of a model, as though in reallife. So, for example, if you were to move your foot, this would automatically affect the rest of the leg as though the in-game character had bones in the body. Every movement realistically affects the rest of the body... and if there are people out there who don't understand that, then all enquiries should be directed in Marcus's direction 'cos he explains it so wonderfully well!

Programmer Andy Clitheroe has his work cut out. This is his first commercial product and one of Team 17's most ambitious Amiga projects ever undertaken. But everyone firmly believes that Alien Breed 3D will start tongues wagging and mouths drooling.

Alien Steed 33 will be available in April or May of this year for ACA and CO11 machines, and will tetail artful office. Amen Action will no doubt keep you to up to date over the next month or two, so took out for more information and news within these pages

And the final say has to go to Team t Greative Disector Visityr Brown the source the company's ideas and the man who call the essence of Team 17, "Nien Breen steps is Definitely. Yes., it stops. I'll put my war als lives (Monty and Floyd) on the statement that Breed 3D is the tash ever Antiga game of its ill Although that's not lorsay the game will an resurrate in abother lorin on another platforn another year..." Winning a CD32 couldn't be simpler. Just engage your mind in coming up with a witty, intelligent, downright magnificent name for Thalion's forthcoming beat'em-up bonanza, and walk away with the top prize

You see, if you can come up with a suitable name for said violence fest, you're in with a chance of winning a CD32 along with a finished copy of the game (which incidentally will be CD only). Not only that, but you'll get the smug satisfaction of being able to point at the box in your local software emporium and gloat to all your mates about how that was your idea.

We don't really know what we're looking for to be honest, so we can't really give you much help as to what lines to aim along. The only advice we can give you is to be sensible. At first, you'll scan, track and shoot down the slower UFOs, but that will just be the beginning. Whenever a UFO crashes, or lands, you must be there; leading a squad of armed soldiers from building to building, from street to street, using all your tactical skills to capture or destroy the aliens.

If you succeed in your first missions, your scientists and engineers will copy the alien technology to create more powerful weapons and craft for your forces to use. Gradually, you'll build up a terrifying picture of this Unknown Enemy, and their real aims and desires, then you'll have to work out a strategy to stop them.

One thing is certain - it won't be easy!

Every game in Amiga Action is given the mark we feel it deserves. Computer games are awn Patrol - well, it's certainly a refreshing change from the usual mindless games that come through our offices. But unfortunately, after I'd played it for a while, it became clear just why software companies abandoned the field, because flight sims really have been done to death on this format.

You may think that can't be so because the PC flight sim market continues to expand, but the difference is that PC technology is constantly evolving whereas the Amiga, for whatever reason, has remained static. Hopefully, when the new owners of Commodore finally get into place, machines will begin to emerge that will breathe new life into a tired genre. But until then, there really isn't much point in bothering.

However, maybe I've jumped the gun a little, because if you take Dawn Patrol as a case on its impressive thing is the packaging. If you're a fan of lavish presentation (which I am), then you're going to be more than happy with Empire in this instance. The disks are supplied in an enormous box with a particularly stirring image of a dogfight on the front, and there are lots of gold embossed bits to make it stand out on the shelf. Take the lid off and yet more delights await you.

Three books lurk inside, two not so interesting and one a little more fascinating if you like that kind of thing. One is a technical supplement to help you get things up and running, one is a user guide (very nicely presented but a little bland), and finally there's a limited edition book from the Famous Flyers series. Entitled Manfred Von Richthofen: The Man and The Aircraft he Flew, the book charts the flying career of the infamous Red Baron, German Flying ace and the man bestowed with the ever so slightly macabre title of World War One Ace of Aces, an honour he earned for killing more people than any other pilot during the period. I don't profess to have read the book at all because the subject matter doesn't really interest me that much, so I can't tell you how good or accurate the textual content is, but there are some pretty nice pictures if that's any use. All this serves well to set the tone for a particularly engaging flight sim.

Up-tiddley-up...

Never having experienced war first hand I'm certainly no expert, but it has always seemed a little strange to me that aerial combat during the period seems to be looked upon through rose coloured glasses. For instance, there's a quote on the back of the box from a Major McCudden V.C. who says, "As long as I live I shall never forget my admiration for the German pilots." Why is that mate? Surely they've just spent the last four years trying to blow you out of the sky for God's sake. Get hating them my son.

Anyway, this camaraderie is what Dawn Patrol attempts to recreate. Obviously, given the time period, there are no fancy radars or cluster bombs to help in the heat of battle, so you'll just have to rely upon your machine guns, your wits and your stiff upper lip to get you through.

The graphics are quite nice but not really that detailed. They more than serve their purpose, but given the supposed specs of the A1200, you perhaps could have expected something a little more than this. However, there are plenty of different views to mess around with, including some especially handy lock modes to allow you to keep the target in view at all times.

The main crux of the game obviously lies in the flying part itself, and Empire don't disappoint on that score. Over 150 historically accurate missions have been lovingly programmed to allow you to experience the whole range of World War One missions, from dogfighting to Balloon Busting, each with a full mission briefing to keep you fully informed.

If it wasn't for the concerns I voiced earlier then it would be quite difficult to find fault with Dawn Patrol, as it has all the essential aspects of a great game in abundance.

Excitement, atmosphere and realism have all been catered for, and the packaging is a dream. If it hadn't been done several times before then it would be just about perfect, but as it stands, it's just a good game that provides a welcome break from the endless round of shoot'em-ups, platformers, RPG and strategy games that we have to look at. awn Patrol is a good, solid flight sim the like of which we don't see round these parts much anymore, and to be honest, it's a more than welcome change. However, Johnnie Cynical that I am, I do have one or two concerns, mainly in the "it offers nothing new" area. High quality presentation will no doubt provide a high return in financial terms, and Empire deserve full marks for effort, but I feel that the games could have perhaps been a little more adventurous. 10 out of 10 for the packaging, but unfortunately only eight for the game itself.

It takes an intelligent person to review a good puzzle game. We couldn't find anyone so we let Paul Roundell have a go f you used to watch the early 80's hit TV show Hi-De-Hi ("Ho-De-Ho!" ah... sweet memories), then you may remember the... I suppose you'd have to call him Reserve Comedian. Spike, his name was - played more than ably by the now not-exactly-snowed-under-with-offersof-work Jeffrey Holland, who, for my money, was the backbone of this most hilarious of British institutions.

Well Spike had a catchphrase - as all good comedians do - a phrase he uttered with wideeyed melodrama at moments of impending disaster. This oral outburst could usually be relied upon to make an appearance when, for instance, jovial spiv Ted Bovis had indulged in one too many gins at the camp bar and was in danger of being found in a state of inebriation by the ruthless taskmaster Joe Maplin, or perhaps when Peggy the maid had inadvertently spoiled dancer Yvonne's ball gown in an innocent drain cleaner accident, or when Gladys was about to walk in on what she was sure to mistake for an intimate tetea-tete between her beloved Mr. Fairbother and buxom yellowcoat, Sylvia.

What Spike did in situations such as these was to stand stock still, stare straight ahead, and in low, clear tones, say, "Oh dear. Oh dear, oh dear. Oh dear, oh dear, oh dear."

Not Zonked Now

The premise is simple: you are the small bloke on the screen, and all around you are various objects which will help, and in turn hinder your progress to the exit or exits that will be located somewhere tricky. X-it (it was due to be called Zonked but the name has been changed, so don't hold your breath for that), is mostly about moving blocks of varying properties and densities around. Watch out though, there are a number of holes and nogo areas into which you or your blocks can fall or indeed become stuck.

The properties of the blocks determine their manoeuvrability and this in turn determines where you can... well, move them to. I think I'm over-complicating matters here. Look, there are things: glue, water, ice, switches and the like that need to be used in a way that will allow blocks to be put in an optimum position. There are bombs

Basically, it's a puzzle game! One of those things where you shift stuff around to get to an exit and therefore the next of the dozens upon dozens of levels. V-it is, on the whole, a well put together puzzle Agame which borrows elements from just about everywhere to serve its purpose. And rightly so, because the net result is an enjoyable if not particularly graphically-overawing experience that should go some way towards satiating those who are still waiting for The World of Lems to reach the shops. On the downside, it doesn't exactly sell the Amiga's capabilities, and at a time when we should be looking to the future, would be - with all due respect - better suited to a budget price point.

Flink prances around with joy at the prospect of starring in his very own CD32 game

> A determined Flink makes a leap of faith with the prospect of a spike up his bottom

D32 platformers have never been thin on the ground. It's one of the few areas where gamesplayers on this format haven't been neglected, although the quality of most of the software has been somewhat dubious to say the least. Previous efforts have either been dire, in the case of Oscar, or ports of quality computer based games such as Out to Lunch and Fury of the Furries.

Flink therefore is something of a novelty. It's a good game and the CD32 is the first format that it's appeared on. Psygnosis have been going through a bad patch lately, and expectations weren't high for this. However, after half an hour's play I was pleasantly surprised.

The first thing I noticed was the graphics – far better than the average, albeit in a youngish sort of way. In fact at first, I was under the impression that the game had been designed with younger players in mind, as it seemed far too easy.

The levels are all quite short and the first few are not what you would call taxing. Don't be fooled though, although the learning curve is quite shallow, the game itself is huge and carries you along on an increasingly difficult wave.

After a couple of hours spent hunched over the controls I found that I was beginning to struggle considerably on the later levels, and the option for the number of continues allowed was quickly bumped up to the maximum.

Because the game is so large, this is an essential feature. If it hadn't been included (there is even an option for unlimited continues), then the chances of anyone ever finishing the game would be small if not impossible.

I can't tell you how many levels there are for certain, but from what I can gather, there are five. That might not sound like a lot, but when you consider that each large level is divided up into 15 or so smaller sub-levels you begin to get a better idea of the whole picture.

It is possible to make use of certain extra springy leaves to access previously unreachable levels. You can also take advantage of rocks that are lying around

The map screen charts your progress around the many levels of the game

The game is set on the fictional island of Imajica, where up until now the inhabitants have lived a peaceful and happy life casting spells and enjoying the uncommonly pleasant weather. Who has disrupted their peaceful utopia? Wicked Wainwright, that's who.

An evil wizard (the aforementioned Mr. Wainwright), has captured the four wise rulers of Imajica in a dastardly bid to take over the island. He has transported the wise rulers' spirits into four hidden crystals and scattered them throughout the island. And to make things worse, Wainwright's volcano headquarters have begun to belch dark clouds of smoke across the land, bringing even more unhappiness to the people.

Stormy Weather

Enter Flink, an apprentice wizard and the character under your control. He has been charged with the task of travelling the length and breadth of Imajica clearing away the dark clouds, collecting majical (sic) ingredients and casting spells in his quest to find the four crystals.

Once the crystals are reunited they will open the gateway to the wizard's lair, where you must face him in a showdown to recapture the island for the forces of good.

Well I don't know where the clearing away dark clouds bit comes in, but I do know that there is plenty of jumping on heads, collecting of ingredients and casting of spells. The last item adds an interesting new dimension to what could otherwise be just a routine game.

To cast a spell you must first find the scroll that relates to it (always in my experience locked in a chest). You then need to search out the ingredients that must be mixed together to create the spell (they can be stolen from unsuspecting merchants who can be found innocently wandering around the forests and towns), and finally, the order in which the ingredients must be mixed together.

This last part – mixing the ingredients – is mostly a procedure of trial and error, the price paid for getting it wrong being a comical explosion which blackens Flink from head to foot. The spells include the likes of Quick Grow Potions which allow you to reach higher areas, and Lightning Bolts which act like a smart bomb.

Apart from the spellcasting we've seen it all before, but not often executed as well as this. The only improvement I can suggest is a little more puzzle solving in the future, and less jumping on heads. But, as the sales charts consistently prove, there are plenty of people out there who lap this kind of thing up.

Flink kept me interested for much longer than most games these days, and to be honest, came as a total shock. It's impossible not to review a game without some preconceived idea as to what it's going to be like, and when I set out to review this I expected to end up writing a much more negative review than this.

Well, what can I say? I was completely wrong, and I think that the mark I've given goes > my initial scepticism. As platformers go, it's difficult to fault Flink, and how many times of late have you been able to say that about a game from Psygnosis?

to prove that I've come to terms with

Hopefully now they're back on the right track and we can look forward to a few more of the quality releases they were well renowned for just a couple of years back. A

If you ask me, I'd rather let Wainwright get away with it than risk a jump like that ne of the good things about this job (in fact, probably the only good thing), is coming across a game which sneaks up on you out of the blue and keeps you playing for ages when you should really be writing the review. Flink is such a game and really did come as a total surprise. I'd seen it running briefly before and didn't like the look of it at all, but then it goes and ends up being one of the best platformers I've played in some time. Games like Base Jumpers come along all too often for my liking, hence my dislike of the whole platform thing, but Flink has restored my faith in the genre.

REVIEWED BY STEVE

t's just a platform game, but it's a platform game that is extremely playable and fun. To say that Flink is addictive would be a massive understatement - the more I play it the more I just have to see what the next level will bring. One of the best efforts yet for the CD32.

Nice looking isn't it? The 1200 has been used well to create some good graphic effects

> Kitting out your ship is important. Get it wrong and you'll wind up dead

· III PHI CO £ 1115 Ch Hill

Classic games are having a resurgence of late, as Paul McNally discovered with the Thrust-inspired Roketz

y memory might be failing me fast, but Thrust never used to look like this! Roketz is a Thrust style game with knobs on. The rendered rocks remind me of Super Stardust and the intro screens and weapon selection bits are suitably impressive.

Not surprisingly, with all these pretty effects occurring left, right and centre, you'll need an A1200 to run it, but you may be somewhat taken aback to learn that Roketz is only available via Exclusive PD, whose address can be found elsewhere on this page. Anyway, down to business.

Most of you will have played this sort of game before. You know the kind I mean, a gravity based game where you never truly feel in control of your craft (or is that just me)? In case you're a bit of a novice, let me just explain briefly that the ship you control is pulled around by the laws of gravity and you have to constantly apply thrusts from your main engines to prevent it from hammering into murderous-looking rockfaces.

