ow the important question is:
does it really deserve that high a score? Now's your chance to try it out for yourself. Ladies and gentlemen, we give you: Mayhem in Jellyland. The principles the same as in last month's demo. Zoom like the wind through the sad level collecting all the bags of dust to take to the dino underground. Then when he's made the world happy again whizz like a force nine gale around the level collecting as many stars as you possibly can. So wham that joystick in port two and bounce across the scrolling landscape.

If you're having trouble finding Theo
Saurus look around on the platforms underneath the start point and you should find a way to get to him. But don't go down the waterfall to him if you haven't collected all the bags of dust. You'll just end up in a big squashy mess on his floor. And, believe me, you wouldn't like to see that, especially if you've just had your tea.

alk about cyberpunk, Lifeforce is a jacker's dream. Imagine a disused power station in orbit around our home planet, totally self-maintained. Then consider what would happen if the system was fatally flawed, a bug in the system that was also fully self-controlled, adapting itself, growing and eventually taking control of the whole network.

Futureworld has been uninhabited since an experiment went seriously wrong - The main form of transport around the station was to be a Flexible Robot Caterpillar (FRC). During the development stage, in 1998, civil war breaks out on earth and immediately the FRC project is converted to produce evil fighting machines. A couple of months into the research something went disastrously wrong and the entire station was taken over by mutant FRC's.

The war finally came to an end in 2010 and earthlings started to think about reinhabiting the space station. The first ship load of people sent to repopulate mysteriously disappeared. So an unmanned reconnaissance vehicle was sent to investigate. It brought back terrifying pictures of mutant machines running riot.

The decision was made to send in a force of warriors, but then they changed their mind and sent in a dispensable tank driver yep - you. Your prime directive is to destroy the mutant FRC's by dropping eight fuel rods by first shooting away the tail of the FRC's (the long wormy things) and then driving over the remaining head to pick it up. The head will automatically drop into the reactor as the tank is driven over it

GENRE.....ARCADE ADVENTURE

Welcome to the set of Cell Block H ladies and gentlemen. Please don't touch the paper reddy Hardest, after one of his "little parties" sets off on a blast through the Milky Way to play real life space invaders with a meteor storm.

Unfortunately, Freddy, being a little under the influence swerves the wrong way past a rock and goes headlong into a meteorite, crash landing on the moon of the planet Ternat, site of the Alien base of Kaldar

Bruised and hungover he awakens to find his ship completely trashed and hoards of unfriendly aliens maraurding his way. There's only one thing to do - find his way to the alien base and hi-jack a ship to get off the cruddy satellite.

Part one of the game finds Freddy wandering the wastelands in search of the entrance to the base. The aliens inhabiting this particular moon have very strange and random reproductive systems. Which means that a reasonably safe looking area can turn within a matter of seconds into a certain death trap.

Other Info......Blast everything and head to your right to get to the enemy base. Make a note of the code, you'll need it for part two next month.

There are basically two types of alien to contend with. those that float ion mid air and those that run along the ground. Freddy's got two types of attack move to contend with the two sorts of baddie. The gun is activated by holding down on the joystick and pressing fire, you can't move any distance if you're firing but you can pivot to fire in the opposite direction. Freddy can also do flying kicks to destroy aliens in the air (simply hit fire to kick in the direction you're facing), but most of the time it's better to just duck under them.

The entrance to the base is somewhere to your right, so just keep going until you get there. Restart points are sprinkled as liberally as hundreds and thousands throughout the game but they're not marked at all, so once you've got past an awkward place the likelihood is that you won't have to do that bit again if you die.

DON'T FORGET!

Once you reach the base don't forget to write down the code number that you're given, you'll need it for part two next month.

e never knew our readers were so fab! Here's another offering from a 64 maniac, and very nice it is too. You play the part of a warden on a moon based prison colony. It's your job to catch any would be escapees before they walk out the front door to freedom. To capture an escaping convict you have to negotiate 4 levels of the prison, avoiding various security devices that the convict has managed to set off in his bid for freedom.

Collision with any security device stuns you for a couple of seconds and reduces your timer. If you don't manage to catch him before your time runs out then you're shown the door (with no sign of any gold watch or carriage clock).

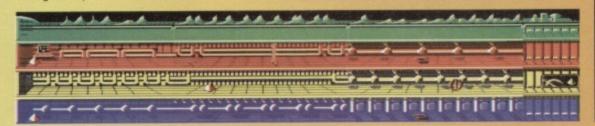

To help you along the way there's a couple of computer terminals on level three, that logging onto (pull up on the joystick to hook up to the network) will take you to a subgame. Complete the sub-game successfully and you'll be rewarded with a jet pack to speed you on your way. The sub games come in the form of a space dodge type thing where you cant shoot anything but have to avoid everything that comes your way. Or as an asteroids type thing where you just shoot everything in sight. Every fifth level is a bonus round with no baddies to avoid but there's still a convict to collect. Don't get to him in time and it's down the job centre for you.

THE FIGURES NEVER LIE

The European Leisure Software Publishers Association (ELSPA to its closest friends) has published the results of a survey into under 16's and computer games.

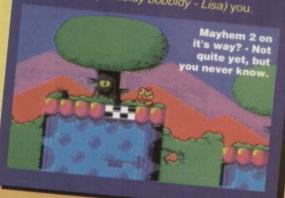

The report from the Aston University research group give a fascinating insight into the way children consume computer games. Only 20% of the 150 children questioned listed video games as one of their top 3 pastimes. Less than one in seven had given up or reduced the time they devote to other pastimes to play computer games. And a huge 74% of the kids thought that there should be parental time restrictions, but only 42% reported any such restrictions.

NO ARSENAL

Unfortunately we have some bad news for you now. Thalamus have made the decision to pull out of the 64 market The first casualty of this decision will be Arsenal FC, a promising footie game which has been in production for the past few months. Ollie was looking forward to it so much that he broke down in tears when he heard. He's so upset in fact that he's got all his mates to sign a petition. We don't think he'll get far with just three names though (and one of them is Elvis Presley).

MORE MAYHEM

Just when you thought it was safe to go back to CF, Mayhem might be making a return. John Rowlands, from Apex Computer Productions said today "If the sales of Mayhem are good enough then we'll probably bring out a deluxe version of the game with new aliens and new level maps." So get ordering your copies folks, it's all up to (Wibbly wobbly bibbidy bobbidy - Lisa) you.

LITTLE YELLOW BOOTIES

We're about to become a daddy here at CF Claire Fullick our Production Coordinator has just announce that she's pregnant. Claire's very proud of her Welsh hertage so she's going to go home to Cardiff to have the sprog "Well. I couldn't have it cheering for the wrong side at Cardiff Arms Park, could I?"

Claire's been really ill with morning sickness, so if someone blonde and bubbly jumps the queue in a public loo don't shout at her - it might just be our Claire trying not to

FUTURE INTERNATIONAL

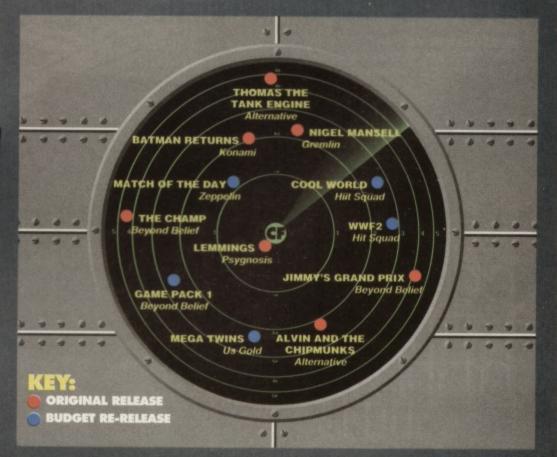

Not only does Commodore Format share its air with some of the biggest selling computer magazines on the market, but it now is part of a multi-national company. Yep we've bought up our first overseas interest in the form of G.P. Publishing in the good old U.S. of A. Let's hope America feels the need for a 64 title published over there, hey Hutch? We could all do with the change of scenery Yeuck, I hate babies, all they do is cry, eat sleep and dirty their nappies. They're no use to any one. I tried to tell her but Claire's still gonna go ahead and have one. Poor girl, I hear it hurts like hell (and the mess! Euck - Ed.).

Who's the most sporty writer on CF? The one person you can guarantee it isn't is Simon Forrestleaper. That's why we asked him to give us his ultimate sports sim – 'cos we're mean like that.

He's still sulking in the corner to this day.

Remember the old days? What ever whacking your joystick back and forth to make Daley Thompson plod limply down a track while lots of computer controlled runners slam past at three times the speed?

Did anyone ever enjoy those games

Worst still are those awful management sims (like Match Of The Day) that have all the action, speed and excitement of a diseased potato. So what would I have as my ultimate sports sim? Well, this is a bit difficult really, because I despise all forms of physical exercise and anything trying > to portray this hideous way of spending your

So what with all these problems, it appears that from all the writers on the face of this grubby little planet, I'm probably the worst choice for devising, recommending, or even commenting go regardless, though, with the all new Hairy Sports Sim.

here – running is dull. Several then stop (some carry on for hours then stop, but there's no accounting for insanity). Where's the fun in watching this? More importantly, why do we then go out and buy versions for the home? Apparently we did, though,

so the slam-'em-up was (and I use the phrase reluctantly here) born.

The idea was simple (let's face it, it hasn't really changed since the start) - all you had to do was win the race by moving your runner's legs with your joystick. This, at the moment of conception, mutated into 'how fast can you waggle your joystick?'. Unfortunately, this turned the staying to use their keyboard didn't type very many letters with their machines after that, because their Q and P keys (or whatever) were no longer working.

So, to be quite honest, I don't really think I'll be having any running bits in the all new Hairy Sports Sim. What will I have, though?

TORN HAMSTRING

What about a football sim, then? Well,

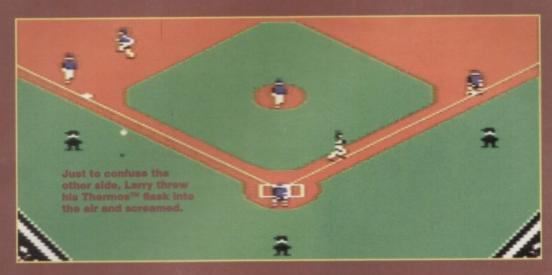

90, really, as it allowed all sort of player swapping, team arrangement, a little bit of strategy, an international different teams, single or tournament-type feeling. wonderful graphics, and atmospheric sound.

