

Editor's Foreword
COORDINATION CHEMISTRY IN JAPAN

In this issue are collected together a series of papers contributed by research groups from Japan. It is abundantly clear from these articles that Inorganic Chemistry is alive and very well in Japan and that Japanese researchers have a great deal to contribute in this field. We look forward to publishing further contributions in this journal in the future.

It is a pleasure for the Editor to acknowledge the debt he owes to Professor Shoichiro Yamada (Osaka) for his great assistance in compiling this issue.
