'Daniel Radcliffe is reduced to tears'

THERE'S A VERY moving moment in Daniel Radcliffe's Who Do You Think You Are? (Monday, BBC1) when his auntie, with due reverence, hands him an envelope full of the most precious letters.

These are the exchanges between Radcliffe's great-great uncle Ernie from the Front during the First World War. There are letters from Ernie to his mum, and letters to Ernie from his devoted sweetheart that are full of such tenderness that Radcliffe is reduced to tears.

I know there are always weepy moments like this in WDYTYA? But this is genuine and heartfelt, and Radcliffe feels he has come to know great-great uncle Ernie, as, in our small way, do we.

It's an excellent start to a new series, the 16th, that will also feature Kate Winslet (see our interview on page 16), Paul Merton, Naomie Harris and Sharon Osbourne, among others.

One of the biggest sleeper drama hits of all time, Keeping Faith, returns on Tuesday to BBC1 (the Welsh language version, Un Bore Mercher, started some weeks ago on S4C). The first series was a curious thing, which for reasons I don't think anyone has ever got to the bottom of, suddenly took off on iPlayer where it broke records with millions of hits.

A SECOND SERIES WAS clearly inevitable so now Faith Howells (Eve Myles) is back, confronting the husband who walked out on her at the start of series one and came back into her life in the final moments of the last episode. There are too many bits of slow-motion melodrama and soppy songs for my liking, but Myles is a powerhouse.

As someone who has absolutely no sense of adventure, I have to abseil down South American jungle waterfalls vicariously with Steve Backshall in Expedition with Steve Backshall (Sunday, Dave). It's great fun.

WHAT WE'VE LEARNT THIS WEEK

Hard luck if you are down the pecking order in the complex social structure of the toque macaque monkeys of Sri Lanka. From birth, each one knows their place in the hierarchy, which is so rigidly enforced that even when packs are in danger from predators, the lowly monkeys must wait for the alpha males and females to climb trees to safety before they are allowed to follow.

WHAT GETS US TALKING...

DRIVE ON

In 2014's BBC1 drama The Driver, David Morrissey starred as an ordinary man who became a driver for a criminal gang. Now it's to be reimagined for a US audience. Director Sunu Gonera is developing a remake set in New Orleans for cable giant FX, featuring a predominantly African-American cast. Danny Brocklehurst, who co-wrote the original series with Jeff Poyser, says he has met with Gonera and is thrilled with the idea. "He's completely re-envisioned it," Brocklehurst tells me. "It's the same central story but with a completely different slant." Different, yes, but the man taking the Morrissey role may be familiar to UK audiences. He is Giancarlo Esposito, fondly remembered by Breaking Bad aficionados for his chilling turn as ruthless drugs kingpin Gus Fring.

BACK TO HALIFAX

Last Tango in Halifax is back for a four-part series, due next year. Filming should begin early this autumn, and creator Sally Wainwright has confirmed that the drama's core cast – Sarah Lancashire, Anne Reid, Derek Jacobi and Nicola Walker – have all agreed to return. Which is nice.

SNAKE IN THE GRASS

One of the most hotly anticipated BBC1 dramas in the coming months will be The Serpent, an eight-part drama about Charles Sobhraj, a con man, escape artist, thief, master of disguise and serial killer of a number of Western travellers across India, Thailand and Nepal in the late 1970s. The Serpent is being made by Mammoth Screen and it's a story close to the heart of executive producer Damien Timmer. He lived in the Far East as a boy at around the time the drama is set and knew the events well. In fact, he has been using his family photo albums to help the production's design departments hone the look of the drama.

THE KIDS ARE MOVING

More good news for public service TV. CBBC and CBeebies are to leap up the Sky electronic programme guide (EPG) as a result of changes announced by Ofcom. This means that by early January 2021, Sky will need to have moved the channels from their current positions (613 and 614) to among the first eight slots within the children's section. EPG placing is very important in securing viewers, and the fact that this guarantees CBBC and CBeebies a ranking ahead of Disney's channels – and possibly the likes of Cartoon Network and Nickelodeon – is "worth a lot of eyeballs" say BBC insiders. BEN DOWELL

EXCLUSIVE FIRST LOOK

Material glories

Twelve years after a movie adaptation, The Golden Compass, failed to wow audiences, Philip Pullman's acclaimed and much-loved His Dark Materials novels are returning to the screen, this time on BBC1.

Just don't call this tale of spirit animals, parallel worlds, talking bears and witches a magic story...

"We've tried to avoid the feeling of fantasy," production designer Joel Collins said, speaking to RT on set. "It needs to be a plausible world, built on science – even if that science is different to ours."

Accordingly, all the strange machines and gadgets in the series, to be shown later this year – including the compass-like alethiometer, which allows lead character Lyra Belacqua (Dafne Keen, right) to read the future – are built to seem like they could actually work.

Meanwhile, the daemons – the animal "souls" of every character – had to look as photo-realistic as possible, without being a distraction from the real, breathing actors.

"It's a complex job, this," Collins laughs – an understatement, clearly. HUW FULLERTON

‘The BBC must be class blind’

From poets to plumbers, TV should represent all sorts of people

I HAD A VERY pushy mother. One day, we had a garage sale to raise money for a Blue Peter charity appeal. My mum not only got us in touch with the Beeb, but also an audience with the programme editor, the great Biddy Baxter herself. I still remember Biddy gamely managing to look impressed at the modest £7.50 we’d raised.

That experience gave me an early sense that the BBC could also be for people like me. However, the Corporation has a challenge in that, for many working class people, there is a sense of it being a plaything for the middle classes.

The recent controversy over social justice themes being crowbarred into Doctor Who had many wondering if output can be hijacked to pursue political agendas. Call me chippy, but I know for a fact you can’t operate a Dalek without being called Jemima, having a degree and arriving at work on a Brompton folding bicycle.

In terms of changing class representation in television, it’s actually much easier to change the ratio on screen than off it. The support staff that gets people in front of the camera is by far the biggest part of the operation. Having now done a fair bit of work in that side of the industry, I haven’t heard many people who sound like me.

You could dismiss concerns over class representation by saying TV is simply an industry that is favoured by the middle class. A bit like primary schoolteachers being predominantly female, or 90 percent of plumbers being called Steve – but the license fee makes access imperative.

One of the barrier issues is impostor syndrome. Everyone feels it, but class magnifies that discomfort. When you walk into a meeting where everyone’s talking in a way you’re not, it’s natural to feel anxiety. You’re left with the choice of assimilating or holding your own, which can have the odd effect of magnifying your character to a level even you are not used to. You start sounding so much like Ray Winstone you wonder if you should pitch an idea or bring up the next set of in-play odds.

I had the same dilemma making my documentary, How the Middle Classes Ruined Britain. It was a battle to sound like myself and not some cockney doing a terrible impression of Simon Schama.

It’s not just tone, there’s a culture around careers in the arts that doesn’t make much sense to many working class people. When I started doing comedy gigs at the Edinburgh Festival Fringe, I was told “You have to be ready to make a loss for the first three years”. Three years of losing money?

GIVEN MY RIGHT-OF-CENTRE politics, I’m not entirely at ease with interventions and quotas – it strays perilously close to identity politics. But I know many people are vociferously arguing for their area of social interest. In the current climate, if you don’t speak up you get overlooked. Luckily, a focus on increasing working class voices in TV works for everyone, as many other disadvantaged groups in society fall within those auspices.

I’m pleased to report influential figures are switching on to this. About time. Not everyone was lucky enough to have a mother as pushy as mine (I say lucky, she was once ejected from a parents’ evening).

So I hope hearing someone like me on television makes a change. However, having a presenter who looks like an electrician is a drop in the ocean, compared to changing the culture of the huge number of people who put him there.

Geoff Norcott is a comedian and writer. How the Middle Classes Ruined Britain is on Monday BBC2

Don Johnson and Philip Michael Thomas were pushing up their suit sleeves and polishing their loafers for a new series of US cop drama Miami Vice. So we talked to some genuine Florida drug enforcers to find out what daily life would be like for Crockett and Tubbs in the real world.

The upshot? Much more hard grind, fewer flash cars and definitely less designer gear. “If you’re sitting in a silk suit for 12 or 13 hours in a surveillance car, it’s going to look like hell,” investigator Art Serig told us. Ferraris were also not really the car for the job either. “It’s better with a Buick,” he told us.

WHAT YOU SAID

Neighbours fever was gripping the nation. But a change of channels in Australia provoked some hilarious production bloopers in the Melbourne soap. “Where has Eileen appeared from?” asked Michael Lodmore from Lancashire. “Most importantly, why have five major characters had hair restyles?”Our letters editor reassured Stanley Irvine from Merseyside that Scott Robinson had not disappeared and a new actor would soon be taking on the role vacated by Darius Perkins. That actor, it transpired, was Jason Donovan... BEN DOWELL

Portrait of a friendship

INTERVIEW BY GINNY DOUGARY

Philip Mould, the urbane Mayfair art dealer of Fake or Fortune?, describes the birth of his professional relationship with co-presenter Fiona Bruce as "an arranged marriage". She says that working with him is "an ego-free zone in the egotistical business of television."

The two first met nearly 20 years ago on the BBC2 series The Antiques Show and hit it off immediately. Bruce recollects every time she called someone up in connection with that programme, "they would say 'Oh, Antiques Roadshow?' with a tremor of excitement in their voice, and then I'd say, 'No, it's The Antiques Show on BBC2', which they'd never heard of." Cue a gasp of her familiar, infectious laughter.

In 2008, she replaced Michael Aspel as the presenter of the actual Antiques Roadshow and worked with Mould again. And so, by the time Fake or Fortune? came to fruition, three years later, inspired by Mould's 2009 book Sleuth – about the people and techniques involved in discovering art – the pair were confident of their compatibility as a TV duo.

The idea for the original series was intended to be sent to the controller of BBC2, but – thanks to a felicitious technical blip – it ended up in the inbox of the then controller of BBC1, Jay Hunt, who just happened to be looking for a new arts show.

At around five million viewers an episode, Fake or Fortune? now has the biggest audience of any arts-focused programme in the UK, lured by the combination of detective thriller and cutting-edge forensic techniques; a strong element of the draw being the human story connected to the art work.

"You really care so much more about an object," Mould says, "if you see it through the eyes of the owner whose life can be affected either positively or negatively by the news that it is what they hope it to be. It's that fine balance between art history and jeopardy."

Both presenters come across as more upper crust than their backgrounds, slipping seamlessly into the aristocratic settings they often find themselves in. When I ask Mould whether he thinks we are still in a class-ridden society, he says casually: "Yeah, sure, we've still got the remnants of feudalism."

Bruce's Scottish father worked his way up from postboy to become an executive at Unilever. From the age of 14 to 18, she attended

'My mother made me say "How now brown cow" a lot'

a secondary state school – Haberdashers' Aske's Hatcham College in New Cross, south London – and was the first person in her family to go to university, reading modern languages at Oxford.

Mould, who attended the same school as Julian Lennon, was brought up in what he describes as "cosy suburbia", in Heswall in the Wirral, outside Liverpool. When I ask him if he spoke as he does now (he has a pleasant, somewhat plummy accent) as a child he says not, adding "I rather miss my Liverpool accent. Every now and then the odd vowel comes out – like 'wan' for one. My mother, who came from the south, got me to say 'How now brown cow' a lot." I ask him to break into Liverpudlian, which he accommodatingly does: "I went and saw some doooookhhhhhs on the pund..." ▷

‘Working with Philip is an ego-free zone in an egotistical business’

FIONA BRUCE

In 2013, Bruce and Mould told Father Jamie MacLeod that his painting was by Anthony Van Dyck

◁ His father would commute to Liverpool to the printing works he owned. His mother, in a wheelchair as a result of childhood polio, would get six-year-old Philip to go into antiques shops and bring out objects for her to examine. When he was 11 or 12, he made friends with one shop owner who taught him to read silver hallmarks, and by the age of 14 he was dealing in antique silver.

Was it considered odd for a teenager to be interested in such things? "They did think it was odd," he agrees, "but it was also marvellous because I could be like a performing monkey – reading hallmarks and impressing people about their chair legs. It was also a boon because I was a bit of a dunce at school, but anything to do with art and antiques I was able to hang on to… And there's not very much else I can do, really."

THE PRESENTERS DISCOVERED that, incredibly, they had both lived in Heswall as children – Bruce's family was there when she was between the ages of four and ten (she then lived in Milan until she was 14). Mould – who, at 59, is four years her senior – worked out that they must have both been walking their dogs on the beach at the Dee Estuary at the same time. Once, when they were filming in the area, Bruce knocked on the door of her childhood home and the owners were happy to let her in. "When they said, 'We knew you lived here and we even know which room was your bedroom [the one in the attic]', I thought, 'Well, this is a bit spooky.'"

And there was another discovery. "It turned out the door that used to have my David Cassidy poster on it – youth knows no shame – also had my name written on." So you're enshrined on the back of an attic door in the Wirral. "I know! And in red felt tip!"

What do the art dealer and the journalist think each other brings to the series, and what have they learned from one another? "I find Fiona's journalistic rigour very useful," Mould says, "and it works nicely hand in hand with my art historical ruminations. Fiona's very good at dealing with people and finding answers. I'm always amazed how good she is at this and how her approach is so non-confrontational and benign. She's very good at bringing people out."

One of the things that makes Fake or Fortune? work so well is the presenters' different approaches, a natural extension of their day jobs. Mould will walk around and look at a painting from various angles, trying to recollect what he has seen before "and amalgamate the aspiration of what it might be with the reality of what is in front of me."

There is a tendency towards flights of fancy in the art world, he adds: "Fiona's quite good at cutting a swathe through that. She also has an excellent way of articulating things in a way that doesn't feel as though it's coming from your maths teacher. In the series, we convey a surprising amount of quite arcane information. It's education by stealth."

Has he learned to become a bit more populist? "Yes, I suppose I have a bit." He sounds surprised. "Yes, because you're articulating something that I haven't actually pondered quite as deeply as you're forcing me to do.

"I think that Fiona has got me to open up. The art world has suffered greatly in the past from this wall of esoterica and what she has helped to do is to leaven the overly sophisticated approach in a way that can be understood and packaged."

'Philip has taught me how to look at paintings'
FIONA BRUCE

What impresses Bruce is her co-presenter's knowledge of art and his generosity in sharing it: "He is also a brilliant businessman and art dealer – he has that magical thing of being able to spot a painting that everyone else has missed."

MOULD INSISTS HER eye has become more critical over the years. "He's taught me how to look at paintings," Bruce says in response, "which might sound perhaps a rather trite thing to say, but actually it's quite easy not to really look at something. For your gaze just to graze.

"But to really look and understand why a shadow has been placed where it has… If it's a portrait, why has the figure been angled the way it has? Why is a hat or a stone or a chair in that place, what is that saying, what is the message? Philip has taught me such a lot, even though I am still obviously at the foothills of learning how to decode a portrait that is full of hidden messages. What he has done is to expand my horizons and he has educated my eye."

With Bruce now at the centre of current affairs as presenter of Question Time, I wonder how much the two talk about politics and the news.

"Oh, she is my news oracle," Mould says. "Fiona is so immersed in news, and I really enjoy her insight. I mean, how she manages to crack all the different Brexit permutations, the arguments… She rather sweetly gave me the time to explain them all."

So is he now an expert on the Irish backstop? "No, I'm afraid it's all gone in one ear and out the other. When she first expressed it to me, I had a moment of lucidity, but I'm not sure I can recall any of it now."

Was he a regular watcher of Question Time in the Dimbleby decades? "No," he admits. "But I watch it now and very much like it. I hadn't appreciated how much the programme is an extension of the presenter.

"I thought it was a public brawl with experts before. But actually, now it's like a sort of host at a dinner party – she's definitely changed the tone of the programme." So more conducive to a dinner party you want to attend? "I'd feel more comfortable going on it now than I would have before, yes."

Mould's influence on Bruce goes beyond the series. While she bought art before, she leans more towards portraiture now, and has sent Mould pictures of a painting at a local auction to get his opinion: "It's fantastic to have Philip on speed dial," she says.

MOULD'S TASTE HAS evolved, too, and his latest passion is the Bloomsbury Group: "I like the whiff of danger about the whole lot of them. They were prepared to take risks and a lot of their art is bursting with the type of colour that was considered to be dangerous and unfashionable and degenerate – I like and enjoy all that." Would he like to have been part of their circle, spending time at the famous Charleston farmhouse in Sussex? "No, I think I would have found it all too much. All the sexual complexities and love triangles wouldn't have suited me – but I would have liked to gossip about them from a distance."

Bruce and Mould socialise, and have met up while on holiday with their families. "We wouldn't have lasted doing 32 programmes together if we weren't friends," he says. "It's gruelling doing television sometimes and it's very important that the person you're working with has sufficient regard for you.

"Fiona has been a source of help and inspiration, and friendship is a natural part of that. Sometimes after the sixth or seventh take – MY sixth or seventh take – we burst out laughing."

As Bruce herself says: "Well, if you can't have a laugh, what's the point? That's pretty much my philosophy on life, too."

IN THE FRAME WITH SERIES EIGHT

EPISODE 1: A LOST MASTERPIECE?

Could this 18th-century landscape be a missing painting by Thomas Gainsborough, one of the biggest names in British art? In its past the painting had been described as a Gainsborough, but in more recent times it has been regarded as a copy. Close inspection reveals the frame is scattered with labels suggesting proof of positive provenance. But as the investigation tracks back and forth through time, an x-ray reveals a secret that shocks everyone.

EPISODE 2: MISTAKEN IDENTITY?

If this is a painting by the renowned giant of Regency portraiture Sir Thomas Lawrence, it could be worth upwards of £500,000. If, as the owners believe, it's the work of pioneering female artist Maria Cosway, its value would be as little as £8,000. The programme's investigation is sparked by Philip Mould who spots the painting hanging in the owner's home. He believes the 18th-century portrait could be a work by Lawrence. The family are unconvinced, but could Mould's hunch prove true?

EPISODE 3: A FRUITFUL FIND

The painting at the heart of this programme was bought from a junk shop for £1 more than 30 years ago. Could it prove to be one of the greatest mis-valuations in the history of the series? Possibly so, if the team can prove that instead of being a piece of tat it's actually a work by Giorgio de Chirico, one of the masters of modern European art. The search for clues takes Bruce and Mould from Hampshire to a nuclear laboratory in Florence.

EPISODE 4: A VENETIAN VIEW

Two Royal Academy labels on the back of this view of Venice pose the team a challenge – which of the two artists named actually painted it? One label names the artist as Michele Marieschi and the other as the highly-prized Francesco Guardi. The owner knows the team's verdict is crucial in establishing the painting's worth, but that truth proves to be as murky as the canals depicted.

Meet the real Ross and Demelza

Poldark creator Debbie Horsfield reveals two real-life figures whose stories have inspired the new series

Winston Graham wrote 12 Poldark novels. We adapted the first seven for series one to four, ending in 1799; there is then an 11-year gap before book eight, but Graham gives plenty of clues as to what happened in the interim, and we use these as the basis for series five.

Graham increasingly used real historical events and people as a backdrop and so, as my starting point, I explored key moments and figures from the era. I came across the London Corresponding Society, an organisation started by tradesmen striving for better working conditions, which became synonymous with revolutionary ideas.

One of the members was Colonel Edward Despard, and I was struck by the parallels between him and Ross Poldark. Both were military men, who served in the American Revolutionary War – and Despard's Jamaican wife Catherine ("Kitty") was, like Demelza, originally his servant.

Ned Despard was an Irishman who served with the British Army for 20 years. Through him we explore the anti-slavery movement, which was gathering steam at the turn of the 19th century. A series of heroic engagements saw him put in charge of the Bay of Honduras, where many British resettled – though some were rich, many were ex-slaves, deserters and convicts.

Despard gave them land on an equal basis, regardless of colour or status, but wealthy, long-term white settlers protested that such "rags and tatters" of society should be subservient. Declaring that the laws of England had no such distinction, Despard was recalled to London and imprisoned on dubious charges, leaving Kitty to campaign for his release. Their real-life story was extraordinary, and a key part of series five explores their (fictional) interactions with Ross and Demelza.

KERRI McLEAN ON CATHERINE "KITTY" DESPARD

Why did the role appeal to you?
Kitty worked for Ned in Honduras as his kitchen maid; when he fell ill she nursed him and they grew close. Eventually they got married and had a child (James) – they were totally in love. But interestingly she is never really mentioned as part of his story: Ned Despard, traitor to the Crown, slave liberator, prisoner etc. It's not really said he was married to a black woman – she's been written out of history. Her name was even removed from the Despard family tree. I feel honoured to play her. I have a responsibility to show who this phenomenal woman was.

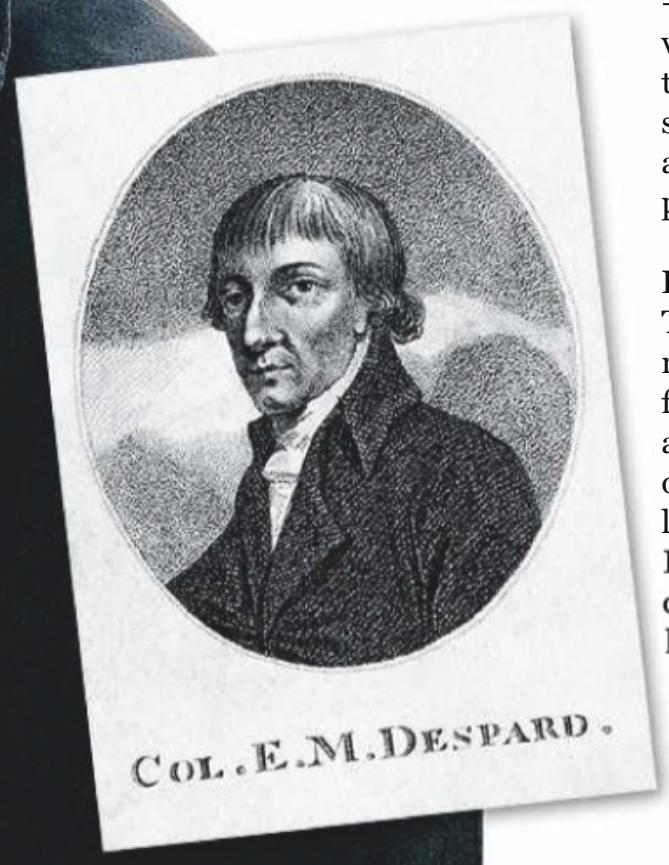
They were so ahead of their time...
Kitty and Ned feel really modern – a multicultural couple in London, fighting the system. Those issues still exist; I grew up in a mixed-race family and my grandparents didn't want my parents to marry.

So you drew on your personal experience?
I experienced some stuff, growing up in the 1980s. But I was lucky to be in Birmingham, a big, multicultural city. Compared to what my dad experienced, when he came to England from Jamaica... He had it tough. His generation paved the way for us. My experience doesn't compare to Kitty's.

Kitty faced some strong prejudice...
In Cornwall she's often stared at in the street. But it's worse from the upper classes. Most people who were black or of colour at that time would have been lower-class, whereas Kitty wasn't. She's the wife of a governor; she's educated.

Why do you think we had to wait so long to have a main character of colour?
It's a shame it's taken until series five because Poldark isn't just about the middle and upper classes, it's about the lower classes in a coastal town where they would have had black people. But I'm very grateful that Kitty's there now.

Have you done period drama before?
Not for screen. There just aren't many period dramas that have a character like Kitty. But it is changing, and certainly from when I first started my career, it's getting better. There are more roles being written and these unheard voices are finding a way through. And that's great.



‘Both Ross Poldark and Ned Despard married for love, outside of their class’
VINCENT REGAN

TRUE ROMANCE
Colonel Edward Despard (also above) and his wife Kitty, played by Vincent Regan and Kerri McLean

Has casting become more colour-blind?
I'm not saying there's anything wrong with having a black performer in a role that's written for a white person, but for me, it's about writing black roles, finding the real voices of a period, those exciting stories and those exciting characters. That's why Catherine is so brilliant – she feels like an unheard voice. I've said to Debbie that she has more to say – the Kitty spin-off!

VINCENT REGAN ON EDWARD "NED" DESPARD

What brings Ross and Ned together?
They know each other from their days fighting in America, they're very similar in wishing to see justice and a fairer society. Ned has been freeing slaves in Honduras, whereas Ross has been fighting for the miners in Cornwall; they both believe that people should be free and paid a fair wage for the work they do. Although Ross is more of a political animal than Ned.

Those were pretty radical opinions...
That's what's interesting about the series – Debbie uses Ross with his strong moral values to explore that period in history; the Industrial Revolution was about to start and it was a time of huge upheaval and change. And then there's Ned – a real person existing in a fictionalised world.

He joins the show with his wife, Kitty...
That's another way in which his life mirrors Ross's – Kitty was his slave, he freed her, he married her, and they had a son. They both married for love, outside of their class. The establishment didn't like it, though, and strove to destroy him. I'm sure even today certain people will question their relationship, but it happened. It's history. It's real life.