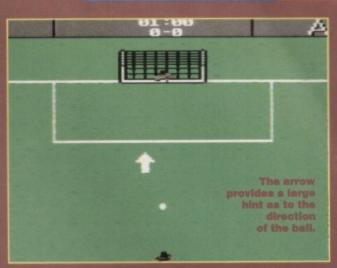

Me, well, I was just playing this footy game. I've got just kicking the ball up the pitch - and winning (I used my magic joypad).

The thing about footy sims is that they're really fun – you're belting round this pitch, tackling people and running around with this ball, while the other frustration. So whatever the sport, I'll 1400 have a fab two player option.

PERFORATED EARDRUM

The other end of the spectrum then, is something that, instead of being violently good-willed, is passively deadly shooting. The ability to appear gentlemanly while practising the art of blowing something into a million pieces is indeed a rare gift.

So whatever the weather, we've just got to violence to really pick the pace up at times.

Baseball - the sport of kings (Wasn't that supposed am. Have you seen all those dramatic 'sliding

SHATTERED RIBS

'blocking someone's shot' basically just means organ'. Now Hammond music is detestable, but there are a few upsides - take the justified brutality and complete disregard for the welfare, feelings, and structural integrity of every opponent.

So this we really need – organized violence. A clean kill should help the odds along in just about any sport, given that you kill the right person.

SLIPPED DISC

If there's one sport that can get really entertaining, it's wrestling. You must understand straight the way that there are three main types of wrestling:

British – This is based on the unquestioned assumption that the human body can withstand almost any punishment with only the minimum of damage. This is, unfortunately, almost completely untrue, and subsequently claims several lives (well, limbs, anyway) per year – not all of which belong to wrestlers.

WCW - This is the branch of American wrestling that involves people being unnecessarily loud on almost every occasion. As yet, it is uncertain as to whether these characters continue with the loud vessel-popping activities off-camera, but if so, it'd make christenings a martial art is astounding, and can only be respected, but there's still one problem that no amount of sportsmanship will sort out. I'm referring, of course, to the fact that Judo, Karate and the like are the only sports in which you actually score points for damaging your opponent. I like this – and I think it's worth including.

CONCUSSION

The one game I'll never understand the relevance of is golf. As a game being played it may well draw on reserves of skill, accuracy, motor control and walking endurance, but how in the hell did anyone see fit to televise it? So you're channel hopping on a Sunday afternoon, and you come across this programme in which you're shown a very short clip of some grass, then half an hour of almost solid sky. Why?

The computer simulations aren't much better, with a blokey standing in front of a few polygons, a scale flying up one side of the screen, and nothing much else.

Look, it's just golf! Why the hell do you want to see a computer If there's one sport I ublic Domain software - fun, isn't it? If it isn't, you probably don't know what it s anyway, so read the boxout entitled 'What Is It, Then?'. Right - now that's sorted, let's talk for a bit about the PD

The public domain scene, as you may or may not know, is about a whole lot more that just cheap software. You see, the PD scene survives on two

- A flow of fresh software
- Active libraries

And when there isn't enough of the above, you'll notice - too few libraries stocking the same old software isn't what anyone would call a 'scene' That's why this spread is here - to get a few more people a lot more involved with the PD scene, by feeding that very same scene's needs with fresh software and more libraries. How am I going to do this? I'm not -

WRITING FRESH SOFTWARE

If you can program, you can program PD software - you don't have to be the kind of expert is takes to create commercial software. The only thing stopping you, really, is having a good concept.

The concept bit comes from a now longrunning problem with public domain software - it's all the flipping same! Every other title is a scrolly demo or a Tetris clone! You can't swing a dead swan for knocking over a stack of Tetris-packed cassettes. You'll need a new concept, then.

There is one source for ideas that'll never run dry - the commercial market. If you keep an eye out on the PD scene, you'll almost definitely see

WHAT IS IT, THEN?

Public Domain is exactly as the phrase suggests belonging to the public. So if a programmer submits a program to the PD scene, any library can stock it. The library can then distribute the software to anyone who requests it, for no profit whatsoever. That's the point - neither the programmer nor the library makes any profit from the software - in essence, it's free. So you send off for a library's catalogue, and can order discs and tapes loaded full of software for around £2 per time!

And Captain Derek

So however you manage it, try and come up with a vaguely original idea, so that people will order your stuff for the software itself, not the fact it's a cheap imitation of a more expensive title. If you must just blatantly copy something else. there are two important things to

 Don't clone a puzzle game - firstly because it might be Tetris, and even if it isn't there'll still be at least five other PD

 Be very careful that you don't end up in court facing some very serious charges of copyright and maybe even licence infringements.

So when you've finished your software (okay, I know it was a pretty huge leap of logic, but I'm not going to take you step by step through writing a game or utility), just send it off to a library.

How would you go about that, though? Stand by for the Hairy™ guide to the art of starting a PD library (with only a little bit of Zen). 1 Devise a system to run your library on. You've got two main options - either ask your customers to send you a tape or disk and an SSAE, along with 40p or whatever, as a copying charge, or charge £2 upwards and supply the disc and return postage from your end of things

Sort out a postal address. If you talk to PD librarians, a lot of them will tell you that they just enjoy having loads of mail to open, but you really should make note of one thing - it really is a lot of > mail. You could of course get a PO box at your local post office, but I wouldn't worry about that sort of thing too much. One thing you must worry about is your phone number.

and whether you want the library to use that. If you do, be prepared for Stock your library. You can do this by talking to your C64 owning friends and see if they've got any stuff they'd be willing to donate, writing software yourself, advertising for contributions in magazines like this one, asking other libraries if they'd be willing to donate anything, etc. Create a catalogue. This is either on paper

Copyright. In short, anything you write is automatically copyright of yourself, and no-one else. If you wish to donate something to public domain, it must be your own work. The only person who can declare something public domain is the copyright owner. Simple as that

When a title is in the public domain, a certain degree of protection still follows it. You see, though the program can be freely copied, etc, it cannot be altered. Any attempt to alter it is an infringement of copyright. Also, it cannot be dissected. You cannot use a routine from a public domain program in your own software without permission from the author. Nuff said.

STARTING YOUR OWN

You don't have to send your work off to a different library of course - you could just start your own!

6 Get publicity. This one's really simple - just send details of your library to fanzines, CF, the other CF (if you really must), and get your name around. This is obviously vital, as you don't want to run a library that no-one's heard of and therefore no-one uses.

6 Keep going. That's right, 'cos once you've managed all the other stuff, all you've got to do is keep filling orders, adding titles to your collection, and sending new software around for publicity purposes. If you've reached this stage, you're a fully fledged PD librarian - congratulations!

NO CHARGE?

There has always been debate on the subject of money for PD software, but the way we (and most library owners) see it is like

Running a PD library takes a lot of time and effort. Duplicating the software and compiling the various collections is a lengthy, time consuming process, and so it's only fair that users of the library are expected to pay a nominal fee to cover the efforts of the library owner.

This fee should not, however, be all that large. If you're considering charging anything over one pound, don't. Look around at established libraries, and see what they're asking great deal less than the libraries currently stocking the software, or you will, in effect, just be ripping the customers off.

ALMOST PD

When is PD not PD? When it's 'Almost PD' What's 'Almost PD'?

Simple. It all started with rogue libraries starting up and simply stocking software from other libraries, but charging ludicrous prices, making a profit from what was entirely other people's work. The programmers and established library owners countered this with a rather drastic measure.

'Almost PD' is software that, by demand of the author through copyright entitlements, can only be rightly so. You should ask yourself two main questions before diving in head first:

Is it worth my time? Well, financially, running a library is never going to be all that rewarding. But you will benefit in other ways. For one thing, you'll develop a large network of contacts and C64ing friends through your efforts.

 Will I be adding anything new to the PD scene? There are too many libraries out there that are just stocking a rough assortment of everybody else's stuff under their own name. Why? No-one's rightly sure, but it's plainly obvious that there's not much point to the exercise.

If you're a fan of the GamesMaster TV show then you'll appreciate the fact that Dexter Fletcher (the new presenter) will be at the show for the whole four days. Dexter will be conducting all sorts of brilliant games challenges featuring pop stars and all sorts of other celebrities.

Radio One will be driving their Roadshow truck to the show where they'll broadcast live. The 1FM DJs will be putting on all sorts of special challenges and games featuring some enormously famous pop stars, so if you're into celebspotting, be sure to check it out. Perhaps the most interesting bit of news is the freebie Disney tickets to see Aladdin. If you go to the show on the Thursday then you'll get given a preview ticket to attend an exclusive preview of this superb animated film at a cinema near you. The CF crew have seen Aladdin and we can heartily recommend it. Check the film out if only because Robin Williams excels as the naughty genie in the lamp. Hurrah!

ATTENDANTS

Dear TMB.

Help! I'm suffering withdrawal symptoms. I've been without my C64 for 7 weeks now. Ahhh! We moved house and my C64 is still under a ton of furniture and boxes in the depths of the front bedroom. So, you are my only contact with the unbeatable C64. Now on with the questions.

1 Why do people who write to you threaten or flatter you into printing their letter. This is so stupid and a boring waste of space. Why don't they just get on with

2 Why doesn't somebody release budget discs as well as cassettes? A lot of people (me for starters) cannot afford discs (unless we save up) on our meagre pocket money. Also, at a cheaper Regrets, he's had a few, but then again too many to mention. The Mighty Brain's had a millenium in which to screw up. If price, budget discs would sell quite well. Zit (! - Ed), Mundsley, Norfolk

1 What you mean like you have?

2 Because there's not a large enough market for them. Absolutely everyone has a Datasette, but not everyone has a disk drive. Incidentally, it was a bit cruel of your parents to name you Zit, wasn't it? Why not change it by deed poll or something?

THE FIRST BIT

Dear TMB.

In Issue 36 you quoted question five saying that the Atari ST was the first 16-bit computer. Is this right? Surely the TI-99/4A was a 16-bit computer years ago? Kenneth Hughes, Bristol.

Due to a type-setting error on our Linotron Hell colour separation film production unit, that's what it sounded like, yes. However, the words "was the first beige 16-bit computer." dropped off the end. All of which means that while you're synopsis is indeed correct, I wasn't wrong, merely the victim of a nasty computer error.

LISA'S NO.1 FAN

I was going to write to you about something which would anger and cause disagreement among all your readers. However I couldn't quite think of anything to comment on which would cause such problems. Instead I will ask you for answers on the following. 1 What does Rod Lawton do these days?

2 Do I deserve to live forever? I used to buy CF every month for a year before even owning or intending to own a > 3 What is so funny about even mentioning the SX64. I thought this machine was a great idea and wouldn't mind one myself.

