

FEBS LETTERS

An international journal established for the most rapid possible publication of essentially final short papers in the field of Biochemistry, Biophysics and Molecular Cell Biology

Published by Elsevier Science B.V. on behalf of the

FEDERATION OF EUROPEAN BIOCHEMICAL SOCIETIES

FEBS Letters is intended to be a journal for the fast dissemination of significant and novel work in an essentially complete form. It is NOT the vehicle for preliminary or fragmentary observations, or for 'leftovers' from larger papers, or for material which, although sound, does not have to appear quickly, or is addressed to a small audience only. As a rule, for example, we do not publish incomplete sequences, or sequences which are known in other species; or incomplete NMR or other spectroscopic assignments; or the conventionally achieved expression of a gene in bacteria or yeast; or just negative observations. Also, methodological papers are not usually published by us, unless they are truly novel and significant. The overriding criterion is that a paper must be of sufficient immediate importance to justify urgent publication. As space is finite, we are forced to refuse papers which, although sound, do not have top priority. We apologise, therefore, for 'approving but not publishing' such manuscripts.

Attention of the authors is drawn to the fact that our rejection procedure may take as long as in other journals, as explained elsewhere (see FEBS Letters, 217 (1987) 143-144. For details on the preparation of the manuscripts, see our 'Notes' (e.g. FEBS Letters, Volume 350, No. 2,3, pp. 347-348 and thereafter at the end of each tenth volume, i.e. at the end of Vol. 360, 370, 380, etc.).

The authors should submit their papers to the Editor who is the closest to their field of interest (rather than geographically): this accelerates the reviewing process. In case of doubt, please contact any editor. The 'date of receipt' eventually appearing in the published paper will be that upon which the editor who actually handled the manuscript took receipt of it. The authors must submit, if at all possible, a floppy disk of their manuscript (see under Notes to Authors). This accelerates the handling process and reduces the danger of misprints eventually appearing.