Poldark* still feels contemporary.
Very much so; Debbie has a political agenda. You can't be a dramatist without having something to say. And you can't be a right-wing dramatist because you're fighting the establishment; fighting for the dispossessed, whether they are slaves or immigrants. It's great because she's snuck her agenda onto primetime Sunday TV!

Are you political yourself?
I think everyone is at the moment. You have to be, because the political order is going to hell in a handcart. Being a parent [he has three children], my biggest concern is the environment. We need to think beyond the next 20 years or so, we need to think of the next 100. For all the problems of Brexit and Trump, that's what scares me. INTERVIEWS BY FRANCES TAYLOR

‘I cried every step of the way

THE RT INTERVIEW BY AMY RAPHAEL

Daniel Radcliffe, Naomie Harris, Kate Winslet… names that would be on any Hollywood casting director’s wish list. But there’s one British TV series that gets those very A-listers running to them. Now in its 16th series, Who Do You Think You Are? continues to attract the biggest stars. Last time around it was the likes of Olivia Colman – this year, the three above are among the headline signings.

Colette Flight, executive producer on the series, offers this explanation: “People see it as a privilege to have our brilliant team of researchers devote all their time to researching their family tree. It’s a real gift.”

The series opens with Radcliffe, who finds out about a great-great uncle, Ernie, who lost his life in the First World War. “We discovered a cache of letters that Ernie wrote home and some that his mum wrote to him,” says Flight. “It’s one of those wonderful moments where a family realises they’ve got a treasure trove of information.”

In the case of Winslet, whose episode is fourth in the series, she actually contacted the programme herself, in part to understand more about a Scandinavian family line that her mother Sally talked about just before she died two years ago from ovarian cancer.

“I had been saying for ages that I wanted to do Who Do You Think You Are?,” Winslet says at her seaside home in Sussex. “They had never approached me, so I had to ask. We didn’t know much about my dad’s side of the family at all and we only knew fragmented bits about my mum’s side. Of course, WDYTYA spend a year researching your family and I was a bit worried they were going to say, ‘Look, we can’t tell you where we’re taking you, but there’s a trip abroad.’ I had lots of adrenaline about the whole thing.”

Winslet was born in Reading in 1975, one of four children. When we met a few years ago, she described herself as “borderline working class” and said she didn’t go to college because she couldn’t afford to. Which is why she was worried about having posh ancestors. “I would have been upset and disgusted if I had come from wealth or royalty,” she laughs.

“There was never any money in our family, but I always felt very fortunate because I came from a lovely, wonderful, loving family. My roots are socialist, working class and, in a funny way, my parents frowned upon the wealthy. Mum and

‘When I was younger I looked Swedish and wore clogs!’

Dad went to Oxford for their honeymoon and we always had holidays out of the back of the van with a tent. We had wonderful times camping in Cornwall and France. We never went anywhere as a family that involved getting on an airplane, ever, ever, ever…” She pauses, just for a moment. “When Mum was dying, it struck me that we had never as a family – Mum, Dad, my sisters Anna and Beth and my brother Joss – got on a plane to a holiday destination.”

With Sally’s death still so fresh in her memory it must have been incredibly tough to do WDYTYA without her. “When Mum died, it was like the North Star just dropped out of the sky,” she says, quietly. “So yes, it was the hardest part of making WDYTYA. Mum would absolutely have come with me on the journey; she loved travelling when I was in a position to send her and Dad to nice places. She would have been part of WDYTYA. I know she would.”

Before Winslet’s mother died, she told her children that they might have Swedish ancestry. “But none of us could really remember what she’d said and it was all very vague anyway,” recalls Winslet. “When my siblings and I were younger and had white-blonde hair, people would often say to Mum and Dad, ‘God, you look like you’ve got a little Scandinavian family.’ We looked Swedish and we wore clogs!”

Did she feel she might not just be British when growing up, like she might have something else in her? “I always felt I had something else in me, but I think that was due to the fact that I was such a tenacious little kid!”

Winslet’s story takes her to Sweden, where she discovers that her great-great-great-great grandfather Anders Jonsson was a stable groom, married to Anna Christina Eriksdotter. Anders worked on an estate that used a token system instead of money, to ensure the workers spent all their money on the estate.

It sounds, I suggest, like a version of slavery. “I initially thought it was fun that Anders worked with horses, but when I was told about the tokens he had to use to buy bread and eggs, I was shocked. And it was slavery. Because of course he wasn’t given enough tokens to buy food for his family and they were starving. ▷

WINNING ROLE

◁ "Anders and Anna had five children. Little Gustav died at the age of three from malnutrition. Five months later, desperate to feed his remaining family, Anders was arrested for stealing a few barrels of potatoes from farmers and he and a friend were put in prison. During the trial, a priest came forward to attest to the fact that he was a good family man. Sadly, someone else said that two beehives had been stolen from his barn. When Anders's home was searched, they found pots of honey."

WINSLET'S VOICE BECOMES impassioned and emotional as she tells the story. "I was sobbing my heart out at this point. Anders was desperately trying to feed his starving children, who were, presumably, malnourished, and his wife couldn't even produce milk for their baby because she was starving. I come from a long line of committed breastfeeders, so the idea of a mother not being able to breastfeed her child destroyed me completely. And then I found out that Anders was sentenced to 35 lashes and had to stand in front of the local church to be ridiculed by everyone. He died in prison of typhoid before his appeal was heard."

The story sounds like a difficult one to process, I say, especially so soon after her mother's death. "I didn't process it," she admits. "I cried and cried. I cried every step of the way. At the same time, the idea that Anders and Anna would do anything for their family made sense; my mum was exactly the same. Her mum was like that too. I felt this really profound blood connection to these people, which I was overwhelmed by."

Anders died on 4 April 1832 and Winslet's sister Beth suggested they celebrate "Anders Day" every year on that date, so that they can share stories about their ancestors with their children – Winslet has an 18-year-old daughter, Mia, with her first husband, Jim Threapleton, a 15-year-old son, Joe, with her second husband, director Sam Mendes, and a five-year-old son, Bear, with her third and current husband, Edward Abel Smith (he was Ned Rocknroll when they married in 2012, but he recently reverted back to his original name, more of which later). "There are so many children in my family," says Winslet. "There are my three, one sister has five, the other sister has one. For all those children to have a sense of where they came from is incredibly powerful. I can barely even talk about it now without feeling like I'm going to slightly fall apart again."

FAMILY TIES

At least, by doing WDYTYA, Winslet was keeping her mother's memory alive, albeit in an unconventional way. "Exactly! And I'm so thrilled that I did it. It really took it out of me and I felt all over the place for a good week afterwards, but at least I now know who I am.

"I come from a long line of impoverished people on both sides of my family, which perhaps explains why I've tried to instil my parents' values into my kids. People never believe me, but my children aren't overprivileged. We just don't live like that. They are very balanced. Humble. My ancestors were impoverished but they would do anything for their kids and I'm exactly the same."

'Sentenced to 35 lashes, Anders died in prison'

When she explores the paternal side of her family, Winslet returns to Reading, making a brief stop to consider her childhood home before looking through family photos with her father, Roger. She finds out that her great-great grandfather, Thomas Bick, was married to Marion Colquhoun, who was one of 11 siblings ("that's a lot of mouths to feed").

Marion's father, William, was a soldier in the Grenadier Guards who enlisted in the Army as a drummer boy aged 11 ("is that even allowed?") and was promoted to drum major. She also discovers that drummers in the early 19th century were responsible for carrying out corporal punishment when soldiers were disciplined.

"I told my children that part of the story and the first thing my 15-year-old son said was, 'Oh my God, Mum, William probably had to administer punishment to his friends.' What an empathetic first observation."

There are more twists and turns in Winslet's maternal and paternal stories in WDYTYA that I won't give away here, but which elicit hugely touching reactions from the actress. At one point during our interview, she runs upstairs to look through the folder she put together with all the information acquired during her episode. She tells herself off for not being able to find what she's looking for ("Come on, Kate!") – details of her Swedish great-great grandfather Alfred Johanson

Lidman, who came to London in 1884 to become a tailor. As she is riffling through the folder, I ask if knowing her ancestor was an immigrant made her think about the current migration crisis.

"Yes, of course. It basically means I'm an immigrant. It really made me think about this world we live in. 'Refugees'. 'Immigrants'. We're going to have to stop using these words, as if those people are subhuman. What happened to people's basic human rights? It's all such a mess."

She's still desperately looking for the documents she's trying to find, so I say that she might have been called Kate Rogersdotter if Swedish naming conventions had applied to her family. She laughs and says she really likes Winslet; she is proud to be her father's daughter. So what about her husband changing his name back to Edward Abel Smith? "Ned originally changed his name to 'Rocknroll' because he didn't think a name should define you. I respect people who make the choice to change their names; they don't do it for a laugh."

'I'm an actor, I invent narratives. But this floored me'

Our time is meant to be up, but Winslet still has more to say. "I can't tell you how profoundly connected I feel to my ancestors. I'm an actor, so I invent all the time. I can force a connection and create a narrative. But this floored me…"

Winslet's great gift as an actress is, in a strange way, her relative ordinariness. It gives her a blank canvas to create larger-than-life characters, like Rose in Titanic or Clementine in Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind, or to play Hanna, an emotionally shut-down former Nazi guard in The Reader (the role for which she won her Best Actress Oscar in 2009).

I ask her if she kept a little bit of herself hidden away while filming WDYTYA and she laughs. "I'm not very good at hiding! I was completely myself. Part of the charm of the show is the fact that there's no hair or make-up on offer. I don't do my hair in my everyday life; I wash it, put it in a ponytail while it's still wet and then think, 'Oh, I'd better make myself look a bit nicer.' On WDYTYA, I was in jeans and a jumper, with a rucksack. I loved the smallness of it."

Will she be spending summers in Sweden with her family from now on? "It's funny, but I really do feel like a Viking. Like I could go out in a storm and survive. I feel I've survived many storms." I make a lame Titanic joke about Rose standing on the prow of a Viking boat. In clogs.

"Oh no! Please don't!" She composes herself. "Let's get back to WDYTYA. It completely destroyed me, but it also took my breath away. It was 100 per cent mind-blowing."

BACK IN TIME TO MEET MY ANCESTORS

The other stars lined up for the 16th series of WDYTYA

DANIEL RADCLIFFE
A secret hoard of his great-great uncle Ernie's First World War love letters cause heartache for the Harry Potter star – while a jewel theft has all the elements of a movie script.

PAUL MERTON
The comedian's maternal grandfather was a shadowy figure thought to have died at sea, but records show that he played a key part in the campaign for Irish independence in the 1920s.

NAOMIE HARRIS
James Bond's most recent Miss Moneypenny is shocked by an ancestor's involvement in the exploitation of so-called "liberated Africans" and uncovers a story of family poverty in Jamaica's capital, Kingston.

KATHERINE RYAN
Setting out in search of some much hoped-for English ancestry, the UK-based Canadian-Irish comedian finds herself encountering descendants as varied as cod traders, a poet and a preacher along the way.

▲ JACK & MICHAEL WHITEHALL
The father and son uncover a recent family tragedy and learn the story of a Welsh ancestor who fought to oppose the Chartist campaign for voting rights.

▲ SHARON OSBOURNE
Osbourne's story takes her back to the United States, where she discovers that her great-great grandparents struggled in poverty after their American Dream turned sour.

◀ MARK WRIGHT
Transported to 17th-century Spain, the former Towie star discovers an ancestor who survived the Spanish Inquisition, and a less fortunate relative who was burned at the stake.

A higher calling

Could you live without worldly goods? Michael Hodges enters the biblical world of the Bruderhof community

EXCLUSIVELY PHOTOGRAPHED FOR RADIO TIMES BY RICHARD ANSETT

IT'S THE BIGGEST broadcasting event of the year so far: nerve-racking, can't-take-your-eyes-off-the-screen stuff. England are playing the USA in the Women's World Cup semi-final tonight and, across the country, millions of people will be watching. But not me, or anyone else in the Bruderhof community – a 300-strong religious settlement at Darvell, deep in the wooded hills of the Sussex Weald, where life is lived according to biblical rules. That is, without live international football.

No one here has a television, laptop, mobile phone, iPad or similar device in their homes. Rather than the yelps of BBC commentator Jonathan Pearce, I'm listening as community member Bernard Hibbs, 38, reads the New Testament Parable of the Great Banquet to his five-year-old-son Jonathan at the kitchen table, watched by his daughter Esther, 14, older son Michael, 12, and wife of 15 years, Rachel. Their apartment is in a converted country house that was used as a TB sanitorium before the Bruderhof arrived in 1971, and the still-institutional feel is softened by children's drawings on the wall and the close atmosphere of a family that spends all of its free time together. A nightmarish thought for many in the outside world maybe, but a bedrock of the Bruderhof philosophy I'm about to encounter as Bernard and Rachel's guest. The visit offers me a rare chance to try a more thoughtful, less selfish way of living.

Rachel, 46, follows a dress code that, she says, "emphasises modesty." Her hair is covered by a headscarf, and she wears a long-sleeved top and a long skirt that reaches her flat sandals. I say it reminds me of The Handmaid's Tale, but no one in the Bruderhof watches television. They will, however, be on it – thanks to Inside the Bruderhof, a documentary that reveals, for the first time, how different life is at Darvell. ▷

◁ All adults here have taken a vow of lifelong poverty, pledging to give up their property so they can "live in complete freedom from possessions". No member of the Bruderhof has their own car or buys their clothes (there are bolts of cloth in the skirt-making room so the women can, at least, pick their own patterns). Everything is held communally for the benefit of all.

There is no sex before marriage and courting has different rules to the rest of 21st-century Britain. When Bernard first decided he had romantic feelings for Rachel he went to a pastor and was given permission to write to her at the Bruderhof community in upstate New York where she was temporarily staying and declare his interest. The two did not send each other passionate declarations of love but letters discussing passages from the Bible and their interpretation, an epistolary exchange that would help them decide if they were suitably matched. But, I ask, what about fancying each other? "That has to be there", says Rachel, but adds that "you get to that place via God". Perhaps the Bruderhof approach to dating would raise the tone of Love Island, but of course Rachel has never watched Love Island.

The couple, like all full members of the community, have pledged to "uphold sexual purity and, if married, to stay faithful in the bond of marriage between one man and one woman for life". This would appear to preclude gay marriage, even though the 2012 Bruderhof document Foundations of our Faith & Calling says "we are called to represent God's love toward every person, including those who experience same-sex attractions. We condemn no one." But Bernard confirms there are no gay couples at Darvell. "That's just the way we do things," he says. "You wouldn't join the army if you didn't want to wear khaki."

'Members pledge to uphold sexual purity and to stay faithful'

The Bruderhof movement was founded by the German Christian thinker Eberhard Arnold in the atmosphere of desperation and chaos immediately following the First World War. In 1920, with his wife Emmy, Arnold set up an experimental community based on the tenets of the Anabaptists, a Reformation-era Protestant movement that believed in adult baptism, rejected possessions and largely advocated pacifism.

The Bruderhof grew rapidly but were forced to flee Germany after Hitler came to power, and began leaving for the UK in 1936. German-speaking pacifists, they were unwelcome to a British government that was at now at war with Nazi Germany, so in 1941 they left for South America, building a new community in the jungles of Paraguay amid conditions of great hardship.

Today there are Bruderhof communities in Australia, England, Germany, South America (Paraguay) and North America (mostly New York and Pennsylvania). Although their world view is deeply shaped by the Reformation they are not sectarian and have co-operated with Roman Catholics and Coptic Christians alike. Apart from the necessity of adult baptism – you must have reached "the age of accountability" – and giving all your possessions away, there is little in the Bruderhof's core positions that the average member of the Church of England would struggle with. Members must understand Christ's teachings and "agree with Apostles' and Nicene Creeds." In essence, if something was in the Sermon on the Mount, the Bruderhof believe it.

Some of the most important communities are in the US, which is why so many of the people I meet speak English with a German-American accent. The children keep an American school year and, deep into summer holidays now, have spent the day in the community's woodland playing and frying sausages. Bruderhof folk eat a lot of bangers and wieners, an appreciation that goes back to the movement's beginning in Germany so, as a vegetarian, I'm conflicted when Michael ▷

"They'll be ready for slaughter at three and a half months", Bernard confirms cheerfully, as we lean on the fence.

The community is virtually self-sufficient in food, growing vegetables and keeping livestock. When everyone gathers for lunch in the light-drenched dining room festooned with biblical quotations much of the produce is from within the grounds, but the conversation travels the world. As we eat, a member reads aloud a report from an American Bruderhof volunteer called Brita who is on the Mexico-USA border, helping migrants who have been detained by the US Border Patrol, many of them children kept in terrible conditions. It makes for a solemn soundtrack to my chickpea stew, but no one dwells long over their food in the Bruderhof. Soon, the tables are cleared and everyone is back at work.

Most people are employed in the factory that's part of the Bruderhof business, Community Playthings, that makes wooden-block toys and equipment for nurseries and schools. Although it's a successful enterprise with a turnover of £17-18 million a year, nobody is paid. All profits are invested in the business and the fabric of the community, or quietly given to good causes and international aid. It's a business model that might, I suggest, fail to impress the Dragons' Den millionaires, though Bernard, of course, can neither confirm nor deny this claim.

In the factory I find Francis Marsden assembling toys. Now 68, Marsden was brought up in the Paraguay community in the 1950s and early 1960s during the some of the hardest years in the jungle when disease and accident claimed several lives, including that of his sister Rachel, who died in a fire when she was nine. Francis is making the wooden toys by hand, but the Bruderhof do not reject all the trappings of modernity. They might not use mobiles – unless it's for work – or social media but they drive cars and invest in new technology for parts of the production processes. Above all, and this is the most noticeable difference to the outside world, they value people even when they are old or disabled. Upstairs, 87-year-old Ruth Ben-Eliezer attaches buckles on to straps. She only works for an hour each day, and the impact of her efforts on the grand scheme is negligible but the effect on her health and morale is obvious.

'What do you have in your life that you think I might want?'

There are over 2,900 people in Bruderhof communities worldwide, so many people within them are bound to disagree at times. Problems are sorted by "direct speaking". The Bruderhof must tell other members if they are not living or acting in a Christian way. This is key, Rachel tells me, to the success of the community; members must be "willing to take it in a spirit of love and also to give it". They also take a vow of obedience, pledging "to yield ourselves up in obedience to Christ and our brothers and sisters, promising to serve the church community wherever and however we are asked."

No one is obliged to stay in the Bruderhof, and from the age of 18 members are encouraged to go out into the wider world so they can decide if this life is for them before they commit themselves. Some decide they don't want to be at the Bruderhof, but the majority stay. Today you can see why. The community decides to finish work early and have a barbecue and game of kickball (rounders with a football). Men walk round with trays of cool, hoppy ale made in the community's micro-brewery and the women sing three-part harmony folk songs of intense beauty.

I ask Bernard what he is missing in the outside world and he replies with another question. "What do you have in your life that you can offer me that you think I might want?" He has a point. I came to Darvell bearing, along with my car and electrical devices, stress, status anxiety, mortgage fear and the general feeling of existential doubt that most men my age carry with them. A few hours later I'm playing kickball with what seems like 50 people, including one girl in a wheelchair, several toddlers and a pensioner. I ask the big bearded man who is fielding next to me what the score is. "We don't keep the score," he says. "But everybody has had a turn."

Perhaps, in the future, more of us will visit places like the Bruderhof, living communally and for the benefit of all for a while, before returning morally and spiritually refreshed. Just not when the football is on.

Mountain gorillas are an endangered species, but the life of Mukiza shows that there's hope for the future

Success stories in animal conservation are rare, and even when recorded numbers of a certain species suggest stability, experts in the field still invariably speak a language infused with caution.

So it is with the mountain gorilla, and with primatologist Martha Robbins of the Max Planck Institute for Evolutionary Anthropology in Leipzig who has been studying them in the wonderfully named Bwindi Impenetrable National Park for the past 21 years.

Located in south-west Uganda, the park is home to approximately 400 mountain gorillas – nearly half of the world's total. The rest live in the nearby Virunga mountains that straddle the boundaries of three countries, Democratic Republic of Congo, Rwanda and Uganda.

At the end of last year the mountain gorilla was taken off the Critically Endangered list and is now classified as Endangered. "It means mountain gorilla conservation is working and perhaps we can even say it's a success story, though we can't be complacent," says Robbins. "At the moment we can be cautiously optimistic that their populations are stable."

One gorilla who is thriving, and for whom Robbins has a soft spot, is 19-year-old Mukiza, the silverback leader of a large family group whose offspring feature in new BBC documentary series Animal Babies: First Year on Earth.

"I was already working in Uganda when Mukiza was born, so I have 'known' him for his entire life – which is a pretty cool thing for a scientist", says Robbins. "He is a really good father. He doesn't actively play with his offspring, but he will groom them and is extremely tolerant of them playing around and on him."

But as the documentary makes clear, surviving infanthood can be difficult and in the case of mountain gorillas a third will die before the age of four. "There isn't one main cause", says Robbins. "In some cases the mothers aren't producing milk, occasionally there might be infanticide, and they can have accidents."

Mukiza beat the odds principally because of good parenting, says Robbins.

"He had a very caring, but not overbearing, mother, and his father was also very protective. He was fortunate in having a few other kids around in the group which meant he had a really good social environment to grow up in."

And his future looks very bright.

"He's only 19 so we can be hopeful that he could easily be dominant for another ten years."

And for her, watching him grow from infant to adulthood: what's that been like? "Every time I see Mukiza I look at him and think 'Wow, you're this huge silverback now and you used to be just a kid'." TERRY PAYNE

Telling stories

Three of our leading actors worked with director Dominic Savage to reveal the truth of women's lives today

IN A NEAT starter home on the edge of Watford, a couple are having a row. There are TV cameras in the room, but this is not a "telly row" scripted to underscore character or advance the plot. There are moments of untelegenic awkwardness, the embarrassment of silence held longer than is dramatically feasible. In short, it doesn't feel like being on a film shoot at all; it feels like eavesdropping.

We are on the set of I Am Nicola, the first of three extraordinary dramas commissioned by Channel 4 from Bafta-winning director Dominic Savage. Starring Vicky McClure, Samantha Morton and Gemma Chan, the 60-minute films are shot in the style of a fly-on-the-wall documentary. The dialogue is wholly improvised, the settings and scenarios never break the bounds of everyday existence, and the result is a suite of tour-de-force performances with the texture and authenticity of lived experience.

Savage developed the scenarios out of deep and extended discussion with his lead actors. Each film shows a woman in crisis, at a point in their life when there is no hiding from big decisions. "There was a degree of autobiography, a story that was very much in tune with the actor as a person, a territory that was important to them," he explains. "The scenes are very clear in terms of what I'm trying to achieve, but I don't put any dialogue in, and I leave things open for change and possibility."

It's a high-wire act for McClure, Morton and Chan, who submit themselves to a degree of stripped-back truthfulness rarely seen in TV drama. "It feels like a wonderful opportunity when someone says 'yes' to a project like this," says Savage. "It feels like an aberration in the system." E JANE DICKSON

'IT'S THE OPPOSITE OF LINE OF DUTY'

In I Am Nicola, VICKY McCLURE plays a hairdresser trapped in a coercive relationship

"I wanted to make a film about control – the way people control each each other, the way we control our emotions and the effort it takes, sometimes, to take control of our own lives. We all know people who have had tough relationships. None of what happens to Nicola applies to my current relationship, and Nicola is not me, but there are elements in Nicola's story that I recognise from experiences I had when I was younger. I don't have any "Oh you bastards" thoughts about guys I dated in my younger years, because we were all young and stupid and naive. But it hurt like hell.

I really enjoyed Dominic's way of working. You have to be open to go with the flow; it's the opposite of Line of Duty, where every detail in the script is there for a reason. Working with Shane Meadows on This Is England, there was that element of improvisation – all the actors wanted to add their je ne sais quoi – but the plot was sacrosanct. So I found it really liberating to come into work and think, "Well, where are we going to take this today?"

It was important to me that whoever played the male role was someone I already had a connection with, and I've been acting with Perry [Fitzpatrick] since we were 11: we both went to drama classes at the Television Workshop in Nottingham, and I knew he was a great improviser. I'd be lying if I said there weren't times during the shoot when I thought, "Oh my God, that really scared me," but we'd always talk and get it out of our systems afterward.

I'm hoping people don't hate Perry's character, Adam. Yes, he's controlling and manipulative, and he knows what he's doing to Nicola, but he's scared, he's full of fear. I never wanted to take the story to the point where Adam is physically abusive. I hope people don't watch it thinking, "Ooh, is he going to kill her?" The question is more, "Are they going to be all right?"

