

First Announcement

1996 International Workshop on Millimeter Waves

April 11 - 12, 1996

Orvieto, Italy

Workshop (April 11 to 12, 1996)

The 4th International Workshop on Millimeter Waves will be held at the Palazzo del Capitano del Popolo Congress Center in Orvieto, Italy, on April 11-12 1996. The Workshop is organized by the IEEE MTT/AP Chapter of the C&S Italy Section in cooperation with the IEEE MTT Chapters of North Italy, France, Germany and United Kingdom/Ireland.

The scope of the Workshop is to provide a forum for discussion and assessment on the latest advances and applications on millimeterwave technology. With the same format successfully experimented in the preceding editions of Rome (1986), Perugia (1989) and Orvieto (1992), internationally recognized experts are invited to give survey lectures followed by discussions with the audience. A number of different relevant topics will be covered, including:

- antennas
- automotive technology
- communications
- design and CAD
- device and circuit modeling
- MMIC's
- new devices
- packaging

A limited number of contributed papers will also be included in the Workshop program. All papers (no more than two A4 pages for a 5-10 minutes talk) will be refereed by the International Program Committee.

The venue

Orvieto is located 100 km North of Rome, to which is connected by both the A1 highway and the railway to Florence and Milan. Built in a tufaceous rock standing in the valley of the Paglia river, Orvieto is an extremely interesting town for its important testimonies from the etruscan period, its suggestive well-preserved medieval appearance and the rich artistic patrimony, of which the famous Cathedral is the highest expression. The site of the meeting is a wonderful medieval palace of the XII century, former residence of the Capitano del Popolo. In May 1990 the interior was transformed into a modern Congress Center.