Sounds a bit boring doesn't it? Well, the spice is added by sticking in another player and turning it into a battle to kill each other first. So not only is there the problem of avoiding some extremely tight corners to contend with, but you also have to start thinking of a strategy to waste your opponent without getting blown away first.

Rocket Man

The game starts off with a series of screens allowing you to choose one of the six levels and also decide upon the weapons and engines etc you would like to carry on board. It takes a bit of practice to get all the stuff that's right for you, but it turns out to be worth it in the end.

The problem I found with Roketz lies with the control method. I struggled quite a bit to stop the ship hitting the rocks, and therefore got extremely frustrated very quickly indeed. I suppose it's all about learning, but I haven't got the patience for this sort of thing.

At £10.50 you can't really knock it, but you can get the same sort of thing, with less impressive graphics obviously, through PD houses for even less money. As a two-player offering it can be quite amusing for a while, but in the end it's just too limited. Maybe I'm not as forgiving to the greats as I should be, but I wouldn't pay a tenner for Pacman either if that's any help!

don't find games where frustration is an integral part at all clever, and while Gravity-based games were good in their time, it doesn't mean I want to play them these days. Maybe I'm being harsh but I'm not convinced that careful negotiation of rocks in a tricky spaceship is all that much fun. On the plus side, it's wonderfully programmed and the graphics are more than worthy of the majority of full priced titles. Maybe The Farm's next game will be the one that sees them break into the big time. If not, they can always re-release "Groovy Train" to tide them over for a while.

What's the difference between a bowling ball and a girl from Macclesfield? You can only get three- [No!] Paul Roundell summons the lane technician...

've only got small hands, me. Usually this isn't a problem – in fact my popularity in the office has never been greater than when Production Editor Neil's car keys became stuck behind a cabinet, irretrievable to all but a lithe-digited individual such as myself. Of course the euphoria of my novel state of non-friendlessness soon wore off when my secret became known.

Everyone realised precisely why I had been able to collect these most important items of vehicular ignition, to which my now special nickname of Girly Hands is testament.

Er, oh yes, hands. Well they can be kind of a problem when I embark upon a night of ten pin bowling. Take, for instance, one of the first dates with my girlfriend, at a somewhat seedy bowling alley in East Lancashire (for I am, surely, the master of romance). The shoe changing went with hardly a hitch, aforementioned female companion more than happy to accept that the all-pervading fetid stench which escaped my socks was actually emanating from a squat, fat bloke in nylon trousers abandoning himself to a frenzied game of Shufflepuck Café.

And, after the initial embarrassment of failing miserably to type our names into the computer properly, the game was on. Not being that big on finesse, it seemed reasonable to assume that the best way of racking up a massive "try-notto-fancy-me-after-that-darlin'" score was to send down the biggest, heaviest ball just as fast as I could. So, up I strode to the receptacle and chose my weapon – a gunmetal grey, 18 pound monster that could have been the stunt double for a wrecking ball.

The three dark holes stared up invitingly as I plunged my hand downwards. And downwards. And downwards. And downwards, until I found myself buried to the wrist in just one of the holes that was obviously intended for a person of substantially heavier build than me.

Never mind, the green 16 pounder looked every bit as tough, and would no doubt become a virtual extension of my arm for the next hour as I ripped into set after set of unsuspecting skittles.

But no – there was still room for the best part of my hand. OK, the sturdy brown 14 pounder – better, but still more than able to accommodate three fingers. Shamed now, I determined that I would send down the still-dignified maroon 12 pound sphere come hell or high water, and twiglike fingers rattling around inside its vastness, I hastily approached the line from which there would be no return.

Gripping limply

All too late I realised that my lack of grip would render me incapable of exerting the control necessary not only to send the ball in a vague facsimile of the right direction, but also to prevent it from dropping hopelessly from my hand and lurching into the gutter less than half way down the lane after three pathetic-looking bounces.

The evening passed, slowly, and I spent a good deal of the remainder of my time waiting for a small girl two lanes down to finish her turn so that I could use the luminous pink eight pound urely once you've bowled a couple of strikes the game becomes stale and the disks become formatted? Well, no. Graphically Kingpin is very basic indeed, and yes, it would have been nice to be able to, say, follow your ball down the lane in much the same way as Archer Maclean's Pool. And it's true that the game does lack the tournament mode that would ultimately elongate its appeal. However, all too often, simple concepts get ballsed up by over-complication, and by providing us with a basic game at a very basic price, Team 17 would appear to have a winner on their hands. Not quite as good as the equally affordable Arcade Pool, but it's gripping fun and surprisingly long lasting. My God, it sounds like a cigar!

Good old Steve -

In an ideal world the ball would be slightly more towards the centre. Steve again, probably...

DIFFERENCES

he A1200 version of Kingpin has several pieces of very nice digitised speech, but unless you're absolutely desperate to learn that 'Lane 15 is now cleared for play' or that the driver of car registration number L580 BHD is blocking the entrance, then I wouldn't worry about it too much.

SECOND OPINION

ingpin is, if you ask me, a bit lacking in the old gameplay department. Fair enough, it's quite cheap, but I find it difficult to see anyone playing for more than a couple of hours. So, you should ask yourself if you don't mind spending thirteen quid for such a short experience.

OPINION BY STEVE

ball that could well have been tailor made for me. I don't go bowling any more...

And nor do I have to, because Kingpin, the much needed champion of smallhanded adults, is here to slew away my shame. The mere fact that so much coverage has been afforded a... well, budget priced bowling game, suggests that we, the gaming public, are getting a mite fed up with offerings that, while they might look very nice indeed, have about as much playability as Doofus.

Kingpin really couldn't be simpler - it's bowling. You can play it alone or with up to five friends, as a single game or a five leg match, in pairs or even triples, and the aim is to knock the skittles down.

The way it will be played most is as a oneplayer game, and with name entered, sex and dexterity chosen, it's into the arena you go. A number of balls of varying weights are yours for the choosing, and these can be switched around at any time.

Good position A strengthometer of sorts is displayed to allow you to alter your shots which are aimed by means of a pointer. The pointer skims across the lane, the idea being to let fly by a press of the button when you judge it to be in the best position. The chosen strength of your shot affects the speed at which the pointer moves, meaning that slower shots are easier to control.

After each set, (two shots at the pins, providing you didn't get a strike with your first), your score is tallied by the realistic-ish game computer, which gives you a running total throughout.

Although it's very tricky to do in reality, you'd think that in a computer game, once mastered, surely it should be easy to score a strike every time? To counter this, the programmer has added a random element in the shape of the performance of the lane itself.

			his is where ort the men

Each time you start a new game, information appears regarding the speed of the lane, how it's 'hooking' and how much spin is available. The 'hook' pertains to how much a straight shot will be affected. For example, if the lane is hooking slightly to the right, a shot sent straight down the middle will connect slightly to the right of centre.

You can employ spin - Kingpin's aftertouch to combat the hooking feature, and this can be added as soon as the ball leaves your hand. Again this affects the direction to varying degrees. Actually the spin is overexaggerated, and would have been better toned down. Apart from that, everything appears to run as true as you could reasonably expect, and although computer bowling may seem like an incredibly dull concept, Kingpin becomes extremely addictive in a very short time. It's very easy to sit through set after set, intent on beating your previous high score, which you can save to disk along with other statistics.

from the boys

Aside from this, Team 17 have added the Arcade Spares Challenge, where you aim to demolish a series of set 'spares' (loose skittles) in three shots or less. Nothing whatsoever to do with the real thing, but it's a welcome break from the norm, and good fun with it.

And that's Kingpin, a horrendously bland-sounding idea, executed well and with very few flaws, that quickly becomes engrossing. And as always, it's much more fun with two.

ACTION REVIEW REVIED

cid software are on a roll. It started about 18 months ago with the release of Skidmarks and, despite a relatively quiet period in the middle, they have continued to develop momentum ever since. Acid have yet to disappoint us by releasing a less than excellent game. We've had the aforementioned Skidmarks, we've also had the excellent Roadkill and Guardian, and with the promise of the eagerly awaited Blitz Tennis (formerly masquerading as Center Court Tennis), the future looks just as rosy.

Those who can't wait for the next new release from New Zealand's finest can pass the time with a new version of what is arguably their best release to date, Guardian.

Now people who are lucky enough to own A1200s can marvel at the sheer wanton destruction supplied by a game that many people consider to be the CD32's finest hour.

The game concept is unbelievably simple. You fly a little ship and a big ship floats down, deposits some other little ships and then floats off again. It is your job to destroy all of the other little ships before they can destroy your little ship. What could be easier? Well just about anything actually because this is very tough indeed. It took me quite some time just to get off the first level, and when you consider that this is a piece of cake compared to the later stages of the game, you are given some idea of just how difficult things get.

The main stumbling block at first, for all but the most hardened gamesplaying genius, is the speed at which everything moves. Things happen so quickly that you can be happily blazing away at some distant craft while some other spaceship sneaks up behind and destroys you before you've even had time to glance at your radar to find out who's where.

You soon learn that the only way to survive in Guardian is to keep on the move at all times, but even that serves to make hitting your enemies all the more difficult. Guardian may seem simple, and indeed the concept is, but when you've scratched the surface you realise that the complexities arrive in number when you begin to consider the detailed battle tactics which are required to stay alive.

This is one of the most deceptive games I've ever come across. Although it is an all-out shoot'em-up, it is most definitely not mindless, at least not if you intend to be successful, and it's just as good on the A1200 as it was on the CD32.

It looks identical, plays identically, and with the exception of using a combination of keys and the joystick to control your craft instead of the CD32 controller, it is identical.

So, here's a message to everyone who takes their A1200 seriously – Guardian is a game that you simply have to own.

t's probably about a year since we reviewed Benefactor on the Amiga and gave it a highly respectable 90%. A year is a long time in computer terms and experience has shown that it isn't really fair to expect many games to have stood the test of time very well. Although the majority of rereleased offerings are by no means bad affairs, when they are held up in comparison to their present day counterparts, most of them don't fair particularly favourably.

Benefactor is one of the exceptions. One of those rare occasions when a game is so good that nothing in it's field has come along and surpassed it in the last twelve months. As I'm sure you're aware, the game is a bizarre cross between a platformer and a puzzle game, a mix which I was unsure of to begin with, but after a short time playing I was left in no doubt that it is a blend that works exceptionally well. Programmed by the legendary Digital Illusions people who missed out first time around, this is one you should definitely buy.

Benefactor is frighteningly addictive and it'll keep you occupied for weeks. A f you've read either of our extensive player's guides, or indeed any of the massive hype that has surrounded Bullfrog's latest release, and you own a CD32, then you've probably been feeling a little put out of late. This is no doubt due to the fact that your favourite game has, until now, been limited to floppy based formats.

The CD32 version is, as most are, identical in every respect to the floppy equivalent except that an improved intro has been tacked on along with some other purely cosmetic changes.

The main difference comes in the use of the CD32 controller to move around the park, place the structures and observe the little people etc.

This is at times slightly cumbersome, but only if you've played with the keyboard and mouse combination. If you haven't, then you shouldn't experience any problems.

The game is still a joy to play but don't be fooled by the flippant nature of the subject matter. Although Theme Park will undoubtedly make you laugh, underneath the merriment, it is all quite serious. It is also a very tricky strategy game, the idea being to build the most successful chain of Theme Parks in the world.

By all accounts, the response EA had when they released the A1200 version was phenomenal, and when you consider that CD32 owners have far less quality software to choose from, there will more than likely be a mad stampede down to the local software dealer to get hold of a copy. Make sure you're at the head of the queue. A

Those lucky, lucky people who, er, haven't quite been lucky enough to receive their prizes yet (which will be most of you, actually), don't worry! We're on the case big time now and in just a few weeks there won't be a dry eye in your house as you fall prostrate before the wealth of free gear that's coming your way. Until next time then, when the earth has moved closer to the sun and we're all driving around in magic buses.

A special prize...

Goes to Miss M. Y. Wells of Middlesbrough for her particularly sterling effort in the Backyard Bump 'n' Burn competition. We'd love to have printed it, but WH Smiths might just protest at the sight of Jack Baggy Sack and the Scrott Rott Mobile, we feel.

Everyone knows that a big name product endorsement is never a bad thing in any walk of life. Well, Pepsi Cola might have a few regrets, but the rule generally stands fast, and software companies know as well as anyone what an official film licence can do for the old bank balance. A square-eyed Paul Roundell was therefore astonished to discover just how many golden opportunities from the silver screen have been ignored – games that, handled in the right way, could be the new cinematic classics for 1995...

Rain Man

harlie Babbitt's got a problem. Up until yesterday he was an ordinary Joe scraping a living in his car import business, and today he's a millionaire. Why's this a problem? Because the eccentric millionaire who left him the cash decreed that his entire fortune be thrown from the highest building in town, meaning that Charlie's newly bequeathed $3 million is spread over the 50 continental United States, and it's up to you - as Charlie - to zap around America gathering up the loot. Collect it all before your business goes bust and it's yours to keep, but allow just one car to be repossessed and you're left not only penniless, but out of a job too!

To make matters worse, you have to make the journey in the millionaire's clapped out old car (well, we said he was eccentric), with an odd creature known only as the Rain Man for company. The Rain Man will help you out by solving any complex mathematical puzzles you come across, but he's very badly behaved and likes to wander off at the worst possible moment. Let him wander too far and you'll have to complete the journey on foot! As long as you reach the Television Stage twice a day for the Rain Man to watch People's Court and Jeopardy, you should be all set to collect the cash in this crazy, slapdash, all-American adventure.

Look out for the special Toothpick Counter bonus game by collecting the K-Mart underpants on your way, and keep a special eye on your energy levels around those handbag-swinging Girlfriends From Hell!

The Big Bus

o you have what it takes to road? Can you keep 200 fare-paying passengers happy for the duration of their trip? Are you able to juggle company finances with tyre pressures, swimming pool levels with brake fluid levels, and can you prevent the lavatories with the whited-out windows from overflowing? If you think the answer is "Yes", then welcome to the nuclear-powered world of strategy that is The Big Bus.