LAST RESORT
In I Am Kirsty, Samantha Morton confronts "survival sex"

In a way, I Am Nicola is a kind of anti-thriller. And I love that. I want to see more television being made for ordinary people who are just getting through every day. Because most people don't spend their lives surrounded by politicians or policemen. The characters in our drama are working people doing normal things because that's what I find relatable. Now, you could fill a whole series with day-to-day life and it might not be very fascinating, but once you have the dynamic of characters and relationships, to me that's interesting. Maybe there will be couples sitting at home rooting for Nicola and Adam because they've been through something similar and come out the other side. I'd like that.

'SHE'S DESPERATE TO PUT FOOD ON THE TABLE'

In I Am Kirsty, SAMANTHA MORTON plays a mother pushed into prostitution

Often as an actress you are at the mercy of what's written in the script. In this case it was a brilliant writer and director asking, "What do you want to say? What parts aren't being written for you?" I really appreciated that.

It didn't take us long to settle on the subject of survival sex. Having grown up in care, being in and out of various foster homes, and living at home, there were a couple of instances where, in my childhood, I lived in an environment where the woman, on two occasions, was forced to go on the game to provide money for the family. On one occasion there was a man around who pimped the woman; on the other occasion it was just survival. That was what I saw as a kid.

Kirsty also falls victim to a loan shark on her estate. That's a very common thing, and it happened to a friend of mine. There's always someone on big estates who's willing to "lend out"; they appear like your friend and tell you "Don't worry, you don't have to pay it back for a while", but there's no paperwork, which means they can charge what they like. I wanted to show that sense of financial precariousness. Kirsty doesn't decide to become a sex worker because it's something she's chosen to do as a career. She does it because she's desperate to put food on the table for her children, and this is happening to women across the country today; one minute they're working in a low-paid job, the next they're out of work, and there is no safety net.

The young actors playing my children in the film are amazing. They hadn't acted on TV before and I felt that it was my responsibility, as the person playing their mum, to make them feel safe and comfortable on set. We spent a lot of time getting to know each other because I knew there were points in the film where I would have to raise my voice and I didn't want the kids just to be around that; we needed to have good times as well to reproduce the full colours of being a family.

I've been a mum since I was young, and I'm not saying you can only play a mother if you've had kids, but it helps if you've experienced childbirth, it helps if you've experienced being up all night with the Calpol. And you know, as a mum, that there is nothing you won't do if your kids need it.

I Am Kirsty deals with exploitation, but it's not exploitative. It's not salacious, because it comes from a true place. I think people should feel safe knowing that I'm at the helm with Dominic; they should know that I have a huge amount of respect for myself, for my daughter, for women, and for the subject matter. I believe that if we shy away from the subject matter because we believe it's exploitative or degrading or in poor taste, then we don't change anything. And that's not a chance we should miss. ▷

HAVING IT ALL?
For Hannah (Gemma Chan) starting a family is fraught with difficulties

‘I QUESTION IDEAS OF WHAT WE ARE EXPECTED TO DO, AND WHEN’

In I Am Hannah, GEMMA CHAN plays a woman torn between career and children

A couple of generations ago, or even a generation ago, motherhood wasn’t really a question for many women. You would get married, you would have kids; that’s what you did. Now, it’s not that we have too much choice, but it can be paralysing to think that with all the options now available to us, we should be able to be make the right decision at the right time, that we can “have it all” and that it’s all under our control.

As a woman in my mid-30s, I talk to my friends about this all the time. Some are still deciding what they want, some knew they always wanted families, but it hasn’t worked out. I’ve been having these conversations with family members and my female friends for quite a long time now.

We’ve shared experiences and things that have happened to people we know, and I Am Hannah is an amalgamation of those discussions and experiences. It’s not an autobiographical piece; my circumstances aren’t Hannah’s and I don’t share all her views or opinions, but the one thing I definitely have in common with her is that I question everything.

I question ideas of what we are expected to do, and when. I question those pressures we seem, as women, to experience in a particular way. It’s not anyone’s fault. It’s not our fault, and it’s not men’s fault that they don’t have exactly the same time pressures on their fertility; it’s just the way it is, and I wanted to say something honest about that.

The doctor Hannah sees is a real fertility doctor; that was very educational for me and we had lots of discussions that didn’t make it into the film. He pointed out how difficult it can be to conceive, even when you’ve decided the time is right, and that is something we don’t always talk about. We have tried to mitigate biology with things like egg-freezing and embryo-freezing, but these are not failsafe; our biology has not evolved at the same speed as societal attitudes. As much control as we would like to have, or think that we have, our bodies might have other ideas. That’s a scary thing.

Dominic’s way of working is very liberating, but it’s also terrifying, because you don’t have the safety net of the script. You know roughly that a scene is going to get from A to B, you know if the characters are going to be in conflict, or that they’re going to come together, but there were a few times when even that rough outline went out the window and the scene ended in a way that was completely unexpected. You have these moments of raw emotion and raw reaction, and that’s exciting, but it’s also very exposing.

To be honest, when Dominic showed me the final cut, I found it excruciating to watch. I’ve never found it that easy to watch my own stuff, but this was particularly nerve-racking; in this kind of piece the actor is so unaware, so totally in the moment, that when you see it on screen it feels quite intrusive, almost like voyeurism.

I hope no one will judge Hannah or the other characters for their decisions. I’d like viewers to come away with a bit more empathy for others’ situations, but the film is also about being kinder to ourselves. Starting a family is a fundamentally personal decision. Is this even something we should be asking each other about, or is it something we, like Hannah, should be figuring out for ourselves? AS TOLD TO E JANE DICKSON

SIMON BARNES

Follow the leader

More and more of us get on our bikes – but is golf doomed?

At the Tour de France the cyclists will climb mountains and cruise past fields of sunflowers in the time-honoured manner as the gruelling three-week event fizzes at last towards its conclusion; while by the breakers at Portrush in Antrim, the golfers will seek mastery over four long days at the Open.

As these two great events reach their climax, it's easy to assume that the two sports have a certain amount in common. For the participants, both are fraught, tense and adrenaline-packed; while for the viewers they are soothing and hypnotic. And both, of course, require dodgy outfits.

The attraction is perhaps to do with flight. Golfers will tell you that a long and disastrous day was worth living through because of that one perfect shot, when the ball simply soared from the tee. And for every cyclist the bike is a flying machine: each strike of the leg carrying the rider so much further than any mere runner could hope for.

But there's also a crucial difference between these sports. More and more people are looking to emulate last year's Tour winner Geraint Thomas and head off for a long ride on their bikes at the weekend, while fewer and fewer people are taking their cue from Tiger Woods and going out to play golf. Perhaps they're coming to agree with Winston Churchill, who said: "Golf is a game whose aim is to hit a very small ball into an even smaller hole, with weapons singularly ill-designed for the purpose."

Stats from Sport England show that over a period of eight years to 2016, once-a-month golfers fell away by 27 per cent to 1.1 million, while in 2014, 2 million people cycled at least once a week. There are many contributing factors for this change: perhaps it matters that the Tour is admirably covered by ITV4 live on free-to-air TV, while the Open has retreated from the BBC to the subscription channels.

'Stats show 1.1 million play golf, while 2 million cycle every week'

There are other reasons, of course, notably golf's traditional hostility to women and young people – the sport has always been a way of getting out of the house rather than involving the family. A round of golf takes a long time, is very slow, public courses are thin on the ground and, for families, the prolonged and regular absence it demands of a parent is just not practical.

Meanwhile, anyone can get on a bike. Where I live in Norfolk, on Sunday mornings the narrow road to the ferry is an autobahn for bikes: solitary, in pairs, in gangs, in battalions. Mostly the cyclists are cheery and sensible, but sometimes aggressive and even dangerous; sometimes creakingly ancient, sometimes ostentatiously young, but mostly pedalling as fast as they can away from hot-pursuing middle age.

The changing fortunes of the two sports represent a change in society: spouses and partners now have a great deal more say in what their other halves do at the weekend. But in both sports, we look to the elite performers to fire our imaginations, and sometimes to inspire us to take part with their dizzying levels of commitment and skill. But perhaps the most interesting thing is the way these sports have responded to two of the greatest hypocrites in sporting history: Lance Armstrong, drugs cheat, and Tiger Woods, philanderer: both of whom made their reputations as icons of traditional values.

Cycling has mostly moved beyond Armstrong, with the great British riders Bradley Wiggins, Chris Froome and, of course, Thomas. But golf is still taken up with the "redemption" of Woods, making an unlikely comeback after having endured multiple back surgeries and winning the Masters this year 11 years after he last won a major tournament. Both the Open and the Tour de France will be compelling this year, but perhaps one sport looks more to the future, while the other looks increasingly at its past.

As Lee Mack makes his big-screen acting debut, RT asks which movies make the comedian laugh out loud

A COFFEE, A CHEESE panini and a confession from comedian Lee Mack: "I never had any ambition to act in films," he says. "But now I've been in one, I feel a bit different." What changed his mind is Horrible Histories: the Movie – Rotten Romans (in cinemas from Friday 26 July), which transfers CBBC's popular educational franchise to the big screen with its irreverence intact.

The cast includes Rupert Graves, Kim Cattrall, Derek Jacobi (as Claudius, of course) and Nick Frost, alongside Mack as a wistful centurion who yearns to be back in Italy. A hugely successful stand-up he may be, as well as the writer and star of the long-running BBC1 sitcom Not Going Out, but on a film set, Mack, who turns 51 next month, is a newcomer.

That's not to say he doesn't know his movie history. In fact, the reason for our meeting in a café near his home in leafy southwest London is to discuss his all-time favourite film comedies. And given that he would nominate Eric Morecambe and Stan Laurel as the Funniest Comedians Who Ever Lived, it's no surprise to find that a Laurel and Hardy film has made the cut. Mack singles out the 1930 short Laughing Gravy, in which the duo attempts to conceal their pet dog from the landlord downstairs.

'A whole generation don't know who Laurel & Hardy are'

"Those 20-minute shorts are how I got into Laurel and Hardy," he recalls. "Saturday mornings at the Odeon when I was a kid, they'd have a 15-minute Flash Gordon cliffhanger serial and then a black-and-white comedy. I always loved them."

Why Laurel in particular? "He was so ahead of the game. Those slow, nuanced looks down the lens. That was revolutionary at a time when everyone else was falling off buildings and getting run over by trams. They've got physical stuff, too, but Stan is just purely, innocently funny." He has always been fascinated by Laurel's life, partly because they were born not a million miles apart (83 to be precise – Laurel in Ulverston and Mack in Southport). "What's sad is there's a whole generation now who don't know who Laurel and Hardy are."

With that in mind, he recounts the story of his friend, ex-Cannon and Ball wag Bobby Ball (who plays Mack's dad, Frank, in Not Going Out). Ball was once chatting to an oblivious young hotel receptionist when the manager said to her: "Don't you know who this is? He was half of one of the most popular double acts this country has ever produced!"

"Oh God," the young woman said. "Were you in Laurel and Hardy?" Mack chuckles at the memory. "I've never let him forget it."

Though he's shared Laurel and Hardy with his three children, when it comes to satisfying the entire family, Stan and Ollie can't compete with Elf, starring Will Ferrell. "If the idea of a 6ft 3in man dressed as an elf doesn't strike you as intrinsically funny, you shouldn't be watching comedy. It's a joke that would wear thin very quickly, though, if he didn't play it so straight."

Mack admits the concept wasn't immediately appealing, and the same goes for another film on his list. "I went on holiday with [fellow comedian] Sean Lock and he brought along Bridesmaids. I looked at the cover and thought: 'He's having a breakdown.' It looked like something a 14-year-old girl might watch. But I absolutely loved it. I adore physically funny people like Melissa McCarthy. Some comics you could watch for ever and she's one of them. She's got funny bones."

That brings us to one of the more unexpected titles chosen by Mack. "Funny Bones is not continuously laugh-out-loud hilarious," he says of this distinctive gem, acclaimed on its release in 1995 but rarely mentioned these days. "In fact, it's extremely dark and unsettling in places. But it's absolutely brilliant, and it's about comedy so I felt it was appropriate."

Shot in a faded Blackpool where the history of vaudeville casts a long shadow, the film stars Oliver Platt and Lee Evans as the sons of a legendary comic played by real-life slapstick icon Jerry Lewis. In one of Mack's favourite scenes, Lewis explains to Platt the two different types of comedian: one is funny to the marrow (hence the title), the other simply says funny things. "It's time you knew – and this kills me the most – but you are neither", Lewis concludes.

Mack winces at that. "It's so brutal." Does he agree with those definitions? "I do, but there are fewer people these days who know how to use their bodies. Neck-down comedy was no longer valid after the 1980s alternative comedy revolution. Everything became about the cerebral. And with that came positive things – it helped get rid of some of the sexism and homophobia – but it also meant a lot of physical comedy was lost." The body got thrown out with the bathwater.

Lee Evans is a notable exception. "Lee is phenomenally physical. The first time I saw him, I just couldn't believe anyone could be that funny. It always amazed me that he didn't become a really huge Hollywood star. He was fantastic in Mousehunt and There's Something about Mary. Maybe he just didn't want to. But he's the embodiment of pure funniness.

"People always say about comedy: 'Oh, it's funny and…' You know, funny and dark, or funny and political, or funny and makes you think. And those things are all terrific. But Lee is funny – full stop."

Jerry Lewis also turns up in Martin Scorsese's equally dark 1982 film The King of Comedy, in which he plays an established comic who is ▷

Protect your home from future care home fees

Does this sound familiar to you?

"We've made our Wills, leaving everything to each other first and then to the children."

These are known as Mirror Wills. Sounds reassuring enough, doesn't it?
But your children could end up with very little - or even nothing at all.

If your surviving spouse has to go into care, they will have to use their assets to pay for their care until they get down to the lower limit. Therefore, it's not a good idea to leave your half share of the home to your surviving partner but instead leave them the USE of your share. This can be achieved by making new Grandparent Wills.

> These legitimate steps must be taken while you are both alive and in reasonably good mental health. It is therefore important for couples to act NOW!

Most of our clients come to us having already made standard Mirror Wills, or they've been meaning to make a Will but simply haven't got around to it.

With Grandparent Wills, yourself and your spouse/partner each leave your half share of the home to the children in Trust, but state that they are not to receive it during the lifetime of the surviving spouse/partner.

This half would then NOT be included in any future means test calculations for care fees. The surviving spouse is free to sell their share of the home, raise cash or move house. Your children are powerless to intervene but simply have to wait for their inheritance, as they would have done previously.

ROMAN HOLIDAY
Lee Mack in the new Horrible Histories film

◁ idolised, pestered and finally kidnapped by the wheedling wannabe Rupert Pupkin (Robert De Niro). "It's not so much a comedy film as a film about comedy," says Mack. "The King of Comedy was ahead of the curve in understanding the power of reality TV and celebrity and how people could use it to their own advantage."

Mack thinks it was also prescient in showing how comedy would become increasingly powerful. "Over the last ten years or so, you can see comedians whose celebrity status outweighs their comedy, and it never used to be like that. Comics were always the lowest rung on the ladder, front of cloth at the Royal Variety Performance. What that means is you're only there so Take That can set up behind the curtains. I've done it a few times and I like it because it means you're the underdog, so it feels easier to mock everything in a good-humoured way."

'I was determined to crack the comedy circuit if it killed me'

Although Rupert Pupkin was undoubtedly a stalker, he does have a single-minded focus on making it as a comic, which Mack concedes is part of what it takes. "You've got to have an ounce of that," he says. "Only an ounce, though – you don't want to go off and kidnap someone."

One scene in particular, when Pupkin is being fobbed off in his attempts to see his idol, strikes a chord. "I've had phone calls similar to what happens to him in reception. I'd do an open mic spot and then I'd call the guy the next day and be told to ring back. Then when I did, he wasn't there. They'd tell me to phone again in an hour and I'd be watching the clock. I was brutally determined to crack the circuit if it killed me. And that was in the 1990s! Nowadays you really would have to kidnap someone because there's so much competition.

"I used to tell people I was a comic and they'd be fascinated. Now all you get is: 'Oh yeah, my cousin Steve's a comic.'"

Before he goes, Mack wants to put in a word for two other films, one unjustly forgotten and the other widely cherished. The former is The Castle, a sweet-natured 1997 movie about a working-class Australian family who refuse to sell their house to make way for the expansion of the airport next door. "It's very warm and it has this close attention to detail that reminds me of The Royle Family. But it seems to have gone under the radar."

No one could say that about his final choice, Withnail & I, in which a pair of boozy actors (Richard E Grant and Paul McGann) flee to the Lake District from their squalid London flat (also known as "going on holiday by mistake"). Mack admits it's a cliché to quote lines from the script, but insists they still make him laugh whenever he hears them. "Michael Elphick as the poacher telling Richard E Grant: 'I've been watching you prancing around like a tit.' That always does it for me."

Yet all this talk of comedy shouldn't lead anyone to think that Mack spends his evenings laughing it up at home. After a day working on his sitcom, he's rarely in the mood for watching comedy when he puts his feet up. "It's a bit of a busman's holiday, to be honest. If someone's not getting killed in Scandinavia, me and the wife aren't interested."

Philomena ★★★★

Road to discovery

The words "fall pregnant" have a seemingly innocuous social subtext. In an essay in The Telegraph, Simon Heffer – who calls the phrase "mendacious, manipulative and redolent of what is most wrong with our culture" – asserts that the outmoded, quasi-religious term suggests loss of control on the woman's part. I was certainly surprised to find an apparently official blurb for the warmly honest and thoroughly modern true-life drama Philomena lead with "Falling pregnant as a teenager in Ireland in 1952..."

Annie Philomena Lee's story is sadly not unusual, but its elevation from "dirty secret" to a national talking point occurred when journalist Martin Sixsmith turned it into a book in 2009. By 2013, that book had become a four-time Oscar-nominated, $100 million-grossing comedy drama via a Bafta-winning screenplay by deft weaver of stories Jeff Pope and Steve Coogan, whose own Irish roots it taps.

OSCAR MATERIAL
Judi Dench and Steve Coogan were nominated

The pregnant Philomena was banished to a Tipperary home for unmarried mothers where her baby was the subject of a routine forced adoption. In Stephen Frears's irresistibly moving account of the initially unpromising quest to track down her long-lost son in the United States, the screen Philomena – beautifully played by Judi Dench – goes on a freewheeling "Driving Miss Lee" road trip with Coogan's rather counterintuitively buttoned-up Sixsmith that never actually took place. But as a breezy cinematic diversion, that certainly doesn't undermine the drive of the narrative.

Seen in interview, the real Philomena, now 86, is no shrinking violet. Hence, witty repartee about sex ("I didn't even know I had a clitoris, Martin") and Ryanair ("You have to pay for everything") sits remarkably comfortably within the darker undercurrents of the story. Hardened news hack Sixsmith is reluctant at the beginning of the pair's ill-matched journey to write a "human interest" story. Well, Philomena has humanity to spare.

Gtech

We believe the new Gtech HyLite is the smallest, most compact, high performance vacuum cleaner in the world

'If you find modern vacuum cleaners bulky, heavy and over complicated then the new Gtech HyLite is for you. It's brimming with cleaning power and, at just 1.5kg, extremely lightweight.*

It's also versatile, simple to maintain and durable. I can promise you will never have experienced this much cleaning power in such an easy to use package.'

Nick Grey, inventor and owner of Gtech

- Lightweight at 1.5kg*
- 20 minute runtime
- Recharges in just 2 hours
- Cordless

Enhanced performance
The secret is in the design. Most vacuums suck the dirt through long hoses and tubes, which can block and clog. The HyLite collects the dirt just 1cm from the floor. This shorter airpath enhances cleaning performance and helps compress the dirt.

Luxuriously light
When you first experience the HyLite, it's hard to believe this incredibly lightweight product can deliver such high cleaning performance. Lifting and carrying the HyLite is virtually effortless. The handle extends at the touch of a button and instantly retracts to store away in a drawer. Cleaning your home has never been easier.

Why chose a bagged vacuum?
Bagged vacuums are highly compact and efficient because they don't have to house or power cyclones. There are no dirty filters to clean or replace – the bag is the filter, so each time you fit a new bag, you're fitting a brand new filter. The HyLite compresses up to 1L of dirt into its 0.3L bag†, so you use fewer bags. Changing the bag could hardly be simpler: lift the lid, take out the rip resistant bag and simply slide a new one into place – easy. With this offer, you'll get a year's supply of bags FREE^Δ and, after that, cheap replacement bags can be delivered to your home next working day.

FILM OF THE DAY

P T2 Trainspotting ★★★
9.30-11.50pm C4 18

DRAMA Marketed in the Proustian black, white and orange of the original, Danny Boyle's sequel to his own generational, star-making first Trainspotting proved a solid, self-indulgent hit in 2017, and made no apologies for its reliance on nostalgia. Original screenwriter John Hodge and director Boyle smartly repurpose Irvine Welsh's reunion novel Porno, and the film is set 20 years later, reconnecting with the entire living principal cast: Ewan McGregor's Renton, clean of drugs but rapidly conned into an EU-grant scam by a vengeful Jonny Lee Miller and his Bulgarian girlfriend, while Robert Carlyle's psycho Begbie slips prison and builds bridges with his son. Elsewhere, Ewen Bremner's Spud (also a dad) battles heroin addiction, and Kelly Macdonald's Diane has become a solicitor. Fast-paced violence and meditations on society blend with mordant, postmodern humour, notably Renton's timely update of the original "choose life" monologue: "Choose an iPhone made in China by a woman who jumped out of a window." Fast, furious and funny.

