FROM THE PUBLISHER

First off I'd like to wish everyone a HAPPY NEW YEAR !!!!!

I really want to send out a special appreciation to all of the advertisers as well the readers. I can't thank all of you enough for all the positive feed back. I honestly am still overwhelmed with all the encouraging comments, Thank you so much. I'm really excited and looking forward to the new year. Desire is growing at a very fast rate for two reasons. One the advertisers and readers love it. Second the few people that are out there bashing me personally and down talking Desire are literally the ones that fuel me to excel while successfully continuing to produce a great magazine. Don't ever let anyone tell you that you can't do something. You can do anything you set your mind to and accomplish anything you want. I was told I would never be able to start a magazine and I did. We each have to believe in other and be positive to others, its nice to see people doing things. I'm sure everybody has dreams and desires and there should be nothing or no one preventing you from doing what you dream of. Things are slow in the economy and I know times are hard for everyone. This is why as a society we should try to be a little nicer to each other a little more humble to one another. We have to remember no matter how bad we have it someone else has it worst. It's a new year time for family and friends to make up and put the past behind them or at least try.

One more thing I want to mention is that there are a few people out there that don't like Desire and don't want to see it succeed. Id like to be the first to dish all the dirt on me myself. I have not always made the best of choices in life I'm not perfect, In fact far from it. But I don't judge other people because I don't know why they did the things they did or do the things they do. Unless you lived my life or grew up how I grew up its going to be hard for you to understand my life and the choices I made. I'm not not trying to justify anything, I'm just saying before you judge me make sure you know the full story. I didn't have the same opportunities as others did so I made ends meet with what I had. That's not to say that others didn't have it worst then me, I'm just saying at times I did what I needed to do to get by. I have been involved with different aspects of adult entertainment. I currently own and operate Allure, a very upscale, clean and classy private lingerie modeling establishment in Hyde Park. Some people may care and others may not I just thought I should be the first to tell you. One thing that I can assure you is my past has no bearing on my ability to create amazing advertising to fit each and every individual advertiser. I'm here for your each and every need, as well more then willing to go above and beyond. I know were a new publication and we have to prove are selves to earn some advertisers business, Just give us the chance and we are more then willing to do what ever it takes.

As always I encourage any positive and creative feed back. I can be E-mailed at Desirecomments@aol.com.

EFFECTIVE WEIGHT LOSS

By: Bonnie Conrad

If your New Year's resolution is to lose weight, you are certainly not alone. Losing weight and gaining fitness are among the most popular resolutions no matter what the year, but unfortunately only a small percentage of dieters have the dedication, and the knowledge, necessary to lose that weight and keep it off for the long term. The best weight loss is the kind that lasts a lifetime, and the best diet is one that can be followed for a lifetime.

At this time of year there are of course plenty of weight loss tips making their rounds, but here are some of my favorites.

Take a look at your diet. No diet plan can succeed without a solid plan for healthy eating. Simply cutting out one or more food groups will result only in uncontrollable cravings, and possibly an unhealthy body, down the road. It is important to eat a healthy diet, rich in fiber, vitamins and minerals, when trying to lose weight.

Increase your consumption of fruits and vegetables. Fruits are delicious, full of vitamins and minerals, easy to eat and easy to find. Fruits like apples, pears, oranges, kiwi and more make wonderful snacks for home and office, providing a much better alternative to sugary snacks and potato chips. Vegetables, whether in the form of salads or on their own, also make a great addition to any healthy diet. Steamed veggies are delicious as a side dish as well. A small microwave steamer will be a great addition to your office supplies.

Eat plenty of protein, especially when starting a new workout program. Many dieters avoid protein rich foods, fearing that they contain too much fat and too many calories, but this approach can actually be counterproductive. Protein is necessary for providing the energy that will be needed to exercise regularly. Protein also plays an important role in the regulation of blood sugar, and blood sugar in part plays an important role in keeping food cravings under control.

Eating plenty of fiber rich foods is important as well. Adding lots of fiber rich cereals, whole grain breads and other healthy products is a great way to achieve that feeling of fullness while keeping calorie counts low.

Drink plenty of water as part of a healthy diet. Like fiber, water helps to provide a feeling of fullness without additional calories. Drinking six to eight glasses of water a day is important, whether you are dieting or not.