The number of wheels, a safe maximum speed, and the price of a fare are just a few of the questions you'll need to answer before your bus hits the road, and then it's a test of nerve to keep the passengers' attention from the everdrunken driver as your vehicle lurches hopelessly across the continent. If the punters have a good time they'll recommend the ride. If they don't, then you're in for a rocky time in this strategy epic where Detroit meets Theme Park!

American Graffiti Platform

t is the 1960's – a time of free love, Woodstock and those ridiculous VW campers with flowers painted on the side that a child of eight could have done better. It's a time of harmony, when the world went about its business with a smile on its face, right? Wrong!

Something stinks in suburban America, and you're the man with the aerosol can. Richie Cunningham is an ordinary, everyday all-

American high school kid who enjoys the ordinary, everyday all-American things in life, and until today the biggest controversy the town had ever known was when the soda fountain at Arnold's Diner ran dry. But the rot has set in, and it's spreading.

A vicious gang of hooligans has alighted on the town, bringing with them their own brand of horror in the shape of graffiti. The townsfolk are shocked and the local police can do nothing to stop the obscenities from appearing on bus stops and lavatory walls courtesy of the elusive gang. They steal into town in the dead of night, spread their venom and disappear without a trace until the next night, when the horror continues. There's something very sinister about them and you, as Richie, know precisely what.

The Graffito's boss, the evil Dr. Fonz, has perfected a matter dispersion machine that allows the gang to travel through different points in time, and so never get caught. No-one believes your story and many think you may be a secret member of the gang yourself, so there's nothing for it – you'll have to clean up the town on your own.

In much the same way as we saw in Cool World, you need to dash between points in time – for every bit of graffiti you paint in the baddies' universe, an equal amount disappears in yours. Of course it isn't easy because you have only one aerosol, though more can be found throughout your adventure, and you run the constant risk of getting caught and incarcerated.

It's a constant race against the clock to keep Namsville clean, and even when every scrap of paint is gone, the game continues until you die because the job is never finished. That'll teach you, you smarmy bald git.

Zulu Shoot'em-up

ou are courageous Brit Lieutenant Gonville Bromhead in this apocalyptic T2 The Arcade-esque test of nerve and skill which sees you charged with the task of defending a distant piece of good old Blighty from the heavily armed loincloth-clad natives. Reel back in terror as wave after wave of snarling Zulu warriors advance upon your poorly defended hut in the middle of a hostile jungle, and level your semi-automatic musket as the boney savages lurch towards you with spears aloft, intent on cooking you for tea. As well as lightning reactions and a cool head on your shoulders for placing that cursor in optimum position, you'll need all the military guile you can muster to stay out of spear chucking range and avoid those vicious voodoo spells. So, adopt a ridiculous cockney accent and remember - don't shoot until you see the whites of their eyes!

Cyrano de Bergerac

n adventure game with a definite comic feel, Cyrano de Bergerac is best described as Monkey Island meets Minder. You begin your quest on the real life island of Jersey, and take on the role of intrepid adventurer John Nettles - known as Bergerac to his friends - as you search for the ancient French relic, the fabled Cyrano, which means Big Diamond in English.

The Cyrano is the world's most valuable trinket, and is rumoured to have been taken by a famous and mysterious jewel thief known only as Roxanne (whose voice on the CD32 version is set to be provided by English rose, Liza Goddard). Your task is to sleuth your way across this most pleasant of islands, interacting with the natives and finding out what you can of the when all around are, er, extending theirs, then you'll win the day and return home a hero!

reaking away spectacularly from the traditional linearity of football games, My Left Foot relies heavily upon practice and skill, and comes complete with a story that's guaranteed to enthrall.

At the outset you play the role of Bryan Riggs – a boy born into a poor Salford family in the early 1970s, who from his earliest memories has harboured a burning desire to play professional football in spite of the devastating injuries he was born with he is capable of exerting control over only one part of his body - his left foot. Your first task in this largely two part game is to take Bryan through his paces as he enters a punishing training program designed to maximise the use of his whole body, but especially his "other" foot. Running, weight training and ball control are just three of the disciplines you must attempt, and points are awarded depending on how well you perform.

After a set time period the points total is converted into Club Offers, whereby Bryan will be invited to train with one or a number of the 92 league clubs depending on how well he (you) improved his mobility over the previous years. The more points you score where the second part - the traditional overhead

The reason you, a civilian, are undertaking the recovery of this article, is because the local police cannot be trusted after a series of similar heists have gone undetected. As well as returning the gem to its rightful owner, Diamond Lil, you'll have to stay one step ahead of the bignosed bent inspector who wants to kill you in order to get the diamond and return it to Lil himself, but only in exchange for her hand in marriage.

Taxi Driver Racing

Unlike Mario Kart, you race as only one person, wacky cabbie Travis Bickle, embarking upon a number of crazy adventures as you determine to drop off a series of passengers across the Big Apple. Sounds a cinch. After all, rush hour in NY is a piece of cake for an experienced driver like yourself, but things in Taxi Driver are never quite as they seem. Punch the accelerator to beat the lights, swerve like mad around rogue bag ladies and duck your head in fear as you scoot past the roaming drug gangs on the streets they call "mean".

ALIEN BREED: TOWER ASSAULT

Reader Reviewer Cabe McGill, Stratford-on-Avon

Team 17 are undoubtedly the masters of this kind of game, and once again they provide us with a difficult but playable shoot'em-up that should last everyone for ages. It looks good and plays even better, but there is a nagging doubt that it might just be a bit too hard. Excellent all round, but they should probably leave the AB series alone now.

How long did we wait for this? One month? Two? No, even longer, and was it worth it? No! The graphics are nice, possibly as good as any football game you'll see, but a footy game needs to be playable and [we think he's trying to say 'intuitive'], and this one just isn't. Cannon Fodder 2 is a good game, it has to be said, but after their success of recent years we've come to expect more from Sensible Software, and after a few hours play it's easy to see that this isn't up to the standard of the original. The men still look great and the sound effects are as good as ever, but the backgrounds don't compare and the gameplay isn't quite there.

SIM CITY 2000 Maxis

Reader Reviewer Mark Garrelson, [somewhere in] Kent

Sim City 2000 is tragic, and the reason is that almost no-one will be able to play it and therefore appreciate what a truly classic game this is. Maxis have done a truly incredible job of converting this, and although it's slow, it easily outranks any other strategy effort, and yes, I mean Populous too! If you're lucky enough to own the hardware that will allow you to play it you will wonder how you ever managed to live without it.

Now listen up everyone, I can't say this is a bad game because it isn't, but am I the only one who was disappointed by this? Surely not. Hundreds of new teams are included and it's ace to be able to play in loads of different leagues, but what else is new? Nothing, I think, and can anyone explain that when you're a manager why defenders score ONLY when you choose not to watch a game? Assassins CD

Publisher Weird Science Price £19.99

The Assassins, everyone's favourite PD maestros, have, with the aid of a company called Weird Science, put together an enormous collection of the finest quality PD games available. The disk consists of all 200 Assassins compilations to date, (that alone amounts to a staggering 600 games), as well as loads of other stuff including all of the famed Assassins Utility disks - a more than worthy addition to the CD for anyone who's more serious minded. Indeed.

Obviously, with there being utilities on there too, this CD is not designed with only the CD32 in mind. Both the SX-1 and A1200 CD-Rom drives are catered for, and are essential for certain programs and demos.

This is a superb CD, and anyone who considers value for money to be important would be a fool to miss out. So there.

light sims are going through a bit of a purple patch at The moment, what with Overlord and Dawn Patrol vying for the title of, well, best flight sim of the moment, probably. But wait! Here's an old favourite from the days when, er, 1994 was still in the future. Um...

Right, the Battle of Britain is the scenario in Rowan's biplane'em-up, so flying hard is the order of the day due to the overall lack of missiles that are remotely modern. The main ingredient in a Rowan flight sim is realism, and you can guarantee that every nob, every switch and any other things you may have cared to twiddle as you shot down Jerry high above Blighty are lovingly recreated here.

A pertinent question regarding Amiga flight sims tends to be the speed at which they run, and while A600 owners may find things a little too slow for their liking, all you A1200 aristocrats will be gooing up your goggles, not only at the grace with which it moves, but at the authentic (probably) controls and the overall quality of the graphics.

Reach for the Skies is very nice indeed and if you're looking for a cheap flight sim, look no further.

e under no illusions, this is probably the most in-depth Dstrategy game ever. If you're expecting frantic action, forget it, because that is the only aspect that is lacking from an excellent game. Personally it's not my favourite because I feel that it goes a little too deep, but I have to admit that it's very engrossing.

If you do buy it make sure that you are the type of person who is prepared to spend a lot of time coming to terms with the finer points of this epic. Time spent studying the manuals and ensuring that you understand what everything does and the knock-on effects your actions may have will prove extremely beneficial, and to be honest, without doing this, you'll more than likely spend your time floundering around thinking this is rubbish, which it most certainly isn't. It's exceptionally bland, but not rubbish. Oh no.

The final game in the package is Lemmings. Everybody in the world must have a copy by now in one incarnation or another, and this is the original, back again for anybody who missed it the first, second, third or ninth time. It's probably the most popular puzzle game ever created, but then, I don't like puzzle games much, me...

It actually should have been released by now, but Empire had a couple of packaging problems that unfortunately delayed its arrival in the shops.

First up is the all time classic Sid Meier game Civilization, where you have to guide a newly-born nation to success, making them the most powerful trading and fighting country in the world. The graphics may be a bit on the primitive "move boxes around" side, but the game is probably the most absorbing strategy affair ever!

Frontier - Elite 2 speaks for itself and could quite rightly be described as the most awaited computer game of all time, certainly pre-SWOS, anyway.

David Braben's original classic which came out on virtually every format imaginable, gave rise to this bigger and better sequel. Giving the player free reign over his or her destiny is an idea that has always appealed to gamers, and the improvements and greater scope added to Frontier make it one of the most complete games ever.

You know you're playing a great game when you consistently discover new things about it weeks and months after starting playing. It would be a more than worthy addition to any compilation.

Space Quest III

Publisher Kixx XL Price £16.99

The Sierra games remain ever popular, and that's why Kixx XL get so much joy out of re-releasing them at regular intervals. Anyone who's bought an Amiga over the past two years could quite easily have missed out on Space Quest III the first time round, but this second chance really shouldn't be missed.

Roger Wilco is as usual the star of proceedings, and the plot involves the authors of the game being kidnapped. Surprise surprise, you have to rescue them.

Be warned, the interface isn't the most modern, and involves typing in some pretty obscure commands at times. But the graphics are okay and the gameplay is good.

Space Quest III is ideal if you like the other Sierra games or just adventures in general. At budget price there's some good playability making this a good purchase.

MORE CHEAP THRILLS FOR AMIGA FROM

HER PROSE

Amiga amigos! Are you ready for this? More for Amiga on the PowerPlus label, it's a trio of classic games from the masterminds at MicroProse. With mindblowing strategy and simulation challenges they'll test your skills to the limit. With awesome graphics, FX and action, they'll take your imagination to the edge. Dead of Night

An ambitious attempt at allowing you to be your own Hercule Poirot, Miss Marple or one of the other bods who are top crime solvers. That's if you really want to spend hour upon hour reading bad English (this game seems to have come from Italy).

Basically, as is the norm in these cases, there's been a terrible murder, and it's down to you to locate the clues, interview the other guests at the house and discover exactly who killed the movie star who is known only as Diana.

Spread over three disks, this is certainly a lot better than your average PD effort. If it's an adventure game you want, Dead of Night certainly leaves most PD equivalents behind both in terms of graphics, gameplay and longevity. For this reason it is well worth putting up with the sometimes confusing English.

Xenex

Here we have yet another variation on the classic Asteroids of old. However, instead of the usual rocks, we have what look like alien constructions floating about at high speeds. Unsurprisingly it's down to you to prevent them from colliding with and destroying your frail looking space craft.

You'll need some quick reactions as the alien objects can move pretty darn quick, but to counter this, your space ship is capable of moving at vast speeds. Care must be taken though as you may collide with another object.

We'd like to say how drab Xenex is, but compared to some of the more recent PD stuff we've seen, it's pretty ruddy impressive, if a little too easy to make progress through.

Apart from the new look, this is just about as close to Asteroids as you can get without it actually BEING Asteroids. Pretty neat stuff!

Obstickle 17-Bit

It's a little late to be mentioning this now, but we shall anyway. Obstickle is as Christmassy as they come and centres round a shiny decoration like the ones you hang from a tree. It's obviously not a thin glass one (which would surely shatter), as it bounces with the ease of a kangaroo. If you're interested.

Your mission here is to collect the presents dotted around inside the puzzling stages whilst avoiding nasties aplenty.

Just bounce your way to success and exit the levels via a door which will appear after completion.

Understandably the levels become more difficult the further you progress, assuming you would be prepared to play for any length of time. And that's about it to be honest. Still, it's cute and playable with loads of wildly differing levels for you to plough through.

Captain Carnage

Dansoft (F1 Licenceware)

You are the Captain Carnage of the title, a courageous and no doubt devastatingly handsome member of some interstellar military organisation.

Horror of horrors, an alien being has entered Galactic Outpost G-109 and begun indiscriminately killing everything in its path, and current weapons can do nothing to stop it. So it's up to you. Not that you have anything other than current weaponry at your disposal, but that seems to have slipped everyone's attention by this stage. Anyway...

It's basically the Alien Breed project that Team 17 forgot – Alien Breed PD, and to be honest for the price of a PD disk, it would be extremely picky to complain too much about what is a playable game.

The main sprite looks awful, but he moves OK, and the levels, while devoid of aliens for large chunks at a time, are well designed and not-bad looking.

It's not the sort of game that will instigate any kind of adrenaline rush, but it will keep you happy for more than just a few minutes.

nd through the blissful woods and glens of PD

Evasive Aksion

Evasive Aksion. You have to take action in it to evade things. Things which look like Dusty Bin and which chase you, in a fashion, across a number of platforms, and up and down ladders. Ladders that you have to go up the side of, for reasons we don't understand.

That's it, and while it is neither big nor clever to slate the work of someone who toils largely for the love of it, so too is it extremely difficult to recommend a game that has so little going for it in just about every department.