DAYTIME

Mr Peabody & Sherman ★★★★
11.20am-12.45pm BBC2 U

ADVENTURE A genius talking dog and his adopted human son travel back in time to meet history's greats, from King Tut to Gandhi, in this irreverent history lesson from DreamWorks Animation. But when Sherman breaks the rules in a bid to impress a girl, the space-time continuum gets all messed-up. Part time-trip extravaganza, part father/son bonding story, director Rob Minkoff's film is fast-paced, fun and terrific family entertainment. DA (US 2013, HD)

Zootropolis ★★★★★
5.00-6.40pm BBC1 PG

COMEDY Delayed from three weeks ago owing to extended coverage of the Women's World Cup, this animated tale is set in a world of talking animals that have risen above their base instincts to coexist in harmony. Judy Hopps (voiced by Ginnifer Goodwin) is the city's first bunny police officer, and the film's endearing central character, who is forced to team up with wily fox Nick Wilde (Jason Bateman) after a spate of missing animal cases. The animation is packed with deft sight gags, but the real vitality is in the smart and funny writing, which also acts as an astute commentary on cultural sensitivity and political correctness. WI (US 2016, HD)

EVENING

Groundhog Day ★★★★★
6.50-9.00pm
Paramount Network PG

COMEDY In this contender for one of the best Hollywood comedies of the 1990s, Bill Murray is fantastic as the weatherman trapped in a day he will remember for ever because, unless he can find some answers, it will be the rest of his life. Director Harold Ramis uses every cinematic trick in the book to keep what is a one-gag movie brimming with life. Stephen Tobolowsky gives a superb turn as a nerdy insurance salesman and, as Murray's TV producer, Andie MacDowell has never been better. DP (US 1993, swearing, HD)

The World Is Not Enough ★★★★
10.05pm-12.20am ITV 12

ADVENTURE Accompanied by a theme song from Garbage that sounds like Shirley Bassey revisited, the world's greatest secret agent (here played by Pierce Brosnan) entered the new millennium on fine form with this return to the gritty glamour of 007's earlier outings. The plot involves a power struggle for global domination of pipelines from oil-rich Azerbaijan, with the opening speedboat chase along the River Thames getting things moving in turbo drive. Everything comes gift-wrapped in production glitz, but there are many touching moments to temper the adrenaline-pumping action. AJ (US/UK 1999, violence, swearing, HD)

LATE NIGHT

The Big Short ★★★★
10.50pm-12.55am BBC2 15

DRAMA Swinging masterfully between irreverence and incredulity, The Big Short tells the story of the men who saw the 2008 financial crash coming. It sees co-writer/director Adam McKay (Anchorman and this year's excellent Vice) make the successful jump from comedy to satire, with a uniformly superb cast that includes Christian Bale, Steve Carell and Ryan Gosling. Despite its many complexities, it successfully manages to be both entertaining and accessible, as well as frighteningly credible. EAS (US 2015, swearing, nudity, HD)

Ride Along ★★
11.50pm-1.40am C4 12

COMEDY If you're in the mood for some undemanding action, this routine buddy cop caper offers some cheap laughs. Kevin Hart plays a wimpish high-school security guard whose ambition is to marry Tika Sumpter, but first he has to get the blessing of her brother (Ice Cube), a hardcase Atlanta cop whom he accompanies on a dangerous 24-hour patrol. Much fairly obvious slapstick action ensues, often with violence as a substitute for a decent punch-line. Efficient rather than inspired, Ride Along is watchable enough. DA (US 2014, violence, swearing, sexual references, HD)

The Other Man ★★
11.55pm-1.15am BBC1 15

DRAMA A mysterious love triangle and the all-star cast of Liam Neeson, Antonio Banderas and Laura Linney can't save this ponderous romantic thriller from mediocrity. Based on a short story by novelist Bernhard Schlink (The Reader), it follows a Cambridge software exec (Neeson) as he uncovers details of an affair between his shoe designer wife (Linney) and her lover (Banderas). Despite being handsomely shot by British director Richard Eyre (Notes on a Scandal), its plot proves embarrassingly slight, as priggish Neeson befriends and then tricks Banderas's hammy cad. It's a familiar story, yet it's executed with so little passion it might as well be about car upholstery. JR (UK 2008, swearing, HD)

Red Tails ★★★
12.55-2.50am BBC2 12

ADVENTURE This action-packed movie tells the story of the Second World War's first all-black fighter squadron, known as the Tuskegee Airmen. Stationed in Italy, but restricted to picking off the remnants of German ground forces because military top brass believe the "negro" has the wrong temperament for aerial combat, the fliers (overseen by major Cuba Gooding Jr) campaign for the chance to engage with the Luftwaffe in the skies. Director Anthony Hemingway weaves a powerful civil rights message into a traditional wartime yarn. TeS (US 2012, some violence, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

Spotlight ★★★★★

10.45pm-12.45am BBC2 15

DRAMA Spotlight is the name of the team of reporters tasked in 2001 by The Boston Globe's gutsy new editor (Liev Schreiber) to investigate sexual abuse within the Catholic church. In 2016, Tom McCarthy's dramatisation won the coveted best picture Oscar and, set in a pre-digital past like similar newspaper-centred dramas Zodiac and The Post, its closest relation is other Oscar favourite All the President's Men. That said, McCarthy's film thrums with contextual resonance. The diligent ensemble cast – Michael Keaton, Mark Ruffalo, Rachel McAdams, Stanley Tucci – are only outshone by Len Cariou as Cardinal Bernard Law, Archbishop of Boston, who resigned after the Globe exposé. At one point, the team literally scours archdiocese directories with pencils and rulers to trace the whereabouts of disgraced priests, and the sequence is as gripping as Howard Shore's rattling score. An important, righteous film, it might prompt you to experience tears instead of the usual air-punching triumph when the truth is eventually outed. (US 2015, swearing, HD)

DAYTIME

Star Wars Episode V: the Empire Strikes Back ★★★★★

1.35-4.05pm ITV U

SCI-FI Director Irvin Kershner's supervision of George Lucas's brainchild gives this second part of the first Star Wars trilogy a truly epic dimension. Darth Vader sends Imperial troops to crush the rebels on the ice planet Hoth, while Luke Skywalker searches out Jedi master Yoda for further instruction in "the Force". Kershner darkens the imagery of Lucas's vibrant fairy tale and deepens its narrative with provocative plot strands, giving this sequel a cynical, harder edge that lifts it above the serial roots of its predecessor. AJ (US 1980, HD)

Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows: Part 2 ★★★★★

4.05-6.25pm ITV 12

FANTASY The fantasy franchise comes to a hugely satisfying conclusion as Voldemort and Harry clash for the last time. Harry, Hermione and Ron search for the magical horcruxes, the key to the evil lord's immortality. Every beloved character gets their moment in the spotlight as white dragons fly over London, ghouls hover eerily around Hogwarts and its plucky pupils prepare for battle. There's also a deliciously menacing gravity lacking from previous episodes that puts the final spectacular confrontation on a truly mythic plane. Packing an emotional wallop, too, in the moments Snape's story is uncovered and in Harry's parental encounter, David Yates directs this lavish epic with the surest of hands. AJ (UK/US 2011, may be edited for violence, language, HD)

Two Weeks Notice ★★

5.10-7.15pm ITV2 12

COMEDY Sandra Bullock plays a liberal lawyer who fights for environmental causes; Hugh Grant is a tycoon who plans to knock down her local community centre to build condos – she agrees to work for him if he cancels the demolition, but quits when it gets too much. Will they overcome their differences? The formulaic plot is not the main problem here – it's Bullock and Grant. Both charming actors with the ability to play light comedy, they should have been the dream team, but they try too hard here, with uneven results. StH (US/Aus 2002, swearing, sexual references, HD)

EVENING

Madagascar ★★★

6.15-8.00pm E4 U

ADVENTURE While not in the same league as Shrek, this offering from DreamWorks Animation is serviceable family entertainment. Chris Rock and Ben Stiller provide the voices for Marty the zebra and Alex, a lion, who enjoy a comfortable existence in Manhattan's Central Park Zoo until Marty expresses a desire to return to the wild. What follows is a predictable but engaging series of mishaps that land the pair in Africa, along with anxious giraffe Melman (David Schwimmer) and straight-talking hippo Gloria (Jada Pinkett Smith). The pace drags a bit in the last third of the movie, and the attempts to infuse Marty and Alex's relationship with pathos are curiously uninvolving but the film is always marvellous to look at and the sight gags come thick and fast. GM (US 2005, HD)

Crooks' Tour ★★

7.00-8.40pm Talking Pictures TV U

COMEDY Basil Radford and Naunton Wayne reprise the Charters and Caldicott characters first seen in Alfred Hitchcock's The Lady Vanishes in this slight comic flag-waver, adapted from a radio serial produced by that film's screenwriters, Frank Launder and Sidney Gilliat. Once again it's espionage all the way for the cricket-mad duo, who this time around are mistaken for Nazi spies in Baghdad. A hectic pursuit across eastern Europe ensues, in the dubious company of double agent Greta Gynt. Director John Baxter was better known for realistic social treatises than vaudeville, but he maintains a jaunty pace throughout. DP (UK 1940, BW)

Dad's Army ★★★

8.00-10.00pm ITV3 PG

COMEDY Director Oliver Parker revives another iconic comedy series following his reboot of the St Trinian's franchise in 2007. Toby Jones's deluded Captain Mainwaring and Michael Gambon's smiley Private Godfrey are the standouts in an impressive parade of British character actors. It's an all-out laugh attack, expanding the action from parochial intrigue to espionage and actual conflict, while boosting female participation, which not only includes Catherine Zeta-Jones as a glamorous reporter who sets male hearts fluttering, but also the first appearance of Mrs Mainwaring (Felicity Montagu). But while the new Dad's Army is celebratory in tone, not all the gags or comic-strip plotlines honour the spirit of the series, which could be subtle and poignant, too. It's fond, flag-waving, but also faulty. MB (UK 2016, HD)

Enigma ★★★

9.00-11.20pm Paramount Network 15

THRILLER This romantic thriller (based on the Robert Harris novel) concentrates on the quiet, bookish pluck of the wartime codebreakers at Bletchley Park. Dougray Scott plays the fragile but brilliant Tom Jericho, back at his desk after a nervous breakdown and drawn into a race against time to crack the latest German cipher. He also suspects that the girl he has become infatuated with (Saffron Burrows) is a spy. This well-acted tale of wartime intrigue has Kate Winslet looking suitably dowdy in a supporting role, and the film is commendable for the intelligence it assumes on the part of the audience. But the effect is spoiled somewhat by a high-adventure ending that seems out of synch with the rest of the movie. AC (UK/US/Neth/Ger 2001, violence, swearing, a sex scene, HD)

THRILLER This adaptation of Tom Rob Smith's bestseller follows tarnished MGB agent Leo Demidov (Tom Hardy) and his clandestine pursuit of a child killer in the Stalin-era Soviet Union, accompanied by his wife Raisa (Noomi Rapace). Swedish director Daniel Espinosa's moody approach suits the subject and Hardy is believably tortured, while efforts to balance the political context, murder hunt and romance are muddled. Yet Child 44 grows in stature as it gains focus, revealing itself as a depiction of desperately unjust times. EAS (US 2014, violence, swearing, sex scenes, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

Tower Block ★★★★ 11.05pm-12.50am C5 15

THRILLER Imagine if Ken Loach made a disaster movie. Until he does, here's an approximation from the fertile mind of screenwriter James Moran (Severance), a thriller located at the economic sharp end, in which the tenants of a condemned London block find themselves under fire from a sniper. Familiar TV faces Sheridan Smith, Julie Graham and Russell Tovey join the seasoned Ralph Brown (Withnail & I) and the formidable Jack O'Connell in a risky escape attempt, with internal conflict a constant disuniting force. This motley gang's fight for survival is leavened by social realism amid the laser sights and sudden death, and it's all resourcefully staged by James Nunn and Ronnie Thompson in their feature directorial debut. (UK 2012, violence, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

Seven Men from Now ★★★★

2.25-4.00pm 5Spike U

WESTERN John Wayne's production company made this modestly budgeted Randolph Scott western, and it turned out so well the Duke wished he'd starred in it himself. Burt Kennedy's lean script has Scott tracking down the men who killed his wife, with Lee Marvin following behind hoping to grab the loot they've hidden, and Gail Russell is the female lead. Director Budd Boetticher makes terrific use of outdoor settings and he, Scott and Kennedy teamed up on three more westerns: The Tall T, Ride Lonesome and Comanche Station. AE (US 1956, HD)

P Big Stone Gap ★★

6.55-9.00pm Film4

ROMANTIC COMEDY If you're a fan of Ashley Judd or Whoopi Goldberg, here's an amiable if schmaltzy distraction for you. The project was a labour of love for co-star Patrick Wilson (The Conjuring), whose father grew up in Virginia's Appalachian Mountains where the story is set, and who helped writer/director Adriana Trigiani put the project together. Judd is the pharmacist who uncovers a secret about her family, and is joined by an impressive roster of TV faces including Jane Krakowski in a tale that's heart-warming, despite being comfortably predictable. SuR (US 2014, HD)

Con Air ★★★★

9.00-11.15pm Sky1 18

ACTION THRILLER This top-notch thrill-athon sees Nicolas Cage playing a jailed ex-Army Ranger whose flight home is hijacked by America's most dangerous felons. Cage's impossibly cool macho posturing is irresistible, as is John Malkovich's sneering turn as a criminal. John Cusack and Ving Rhames lend snappy support, and this debut from director Simon West is impossible to dislike. JC (US 1997, violence, swearing, HD)

ANDREW COLLINS

FILM OF THE DAY

P Mistress America ★★★★★

11.20pm-1.00am Film4 15

COMEDY Greta Gerwig has butterflied from her pupal early days in the improv-driven hinterland since pairing with highborn New York indie auteur Noah Baumbach, and here consolidates her co-writing leading-lady credentials. The pair's follow-up to Frances Ha, Mistress America casts Gerwig as the self-regarding elder mentor of her stepsister (Lola Kirke), who's new in town and adrift at a Manhattan liberals arts college. Gerwig relishes the project ("I wanna write short stories!" "Me too!") and Kirke is besotted by her wacky confidence. The plot, such as it is, involves funding for a restaurant, triggering a memorably painful gate-crash at an investor's house in Connecticut and a pleasing, lofty air of feminised Woody Allen without the toxicity. (US 2015, swearing, sexual references, drug abuse, HD)

Indie's power couple, p90

6.15-9.00pm Sony Movie Channel 12

ACTION Vin Diesel cements his star status as "a new breed of secret agent" but this junk Bond from director Rob Cohen is pure exploitation. Diesel plays extreme-sports hero Xander Cage, coerced by US government agent Samuel L Jackson into infiltrating a Prague-based terrorist cell. Overall, the film lacks wit, but the outrageous stunts generate a little excitement. AJ (US 2002, violence, swearing, drug abuse)

Kipps ★★★

6.45-8.30pm Talking Pictures TV U

COMEDY Carol Reed's adaptation of HG Wells's novel follows a draper's clerk who discovers that, when it comes to social climbing, he has no head for heights. Frank Launder and Sidney Gilliat's script meanders, but there is a dose of sly Wellsian satire, some expertly staged set pieces and top-class acting from Michael Redgrave in the title role. DP (UK 1941, BW)

X2 ★★★★

8.00-10.35pm E4 12

FANTASY This is what a mega-budget comic-book action movie should be – from its breathtaking opening assault on the White House, the pace never lets up as nemesis Magneto (played with relish by Ian McKellen) is now allied with the X-Men against Brian Cox's ruthless military scientist, Stryker. Director Bryan Singer skilfully keeps multiple subplots spinning while moving inexorably towards a great climax, and while it's overlong, just feel the quality. AC (US 2003, edited for violence, language, HD)

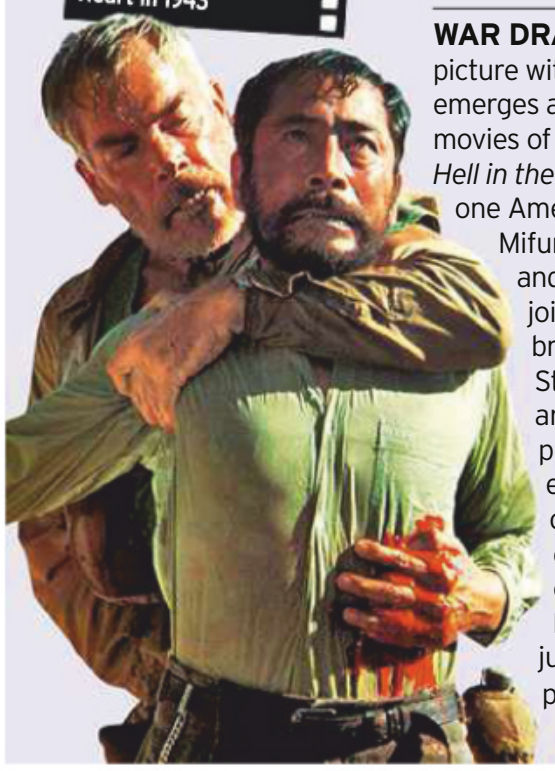
Marvin and Mifune fought on opposite sides in the Pacific War – US Marine Marvin was wounded and received a Purple Heart in 1943



ANDREW COLLINS

FILM OF THE DAY

Hell in the Pacific ★★★★

11.15pm-1.20am Talking Pictures TV PG

WAR DRAMA John Boorman's second picture with Lee Marvin after Point Blank emerges as one of the more thoughtful war movies of the big-budget, late-Technicolor era. Hell in the Pacific strands two servicemen – one American, the other Japanese (Toshiro Mifune) – on a Pacific island. They circle and taunt one another but eventually join forces to build a raft and begin to break down the language barrier. Stunningly shot in the Philippines and featuring full-blooded twin performances, Boorman's epic, elemental two-hander makes full use of the widescreen aspect, while composer Lalo Schifrin keeps his cues spare – tickled bongos, jittering horns, eerie bells – allowing the jungle fauna and crashing ocean to provide the soundtrack. (US 1968)

Caesar and Cleopatra ★★

2.35-5.05pm Talking Pictures TV U

DRAMA Legend has it that garrulous Hungarian producer Gabriel Pascal managed to convince George Bernard Shaw he was the only person who could do justice to the great man's plays. Unfortunately, Pascal also directed this, and with astounding ineptitude. The production went over budget, which might account for the film's excessive length and, despite the spirited efforts of Claude Rains and Vivien Leigh as the couple of the title, there's no sexual chemistry at all, while their script is far too wordy. It's worth a look, but not to be taken too seriously. TS (UK 1945)
Granger in danger, p60

The Last Witch Hunter ★★★

9.00-11.10pm Film4 15

FANTASY Cut from the same action fantasy cloth as the Blade and Highlander franchises, this romp finds witch hunter Vin Diesel – cursed with immortality – trying to stop the rebirth in modern Manhattan of a Witch Queen determined to unleash a new bubonic plague upon mankind. This family-friendly horror hokum always remains intriguing and imaginative, even if the Good v Evil battles go on CGI overdrive. Diesel centres the magical mischief with his winning muscular charm, while priestly adviser Michael Caine (see p128) adds a welcome touch of charismatic class. AJ (US 2015, some violence, swearing, HD)

Hellboy II: the Golden Army ★★★★

10.35pm-12.55am ITV4 12

FANTASY Director Guillermo del Toro's mastery of fantasy guides this sequel to visually imaginative heights. This time, our florid superhero Hellboy (Ron Perlman) must thwart the renegade elf prince Nuada (Luke Goss), who will stop at nothing to awaken the Golden Army and conquer the human realm. Imbued with gothic fairy-tale style, the film marries dry wit and creepiness. Epic in ambition while still retaining its gentle soul, its army of golden images is another sublime example of superior myth-making from a master of the art. AJ (US/Ger 2008, violence, swearing, HD)

Firelight ★★★ 11.00pm-1.00am True Movies (Freeview 50, Freesat 302, Sky 321, Virgin 424) 15

ROMANCE In this sugary 19th-century-set tale, Swiss governess Sophie Marceau conceives a child for aristocrat Stephen Dillane, who takes the child back to his wife. A few years later he employs her as nanny, and she moves into his strange household. Neither of the leads seems comfortable with their role, but the story is always interesting, and is enlivened by a strong turn by Dominique Belcourt as the daughter. JB (US/UK 1997, swearing, a sex scene)

FILM OF THE DAY

The Proposal ★★★

9.00-11.00pm Comedy Central 12

COMEDY Sandra Bullock stars as a big-shot New York editor who avoids deportation to her native Canada by pressuring a reluctant assistant (Ryan Reynolds) into marrying her. The hitch comes when they have to spend the weekend in Alaska with her family. A gentle plot is fleshed out with lovely turns from Bullock and Reynolds, but it's Betty White who shines as the matriarch who thinks marriage is just peachy. Karen Krizanovich (US 2009, edited for language, HD)

The Boston Strangler ★★★★

9.30-11.50pm Talking Pictures TV 18

CRIME DRAMA This is a suspenseful, often disturbing re-creation of the crimes, capture and psychoanalysis of Albert DeSalvo (played here by Tony Curtis), who confessed to being the notorious killer of 13 women in the early 1960s. Though doubt has since been cast on his confession, the film oozes authenticity. Director Richard Fleischer captures the atmosphere of a frightened city with a stark, documentary-style approach that makes deft use of split-screen. AJ (US 1968, violence, nudity)

A killer transformation, p110

August: Osage County ★★★

1.50-3.50am C4 15

DRAMA Pill-popping Meryl Streep abstractedly deals with her poet husband's suicide in Tracy Letts's adaptation of his own stage smash. Meanwhile, Streep's long-suffering family exposes festering wounds, rehashes bitter feuds and reveals long-buried secrets in trying to restore stability at the wake. The members of a stellar cast (Chris Cooper, Benedict Cumberbatch, Julia Roberts) each get their moment to shine but this is more of a southern-fried screaming match than a dark satire. AJ (US 2013, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

The Boy in the Striped Pyjamas

★★★ 11.05pm-12.35am BBC2 12

WAR DRAMA The innocent viewpoint of a child is an interesting way to explore unmentionable horror. Irish writer John Boyne played this card with The Boy in the Striped Pyjamas, his sensitive, award-garlanded Holocaust novel for younger readers. The inevitable film adaptation by the undervalued British director Mark Herman cast unknowns in the two key parts: Asa Butterfield as Bruno, the son of a German officer relocated to a camp in occupied Poland; Jack Scanlon as Shmuel, an inmate dressed in the aforementioned "striped pyjamas". Neither is old enough to understand the horrific nature of the camp – although it, too, comes as a shock to Bruno's mother (Vera Farmiga) when the source of black smoke from a chimney stack is identified – and the fanatical anti-Semitism displayed by another officer (Rupert Friend) sits in stark contrast to his dad's outlook. Diligently acted and directed, the thriller finale shouldn't work, but in context, it really does. (UK/US 2008, violence, HD)

DID YOU KNOW? The camp is never mentioned by name but only Auschwitz had four crematoria. In the book, Bruno refers to it as "Out-With"

The Quick and the Dead ★★★

1.00-2.55pm Movies4Men PG

WESTERN With a spaghetti-style plot and its overtones of Shane and Friendly Persuasion, this is a superior TV-movie western that only lets itself down with its so-so re-creation of the frontier of the 1870s. The story is well told by director Robert Day, but it is the performances that elevate this above the pack. Tom Conti is admirable as the Indian War veteran whose pacifism is put to the test, and Sam Elliott obviously enjoys picking off baddies and smouldering around Conti's wife, played with some vigour by Kate Capshaw. DP (US TVM 1987)

Man with the Gun ★★★

2.20-4.00pm 5Spike PG

WESTERN One of Robert Mitchum's strengths was his ability to grab a western like this by its throat and turn it into a personal statement. Mitchum plays a brooding gunman who cleans up a town to try to win back his estranged wife, played by the excellent Jan Sterling. There's a fair amount of sadism on show (though nothing by today's standards), and the mood and tone are satisfyingly grim. Watch for a young Angie Dickinson in an early role, and enjoy the fine photography from Lee Garmes, who won an Oscar for Shanghai Express. TS (US 1955, some violence, BW, HD)

The Frighteners ★★★★

9.00-11.10pm Syfy 15

SUPERNATURAL THRILLER A dark farcical comedy spins out of control in this deliciously brash tale from Peter Jackson that explores the shocking paranormal bond between two lovers with record-breaking murder in mind. The director of Braindead and Heavenly Creatures hits exactly the right balance between black comedy and jet-black chills. The result is a ghoulish gem that showcases a dazzling array of CGI ghosts and blood-freezing poltergeist activity, with Michael J Fox ingeniously cast against type as a pseudo psychic. AJ (NZ/US 1996, violence, swearing)

Philadelphia ★★★★★

9.00-11.35pm Paramount Network 12

DRAMA This affecting drama was the first major Hollywood movie about Aids, and it won Tom Hanks his (deserved) first best actor Oscar. Hanks plays gay lawyer Andrew Beckett, who takes his powerful employers to court for sacking him after they discover he is suffering from an Aids-related illness. The company bigwigs claim he was dismissed for incompetence. Beckett's counsel is wheeler-dealer Joe Miller (Denzel Washington), whose homophobia is counter-balanced by his nose for a good case and essential sense of fair play. Meanwhile, Hanks portrays the ravaged, dying Beckett as a disabled everyman whose life has lessons for all of us. TH (US 1993, some swearing, HD)

10.45pm-12.45am ITV 18

ACTION THRILLER In this first sequel, Mel Gibson and Danny Glover's bickering cops face ruthless South African drug runners. Director Richard Donner accents humour rather than explosive action and the result is an oddly toned, cartoon-like adventure with the comedy elements making the nasty violence seem even more gratuitous. That said, the stars rapport continues to delight, and Joe Pesci is a joy as the fast-talking accountant for the bad guys. AJ (US 1989, violence, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

Dracula Untold ★★

12.05-1.35am C4 15

HORROR Like I, Frankenstein before it, Dracula Untold seeks to reinvent one of cinema's most famous horror creations. One part history lesson to several parts Hollywood spectacle, it stars Luke Evans as the Transylvanian prince who's believed to have inspired Bram Stoker's fictional fanged fiend. Desperate to save his land from invading Turkish hordes, Evans turns to the dark side, personified by a heavily latexed Charles Dance, and ends up with fangs, bloodlust and a side order of CGI bats. Mildly entertaining, the movie is a half-decent showcase for the talented Evans. DA (US 2014, violence, some swearing, sex scenes, HD)

Teenage trouble

P Ben Is Back ★★★ 15

*From Monday Sky Store, Virgin Movies and iTunes

DRAMA Julia Roberts stars as the mother of a recovering drug addict (Lucas Hedges), who comes home unexpectedly and brings the past with him. Directed in a no-nonsense fashion by Lucas's dad Peter (Dan in Real Life), the film avoids scenery-chewing in favour of a family dynamic that is believably flawed.

At the heart of the drama are Roberts and Hedges, who share a connection rarely achieved on celluloid. Roberts cycles through anger, despair and hope at various points, as she fights to believe her son is reformed. Meanwhile, Hedges plays Ben like a raw nerve, a man who knows one mistake may undo everything.

Unfortunately, a series of convoluted and unnecessary twists send these characters on a needless journey that dilutes the intensity. While the stars make you believe their bond, Ben Is Back moves along awkwardly, ignoring the parts that make it special. James Luxford (US 2018, violence, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

DVD OF THE WEEK

What Men Want ★★★ 15 Released 22 July on DVD

In this gender-reversed remake of the 2000 Mel Gibson comedy What Women Want, Taraji P Henson stars as a sports agent who acquires the power to read men's minds. Director Adam Shankman's fantasy goes for broad laughs rather than any kind of profound exploration of gender inequality, but Henson throws herself into the part (often literally), and she's surrounded by a talented cast, including the hilarious Erykah Badu as a foul-mouthed mystic. Like the Gibson film, What Men Want keeps things light and, thanks to some likeable performances, it's never dull. The DVD includes deleted scenes and a gag reel. JL

NEW SEASON ALERT

Big Little Lies

S1 streaming now, S2 weekly

How could this glorious drama's stellar cast, tightly woven plot and subversive tone get any better, you ask? One name: Meryl Streep. Streep joins Nicole Kidman, Reese Witherspoon and the rest of the gang, causing their characters' dangerous lies to unravel even further. If you somehow missed this Emmy- and Golden Globe-winning show's deft exploration of female friendship, parenthood and complex relationships, season one is also available on NOW TV, too.

