

Publisher's note

We are pleased to announce that Professor Sung-Hoon Kim has accepted our invitation to become an Editor of Dyes and Pigments.

Professor Kim is currently based in the Department of Dyeing and Finishing at the Kyungpook National University, where his research interests include dye materials for optoelectronics, functional dyes for chemical sensing and dyes for high-tech field. He joined Kyungpook National University as a Professor in 1987 after finishing his PhD studies at the University of Osaka Prefecture.

Professor Kim has already been associated with the journal as a member of the editorial board, and we would like to thank him for his contribution during this time. We wish him success in his new position as Editor.

Articles may be submitted to Professor Kim at the following address with immediate effect:

At the same time Professor Harold Freeman, who has been editor of Dyes and Pigments for the past three years, has retired. We would like to thank him for all his activities for the scientific quality of the journal, in particular his assistance to improve the manuscripts of less experienced authors. We are confident that, in the new structure, the journal will continue to be a key source of information in the area of dyes and pigments and their intermediates.