4 Let's face it, Kellett is the sexy one, not Clur.

5 CF35 - the best ever. Stephen Firth. Blackpool.

P.S. I am sending Lisa a photo of my cousins as a token of my appreciation of her.

What a shame, I do so like a letter which causes anger and disagreement.

1 The Rodster is Future Publishing's very own book editor. He sits in a small cubicle near the kitchen, creating devilishly wonderful books while listening to Kraftwerk on his stereo.

2 Definitely, but then I wouldn't really wish immortality on anyone. Make the most of your years and always remember that this is not a rehearsal, you only get one shot at life.

3 Sure it was a great idea, but it was hardly portable was it? It's far easier to get yourself a small TV and use a standard C64 than lug a dirty great SX64

4 Opinion is divided on the subject, Lisa's certainly the better knitter. 5 Thank you.

P.S. Yes, about this photo. Why? Lisa would appreciate money, chocolates or bottles of Taboo far more.

The atomic density of lead is the same as Lisa's house number.

Dear TMB,

After numerous months of hiding from English tourists complaining to me about my views of the English soccer team, I am writing back to you (Eh!? - Ed) with some questions.

1 What's the best Rugby management simulator on the C64? 2 Are there any plans or an official World Cup '94 soccer game and an official World Cup '95 rugby game?

3 Just so I don't have to remind you at the end of this brilliant letter, my name is Graham Stakem. The last time I wrote in you only printed my first name.

> 4 Have you any advice for me on how to break into the world of journalism as I am keen on working on a computer magazine as a staff writer.

5 Are there any good word processing packages for the C64?

Graham Stakem, Galway, Ireland.

You have to hide from English tourists, while we, the residents of Bath, have to endure French, German, Scandinavian, Irish, Scottish, American, Canadian and even Twertonians. Fortunately though, these people have never heard of soccer. 1 To the best of our knowledge there aren't any. But then there's no such thing as a good rugby management simulator on any computer or console format.

console format. 2 Undoubtedly, but these are unlikely to get released on the C64. No accounting for taste, eh? 3 We only printed your first name last time, because it was as illegible as it was this time round. Take a bit more time over your handwriting and you'll probably get far better results. Why not try using a fountain pen instead of a Biro. 4 Hmmm. Learn to write. Write lots. Write about anything and everything. Then try and get published in the local press. Get good qualifications in English to at least A'level and preferably degree level. Then bombard the computer press with your erudite words until they give you a job. This is the route that most of Future Publishing's employees have followed. 5 Mini Office 2 has a good word processor builtin. Turn to page 52 to order it.

J WELLS RULES EVERYTHING

Dear TMB,

- I have your long lost body held captive at my house; answer my questions or your body gets it.
- 1 Ermm, it's on the tip of my tongue. Nope, I can't remember it.
- 2 Say welcome to Hutch and Simon for me.
- 3 On disk what's the best Football management sim ever made?
- 4 I own an SX and they're the best.
- 5 Do brains have their own language?
- 6 Who's you favourite member of the CF team?
- 7 Am I boring you yet?

8 When you change the size of the CF paper, will the binder change size as well?
9 Will you be reviewing Nigel

Mansell by Gremlin?

J Wells, Woking.

No you don't. My body withered away eons ago, you've obviously got someone else's by mistake, best give it back to them before they

- 5 We converse on a biological binary level, although we can use any other language ever devised.
- 6 Definitely Lisa, she's the one who's nicest to me. Oh and she makes a lovely cup of coffee too.
- 8 Ermm, no. Not yet. We'll look into this.
- 9 Gremlin don't have any plans to release this. If they change their minds then we'll review it.

ANDY C - OH BOY!

Dear TMB,

I've just finished reading your section of CF36 and have come to the conclusion that you are Clur! In the letter 'Clur not Hot?' you stated that Clue was "bright, attractive and popular'. So either you like Clur a lot, or you are Clur herself. What do you have to say for yourself?

- 1 Will Parasol Stars ever come out on the C64?
- 2 Could you tell me the publisher, price and contact number for Bee52?
- 3 Will you please print my letter?
- 4 Do you like Red Dwarf?
- 5 My friend has an Amiga. If we both bought modems, would I be able to contact him using my C64?
- 6 Would it be possible for Mayhem in Monsterland to achieve a perfect 100% when powertested?
- 7 Are you more intelligent than Ziggy out of Quantum Leap and Holly out of Red Dwart?
- 1 Is the 3D Construction Kit any good and could you give me a power rating on it.
- 2 What's the best shoot-'em-up on the C64?
- 3 What is the greatest game on the C64?
- 4 What's the best joystick you can buy for the C64?
- 5 Who do you think is the best out of the two wrestlers: Hulk Hogan or the Ultimate Warrior? Alex Turner, Penarth.

Well what do Maths teachers know? Hutch informs me that his was a vicious, obnoxious and foul smelling fool with the dress sense of a scarecrow. Who failed him in the third year.

1 If you like creating 3D constructions then it is. A

- 2 Uridium, I reckon.
- 3 Turn to page 61.
- 4 Got to be the Bug hasn't it. Subscribe to CF (see page 28) and you can get one for free. What a barg.
- 5 Definitely Ultimate Warrior. Hulk Hogan's so over the hill, he qualifies for reduced fares on the buses.

8 I used to buy my games out of John Menzies, now they don't stock them. Then I discovered that I could get them in the Virgin Games stores, but not they have stopped selling them, along with Spectrum and Amstrad games. What's happening? Are consoles going to take over for good?

9 Will the finished version of Lemmings have sound?10 Have I written too many questions?Gerald Mellor, West Lothian, Scottishland.

Just sticking up for the CF crew in general, Gerald. I am The Mighty Brain, controlled by noone.

- 1 No. Unfortunately.
- 2 CodeMasters = 0926 814132.
- 3 Durgh.
- 4 Love it. Especially Holly.
- 5 You certainly would. You'd have to set your baud rates and duplex to the same speeds and then switch local echo on.
- 6 I think our front cover speaks for itself.
- 7 Of course. I'm even more intelligent than Hal.
- 8 Consoles will only take over if you lot let them. If you demand something slightly more intelligent than a keyboardless behemoth than carry on
- 64ing. 9 No idea.
- 10 Have I written too many answers?

HELLO JAMES EMMANUAL

- 1 Is the Action Replay cartridge from Datel a worthwhile purchase?
- 2 What would you give Hitchhikers Guide to the Galaxy? Do you know where I can get hold of a copy?
- 3 I Bought Last Ninja on budget by Summit Software and it was only after you printed the full solution in your mag that I realised there was only the first level on the cassette. What do you think I should do?
- 4 Will Mayhem in Monsterland be using the full capacity of the C64?
- 5 Will there be a Creatures 2?

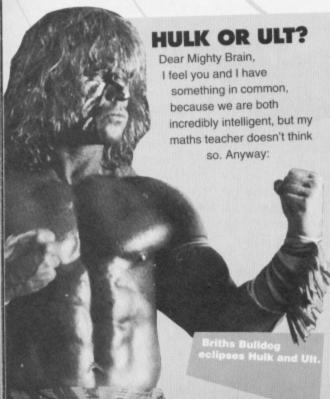

Keep up the good work. Roger Frames is a jerk. Paul Carlyle, Tywyn, Wales.

- 1 If you want to load your games quickly or have a rummage around the code inside then yes, it's a worthwhile purchase.
- 2 92%. No. Try advertising in the small ads.
- 3 Get in touch with them and demand a working version.
- 4 Absolutely, no game has ever pushed the 64 as
- 5 No idea. The Apex twins seem intent on doing some 3DO stuff, so it seems a bit unlikely.

- 8 Why does it take three months for my issue to get here?

EYE ON SCOTLAND

I have it on good authority that Domark are no longer producing C64 games! Yes, the Putney Road gang have given up the ghost on trusty 8-bit home computers and moved into consoles and 16-bit computers. I tried to confirm this with Domark but got no response. Please could you confirm this for me. Kenny Ellaway, Byforfar.

Don't know how to break this to you Kenny, but Domark stopped producing C64 software about two years ago. As you report they have indeed gone completely 16-bit and console. For the record, we have a new Prime Minister (his name's John Major), that nice Mr Reagan's no longer in the White House (his replacement's Mr Clinton) and Inspector Morse has solved his last case.

HUH?

- 1 Is it possible to print a TV picture with the C64? If so, how?

Malcolm Thomas, The Earth.

HOW MANY BITS?

Dear Mr MB. Hello,

Please print my letter because I have used a piece of my best flowery paper and I spent... oh ... at least ten minutes typing it. Please... please... grovel... it's the first time I've written in... and... blub... blub... will somebody pass the tissues... boo -hoo.

Anyway.

1 In the last issue of CF, September '93 on page 23 you may notice the dino dilemma in the top right corner. Well, Mr Clever Clogs, may I bring your attention to question six, "Which is the best 16-bit computer?" To which you reply, "...blah ...blah ... at gunpoint I'd have an Amiga 1200 though". Well let me tell you Mr High and Mighty, that the Amiga 1200 is a 16-bit computer, it's a 32-bit computer. My bro's got one... so there.

All embarrassing mistakes aside.

2 Do you think that the Addams Family is worth buying? Because I've heard that it's very difficult. What do you think?

I know I'm going on a bit so.

...Bye (Soupy Twist) xxxx

Joanne Schofield, Manchester.

- 1 Ah Joanne, I think you'll find that the A1200 isn't a real 32-bit computer at all. You see if it was a real 32-bit machine then the graphics and sound chips would be 32-bit too and they're not. The CPU and memory bus are indeed 32-bit but they can only access the 16-bit video and 16-bit sound chips on a 16-bit basis (which is obviously slower) and thus the A1200 doesn't have real 32-bit processing. It's a pseudo 32-bit machine. Hurumph. Next.
- 2 Yes it's definitely worth getting. The game's only difficult because it's so huge, the actual gameplay's dreamy.

You are going on a bit aren't you. Oh and Joanne, what's a Soupy Twist when it's at home with its feet up?

VEG HEAD

Dear TMB.

Please answer my questions and settle my mind in these pressing and important matters. I've decided to vegetable my questions, as opposed to numbering and fruiting them.

1 POTATO I loved that material the CF33 & CF34 were made from so much, that when it changed to a cheap material on CF35, I nearly burst into tears. Please change it back.