THE AWARD-WINNER

2 Patrick Melrose

Stream every episode

Heart-warming and heart-wrenching in equal parts, this Bafta-winning mini-series starring Benedict Cumberbatch packs a punch into every one of its five episodes. Based on Edward St Aubyn's semi-autobiographical novels, the Sky Original deftly tackles everything from addiction and child abuse to aristocracy and class privilege – and that's just in its first hour. Cumberbatch is superb as the charmingly self-aware and definitely self-destructive Melrose, navigating his highs and comedowns with impressive skill.

SUMMER SCANDAL

3 Riviera

Stream every episode

"Behind every great fortune there is a great crime." French writer Balzac's words fit this Sky Original like a bloodied Chanel glove. While season one introduced us to the dark underworld lurking beneath the glittery Côte d'Azur, season two brings even more of its wealthy elite's dirty secrets to light. Julia Stiles stars as widowed art buyer Georgina Clios, and is joined by the likes of Juliet Stevenson, Will Arnett and Poppy Delevingne. A lavishly filmed, deeply mysterious watch.

NEW RETRO

4 Black Monday

Stream every episode

Black Monday is surprisingly upbeat for a show that focuses on the lead-up to the worst stock market crash in the history of Wall Street. The dark comedy revels in 80s excess, from the technicolour getups donned by knucklehead traders Mo Monroe (Don Cheadle) and Dawn Darcy (Regina Hall) to cheerful butler robots and swanky Lamborghini limos. Season two has already been confirmed. Produced and directed by Seth Rogen, it will blow your perm off.

THE MUST WATCH

Chernobyl

Stream every episode

Despite its striking cinematography, this acclaimed dramatisation of the 1986 nuclear accident in Soviet Ukraine is often hard to watch – but that's precisely why you should. The Sky Original doesn't shy away from the event's grim realities, from the lethal injuries caused by the toxic leak to the political forces determined to cover it up. The cast is sublime, with Emily Watson, Jared Harris and Stellan Skarsgard at the top of their game.

Unmissable movies

1 WATCH THIS SPACE

First Man

Streaming from 20 July

This month marks 50 years since Neil Armstrong's history-defining Moon landing. Oscar-winning director Damien Chazelle's ambitious biopic explores the sacrifices Armstrong (played by a brilliantly sombre Ryan Gosling) had to make, as well as the steps Nasa had to take for mankind's giant leap to become possible. It's a gruelling journey, even before Armstrong leaves the atmosphere, but it will fill you with awe and wonder nonetheless.

SING YOUR HEART OUT

2 Mamma Mia: Here We Go Again

Streaming now

Set to a soundtrack of ABBA's greatest hits with an idyllic Greek island backdrop, this prequel/sequel is as equally charming as its box office-smashing predecessor. Lily James plays the young Donna with the same joie de vivre as Meryl Streep (and rocks denim dungarees just as well, too). They're joined by an ensemble cast that includes Pierce Brosnan, Colin Firth, Amanda Seyfried and Cher, who is just as dazzling as you'd expect. My, my, how can you resist such an unapologetically feel-good gem?

FAMILY FILM

3 Incredibles 2

Streaming now

They may not wear capes (a lesson the first movie's big bad Syndrome learned the hard way), but the Parr family's superhero antics could give the Avengers a run for their money. The sequel features cutting-edge animation, a sleek retro-future aesthetic and a clever storyline that tackles parenthood, the rise of technology and baby v racoon feuds. An epic watch that will delight children and grown-ups alike.

THE TEAR-JERKER

4 A Star Is Born

Streaming now

A single box of tissues won't cut it for this utterly heart-breaking drama. Bradley Cooper's directorial debut may be a remake of a remake, but it still managed to surprise audiences and critics with its poignant exploration of love and stardom. Cooper stars alongside a remarkable Lady Gaga, whose compelling lyrics earned the film an Oscar for best original song. Beautifully filmed, it's well worth the heartache.

FRANCHISE TITAN

5 Mission Impossible: Fallout

Streaming now

This high-octane franchise seems to get better with age (it spans 23 years and counting). The same could be said for its charismatic star, Tom Cruise, who famously does all his own stunts. The sixth instalment sees Cruise drive a motorcycle at more than 100mph and jump out of an aeroplane – all while completing Ethan Hunt's most impossible mission yet.

Pulling a fast one

We're not as busy as we think we are, says Alison Graham

In Nadiya's Time to Eat, the delightful Nadiya Hussain's new series featuring quick meals made with easy items, she tells us "we're all living at 100 miles an hour". Oh no, are we? I feel so bad because I'm not, I live at about ten miles an hour – I'm an Aston Martin in slippers.

Shows like Time to Eat (Monday BBC2) make me all bothered because I feel I'm missing out. It's like all of those features in women's magazines that tell me I don't have any "quality time" to myself because I'm too busy hang-gliding in my lunch hour and scallop-fishing before I go to bed at 3am.

But I should still have time to wear that day-to-eveningwear outfit (do people really actually buy day-to-eveningwear outfits? I just have "wear") for a quick supper at this fantastic little restaurant in Istanbul that no one knows about before catching a flight home.

What am I doing wrong? Or rather, what am I NOT doing? Should I be free-climbing the Shard like that bonkers bloke the other week? Or tying myself to trees in the Amazon to stop logging companies destroying the rainforest? While always turning up for work the next day, of course. As it is, I wear cardigans and bus drivers lower the step for me as I'm about to board – without even being asked, which is a bit crushing, I can tell you – when all I want to be is a Woman of Action Who Has No Time to Cook.

'I live at ten miles an hour. I'm an Aston Martin in slippers'

I want to be the kind of person who'd turn to time-saving recipes like Nadiya's fish bake with tinned spaghetti hoops (see this week's show). I love Nadiya, I think she's the most naturally gifted television presenter I've ever seen, so you must understand how much it means to me that I don't disappoint her by not being frantically busy. And in one recipe she uses one of life's great gifts, tinned potatoes, so I love her even more. Oh Nadiya, make me a giant sausage roll and I promise I will surf the Severn Bore while I write a PhD about the evolution of the Gothic novel.

But it's all a dream… I will for ever be on the river bank, watching everyone else speed past, particularly Nadiya. "I want to maximise every hour," she says. "I want to make space for the things that really matter." Oh Nadiya, I make space for things that don't matter, like repeats of The Big Bang Theory on E4. What is everyone doing, and why and where, when they could be sitting on the couch eating Bombay mix and trying not to get bits of it too far down between the cushions?

QUICK SMART
Nadiya Hussain whips up speedy meals in her new series, Time to Eat

A businesswoman with a young family who appeared in last week's show had a 20-minute window to cook a family evening meal. Twenty minutes? Inevitably she was described as "juggling" (a word that is applied only to women, never to men) a family and a job.

But this whole "we are so very busy" thing has become a new 21st-century fetish. People have always been busy: our grannies cleaned the front step and leaded the grate and made huge meals from scratch for massive families, but they would never even think that they were "busy". It's just what they did.

It's yet another sign that we are just too absorbed in ourselves and our own comfortable little worlds. Me, I'm busy doing nothing, so please excuse me while I put my feet up.

GAME OVER

Not you too, Laura Kuenssberg! I thought so much better of you than this, but sadly, you have also fallen victim to the rampant disease of Overuse of Pointless Visual Metaphors on the BBC News. Introducing a piece from the North West about the Conservative leadership race, she was at some kind of family entertainment centre and café, where toddlers were chucking around the balls in a soft play area. I could see it coming a mile off: were people, wondered the BBC's political editor…"wishing the Tories would just stop their games?" Oh Laura.

SATURDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

DANCE TO THE DEATH? Eve (Sandra Oh) tangos with Villanelle (Jodie Comer)

PICK OF THE DAY

Killing Eve 9.20pm BBC1

DRAMA Villanelle is becoming more untethered from reality as we reach the penultimate episode of a second series that has sadly lacked the sustained power of the first. Though there are still some good bits.

But Villanelle (the always great Jodie Comer) seems to have got lost somewhere while the writers have concentrated too hard on Eve's feelings about her nemesis/loved one. It's the same tonight: there's the strongest and sauciest suggestion yet that Eve (Sandra Oh) fancies the smiling assassin, though she's not prepared to admit it to herself or to anyone else.

Still, Villanelle has fun in a storage unit when she has a little word with Eve's husband, the drab Niko, and his insipid friend Gemma, and the assassin has a trip to Rome as the guest of creepy, ascetic Aaron Peel (Henry Lloyd-Hughes, a dead ringer for Will Self), the all-seeing, all-knowing tech wizard.

Tour de France

12 noon Eurosport 1*,*
12.30pm ITV4

SPORT Of the eight days of action left in the 2019 Tour de France, no fewer than five are in the mountains and the outcome of the race promises to remain open right up until the penultimate day next Saturday. Today's stage ends at the top of the fabled Col du Tourmalet in the Pyrenees but at 117km is relatively short, reducing teams' capacity to control affairs. That pattern is repeated in the Alps towards the end of the week, so a thrilling, unpredictable final week is in prospect. SIMON O'HAGAN

Portrait Artist of the Year

5.35pm C4

ART The mix of guests on the friendly art contest is hard to fault. Tonight's sitters are Murdered by My Boyfriend star Georgina Campbell, actor and Sherlock co-creator Mark Gatiss, and Welsh politician and 11-time Paralympic gold medallist Tanni Grey-Thompson.

What adds a little grit to the niceness is that the judges (Kate Bryan, Kathleen Soriano and Tai-Shan Schierenberg) often approach the weed-out from differing perspectives. As ever, presenters Joan Bakewell and Stephen Mangan will be finding exactly the right moments to cut in on the creative process with their usual blend of encouragement and utter cheek. MARK BRAXTON

Moon Landing Live

8.00pm C4

SCIENCE On the 50th anniversary of Neil Armstrong's giant leap this rich, atmospheric film immerses us in the coverage viewers saw that day. There's plenty of great period detail, like a US presenter announcing, "ABC News presents the flight of Apollo 11, brought to you by Tang, the energy breakfast drink of Earth."

We see German women stopped in the street by a reporter asking which astronaut they'd prefer to dance with; we see the Pope reflecting on the landing ("What is mankind? Who are we?"); and some rumblings from Harold Wilson in Downing Street. Plus of course we hear once again all those laconic exchanges between astronauts and Nasa Mission Control as the key moments of the mission unfold.

DAVID BUTCHER

WHO IS CHARLIE LUXTON?

London's Great Bridges: Lighting the Thames (7pm C4) presenter Charlie Luxton worked on set designs for films before becoming well-known for hosting architectural and design shows. "When I was approached by the producers for Channel 5 [for Modern British Architects in 2000] I couldn't resist the opportunity to go and have a chat with them," he said. They persuaded him to go in front of the camera "and I've been doing it ever since".

He's appeared on DIY SOS and presented shows including Homes by the Sea, World's Weirdest Homes and Impossible Builds.

Born in Australia, Luxton moved to the UK when he was ten and cites his dad, who was a graphic designer, as an inspiration. He went on to get a BA in architecture and paid his way through university making and selling sculpture before completing an MA at the Royal College of Art. Now, he enjoys the best of both worlds. FRANCES TAYLOR

Casualty

8.30pm BBC1

DRAMA It's time to play Spot the Prison Drama Cliché as we get a riot at the local jail, in an episode postponed from last week. Flying toilet rolls, makeshift shivs, the grizzled lag with little time left to him, the bent screw, the callow screw, the belligerent "top boy" – all the old tropes are here. But once the action moves from the cells to the hospital, things start to get more interesting.

"Chaos!" yells the normally unflappable Charlie, as the growing number of inmates on trolleys spills out from the cubicles. And at the centre of all this disorder is Connie, who's self-medicating and desperately trying to mask her mounting panic. By the end of her shift, things have gone horribly wrong... DAVID BROWN

Inspector Montalbano

9.00pm BBC4

DRAMA In this 2018 episode Carousel, Salvo's morning idyll (a swim in his achingly beautiful bay followed by a strong coffee) is interrupted by a scuffle on the beach, and he is almost arrested himself. Later, his housekeeper Adelina clobbers an intruder on the veranda with a dish pan. As is the way with these loosely structured tales, one of these incidents may be connected to the main story – female bank workers are being abducted but left unharmed, while a rakish antique seller goes missing.

The series' soundtrack is greatly enhanced by the ballads of Olivia Sellerio, daughter of the duo who published Andrea Camilleri's original books. PATRICK MULKERN

Atlanta: Robbin' Season

10.00pm, 10.25pm BBC2

COMEDY DRAMA Both these episodes of the Georgia-set black comedy focus on Earn (Donald Glover) and his connection to Vanessa (Zazie Beetz), with whom he has a young daughter and a tricky, spiky relationship.

In the second episode they go to a strange German folk festival that is part of Van's heritage but makes Earn feel as uncomfortable as you'd expect when everyone else is dressed in lederhosen, wearing animal masks and dancing to oompah music: and in Earn's case they're also mistaking him for a folk character who wears blackface, then apologising...

The first episode is set around Atlanta itself as Earn, who finally has some money to spend, gets fleeced. DAVID BUTCHER

PRIDE OF BRITAIN
Laura Muir has intense competition today in the 1500m

Athletics: London Anniversary Games

1.15pm BBC1

SPORT This event began in 2013 as a way to keep the spirit of the 2012 Olympics alive, and there's still a fizz of excitement each year at the London Stadium. And with all eyes on the World Championships in September and the 2020 Tokyo Olympics, the competition should be fierce.

Home interest is high, as Laura Muir faces Kenya's world and Olympic champion Faith Kipyegon in the 1500m and there's a battle royale in the men's 100m as European champion Zharnel Hughes and Reece Prescod look to see off the Canadian Andre de Grasse and Jamaica's Yohan Blake.

Tomorrow, south London's Dina Asher-Smith renews her 100m Diamond League rivalry with 2012 Olympic champion Shelly-Ann Fraser-Pryce of Jamaica. Add in Jonnie Peacock, Katarina Johnson-Thompson, Stef Reid and Andrew Pozzi and the place will be buzzing. DAVID CRAWFORD

Netflix (from 19 July)

This explosive, stylish Spanish thriller (known in its home country as La Casa de Papel) began with a brilliant premise: a gang of thieves try to invade not a bank, but the Royal Mint of Spain, with a plan to print money that they then steal. We're a way beyond that now since this is the third series, but it soon settles back into another impossible mission that the smart-mouthed criminals might just pull off.

P First Man ★★★★ 8.00pm Sky Premiere

The story of how Neil Armstrong got to the Moon is told in rich and intimate detail in this thrilling drama, showing on the 50th anniversary of the historic landing. Ryan Gosling portrays the astronaut as a man uncomfortable in the spotlight, and his subtlety in the role is matched by an equally nuanced performance from Claire Foy as Neil's wife, Janet. Director Damien Chazelle focuses as much on the man as his extraordinary achievement, while the mission itself is brought to life with dazzling special effects. TERRY STAUNTON

Granger in danger

6.30pm Talking Pictures TV FREEVIEW

Before this drama (review, p43) bombed at the box office – losing its producers roughly $3 million – an actual bomb nearly took out rising star Stewart Granger during filming at Denham Studios. Granger had been winched 150 feet above the set when a German V-1 was heard in the air. "Everyone rushed to take cover," he said. "I was left dangling in the air." The bomb exploded 200 feet away, causing the set to sway. When Granger was lowered to safety, his fingers had to be prised away from the chain he was grasping. JOSH WINNING

Father and son

P Beautiful Boy ★★★

Amazon Prime

Steve Carell tries to help his son, Timothée Chalamet, confront his drug problem in this film based on the memoirs of New York Times writer David Sheff and his son Nic. The loving but occasionally fractious relationship between the men propels the narrative and gives the film genuine heart. TES

SUNDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

A STORM IS COMING
Life is never simple for Demelza and Ross (Eleanor Tomlinson and Aidan Turner)

PICK OF THE DAY Poldark 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA Establishment forces rise up and take aim at Ross Poldark and the discredited Colonel Despard as London society and political circles fizz with rumour and scandal. But surely there is someone out there who can help the hot-headed Despard clear his name?

Of course there is, and naturally Despard's great friend Ross Poldark is the man to ferret out a witness who has answers. Demelza, as she has done in the past, decides to help her husband in his noble endeavours. Only it looks like she's made a misjudgement.

When Poldark moves from Cornwall to London the action tends to drag and there are too many strolls through parks and pleasure gardens, which look lovely, but come on, get moving. Thankfully the gang returns to Cornwall, where they belong, but it might not be the best move for George Warleggan, as dead Elizabeth becomes even more alive.

ALISON GRAHAM See feature: page 14

Golf: the Open

8.00am Sky Sports Golf/Main Event*, 8.00pm* BBC2 (highlights)

SPORT If Rory McIlroy is still in the hunt going into today's fourth and final day, the atmosphere at Royal Portrush on the Antrim coast will be unprecedented. It was here, in 2005, that the then 16-year-old McIlroy – born and brought up in neighbouring Down – broke the course record with a round of 61 that simply defied belief.

McIlroy, Open champion in 2014, was joint favourite going into the 2019 championship, with the likes of Brooks Koepka, Dustin Johnson, Jon Rahm, Tiger Woods and fellow Brit Justin Rose also strongly fancied. Can McIlroy survive the weight of expectation? SIMON O'HAGAN

Countryfile

7.00pm BBC1

FACTUAL Where could be nicer at the height of summer than Cornwall? That's where the Countryfile team gather nourishing stories this week, and Adam Henson helps out on the cherry harvest.

Tom Heap meets farmers who, despite being at the sharp end of the UK's bovine TB outbreak, are choosing not to cull badgers. For parents who despair of persuading screen-focused kids into the open air, John Craven explores an off-grid camp near Truro where children get closer to the natural world.

And Anita Rani is on the Rame peninsula visiting the Antony Estate, where managers work closely with an unlikely tenant: the Royal Navy. DAVID BUTCHER

BBC Proms 2019

7.00pm BBC4

MUSIC The key word for this year's TV coverage is "immersive" and they're tapping into youthful performers, so Katie Derham is no longer in her box at the Albert Hall but up in the Promming gallery, and teamed here with dynamic 21-year-old saxophonist Jess Gillam.

A Bohemian Rhapsody is tonight's banner but don't settle in for a Queen tribute. Gear your mind for Bohemia, or rather the Czech Republic, as Brno-born conductor Jakub Hrusa conducts the Bamberg Symphony Orchestra for masterpieces from his homeland: Ma vlast, Smetana's symphonic cycle with the swirling earworm Vltava at its core – pure joy – and Dvorak's Violin Concerto with Joshua Bell. PATRICK MULKERN

Moon Landing Weekend

from 8.00pm Discovery

DOCUMENTARY Discovery's celebration of Neil Armstrong's small step concludes, with two featured documentaries. The obvious flagship is Apollo: the Forgotten Films (8pm), which draws on vibrant unseen footage to fill in every detail of how Apollo 11 completed its mission.

More compelling, however, is Apollo 8: the Mission That Changed the World (10pm). Based around an extensive interview with spiky, witty astronaut Bill Anders, it explains how the 1968 effort to fly men around the Moon for the first time pre-empted a lot of what we cherish about the later mission to land on it it – particularly the profound message the quest sent to a gigantic TV audience back on Earth. JACK SEALE

COMING SOON TO COUNTRYFILE

On the horizon for Countryfile (7pm BBC1) is an episode celebrating the 50th anniversary of the Riding for the Disabled Association. The episode will feature the RDA's president, Princess Anne (right), while John Craven and Anita Rani will report from the RDA's national championships in Gloucestershire – the biggest event of its kind in the world for disabled horse riders and carriage drivers.

As well as the annual Countryfile Ramble this autumn, Countryfile Live – the annual showground event now in its fourth year – is taking place for the first time in two separate locations next month. As well as the event at Blenheim Palace in Oxfordshire between 1–4 August, there will be an additional event at Castle Howard in Yorkshire, running between 15–18 August. "I was born, bred and began my career in Yorkshire so it's brilliant that Countryfile Live will be heading there," says Craven. FRANCES TAYLOR

Beecham House

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA Approaching the end of this final episode, and just when I dared to dream that the door wouldn't be left open for a second series of this stodgy period drama, dammit, the door is left open for a second series of this stodgy period drama.

Still, surely no one will recommission Beecham House? There's just not been enough to care about, and the dialogue is made entirely of suet pudding: "You are living proof of the preciousness of existence" is one of this week's peaches. Along with "an unmarried girl is like malaria, tainted and impossible to live with". Which sounds just like something Sir Walter "Potato" Raleigh might have said in Blackadder. AG

The Handmaid's Tale

9.00pm C4

DRAMA The visual world of Gilead is so well realised. Tonight's opening shot simply shows a red rope laid out on the ground, but it's enough to plant a sense of foreboding. We move along the rope, then see a line of Handmaids pick it up, and already we know that whatever it's there for won't be pretty. We're about to witness another of Gilead's rituals and a miserable duty for Handmaids, overseen of course by warped dogmatist Aunt Lydia.

It's the start of an episode where June plots to visit her daughter Hannah and the Waterfords enjoy the high life in Washington. The pitch of emotional intensity goes down a little; but then, it could hardly have gone up. DAVID BUTCHER

Imagine...

10.30pm BBC1

ARTS Following the death in May of Judith Kerr, the acclaimed author of The Tiger Who Came to Tea and Mog, this is a welcome repeat for a poignant 2013 Imagine... profile by Alan Yentob. It revolves around one key date: 4 March 1933, when Kerr's family fled Germany. Two days later the Nazis arrived – too late – to confiscate their passports.

It's easy to place most of Kerr's children's books as harking back to her happy childhood in Berlin before that day. For the most part she looks back at her extraordinary life with equanimity. But visiting the railway line to Auschwitz, the weight of history and how in a sense the war destroyed her parents bears down upon her. DAVID CRAWFORD

OVER THE EDGE
Steve Backshall abseils down the Tafelberg in Suriname

Expedition with Steve Backshall

DOCUMENTARY New series
What a tremendously manly series, full of manly men doing manly things. There's Steve Backshall abseiling down a waterfall in the South American jungle as tumbling deadly rocks thunder around his ears, then he strips to the waist for an arduous boat trip down a river. His companion, former Royal Marine sniper Aldo Kane (who presumably isn't here to shoot anyone) breaks his thumb at one point but carries on, in agony, after saying he'll just have to "suck it up". Ah, they don't make men like that any more.

It's a tremendous adventure, a bit like Conan Doyle's The Lost World, though the genial Backshall is hardly Professor Challenger. He's great at explaining things in an engaging way and he's clearly as brave as heck as he and his team negotiate unexplored jungle. AG

from 10am BBC3

A new docuseries filmed in the Welsh valleys, looking at communities where obesity levels are among the highest in the UK. Tempting as it might be to assume excess weight is always self-inflicted, there's a portrait here of people trapped in small towns where prospects are scarce and the numerous cheap takeaways on the high street don't help. All three episodes are up as a box set.

Netball World Cup 2.15pm Hoop dreams: Caitlin Bassett hopes to captain Australia to another gold

2.15pm Netball World Cup
After ten days of fierce competition at Liverpool Arena, the destination of the World Cup will be decided this afternoon. The action begins with the bronze-medal match (centre-pass 2.30), between the losing semi-finalists. Then attention turns to the final (centre-pass 5.00), which has traditionally been an antipodean affair, with Australia and New Zealand contesting each of the last five finals. However, England have enjoyed success against both nations in recent times, notably at last year's Commonwealth Games, when they beat Australia to the gold medal. Hazel Irvine presents.

7.00pm BBC Proms 2019

RT Virtuoso American violinist Joshua Bell joins the Bamberg Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Jakub Hrusa, for a concert entitled A Bohemian Rhapsody, with works by two great 19th-century Czech composers. Bell is the soloist for Dvorak's folk-infused Violin Concerto in A minor, which is followed by Smetana's symphonic suite Ma vlast, a colourful celebration of his homeland. Introduced by Katie Derham and Jess Gillam. Broadcast live on Radio 3 yesterday 7.30pm. See page 62.

