

A Journal of the Gesellschaft Deutscher Chemiker

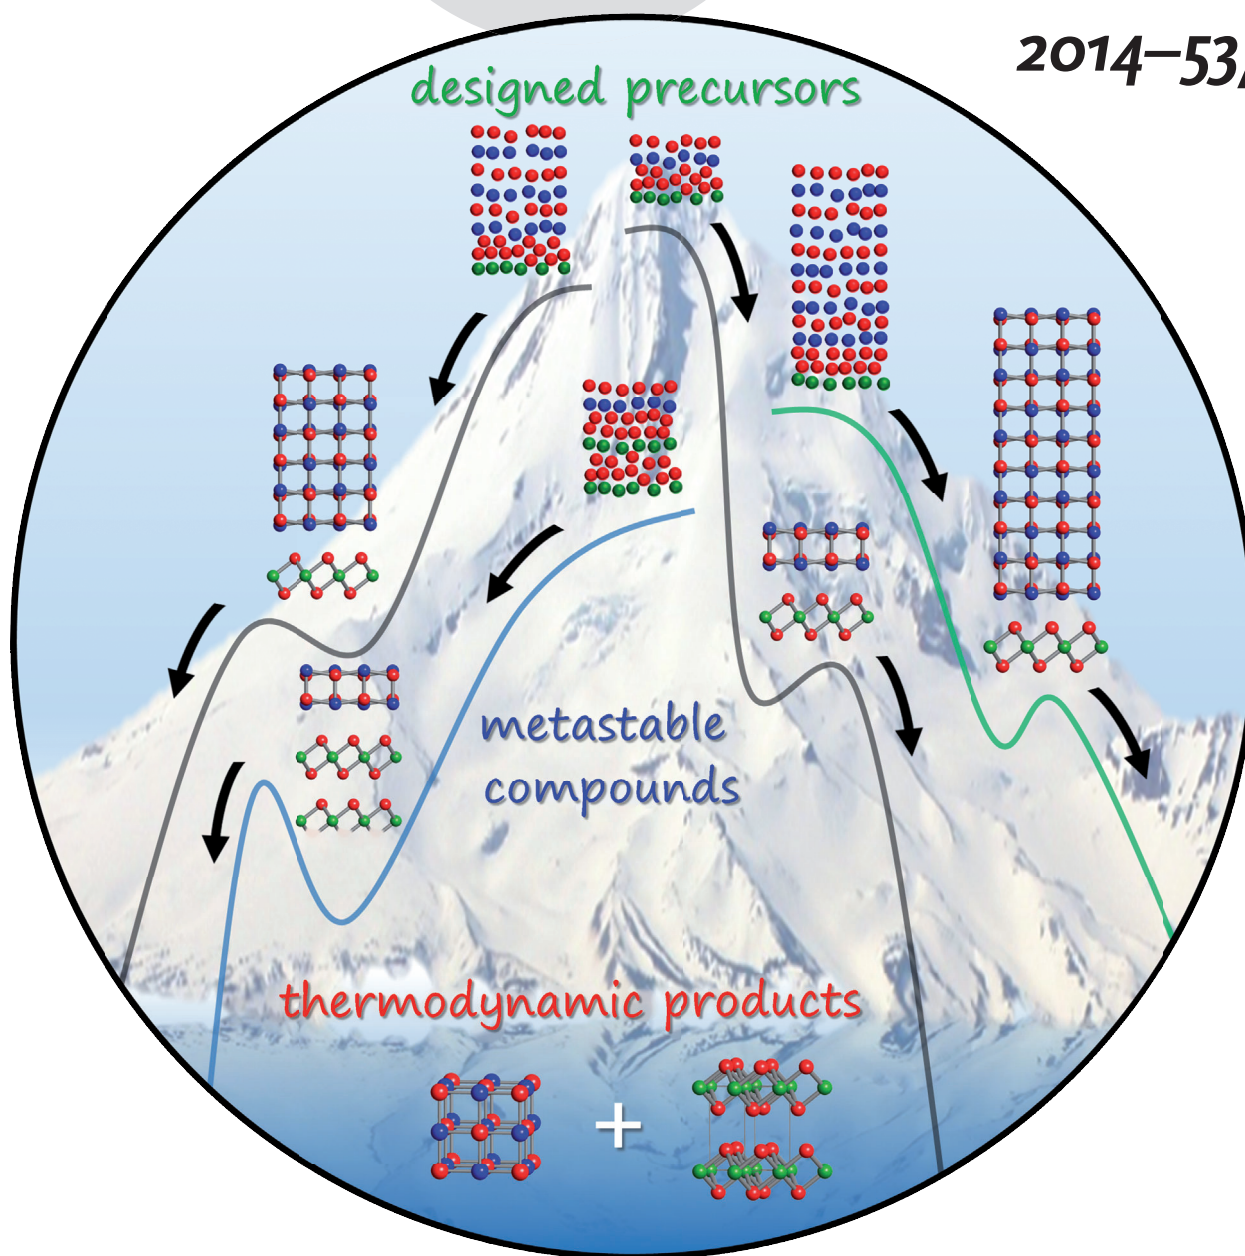

Angewandte Chemie

GDCh

International Edition

www.angewandte.org

2014–53/22

Much like skiers taking different lifts ...

... to different ski runs down a mountain, designed precursors can be used to direct the self-assembly of targeted intergrowth structures, as described by D. C. Johnson et al. in their Communication on page 5672 ff. The image of Oregon's Mount Hood represents the potential energy landscape, and the colored lines illustrate how different starting points lead to the self-assembly of different metastable compounds.

WILEY-VCH