

Colloid & Polymer Science renews

Colloid & Polymer Science, as an international journal of longstanding tradition, is devoted to colloid and polymer science and its interdisciplinary interactions. As such, it responds to a demand which has lost none of its actuality as revealed in the trends of contemporary materials science.

To enable an effective and fast dissemination of scientific manuscripts, three categories of contributions are presented: Leading contributions, articles, and short communications. The latter will be published with high priority, at least within three months after acceptance of the manuscript! With this new immediacy, Colloid & Polymer Science continues as a reliable partner for an effective distribution of scientific results.