9.35 Eric Clapton at the BBC: the Rock 'n' Roll Years

Archive performances by the guitarist and songwriter, who is often acclaimed as one of the greatest guitarists of his generation. Featuring performances with the Yardbirds, John Mayall and the Bluesbreakers, Cream, Delaney and Bonnie, Pete Townsend, and Jools Holland and His Rhythm and Blues Orchestra, playing hits including Layla, I Shot the Sheriff, Wonderful Tonight and Tears in Heaven. (R) (S) (HD)

10.05 Being Evel

★★★★ Storyville explores the charismatic stunt performer's rise to improbable fame, culminating in multiple television performances that captured the imagination of the public in the late 60s and 70s. Archive footage captures Knievel's early motorbike stunts, leading up to his attempt to be fired across Snake River Canyon. But Knievel had a darker side. His obsession with insane and potentially lethal stunts drew attention away from his love of alcohol, his womanising and a savage temper which led to time in jail for assaulting his business partner.
Director Daniel Junge (2015) (S) (W) (HD)

11.35 Sound of Musicals with Neil Brand

3/3. Neil Brand examines the continuing success of musical theatre and the rise of "megamusicals" such as Cats, Les Misérables and The Lion King. He also reveals the songwriting magic at work in numbers like Don't Cry for Me Argentina and meets luminaries such as lyricist Tim Rice, director Julie Taymor and composers Alan Menken and Robert Lopez.
Producer Andy Hall
Executive producer John Das (R) (S) (HD)

Jazzy Jeff works the crowd

Independence Day: Resurgence ★★

9.00pm Film4 FREEVIEW

As he showed recently at Glastonbury, Jeff Goldblum can work a crowd; the rapport he creates with an audience seemingly as effortless as his piano playing with the Mildred Snitzer Orchestra. He put his social skills into action during filming breaks in Independence Day: Resurgence, when he organised trivia quizzes and singalongs for the cast. "He loves music," said co-star Vivica A Fox. "Sometimes we join in, and sometimes he's just serenading us on his own." TOM FOLLEY

New to Sky today

P The Little Stranger ★★★ 6.00pm Sky Premiere

Agatha Christie intrigue meets Dennis Wheatley spookiness in this period tale from Room director Lenny Abrahamson. It's 1948, and things are going bump in the night at the country home of war veteran Will Poulter and his reclusive sister Ruth Wilson. Could it be a ghost, or might it have something to do with creepy doctor Domhnall Gleeson? This adaptation of the novel by Sarah Waters (Tipping the Velvet) is decently acted but it doesn't quite deliver fully on the mystery or shudder fronts. DAVE ALDRIDGE

Here's Grace!

Grace Jones: Bloodlight and Bami ★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

It's not easy being an icon, as we find out in this tell-all documentary about Grace Jones, which is available on catch-up until Tuesday. We hear about the singer's tough upbringing and the insecurities that shaped her formidable persona. But the most interesting moments are those rare glimpses of her vulnerability. JAMES LUXFORD

MONDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

LIFE BEFORE HARRY
A young Daniel with his parents Alan and Marcia

LOOKS FAMILIAR?
Daniel Radcliffe and (below) his strikingly similar great-great-grandfather Louis Gershon

PICK OF THE DAY Who Do You Think You Are? 9.00pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK Actor Daniel Radcliffe feels almost overwhelmed by the privilege of reading some extraordinary letters from his family's history. One is devastating in its profound poignancy, because it is a suicide note. The others are cheery missives of hope and optimism and love from the battlefields of the First World War.

Radcliffe, who is hugely engaging, starts out by admitting he knows very little of either side of his family, apart from a story about a great-grandfather who was a jeweller in London's Hatton Garden.

The WDYTYA researchers must surely bless the day that Radcliffe's name was suggested because his family's stories are remarkable for being minutely detailed not just in letters, but also in press reports. There are some tremendous contemporary photographs too, including one of his great-great-grandfather, who's the spitting image of his great-great-grandson, to Radcliffe's clear delight. ALISON GRAHAM See feature: page 16

Red Rock
1.45pm BBC1

DAYTIME CHOICE It must be draughty in the Kiely house. As you'll see today, nobody ever seems to take their coat off. They just stand around in their leather jackets, staring at luggage that may or may not contain drugs, waiting to be told what to do by matriarch Bridget. She's the best thing about this, really. And you have to wonder why actress Denise McCormack wasn't given more to do when she was seen (briefly) on EastEnders last year.

As for the rest of the episode, I did notice that we spend a lot of time witnessing pensive mobile phone conversations. Though the pace picks up in time for a nightclub-set final scene that features a very worrying cliffhanger. DAVID BROWN

Nadiya's Time to Eat
8.00pm BBC2

FOOD I wonder if there will be a loud chorus of outrage when viewers see Nadiya Hussain add a can of spaghetti hoops to a crunchy fish bake. Ah well, who cares. Not Nadiya, because this series is all about shortcuts to time-saving cooking.

Imaginative dishes here include a near-miraculous soda bread with home-made butter, and an enormous meat loaf Wellington, which is really a gigantic sausage roll/scotch egg hybrid (could there be anything more delightful?).

Nadiya thoughtfully packs some when she visits the Marmite factory in Burton upon Trent to try to discover the secret ingredient in her beloved yeast extract. AG

The 250 Million Pound Cancer Cure
9.00pm BBC2

SCIENCE High-energy proton beam therapy is a cutting-edge cancer treatment that could transform the chances of patients with inoperable tumours, particularly children and teenagers.

It uses extraordinary technology: a superconducting cyclotron accelerates protons to two thirds the speed of light before focusing them on a tumour, without damaging the tissue that lies behind it.

Horizon follows the remarkable engineering involved in building major new clinical facilities in London and Manchester, and meets the first patients who hope the new cancer killer will transform their lives. DAVID BUTCHER

Long Lost Family
9.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY To some extent every episode of Long Lost Family is the same, but they're always powerful and never quite unoriginal. Take the early sequence tonight, for example, in which Martin from Greater Manchester is brutally upfront with his poor adoptive parents about how his feelings of rejection have defined his life.

The effects of separating parent and child can ripple out in unexpected directions. But they can also do that in a happy way: in Hampshire, 53-year-old Anne is putting off getting married until she can complete a lifelong quest to find her birth mother. The closure she gets isn't what she envisaged, but it's tearfully affecting. JACK SEALE

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Have you noticed that the characters on Emmerdale (7pm ITV) keep on having the same conversations over and over again? Tonight, for instance, we get Nate (right) encouraging Amy to seek custody of Kyle after he spots another frosty exchange between Cain and Moira. But I swear I've seen this scenario play out a number of times over the past couple of weeks.

My theory is that the second episode ITV recently added to Tuesdays has resulted in a lot more padding to fill the show's allotted screen time. Seven instalments a week is just too much: it seems writers are struggling to come up with enough plot and I fear the end result will be viewers skipping episodes because they perceive them as being disposable.

Much as I love the soaps, I do wish ITV would take a chance on, say, a new sitcom rather than just plugging schedule gaps with more Emmerdale. You can have too much of a good thing, you know. DAVID BROWN

Extreme Tribe: the Last Pygmies

9.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Livia Simoka's visit to the Mbendjele tribe in the Congolese rainforest comes to an end, and once again it's so impressive how deeply embedded in the local culture she is. She's alert to the big picture of a government plan to build a road, the ramifications of which the self-sufficient Mbendjele may not quite appreciate. It'd be easy for that section to come across as a white saviour wringing her hands, but Simoka's too considerate for that.

Similarly, a local saga surrounding a charming young man who enjoys polygamy – his wives enjoy it rather less – could be played for judgmental laughs. Instead, the nuances are drawn out and become gripping drama. JS

Waco

9.00pm Alibi

DRAMA The FBI is growing itchy and irritated as the stand-off with the Branch Davidians at their Waco compound drags on. The bureau wants action, it wants to give the occupants something to think about. Tension is already escalating as they send in tanks and park them directly in front of the building, guns pointing right at the believers.

The inexorable sense that something very bad is just about to happen is built up brilliantly in this dramatised account of the disastrous 1994 siege. As helicopters clatter in the skies and FBI officers taunt the Davidians, hostage negotiator Gary Noesner (Michael Shannon), one of the good guys, feels the situation slipping away from him. AG

This Country

10.35pm BBC1

SITCOM Kerry's volatile mum throws her daughter's Playstation out of the window and yells "Get a job, pay the bills!" As the painfully understanding local vicar explains in this brilliantly observed faux documentary (this is a repeat of the first series) there aren't many employment opportunities for young people in the village.

But Kerry (Daisy May Cooper) is fired with enthusiasm when she goes to a meeting with "Shaz, a really strong businesswoman" who offers her the chance to earn £15,000 a month. So Kerry, with dreams of buying a helicopter, puts on a suit that "makes her look like [The Addams Family's] Uncle Fester" while her cousin Kurtan plays Warhammer with some nerdy new friends. AG

ORDERS... American advice for wartime shoppers

Living in the Shadow of World War Two

10.00pm More4

HISTORY New series There are clips from any number of daft but effective Ministry of Information films in this enjoyable look at life on the home front here and abroad in the Second World War. In one, a Father Time figure hammily warns gardeners, "You can't eat lilies!". Then a Dig for Victory newsreel shows a chap playing golf while the course is ploughed up around him: "Just watch this hero sinking a putt with that tractor coming up astern!" chuckles the narrator.

The stories on the effects of rationing are interesting, though you may find yourself thinking wartime food looks rather good. There was even a government plan called the Rural Pie Scheme, which I think could usefully be revived.

Earlier at 9pm, Life after WWI: in Colour uses colourised archive footage to tell the story of Europe after 1918. DAVID BUTCHER

8.00 Life
5/10. Birds. These creatures owe their success to something no other animal has: feathers. The unique flight of the marvelous spatuletail hummingbird is captured for the first time, while the Ethiopian lammergeyer is filmed dropping bones from the sky to make edible pieces and the sage grouse is seen in a display to attract females. David Attenborough narrates.
Series producer Martha Holmes; Executive producer Michael Gunton (R) (S) (AD) (HD)

9.00 How to Be an Ex-Prime Minister
In a documentary made in 2007 after Tony Blair had announced his resignation as Prime Minister, Michael Cockerell looks at what other PMs got up to after they left Number Ten – selling Cheshire cheese and declaring bankruptcy are two of the lowlights. Can Theresa May take any tips as she prepares to leave office?
Producer Jeremy Monblat
Executive producer Paul Woolwich (R) (S) (HD)

10.00 Attenborough's Paradise Birds
David Attenborough uncovers why he considers birds of paradise to be "the most romantic and glamorous birds in the world". He explores the myths surrounding their discovery 500 years ago, and reveals how the evolution of their spectacular appearance has been driven by sex.
Producer Miles Barton; Executive producer Mike Gunton First shown on BBC2 (S) (AD) (HD)

11.00 Art of France
3/3. Andrew Graham-Dixon details how the arrival of impressionism in the 1870s ushered in a creative period in which artists found their muses in the bars and cabarets of belle époque Paris. He also shows how Monet, Degas and their friends paved the way for succeeding movements from fauvism, cubism and surrealism to conceptual art and abstract expressionism.
Director Tim Dunn
Series producer Silvia Sacco (R) (S) (AD) (HD)

The beagle has landed

Snoopy and Charlie Brown: the Peanuts Movie
★★★★ 1.05pm Film4 FREEVIEW

In the week we celebrate 50 years since landing on the Moon, let us not forget the contribution of a certain cartoon beagle to the space race. Snoopy and his Peanuts pals have long been mascots to Nasa, which issues the Silver Snoopy Award to recognise achievements in mission safety or success. The relationship hit new heights during the Apollo 10 mission, when Nasa named the command module Charlie Brown and lunar module Snoopy. Peanuts creator Charles M Schulz considered that to be the proudest moment in his career. JAMIE HEALY

P Damsel ★★★ 6.00pm Sky Premiere

Having riffed on the Coen brothers' classic Fargo in Kumiko, the Treasure Hunter, David and Nathan Zellner pay homage to an entire genre in this amiably meandering revisionist western. It's another questing saga, as it follows pioneer Samuel (Robert Pattinson) and Parson Henry (David Zellner) on a trek across the wilderness to rescue Samuel's beloved (Mia Wasikowska). Pattinson plays marvellously against type, and there are some knowingly droll performances from the supporting cast. DAVID PARKINSON

Cricket exposed

P The Edge ★★★
Sky Store/Virgin Movies

Documentarist Barney Douglas focuses on the intense pressure involved in representing England at test level in this insider look at cricket. Douglas makes splendid use of off-field tour footage and tempers the chronicle of England's rise with more troubling revelations from players including Andrew Strauss and Steve Finn. DP

TUESDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

FAITH TESTED

PICK OF THE DAY Keeping Faith 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA OF THE WEEK One of the biggest word-of-mouth hits of recent years returns, with the entire second series (first shown in Welsh on S4C) made available on iPlayer after this first episode airs. Series two picks up 18 months after the runaway Evan Howells (Bradley Freegard) lurched back into the lives of his solicitor wife Faith (Eve Myles) and their three children.

Writer Matthew Hall doesn't throw us straight into the explanations and recriminations, though, and teases us for a little while with glimpses of Faith's life now. It looks very much like her life before Evan vanished – she clip-clops around in spiky heels after noisy breakfast-times with her kids.

Ah, but so much has changed. Where's Evan, for starters, and what happened between husband and wife after he arrived home to find her kissing another man?

Hall throws us clues, intercut with Eve out of her depth as she defends a farmer accused of murdering her husband with a shotgun. ALISON GRAHAM

Ackley Bridge
8.00pm C4

DRAMA "Maybe we shouldn't be doing this," whispers one character, halfway through an episode in which virtually every Ackley Bridge pupil, teacher and parent ought to be saying that to themselves.

Rash decisions are everywhere in two stories that are familiar to viewers of soapy school dramas, but are done well nonetheless: while Rukhsana (Phoebe Tuffs-Berry) pings around the extremes of emotion in a family lacking parental guidance, teacher Sian (Ty Glaser) has to wake up to what dallying with a pupil might entail. Yet while last week you might have been shouting "No, Sian! What are you doing?" at the TV, tonight you're more likely to whisper it sadly, perhaps even wistfully. JACK SEALE

Planespotting Live/ Revolutions
8.00pm/9.00pm BBC4

TECHNOLOGY When BBC4 showed Trainspotting Live in 2016, a slip by Peter Snow made headlines ("GREAT TRAIN FIBBERY," roared The Sun) because he said he'd just seen a diesel engine going past when the footage had been filmed months earlier. Snow and co-presenters Andi Peters, Zoe Laughlin and Arthur Williams will tread carefully as they enlist viewers' help to spot different types of plane in UK airspace. The live programmes continue tomorrow and Thursday.

And if aviation is your thing, at 9pm Jim Al-Khalili takes flight in Revolutions: Ideas That Changed the World, which this week explores the aeroplane. DAVID BUTCHER

The Great Gardening Challenge
8.00pm Channel 5

GARDENING Hosts Diarmuid Gavin and Nicki Chapman have a deft way of shovelling the faux jeopardy, but as two teams create gardens for a Birmingham day centre that caters for people with physical and visual disabilities, an air of urgency grows.

After new design college graduates Millie and Max wrestle with an unwieldy water feature, they're also scuppered by a missing consignment of shrubbery. Millie spends most of their allocated 48 hours with a phone in the crook of her neck, trying to track down the missing order. As time edges near, there's still no sign. When it comes to herbaceous borders, this is as perilous as it gets. FRANCES TAYLOR

How the Middle Classes Ruined Britain
9.00pm BBC2

COMEDY "The Brexit vote was a wake-up call," says comedian Geoff Norcott at the start of this likeable polemic. "It showed one group of people have had their way for far too long." That group, he argues, are the wine-drinking, foreign-film-watching types who game the education system to get their kids into good state schools and gentrify poorer families out of their homes.

Norcott is fluent and funny, but he paints with a broad brush. His real targets are left-of-centre do-gooders (Norcott is that rarity – a Tory-voting stand-up). Still, there's fun to be had here, whether you agree with him or not. DAVID BUTCHER

Some careers lend themselves to maverick individuals, particularly on television. You don't get many unorthodox chartered accountants, for instance. Or cleaners. But when it comes to TV doctors, the Hippocratic oath isn't worth the paper it's written on.

For a while, I'd been thinking that the twist with recent arrival Kian in Holby City (8.00pm BBC1) would be that, despite his stubble and swagger, he'd turn out to be someone who adhered to the rules. But nope, as is revealed tonight, he's your classic charismatic nonconformist. In fact, he probably sleeps with a photo of ER's Doug Ross beside his bed.

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

He just won't take no for an answer tonight after being told the surgery he has lined up isn't essential. Instead, he does it anyway, roping in a starry-eyed Nicky McKendrick as a co-conspirator. In the real world, such a surgeon would be out on his ear, but you'll have to wait and see whether Kian can charm his way out of trouble. DAVID BROWN

Elementary

9.00pm Sky Witness

DRAMA Well, that sojourn in London didn't last long. After spending one week in the UK, Holmes and Watson are now in America again, having hared back to New York following the shooting of Inspector Gregson. Sherlock, of course, risks arrest if he sets foot on US soil, so you'd think he'd want to keep a low profile. But here he is, re-creating a crime scene by lying down in the middle of the road and combing a baseball pitch in search of evidence.

However, the authorities may end up thanking him, seeing as his shock discoveries could have a real impact on the rest of this final season. From this early vantage point, it seems Elementary may go out with a real bang. DAVID BROWN

Secrets of the National Trust

9.15pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY The inexhaustibly cheerful Alan Titchmarsh arrives at Petworth House in West Sussex for the first of a fourth series of these breezy peeks behind the locked doors of various National Trust properties.

The house proved a big inspiration to JMW Turner, who was a regular visitor and great friend of its owner, the third Earl of Egremont. Naturally it featured in many Turner paintings, and Titchmarsh can barely contain himself when he learns how many actually hang on Petworth's walls: "Twenty Turners in one house!" Yes!

To his delight, Titchmarsh is led into areas "strictly out of bounds to the public", including the boathouse and the room where Turner painted. AG

Crashing

10.05pm, 10.40pm Sky Atlantic

COMEDY DRAMA This autobiographical dramedy created by and starring Pete Holmes has a vibe that feels like the best kind of edgy romcom. With Judd Apatow co-writing and often directing, that's no surprise, and his mastery of awkward, subtle micro-humiliations runs through scene after scene.

Not always micro, either. For the finale of the series, struggling stand-up Pete gets what should be a huge break: major star John Mulaney wants Pete to open for him. Mulaney is great playing (a horrible version of) himself and there's also an excellent cameo from Amy Schumer, who in the first of tonight's episodes rubs salt in Pete's wounds beautifully. DB

LOVE HURTS
Nicola (Vicky McClure) and Adam (Perry Fitzpatrick) are far from a happy couple

I Am Nicola

10.00pm C4

DRAMA New series Two people kiss passionately at the start of director Dominic Savage's improvised drama. This, surely, is the very picture of love and devotion. But no, I Am Nicola, the first of three films featuring the experiences of women, is a painful portrait of a disintegrating relationship.

Vicky McClure (Nicola) and Perry Fitzpatrick (Adam) are excellent as a couple trapped in a cycle of recrimination, guilt and forgiveness. Adam is at first charming, but as he begins to question Nicola's devotion he is passive-aggressive before becoming out-and-out hostile.

Adam is clearly an unhappy man wrestling with emotions he can't cope with, while Nicola makes excuses for him, particularly after he flies off the handle at a friend's barbecue. Improvised dramas can be a trial (some might find the close camerawork off-putting), but this is both tender and sad. AG

Wild Way of the Vikings

9.00 How the Middle Class Ruined Britain
RT Working-class right-wing comic Geoff Norcott holds the middle class responsible for wrecking the country, and sets out to prove his case. His first target is education, and what he regards as the hypocrisy of liberal admirers of the comprehensive system who'll go to unethical lengths to secure places for their children at the best-performing schools. The comedian's argument extends to the gentrification of our big cities, a dating app for privately educated singletons, and the erosion of working-class voices in British politics.
Geoff ends his thesis with a private stand-up gig for students' union leaders, in an attempt to find out why they won't book his brand of blue-collar comedy for their universities. See page 82.

Indie's power couple

P Mistress America ★★★★★

11.20pm Film4 FREEVIEW

For a certain, artisan-bread-preferring stratum of film fan, the news in March that Greta Gerwig and Noah Baumbach had produced their first child together confirmed the pair as the indie power couple. They met when he cast her in Greenberg, and they've barely worked apart since, co-writing Frances Ha and Mistress America (review, p42), with Gerwig taking the lead under Baumbach's direction. She also provided a voice in his Meyerowitz Stories. We haven't heard the last from "Gerbach". (Yes, I made that up!) ANDREW COLLINS

Happy birthday, Daniel!

The Woman in Black ★★★ Netflix

The news that Daniel Radcliffe turns 30 today may bring on a mortality crisis to anyone who still gets the urge to wipe little Harry Potter's face with a hankie. I was shocked by his first appearance in 2012 jump-fest The Woman in Black, when his character, a qualified lawyer, is seen rocking a baby after his wife dies in childbirth. Flying nearly solo, he also carries the plane-set Beast of Burden (Sky Thriller) admirably. On more solid ground for the Hogwart's old boy, he'll be voicing Rex Dasher in Playmobil: the Movie, in cinemas 9 August. AC

The professional

The Day of the Jackal ★★★★★ 1.30pm TCM

A magnificent script and a masterly performance from Edward Fox as the assassin for hire form the backbone of this take on Frederick Forsyth's novel. But it's Fred Zinnemann's fine direction that makes it such compelling viewing and an object lesson in suspense. Inferior remake The Jackal leaves iPlayer today. DAVID PARKINSON

WEDNESDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

FINDING HER FEET
It's slow going for one-week-old African elephant, Safina

PICK OF THE DAY Animal Babies: First Year on Earth 9.00pm BBC2

NATURE New series The levels of cuteness are so off-the-scale high that you might find yourself a little light-headed, particularly as you watch tiny baby elephant Safina struggling splay-footed through mud before she's nudged to safety by her mother. The perfect Dumbo moment. Or maybe you'll pass out completely with delight as a sweet little mountain gorilla imitates the chest-beating of her alpha-male dad.

It's a charming hour, despite the use of that most deadly, clichéd and pointless of phrases "the planet's most iconic animals" (iconic of WHAT?) in the narration (from the blameless Wunmi Mosaku).

But there's a welcome resistance to making the whole thing Serengeti-sentimental, and there are a lot of interesting details about the rigid social hierarchies of the animals in question, including Sri Lanka's toque macacques. These beasts mean business, if you're not an alpha macaque, well, sorry – you'll probably die. ALISON GRAHAM See feature: page 26

Shop Well for Less?

8.00pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY Steph McGovern and Alex Jones return for another series of the consumer show that basically boils down to telling you not to buy expensive brand-name goods. But it's great fun and that's sound advice, so who cares? We're in Evesham, where John and Caroline have eight financially draining children and an attachment to particular washing powders, body sprays and cleaning products, all of which Caroline likes to stockpile.

The couple are very good sports, repeatedly falling into the trap of preferring a lesser-known product in a blind test – and the hosts do have some more sophisticated advice about sending the older kids to uni on the cheap. JACK SEALE

The Art of Architecture

8.00pm Sky Arts

DOCUMENTARY New series This ten-part series starts in suitably startling fashion. Santiago Calatrava, 67, has transformed architecture, his spectacular, graceful creations resembling things from the natural world. No blocks or slabs here; just fins and frills radiating from gleaming epicentres, from Lisbon to Liège and more recently New York, where he's helped revitalise Ground Zero with his World Trade Center Transportation Hub and its poignant "monument to life", the soaring Oculus.

It's an illuminating documentary, with the multitalented Calatrava communicating a passion for his craft well, in a rich Spanish sauce of a voice.

A profile of the influential Bauhaus school is at 9pm. MARK BRAXTON

Our Cops in the North

9.00pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY Northumbria Police officers arrive at a convenience store in Sunderland to find a 62-year-old woman, Joan Hoggett, has been randomly attacked by a masked man wielding a knife. She's been stabbed 19 times and later dies in hospital. The killer is 19-year-old Ethan Mountain, who has serious mental health problems. We follow the investigation, and it is hard to watch the distress of Joan's family when they learn that Mountain might not be charged with murder but with manslaughter due to diminished responsibility.

Elsewhere, detectives investigate a spree of crimes committed during 12 hours, including a mugging, a car theft and a pub burglary. AG

The Widower

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA Reece Shearsmith is powerfully creepy as Malcolm Webster, a real-life killer jailed for life in 2011 for the murder of his wife of just eight months, Claire. Using sedatives stolen from the Scottish hospital where he worked as a nurse, Webster drugged her, staged a road accident then set fire to the car with her unconscious body still inside. His motive was money.

The Widower, first shown in 2014, is co-written by Jeff Pope, an expert at these true-crime dramas, including Appropriate Adult and This Is Personal (about the serial killers Fred West and Peter Sutcliffe). Watch out for his latest impactful story, A Confession, coming soon to ITV. AG

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

The ambulance bay at Holby just hasn't been the same since paramedic Dixie left in 2016, but Casualty's loss proves to be Coronation Street's (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV) gain as Jane Hazlegrove (far right) joins the cast to play Gemma and Paul's mother Bernie. On first appearances, she seems to be in the Cilla Battersby-Brown errant mum mould, with a dash of Jackie Dobbs thrown in for good measure. As you'll discover, Bernie has a strained relationship with her children, having let them both down on numerous occasions. It seems that exasperation will be the watchword from the off – by Friday, an embarrassed Chesney will catch Bernie stark naked in the kitchen.