Yathin

Movement is slow, making for frustration as opposed to a heightened challenge, and the lack of sound does nothing to enhance the... well, unfortunate drabness of the whole affair.

Power Battle

Jan Engehausen (17 Bit) It's ironic that this should be included in the PD section in the same month that Roketz - a fellow

Thrust spin-off – gets a full page review due to its commercial release, because as far as I can see concerned there really isn't that much difference between the two of them at all.

Now it seems to me that the trick with these kind of games is getting a) the control method, and b) the gravity just right.

Video to to light

Krisalis managed it with their Fly Harder last year, and in my ignorance I should imagine it wouldn't be too tricky to program this sort of thing properly, but apparently it is.

The control method here is fine: fire to thrust, and push up to fire might sound complicated, but it works surprisingly well and you're used to it in no time at all.

The thrusting part sometimes seems over-sensitive though, and it's not an uncommon occurrence to find yourself hammering into walls all too often.

That said, the two-player aspect (it's for two players only), enhances the... er, tension, and once again you can't really go wrong with it for a quid.

will solve the

Cycletech (17 Bit) Right, now we're not saying that this

because it won't, it won't and it isn't. Respectively. What it is however - with the best will in the world - is a largish sized cut above most of the other games that usually fall into this category.

A derivative of Missile Command, the simple aim is to prevent invading alien spaceships from destroying your city, and of course you do this by aiming your slowlyresponding weapon in their general direction and shooting like buggery. Fortunately you have a shield to aid you, and should you show enough dexterity, you'll be allowed to upgrade your weapons after each wave of invaders.

It's very slickly presented on two disks and features some really good sound effects that back up the gameplay and make it a must for fans of PD shoot'em-ups.

As you can tell from the screenshots (and probably the title of this Blue Print), Boo is a ghost. However, he is much more than that - the press release tells us that Boo is a young ghost. What exactly that means is anyone's guess, but he lives with his ageing but famous stage magician friend who's just had his wand stolen. Guess who has to get it back?

> The game, when finished, will contain five huge levels set in various freaky locations such as the Baffling Bathroom and the Haunted Hall. Work is just about nearing completion on making the levels even longer, thus providing an even bigger challenge for anybody who likes platform games (like our Paul in fact).

you know what release schedules are like).

Boo the Ghost is due for a release next month and you'll doubtless be able to find a full in-depth review in the very next issue of Amiga Action. So platform fans, get your orders in right away (but as usual don't hold your breath because the Ghost

If you saw the news pages last month you'll be aware that MicroProse are putting the finishing touches to their new platformer. Impossible Mission 2025 was their last attempt at this genre, but Boo is more your typically cute diet of jumping fun. Obviously inspired by the spate of recent console platformers, Boo the Ghost will be bringing level after level of colourful action to an Amiga in your bedroom soon. Read on...

> As you can see for yourself the screenshots are very colourful. MicroProse have gone all out to make Boo as bright as possible and their efforts are here for all to see. Anybody who remembers and liked titles like The Addams Family and Hudson Hawke will be well at home with Boo the Ghost.

Our catalogue disk is probably the best ever. It is a simple but quite powerful and useful database program which has been written just for us! It features information on our full range of disks, including compatibility, how much memory is needed, and even a mini review of every title. All this information can be used by the program, so you could tell it to get rid of any programs that are not compatible with your Amiga, and any that need more memory than you have. Then you can tell it to only show the kind of disks you are interested in, such as games or music. It features a unique ordering system where the program will actually order the disks you want for you. It will even add up how much your order comes to ! And files if you happen to be a new Amiga user. To top this around for each new section to load up. It's all there in your computers memory, all the time, which makes it instant. But the best thing of all is that this whole thing is absolutely free with your first order! Nice or what?

Added realism is very much a feature of the all new TM, as demonstrated by the European Cup, which now includes details such as the eight seeded teams excluded from the first round. There are also the official draws for all the major European competitions, and League Cup winners are automatically entered into the UEFA Cup. As indeed they should be.

An annoying feature of the first Tactical Manager was the inconsistent club logos, where some clubs would be represented by their badge in all its glory, while others had to make do with the vague representation of a coloured box. Talking Birds have set about putting this to rights and will be including logos for all the teams concerned. Blandsters will be pleased to know that all match highlights can be printed out, no doubt to be studied in depth at a later date...

Tactical Manager 2

The success Black Legend had with their first managerial outing must have been a surprise even for them. Weeks at the top of the software charts and rave reviews from, er, just about everyone but us, put Tactical Manager right up there with the Prems and Champs as the only management sims worth considering. An Italian data disk followed with almost equal success, and now they're back in traditional fashion for another assault on the top.

have adopted a new graphical style for the sequel which at first glance suggests that what we have here might be some sort of Manga Football. Er, but it isn't. Animations have been included for things such as corners and fouls in order to give a greater feeling of atmosphere, and the whole thing looks more colourful as a result – which could also have something to do with it having 32 colours instead of the previous 16.

Now think carefully before making any rash decisions regarding team selection, because it is important to keep the spirit of your players high. You now have a full reserve team to juggle with and a drop down into the, ahem... "stiffs" may see a drop in morale and subsequent loss of form. On the other hand, it may just be the kick up the backside your star forward needs.

Grandslam are due to release this cricket sim shortly. Will it reach the boundary or fall short of the rope? Will it be the Graham Gooch beater everyone's hoping for? Just how weak a play on words can we come up with in this intro? Andy Sharp pads up and finds out.

ITS (International Test Series) Cricket puts you in charge of any team from the nine included here, and a squad of 18 players at your disposal means that vital team selection is down to you. As with any complex sporting sim you will be taking a trip to Optionsville, as there is decision after decision for you to plough through. You can even add your own name to your chosen squad if you so wish, and see how you fare against the big boys in modern cricket.

Bowling is a totally different matter to batting. Obviously. Without quite as many options as the latter, it's all about combining your most effective ball and the placement of your fielders. Representing a game of cricket through a series of options whilst maintaining an acceptable level of gameplay is a tall order, and at this stage it looks as if it's been done with some sort of success. A neat touch is the inclusion of sampled speech from the commentary team. This doesn't include the superb ramblings of (Sir) Geoff Boycott unfortunately, but you can't have everything can you? With future add-ons possible, and the Tests being played in real time, this could be the epic sim to

The digitised players give the teams a realistic look, and the main stats screen is one of the best features. There are pictures of every player involved in the fielding team and the two batsmen at the crease.

The action begins with you looking from the batting end of the pitch, and finishes with a view from the bowling end. Before the ball is actually bowled you have a couple of seconds to place your batsman in the safest place before playing your shot. There are twelve different strokes to play, and these will guarantee wildly varying results, as unlike some sims, the timing of your shots is vitally important. There are plenty of catches made in the outfield, so when you're not batting, place your fielders intelligently.

And the schoolboys giggled and snickered, cracking jokes worthy of "Are You Being Served". The cause of such jovial mirth is surely the rather risqué title of Team 17's latest animal-related release. Pussies (as it is affectionately known around some parts), is thankfully a game about cats (we can picture 50% of you getting really frustrated and turning the page at this point, and you're probably in your early teens). Fortunately Paul McNally is just about mature enough to bring you a filth-free preview of this latest felineinfested platformer. We hope...

Pussies Galore will be released on A1200 and CD32 formats at full price around Easter time. Things are progressing well so it could well be that there aren't any problems. Hopefully we'll have a full review within two issues, and Paul will definitely like it because it's a platform game. Not that he only likes platform games. Oh no.

With accusations rife about satanic messages in heavy metal music, it was no surprise when Evil Eric released a record (Evil Eric is the most evil cat in the universe in case you were wondering). All the kittens in the world have been affected in some way, but the information we have at present doesn't really tell us how. I suppose you had better just use your imagination for now.

Amber Developments are the team responsible for Pussies. Coder Andy Coates said, "Graphic artist Matt Bell and I met one and a half years ago whilst working for a commercial games developer, and decided that our games were good enough to form our own development team. Pussies Galore will no doubt confirm this belief." Confident words, but we'll have to wait and see.

If you feel the urge to read some boring, bland technical stuff about Pussies Galore then the next few lines is probably the place to be. To start

D C3(8T PAULIER

Pussies Galore will, when ready, contain "four enormous worlds", each with a set number of missions that need to be completed before serious progress can be made. Each kitten that you discover and rescue will have to be guided to its own individual exit point safely in order to escape, and rest assured that you will be required to solve a few puzzles on the way.

There haven't been many games featuring household pet footage as far as I can remember. Atari had some cat-on-ledge action with the really rather good Nine Lives about five years ago, but since then there's been precious little on the feline front. However, Pussies Galore is about to change all that so you'd better get your cans of Whiskas Choice Cuts in because these cats are cute.

There's not much in the way of different looking levels at this stage, so you'll have to make do with this one. Not that there's anything wrong with it of course! Anyway, I'd better tell you what it's all about hadn't I? Your character is Boris, he's a streetwise alleycat and he's been charged with the task of rescuing kittens.

Extractors

Does anyone remember Diggers? Well, Andy Sharp does and he's more than eager to tell us about Millennium's ambitious follow-up, Extractors. It sounds too painful to mention, but don't worry, it's quite a friendly puzzler in the same vein as the Lemmings series. Maybe 'friendly' was the wrong word to use, as in our experience there's no such thing as a friendly puzzle game! Well, Extractors is set to test even the most avid gamesplayer to the hilt, and if cerebral exercise is what you're after, you may well have found what you're looking for. Early plays have suggested that this is set to rival the old classics in terms of brain curdling mayhem. Is it time for Lemmings to step aside and admit defeat?

The basic idea behind Extractors is to explore the Hanging Worlds and then locate and destroy each of the force field generators before entering the main city. To do this you will need to mine the levels to find precious stones to use as currency at the local trading post. This improved shopping facility now has more weapons for you to choose from, including some guided missiles and an early warning system.

Your task is made much more difficult by the inclusion of enemies who are far tougher than your extractors. These can be the difference between making or breaking your progress through the stages, and are generated randomly as you explore and extract the gems from each stage.

Your options are plentiful and you can stop any team member where he is in favour of using a stronger, quicker character or whatever. It's safe to say that elements of strategy and skill are needed to progress successfully.

There are three different characters to choose from -Habbish, Boids and Raldein. To begin your mission you can take any combination of these with you so long as your team remains five strong. Each of the characters have individual strengths and weaknesses, so it's important to pay attention to these elements when putting your team together. A browse through the Zargon book will give you all the information you need.

Only then will the hanging worlds lose their seemingly immense threat.

Remember TFX? Don't worry if you don't because it's that long since it was previewed that even we'd forgotten about it. Until we were leafing through some back issues that is, when we came across it once again. "Oh they must've scrapped it", we thought, but a quick call to the Ocean offices in Manchester provided us with an alternative answer.

The production of TFX is still going strong and the good news is that it will probably arrive sooner rather than later. The vast majority of the work has now been completed, in that all of the essential code, graphics and gameplay are in place, and the game is now going through Ocean's rigorous bug testing regime. When it comes through that you should see the game appearing in your local video game emporiums.

I wouldn't start holding your breath just yet though if I were you. Ocean are determined not to release this until they have got it exactly right, and that means ironing

Rufffan

Platform games. You either love them or hate them. Actually that's not quite true in all cases because Steve McNally falls somewhere in between, being able to either take them or leave them. Therefore Ruffian hasn't really got him that excited, but hey! – it's early days yet. Anyway, Grandslam have decided to go for a rumble in the jungle with their latest cute creation, The Ruffian. He's a cheeky chap in more ways than one!

Ruffian features, as you can see, a youngish chap in a loincloth, rampaging around a jungle for apparently no reason. The finished game will include 17 levels which we are told cover five graphical styles. All of this is based in the said jungle, although there are apparently some underground cavern levels which I haven't seen yet.

"Just run around a bit." That's the classic piece of advice that has applied to all platform games since the dawn of time. If you follow this plan then you are guaranteed to get the hang of the vast majority of features that the game has to offer. Sure there are other, more intricate details, but you needn't worry about them for now. Just get on with it.

Let's be honest, Ruffian isn't going to win any awards. In terms of originality and gameplay we've seen it all before, several times. However, Grandslam could be on to a winner if they decide to bring it out at a sensible pricepoint and make it a casual purchase for platforming fans. It doesn't look all that bad, in fact it's quite good fun, but I doubt whether people will ever consider it an essential purchase. Time will tell.

For those of a technical mind here's some info on how the game runs. Ruffian contains more than 50 bobs (up to 25 on any one level), has 32 colours, and running at up to eight pixels per frame, (always at 50Hz), moves at a fast pace. Now all that means nothing to me, (I can just about grasp the 32-colour bit), but I'm sure it does to some of you.

Ruffian will feature two

For those who don't know, Akira is a cult animation movie from 1987 which defies all logic. ICE have obtained the rights to this Manga classic, and sticking as closely as possible to the frankly confusing plot, are set to release the computer game. Set in Neo Tokyo in the year 2019, 30 years after World War III, the game takes you straight down to street level, incorporating a mixture of animation and frantic battling. Andy Sharp has been charged with the task of finding out what exactly is in store?

> After Tetsuo, one of the two main characters from the film, narrowly escapes death during a bike battle, he's captured and experimented on by the authorities in charge of the Akira project. Mid-way through the experiment he mutates and escapes from the hospital using his new Psionic Powers. This platform stage involves all the blasting and destruction you could wish for. Just look out for those huge bunnies and numerous other hallucinogenic visions he has to overcome! Each stage has the relevant accompanying music from the film to give you the feeling you're actually playing as a character in the movie.

Third World War sets the scene for what's to come. In the aftermath of the conflict, Tokyo is rebuilt, but in the chaos which follows, gangs become more commonplace than ever! Rival hordes of bikers roam the city battling against each other with a hatred never seen before. This is a nightmare vision of the future where death, decay and violence are evident on every street corner.

An animation of the level to reach one of several stages. Meanwhile, Keneda has to escape the clutches of the military and do battle in the city sewer system. If this all seems a little confusing, well that's because it is! Keneda steals a flying sledge/bike thing and blasts his way through the opposition. The final stage involves the final confrontation between Tetsuo and Keneda. Tetsuo has lost control of his powers and completely mutated beyond recognition. Akira has taken over completely and must be destroyed. Phew! This stage sees parts of each level integrated into one final battlefield. Weird I know, but so's the film.