2 POTATO Darren Harmen: Why?

3 POTATO I just bought Midnight Resistance from a car boot sale for £33. Unfortunately, every time I try to load the game, a message appears on the screen and starts to flash in several colours. The message is: "You've been ripped off, son." What should I do?

4 POTATO Please take my deepest apologies and forgive me for potatoing my questions, but I couldn't think of any other vegetables.

Yours Sorryaboutpotatoingmyquestionsly M J Richards, Southampton.

1/POTATO Sorry, we either carried on using that material or reduced the number of pages in the magazine.

2 POTATO Gyles Brandreth: Why?

3 POTATO Now if you really paid £33 then you are a very sillly person. However I suspect that you're telling what earth people refer to as a fib. If you've genuinely been ripped off then take it back to the con-artist that sold you it.

4 POTATO What about a nice onion? Hmmm? Eh? Incidentally, the onion is a pungent edible bulb of the lily family (Latin name: Allium cepa).

Peculiarly enough the onion's also a flaming rocket which is used against aircraft. The onion shouldn't be confusd with union which is the pearl-mussel genus of freshwater molluscs. So there.

SOLP

The C64 has been going through something of a revolution over the last couple of years. As the 16-bit computer market has grown, so the 8-bit has receded, with various software houses deciding that the C64 market is no longer viable. However, there's absolutely no need to feel worried about this transformation;

the C64's just going underground.

Everything goes through stages of popularity.

The consoles are currently enjoying more than their fair share of media coverage helped along by enormous advertising budgets. As a result, consoles are a mainstream pursuit; one which pulls in all the software houses.

Put simply, the C64 is becoming a hobbyist's computer; a machine for real enthusiasts.

There are people who buy the newest consoles or computers simply because they're the 'next big thing'. They don't really care about the quality of the gameplay or the long term prospects of the machine; all they care about is that it's a bit quicker, has more graphics and better sound than the previous 'next big thing'.

Commodore Format will carry on releasing quality software for the C64 market as long as you lot want it. We'll carry on putting high quality reader programs, utilities and games on there too, because in the long run that's where all software is coming from. In effect we'll help bolster this market by encouraging people financially to produce games, serious programs and utilities.

However, all this is a fair way off. There are still plenty of software houses producing games and programs for the C64. In fact, with a little bit of help from Commodore Format, one of the biggest 16-bit computer games ever will be seeing a C64 release. As soon as the deal's tied up we'll let you know all about it. But remember folks, you read it here first and you'll always read it here first.

Don't blame us for this page, it's the PD Libraries putting words into our mouths.

There only seems to be one thing wrong with the 64 PD market, namely that a lot of you don't even know what it is. So here's Pensnett PD to tell you why you should get all that lovely free software (well free but for the price of the disk) from them. Blow that trumpet guys...

LET'S HEAR YOUR SEVEN

Dear Techie Tips, 1 I'm considering buying a cartridge and learning machine language programming. However I'm not sure which cartridge to buy for this purpose. You mentioned before that Action Replay only had a monitor and I could not assemble with it. So which cartridge should I buy and where could I get a machine code assembler?

- 2 I found a copy of CF3 in a jumble sale and in the Inside Info section there was a program for a 'notepad'. I've typed it in three times and found that it doesn't work. Can you fix it please?
- 3 I'm writing a program based on Channel 4's Countdown, but I don't know how to make the computer pick at random the four mathematical functions (plus, minus, times and divide). I don't suppose you would know how?
- 4 Keep up the good work! Techie Tips is definitely the best part of CF.

Andrew McCombe, Cannock.

1 None of the utility cartridges such as Action Replay have true assemblers. You can assemble code with the monitor, but not in the same way as an assembler would do it. I would recommend Action Replay; it's the one I use. Assemblers are hard to come by but you could try contacting some PD libraries.

2 I should just first say that I didn't write it of course. To fix it, change '90' at the end of line 170 to '9D', and change the '8F' towards the start of line 280 to '8E'. All should then be hunky-dory.

3 I can't see why you would need to pick the functions; I always thought it was only the numbers that had to be given. You could try a couple of different approaches, both using the random number function RND.

10 A$="+-*/"

20 F$=MID$(A$, INT(RND(1)*4)+1,1)

60 IF FS="/" THEN ...

10 F=INT(RND(1)*4)

20 IF F=0 THEN ...: REM PLUS

30 IF F=1 THEN ...: REM MINUS

40 IF F=2 THEN ...: REM TIMES

50 IF F=3 THEN ...: REM DIVIDE

Neither of the above snippets are meant to work, they are just meant to show you the methods that you could use.

4 Thanks. I'm glad you think so!

QUICK FIT

Dear Techie Tips, Following your reply to ROM REFIT some time ago, I have enclosed a routine that allows the Kernal ROM and Basic interpreter ROM to be converted into the RAM areas in machine code. This is preferable to your Basic version because that takes ages whereas this is done in a matter of seconds. Jamie Sampson, Boston.

Thanks, Jamie. The program switches over to the RAM copy but POKE 1,55 will get the ROM back. If you're wondering what use it is, it allows you to change the keywords, the error messages and even how the commands work; assuming you are a dab hand at machine code of course!

Dear Techie Tips,

In CF30 you gave a program that made telephone TouchTone sounds. Would it be possible to make a list of telephone numbers and keep them on tape, with each one having a single or double reference number, so that when you want to use a number you just enter the two figure number and get the computer to dial the phone number it represents? S.Hulston, Bramhall.

Yes, it would be possible to write that sort of program but it would end up as quite a substantial database program. You could change the TouchTone program into a subroutine that just "dialled" whatever number was given to it in D$ and then you'd have a line that said something like D$=N$(X):GOSUB1000 which would take telephone number X which was held in the array N$() and jump to the subroutine to dial it.

Dear Techie Tips, I own the Graphic Adventure Creator utility that CF gave away in issue 16 but cannot find the correct line in the booklet for a message to appear and a room to change (including its contents), 20 moves after examining an object. Could you please tell me how? All my rooms are permanently light and the room I wish to change is not the room the gamesplayer is currently in. James McGregor, Troon.

By far the easiest way to sort this problem out is to use messages to describe the room that changes. If it has not yet been changed then use a high priority line to display some message or other when you go into the room, and if it has been changed then display a different message. When you examine the object, set a marker to say it has been done: SET 10. That would be incorporated as part of a low priority line. Then have a high priority line that does something like: (IF SET? 10 AND NOT SET? 11) INCR 10 followed by one like: (IF CTR 10 = 20) SET 11. Then, twenty moves after you have examined the object, marker 11 will be set. The high priority line that displays your room's description would be (IF AT 5 AND SET? 11) MESS 100 END with (IF AT 5 AND NOT SET? 11) MESS 101 END. In that way, you'll end up with two different room descriptions depending upon whether or not the marker has been set. An alternative method is to use two separate rooms and omit entries in the Connections tables to the 'changing' room. In that situation you would use local conditions to check which of the two rooms to move to, and when the marker has been set, you move to the new room instead of the old one. I hope all that is clear.

SMOOTH TALKER

Dear Techie Tips, Here is a small Basic scroll listing but unfortunately I can only get it to scroll smoothly across half of the screen. Can I improve it to scroll the full width without adding too much to the listing? If not, why? Please print this listing as it's quite cute in a slow moving, smooth kind of way! D.Smith, Preston.

Well there are certainly things I would describe as cute, but a scroller isn't one of them! Anyway, here's the listing for this loveable little piece of programming:

Basic scroll, eh? Funny, looks like there's some machine code in there as well. Anyhow, the reason it is likely to flicker if you try more than half the screen's width is the raster scan line. It builds up the display by sweeping down it 50 times a second, and if you are trying to scroll your characters at the same time it is trying to plot them, the whole line will flicker. To rectify the problem try adding 85 IF PEEK(53266)>50 THEN 85. That checks out the raster line's position and if it's in the process of building up the screen it will loop back on itself until such a time that everything is okay. It's a bit like when a hedgehog crosses a road it checks to see if anything's coming and if it is then it waits until-the way is clear. The difference, and the problem for the hedgehog, is that the hedgehog doesn't move quite as fast as the raster line. Don't forget to change your code so that it rough scrolls 40 characters instead.

Dear Techie Tips,

1 In CF33 a person named Andrew Bourn asked how to carry objects. I want to know how to drop them once picked up using that listing. 2 I'm writing a game (and it's a text one) and I want to put music in it, but the C64 only plays it all then stops, then the input comes on. How do I make the C64 play music during an input? 3 Is it possible to play a text game, then load SEUCK, then turn back to the text game without loading it again?

1 For a demonstration of how to go about it, take the GOTO 30 off the end of line 90 in that listing from CF33, and add the following:

100 INPUT "ENTER AN OBJECT TO DROP"; DS

- 110 FLAG=0
- 120 FOR X=1 TO CARRY

WHEN DRAGONS RULED

Dear Techie Tips, This may be asking a bit much of you, but I am converting a program from Dragon 32 Basic into C64 Basic and have come across a problem. What do I need to replace D=INSTR(A$,B$(Z)) with? Chris Mercer, a friend of mine, told me what he thought it might be because he has a Dragon 32, but he gave me false information - it didn't work! Please, please could you help me?

This is what Simon really loks like kids.

This subroutine is probably the sort of thing you need. If it doesn't work, try just D=1 instead of D=X in line 10040. Please remember that, unlike Chris, I wasn't sad enough to buy a Dragon 32 so I don't know for sure:

Stuart Douglas, Whitchurch.

10010 REM CALL WITH 'GOSUB 10000'

to drop. If you are, then it sets FLAG equal to the number of the object. Lines 170 to 200 get rid of that object from the list, moving all the other objects "up" in the array. Lines 210 to 240 just print out your inventory again. You may find it useful to keep an array called WHERE() which keep track of the location in which OB$(X) can be found. So if you drop OB$(2) in room number 10, WHERE(2)=10. 2 In Basic there is no simple way to do this. The main rule of thumb is to write a routine that plays only one note of the music at a time. Then write a special input routine that uses GET to check for a keypress, and if one isn't pressed, go and play the next note of your music and return. When you return, do the GET again until a key is pressed. When one is pressed, process it and then jump back to the GET. The music may play a bit slow though. 3 Anything is possible in theory, but in practice that would prove very difficult. You'll have to keep loading the text game afterwards.