Talking of fleshy parts on display, we also have Kirk asking Aggie from the pharmacy for advice about a rash on his bottom. Can you imagine this being pitched in the writers' story conference? I'm surprised I didn't get a press release saying that Corrie is working very closely with the makers of E45 Cream on this emotional plotline. DAVID BROWN

James May's Toy Stories

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY Chiming in with another night of Planespotting Live, a repeat for the enjoyable 2012 doc, in which James May helps build a toy glider to fly the 22 miles across the Channel to France. As always, you sense that May is utterly devoted to the project, while all the necessary ingredients for compelling Boys' Own TV are there: balsa wood – more than 1,000 pieces of it – glue and the chance to have a pop at the French.

May's enthusiasm, the soaring beauty of his glider and a script that utilises every comedic opportunity – "more craftwork than a German night club" is a particular gem – prove a charming combination. TERRY PAYNE

Outlander

9.00pm More4

DRAMA Fans of Diana Gabaldon's Outlander books will be pleased as we get to know two of the novels' key characters. Firstly, there's Lord John Grey (David Berry). As a teen, John had a humiliating encounter with Jamie – now the tables have turned and he's governor of the prison where Jamie is festering. But their cautious mutual respect is challenged when a revelation revives old wounds.

In America, Claire and Frank are still together, just, for the sake of daughter Brianna (fan favourite number two). But as Bree (Sophie Skelton) turns 16 and Claire qualifies as a surgeon in mid-1960s Boston, the gloves are coming off. There's always been a third person in that marriage... could there be a fourth? GILL CRAWFORD

GameFace

10.00pm C4

COMEDY There isn't an awful lot to GameFace – no one learns any life lessons and it's not deep or thoughtful. But it's a good, quick hit of laughter, peppered with the occasional gross-out visual gag as failed actress Marcella (Roisin Conaty) tries to wrangle her increasingly chaotic life.

After last week's excruciating confrontation with the drunken and furious wife of her slimy ex Simon, she tries to mend fences with her soulful driving instructor Jon, who witnessed the debacle. But Marcella perfectly embodies the sheer sticky desperation of leaving increasingly manic and wildly inappropriate voicemail messages for someone you fancy.

There's also a great scene with her agent, who has no idea who she is. AG

A TASTE OF SCOTLAND
Fred Sirieix and Tom Kerridge eat their way around Edinburgh

Remarkable Places to Eat

8.00pm BBC2

FOOD Fred Sirieix and this week's guest chef, Tom Kerridge, arrive in Leith, Edinburgh, to give heaps of money-can't-buy free publicity to the chic restaurant, The Kitchin, run by Tom Kitchin. You'll have seen him on Saturday Kitchen. Not Kitchin.

With the best will in the world it's hard to see the point of this series – visit a classy restaurant, eat food, exclaim at its loveliness, help in the kitchen, say goodbye – but that doesn't mean it's not a cheery way to spend an hour. Once, of course, any initial resentment at watching two people eating great food to no great purpose dies down.

It's not all posh stuff, Sirieix and Kerridge also end up by the sea in Newhaven, not far from Edinburgh city centre, eating fish and chips from a takeaway. And there's a visit to a farm that produces high-end wagyu beef from cattle that enjoy a massage. AG

A Netflix exclusive

P The Great Hack ★★★★ Netflix

A terrifying documentary about the new era of data misuse, this starts with an animated segment before settling into more familiar campaigning mode. Among the featured subjects is New York design-school professor David Carroll, a man on a quest to acquire his own data. This fastidiously partisan account, also in cinemas today and directed by Oscar-nominated Karim Amer and Jehane Noujaim (The Square), relies heavily on us-versus-them testimony and conjures its own version of project fear. ANDREW COLLINS

Madchester revisited

Spike Island ★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

Director Mat Whitecross's tale of an unsigned group is set against the background of a seminal 1990 gig at Spike Island in Widnes by Manchester band the Stone Roses. The film is on a sure footing with the era's colloquial bravado, comedic street slang and inter-band rivalry, while the lively young cast includes Elliott Tittensor (Shameless), Nico Mirallegro (Rillington Place) and Emilia Clarke (Game of Thrones). With the music of the "Roses" buoying the mood throughout, Spike Island serves as a vibrant time capsule. AC

Halston ★★★★

Virgin Movies

Director Frédéric Tcheng's sleek documentary gives even the poorly dressed a handle on American designer Roy Halston Frowick, who virtually created the fashion business as we know it. Models and stars tell of Halston's lust for glamour and fame, only for his empire to crumble in the 1980s. KAREN KRIZANOVICH

THURSDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

A FINE ART
Fiona Bruce and Philip Mould attempt to crack another mystery: is this a Gainsborough?

PICK OF THE DAY Fake or Fortune? 9.00pm BBC1

ART "My balloon of hope has been inflated!" says Mark, owner of the mystery painting under the microscope as a new series starts. His hopes will shortly be popped, blown up again, let down, reinflated and stretched to breaking point as the investigation into what may be a famous lost landscape by Thomas Gainsborough winds through typically riveting ups and downs.

We know how good this series is at leading us down the trail of provenance, where a scrap of label on a picture frame or a flake of paint one way or the other can mean everything. Tonight there's a great scene where infrared photography looks at the putative masterpiece – a country scene of a "gypsies' repast" around a tree – and shows a ghostly portrait of a mystery woman that was painted over.

But when and by whom? If they call at enough lovely galleries and auction rooms and stately homes, we might find out... DAVID BUTCHER

Ross Kemp: Living with Homelessness

7.30pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY New series Cardiff's hostels have space for all of its rough sleepers, yet many still choose to live on the street. The reason, Ross Kemp discovers, is that they don't feel safe in the hostels, where many "clients" have mental health issues or are drug addicts, with all the challenges that brings. Of course it's impossible to understand what it's really like to be homeless simply by spending a night or two out on the street, although Kemp does his best.

A few hours sitting in a shop doorway makes him feel vulnerable, and, he says, like he doesn't exist. "We're all just a few misfortunes away from ending up on the street," he concludes. JANE RACKHAM

Serengeti

8.00pm BBC1

NATURE This week follows the Great Migration, which means stress for our animal friends, starting with the zebras, who must cross a fast-flowing river that bristles with hungry reptiles. For the lions, of course, there's no danger from other species, but hostility between families means death still threatens.

That's when you start to wonder who this series is aimed at: the insistence on giving every creature a name suggests cuddly family time, but tonight those trappings make the theme of babies potentially being torn apart in front of their mothers even more disturbing. Still, there's a great shot near the start, of a zebra foal accidentally making a monkey of a crocodile. JACK SEALE

Sewer Men

9.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY Take away the thrill of watching people hose, sweep and hydraulically pulverise faeces for a living, and this is a workaday example of the documentary genre where folk get on with what they're paid for. Still, a bit of childish fun goes quite a long way, as we ride with the Severn Trent Water employees who are out there rain or shine on the smelly front line, ridding the Midlands of blockages, often caused by baby wipes: Britain! Stop flushing baby wipes down the toilet!

If the Severn Trent lads are lucky it's a condom, or a fatberg, or they get to send Kyle the trainee down a manhole with a rat in it. It all makes for agreeable viewing rather than anything too fascinating. JS

Catch-22

9.00pm C4

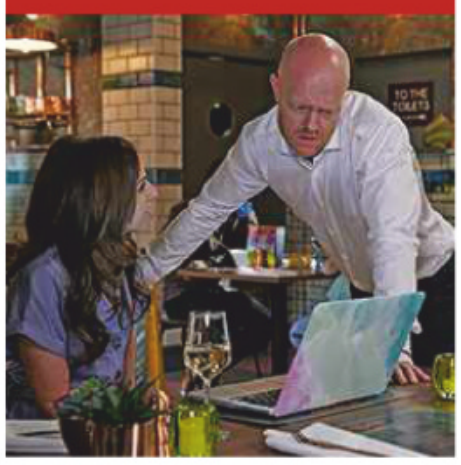
DRAMA There's a memorable and wrenching sequence in Joseph Heller's novel where Yossarian tends to a hideously wounded young airman and it's handled just perfectly here by director George Clooney in this final episode. You might need time to gather yourself afterwards, such is its raw power.

Yossarian is still flying missions, thanks to the vengeful General Scheisskopf (Clooney), despite a lucky escape after a direct hit. But as the madness, and the sadness, consume him, he is a lost soul. Christopher Abbott as Yossarian has done a fine job as one of modern literature's great mavericks, a man who tries so hard to beat the system. ALISON GRAHAM

Max on EastEnders (7.30pm BBC1) is doing what he does best: ie being a dirty old perv and having affairs with women half his age. First, there was Stacey, then it was Lucy, now we have Ruby (right) succumbing to his "charms". Well, I suppose it distracts us from 'Enders never having really managed to rehabilitate Max after that Weyland debacle, when he basically abandoned Jane Beale in a burning building.

There's never a shortage of people who have it in for Paul Robinson on

TODAY IN SOAPLAND



Neighbours (1.45, 5.30pm Channel 5). At one point, back in the dim and distant past, he built up so many enemies that the show came up with a "Who Pushed PR?" mystery, which saw him chucked from the Lassiter's mezzanine. Well, guess what? Paul is being targeted again, though in a slightly less imaginative way. What you'll see is him receiving a kicking from a shadowy assailant, but who is putting the boot in? The writers want you to think it's Gary, but my money's on Kyle. DAVID BROWN

Arabia with Levison Wood

9.00pm Discovery

TRAVEL Wood concludes his tour of the Arabian peninsula with an episode that has to limit his yen for long solo walks: he's in war-ravaged Syria, where a wrong turn in the car means big trouble at the hands of rebel groups. Being driven by a supporter of the now-dominant Assad government opens up the road to Damascus, where the lack of tourists is often the only taint on otherwise normal lives. Even further north in the rubble of Homs, civilians are determined to return to shattered neighbourhoods where communities once thrived.

Meeting ordinary people is Wood's strength and, as he crosses into Lebanon, he's got time to make one more memorable friend. JS

The Good Place

9.30pm E4

COMEDY Eleanor, Chidi, Jason and Tahani's faith in Michael is severely tested in this all-action instalment, which sees their careful plans apparently fall apart when Ted Danson' s demon jumps right back in with his old crowd. Or does he? Because lifelong cynic Eleanor (Kristen Bell) is convinced he's still on their side and leaving them secret clues to get them away from danger – even if he is still acting evil in public.

Whether she's right or not forms the backbone of the episode, which also builds an intriguing new set-up for the series, as our heroes plan to leave the fake-heaven torture chamber they've been trapped in so far. Time to finally head for the REAL Good Place... HUW FULLERTON

Inside the Bruderhof

10.35pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY The Bruderhof community of extreme Christians in Sussex could be seen as a bucolic utopia where no one is in need and there is no crime or homelessness. On the other hand, it could also be seen as a hell of communal living, with no telly and an awful lot of singing.

This glimpse at the Bruderhof has some surprises – it insists that at 18 its young people must go to live and work in the "real" world before deciding to commit. Less surprisingly, women must cover their hair, dress "modestly" and do domestic duties.

We follow teenager Hannah as she embarks on youth work in Peckham, staying at a Bruderhof house with other young members of her faith. AG

STRUGGLING
Ross from Port Talbot, with his daughter Evie

Broke

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY New series

This feels like a series that might bust a huge but under-reported political issue open: it follows some of the countless Britons who are in work but still desperately financially insecure.

Not all the participants fit the stereotype of the down-at-heel. Mark and Mimi look comfortably middle-class, but they rent their London home, have no retirement plan and rely on Mark's 60-hour week as a minicab driver to stay afloat. They're on a slippery slope of precarity: as Mark explains how calamitous it would be were his earnings to dip, we cut to Steve in Hastings, who did lose his job and now lives in a tent. Ross in Port Talbot, meanwhile, works so hard for so little that pursuing a hobby is barely possible. As one of the many anonymous contributors, who couldn't face being filmed but who lend their voices to the programme, says: it's surviving, not living. JS

In this series, nine households across Britain share their experiences during a year in which their financial future hangs in the balance. In Hastings, Steve and his son Billy lost both their jobs and their home, and now live in tents on the beach. Now they hope they can put a roof over their heads before winter closes in. Ross has worked full-time at Port Talbot's steelworks for 20 years but his pay hasn't kept up with the cost of living and he must work extra shifts to pay his mortgage. And in London, Mark was once a successful photographer, but is now an Uber driver facing an uncertain financial future. See page 103.

When director Richard Fleischer suggested Tony Curtis to play murderer Albert DeSalvo in this biopic (review, p44), studio chief Robert Zanuck rejected the 42-year-old comedy star out of hand. But Curtis was determined. He permed his hair and used putty to flatten his nose for some photos to fool Zanuck into thinking he was a young unknown. "I really fell for it, hook, line and sinker," Zanuck later recalled. Curtis didn't let Fleischer down, gaining 20 pounds and giving a heavyweight performance. TOM FOLLEY

Stanley Tucci stars here as an English professor and novelist who puts his career in jeopardy when he falls for a talented student (Addison Timlin). The film's subject matter, about a man abusing his position of power, is a subject ripe for exploration, yet it's only dealt with here in a very basic way. Elevating the material is the always interesting Tucci, offering a relatable performance opposite Timlin, who pulls an intriguing veil of innocence over her character's scheming. JAMES LUXFORD

Novelist William Golding's fierce morality tale about schoolboys marooned on a desert island is available on Channel 5's catch-up service until the end of the month. Director Peter Brook is probably best known for his work in the theatre, but he succeeds in keeping the tension as tight as a crossbow. TOM HUTCHINSON

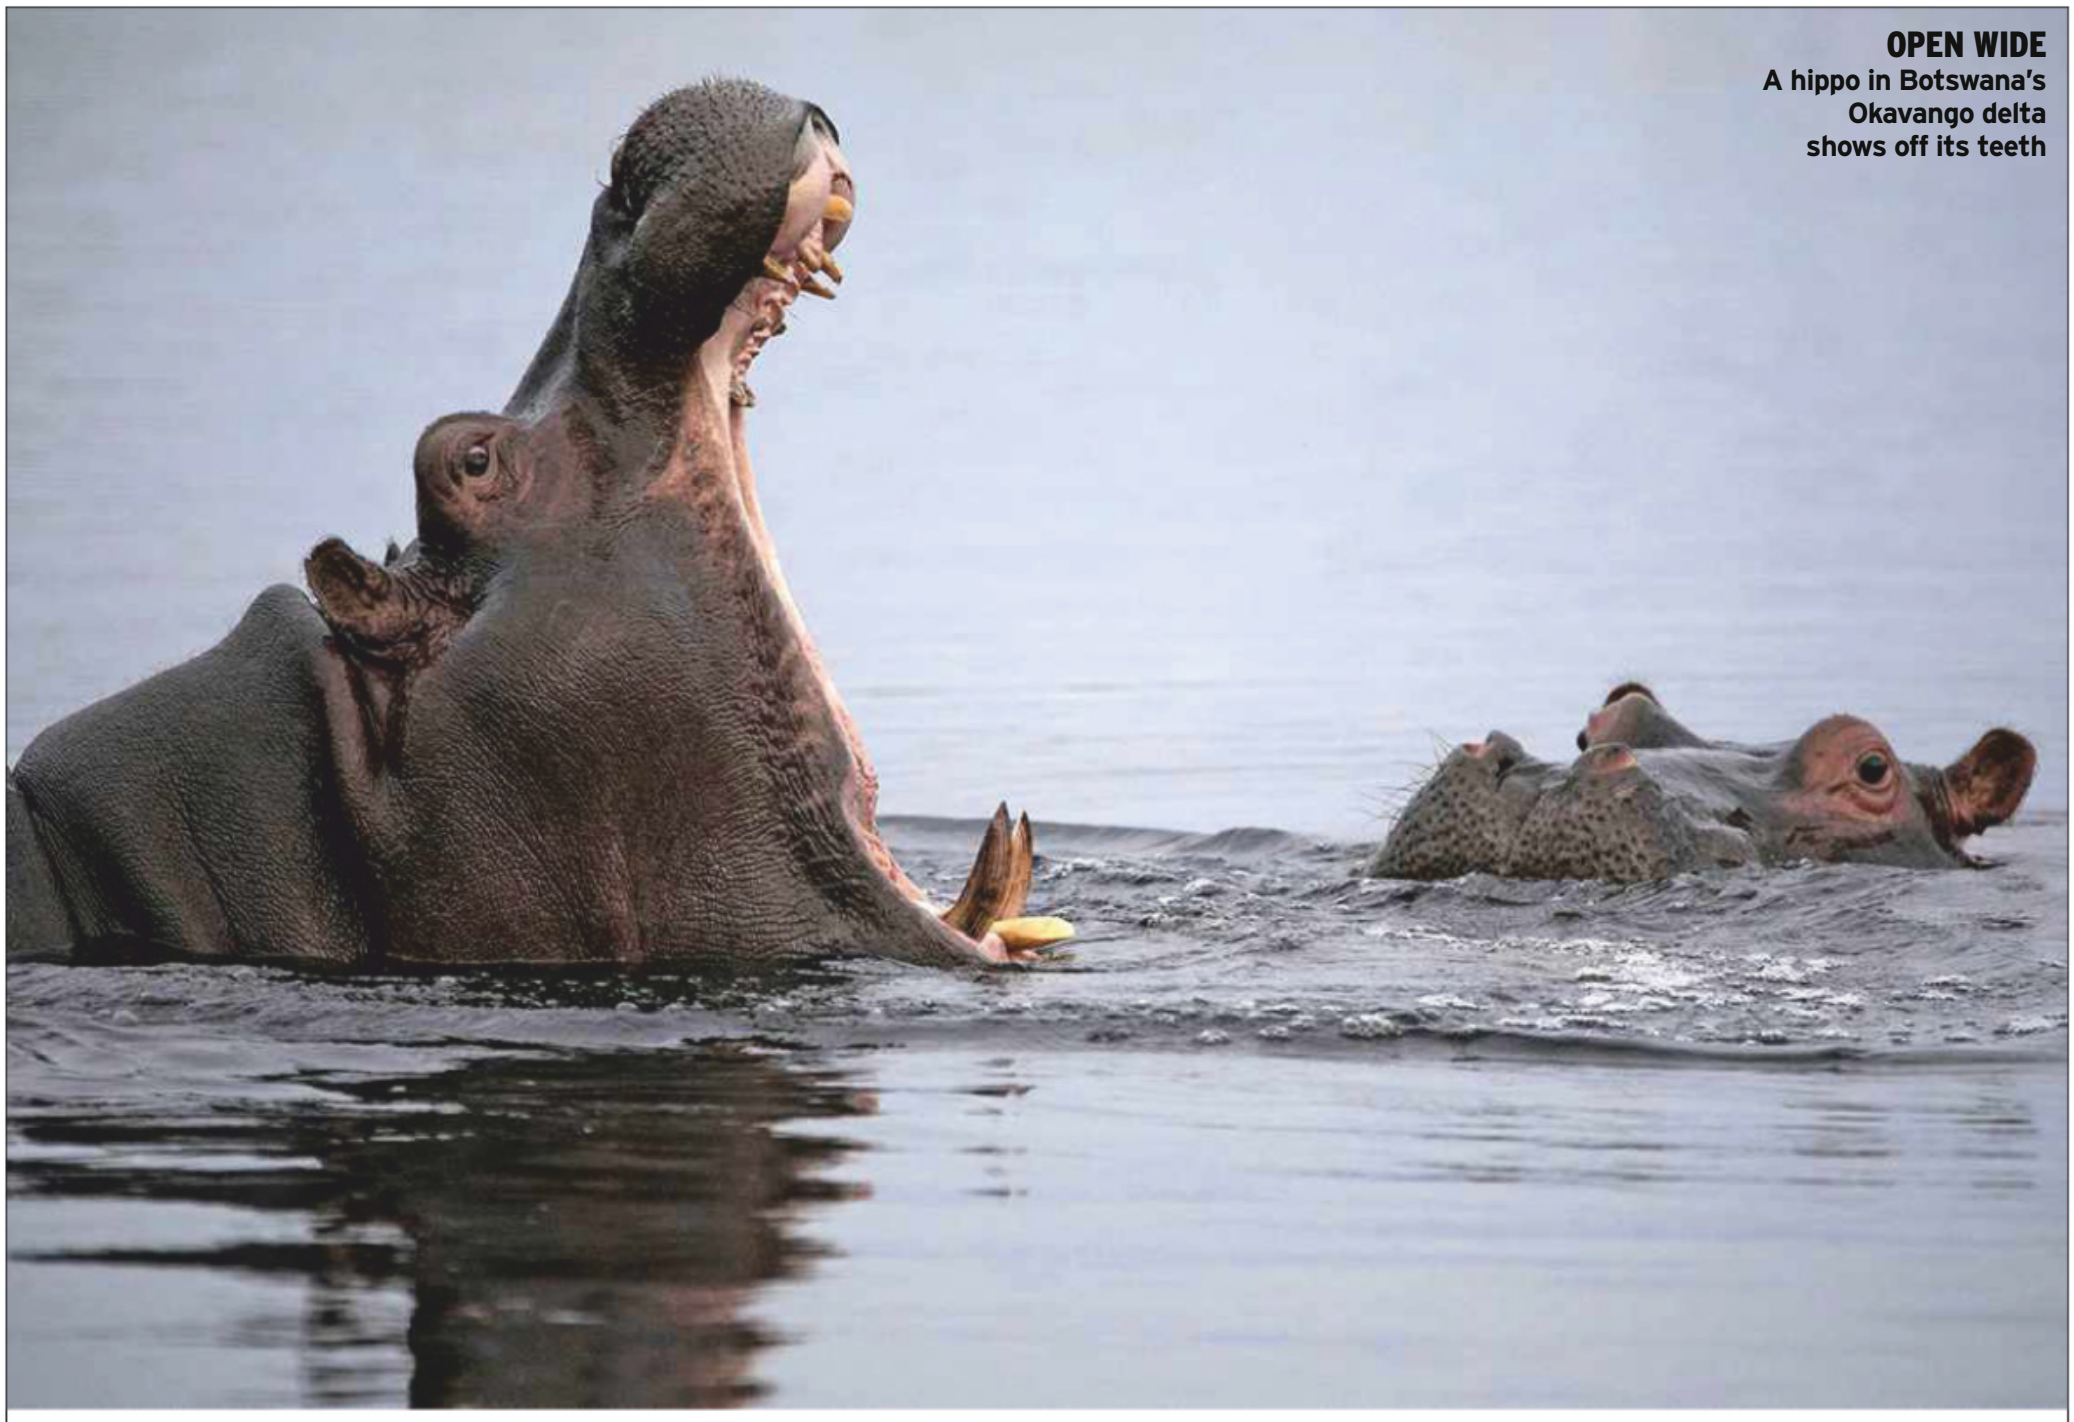
FRIDAY Choices The pick of today's TV



OPEN WIDE
A hippo in Botswana's Okavango delta shows off its teeth

PICK OF THE DAY Hippos: Africa's River Giants 9.00pm BBC2

NATURE The theory behind this lovely Natural World film is that hippos make the vast Okavango swamp in Botswana what it is. They shape the swamp, and they rule the waterways and pools. The whole ecosystem is a hippocracy, you could say. One of the joys of the film is seeing the tetchy interactions between hippos and other residents. We see a shirty hippo gaping at an elephant; confusing a leopard by sleeping under its tree; acting as take-off platform for an eagle; even, in one scene, seeing off a group of hungry lions. Basically, in any face-off between hippo and interloper, bet on the hippo.

As well as the drama captured here, the photography is splendid, so we get an intimate sense of hippos' lives above and below water, the expressions in their bulbous eyes, the cross hatchings and stipplings on their hides. And, of course, the whimsical sweetness of a newborn calf. DAVID BUTCHER

7.30pm, 11.00pm BBC4

MUSIC The BBC orchestras are the backbone of the season and tonight it's the BBC Philharmonic's turn to shine under the baton of their brilliant new chief conductor, Omer Meir Wellber, making his Proms debut. Pieces include Robert Schumann's Symphony No 4 in D minor and Mozart's Piano Concerto No 15 in B flat major. South Korean pianist Yeol Eum Son is the soloist.

At 11pm, there's a Late Night Prom I'm looking forward to savouring, as Public Service Broadcasting revisit their 2015 concept album, The Race for Space. The cult London band blend archive audio samples with an urgent beat to create a soundtrack evoking the 1960s quest to reach the Moon. PATRICK MULKERN

Rescue: River Deep, Mountain High

8.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY New series This will appeal to people who enjoy following lifeboat rescues on Saving Lives at Sea. It's not as grippingly good as that show, but then few things are. Nonetheless, the work of mountain rescue teams and other volunteer forces across the UK and Ireland still has that mixture of dedication, skill and drama, as members of the public who have ventured into the wild find nature biting back.

On Stanage, a craggy escarpment that rears over moorland in the Peak District, a climber has fallen, so the Edale Mountain Rescue team swing into action. And an American couple are lost in filthy weather on Ireland's highest mountain. DAVID BUTCHER

Celebrity Crystal Maze

8.00pm C4

ENTERTAINMENT This hilarious celebrity run of The Crystal Maze comes to an all-too-soon conclusion tonight, but at least it ends with the best collection of contestants yet.

