

ANALYTICAL PROCEEDINGS

INCLUDING ANALYTICAL COMMUNICATIONS

Exciting new developments in analytical science publishing!

Analytical Proceedings, The Royal Society of Chemistry's established news and information journal, was re-launched in 1994 as a refereed analytical communications journal, enabling the latest progress in research and development from around the world to be conveyed and discussed as it happens.

The new subtitle, Including Analytical Communications, reflects the journal's change of emphasis, and the advent of a new service to analytical scientists everywhere - an effective platform from which to announce the very latest findings and breakthroughs in analytical research. The new format of the journal offers you the following important benefits:

CURRENCY	- research and developments the world over
IMMEDIACY	- communications within 12 weeks of receipt
RELIABILITY	- assurance of rigorous peer review
PARTICIPATION	- in the exchange of vital information
STIMULATION	- ideas and guidance for further research

THE ANALYST

The Analyst is the longest-standing continuously-published English language analytical science journal in the world. It has been at the forefront of analytical chemistry since 1876, and has established a large worldwide readership amongst leading scientists. It covers all branches of analytical science and technology, publishing original research papers, tutorial reviews, and critical reviews of selected techniques and their applications.

The Analyst also contains a full conference diary and conference reports, book reviews, and analytical news.

The Analyst is edited to the highest standards, is wide-ranging in its coverage, rigorously refereed and rapid in publication. In short, The Analyst is an extremely HIGH quality journal which The Royal Society of Chemistry offers to subscribers at a very competitive LOW price.
