Aims and Scope

Original articles, communications and brief, selected reviews of broad interest to the organic, inorganic and biochemistry of sulfur, phosphorus, antimony, bismuth, selenium and tellurium will be considered for publication in Phosphorus and Sulfur. Regular papers may be sent to Amherst or Mainz. Communications and reviews will be the responsibility of the Associate Editors, to whom they should be sent directly.

Contributions will be refereed by members of the Editorial Board and other experts in this interrelated discipline. Requirements for acceptance include originality, breadth of scope, careful documentation of experimental results, and clarity and brevity of presentation. There are no page charges for papers published in Phosphorus and Sulfur. The Editors and Publishers strive to provide rapid publication of accepted papers. Proofs are provided within 4-6 weeks after acceptance and must be returned promptly.

Notes for Contributors, including information on communications and reviews, can be found at the back of every issue.