The first stage will pit you against one of the rival biker gangs, The Clowns. Keneda, the other character involved in the game, has to battle through the debris on his unique Superbike. The roads are littered with obstacles from beginning to end, but weapons can be collected to clear openings ahead and destroy enemy bikers. However, this is only part of the problem, as you must also struggle to maintain control over the Superbike whilst avoiding potholes in the road.

Giving The Game

You read the exclusive review in Amiga Action a couple of months ago and now we're only too happy to bring you the first part of a complete solution to Empire's superb murder'em-up. Read on...

he following is the bare minimum required to complete the game. There is plenty more you can do but you'll have to spend a little time finding that out for yourselves because we've only got room to print the basics.

DIRTY STOP OUT The Garden of Eden

Ou begin the game in your girlfriend Eden's flat. Look around and pick up your wallet which you can find on the desk. Go to the right and examine the microwave. Open it and move the key to your inventory. Now walk to the lift and use the controls next to the doors. Enter the lift and use the control box in there.

Walk through Eden's garage and examine the car - do not leave the room as you will not be able to get back in yet. Make sure you get the screwdriver and the > wrench from the garage. Leave the room and walk off to the left. On the travel screen select Ryan's Flat. When the screen changes, walk up to your front door and examine the keypad on the left. Use the keypad and enter 5106 (your code number which you can find inside your wallet).

> Go into your bedroom and pick up the knife which you'll find on the bed. Now pick up the network cartridge you'll find close to the machine. Make sure it is the one that's marked important. Examine the network interface by the window. Open it and place the cartridge inside. Examine the network monitor. Use it.

When it has finished initialising, type LIST and press enter. Now type LOGON RYAN, followed by BLACKDRAGON, then LIST CARTRIDGE and READ PRIVATE. After this you will be given the door numbers for Eden and Louis. Write 'em down.

I'D LIKE A BIG GUN Enormous Weapon

elect Louis's flat from the travel screen. On arrival you will be mugged and have your trainers stolen from you. You can no longer leave until you find some suitable footwear.

Walk to Louis's front door, Examine and use the keypad. Enter the number 5238. When the door opens, walk into the room and go and talk to Louis. Open the cupboard by the monitor (the one with the drinks machine on top of it).

Move the red pool hall card into your inventory and examine it by clicking the right button. You'll now have access to the pool hall. Look in the toilet and pick up both trainers from the floor. Use each trainer to place them on your feet - you can now leave the flat.

Open your inventory and press the right button when over your wallet. Open it and remove the card and put this in your inventory. Leave Louis's by going to the street and off to the Travel Screen.

Select Sparky's Bar. Enter the bar and walk to the seat in front of Sparky. Examine and use the seat. Talk to Sparky. Examine the card reader with the credit card. Examine the credit card (right button in your opened inventory).

Use the card and you'll see your balance. Talk to the man sat next to you and he'll tell you about the hotel. Leave the bar and go to the Pool Hall.

Walk into the lift and use the controls there. Talk to the man behind the bar. He will help you. In the Pool Hall go left until you can go no further. Use the keypad and enter the number 5222.

Once in the office use your card in the reader and take the gun from the desk that the man gives you. Leave the location by going to the lift and using the controls before walking back through the alley and on to the street.

o to the hotel on the travel screen and talk to the receptionist. Use the cardreader with your credit card. Take the key from the desk (be warned that this is pretty tricky to spot but it has to be taken - it appears in front of the receptionist). Go to the lift and use the pad on the wall. Enter the lift and use the control with your room key. Now walk out of the lift and go left. Find the firepoint and examine it. Open it and take the axe. You may go into your room if you wish (go to the right) but there is no real need.

Re-enter the lift and use the controls with the knife from your flat. Examine the wire and use it with the knife. Examine the handle and use it.

Once on top of the lift examine the doors and use them with the axe. In combat, open your inventory and use the axe when the game allows you to (pointer will change from a watch to a hand).

After the guard mis-fires (CLICK comes up), use the gun. Walk past the pool and into the room on the left. Walk down and examine the gun in your inventory.

When you enter you'll see a bit of pseudo-erotic filth on screen. Wait till the squelching is over before wasting the rock star. You're now a killer and there are six people left to eliminate.

After this you're sent back to the Dreamweb. Talk to the monk. Find the door that will let you out (first one in the right hand corridor at the bottom of the map). Use the door. In the Dreamweb room use the plinth with the key and Ryan will then wake up in a skip in an alley.

WHO'S FIRST THEN? Form An Orderly Queue

rom the alley, walk to the right and walk down. Go home and enter your bedroom. Use the Network monitor. Type LIST NEWSNET, READ TVSPECIAL and EXIT. You will now know about the General. Leave your flat and go to the TV Studio. Walk as far right as you can and then walk down until you come to a sign painted on the floor.

Go left, and when you come to the barrier use your gun and kill the old guy to allow you to pass. Examine the controls behind the window by the barrier and use the controls.

Walk left and then up into the TV studio before picking up the passcard underneath the brochure.

Go left and down into the storeroom and examine the fusebox. Use the fusebox with the screwdriver and take the fuse (which is very small and on the box). Leave the room and go right twice and then up. Use the ladder.

Now walk to the winch control, examine it and open it. Replace the blown fuse with the one that you've just obtained and use the winch control.

The result will be one heavily bloodsplattered General and thousands of readers waiting until next month when, if you're dead lucky, we'll polish off the other five targets.

See you there!

Campaign 1

MISSION 1 Monuments

The monuments need your protection, and this can be a relatively simple task if you locate them on your map. Fly in a circular motion around the targets and they won't be able to get you in their gun sights too easily, thus saving your armour for later missions. Repeat this procedure over the three monuments and everything will remain hunky dory.

MISSION 2 Terrorist HQ

Only three of the four headquarters need to be destroyed if you collect the hostages. It's best to circle the building and shoot the foot soldiers or armoured cars before tackling the building.

MISSION 3 Car Bombs

This is by far the toughest mission in the campaign. If you fail to prevent a single car from reaching its destination, it's game over my friend! You may have to learn exactly which buildings have been targeted - they all have fences round but the gates will be open.

Once you have located the cars - there will be a gunner shooting at you from the roof - it's best to use your Hydra or Hellfire missiles. These will take the cars out relatively quickly.

MISSION 4 Agent Akbar

As simple as they come. Blast the building and foot soldiers and pick up your agent from the ground. That's it!

MISSION 5 Motorcade

The President needs your protection from the terrorists. Meet his stretch limo and escort him safely back to The Whitehouse. Along the way, the President's car will come under attack from numerous terrorist vehicles, so it's wise to travel a fair way ahead and take out the enemy early. Fortunately, the limo will stop and wait for your return.

MISSION 6 Enemy Sniper

Another simple task which can be performed while escorting the President back to The Whitehouse. He'll offer no resistance and all you have to do is lift him from the ground. With the President safe again, it's now time to return to base in preparation for your next campaign.

Campaign 2

MISSION 1 Navy Seals

Save the stranded SEALS, (they're members of a special armed forces team obviously, not honking mammals), from the small island after blasting the enemy soldiers away. It's best to head south now to reach the electric fence.

Giving The Game

The generous folk at Kixx XL will from now on be sending three of their current releases to anyone who sends in a solution to a game which we use in the magazine. And we're more than happy to let them do it because it obviously saves us a job.

Remember to state your name and address on any solutions you send and list a few games you would like to receive if you like, although the ones sent to you will be those which are available at the time.

And to continue in this generous vein, we'll throw in £20 in cash along with the games - gratis.

Come on then - that's 50 quids worth of games and 20 nicker simply for making a few manky notes.

MISSION 2

Electric Fence

Blast the three soldiers surrounding the hovercraft and then head back to the east and drop the two Navy SEALS at home base. Fly back to the hovercraft again and blast the last soldier away. Voila! Next stage complete. Land on the pad and prepare to take to the seas in the hovercraft.

This takes longer than any other stage to complete. It's a mite tricky tracking and destroying the weaving boats without picking up damage, but if you use the Hydras and keep an eye on your armour status, it can be done. It's better to be safe than sorry, so collect some replacement armour when it begins to look a little dodgy. Collect the plutonium that is left behind. The trucks on the beach are pretty simple to destroy though so things aren't too bad.

MISSION 4 F-15 Pilot

Be sure to use caution when rescuing the pilot from the island as there is an armoured gun and a foot soldier to be laid to rest. Remember this and everything should fall into place.

MISSION 5 Nuclear Subs

Only three of these blighters to sink. Unfortunately they're heavily armoured and their defensive cannons are extremely powerful. Use the mines by dropping them in the path of the moving subs, but don't hang around in close range as the cannons will kill you in no time. You may have to use your Hydras to finish them off completely, and remember to circle the sub so the cannons don't lock in on your craft. Next, take the hovercraft back and jump into your helicopter, Then head back to base. Phew!

Campaign 3

MISSION 1 Training Camp

A little target practice here. Simply blast away at the tents and soldiers. There's minimal resistance so it's dead easy!

Away

MISSION 2 Landing Zone

Another basic stage. Collect your bloke from the clearing in the trees and take him to the pad inside enemy lines.

MISSION 3 Mobile Radar 1

Yet another relatively simple task. Watch out for the armoured support (tanks) and destroy the radar vehicles. It's best to tackle this as quickly as possible, taking the tanks out first.

MISSION 4 Communications Expert

Rescue the communications expert. Watch for armoured guns and destroy the building he's inside before taking him to the helipad by the telegraph poles.

MISSION 5 Tank Depot

It's time for some more target practice! Only a few tanks will offer any resistance so keep as far away as possible from these and blast them with your Hydra or Hellfire missiles.

MISSION 6 Mobile Radar 2

Repeat the process used in part three of this campaign. These radars aren't as heavily guarded however and don't pose much of a threat.

MISSION 7 Training Headquarters

Blast the three buildings. Remember to rescue your own soldiers if needed, and take out the armoured guns.

MISSION 8 Nuclear Reactor

Whatever you do here don't destroy the nuclear reactor or it's back to the start you will go. Shoot the building and immediately prepare to shoot the gun and foot soldiers inside. Keep your shots as accurate as possible and then destroy the container holding the reactor. It's quite heavily guarded so don't be in too much of a hurry to destroy the defences. Do it as safely as you can, pick up the reactor and head back to base.

GENERAL TIPS Three of the Best

There are a few helpful manoeuvres you can execute throughout these to practice these on the you progress, the quicker the enemy will need works here, we didn't think it would be fair to give him any cash or games for this fine GTGA effort. What generous souls we are. Indeed!

- 1. Enemy gunners, whether they be in armoured cars, combi vans, trucks, tanks or whatever can cause severe damage to your lone battle copter so try flying around them and blasting away so they can't fix their gun sights on you.
- 2. Remember that each mission included in a campaign can be tackled in any order after the first campaign. Keep an eye on your ammo, weapons and position on the map. It's a good idea to make a mental note of where the extra ammo or fuel is and collect them in plenty of time. There's nothing more annoying than running out of power as you're on the way to refuel.
- 3. If you're low on armour and can't locate any more, the enemy targets are best destroyed from a distance. The best tactic

Giving The Game

When we reviewed Theme Park a few months ago we also gave you some handy tips to get you started. Now we can finish the job by bringing you a complete player's guide written by the man himself, the legendary Alex Trowers!

hints and tips for playing Theme Park. As you become a more advanced player you will begin to develop your own style and method of play along with a few sure-fire strategies for creating the ultimate park. Everyone has different preferences and so everyone develops varied techniques for dealing with the problems they encounter.

GETTING STARTEDTrainee Manager

y first piece of advice is aimed at those who are new to the game and those who have dabbled occasionally without much success.

The tutorial is there to aid the first time player. It introduces the basic elements of paths, queues, rides and shops gradually before dropping you into the game with hopefully a fully functional Theme Park. The rest of the tutorial is actually a very competent place to start expanding your empire.

BASIC ADVICE Small Is Beautiful

the little people are very fickle – the are not easily peased yet the smalles that will make them unhappy very wiskly. To this end you must always listen what they tell you! Keep an eye on the nough the week that appearance each little persons head and react accordingly. If several people get hungry in the same area you should consider building a lood stall of some description hearby.

first go. Start to build up from a small but well maintained base. That way you don't find yourself out of your depth with /everything going wrong at once it will happen gradually. Don't be afraid to remove rides that are placed incorrectly. It is far better to lose the money than to distract your valuable mechanics from repairing your star attraction so that it blows up with people on it (Yeah!! Great!! Burn baby, burn! – a Syndicate Player.)

Awayti

RIDES Variety Is The Spice Of Life

he park with the most rides tends to make the most money. More rides means more punters and more punters means more money which, as we all know, makes the world go round, allows you to research better stuff and subsidises shopping trips by the wife.

The little people tend to prefer a large variety of rides as opposed to loads of identical ones. This doesn't mean that you should only have one of each ride in the park, you should just choose a different ride over an existing one.

As rides get older, they don't last as long as they should before needing repair. When this starts to happen you should consider selling the ride on and replacing it with an upgraded one. This will put less strain on your mechanics and generally make everyone happier.

SHOPS Litter Bugs

ne of the greatest sources of income can be a well placed shop. They provide welcome instant cash returns and also serve to keep the little people happy.

There are however two drawbacks to the use of shops:

Litter is a major problem as nobody likes a messy park. If there is too much litter then the little people will start to stay away from the park and you won't win many awards at the end of the year. The coffee shops, have litter bins inside and so take care of their own litter, but they are not quite as effective as Pokey's Cola for quenching thirst. Whenever you buy a shop that produces litter you must make sure that you have sufficient handymen to combat the litter problem.

The other main problem is that of keeping the shops well stocked. A shop that has run out of stock is no use to anyone. You should always keep an eye on them to ensure that they have sufficient stocks to last. If they haven't you should order some more immediately.

Try to learn how often you need to restock certain shops and get into some form of rhythm so that you don't have to a keep looking around the map all the time. If the advisor tells you that a certain shop is running low and you haven't already sent off an order then you should immediately order more to minimise the amount of time that the shop is closed. If you are playing in Sandbox mode then you don't have to worry about this.

