

Editorial 1994

After six issues being published in 1993, this journal has experienced a growing improvement in the quality and number of manuscripts received. We currently receive approximately fifteen manuscripts per month and from which approximately ten are accepted for publication. The scope of the manuscripts ranges from bioorganic, synthetic and medicinal chemistry to bioinorganic chemistry. It is expected that both quality and number of articles will continue to grow, and the journal will provide an international forum for the publication of outstanding original results and critical reviews in the fields as described in the aims and scope.