WASTED SPACE

Dear Techie Tips,

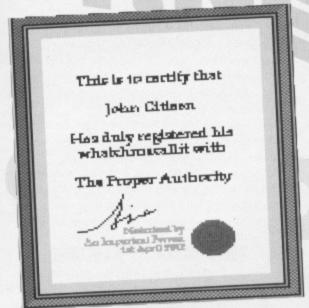

I have designed a character set and was hoping that I could use it in a word processor that I am currently programming. The new set is half the width of the original characters and I was hoping that 80 characters would fit across the screen instead of the usual 40. However, there is a space between each character. I was wondering how I could get rid of Yours with a querulous look on my face, Chris McCloskey, Letterkenny.

You will have to use a bitmapped screen to achieve an eighty column display, and use the data that you have created for the characters to plot the letters onto it. In Basic that is going to end up very slow, but it is the best method; the method that the word processor

Tasword uses to achieve its 80 column display as a matter of fact.

With a bit of thought, it's possible to transform an ordinary document into something very special.

Fun With Fonts

Incredible fonts can be created DARCEO→BIS PASED AND → Incredible fonts can be created Incredible fonts can be created Incredible fonts can be created incredible fonts can be created

With a little bit of imagination, it's possible to come up with some extremely impressive fonts. By paying a bit of attention to the look of your text, it's possible to completely transform the look and feel of a manuscript.

The Apex boys games enjoy a very distinctive feel thanks in part to the time they spend on getting the fonts right. The boys reckon that they get their inspiration from all over the place and if they see a font they like then they'll try to recreate it on their C64.

When you come to create your own font, be aware of technical aspects such as the space between the letters and how everything will look when it's strung together. The most difficult job is in making the letters look rounded. All too often, font s look jagged, square and otherwise amateurish. Have a look at the fonts on the left. it's all the same text and yet the words are transformed by the font they're placed in

The best way to creating legible fonts is to experiment. Use the C64's own character set as a starting point and see what happens when you add the odd pixel here and there. Quite often you can completely transform the look of a letter by simply plonking an extra pixel on one of its curves. Fontastic mates.

QUEK STOIS

If you've got a zappy, simply, single point then address your letter to Quick Shots and Jason will give it a concise reply. He especially enjoys receiving pithy mail as your lettersusually roll onto a few sheets of paper and take donks to answer.

I have bought a second-hand C64 an MPS801 printer, both without manuals. There is no lead to connect the two and without the manuals I do not know which lead I need. Can you help me? Keith Boyd, Leeds.

It's called a C64 serial lead and you can order one from WTS Electronics Ltd., Studio Master House, Chaul End Lane, Luton, LU4 8EZ =0582 491949.

How can I get my C64 to behave differently when I press the space bar to when I press the fire button on the joystick in port one?

Michael Reilly, Limerick.

You can't. Port one is wired internally to some of the same circuit board bits as the keyboard. That's why if you plug a joystick into port one and waggle it about a bit you may get some characters appearing on the screen.

I decided to browse through my CF mags for some useful proggies. The Double Height Code and the Data Saver from February 1993 don't work, despite careful checking. Please help me!! Jonathan Boon, Ely.

Oops, there were two lines missing from the end of the Double Height program: 22 DATA 212,208,182,169,055,133,001,096 and 23 DATA 000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000. So far as the Data Saver is concerned, omit the comma immediately after the SYS 679; the example I gave should be entered as SYS 679 "DATA",1,2,49152,49264.

Could you explain to me what the AND and OR commands do please. I mean, I understand it when you say something like IF A=5 AND B=3 THEN (and the same with OR), but what does POKE 53272, (PEEK (53270) AND240) OR8 do exactly, and why does it do it?

Steve Gillman, Poplar.

Those aspects of AND and OR are the logical operations and deal with individual bits at memory locations. Loads of peeps have asked a similar question and want me to explain about bits and this second use of the commands AND and OR. No probs, keep an eye on my Casebook extracts over the next couple of issues.

Oh and Mr Waverly of Chippenham, if you're reading: don't press the red button.

Jason Finch is more than willing to answer all your technical queries, so write to him at Techie Tips, Commodore Format, 30 Monmouth Street, Bath, Avon, BA1 2BW. Please remember that Jason cannot reply to any letters personally, so please don't include a self addressed envelope. This boxout has been brought to you by PowerGen: We're working hard to spark you up.

THE SECRET TO GETTING YOUR LETTER PRINTED

- Include oodles of technical information about your C64 set-up, for example which peripherals you have plugged in if you've made any modifications to the circuit board.
- Don't include too many points in your letter. Stick to one central problem.
- Do try and get your letter printedout or typed, because some of you have got terrible handwriting.
- Don't keep phoning us up to see if it's got printed yet. We are likely to burn your letter if you do this.
- Don't send us an SAE, Jason can't reply personally to any of the letters you send in.
 - The more original the problem the more likely it is to get printed. Trouble plugging into a pylon for instance.

Part Three: The peculiar case of the binary parrot. In which Interpol give up in despair and send for Jason Finch technical 'tective to the stars.

ith programming, unless you understand the fundamentals inside out, there is no way you will ever be able to throw down your joystick and take up the challenge of writing your own games. The trouble is that books always tell you what to do, but not why it works. Then, when you need to do something relatively simple you can't - you're stuck because you don't know why what you have been doing for months actually works and so you cannot develop it to your own needs. Oooh, sounds very serious stuff, doesn't it? (Tell me about it - Hutch) Well it doesn't have to be. This month we're going to prance playfully through the wild wood of binary, moving on to the heavier stuff next month.

IN THE BIN

Imagine you were using a calculator starting at zero, keep adding one. First you get the zero appearing on the display, then a one, followed by a two and so on up to nine. After that, the right hand digit becomes a zero again and the calculator stuffs a one before it to make ten. That carries on until 99 where

Two and two is four, four and four is eight ...inch worm, inch worm...dee dee daa dee dum. the calculator makes both of those zeros and stuffs another one before it to make 100. That number system is called decimal.

Now imagine that you only know about the numbers zero and one. So you enter a zero, you add one and get one as the result. Now when you add one it can't give you two, because two doesn't exist. Instead it changes the one to a zero again (like it changed the nine with decimal) and bungs a one before it. Then it adds one to the zero on the right and you get 11. You add one on again but the one cannot go to a two, remember; it goes back to a zero, as does the other one, and a new number one is a new number one is stuffed at the front of the queue. So the new number is 100 and the number system is called binary.

> TALK MONEY

You probably found that a little difficult to follow, but if you haven't fainted yet and are still with us, let's consider an easier way to look at it. Picture this: you can lay your hands on four bags of money. In the first bag is 8, in the second is 4, in the next is 2 and in the last is a measly 1. You can't open any of the bags. If you needed 13, you would need the 8 bag, the 4 bag and the 1 bag because 8+4+1=13. No other combination of bags will give you 13.

Represent the four bags by numbers - if you have to use a certain bag to get the amount of money you want, give that bag a number one, otherwise zero. So, to represent those four bags for 13 you'd have 1101 because the first two bags were needed, as was the last. If you only wanted 6 then it would be 0110 as you'll only be taking the 4 bag and the 2 bag.

These runs of zeros and ones bear an uncanny resemblance to binary. 1 would be 0001, 2 would be 0010, 3 0011, 4 0100 and so on. Just remember that the left-most digit is the 8 bag, the next the 4 bag, followed by the 2 bag and the 1 bag last with a zero meaning 'No way, I don't need that bag!' and a one meaning 'Gimme that bag!'.

HEY BIG SPENDER

Extend that idea and keep doubling up; you end up with a 16 bag, a 32 bag, a 64 bag and, for the big spenders, a bag containing 128. You can have any amount of money from nothing to 255 by taking different combinations of bags. Imagine you're a bit of a greedy wotsit, so you take the 128 bag and the three least significant bags; the 4, 2 and 1 bag. How much do you have? Well, 128+4+2+1=135 so you've got 135 by taking those four bags. Bung back the 4 bag and take the 32 bag instead so you have 128+32+2+1=163.

Use the system of zeros and ones to represent it: you took the first bag, the one with 128, so give that a '1'. You left the 64 bag so give that '0', but you took the 32 bag so give that a '1'. That's 101 so far, but there are still five bags left. Do the same with them and you'll get the numbers 0, 0, 0, 1 and 1. Join the whole lot together into eight digits and you find 10100011 represents the amount 163.

MONEY MONEY MONEY

You have just learnt everything you need to know about the binary number system! Simply remember how much dosh is in each of those bags, and keep working out which combination of bags you need to get the amount of money you want. Taking them all, you end up with 128+64+32+16+8+4+2+1=255 which is, indeed, the most I said you could get.

NEXT MUNF

Next month I'll be showing you exactly how the money bags story relates to how your computer thinks! (And I'll be showing you how to recreate a scale model of the Clifton Suspension bridge with some old carpet, a Fairy Liquid bottle, some sticky backed plastic and an old pair of tights - Hutch) Until then amigos.

LEVEL 4 - SPRINGFIELD NATURAL HISTORY MUSEUM

PART ONE

On this level Bart must collect as many of the EXIT signs as possible (Sounds logical - Ed), and for once it isn't necessary to keep using theX-RAY specs - every creature on the level is a space mutant. From the start: Walk right and jump up onto the first picture frame to collect the gun, then jump left to grab the first EXIT sign. Now go right again, jumping over the mutant on the ground. Be cautious of the mutant in the picture - it will come to life as soon as you get close (run underneath it).

Jump up onto the glass case, then jump three times to get the extra life. Continue right, under the next mutant, then prepare to tackle the first set of laser beams. It's all a matter of timing, so observe the pattern briefly then rush quickly past them (immediately after the bottom laser flashes). Stand on the glass case to reach the next EXIT sign (avoiding the mutant below),

EXIT sign (avoiding the mutant below), then rush past the next set of laser beams into the very tricky 'jungle' section. The insect creatures which skuttle across the ground will follow you, so stay on the move and be ready to jump. Go right and leap on the guy'shead, then continue right (past the bugs) and jump up into the branches of the tree for safety. Jump over the dragonfly which heads towards you, then jump right onto the tree in the middle of the swamp (jump up to avoid yet another dragonfly). Now jump onto the tree to your right, then wait until the crocodile appears in the swamp below - jump carefully onto its head. When the second crocodile emerges, jump quickly onto it to avoid the falling debris, and repeat this process when the third crocodile appears. When you reach the right-hand edge of the swamp, jump right (over the insect) back onto solidground. Go right, jump on the bloke's head, then use the gun to get rid of the monkey. Jump right onto the middle tree, then right again to the next tree. The spiders are fairly easy to get past - simply walk underneath them - but besure to take your time, as it's very easy to get killed. Continue right, grab the EXIT sign, then jump on the guy's head as before.