Be sure not to skip breakfast in a short-sighted attempt to cut calories. A good healthy breakfast is actually a proven way to lose weight, so be sure to start each day with a good breakfast. If you're pressed for time, a couple of pieces of whole grain toast, or a protein shake, can be just the thing. Skipping breakfast can actually backfire, causing you to give in to food cravings and abandon your healthy eating plan as the day wears on.

Last but not least, don't forget about the importance of exercise in a healthy eating and weight loss plan. A healthy diet can only do so much, and it is important to get out there and move. An exercise program does not have to be intense to be effective; simply taking a walk three or four times a week can provide real benefits. Augmenting this simple exercise program with some strength training can help to build muscle, and enhance the effectiveness of your fitness program.

“35% of people break their resolution by the end of January, but wait it gets worse. Out of all those New Year’s resolutions, 78% fail to come to fruition.

WHY NEW YEARS RESOLUTIONS FAIL

By: Craig Wyllie

Well, its now 2009. A year full of promise, a year filled with love, health, wealth, fitness, joy, happiness and anything else you might wish for. This is the time of year that people all over the world decide to change their lives forever. It’s the time for resolutions, New Years Resolutions that is. A time of year when everyone, everywhere believes their wishes and dreams will come true. So, how are your new year’s resolutions going?

According to a survey (conducted by Franklin Covey) of New Year’s resolutions of over 15,000 people, the top 3 resolutions for 2009 are:

1. Get out of debt or save money
2. Lose weight
3. Develop a healthy habit (like regular exercise and/or healthy eating)

Sound familiar? Well the same survey also found that 35% of people break their resolution by the end of January, but wait it gets worse. Out of all those New Year’s resolutions, 78% fail to come to fruition.

That’s right 78% fail!! That doesn’t give you much hope does it? So, why do all these perfectly good resolutions simply fall by the wayside, year after year? It is the same reason that every goal, from giving up smoking to getting to work on time has never occurred.

We fail to plan, and failing to plan is planning to fail.

How can you possibly expect to get from your current position to your destination (whatever that might be) if you have never ever been there before? That is simply asking for all sorts of problems, leading to frustration and motivations issue. In order for a plan to work there are a few key areas which need to be addressed.

Write it down!!

Your goals should be reinforced EVERYDAY, so put them somewhere you can see them (maybe on the fridge or on your bedside table). This will form a constant reminder and reinforce your goal in your mind.

Inform others.

Make sure you inform others of your goal. This works for two reasons. The first is that you need to be accountable by someone other than yourself. Secondly and more importantly is the support and motivation of having family and friends behind you all the way. This last point cannot be emphasized enough; the value of support in the pursuit

Change your thinking, attitude and beliefs.

Your thinking, attitude and beliefs are extremely important as they affect the decisions you make and things you do or don’t do. A goal is nothing without a need, desire or emotional reason behind it. You can be told what to do, why to do it and even shown how, but no one can make you do it if you don’t want to. Do you want it, really want it?

Education or knowledge.

At this stage, you have written down your goals (you know exactly what you want and when you want it), you have set in place a support and motivation network (point 2), you have strong desire and need to achieve your goal, but do you know how to get that goal. The plan might mean that you have to buy a book, magazine, DVD, or hiring someone to help you out like a dietician or a personal trainer.

Hailing from North Carolina, this exotic and charming southern belle is an established calendar and magazine model, singer and has taken the erotic dance circuit by storm. In 2005 Carmen set her sights on the Adult Film Industry and is destined to become a shining star for years to come. Multitalented and extremely driven, Carmen has enjoyed everything from softball, cheer leading and step team to student council. But her true passion has always been singing. Carmen started singing at young age and participated in talent shows where she frequently took home the top prize for her amazing singing voice.

As an established model, Carmen earned a name for herself by winning Miss Hawaiian Tropics at their Regional competition in 2004. Her magazine and calendar credits are equally impressive. She graced the cover of Gold File Magazine and was crowned Easy Riders Magazine's Fox Hunt winner. She was Miss June 2005 in the Pure Gold Calendar and Miss February 2004 in the Sexy Indian Woman Calendar.

