³⁶ This paper was presented as part of the panel on 'Uses of Oaths in Greek Literary Texts' at the Annual Meeting of the American Philological Association at San Diego in January 2007. I am most grateful to the Leverhulme Trust, sponsors of my research project on The Oath in Archaic and Classical Greece, of which the panel formed part; to the School of Humanities and the Humanities Research Centre of the University of Nottingham, which provided additional financing for the visit; and above all to my colleagues on the project and the panel, Andrew Bayliss, Isabelle Torrance, Kyriaki Konstantinidou and Lynn Kozak, but for whom none of this would have happened.

KOMANOC

The Greek name that one renders as 'Comanus' is not uncommon in Hellenistic times.¹ Its most famous bearers all lived in the second century B.C. – the grammarian of Naucratis origin, now mainly known as addressee of a treatise by Aristarchus; the influential adviser of the young Ptolemy VI Philometor (with whom the homonymous grammarian is sometimes identified);² and the Cilician slave whose brother Cleon was one of the instigators of the first Sicilian slave revolt.

How should one spell and accentuate their name? Today the orthodox form is Κομανός;³ but in the past some also opted for Κόμανος,⁴ Κωμανός,⁵ and Κώμανος.⁶

As for the spelling, medieval manuscripts exhibit both *Κομανος*⁷ and Κωμανος.⁸ Direct witnesses, however, leave no doubt as to what the correct form is: Κωμανος is never found, whereas Κομανος appears in more than twenty papyri and seven inscriptions.⁹

Given its spelling, the proper noun Κομανος in all likelihood derives from the homographic ethnic noun, itself in turn derived from the place name (τὰ) Κόμανα.¹⁰ Two cities in eastern Anatolia were so called: one was in the Cappadocian region Cataonia, on the river Sarus (Seyhan); the other, in the Pontus, on the river Iris (Yeşil Irmak). In Hellenistic times, both served as cult centres of the goddess Ma; the Pontic Comana, however, was said to have derived its cult from the Cappadocian Comana.¹¹ The latter seems to be Kummanni, an important Hittite sanctuary.¹² Yet the name 'Kummanni' itself predates the Hittites: it goes back to the Hurrians.¹³

II

As to the accentuation, according to Herodian one should write Κόμανος if the following two conditions are satisfied: the middle syllable is short; and the word has no feminine form:

(i) Vindob. Hist. gr. 10 fol. 25^v, ll. 3–6¹⁴

3 τὰ εἰς νος λήγοντα ὑπὲρ δύο συλλαβὰς ἔχον[τα πρὸ τοῦ] τέλ[ου]ς [τὸ α̎ συνεσταλμ]έ-
 4 νον, εἰ μὴ παρασχηματίζοιτο εἰς θηλυκὸν γένος, προπαροξύνεσθαι θέλει,
 5 εἰ μὴ πρὸ τοῦ α̎ <τὸ δ̎ ἦ ε̎ ἦ ι>. ἡ δὲ παράθεσις τῶν λέξεων δηλοῦσα [
 6 στέφανος, εἴτε τὸ προσηγορικὸν εἴτε τὸ κύριον, [

3 ἔχον[τα πρὸ τοῦ] τέλ[ου]ς [τὸ α̎ συνεσταλμ]έ- supplevi | 5 post τοῦ α̎ addidi τὸ δ̎ ἦ ε̎ ἦ ι.

Nouns that end in -νος, are over two syllables, and have a short α̎ before the termination will be proparoxytone unless they can be transformed into the feminine gender, or unless a δ̎, ε̎, or ι stands before the a. But the juxtaposition of words signifying... For example, στεφανος – whether the appellative or the proper noun – ,...

⁷ E.g. Paris. 2548 (saec. x) at A.D. Synt. 2.202.3; Paris. 2771 (saec. x) at Σ Hes. Op. 97a; Marc. 451 (saec. xii) at Phot. Bibl. 244.386a23 = D.S. 34.2.20.

¹⁰ So already F. Bechtel, Die historischen Personennamen des Griechischen bis zur Kaiserzeit (Halle, 1917), 539. The toponym is proparoxytone: see the rule at Herod. Cath. 382.23, which Lentz derived from Steph. Byz. Ethn. 2.11.

Choeroboscus, in an epimerism on the word οὐρανός, will repeat the first part of Herodian's rule almost verbatim:

(ii) Choerob. In Psalm. 79.11 Gaisford τὰ εἰς νος ὑπὲρ δύο συλλαβὰς ἔχοντα πρὸ τέλους τὸ a συνεσταλμένον προπαροξύνεται, εἰ μὴ σχηματίζοιτο εἰς θηλυκὸν γένος· οἶον στεφανος, γέρανος.