PART TWO

Go right past the next set of lasers, then jump up onto the left-hand edge of the picture frame (avoiding the mutant) and collect the EXIT sign. Go right under the mutant, avoiding the mutant on the ground, then grab the invincibility icon and quickly run right past the two sets of lasers. Collect the gun from the picture frame, go right under the next mutant, then jump on the guy's head.

RED tiles. Walk on to the first red tile and another will appear. Jump onto this tile and another will appear...get the picture? The red tiles appear in this sequence: 5 forwards, 4 forwards, 2 backwards, 5 forwards, 2 backwards, 5 forwards, then jump right onto the 'safe' ledge. The next set of platforms work on a similar principle; jump onto the first platform and a second one will appear. Jump onto this, and a third platform appears. When you're standing on the fifth platform, jump right onto the safe ground. Make your way to the right, jumping over the snakes, until you reach a room with three statues. Jump up onto the ledge by the left most statue andstay there. When an ANKH appears above Bart's head, jump up and collect it. It is adviseable to stay on the left and be patient, but if the time limit is low move carefully from statue to statue avoiding the insects which fall from above. When enough ankhs have been collected, the screen will shake and you can proceed to the right to meet the mummy. On this screen there is a hidden platform at the far-left, which is the ideal place for Bart to stand in order to avoid the Mummy's bullets. It can be killed by jumping on its head five times, but if the mummy leavesthe screen the hit-count is reset (so try to keep it on the screen).

PART THREE

Now go right past the laser, grab the EXIT sign,

Use the picture frame to get the other EXIT sign. Continue right, and collect the invincibility icon to get past the mutants with ease. Now get the extra life and the gun, the use the picture frame to get the EXIT sign to the right. Run right past the next set of lasers into the wilderness, and jump on the guy's head for another 'proof of existence' icon. Now walk right until you reach a vast river, which canonly be jumped using the log which floats down the screen. If you jump when the log is half-way down, everything should be hunky-dory. Continue right, jump on the bloke's head as before, then avoid the bird and jump across the chasm using the platforms provided (don't worry, they won't disappear). Make your way carefully to the right, using the moving platforms wisely, as well as ducking under any birds which fly by. Once safely over, move right until the huge dinosaur comes into view. To get past this hefty opponent, jump on its head three times. There are two hidden platforms just to the left of the dinosaur. Avoiding the fireballs, jump onto the top platform, and from there onto its

Make your way past another two sets of lasers and continue right until you meet with Dr. Marvin Monroe. Using the doctor as a trampoline, bounce up onto a picture frame and let Homer do all the hard work... if you collected enough 'proof of existence' icons. If not, just keep jumping on his head bottom level. Go right and open the door, jump right over the pits, then go up on the right-most lift.

Walk up to the barrier to open it, jump left over the energy-drainers and get on the lift.Jump off onto the slow-moving lift to your right (the one that moves sideways), then go right and collect the key card. Go back to the left and get on the first lift again, then go up to the top and get the key card to your left. Get on the fast-moving lift, then go right and use the other lift to reach the top level.

Go right, open the door, then kill the guard. Continue right until you reach a lift shaft – jump across it and prime the bomb. Now go down on the lift, collect the extra energy to the left, then go right to the end of the platform. Jump right onto the platform below, then jump right again and get on the lift. Jump off at the top, jump right again onto the next platform, then continue right and collect the keycard. Go left and use the springboard to bounce up to the higher platform, then make your way up and left using the platforms provided until you reach the bomb – prime it.

Now drop off the platform, go back up on the lift again, then bounce up on the springboard as before... only this time you'll need to hold right to reach the top-right room. Go right and prime the bomb, then go back to the left and drop down to the bottom. Go right as far as possible and drop down the gap, then drop off to the left. Go left, kill the guard, then use the second springboard you encounter to bounce up and collect the extra life.

Drop off to the left, prime the bomb, go back to the right and use the springboard to bounce back up to the right-hand ledge. Use the next springboard to exit the chamber, then go left and get on the lift. Go through the barrier, then prepare to meet the General – just keep kicking and punching until he's dead. If you're finding him a little elusive, go to the far right and face right – he should, get wedged between you and the wall, which should hopefully make him a darn sight easier to kill. Ermm, hurrah!

NEXT MUNF

Sees old Hulky baby crash-landing on Earth... which is where he started from in the first place. Anyway, tune in for tips galore and maps aplenty when we continue next month.

It's out on compilation, it's out on budget, but it doesn't get any easier. In fact, we've been inundated with letters for ages now, so here's Andy Roberts and castle-busting chum Andrew Davies with part one of a complete solution.

rom the start: Walk up to the castle, shoot rock at hole to left of drawbridge to lower it, and enter the court yard. Take the door at the far right into the lobby, shoot the spirit, collect KEY #1 from the table, then go through the open door into the kitchen. Select crawl and shoot the rat under the table, go through the fireplace into the larder, then eat enough food (starting with the top shelf) to gain maximum strength (six weights at each end of the bar).

Go back into the kitchen, take the left door into the lobby, the right-hand door back into the courtyard, through the castle entrance back into the wilderness. Face left, run towards the boulder, then run into it to reveal a hole. Select crawl and drop down the hole, look up and shoot the spirit.

Collect KEY #2 from the box to your right, walk over the barrier, and through the door into the catacombs.Go left, go right at the junction, then go through the door. Walk straight ahead and through the next door, left, then through the door into the next cavern - shoot the spirit and leave. Go right, through the door, take the first right, then go straight ahead and through the door. Shoot the spirit and leave as before.

Go left, through the door, go left at the junction, then through the doorway to the right. Kill the spirit and leave the room. Go right, through the door, then right at the junction. Walk straight ahead and through the door, go left, through the next door, then shoot the spirit and leave. Go straight ahead, left, then through the doorway to the right. Continue straight ahead, through the doorway, right, then through the doorway ahead to the stairwell

Take the door ahead into the passage, then the door ahead again to arrive in the hospital.Look right and shoot the spirit, then go out into the passage (you can wait here to recover if your strength is less than 3 weights). Take the door ahead into the stairwell, then face left and unlock the door using the action (press 'A'). Go through the door into the lobby, then take the far door back into the courtyard. Walk over to the well, use your action on the well to collect KEY #3, then select crawl and drop down the well.

Face left and use your action on the box to get KEY #4, walk over the barrier, then go through the door to exit. Go left, walk ahead and take the next left, then through the door. Walk straight ahead, go right, through the next door, right, then through the door into the stairwell. Take the right door into the lobby, then the far door into the courtyard.

Go through the castle entrance into the wilderness, then face right and follow the moat around until you reach the Wizard's hut. Use your action on the door to unlock it, go through the door, then use the chair to climb onto the table. Face the chair and collect KEY #5 from the top of the chair's back. Now drop off, use your action on the rug, then select crawl and drop down the hole. Face left and use your action on the bottle (it's a potion of revitalisation). Make a U-turn, collect KEY#6 from the crack in the corner of the floor, then walk over the barrier and out through the door.Go straight ahead, go left, then go through the door to the right.

Go through the door ahead, then go right and through the door into the stairwell. Go up the first set of stairs, then take the door to your right into the lobby. Take the right-hand door again into the kitchen, followed by the left door into the passage. Go straight ahead and through the door to arrive in the great hall, shoot the spirit, then take the door in the far corner into another passage.

Go straight ahead and through the door into the hot baths, face left, then shoot the spirit lurking just above the water. Use your action on the lever (to your left) to empty the pool, then walk into the empty pool using the steps provided. Select crawl, then drop down the small hole into the cavern below. Now the tricky part: walk on to the top step of the barrier, turn right, then walk right up to the wall. DO NOT fall off the barrier, as you'll have to re-trace your steps through the catacombs.

Standing in this position, look straight up, aim the crosshair on the crack in the ceiling, then use your action to collect KEY #7 (you might have to rotate a little). Now exit via the door, left, through the next door, straight ahead and through the door. Walk straight ahead, go right, through yet another door, then go right and through the door into the stairwell.

Go up the first set of stairs, take the door to your right into the lobby, then take the far door into the courtyard. Walk up to the door of the left-hand shed and use your action to unlock it, then crawl under the horses' belly and collect KEY #8 from the hole. Leave the stables, then go through the castle entrance back into the wilderness. Standing on the drawbridge, shoot a rock at the hole to the left of the door - this will catapult you on to the roof of the chapel. Look down and collect KEY #9, then shoot the flag at the top of the flagpole - a bat will appear in the sky, so shoot that too.

Walk off the roof and enter the chapel, then select crawl and walk behind the pulpit to enter another cavern. Face left, collect KEY #10 from the hole in the wall, then walk over the barrier and go through the door. Go left at the junction ahead, crawl underneath the barrier, then go through the door. Go left, left again at the junction, then through the door into the stairwell. And that's where we have to leave it for this month.

So SAVE your game position and wait until CF38 for the final, climactic showdown with the mighty dragon. Get your sword sharpened now.

action with Zangief, Dhalsim and M Bison. Hutch continues his in-depth, up-front, bad-breath analysis of this stonking beat-'em-up.

It's the fighting craze that's sweeping the nation. Street Fighter 2 must have done something right because all the newspapers have carried worried reports from 'leading' psychologists, teachers, MPs and parents. While that lot witter on about something they'll never understand, we'll get on with playing the game better.

FROM RUSSIA WITH KEVIN

He's big, he's bad and he's got the kind of huge red underpants that Batman would be proud of; Zangief is SF2's heavyweight, slow but powerful. In his thirties, he has plenty of experience to back-up the strength of his set piece moves. In fact Zangief has the strongest move in the game. Zangief's specialist moves are the spinning clothesline and the spinning pile driver (the hardest move in the game). The spinning clothesline just requires repeated use of the fire button, much like Chun Li's quick kick. To do the spinning pile driver you'll have to get in close and pull one of those rotating motions on the joystick. If you've timed it right, Zangief will pick up your enemy and spin round with their heads down near his bottom. It's not very pleasent but it's jolly effective. Other moves to check out include the piledriver (a simple version of the spinner), the spinning punch and the brain buster (in which Zang tosses the opponent over his shoulder).

In terms of move combinations, try pulling a jumping roundhouse kick followed by either a pile driver or a spinning pile driver. Alternatively try a roundhouse sweep into a fierce punch. The best way of beating Zangief is in the air, due mainly to the fact that he's a slow chap. Avoid those fierce punches and use missiles and aerial attacks.