FEATURES Greenbelt Land

never be underestimated. A featureless park is a bland one and is unlikely to win any awards. Features also impress the little people who are new to the park, as well as making it look nice on the screen. In addition, it is a lot more exciting to scream around a roller coaster that dives and twists through a dense forest, narrowly missing the trees.

STAFF Personnel Problems

he amount and type of staff that you employ at any one time can make or break your park. As soon as you start placing shops that leave litter you should employ a handyman. Likewise, as soon as your first ride starts to break down you should employ a mechanic. Entertainers are very good especially in the times when most of your rides are being repaired or it is raining. A slightly more detailed look at all of the staff types follows:

Handymen should be employed the instant litter starts appearing on the ground. Keep an eye on any new handymen that you employ as they might get confused by the layout of your paths and end up missing out large areas of the park that need to be cleaned.

Mechanics should be hired as soon as your first ride starts to show signs of breaking down. They spend half of their lives eating sandwiches and so you must keep a watchful eye on them.

More often than not a mechanic will get to a nearby damaged ride before it completely blows up, but if there is more than one ride that is in trouble then you should direct the mechanic to fix one immediately and either shut the other ride down or hire another mechanic.

A single mechanic can usually maintain three or four rides successfully. This is just a rough guideline as it will vary with the quality of the rides, how often they are used and for how long.

A slightly risky tactic is to slow the speed of a damaged ride right down while the mechanic is fixing another one. Hopefully the ride won't blow up (Hopefully!?! – the same Syndicate player) in the time it takes for the other ride to be fixed and the mechanic can then fix the new one.

The upside of all of this is that you only have one mechanic employed and the little people always have at least one ride they can go on as opposed to having two closed down ones to look at.

If it works, then it works well. If not, then it's little short of disastrous.

Entertainers should be placed near queues that have a particularly long wait time to ease the stress caused by waiting to get on the ride. In addition, at least one entertainer should be placed somewhere near the park entrance.

Guards only need to be hired if thugs start appearing in the park. You will notice the thugs when you start seeing beaten up entertainers and rides start breaking down faster than normal. When thugs do appear you must deal with them immediately. Hire plenty of guards and try to move your entertainers away from trouble areas. Guards will only escort thugs out of the park if they see them doing something nasty like kicking an entertainer or breaking a ride, so you may have to move them around a bit.

PARK Planning Permission

try to think about what the little people will want, and place things accordingly. Place a balloon shop right near the entrance so that the people will part with their money while they are still happy. This will put them in a good mood for the rest of their stay unless something bad happens.

People get enjoyment out of going on rides so try to cut down the amount of time they spend walking between one attraction and the next. One method of doing this is to have a straight path with rides coming off either side of it. Each ride is butted up against the side of the path with the entrance around the back and the exit leading back on to the main path. A short queue should link the path to the entrance. Try to stagger the rides on either side so that anyone leaving one ride is pointed straight at the queue entrance to the next one. With this method the little people will zig between the rides and the amount of time they spend just walking and not being on a ride is minimal.

The major disadvantage with this method is that it doesn't leave much room for decorative features which make the park look nice and unfortunately this may put some people off.

If you start making a complex path system with rides and shops all over the place then you will have to place signposts down so that people know where they are heading.

If a person comes across a sign pointing towards a ride that they quite want to visit then they will feel happier about walking towards it as opposed to just wandering round aimlessly.

Also, signposts that point towards the exit allow annoyed people to leave quicker and not wander around for hours getting more upset. Unhappy people tend not to go on rides or buy things from shops and so clutter up the park and reduce the average of the happy people in the park. As a result of this, your reputation and popularity suffer somewhat so they are best off out of the park and out of your hair.

Another method of park design is the One-Way method. The park is organised in such a way that the people have no choice but to walk around the park in an organised and orderly manner. This has advantages in that you should be able to work out exactly what any person will be

and zag

requiring at any one time and be ready for it. In addition, the need for signposts is greatly reduced as there are less junctions for people to start worming about. The problem arises when too many people enter the park. Queues build up and people are unable to go on all of the rides.

Due to the one-way structure of the park, they are unable to return to rides that they may have missed, so they are no getting the full enjoyment factor out of your park.

AWARDS Simply The Best

presented with various charts showing how well you are doing. In addition there are also several awards that get handed out if you happen to be doing particularly well in certain areas of your park. These awards are great things to aim for as they not only improve your reputation but add a substantial sum of money to your bank account. They are also a measure of how well you are doing in relation to your opponents. If you are constantly winning the good technology award then you must be more advanced than all of your competitors.

Keep your park running smoothly and you should pick up a couple of neat awards. If a ride blows up then it is unlikely that you are going to win the Ride Safety award and since there is no Most People Maimed or Seriously Injured award then you could be losing out.

If you concentrate on winning a single award at a time then the money that you gain from this will enable you to do better at winning the others.

GENERAL TIPS And Finally...

pen your park immediately on starting the game. This allows one or two customers to appear even if the majority of people stay away.

Also, slow the game speed down when designing the park. This will allow you more time to place rides and give you a small amount of much needed lee-way when playing the game.

New rides are very important and you should always have something in research for them. This will aid you in gaining the Most Advanced Park award.

When positioning rides, allow for the fact that you may wish to move the entrances and exits.

Whenever you add a new ride to the park you should immediately increase your ticket price. The more rides you have, the more you can charge.

Always try to buy new rides as and when they become available.

If you notice an unusurally large amount of itter building up then it may be a good time to increase the price of your food shops. Don't farget to dean it all up afterwards however.

Try to ensure that the queue lengths

In to ensure that the queue lengths are long enough to support all of the people who may want to go on the ride. People won't join a full queue and so they will miss out on the ride.

Make those lazy spare handymen work exclusively outside shops.

Always have stock for your shops on order. If necessary you can always delay its arrival by re-ordering.

Never leave your park unattended as there is always something you could be doing. This is especially true of the larger parks as they are harder to maintain.

With large capacity rides there is a obvious need for larger queuing areas as they take more people to fill up.

they take more people to fill up.

The trick is to dry to have at least one of every ride in your park.

Kixx XL have just released this on budget and no doubt you're all horribly stuck. That's why you keep ringing us up, and that's why we tell the receptionists to say we're in meetings! Anyway, you've got R. Renshaw of Bollington to thank for this. He wins the Kixx stuff and £25

alk down one screen, right one screen, and walk on to the lift bucket. When you are on the screen with the crusher, GET UP, JUMP. Walk left until in the room full of computers. GET ON MACHINE.

Press the left arrow once, wait until the grabber is just about to go off the next screen where you started, then press the right arrow once to stop the grabber. PRESS BUTTON. The grabber's hook will descend into the scree where you started and should land on top of a round, blue object (The Warp Motivator) and bring it back up (if you miss, move the grabber left or right slightly and have another go).

Once you have got the Warp Motivator, press the right arrow. Wait until you get to the other end of the loop, press the left arrow to stop the grabber just as it has gone round the bend.

PRESS BUTTON. Your aim is to get the Warp Motivator in to the back of the spaceship below. If you miss, pick it up and try again. Once you have done this, press the left arrow and wait for the grabber to get near where it started and try to stop level with the blue platform that sticks out. GET OFF MACHINE, walk down the screen into the chute.

METAL MONSTER You Dirty Rat

alk to the left hand wall. LOOK IN HOLE. If there's no hole then move along and try again. TAKE REACTOR. Once you have got the reactor, walk over to the ladder. CLIMB LADDER, TAKE LADDER. Walk up one screen then right two screens into the tunnel. TAKE WIRE and walk right. At this point you will get mugged by a rat. retrace your steps back to where you got the reactor (you will need to DROP LADDER before you can CLIMB DOWN it again). TAKE REACTOR, TAKE WIRE.

Walk back to where you got mugged (remembering to take the ladder with you), and walk out of the other end of the pipe. Get as close to the broken eye as possible (keeping way from the bottom edge of the screen). CLIMB into the head. Walk around the spaceship to the side that you can see. DROP LADDER, CLIMB, walk a bit closer to the round hatch. OPEN HATCH, DROP REACTOR, DROP WIRE. Click on the computer at the right. The report should now show the steps in good shape. If not, retrace your steps and check nothing has been missed. Click on the pilot's chair. USE COMPUTER.

(To turn options on or off, click on them with the pointer or press the appropriate key). Turn on the radar. Turn on the engines. Take off. Turn on the weapons system. Turn on the front shield and press fire!

USE COMPUTER. Turn on the navigation system. Scan until you find the planet Phleebhut. Set course. Turn on light speed. Land. Click at the bottom of the screen in the middle to stand up. Click on the orange button in the bottom right hand corner of the screen to open the ramp or the hatch.

Walk right two screens and then up the screens to the metal monster in the distance. Walk into the shop. SELL GEM (425 Buckazoids is the best price you can get for the gem). BUY UNDERWEAR. BUY HAT. BUY ORAT. LEAVE. As you leave the shop the terminator that has been following you will grab you, threaten you a bit and then give you a head start. When he lets you go, walk off to the left of the screen and then into the foot of the metal monster.

Walk into the lift and then PRESS BUTTON. When the lift reaches the top, walk up the steps and to the far left hand corner and face right. The terminator will follow you up. When he is level with the gears, GRAB HOOK. Roger will then swing the hook by his head into the terminator, knocking him into the gears. Walk down the stairs and go to the scrap from the terminator and TAKE BELT. Go back to your spaceship and takeoff. Set a course for the Monolith fast food dive and turn on the light speed. When you arrive you will automatically dock and climb out.

Walk left one screen and walk up to the person at the counter. ORDER. Select the Monolith fun meal and whatever else you fancy, you have plenty of money. Quit the order screen, PAY, walk over to the empty table, SIT, EAT, STAND, walk over to the arcade machine and PLAY GAME. Carry on playing the game until you get a coded message. USE DECODER (found in your Monolith fun meal). Write down the message. Quit the arcade machine, walk back to your air lock and GET IN SHIP. Once you have been sick, walk back to your airlock and GET IN SHIP. Set a course for Ortega. Turn on light speed and land.

TRASHCAN MAN Old Lady Semple

ext, stand up and PUT ON UNDERWEAR. Open the door. Walk down one screen, left one screen, down one screen. Wait for the workmen to leave, walk over to the green box just near you and TAKE DETONATOR. Walk two screens to the right, up two, left one and then right one. Walk up to the ladder and then CLIMB it. Walk closer to the opening and then DROP DETONATOR. Make your way back to your ship. When you get to where the wobbly ground was it will no longer be there. USE POLE to pole-vault athletically over the gap. Go back to your ship and take off. Now go to Pestulon and land.

Leave the ship, PUT ON BELT, walk right one screen. When some guards have left Scumsoft, TURN ON BELT, ENTER SCUMSOFT, walk in to Scumsoft. PRESS BUTTON, walk around the loop until you find another door on the inside of the loop. Walk through this door into the closet. TAKE UNIFORM, walk out of the closet and into the corridor. Walk around the loop until you find a door on the outside of the loop that isn't locked. Enter this room. You are now in an office. Do not pass any full bins without emptying them because you are meant to be disguised as a janitor. To empty a bin, stand next to it and USE VAPORIZER. Be careful, because some bins are a bit harder to see than others.

Your aim here is to get the boss's keycard and a picture of him. Where you find the picture there is a photocopier very near. TAKE PICTURE, go over to the photocopier, COPY PICTURE, go back to where you got the picture and DROP PICTURE. The keycard is on the desk in the boss's office, this one is larger than the others and is the only one with a door on (it is open). When you first find this office the boss will be in it. Walk past his office and to the right behind it. You are now on a platform overlooking the vehicle bay.

When you walk back to the boss's office he will no longer be there. Go in and TAKE KEYCARD off his desk. Once you have got the keycard and picture go back into the main corridor. Walk around the loop until you come across the locked door on the outside of the loop. Walk up to the door. INSERT KEYCARD, HOLD UP PICTURE. When the door has opened, walk in and PRESS BUTTON. Walk straight ahead in to the trapped men. USE VAPORIZER. You will now get captured and taken to an arena where you will have to fight the boss in a large metal robot. If you win, you and the two men you have just saved will automatically escape from Pestulon.

END SEQUENCE Cockpit View

SE COMPUTER. Turn on attack speed. When you are informed of an attack, go to the weapons system. Use your shields and lasers as required. If you do well, the rest of the attack will leave you alone. Turn the weapons system off and go back to the cockpit view. At this point you will get the end sequence.

You will probably not have amassed full points if you use this guide, but that is up to you to have another go and see if there's anything you have missed.

Well, thanks to Robert Renshaw once again. If you would like to win three Kixx XL games and a cool 25 quid in your hand, why not send us the solution to a game you have finished.

SONYA - Towards x 2, away x 2, fire. KISS OF DEATH. SUB-ZERO - Towards, down, towards, fire. RIPS HEAD OFF.

JOHNNY CAGE -Towards x 3, fire. PUNCHES HEAD OFF. SCORPION - Down x 2, fire. FLAME THROWER. LIU KANG - Down, away, towards, down.

Also for Mortal Kombat, type DULLARD on the Start/Options screen and when you lose a life, your credits will remain intact.

SCISSORS KICK.

And there's more: at the Start/Options screen. Type in A to U four times for a whole new cheat screen with options such as viewing the death moves and all sorts of stuff like that.

Cannon Fodder 2

Remember the bit in Cannon Fodder where you typed in JOOLS as a save filename? Well do it again in CF2 and you'll be blessed with the skills of a Four Star Commanding Brigadier Excalibur of sorts who's a really good shot and dodges bullets dead well. Or whatever he is. And for those who don't remember it - do it anyway...

Rise of the Robots

Cheat here from Frances Little from Abingdon, who's a bit hard in the metallic fighting department, it seems. Unfortunately no-one here can quite follow what he's on about, but maybe you can. Anyway, here it is:

Set the options to Difficulty: Hard, Timer: Off, Bouts: 7, Cinematics: On, Screen Shake: On, and Shadows: On. Play the Military droid and let it win. Go back to the menu, select two-player mode, and on the handicap screen, move the red bar down about a quarter into the player one side, then back to the half way line, and repeat it about six times until the screen flashes. When choosing the opponent, after the Sentry droid comes the Superviser. Choose her and player two can "be" her. Do the Builders special moves for hers.

