THE IRE

THE INSTITUTE OF RADIO ENGINEERS, founded through the efforts of three far-seeing engineers, Dr. A. N. Goldsmith, J. V. L. Hogan, and R. H. Marriott, has grown from its original roster of less than fifty members gained by the merger of two small professional societies in 1912, to an international membership of 90,000. It is an incorporated, nonprofit organization established for the advancement of the theory and practice of electronics and radio, including allied branches of engineering and the related arts and sciences.

The IRE publishes technical papers, reports, and general information of interest to electronics engineers. It holds meetings and discussions throughout the United States, Canada, and several countries abroad, and maintains committees for collating and standardizing the results of technical research and development. Among the fields covered are radio communication, sound broadcasting, television, marine and aerial guidance, electron devices, radio-frequency measurements, engineering education, electron optics, sound and picture electrical recording and reproduction, power and manufacturing applications of radio and electronic technique, industrial electronic control and processes, medical electrical research and applications, and space electronics.

The management of the Institute of Radio Engineers resides in a Board of Directors selected from the body of Fellows and Senior Members, acting through an Executive Committee and the officers of the IRE. The President and Vice-Presidents are elected annually from the body of Fellows and Senior Members.

Membership in the IRE is contingent upon experience and achievement in radio engineering and allied fields. The grade of Fellow is one of distinction, and appointment thereto by the Board of Director's is made on the basis of eminence and distinguished service. Other grades —Senior Member, Member, Associate, and Student— are filled from applicants whose age, experience, and attainments conform to the respective requirements set forth in Bylaw 203 on page 9. An application blank appears on pages 21–24.

COMMITTEES*

The IRE has established over twenty-five technical committees covering specialized fields of radio engineering. Through the IRE, these committees (sometimes in collaboration with technical committees of other engineering societies) publish standards of accepted definitions of terms, and methods of measurements of physical quantities used in radio engineering practices.

CONVENTIONS AND MEETINGS

Each year the IRE holds an international convention for its entire membership, during which technical papers are presented and the latest electronic equipment is displayed. Numerous additional meetings, many with exhibits, are held throughout the year by IRE Regions, Sections, and Professional Groups.

SECTIONS†

Sections have been established through the United States, Canada, Egypt, Israel, Japan, Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Italy, India, Switzerland, and the Benelux countries, to hold meetings under the aegis of the IRE. The Sections of the IRE are grouped into eight Regions, and each Region is represented on the Board of Directors by a Regional Director elected bi-annually from, and by, the membership of the respective Region.

PROFESSIONAL GROUPS†

To serve many special fields of interest, Professional Groups have been formed on an Institute-wide basis in each of twenty-eight technical fields. These Groups organize meetings and conferences on subjects of special interest to their members. They issue technical publications called TRANSACTIONS to provide a means for ensuring their membership proper coverage of their fields in the publications of the IRE, and for promoting recognition of their leaders among the IRE membership at large.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE IRE

PROCEEDINGS OF THE IRE

Perhaps the most important single activity of the Institute is the publication of a technical journal. The first issue of the PROCEEDINGS OF THE INSTITUTE OF RADIO ENGINEERS appeared in 1913. Established first as a quarterly, since 1927 the PROCEEDINGS has been published in twelve numbers annually. In 1939, the name of the journal was shortened to PROCEEDINGS OF THE IRE.

The PROCEEDINGS OF THE IRE is the official publication of the Institute of Radio Engineers. In it appear technical papers, discussions, and communications approved by the Editorial Reviewers and Managing Editor, as well as IRE Standards prepared by the technical committees.

To date, over 7500 papers on advanced research topics have been published in PROCEEDINGS, including mathematico-physical analyses of engineering problems, current engineering developments of equipment and methods, and commercial applications of engineering methods and products, historical papers, and tutorial papers covering specific aspects of radio and electronic engineering. In addition, space is devoted to news, book reviews, new products, and abstracts of papers published in technical publications the world over. The PROCEEDINGS OF THE

* A list of Committees appears in the June and October issues of PROCEEDINGS OF THE IRE.

† A list of Sections and Professional Groups and their officers appears every odd-numbered month in PROCEEDINGS OF THE IRE.

World Radio History

IRE is mailed gratis to all members; subscription price to nonmembers is $18.00 per year, $19.00 to foreign destinations.

IRE Transactions

Each of the twenty-eight IRE Professional Groups publishes its own technical publication, called TRANSACTIONS, covering developments of particular interest within its own specialized field. The TRANSACTIONS is sent free to all paid members of the Professional Group. Frequency of issue varies from Group to Group, and ranges from one to six issues per year.

IRE Convention Record

The IRE annually publishes the papers presented at the IRE International Convention in New York in the IRE INTERNATIONAL CONVENTION RECORD.

Yearbooks and Directories

The first Yearbook was published in 1914, the second in 1916, and then annually between 1926 and 1932. Yearbooks were then published in 1937, 1942, and 1946. With the 1948 Yearbook, annual publication was resumed. In 1950 its name was changed to "Directory."

Standards

Standardization reports have been issued since 1913. Early reports were confined to the definition of technical terms and standard graphical symbols. Current reports include methods of testing equipment and measuring electronics quantities, and letter symbols and mathematical notation. Starting in 1949, IRE Standards have been published in the PROCEEDINGS, rather than as separate reports, to make them available to all members at no extra charge. Also, they are available in reprint form. All IRE standard definitions and symbols, as of December 1959, appear in the "IRE Dictionary of Electronics Terms and Symbols," which is available to members at $5.20, and to others at $10.40 per copy.

AWARDS

The IRE bestows seven awards, six annual and one nonannual, in recognition of outstanding technical and administrative achievements in the field of radio communication.

Medal of Honor

The Medal of Honor is given annually in recognition of outstanding scientific or engineering achievements in the fields of activity of the IRE. The recipient is named by the Board of Directors upon the recommendation of the Awards Committee.