Carmen has also excelled as a dancer, taking top honors by winning titles like Best Dancer in Colorado's 2005 Feature Blast Showcase and Hottest Stage Personality in Rhode Island's 2005 Feature Showcase Extravaganza. Recently, Carmen dominated the Miss Nude 2006 competition winning the coveted title and also grabbing honors in the Best Body and Best Dancer categories in the competition. Domination is no small feat for Carmen Hart because she has also won the titles of Exotic Performer of the year 2007, Miss Exotic International 2007 and Exotic

DELL INSPIRON MINI 9

Last year, the world of budget notebooks was turned on its head with the introduction of the ASUS Eee PC: A 2-pound laptop with a 7-inch screen and a starting price below $300. Prior to 2008, "budget notebooks" were bulky, overweight 15-inch laptops while "ultra-portable" notebooks commanded a premium price well above $1,000. In no time at all terms like "budget ultra-portable," "subnotebook," and "netbook" became part of the techno-geek vocabulary. Every notebook manufacturer on the planet (even some that you might not know) scrambled to create their own "netbooks" ... and Dell has finally joined the party.

The Dell Inspiron Mini 9 is an 8.9" netbook with a $349 (Linux) or $399 (Windows XP) starting price and some impressive features. Dell was kind enough to supply us with a pre-production copy of the Inspiron Mini 9 so that we can conduct in-depth testing and let you know if this netbook really is "your new best friend" ... or just the weird kid you try to avoid on the bus.

LEICA D-LUX 4

The compact nature of the D-Lux 4 means it can be with you all the time. But despite its compact size, it offers top Leica quality and gives the photographer plenty of artistic freedom. The D-Lux 4 is ideal, whether for subjects composed with lots of forethought or for spontaneous reportage.

The high-aperture professional lens The LEICA DC VARIO-SUMMICRON lens 1:2.0-2.8/5.1-12.8 ASPH is a high-aperture lens for digital compact cameras that allows the real enthusiast to work with an open shutter. Its high speed makes the LEICA D-LUX 4 ideal for available light exposures. Whether in poor light or for selective use of field depth, the lens of the LEICA D-LUX 4 gives the photographer scope for highly individual picture composition. The aspherical zoom lens with a focusing range of 24-60 mm opens up new creative options in reportage photography. The lens design consists of eight elements, of which four are aspherical. These are matched individually to the camera sensor, working in harmony with the electronics and software, to produce stunningly brilliant pictures in true-to-life colours.

SONY BRAVIA Z SERIES KLV-40ZX1M

Sony's thinnest 40" diagonal monitor includes the performance and Full HD 1080p resolution of BRAVIA Z-Series HDTVs, the revolutionary Sony BRAVIA KLV-40ZX1M LCD Flat Panel Monitor lets you see the world from a whole new angle. At 9.9 mm thin and approximately 26 pounds, the KLV-40ZX1M is flatter than any other large-screen monitor available, approaching the thinness of the 11" (diagonal) Sony XEL-1 Organic Light Emitting Diode (OLED) TV. Sony offers beautiful design inside and out by incorporating a Wide Color Gamut LED edge light instead of conventional fluorescent lamps, which allows the KLV-40ZX1M to produce rich, more realistic images on a screen as slim as a picture frame. The KLV-40ZX1M not only displays more subtle shades of red, green, and blue but also features Advanced Contrast Enhancer (ACE) technology for deeper blacks and better image detail when viewing dark movie scenes. It includes enhanced image processing features such as BRAVIA Engine – which reduces visual noise and sharpens image detail – and Motionflow 120Hz, a technology that contributes to sharper, more fluid motion by generating extra frames. Additionally, 10-bit processing and a 10-bit panel, Live Color Creation, and x.v.Color capabilities¹ create vibrant, more accurate color reproduction. The KLV-40ZX1M also includes an HDMI input that, when used with the BRAVIA Wireless Link module (sold separately), allows you to connect a DVD player, AV gear, or other HDMI components for wireless, real-time transmission of these super-sharp images. A new wall-hugging mount and matching speaker bar (both sold separately) further enhance the fully integrated, on-the-wall design of the KLV-40ZX1M.

2008 HONDA FC SPORT DESIGN STUDY

The FC Sport emphasizes the design flexibility and potential of Honda's V Flow fuel cell technology - already deployed in the Honda FCX Clarity sedan - and reconfigures it into a lightweight sports car design with an ultra-low center of gravity, powerful electric motor performance and zero-emissions. The design study concept is inspired by supercar levels of performance through low weight and a high-performance, electrically driven fuel cell powertrain.

The high-output Honda fuel cell powertrain and a sleek, aerodynamic body contribute to the vehicle's performance potential. A modular approach to fuel cell component packaging and the electric drivetrain contribute to the FC Sport's low center of gravity with the majority of vehicle mass distributed between the axles, creating the balanced weight distribution sought after in sports cars.