Hmm, well if you can understand it (and we're sure you'll be in the minority), then away you go.

If the detailed information on the previous pages was too much for you, try this titbit that Kevin Bacon from Hartlepool has discovered. In between filming The River Wild with Meryl Streep, no doubt.

Make a little rubber tubing ride and then buy an entrance for it. It will cost you next to nothing and you can then extend it without paying the usual huge amounts of cash.

Powerdrive

"I received Powerdrive for Christmas", Tony Friend from Didcot tells us, informing us further as to his completion of the game. So what he's done, see, is listed the codes for all the levels, along with the prices for all the vehicles, and the money you start each level with. Which we thought was pretty decent of him, actually: So here goes, starting with the cars and the dosh that you'll need to buy them with:

Thanks then, unknown person.

Sim City 2000

Graham Page from Abingdon is a bit special at SC2000, if you take him at his word. So confident is he of his city building skills that he's decided to share his knowledge with you. And indeed us. And here, readers, it is:

Before starting to build a new city, edit the map and make it totally flat without much water. Create small hills with waterfalls on them, to be used with hydroelectric power.

At first, only use hydroelectric and wind power, until power is a major problem, at which point add a fusion power plant (invented around the year 2075 – you should start in the year 2050 and put the speed on Cheetah). Alternatively you should build one or two solar power stations. Every so often add extra wind power and hydroelectric power.

Always build residential, commercial and industrial zones four squares wide. They can be any length, but make sure they're surrounded by road.

Remember to look regularly at what people say on the budget screen, and see what zones are needed on the graph in the tool menu. Neighbourhood watches are a good idea.

Do NOT use the 'Fund' cheat, as although it gives you money without creating an earthquake [sounds like Paul's Dad], it is a loan which you have to pay back with interest, so it'll get you into trouble eventually.

Once you have been given Arcologies, buy these instead of residential areas, as they take up very little space in proportion to the number of people they can house. Always equip them with their own wind power and water pumps.

Only buy stadiums, marinas and zoos when they are demanded (those whingeing residents). Often put down parks (large or small) when you are creating a lot of zones.

If someone had told me at the beginning of my quest that within six months I would be married, with three screaming children and another one on the way, I would never have believed them. Oh how life changes...

es readers, it is true. Not only have I got married since we last spoke, but I've also been rather busy in the conjugal rites department. My "lovely" bride goes by the name of Esmerelda and I have her to thank for my rapid recuperation after I was found lost, starving and bedraggled in the warren of underground caves that her forgotten Boggit race call home.

It was Esmerelda's brother, Quasi, who rescued me from almost certain death, and Esmi (as I like to call her) was put in charge of the nursing duties 24 hours a day as soon as my limp body was deposited on the sickbed of the family home.

I didn't stay limp for long however, and no sooner was I fully recovered than Esmi announced to the world that she was going to have a little Boggit, and that I was the father.

Having just wormed my way into the affections of these kindly people, I found myself, as you might imagine, in a somewhat tricky situation. Realising that immense shame would be brought upon the family if something wasn't done quickly, it was decided that Esmerelda and I would have to be married forthwith to avoid any public embarrassment and scandal.

I was quite prepared to accept the vicious beating that was handed out by Esmi's outraged brother (and as vicious beatings go it was absolutely excellent I must admit), but the imminent wedding was something that didn't appeal to me at all.

Unfortunately there was no way out of the situation. Having just arrived in the Boggit community I had absolutely no idea how to get away, and I certainly didn't fancy spending the next 37 years of my life aimlessly wandering the impenetrable labyrinth of tunnels that had got me in this predicament in the first place. My only choice was to go through with the marriage and bide my time until there was a definite chance of escape.

I suppose it could have turned out a lot worse than it actually did to be honest. The actual wedding ceremony itself wasn't too bad -I got to meet lots of other Boggits and there was a mountain of presents (my particular favourite being the leech tank - complete with its own gaggle of leeches - which was presented to us by Esmi's uncle, who happens to be the only doctor in the Boggit commune). The wedding photographs came out quite well too, but the fact that I had been "leathered" by Esmi's brother only the day before meant that the severe facial injuries and crutches which I

Simon tries to sneak his way past the owl

You may not be the best looking lady in town, but I can still give you a whole lot of Larrylove sported in each print would have to be explained away in dubious fashion to relatives and friends, every time the family album came out for a viewing.

So here I am now. Thanks to the amazingly swift reproductive talents of the Boggit race, I'm now three kids down the line with another one imminent. Without realising it I have fallen into the same trap as my father did before me. Hang on a minute! What am I doing here? My father is lying in a dank, dark dungeon somewhere and I am messing about playing happy families with a woman who looks like an overweight, hairy version of Bella Emberg.

I must escape from this hell, and I must escape from it soon. Well, after I've answered yet another batch of your gaming questions and queries that is.

I am here to serve.

Theme Park

I am at present plodding through Theme Park on the A1200, but every time I try to be crafty I always go "BANKRUPT". Please have you got any cheats for me (one with loads of cash would do). Cheers!!!!! Shaun Cunningham, Humberside

Yes Shaun I have got a cheat for you. Legend has it that if you press and hold down the C key whilst disk three is loading, you will be rewarded with ridiculous amounts of cash for absolutely no reason at all.

How about that then? And I don't know what you mean by "trying to be crafty", but that sort of thing has never done me any good I can tell you.

Monkey Island

Please can you help? On Monkey Island (Secret Of) I can finish the three trials, buy a boat, get a crew, and set off to the island that the governor has been taken to, but I don't know what to do when I get on the island. I have searched the island and picked up a piece of rope, and I am at the bottom of a cliff but I can't get to it. I don't know what to do! Please can you help? Oliver Lord, Rochdale

Well Oliver, it wouldn't be fair of me to give too much away, but try going back to the volcano (where you should have picked up the rope), and pick up the telescope too. Then push the cannon until the gunpowder comes out of it. Once you have picked this up, go to the mountain and climb it until you are directly in line with the Indian artifact. Now climb to the rocks and push the single rock which is on the edge. See how you get on from there Oliver. Good luck!

Leisure Suit Larry

I have been having trouble with the game Leisure Suit Larry for the A500. I wonder if you can help me by giving me some maps or telling me what to do. Andrew Sykes, Morecambe

Short of going through the whole game with you Andrew, which thanks to my new family I now no longer have the time for, I can only suggest that you try and obtain a copy of Issue 58 of Amiga Action (June 1994), in which a full solution to the game featuring everyone's favourite lounge lizard was printed. If you still want more clues then I suggest that the Back Issues page of this month's magazine would be just about the best place to start your search.

Simon the Sorcerer

Please could you help me on Simon the Sorcerer? I'm in Rapunzel's castle and I've gone through the floor boards and opened the tomb with the mummy in. However, I can't get the staff off him. Please, please, please could you help me? Mark Hollifield, Billingham

Once you have opened the tomb you should be chased away by the mummy. It is then a simple matter of returning to the tomb, opening it again and picking up the loose bandages. If things have gone according to plan you should now be able to take the staff.

Monkey Island 2 I have been stuck on Monkey island 2 for about two weeks over Christmas. I am on Part IV, Dinky Island. I have found the treasure and now I am in a load of tunnels. I know I have to get things to make a voodoo doll of LeChuck. I have LeChuck's pants, bogie and the skull I got from the first aid room. Do you know how to get the other parts for the voodoo doll? Please help me!

Edward Kirwin, Camberley

I do indeed know how to get the other parts for the voodoo doll young man. First you will need to get a kewpie doll from the storeroom. Then you will need LeChuck's beard. This is a simple matter of using the elevator a couple of times until LeChuck appears. When the lift doors open and he tries to use the voodoo doll on you, use the lever and his beard will become caught in the doors. You can get the beard when the doors open again. Now Looks a bit scary to me Guy? Are you sure you should be talking to this weirdo?

all you have to do is put the hanky, dad's skull, the beard, the doll and the underwear in the juju bag, and you'll have your very own powerful voodoo doll. Good eh?

Liberation Here's a helpful tip for Liberation: If you can't find who just nicked something out of your hands, go and try to talk to everybody. If you come across someone who has a fist instead of an open hand, then he's your man.

David Clarke, Filey

Why thankyou very much David. I'm sure there are plenty of readers out there who will be grateful for that particular tip. What a kind soul you are.

Valhalla

Another Valhalla fan crying out for help: On Level One I cannot get past the

They aren't in the shops... you'll struggle getting one via mail order – in fact they've disappeared! What with all these Commodore shenanigans going on, the good old A1200 is a bit thin on the ground just now. But you can own one. Oh yes you can!

ell what do have here? Only one of the last existing 1200s in the world at the present time! And what's more we're giving it away. What? Surely we must be crazy to be giving this top prize away? Maybe so, but we're feeling particularly generous. Yes indeed, it can be yours in exchange for a little time spent using your imagination, and

Coming complete with a mouse, joysticks and the rest of the more importantly, the price of a stamp. stuff you'd expect, this 1200 is surely a collectors item right now. Well yes, we do actually, or at least we should. Our jobs are on

We think computer gamesplayers get a raw deal these days. Everyone thinks that all you lot do all day is sit staring at a screen playing some childish game or other, and to be honest, in most cases we tend to agree. That's what this bit is all about. An attempt to broaden the horizons of our blander readers by letting them know that there is a life outside computers. Whether they choose to experience it or not is up to them.

Wayne's World 2

To buy - £10.99 Cert. 12

Join Wayne and Garth as they catch-phrase their way around Loservillle USA (Aurora) once more in a determined bid to stage a charity concert at which they hope to persuade their fave band of rocksters, Aerosmith, to appear. Unlike the original Wayne's World, (which in retrospect isn't really as funny as it seemed at the time), there's a sort of halfway decent plot thrown in this time for good measure. This mainly involves Wayne's vivid dreams where a half naked Indian bloke takes him into the desert to meet and converse with a somewhat dazed and confused Jim Morrisson (of The Doors fame).

As well as the main storyline there are several other sideplots to follow, and watch out for some excellent cameo performances from Christopher Walken as the suited-up baddy with an eye for Wayne's girlfriend Cassandra (Tia Carrerra), and Kim Basinger as the ridiculously named Honey Hornée who turns Garth into a would-be killer.

Wayne's World 2 is well worth a butcher's, and it's a lot funnier than the first one.

Star Trek The Next Generation Interactive Video Board Game

Board games are undergoing something of a revolution these days, with interactive video versions proving extremely popular. They are basically a traditional game played against a clock governed by an accompanying video cassette. The video sets the scene for the game, informing you that the only people on board the USS Enterprise are a repair crew consisting of you and whoever else is playing the game with you. You watch as the scene unfolds and a Klingon Warrior, who has had enough of peace between the Federation and his homeworld, steals the Enterprise with the intention of starting a new war.

Each game lasts for 60 minutes with the players rolling the dice and moving around while the video shows the Enterprise speeding through space towards its destination with a clock in the bottom corner counting down the game time. Every so often the Klingon hijacker pops up on the screen and bellows out some orders to the players, at which point you must stop whatever you're doing and carry out his instructions. You may think that the inclusion of a video limits the amount of times you can play, but it works surprisingly well and each game is different from the last. This is extremely involving due to the interactive nature of the video, and looks to be the way forward for what has long been one of the nation's favourite pastimes.

This month's 'AA Choice' vid to rent is the Arnie-starring True

Lies, and it's familiar territory for the first non-English speaking Presidential candidate. The heavily accented one is international spy and special agent Harry Tasker, the best in the business, said business being largely based around maining people and blowing things up.

His wife (Jamie Lee Curtis) is blissfully ignorant of her spouse's profession, believing him to be a humble salesman, a deception that tends to fall apart when Harry spends days away from home on top secret missions. So, suspecting him of having an affair, she sets about having one of her own.

All of this is merely a backdrop to the inevitable get-the-baddies-and-save-the-goodies action sequences that Schwarzenegger and director James Cameron do so well together, the action in this case taking place largely on and along the sunny Florida Keys (they actually bought a bridge and blew it up – none of that studio effects rubbish here)! If Shadowlands and The Piano are your cup of tea then there's no joy here, but for actions fans everywhere this is... well, Arnie.

This one got the whole team round for a game. Anyone who struggles on particular subjects in the full version of Trivial Pursuit, but is a bit of a TV buff, will find this latest spin-off the ideal solution. You can now amaze your friends and family with your knowledge of television from times both recent and long gone. Engage in reminiscences about classic period dramas, roar with laughter at side-splitting memories of Morecambe and Wise, and cry floods of tears when you remember particularly poignant episodes of Lassie. They're all in here, and during the course of a game many of them will come out. Anyone who's played Trivial Pursuit will know that if the players are anything short of genius level the game will take quite some time, very often lasting the whole evening. This game is not far short of a national institution these days, with new versions coming out at regular intervals, all adding to the enormous fortune that its creators are amassing - even they admit it's a simple idea that took them less than an hour to draw up. So, why not do yourself a favour and add to their massive pot of gold by nipping out to the shop and buying yourself a copy of this classic.

Dear AA,

In issue 67 you complained about Dennis White's spelling in his longwinded letter about something he should have thrown back at his wife when she handed it to him (as he knew the quality of it was not equal to the quality of that which he controls... or so he thinks). But I think you should not have complained so much about his spelling and grammar, because this caused me to take up my magnifying glass to see this bad use of English.

The thing was, I was surprised because I thought the mistake in the printed letter was just something that had been in the original, but no - this mistake was not there. If you want to know what I mean just read the printed version of the letter, remembering that you always start a sentence with a capital, and that 'I', as in 'me' should be capital too.

All that is left to be said is I really enjoy your mag and wait eagerly for the next copy to come through the door (I am a subscriber).

Yours, grumbling at first but then commending you,

Nicholas DeCourcy, Ilford, Essex

Oops.

It's out!