BIG BAD BOSS BISON

Ah, the first of the bosses, dear old Mike Ty... sorry M.Bison is an ex-World boxing champ who's got a chip on his shoulder and is keen to show to everyone that he can destroy the entire Street Fighter 2 army. Dear old M. has got an exceptionally hard punch which has been known to topple buildings.

To beat Bison your best bet is to leap straight in with a strong kick (Ken or Ryu's hurricane kick for instance). Above all, avoid getting within stiking distance of his powerful punches. Try to use long range weapons and low-sweep kicks.

We'll wrap up this series of gamebusters with a look at the three final bosses: Balrog, Sagat and Vega. Be here or be somewhere warm, sunny, sandy, scenic and completely unlike Britain. If you are there though, take us. Please.

Dhalsim and Zangief go head to head in a battle with some stuffed elephants looking on.

INNOVATIVE INDIAN

Poor old Dhalsim's got something of a bad reputation. It may have something to do with those skulls he hangs around his neck, or possibly the peculiar way he can stretch his body to reach out and hit his opponents. Whatever it is, if you master Dhalsim and his funny ways you'll have an extremely useful fighter.

Bendy Dhalsim's the oldest fighter in Street Fighter 2 and therefore he's had plenty of time to perfect some singularly odd moves. Dhalsim's speciality lies in the use of fire; he has two moves Yoga flame and Yoga fire. The former's when he does his impression of a flame thrower and the latter's when he flobs a ball of flame across the screen. To do both of these moves you've got to master the anti-clockwise rotation of the joystick. The best of these is the Yoga Fire as it leaves Dhalsim out of harm's way on the other side of the screen. Other famous Dhalsim moves are the Nugi (where he scrunches the enemy's head), the spear (where he twizzles across the screen rotating all the while) and the headbutt where he vicously brings his bald head down on the enemy.

For combinations try the slide, followed by a knee kick and then a Nugi. For the dramatists amongst you try doing a fireball () into a knee kick, rounded off with a headbutt. To beat Dhalsim, pop a fireball at him so that he's off balance and leap in with a combination of kicks of punches.

Bees, wasps, and things that go buzz in the night. Yep, this game is packed full of bugs, crawlies, and ugly insects, so who better than Andy Roberts to guide you through the game.

STAGE 1

This level is a nice, simple introduction to the game, and you should really use this opportunity to practise shooting, dodging, and running away. To complete the level with ease, simply collect the honey from the first three flowers you encounter, then head quickly back to the hive. There are some bubble monsters hanging around, but if you move quickly enough you'll never encounter them.

STAGE 2

This is where the wasps appear for the first time, and it's important to learn how to deal with them. When they appear, fly away from them then turn and shoot when you're a safe distance away. You'll also notice that the flowers now contain bugs avoid their bullets at all costs. Collect honey in batches of two or three, returning to the hive between collections.

STAGE 3

Frogs are abundant on this level; fly over them if they're on the ground, fly under them if they jump. There are more barriers' blocking your way, which can be deadly if a bullet-lobbing bug is nearby. There are also a few caterpillars dotted around, which drop from the top of the screen.

STAGE 4

From this level onwards, a whole jar of honey needs to be collected - a formidable task indeed. Caterpillars make even more appearances, and generally there are lots more bugs around. Staying alive is becoming more and more difficult. As for collecting honey? Impossible... nearly. Collect the honey in one big batch, as it's too risky to go back and forth along the level.

STAGE 5

Yet another new opponent to deal with, and this time it's those lovely pink fishies. They act in much the same way as frogs, but move a little quicker (and appear quite unexpectedly). Collecting honey is very, very difficult now, and the main task is to stay alive long enough. Having said that, it isn't as hectic as the previous level, so grab the honey in much the same way as before.

STAGE 6

Frogs and fish are the major problem here, especially when flying underneath a barrier close to the water. It's better to be patient - wait at the top of the screen and allow them to move before proceeding. Surprisingly, the honey isn't that difficult to collect, unless you get chased by a wasp. If you don't have any bombs handy, you'll need to keep a cool head to survive.

STAGE 7

Another new bug appears on this level... the dragonfly. It poses no threat whatsoever, unless it gets hit by a stray bullet, whereupon it will give Shoot your way through the game and you'll get to see this spledniferous end-screen.

congratulations ! you have completed the whole game.

chase (in much the same way as the wasps). If you are unlucky enough to hit it and get chased by a wasp, you can kiss your stripey botty goodbye (Yeurgh! - Ed). The barriers are the biggest problem, and it pays to wait rather than rush through the level.

STAGE 8

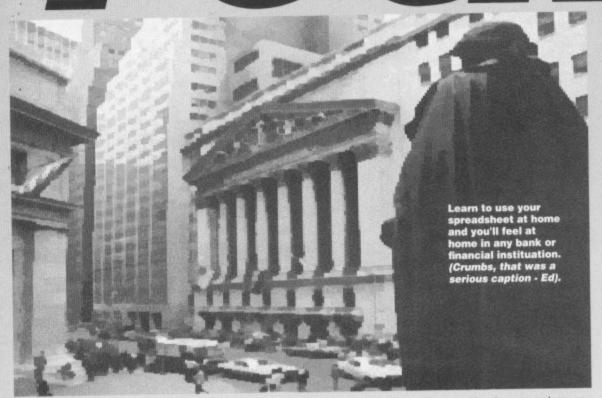

Being the final level, you won't be surprised to learn that everything and anything gets in your way. The dragonflies are more aggressive than before, and move a lot faster... and they now fire bullets too. Collecting the honey isn't that difficult, but it does take a long time as the flowers are very far apart. Watch out for the swarms of flies in those ever-soawkward places. Survive this stage and you've made it, now go and make yourself a large cup of coffee to celebrate.

BEE ADVENTUROUS

If you're still finding the game a little tough, try this cheat: on the title screen, type GRELLANDFALLA (without spaces). The Codemasters logos will turn brown, and you can now start the game with infinite lives, plus the ability to skip levels using F7. The question is, can you remember who Grell and Falla are? Answers on the back of a used tenner to the usual CF address.

Home accounting on your 64 needn't be dull. It's never going to be a non-stop laughter session, matron, but maybe Smokingun Forrester can liven things up a bit, as he looks at the camera and says "Get spreaded."

appy with your software? If you are, good for you (I personally haven't ever thought about it). Even so, work mentally through your day – there are bound to be things that you still do on paper when you could be saving yourself a lot of time with your 64.

Let's say, for instance, you're running your own little business – maybe it's something to do with your C64 (god knows, there are some weird people out there). Are you going to mess around with paper and pens for the rest of your life? Hey – dig out that spreadsheet we were looking at last month, and we'll see what we can do...

Somewhere on this page, you can see a little diagram of a spreadsheet (yes you can, it's figure one). On that spreadsheet, you should be able to see some highlighted boxes (they're grey whereas the others are white). What does this mean? Read on... The little spreadsheet you can see is very much like the kind of thing you'd be drawing out on paper. There is, however, one major difference – most of the values were calculated as opposed to being written in by you in the first place.

Let's take the box relating to the cost of posting 10 units (this example relates to duplicating and distributing software), represented by the letter A. The actual cost of posting one unit is 30p. However, because of the cost of cassettes we're going to assume you cannot buy packaging (Jiffy bags, or something) with bulk discount, so the price per unit doesn't decrease when you calculate higher figures. This means that the box displaying the cost of ten can contain a formula instead of a figure – ten times the cost of the price of one. The same goes for B, but with one hundred times the price instead of ten.

The same can be seen with the row of postage costs (C). Really simple, huh?

All the boxes that are highlighted are what we call 'calculated cells' there's probably a glossary floating around these pages somewhere, so take a look at that for a definition.

In the meantime, let's take a look at boxes D, E, and F. These are column totals. This means that box D is adding up the values for the cassette and leaflet of one unit (it's adding up other boxes in that column).

Just when you thought it was safe to calculate costs – now we're going to do profits! There's another diagram, as well:

Really wonderfully simple, this. The first row, being costs, was taken from the final row of the first spreadsheet. The second row is simple the revenue (the total amount of money taken from the

it's column. This is the same for box B.

Next, then, we have to calculate our profits. This is done by subtracting the cost from the

You may be thinking 'well, I've got the hang of that, so where does it get difficult?'. The really strange bit is that it doesn't get any more technical than this - the rest is in the realms of accountancy - I'd better put on a suit...

So, Mr Forrester, we're going to take a look at your home accounts. We're going to take the following factors to work from:

Salary

Individual cells can contain either a number, some text or a cunningly devised formula.

Every other cell in your totals column is calculated, though - giving a total for the year of exactly how much money goes to each cost. What was that, Mr Forrester? There are people reading this? Oh - we'd better do a cut down version then, for two reasons:

- The size of the spreadsheet doesn't matter for this explanation - the theories will still be the same
- You won't want everybody knowing how much you earn

So let's take a look at our cut down diagram #3

This is basically all there is to it - from this diagram you can quite easily calculate anything you'd need to, such as total savings, total rent, etc, along with slightly more complex arrangements. What can we do with these figures, though?

FIVE THINGS NEVER TO LET ANYWHERE NEAR ANYTHING THAT LOOKS EVEN VAGUELY LIKE A SPREADSHEET, EVER (MY, WHAT A LONG TITLE)

mathematically calculate).

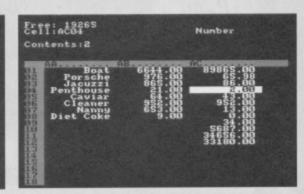

The answer is a big one - anything. Firstly, there are pie charts, bar charts, and the like to demonstrate visually where all your money is going to, or failing that, there are some slightly more 'alternative' uses - check out our interview with 'Jim' elsewhere in this piece.

You don't just have to do accounts and other boring stuff like that - there are loads of other uses:

Doing your homework

A-Level statistics, eh? What fun. Yeah. So why not do all those irritating quadratic, simultaneous linear, curve, and T-test equations on a spreadsheet? You could use the package to create whole lookup tables of various values and results at the touch of a few buttons. These are not the only uses - you could test correlation, conformity, degrees of freedom, margins of error, you name it, a spreadsheet can do it (OK then, what about spoken French or Swahili or Greek cooking or The complete Shakespear? - Pedantic Hutch).

Here's Hutch's expenses form. Note the incredible Diet Coke usage.

Making a decision

Just think. After months of painful deliberation, you finally, much to the dismay of your wallet, decide to buy a car. But which car? There is a much simpler way to decide than walking round kicking tyres. Why not set up a table of various cars, calculating their fuel consumption over distance, etc? It would make life much easier, and allow you to make a more informed decision.