The Advanced Design Studio of Honda R&D Americas, in Pasadena, California, developed the FC Sport design study with the primary objective of using existing fuel cell technology as the basis for an ultimate Honda sports car. Designer Jason Wilbur led the design efforts.

2009 C3R RETRO CORVETTE STINGRAY DESIGN

The changes were mostly on the rear end, I added a chamfer where the body meets the rear diffuser to visually lift the rear, I extended the rear about 25mm and narrowed it by more than 50mm to visually give it a more aggressive and planted stance. I also flattened the rear deck area and added a cham-fer to the spoiler to match the profile of the 69 stingray better and also to give it a more modern look. The last change was to the front fender in front of the wheel, I added some fullness to give it better lead-in to the grill area.

The dimensions on the C3R are the same as the z06 except the length, my car is 4 inches longer. I also wanted to mention that the headlights are not pop-up, I don't want to say right now how they work because I going to create an animation that shows the process. One of the main complaints was that people thought it was going to have the pop-up lights.

Now that the main surfaces are done I am going to focus on the details like if it is possible to have 69 style door handles and the possibility of moving the location of the fuel filler to the rear deck, again like the C3.

1969 CHEVROLET CAMARO CONVERTIBLE SUPERCAR BY MODERN MUSCLE

This vehicle has been equipped with a full chassis by Modern Muscle. They call a vehicle built this way a "Super Car." The chassis features Corvette C5 aluminum suspension at all four corners, including independent rear suspension and the C5 differential. Handling is on par with a C5 Corvette, which is light years ahead of a stock first generation Camaro. The top features a subtle chop, which is really a significant task on a convertible, since all of the top bows must be altered accordingly, and must still function for raising and lowering the top. Another interesting item on this is the electronic stack injection, which enables the classic Chevy big block to, quite literally, start with the push of a button. It starts easily on the first turn, and idles incredibly smoothly. Also note how the hood is electrically actuated and swings forward with the touch of a button on the console, or the integrated spoiler on the decklid. In short, the more you look at this Camaro, the more custom touches you discover.

2009 AUDI R8 5.2 FSI QUATTRO

Ingolstadt Audi is launching the next variant of its top-of-the-line model. With the R8, the brand has established itself at the forefront of high-end sports cars from the very start and now comes the R8 V10. Its 5.2-liter, ten-cylinder engine churns out 386 kW (525 hp) and 530 Nm (390.91 lb-ft) of torque, which makes for breathtaking performance. With superior Audi technologies such as quattro all-wheel drive, the lightweight aluminum body, the innovative all-LED headlights, and its striking design, the R8 V10 takes pole position against the competition.

The R8 V10 is the result of cumulative know-how from Audis string of Le Mans victories. Its naturally aspirated engine combines racing technology such as dry sump lubrication with FSI gasoline direct injection. The ten-cylinder design is the perfect synthesis for impressive top performance, mighty pulling power, and low weight. Starting in 2009, this engine will also prove its potential on the world's racetracks in the new R8 racing car Audi is developing for customer teams in conformance with the GT3 rules.

The V10 engine in the production sports car will be almost identical in construction to the one in the racing version. Its displacement is 5,204 cc, at 6,500 rpm it delivers 530 Nm (390.91 lb-ft) of torque, at 8,000 rpm its power tops out at 386 kW (525 hp). The specific power output is 100.9 hp per liter of displacement and each hp has to propel only 3.09 kilograms (6.91 lb) of weight, because the Audi R8 V10 in the version with the six-speed manual gearshift weighs only 1,620 kilograms (3571 lb). The engine accounts 258 of these kilograms (lb) that's only 31 kilos (68 lb) than the V8.

BIG GAME BATTLE OF THE SEXES?

By: Rick Dickert

IT'S TIME FOR THE BIG GAME, AND BEFORE IT'S ALL OVER ONE TEAM WILL BE THE TOAST OF THE TOWN, WHILE THE OTHER WILL SIMPLY BE TOAST. IT'S AN EXCELLENT REASON FOR A BUNCH OF THE GUYS TO GET TOGETHER. MANY LADIES ARE NOT AS ENTHUSIASTIC ABOUT THE BIG GAME, BUT IT DOESN'T HAVE TO BE A SOURCE OF FRICTION BETWEEN THE SEXES.