Nouns that end in -νος, are over two syllables, and have a short a before the termination are proparoxytone unless they can be transformed into the feminine gender: for example, στεφανος, γέρανος.

Pseudo-Arcadius' version is more complete but less literal:

(iii) [Arcad.] 73.8 Schmidt ~ Herod. Cath. 178.13 Lentz τὰ εἰς ανος τοῦ a βραχέος ὄντος, εἰ μὴ θηλυκὰ ἔχῃ, εἰ μὴ πρὸ τοῦ a τὸ δ ἢ ε ἢ ι ὑπάρχῃ, προπαροξύνεται· στεφανος, κλίβανος, λίβανος, χόανος.

Nouns that end in -ανος, the a being short, are proparoxytone unless they have a feminine, or unless there is a δ, an ε, or an ι before the a: for example, στεφανος, κλίβανος, λίβανος, χόανος.

If the noun in question fails rule (i) because it has a feminine form, then one should accentuate it as Κομανός:

(iv) [Arcad.] 73.19 = Herod. Cath. 179.21 τὰ διὰ τοῦ ανος τριγενῆ ὀξύνεται· στεγανός (ὁ πυκνός), πιθανός (ὁ πῤαος), ίκανός, ὀρφανός.

Three-gendered nouns in -ανος are oxytone: for example, στεγανός (compact),¹⁵ πιθανός (docile),¹⁶ ίκανός, ὀρφανός.

Rule (iv) or its equivalent is no longer preserved in the Viennese palimpsest. Yet there is no reason to doubt its Herodianic provenance.

Proper and appellative nouns do not qualify for rule (iv), because they are not three-gendered. In the case of a proper noun such as Στέφανος, some may be tempted to think a feminine form exists, viz. Στεφάνη; however, the proper noun Στέφανος itself is not two- or three-gendered, for its gender can never be determined by the gender of another word: according to rule (i), then, the word is proparoxytone – which is what Herodian says. Similarly, the appellative γέρανος is proparoxytone although it may be used not only in the masculine but also in the feminine gender. Hence, according to (iv), the ethnic noun should be written Κομανός.

Whether or not the corresponding proper noun is oxytone depends on the length of its second syllable. Choeroboscus, in the already mentioned passage on οὐρανός, proposes a rule that purports to settle the question:

(v) Choerob. In Psalm. 79.6 τὰ διὰ τοῦ ανος, εἰ μὲν εἰς ὑπὲρ δύο συλλαβὰς, συνεπείκει τὸ a· οἶον στεφανος, γέρανος, οὐρανός – εἰ μὴ ποιητικῶς ἐκτείνονται. εἰ δὲ εἰς ὑπὲρ τρεῖς συλλαβὰς, ἐκτείνουσι τὸ a· οἶον Ἡρωδιανός, Ἰουστινιανός – πλὴν τοῦ Ὠκεανός.

¹⁵ Cf., e.g., Synagoge c 196 Cunningham; Hsch. c 1681 Hansen.

¹⁶ Cf., e.g., Hsch. c 6701 Latte; Phot. Lex. c 2175–7 Theodoridis.

Nouns in -avoc have a short a if they are over two syllables: for example, στέφανος, γέρανος, οὐρανός – unless they are long by poetic licence. But if they are over three syllables, they have a long a: for example, Ἡρωδιανός, Ἰουστινιανός – excepting Ὠκεανός.

Again, rule (v) may well represent Herodianic thought: it immediately precedes rule (ii), which we know stems from Herodian; the three examples of its first half are all discussed by Herodian in the context of rule (i); and it also appears to agree with Herodian's teaching.¹⁷ Accordingly, the proper noun Κομανός contains a short a and thus is proparoxytone.

The palimpsest confirms this prediction, for one of the numerous examples illustrating canon (i) is – Κόμανος. The word clearly appears in both the main text and the left-hand margin.¹⁸ The main text (fol. 25^v, l. 23) reads κομανος· κοπανος·...

The lemmata in the margin (ll. 39–40) read

ΚΟΜΑΝΟC

ΚΟΠΑΝΟC

Hence Herodian considers the proper noun proparoxytone. This fact has not yet been recognised: editors and lexicographers alike appear to regard the word as an otherwise unattested appellative noun.¹⁹

To come back to where we began – when speaking of Comanus the courtier, of Comanus the grammarian, and of their namesakes one should from now on use the form Κόμανος.²⁰