Dear Paul, With reference to the letter from B. Robson in issue 67, he may be interested to hear that Loom has been re-released with four more games on the 'LucasArts Classic Collection - Adventure' compilation, and that Plan 9 From Outer Space is being sold by Wizard Games, who can be found in the magazine. I hope that helps!

Talking of mag advertisements, both Software First and Premier Mail Order have Jack The Ripper in stock and available to buy - not bad for a game which, "As far as we know, has never been released." Stuart N. Hardy, Sheffield

"Hello, Software First." "Hiya, I'm after Jack the Ripper for the Amiga. You don't have it in stock do you?"

"Just hang on a sec... [pause]... no, sorry, don't even have a listing for it."

"OK, never mind, bye." And...

"Hello, Premier."

"Hiya, I'm after Jack the Ripper for the Amiga. You don't have it in stock do you?"

"No - hasn't been released yet." "OK, never mind, bye." Blimey eh? But I know where you're coming from.

No justice

Dear Sir,

I recently read that letter in AA in which veteran letter writer Stuart N. Hardy said how the terrain plays very little part in Fields of Glory by MicroProse.

While I can appreciate how this may deter experienced wargamers who have spent years playing the hex-based boardgames and tabletop miniature battles etc, I think most of his criticism was unjustified. The game as it stands is extremely quick and easy to play, ensuring that novices to this genre (myself included) will have no difficulty in picking it up.

It has given me an interest in the period and I am sure to look twice now at future wargames before giving them the 'No thanks' and ignoring them on the shop shelves in favour of the latest arcade blast. I wonder how many would-be followers it has converted to the cause!

Therefore even Mr. Hardy must admit that MicroProse deserve some credit for releasing this great game (even if he himself does not enjoy it), simply because it has brought at least one new fan to this type of game. Surely that's not a bad thing is it? Besides, the terrain isn't everything. Just look at chess, one of the oldest and most famous of all strategy games - this uses absolutely no terrain at all yet still manages to captivate generations of game players. Yours faithfully, David O'Connor, Dinnington

Helping hand

Dear Amiga Action, I would be grateful if you could answer these few questions:

- 1. Are there going to be any more games to do with Indycar racing on the Amiga?
- 2. Is there going to be a game to do with touring car racing on the Amiga?
- 3. Is Rally being released on the A1200?
- 4. Why is Amiga Action so brilliant? Matthew Fryers, Chorlton, Manchester
- 1. No.
- 2. Nope.
- Nosirree Bob.
- 4. It isn't I mean er, oh, too many reasons to list. Yes, that's it.

Fighting back

Dear AA, I'm retaliating (sorry if it's spelt wrong) [It was, horrendously, but we fixed it up - Phonetics Ed] to the letter from the git Nicholas DeCourcy from Ilford [from a few months ago, but we're too lazy to look it up - Post-Christmas Blues Ed]. In his letter he was drivelling on that we should fight for Amiga rights etc, and that in his school people fall about laughing when he mentions the words, "I've got an Amiga". In my school people fall at my feet when I mention that I've got one. We don't need to defend the Amiga's rights when all the time it is way up there with all the hi-tech consoles. I just think he must go to a pretty weird school, that's all.

B. Maguire, Nowhere-near-Nicholas-DeCourcy [apparently]

I think you must both go to pretty weird schools. Stop talking about computers and have a nice game of conkers and a fag.

Who's he?

Dear AA,

In issue 66 [actually it was issue 67] you had a letter from musician Steve Jacquar of Coventry, and this poor deluded creature seemed to think that merely uttering his name to a random Greek will get you treated like a lord.

The guy's probably mad (like, he's always in the charts), but me and three friends are going to Kos at the beginning of April and want to put his theory to the test.

This is just to let him know that if we end up looking stupid, we'll be after his blood, and what passes for his career will be over for good.

So Steve, if it was a lie, write in and tell Amiga Action now before it's too late.

With love. Tricia Donald, Chester

Put me in!

Dear AA,

I have a complaint, but it's only a small one [I usually find it's someone else who complains about that - Definitely Not Paul].

Three times now I've sent in reader reviews to you, and not once have I had them published.

Don't tell me you don't have the space because other people have had more than one review in the mag.

I don't know, I toil day and bloody night in an attempt to inject my own special humour in the mag, and what do I get for my pains? Nothing!

It's enough to break my heart, so come on, give me a chance. I can write, and everything. Roger Carnal, High Wycombe, Bucks

The problem with your reviews Roger - and yes, I've got about five in front of me now - is that they're for games that we can't get screenshots of. I mean, let me list these: Silver Blades, Chuck Yeager, Swords and Galleons... need I go on? We've got a big cupboard but it isn't bottomless! Send us a nice review of MKII and we'll be happy to oblige. You don't think we'd readily pass up the chance to feature someone by the name of Carnal do you?

Talkback

Serious trouble

Greetings AA, I'm writing to get a few things off my chest. I've had my A1200 for a little over a year, and since the summer I have on average bought two games a week. My collection now stands at over 50, but I have never pirated or received pirated goods, I'm glad to say. I've spent over £1000 on games so far, and feel if Amiga owners pulled themselves together and completely rejected pirates, the computer would then soar above consoles and PCs, probably not technically but in ownership and software sales. I think that Commodore's big mistake was making too many different models

Another thing – from reading the letters in Talkback it seems that people are taking computer games far too seriously, arguing that the Amiga is better or worse than consoles etc.

of Amiga.

You should be happy with what you have. Amiga games are half the price of those for consoles, and you have a much bigger selection. Can you explain why a major computer game shop (Game) sells full price games at a tenner? – Soccer Kid, Out to Lunch, MKII and more?

Lastly, please tell me, 'cos I'm not up on technology, and I'm sure your readers will appreciate it – Is the A1200 better than the SNES/MegaDrive?

Keith Fay, Dublin

Amen to the too seriously comment, though it seems strange coming from a guy who buys two games a week. And yes, Commodore's big mistake was making too many Amigas. (Their smaller ones include not making any at all).

About the A1200 Vs consoles, well, you said it yourself Keith – be happy with what you have. Oh, and the Amiga is way above the consoles and PC in terms of software sold – it accounted for well over 50% of all games sold during the Christmas period, which is a great big Blimey as far as I'm concerned.

Kiki Dee

To Amiga Action,
My name is Firass Kiki from Syria,
20 years old. I have Amiga 600 and Amiga 1200 plus. If you please I want you to send me some information about (joysticks) and some picture of it and the price in Syrians pounds or dollars. Notes: I am very good player in Sensible Soccer (professional), and I wish to enjoy World Cup of Sensible Soccer in 1995. Please tell me if you want to do it or not. Happy New Year, Firass Kiki, Damascus

The first person to make any sense at all of this wins five games from the now-legendary cupboard.

It's a treat!

Yo Action,

I've never been one to complain, but feel I must opine upon the readership of AA, and how lucky the majority of you are!

You whine about software coming out late after months of hype, but hey, at least you have some Amiga software over there.

Do you know how many shops in Boston stock Amiga games? I'll give you a clue – it's less than one! Yes, in order to get my hands on, say, Lemmings 2, I either have to trek the 100-some miles to Maine, or wait for around a month while the product comes via mail.

But do I complain? No I do not! I mean, here I am now, poring over my Dad's PC writing this, looking forward to finishing so that I can load up my latest acquisition, the newly available Nick Faldo's Golf!

No doubt after going a few rounds with the British champion I'll re-read the latest copy of AA that I bought – the October issue! (I'm writing this on January 3). Think yourselves lucky you Brits – the USA can put a man on the moon, boast the biggest and the best of just about everything, but can we import a computer magazine in less than three months? Indeed not. We are the third world of Amigadom–Ross Kilrea, Boston, Mass.

Sorry readers, I thought Ross's letter was more entertaining than that when I began typing it in...

Fury of the furries

Dear AA, In a recent issue of Amiga Action [63, actually], one of the reviewers had cause to mention 'long-haired

Un-SW0S

Dear Paul,

Letter

After reading your review of Sensible World of Soccer, plus another similarly ecstatic response from one of your competitors, and bearing in mind the quality of Sensible Soccer and other Renegade/Sensible offerings [er, such as...], I immediately rushed out and bought the game.

A fortnight or so later, having played the game fairly exhaustively, I read your review again and was left wondering whether or not I had bought the right game, or if my copy had been craftily sabotaged by a ruthless Sensible Software employee. I thought a review was meant to be an unbiased analysis of a game's strong and weak points in the light of standards set by other games in the genre – a judgement on how enjoyable it was. Or something like that, your (admittedly amusing) review ran like some torrent of praise heaped upon an item of perfection. 'Press release from the company involved' is another phrase which comes to mind.

In terms of playing the actual game, I am inclined to agree with you that SWOS takes some beating. The huge number of teams and DIY tournament option in particular stick the figurative two fingers up at most of its competition in this area, and are well worthy of a 95% rating. However, the career management option cannot even be ranked close to this in terms of quality. It contains several irritating minor flaws (which may be down to me being over-expectant), and one major fault which no magazine reviewer or anyone at Sensible seems to have noticed. Compared to management simulations such as the Premier and Championship Manager series', this part of SWOS comes a very poor second.

For a start, the squads you are given are ludicrously small. All top teams would have larger squads that could be supplemented with youth players. The risks of suspension and injury are suspiciously high, and yet you must pick a squad of 14 from only 16 or 17 players for every game.

For European games you are required to select 16 players, exacerbating the problem, and this is where the major flaw arises. If, often through no fault of your own, you are deprived of as few as two players through injury or suspension, and thus cannot field a full team with substitutes, then you are stuck. You are likely only to realise this problem when you get to the team selection screen, when the only option is to play the game, which the software will simply not let you do if you can't pick a full team. All you can do is be content with swapping between the Edit Tactics and Team Selection screens for eternity, or alternatively reset your machine. This happened to me when I had reached the European Cup quarter finals, League Cup semis and was well clear at the top of the Premiership. I also hadn't saved my game since the beginning of that season. 95% enjoyment? 99% pissed off more like!

A variant on this difficulty is when your goalkeeper gets injured and you have no third keeper to replace your reserve on the bench. The game's not interested in having a player from a different position act as sub, and yes, it's Ctrl-A-A time again, with all the inherent cursing and threats of violence. I can hardly believe these are rare problems as I've encountered them both in less than seven career seasons. There is little you can do to prevent them losers who spend most of their time listening to devil-rock and dreaming about shampoo', as if everyone with such hair was some sort of geek.

How dare you! I really don't see that it is any of your business how long I, personally, choose to wear my hair.

Greg Dowel, Argyle

Lighten up Greg.

Throw your knick Amiga Action, M Macclesfield, SK on fax no: 0625

other than carefully saving the game constantly, or buying loads of cheap, rubbishy players to increase your squad size. This is hardly the route to success.

Next gripe is valuations. They're the only method available of ascertaining a player's qualities, and they are ridiculously determined. For example, Andy Cole playing up front for my team scores 56 goals one season and has 40 two-thirds through the next before the game abruptly ends as above. His valuation begins at £4.5M, yet had slipped to £1.9M the last time I saw it. However, Alan Shearer, who musters a measly 19 goals one season and doesn't make the highest scorers chart the next, retains a rating of £9M throughout the game. Hmmm. My defenders and goalkeeper also held their value despite being statistically one of the worst in England.

And it isn't just on valuations that other teams have a clear advantage over your own. None of their players ever get injured or suspended, despite regularly fouling and being fouled themselves, which often means that while you are forced to persist using a variety of on-loan donkeys and players out of position for your team, they can always play their first choice selection. Added to the fact that there is no interaction on the transfer market between clubs other than your own, it hardly gives a realistic feel.

The much heralded financial aspect of the game is also generally a pain, although the ability to part exchange players is a great innovation. The programmers seem to have been very keen to include all the costs they possibly could in the weekly figures, yet on a week to week basis the club only gets income from gate receipts. Commercial activities, TV rights and sponsorship only figure at the end of the season. This means that even a big, successful club can face millions of pounds of debts by the end of the season despite showing a fair degree of caution in the transfer market.

Maybe I was expecting too much from the financial aspect of this game, wanting a Championship Manager-quality management game with all its realism mixed perfectly with a Sensible Soccer action element. If this was not what Sensible Software were aiming for then my minor criticisms become invalid, but the attention to detail in squad and competition data suggests realism was indeed a target.

If I expected near perfection, then the reviews written by yourself and others were the culprit. In a crowded genre in which I already own many games, your review and others clearly trumpeted this as the definitive action and simulation football game, making no clear criticisms whatsoever in your and CU Amiga's case. I find it hard to believe that I am alone in the opinion that it is the former but certainly not the latter. I think your review did a disservice to your readers who, like me, went out and bought something, and in doing so did not get what they expected.

I reckon that either Sensible Software were a bit too generous with their Christmas presents, or you reviewed the game through a thick pair of rose-tinted glasses, dreamily reminiscing about Sensible's past glories and how they could not possibly go wrong with this game!

Cheers for listening, although I'll be surprised if you have all the way through! More rambling than the National Hiking Association, that's me!

Paul Turner, Abbots Langley, Herts

Hello? Is anyone still there? Right, I'll just pick up on one or two things for now. I didn't make any clear criticisms of SWOS because I couldn't find anything that was irrelevant, badly programmed or ill-conceived, and in almost two seasons I've never been short of players, and so have never encountered the Ctrl-A-A problem you described.

Anyway, I'm willing to put it to the test: Has anyone else got a problem with SWOS? Send your letters to the usual address, and mark them 'SWOS or Dross?'. Oh, and try and keep them some way short of novella length.

NAP SHOP WORLD TOUR '94/95

Oops, I've really put my foot in it. Remember last month, with me in Las Vegas winning thousands of dollars? Well things spiralled when I left you, and I now stand before you a multi-millionaire! That's good, no problem there. In fact I like the lifestyle over here so much that I decided to take out citizenship. Of course this would normally take years, but I greased a few palms here and there and now I'm a fully fledged Yankee boy- er... page. Which means I'm eligible for jury service, and already I've been roped into some crappy trial. Had to come to LA too! Real downer - I never got the chance to see the Grand Canyon either. Anyway, it should be over in a few days - just some exfootballer who gave his wife a bit of a slap. Ribena, they call him. Or something...