A gentleman may want to approach the idea of a BIG GAME Bash with caution. In front of the little lady, he should always refer to it as a "theme party." If a codename is required for correspondence with his male colleagues, he may use "Operation: Superb Owl" when speaking but this is less stealthy if his lady sees it in print, considering this alias is merely a shift of one letter.

If she gets enthusiastic, she may actually want to help plan the event. If she insists on stocking up on tofu, he should specify the firm kind. When cut into squares, it will actually serve well as coasters for the frosty beverages. She may suggest stocking up on finger foods, not realizing that when the ball's on the five yard line anything edible can become finger food, even chili. Basically, she can prepare any health-conscious food item she wants and it won't go to waste at a BIG GAME party as long as it can be deep-fried and dipped in melted cheese.

There's one caveat about ordering a novelty six-foot-long submarine sandwich to be shared by all the guests, though. It actually does set the precedent for sharing food the next time he orders a double rack of his favorite ribs and she orders just a garden salad.

"If she hears the gentleman talking about "covering the spread" she may assume they mean stretching plastic wrap over a cream cheese based condiment for her crackers."

By the way, if she hears the gentleman talking about "covering the spread" she may assume they mean stretching plastic wrap over a cream cheese based condiment for her crackers. It would be best not to correct her on this point.

In many households, the big game itself is primarily a male interest. Although there is something about it that anyone's aunt, mother or grandmother can appreciate. And that's no matter how close the game is the players still take time to say hi to their mom when they're on camera. Bless their hearts.

Not all ladies are enthusiastic about watching football though. Some gentlemen have suffered their worst football injuries from women after trying to switch channels from Desperate Housewives to the game. Ladies shouldn't be forced to watch football at any time, but there should definitely be a local blackout on vacuuming.

If the gentlemen happen to become depressed as they calculate how much money the player's are making while doing something most men would do for free, there's always the half-time show where they can watch rock stars from their high school days make millions of dollars for playing three songs before being shuttled back to their hotels in their stretch Hummer limos. And when the second half starts, realizing that some of the cheerleaders left with the band only leads to further depression.

At some point a lady will probably notice the cheerleaders, too. She may even speculate to her significant other that some of them have had "work done." A tactful response to this would be that the gentleman hadn't noticed, but he did read something about it being a "rebuilding year" for the team, and that probably extends to the cheerleaders, too. By the way, if you ever find yourself on a football field near cheerleaders while they're performing, keep in mind that there's a fine line between cheerleading and kick-boxing.

The only real downside for the lady of the house is that after the game is over and all the guests have gone home, she's left doing the lion's share of the cleanup. This leads us to another great football tradition. In order to reduce the after-party cleanup, women came up with the idea of taking the event outside. And thus began The Tailgate Party.

READ YOUR OPPONENTS POKER FACE

By: Bonnie Conrad

Every poker player has heard the expression “poker face”, and cultivating a proper poker face is an essential ingredient of successful poker play. The poker face is tied up with the ability to bluff, which is used when the player is trying to make his or her opponents feel that their hand is something other than what it truly is. This bluffing strategy can work both with good and with bad hands. For instance, those holding what they feel is a winning hand may want to pretend they have a bad hand, in order to urge the other players to build the pot and continue to raise. Those players holding a bad hand, on the other hand, may use bluffing to convince the other players in the game to fold.

The good thing about the bluffing skill is that it works for both real world and online poker play. In fact, online poker play has its own unique opportunities for bluffing when it comes to poker playing. Sometimes when playing online the other players may be more willing to share their playing secrets with other players. This knowledge should be used to your best advantage. Ask players questions and see what they can share with you. If you do not understand why the more experienced players made a particular move, be sure to ask them about it. It helps, of course, to explain to the other players that you are new to the game; most experienced poker players in the online world will be willing to help newcomers learn the ropes.

New poker players will also need to develop the ability to pick up on the tells of the other players, while at the same time keeping their own tells well hidden. Most players of course will not smile broadly or jump out of their chair when dealt a straight flush, but most will indicate the good hand with some sort of subtle gesture. It is important to examine your own play for tells, and do what you can to eliminate them. It is also important to carefully study the other players in the game, and to pick up on the tells that indicate the quality of their hands. As you do this, however, never forget that the other players will be studying you as much as you are studying them.

One strategy many poker players use is to engage in idle chitchat while they are playing, and this can be very distracting to the other players. In most cases this distraction is intentional, since distraction can be a good way to throw opponents and put them off their game. It is important therefore to develop the skill to block out these distractions and focus on the game.