Making lists

It might also be wise to remember that a spreadsheet, at the end of the day, is just a grid of boxes - a souped up table maker. The Ultimate Whatever series, for example, features lists of every Whatever Sim since the dawn of time - the kind of thing you could use a spreadsheet to tabulate as it automatically laid all the figures out neatly, instead of messing around with a word processor and a few hundred tab spaces. Share prices

You don't need to be a high powered millionaire to tinker with the stock market, just as you don't need to be a professor of mathematics to operate a spreadsheet package.

Number Contents: 33744 Makes you wonder whether or not the government are using spreadsheet, or just guessing everything.

> Lamont actually uses a C64 to keep track of this country - this entire recession can be blamed on a slightly grubby pinch roller, you know.

Sports tables

To play baseball in this day and age, you good hand to eye coordination, a fast sprint, and strong forearms. To follow baseball nowadays, you need a degree. The statistics don't just state who's where though. They also display individual player performance, games behind, toenail length, and the like. So why not keep track of the league on a spreadsheet.

Ventures

For a small business, accounting can be a hassle, and an expensive hassle at that. So why hire an accountant to do the job that a spreadsheet can do for less money, and in a fraction of the time? Just think how much easier running a business would be if you brought a spreadsheet into the equation.

Projecting cash flow

When new businesses start up, they need to find out exactly how much money's going to be flowing through the company's accounts. To this end they use a spreadsheet to project how much they're going to spend, how much money will be coming in and what their costs will be.

Let's say that the firm were worried about business tailing off in the winter. They could enter a reduced sales turnover and see how much the profit margin dropped by. This kind of analysis can be as broad or as fine as is required. So for instance, you could break sales down into different brands and types. All of which enables you to find > out exactly what's selling and when. Smart or what.

Nowadays all the banks expect firms to come up with a projection of their sales flow, before they lend them a penny. Therefore, it's a iolly useful skill to be able to set up this kind of sheet. Just ask the bank that likes to say. where's my spreadsheet?

Planning a loan

These days the banks are more than happy to lend you as much wedge as you could cheerfully spend in a year. But (he said being a bit serious), it's easy to get in over your head and end up missing repayments. Spreadsheets are perfect for calculating exactly how much you can afford to repay each month.

This spreadsheet can take into account other costly factors such as interest, bank charges, inflation and any other extra costs you care to build in. All of which gives you the complete picture rather than the usual sketchy one which most banks are happy to leave you with.

Impressing elderly relatives

Ever had the problem of the inquisitive grandparent? You know the sort, they pop round for someone's birthday or for Christmas or something and inevitably want to see something impressive on your computer.

Well fear not, all you need to do is crank up your spreadsheet, whack a few imaginery numbers in and Bob's your Uncle Terry's best mate from year's back. You can even expand the whole imaginery spreadsheet to explain to your gramps and parents how you manage to write your homework so quickly.

Then once everyone's cleared off to have a glass of sherry and some interesting scones, you can whack you fave top tune on the stereo and settle down to some intellectual gaming.

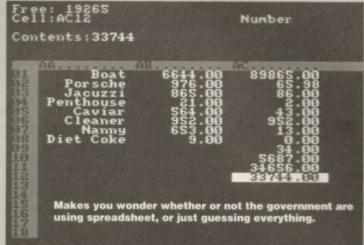

AN EXAMPLE

In order to demonstrate a little more clearly the man who makes a living through the very effective use of Mini Office 2. In the interests of Birmingham, BM5 6AD:

CF: So, Col, er, Jim, how did you make use of : It was quite easy, really - all I had to do was put a complete run down of all my home accounts onto my C64, and wait for a tax audit.

Jim: At first, I didn't think so. All I did, really, was work out how much income, value added. savings road home fuel council and national insurance tax I should have actually paid (as

Jim: That's not all – this bloke in a suit from MI5 told me that if I ever told anyone about this, he'd. Oh hell

"Gather round, yer sea dogs," old Captain Budsaye leant forward, "and I'll tell ye a tale to make yer ears curl." His dramatic air only slightly compromised by his beard, which was nicely bathing in his ale and his parrot which was pecking at his ear...

"Ee be good a' stories" growled Pagwüsch and slapped him hard on the back in the kind of way that, though appearing boisterously friendly, hurts like bloody hell.

And so, as Neemoh. Kurke, and Scarlet sat around roasting their chestnuts on the open fire, Budsaye began his story:

Twas Cap'n Puckahd and I. aboard the Stardog on the high seas, headed for Nehrnehrland, when we saw this fair vessel to portside. Well, we thought we'd take a look for the sakes of our bounty, y'hear. so we sails up to her to find her laden down with sea dogs, armed to the teeth with the sharpest cutlasses between here and Gonahd Bay

'An' you fought like the mules of the sea that you so right are shouted Pagwasch, slapping his thigh and spilling ale all over Ahab, who'd just come over to join them, and hadn't been expecting a bath for at least another seven months.

Dear ThePowersThatBe,

How can Commodore Format possibly award Mayhem a perfect 100% score? Have they gone mad? Is it just a shallow bit of circulation boosting hype? I think we should be told.

Yours,

Arthur Reader Esq. (Retired)

Some things are so eagerly awaited that it becomes almost painful to wait for them. Christmas morning, exam results, first dates, driving tests, Erika Eleniak appearing in Baywatch, the hometime bell at school, an ice cool Diet Pepsi[™] on a summer's day, the first pint of the weekend; they're all capable of turning the strongest willed personality into a gibbering wreck. Which is precisely what has happened to the CF crew whilst we await this game.

you can only get it on the C64. So why are we so hyped up over it? The answer's simple: it's a game.

This is all very well, but the odds are it was written by someone deep within a major software house, who's only actually working on the C64 for the money, or because someone forced him to. This does not result in a quality version of any game, if the programmer wasn't willing to spend time putting in any kind of detail.

you'll have to read the main review (courtesy of Hutch), but bear this in mind – when you take a game that's worth over 90%, add the background of a C64 dedicated project (this is NOT a conversion), divide by a low price tag (as opposed to the £15 most companies would charge you for a new game on disc), you get 100.

Oh yeah - for all the reviewing snobs (not that everyone who disagrees with this is a snob, of course) who'll undoubtedly look down their noses at this for aeons to come, what's the point in having a rating system with an inaccessible top percentage of 'this is as good as it's ever going to get' as opposed to 'nothing is perfect, as you'll never win because we'll always find something to gripe about, so clear off'?

The most important power-up Mayhem can get is the 'charge' booster. This enables Mayhem to scream down the level at top speed in a blur, taking out dinosaurs left, right and centre. As long as he's charging. Mayhem can take out practically all the dinosaurs. Besides the charge icon there are extra lives/half lives hidden away in the recesses of the rocks, limited invincibility icons and high jump icons. You really do have to examine every square

GLURIS SAY

Ok. I'll admit Mayhem in Monsterland is a great platformer, it's kept me amused for hours (well days actually). But that's all Mayhem is, a platformer - not the perfect game. To me a score of 100% implies that a game is the best that a game could ever be. The percentage mark shouldn't have anything to do with the marketing strategy of the company or how small the 64 market is. 100% should simply mean they're getting value for money if they spend their hard earned dosh on the game. Mayhem in Monsterland pretends to be nothing have lost the plot somewhere along the line, but the Apex Twins, proud fathers of Mayhem didn't. While the rest of the computer games industry have become obsessed with marketability, cross-over potential, target sectors, frames per second, DSP chips and other utterly tedious matters, they got on with serving up the single most righteous game to ever appear on an 8-bit machine,

So. You may well be wondering how we can justify that big 100% rating; after all, nothing is ever perfect. Are we saying that Mayhem is without a blemish on his rosey face? Maybe not. What we are saying is that this is as good as you can realistically expect it to get. best you'll ever see on the

> The foreman tells you your duties for the evening.

(Ever see the cartoon series Bertha? The Beast is like a bigger version of her.) The Beast is an old and dodery machine from which bits fall off at very regular intervals.

Your job is to not only get the machine going in the first place but more importantly, to keep it going all through your shift. The first level simply involves finding the plug and kicking it in, tightening a nut and boosting the electricity supply by pedalling the bike. Most of the controls are automatic...at first

On the later levels more control panels are revealed so there are more knobs, screws and switches to contend with. As if that wasn't enough, on level three the lemming makes its first appearance. This annoying little creature has only one task in life; to hinder you.

The one problem (it's the only criticism I have, but it's a big one, with Night Shift) is that it's a helluva difficult game to get into in the first place; it'll take you at least a couple of days to get it sussed. The aim of the game is thoroughly explained in the manual, but it doesn't give you any clues as to how to actually achieve those goals. Nor does it explain how to control Fred or Fiona - it just tells you that you can kick things, and doesn't actually explain what you should do with the joystick to make your character kick.

The bad documentation really blights what could have been a great game. As it is, you need to have the patience of a particularly patient saintly priest and the determination of a gladiator to beat this thing. Once you have worked out where the game's heading it does get really interesting and becomes great fun to play But that first hurdle will be too much for a lot of games players.

FAIRLY HARLEY ESCAPE

Dear Commodore Format,

How was I to know that it was the local copper's motorbike? I simply needed to follow the mysterious woman in the Trench coat who'd driven off in the Deux Cheveux. Before I knew what was happening, I had five Gendarmes after me with a look of sheer loathing on their little goatee bearded faces. Then I caught up with the woman.

She'd had a bit of an argument with a tree. And lost. She'd managed to wrap her Citreon around the tree and roll it all at the same time. Stunt driver or what. As I approached her she flagged me down and then saw my collection of pursuing coppers at which point she started legging it across a wheat field. I of course followed. As did the coppers.

"Leave me alone, damn you," she said, somewhat unthankfully when I finally caught her. "I've come to help you out, hop on." I said. She looked back and saw that the Gendarmes were close on our heels.

"Move back then, I'm driving." I slid backwards into the pillion position and she jumped onto the bike. With a hard rev, she pulled a wheelle (you would have thought she was trying to loose me off the back) and we vroomed down the field. As we approached the bottom of the field I saw to my horror that there was a large wooden fence. My driver didn't seem to mind though, she simply throttled back, aimed for a little crest and jumped the bike over.

As I looked back I saw the Gendarmes, piling, one after another into the fence. They didn't seem too chuffed. Once we were safely away from the scene of the crime she pulled over and ordered me to get off the bike. I remonstrated with her and said that wherever she went, I went. Then she pulled a gun on me and told me to clear off. As she zoomed off, a parcel fell out of her coat. It had the royal coat of arms on it. I started running up the road after her.