“The good thing about the bluffing skill is that it works for both real world and online poker play.”

LIFE AND FOOTBALL

By: Woody Gray

Does your wife or girlfriend think that watching football is a complete waste of time? Would you like to show her just how wrong she is? The countless hours you spend in front of the TV Sundays and Monday nights during fall and early winter are a gold mine of valuable lessons that you can apply in all areas of your life. Here's a list of 10 important ones.

1. Work hard, play smart.

This one's a no brainer. Football is a difficult and complex game. In order to be successful at it you have to work hard, both on the practice field and especially during games. It's not enough to merely work hard, though. You also need to play smart. This means that off the field you need to watch tape, study playbooks and learn as much about the game as you can. You then need to take all the knowledge you acquired and apply it to your game when you're back on the field.

Life is also difficult and complicated. You need to work hard in order to succeed, regardless of what it is that you do. You definitely need to work smart too because life just may be even more complex than football. The more you know about whatever it is that you do, the greater your odds of succeeding. You need to read, take courses, watch videos, talk to people, and scour around for any other source of information that will help you do it more effectively and efficiently. In life, as in football, the road to success starts with hard work.

2. Be a team player.

Football is a team sport. To be good at it, you need to be willing to sacrifice individual glory or desires for the good of the team. As a quarterback, no matter how much you might like to pass, you can't be throwing the ball if the team would be better served by having you hand it off to a running back. Likewise, when playing wide receiver, if you don't have the ball on a particular play, you need to be blocking for a teammate who does. Remember, when that final whistle blows, the better your team does the better off you'll be.

Life is a team sport too. Sooner or later your success will depend on your ability to work well with others. You need to step outside of yourself and think about the team you belong to. What is the purpose of your group? What are you trying to achieve together? What's your role? You also need to consider your teammates. What are their goals and aspirations? What are their strengths and weaknesses? What are their likes and dislikes? How can you best mesh your individual strengths, weaknesses and preferences so that you optimize the way you operate as a team? In the end, the more successful your group is, the better off you'll be.

3. Don't run with the ball until you've caught it.

How often have you heard a football commentator say "he couldn't hang onto the football because he started running with it before he had control". One of the keys to being a successful receiver is that you need to be totally focused on catching the ball before you start running with it. In the excitement and pressure of the game, there's a great temptation to start running with the ball as soon as you feel it touch your hands. This is a big mistake! A pass is not completed until you have possession. Once that ball makes contact with your fingertips, your attention needs to be completely focused on securing control of it before you start running with it.

Life is the same way. Don't start something until you've successfully finished all previous, dependant tasks. For example, if you run with an idea before you fully grasp it, you'll look stupid and unprepared when people start challenging it. If you start implementing it and it doesn't work properly, people may start questioning your competence. This is not a formula for success. Finish the job at hand before moving on to the next one.

4. Be good at everything and great at something.

It's next to impossible for a football team to win championships if they have a glaring weakness in any area, or if there isn't even one thing that they're great at doing. A good example of the first case is the 2006 Chicago Bears. They were a very well balanced team. They had a phenomenal kick returner in Devin Hester, their defense was excellent, they had two quality running backs, and both their defensive and offensive lines were solid. The only glaring chink in their armor was their quarterback, Rex Grossman, who was exceptionally inconsistent. At times, he played extremely well and seemed to be flirting with greatness. Other times he seemed completely inept. This one festering flaw that the team chose to overlook that season ended up costing them The Big One. The things they were great at helped them get into the BIG GAME. Unfortunately for the team, Rex fumbled the game away. At least they won the NFC Championship, though. There's not a single team that comes to mind that was able to win a championship without being great in at least one thing.

The same principle applies in life. If you have a weakness, sooner or later it's going to cost you. If you're not great at something, it's going to be hard for you to thrive in life. You need to know yourself. Know your strengths and weaknesses. Play to your strengths but don't ignore your weaknesses. Work on eliminating them so that they don't become an opening through which failure sneaks up on you.

5. Play through the pain.

Football is a contact sport, a very rough one at that. You can be sure that at one point or another you're going to get hurt. If you want to keep playing, you're just going to have to suck it up and play hurt. Everyone who plays the game knows this and does this.

Life is rough too. It's full of dangers that threaten your safety and well-being. Invariably, at one point or another, you're going to get hurt. However, you can't let the pain of life stop you from doing the things that you need to do in order to succeed. It's best to accept the fact that life is going to throw a fair share of pain your way and just keep forging ahead when it does.

6. Keep your opponent honest, balance your attack.

It's hard for a football team to be successful if they have a one-dimensional attack. If your team has a great passing game but your running game is useless, it's going to be very difficult for you to win consistently. You'll become predictable. Sooner or later, your opponents will adjust their defenses to you. Not only that, but you're also limiting your options. There are situations where it just makes a lot more sense to run the ball rather than to pass once again had a top-rated defense, they returned to the BIG GAME.

The same principle applies in life. You need to have a good defense to protect yourself against the many dangers that life will throw your way, be it thieves trying to break into your house, salesmen selling you products or services of dubious value, diseases trying to ravage your body, or viruses attacking our computer. If you don't take appropriate and reasonable measures to protect yourself, you'll eventually lose at the game of life.

or nervous. You can't think as clearly and you don't respond as quickly to what's going on around you. This holds true in life as well as in football. If you don't enjoy life, chances are you won't be successful. Find your passion and follow it. Don't allow yourself to become overly burdened by your responsibilities. Don't ignore them, by any means, but when you just have to do something, find a way to make it as pleasant as possible. Loosen up once in a while. Just have fun doing what you do and the people that you do it with.

it. If it's fourth and one and you need to go for it, your odds of converting the first down are much lower if you pass than if you run - especially if your opponent knows that you're going to pass.

Life is like that too. It will constantly put you in situations where you have to compete with others. If you become predictable because there's only one thing that you can do well, you hand your competitors a great advantage. If, on the other hand, you keep them on their toes by mixing things up, you give them more to think about. This makes life harder for them and makes it easier for you to be more effective with the things that we do really well.

7. Defense wins championships.

This has become a cliché now, probably because it's been shown to be true time and again. Think 2000 Baltimore Ravens, or 2002 Tampa Bay Buccaneers. Both had great defenses and only lackluster offenses. Both won the BIG GAME. In fact, the 1972 Miami Dolphins, the only team in the NFL to have a perfect season, won the lowest scoring BIG GAME of all time by playing phenomenal defense. At the other end of the spectrum, "The Greatest Show on Turf", as the 1999-2001 St. Louis Rams were called, also confirms this rule. They had the best offense going, bar none. They still stand as the only team in the NFL to score more than 500 points in 3 consecutive seasons. No other team has even done it 2 seasons in a row. Yet, even they couldn't win the BIG GAME without a good defense. In 1999, when they had one of the top-rated defenses in the league, they won the BIG GAME. In fact, it was a defensive play, now simply known as "The Tackle", that preserved the win for them. (Fox Sports goes as far as ranking it the all-time Best Clutch Play of any BIG GAME.) In 2000, when their defense was ranked 2nd worst in the NFL, they barely made the playoffs and then got eliminated in the first round. In 2001, when they

8. Offense wins fans.

While defense might be necessary for winning championships, it's generally pretty boring for the fans. Sure, it's great to win championships, but it's also great to be remembered for the exciting things you accomplished. Which team do you think got more attention, the 2000 Baltimore Ravens or the 2000 St. Louis Rams? Which name do you think more people recognize, Ray Lewis or Kurt Warner?

Life works the same way. You won't inspire others or build a great reputation if your only preoccupation is to protect yourself. You make a name for yourself by going out there and accomplishing something impressive.

"You won't inspire others or build a great reputation if your only preoccupation is to protect yourself."

9. Have fun.

Football is a game. Games are meant to be fun. The best teams seem to be the ones whose players look like they're having fun playing the game. There are a couple of reasons for this. First, pleasure is a great natural motivator. If you enjoy doing something, you're much more inclined to spend time doing it. The more time you spend doing something, the more likely you are to be good at it. The better you are at something, the greater your odds of succeeding at it. Second, having fun makes you more relaxed. It's hard to perform at your peak potential if you're too tense

10. Play to win.

The objective of football is to win - to score more points than the other team. Can you imagine a football game where neither team cared whether they won or lost? Can you see the players on either of those teams pushing themselves to make the kind of plays that make football such an exciting sport? A whole layer of emotional intensity would be missing. It would be a pretty boring game, wouldn't it? It would be boring to play and even more boring to watch.

Life, like football, is better, richer and more exciting when we play to win.

This lesson goes hand in hand with lesson #9. Winning isn't everything; nor is it the only thing - but it sure is a lot more fun than losing. The more you win, the more fun you have. The more fun you have, the longer you'll play. The longer you play..., well, you get the idea.

So the next time your wife or girlfriend starts chastising you about all the hours you spend watching football, help her to see how useful it really is by sharing some of these lessons with her. Don't tell her you're watching the Steelers devour the Bengals. Tell her that you're watching the Steelers remind you to update the anti-virus software on your computer. She might burst out laughing, and she still might not understand football. But if you actually do update that software after the game is over, she just might let you watch in peace a little more often.

DUCATI Streetfighter

Claudio Domenicali, General Product Manager of Ducati Motor Holding, introduced the major and eagerly awaited new Ducati products for 2009. The motorcycles made their entrance on the runway ridden by Ducati factory racers and testers: Giulio Malagoli (Monster 1100), Niccolò Canepa (1198), Vittoriano Guareschi (Streetfighter) and Claudio Domenicali (1098 R Bayliss). It was a truly impressive, spectacular presentation that made the occasion even more thrilling.

The real star of the event was the new Ducati Streetfighter, which is already among the top contenders for the title "best bike of the show".

Stripped to the bare essentials, its combination of state-of-the-art race technology, exposed styling and cultured design takes Ducati's big naked concept to the very top of the fighter food chain.

With 155hp of awesome Ducati LTwin muscle harnessed in a stripped-down, super-light bike that packs more punch for its weight than any other contender, this fighter is gloves-off and ready for action. Whether laying down the miles on open roads or ripping up the urban asphalt, no other bike in town will roll with the same stylish fire-power.

This ultimate naked will be ripping-up the asphalt from Spring 2009.

Ducati Streetfighter is also available in a "S" version equipped with Öhlins suspension, light-weight forged Marchesini wheels, carbon fibre parts and a street-going Ducati Traction Control.

Angelina ARMANI™

Angelina Armani™ is a distinctive combination of classic Hollywood elegance and unapologetic raw sexuality. The all-natural, 5'10" beauty wants to revolutionize the adult industry by showing that refinement and class can coexist with wild, passionate sex. Angelina is equally at ease striking poses on the red carpet, as she is in the bedroom going 0 to 60 in 3.3 seconds. Impressed by Digital Playground's commitment to pristine quality, and its original and chic style of filming, Angelina knew she found a home.

Angelina first came to the attention of Digital Playground's owners Joone and Samantha Lewis at the premiere of the blockbuster movie "Pirates II: Stagnetti's Revenge". Flashes popped and reporters begged for an interview as Angelina walked the red carpet. Joone and Samantha noticed the way the cameras immediately fell in love with her. Angelina Armani was signed to an exclusive Digital Playground contract soon after.

Angelina's fabulous body has a lot to do with the attention showered upon her. The statuesque blonde credits her natural supermodel looks and long, gorgeous legs to her Russian heritage. In order to keep her body lean, toned, and extremely flexible, she rigorously trains in Pilates classes. Of course, her energetic, sexual escapades are a critical part of her workout regime as well.

“The statuesque blonde credits her natural supermodel looks and long, gorgeous legs to her Russian heritage.”

The end result is a body that magazines crave to place on their cover.

Modeling for the mainstream world came easy to the glamorous Angelina, but it was her desire for adventure and sexual satisfaction that led her to Digital Playground. Angelina continues to model for both adult and mainstream. One of her favorite shoots was for a mixed martial arts website—a sport that has always captured her fascination. Angelina's appreciation for martial arts derives from her family of soldiers and police officers. For Angelina, watching a fight is almost as arousing as having sex.

Angelina is also entirely at ease in front of the movie camera. Movies allow her imagination to run wild in sinful delight. In fact, Angelina's love for movies extends to reading screenplays in her limited downtime. Although she would cherish the opportunity to act in a mainstream film, she has no plans to leave the adult industry. The self-proclaimed nymphomaniac is too busy working hard to become an international adult superstar.

Despite the fantastical nature of Angelina's sudden rise to stardom, the Brooklyn native doesn't put much stock in waiting for fairy tales to occur. This Russian princess isn't looking for a knight to give her a happy ending. She's doing it on her own! Angelina carefully studies the example set by her contract sisters, like Jesse Jane® and Stoya™, and is quickly moving into the public eye. Her Digital Playground contract was the first step, and she can't wait for all the fame and fortune that will follow.

For now, the world eagerly awaits Angelina Armani's film debut "The Big Hit" and her forthcoming appearance on the covers of notable magazines around the world.