Tackling the challenges under the watchful eye of Richard Ayoade are comedian Russell Kane, Strictly's Oti Mabuse, Naked Attraction's Anna Richardson and Love Island's Jack Fincham, all led by The League of Gentlemen's Steve Pemberton.

Overall, this series has seen some great new additions both to the Maze itself (the Eastern zone, the Mega Crystals) and Ayoade's one-liners – "enjoy the texture" is a personal highlight – so let's hope it's not long before we see more famous faces in the Crystal Dome. HUW FULLERTON

Agatha Raisin

9.00pm, 10.00pm Sky 1

COMEDY DRAMA This finale takes itself more seriously than previous episodes and is all the more satisfying for it. In fact, the whole series would have been much better if, like here, it had removed its tongue from its cheek for longer periods. It helps that the guest stars are all actors who rarely give bad performances (Pippa Haywood and Nicola Stephenson being particularly sparky), but it's the ramping up of the Agatha/James/Charles love triangle subplot that proves to be the smartest move.

As for the actual mystery, well, it's typical village whodunnit fare (a charismatic curate is killed) and there's a clue so obvious it should have come with a flashing neon arrow pointing at it. DAVID BROWN

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Gimlet-eyed Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV) fans will have clocked Kevin's keys being swiped by a passer-by the other day. Now, the consequences of the pickpocketing become apparent, when the culprit lets himself into number 13. Before you ask, the thief isn't after Kev's purple bomber jacket, even though it's one of TV's most recognisable coats and should really be displayed in a museum alongside Columbo's mac and Bianca Jackson's silver puffa. No, what the housebreaker is after are legal papers belonging to Paula. But what the villain hasn't counted on is Abi (left) taking him down before he can leg it with the documents.

Keegan on EastEnders (8.00pm BBC1) announces that Gray's success has inspired him to quit school. Deciding that he needs to address this, dad Mitch, in a style atypical to Walford, calmly and eloquently makes his case to Gray. Only kidding. They actually end up going at it like they're trying out for the Ultimate Fighting Championship. DAVID BROWN

Punk

9.00pm, 10.15pm Sky Arts

DOCUMENTARY The punk explosion isn't exactly under-represented in the music doc archives. But if Sky Arts' recent music series (such as The Art of Drumming) are any kind of barometer, this four-parter will be worth catching.

And it's tough to imagine anyone better qualified to present it than Iggy Pop, who's very much on home turf in the opener. It's about the Detroit proto-punk scene of the late 1960s, when MC5 and Iggy's band the Stooges (punks in all but name) put flower power to bed and ushered in a more direct incarnation of politically charged rock. Their sonic boom directly inspired the East Coast scene, with bands like the New York Dolls and the Ramones flipping the bird to prog pomposity. GARY ROSE

NCIS: New Orleans

9.00pm Fox

DRAMA This is one case that should come with a "viewers of a nervous disposition" warning. We're talking ritualistic mutilation, harvested organs, voodoo rituals... Honestly, it's like the writer watched Se7en before bed, scribbled down his subsequent nightmare and sent it off to NCIS. But then, once I noticed the Jack o'lanterns hanging in the team base, I realised what was going on: it's Halloween, hence the extra scares.

Amid all the gore and viscera, Pride gets involved in the investigation again, despite numerous warnings about the state of his health and the supposed need for him to recuperate. I don't know why he was given that desk job at the start of this season – he's never there. DAVID BROWN

Trump's Trade War

9.00pm PBS America

DOCUMENTARY Amid all the meticulous research and measured analysis of this excellent dissection of President Trump's belligerent stance against China, Steve Bannon stands out, ready to drop juicy details about how nasty and personal the weekly meetings of Trump's trade advisers were – and even suggesting that the endgame of the trade war is regime change in China.

He raises (or lowers, depending on your viewpoint) the doc into something approaching entertainment. Yet, away from loose cannon Bannon, insiders in both the US and China make serious points about how, despite the will of businesses in both countries, we could still be heading for a new Cold War. DAVID CRAWFORD

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA Crash, bang, wallop is the basic rule in this slick, action-comedy US cop show, back for a third season. Sadly, a similar principle applied off-screen: on-set ructions led to the firing of Clayne Crawford, who played Martin Riggs, in season two. Crawford was the best thing in the show, but though his rapport with co-star Damon Wayans as Roger Murtaugh looked golden, off-camera they hated each other.

So Crawford has been replaced by Seann William Scott, who comes in – eventually – as Murtaugh's new LAPD partner, Wesley Cole. An ex-CIA agent, Cole winds up writing parking tickets in LA after an operation in Syria ends badly.

Murtaugh, meanwhile, is still grieving Riggs's death, convinced his murder was part of a larger conspiracy. The new partnership works fine, but don't get too attached: Fox has now cancelled the show in the US. DAVID BUTCHER

9.00 Hippos: Africa's River Giants
RT With stunning footage, David Attenborough examines the life of the hippopotamus – a creature that cannot swim yet is completely dependent on water. In this Natural World film, we follow the hippos of Botswana's Okavango delta as the deep floodwaters dry to dust in the space of months. In one season, cameras go beneath the water's surface to watch them as they protect their families and face their enemies, to create a portrait of an animal that is compassionate, sensitive and highly intelligent. See page 112.

10.00 David Bowie and the Story of Ziggy Stardust
Jarvis Cocker narrates an insight into the singer/songwriter's creation of his alter ego, revealing how David Bowie's hairstyles, fashion sense, stage presentation and album The Rise and Fall of Ziggy Stardust and the Spiders from Mars turned him into a star. Ziggy's instant success gave the impression that he was the perfectly planned pop star, but, as this film reveals, it had been a momentous struggle for David Bowie to hit on just the right formula that would take him to the top. Featuring contributions from Elton John, Marc Almond, Holly Johnson, Peter Hook and Jon Savage.

Jordan twinned with Mars

The Martian ★★★★ 9.00pm Film4 FREEVIEW

The best place on Earth to view the Martian landscape is... Wadi Rum in southern Jordan. Ridley Scott made use of the site, called the Valley of the Moon, for Prometheus, and returned to film exterior shots for The Martian. It's not the first time the region has stood in for our planetary neighbour, with The Last Days on Mars (also showing tonight), Mission to Mars and Red Planet also exploiting its off-world feel. But before it became such a Martian hot spot, Wadi Rum cast its spell over David Lean, who would capture the majesty of its desert landscape in Lawrence of Arabia. TOM FOLLEY

Man with the golden gurn

P Johnny English Strikes Again ★★

8.00pm Sky Premiere

Rowan Atkinson's third outing as the bumbling British agent sees Johnny English returning to the intelligence community to thwart cyber hackers. Emma Thompson brings a touch of class as a highly strung Prime Minister (clearly modelled on Theresa May), and Ben Miller is back as English's put-upon sidekick, Bough. Atkinson's gift for physical comedy is very much to the fore, but this plays like a string of unconnected sketches rather than a solid narrative. TERRY STAUNTON

New to TCM this week

The Lion in Winter

★★★★★ 6.05pm TCM

Katharine Hepburn is on Oscar-winning form while verbally sparring with Peter O'Toole in this celebrated adaptation of James Goldman's play about Eleanor of Aquitaine and Henry II. The script and the performances are dazzling, while John Barry contributes a beautiful, melancholy score. ADRIAN TURNER

Let me tell you a story...

Andy Hamilton wants to have a chat about class, sport, politics – and nuns

Andy Hamilton Sort of Remembers
Tuesday 6.30pm Radio 4

THERE'S SOMETHING UNUSUAL about the room on the first floor at Hat Trick Productions: it has a door amid the largely open-plan layout, but there are other offices dotted around so it's not that; it has the requisite complement of functional grey and off-white furniture, so that much is also unremarkable; and there's a Tilley hat on one of the two desks that have been pushed together in the corner... but that's not it, either.

Then suddenly it dawns. There are no screens or keyboards. It's an office devoid of desktop computers. In fact, the only indications that the room is used for anything other than short-term storage are several colour-coded cards containing phrases such as "THE BENCH HAS BEEN REPAINTED" pinned to the walls.

This, it transpires, is because neither of the award-winning regular inhabitants – Andy Hamilton and his writing partner Guy Jenkin – uses a computer. "We just use a pencil and a rubber," says the 65-year-old Hamilton. "I'm regarded as a Luddite, which is unfair as I don't go around smashing up other people's personal computers, I just don't write on one myself, or carry a mobile phone. I don't get into a fury about technology, but I am sceptical because there is always a commercial imperative to sell it to us. I'm prepared to accept that the internet is probably going to catch on now, but I'm still pretty wary."

The deadpan delivery with a quizzical twist ("My eyebrow is naturally like that," he will tell the photographer later) is classic Hamilton and familiar from his appearances on panel shows including Week Ending, The News Quiz, QI and Have I Got News for You as well as other landmark series such as Old Harry's Game on Radio 4. He's also worked behind the camera, on Drop the Dead Donkey and Outnumbered on TV – the latter doubtless informed by living with his three children (now grown up) and wife Libby in south-west London.

All this has brought him a dedicated audience that delights in what the writer Philip Pullman has called "the sheer Hamiltonian joy in farce and the absurdity of human character". Hamilton has not heard the quote before and allows himself a humble half-smile.

Pullman went on to say, "He should never be off the radio, or the TV for that matter", so he'll be delighted a second series of Andy Hamilton Sort of Remembers begins on Radio 4 this week.

The show came about when a BBC producer overheard Hamilton telling anecdotes to an audience during a technical hiatus at the recording of a tribute programme to comedian Linda Smith in 2017. "She just went back to the BBC and said, Andy's been telling us all these stories, it's a shame there isn't a show where he can do that." The oversight was soon rectified.

The second series is again Hamilton's take on several big topics, with sport, class, religion and "stupidity" all falling under his steady gaze. It's personal and profound, and very funny.

"I want it to feel as relaxed as possible," Hamilton says. "I want people to feel they're down the pub with me and I'm hogging the conversation. There are elements of performance, but I try not to make it too 'performy'. And there is a structure, in the sense that I try to lace my memories together into an argument about things that have changed. I try to see a pattern across the years.

"When I was a teenager, for example, there was an assumption that class was dying and it was going to be a meritocratic world with free education and healthcare for all. It was a world where Michael Caine could make it as a film star, and I presumed this was a linear progression and would continue like that. So there is a bit at the end of the class programme where I talk to my 16-year-old self and try to explain it hasn't quite turned out like that. One of the lessons of growing older is that things don't automatically carry on. There is such a thing as progress, but it isn't necessarily a straight line."

QUICK THINKER
Hamilton on Have I Got News for You in 2017

'To be clear, I'm not advocating poisoning Trump'

The series touches on a variety of topics, among them the Grandstand theme tune in 1959 ("a producer Googled it for me"), fat sportsmen, kamikaze lies, his life as a choirboy, and the fact that the Chinese Terracotta Army was built to guard an emperor who thought he could make himself immortal by drinking large amounts of mercury. To the pay-off – "And if you're listening in the White House, Mr President, it definitely works" – he adds now, in the light of the furore surrounding Jo Brand's joke about not throwing milkshake but battery acid, "To be clear, I'm not advocating the poisoning of Donald Trump."

The emergence of a kind of comedy police patrolling social media is something Hamilton may tackle in a future series, but for now he's happy to go along with fellow comic David Mitchell's definition of it as "outrage tourism" – people often outraged on behalf of others.

"In comedy you use surreal language, or lots of quite subtle things like metaphor, nuance, ambiguity, and there is context," Hamilton explains, "but the outrage tourists seem to want to interpret everything literally and rope off whole areas of language. By doing so we will inevitably limit where comedy can go, and the most interesting comedy always happens on the margins."

"One of the reasons English is such a great language for comedy is that it's so bendy," he says. "And if a lot of literal-minded zealots start saying there are lots of words that shouldn't be used or risks that should never be taken, then we will end up with a very bland culture.

"There is a moment in the religion programme where I talk about punching a nun. Now, I honestly don't think that, on hearing a joke on a Radio 4 show, someone would suddenly think, 'Oh, wouldn't it be great to go out and punch a nun', but if you wanted to be very po-faced and literal-minded about it, you'd say, 'That's not something to joke about.'"

His fans, of course, won't. But if that's you, feel free to WhatsApp him directly. BILL BORROWS

PICK OF THE WEEK

Drama: Black Water: an American Story
Saturday 2.30pm Radio 4 FM

Amid the celebrations of the Moon landings, there is a darker 50th anniversary that should be remembered. On 18 July 1969, after leaving a party on Chappaquiddick Island in Massachusetts with Democratic Party campaigner Mary Jo Kopechne, Senator Ted Kennedy – brother of JFK and Bobby Kennedy – drove his car off a bridge into swampy waters. Kennedy swam free, left the scene and didn't report the accident to police for several hours. Kopechne died inside the submerged car.

Kennedy was found guilty of leaving the scene of an accident and handed a two-month suspended sentence. He remained senator for Massachusetts until his death in 2009.

Inspired by the incident, the grande dame of American letters Joyce Carol Oates (below) wrote her Pulitzer-nominated novel Black Water as a searing exploration of the dangerous romantic pull of powerful men to intelligent, idealistic women. At once informed by Chappaquiddick, yet universal in its themes – the contrary Oates often denies her novel has anything to do with Ted Kennedy.

This adept dramatisation by playwright Sarah Wooley retains the taut intelligence of Oates's prose and the fractured structure of the novel, as the scenes switch back and forth between the thoughts of Kelly, trapped in a car, and the Fourth of July party where she met and charmed a liberal senator over many drinks.

With another in a long line of womanisers in the White House – Roosevelt, JFK, Clinton, Trump – it's timely to have a cautionary tale of being seduced by power.

AMBRIDGE DIARY

The Archers this week...

Jim is in better spirits, though that doesn't stop Jazzer from supporting him by seeing off enquiries from Susan and Lynda. But when another resident criticises Jim's behaviour, Jazzer finds himself pushed to the edge. And he's not the only one seeing red: trouble is coming to the door of Grange Farm and, as Will discovers a horrifying truth, an angry confrontation has unforeseen consequences...

There's tension at Bridge Farm as Tom's lack of urgency over the pigs causes problems. Can he be convinced to find a new supplier?

And, finally, there is some happy news: little Rosie's first birthday is celebrated in style, even if Toby, the over-eager dad, goes way over the top. DAVID BROWN

BBC pay – sorted!

The answer is to pay them like taxis

THE BBC HAS finally found the guy to tackle its pickle over pay – me. The nice man who runs the place, Lord Doodah, has put me in charge of the whole malarkey. It's about time, too. I'm going to employ two trusty weapons. One is Terry Wogan, and the other is the truth.

The first home truth is that most of the media types rubbing their hands at the BBC pay revelations do so without revealing their pay packet. There may be good reasons for this, but it's true.

The media is a place of intense rivalry. One moment you're up, the next you're down, and for years the BBC's annual report was greeted like a paint-drying convention. "Look at that damp patch there! I'm sure it's got smaller while we were closing 6 Music and immediately saving it!" "I'm going to touch the woodwork now. I've just spent six hours reading about the bill for pencils in the organic ballpoint pen switchover!"

Splashing public money, the BBC makes for the most amazing headlines. Pay, fame, showbiz and more are all mixed together. "Claudia Winkleman, Vanessa Feltz, Betty Boop and Mavis Snodgrass are all paid squillions!" scream the headlines, written by correspondents sitting in newsrooms where there's a far greater gender pay gap than the BBC.

'Most presenters are like toddlers, with Hagrid-sized egos'

Radio Times can lift the lid on the media industry's worst-kept secrets:

3 Talent is equally spread between the genders.

Ooops, I said it.

This means that many BBC women are much better than I'll ever be. But it also means many men are paid more than other men. "Outrage as funny little thing with big teeth is paid less than Gary Lineker" isn't a great headline.

So now that I'm in charge, how am I going to sort it all out? Well, I'm going to stop treating them like spoilt toddlers and instead treat them like taxis. Instead of a rate per mile, I'll introduce a flat rate per viewer and per listener.

I'm going to level the field between TV, radio, online and mobile. When I worked in TV, some time during the reign of Queen Victoria, I'd be paid more than working on radio.

SO I'M STOPPING all that. I'll introduce a multiplier for times of day and specialist programmes. This will be a decision taken by a group on which the licence-fee payer will sit. This group could double or triple the flat rate. Naturally, BBC colleagues who risk life and limb would be paid more, and Sir David Attenborough would be paid at the current planet-saving rate.

Which brings me to Terry Wogan. He used to justify his pay packet by asking people to think in terms of it being divided by the number of listeners he had – around eight million.

And guess what, Terry had fewer listeners than Chris Evans or Zoe Ball – and they're both paid more than he was. Case proved.

Next week, I'll sort Brexit.

SOUND BITES

BY DAVID HEPWORTH

Knowing your place on the cricket field

I've long thought that most of the things we really need to learn in our school years we actually learn before the age of 11. I'm talking about the alphabet, the times tables, basic laws of grammar, 30 days hath September, i before e except after c, and all the other things that if you're lucky were dinned into you by rote. Rarely does a week go by in your adult life without you drawing on this rich storehouse of useful stuff.

Summer fun at silly mid-on Another thing I was lucky to be taught at primary school was the fielding positions on the cricket field. By the age of nine I must have known where fine leg, silly mid-on, mid-wicket, deep cover and all the rest were. This knowledge was put to use during those long summers in the early 1960s when the main daytime entertainment was provided by the Test match. One of my earliest memories of listening to the radio was hearing the commentator John Arlott (pictured right) list the England players and the positions they'd taken up. The words with which he always seemed to finish – "and Shepherd in the gully" – are as deeply evocative to me as Dogger and German Bight from the Shipping Forecast are to so many others.

Happy days in cow corner

This is knowledge I still make use of today. It was in full effect during the recent Cricket World Cup, which I followed through Test Match Special on 5 Live Sports Extra. I can't access live cricket on TV and I even find the Channel 4 highlights of a limited-overs game to be just a procession of boundaries with no context, which after a while is plain dull. One of the cardinal virtues of cricket as a radio sport is that once you know the field positions you can conjure a perfect mental picture of the arena and the accurate state of the drama. Phrases like "stroked it through the covers" or "heaved it to cow corner" are addressing those who know these positions.

Radio has the best pictures

Only cricket enjoys this incalculable advantage when it comes to sports broadcasting. In football commentary we rely on the note of panic in the commentator's voice to tell us where the ball is. In tennis we haven't a clue. One of the clichés about top-class sport is that it's mainly played in the head. Assuming somebody has taught us the fielding positions and we have access to Test Match Special, it's also a game we can watch in the head.

Moon landing 50th anniversary

All day Various channels

The countdown is over and we have lift-off. The actual day of the 50th anniversary of the first Moon landing is upon us, and lunar life is everywhere on the radio airwaves. It's great that James Burke, who anchored the BBC TV coverage in July 1969, is still around to look back in Archive on 4: James Burke – Our Man on the Moon (8pm, Radio 4), while devotees of 13 Minutes to the Moon, the riveting, Kevin Fong-fronted World Service series, won't want to miss tonight's climactic episode (7.05pm), coming live from Rice University in Houston, Texas – the place where, in 1962, John F Kennedy delivered his "We choose to go to the Moon" speech. Brian May's 1969 (9pm Radio 2) takes its inspiration from Apollo 11, while another Brian – Professor Cox – presents a special edition of The Infinite Moonkey Cage at 10am on Radio 4. SIMON O'HAGAN

BBC Proms 2019

7.30pm Radio 3

There's a certain historical irony in the fact that tonight's rare Proms outing for the whole of Czech composer Bedrich Smetana's six-part patriotic cycle Má vlast ("My Homeland") is being given by the Bavaria-based Bamberg Symphony Orchestra, originally formed in 1946 by fleeing members of the German Philharmonic Orchestra of Prague, which had been created by the Nazis specifically to keep Czech music in its place. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Today's Choices

Michael Caine – What I Know Now

9.00pm Radio 2

Aside from being one of the greatest screen actors of our time, Michael Caine (above) is also a great storyteller. He's written half a dozen books (with titles like What's It All About? and Blowing the Bloody Doors Off). But there's nothing like hearing Caine – so observant and funny – tell the stories himself. In the first part of this terrific portrait, he speaks from his London flat, which overlooks the Elephant and Castle district where he was born. Because he has done so much and met so many people in a career that has lasted more than 65 years, almost everyone he mentions is brought out of the archive to share their own memories. Unquestionably one of the week's highlights. Next week: Hollywood. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Desert Island Discs

11.15am Radio 4

Widespread sadness greeted the announcement from Kirsty Young two weeks ago that her absence from the Desert Island Discs' presenter's chair would be permanent. Sidelined because of ill health since last year, Young had presented 496 editions of the show going back to 2006, when she succeeded Sue Lawley. An interviewer of great poise, neither sycophantic nor hostile, she drew out her guests with subtle, skilful questioning, and her tenure is over all too soon. Young's stand-in, Lauren Laverne, continues for the foreseeable future, Radio 4 says, and she may yet take over permanently. Today's castaway should suit Laverne down to the ground – the great punk poet John Cooper Clarke. SIMON O'HAGAN

Today's Choices

The Colour of Justice
8.00pm Radio 4

Black, Asian and ethnic minority groups make up just seven per cent of the UK's court judges, but they comprise 25 per cent of the prison population, and 41 per cent of those in the youth justice system. These statistics come from a recent Government review that points to a clear issue within Britain's judiciary: its homogeneity. Edward Adoo brings a fascinating personal element to his report: his grandfather was Julius Sarkodee-Adoo, a former chief justice of Ghana who received his legal training in London in the 1930s. As far back as 20 years ago the then Government criticised the judiciary's lack of diversity, and Adoo talks to those on both sides of the bench to find out what's going on.

HANNAH SHADDOCK

The Conversation: Motherhood Multiplied
11.30am/10.30pm
BBC World Service

Motherhood is never easy. But when one bundle of joy becomes a pack, unique challenges ensue. In Texas, stay-at-home mother Lauren Perkins has lived in "semi-controlled chaos" since she had sextuplets in 2012, including a daughter with significant special needs. Meanwhile, Inga Mafenuka is on a mission to keep her one-year-old quadruplets from "taking down everything" in her two-bedroom house in Cape Town, alongside working in retail and studying IT. Kim Chakanesta talks to these women about the experiences they share, and the role that female networks play in helping them cope.

Today's Choices

From College to Clink

8.00pm Radio 4

Away from the penal institution bubble it's widely felt that they are "stupid, thuggish and enjoy violence". But it's not the inmates we're talking about but the warders. Thanks to a scheme called Unlocked Graduates, you'll realise by the end of this immensely interesting programme how unfair this assumption is. Lucy Ash follows a group of new recruits, and with degrees such as criminology, psychology and politics under their belts they would seem to possess a good grounding for working as prisoner officers. But do they have the strength to withstand name-calling, threats of violence and actual violence?

Israeli-born but with a German musical grounding from his time as a former assistant conductor to Daniel Barenboim in Berlin and as the current principal guest conductor at the Dresden Opera, the BBC Philharmonic's new chief conductor, Omer Meir Wellber, makes his Proms debut tonight with a programme that marries two Austro-German classics – Mozart's Piano Concerto No 15 and Schumann's Fourth Symphony – with music by two Austro-German Jews who were driven into exile by the Third Reich: Arnold Schoenberg, inventor of serialism, and Paul Frankenburger, who renamed himself Paul Ben-Haim after emigrating to Palestine.

Today's Choices

BBC Proms 2019

7.30pm Radio 3

Granada's Moorish palace, the Alhambra, has already inspired memorable musical works by Tárrega, Albéniz, De Falla and Debussy, among others. Tonight's Prom adds to the list, as Hungarian composer-conductor Peter Eotvos presides over the UK premiere of his own Alhambra, a new violin concerto unveiled just 12 days ago in Granada itself. The soloist tonight, as then, is the work's co-dedicatee, German violinist Isabelle Faust (above), who writes in this year's Proms Guide of being "immediately transfigured" by the piece's "exotic lightness, dancing elegance and capricious temperament"; in Eotvos's score, she says, "the Alhambra has become music". Framing this new concerto are three dance-themed works – by Debussy, Bartok and Stravinsky – that were all introduced to the UK by Proms founder-conductor Henry Wood. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Stranger than Sci-Fi

9.00pm Radio 4

In the latest episode in this seeringly entertaining series, astrophysicist Dr Jen Gupta and comedian Alice Fraser look at the parallel worlds of science and sci-fi. Their starting point is the fiction arena – books and films that seem too strange to be true. Yet, as the pair discover, the modern world really is nipping at the heels of these flights of fancy. In last week's episode, they pointed the microscope at babies grown in bags, and this week it's the turn of Claire Denis's film High Life and the science of black holes. But can those mysterious voids ever really be employed as limitless sources of energy? SUE ROBINSON

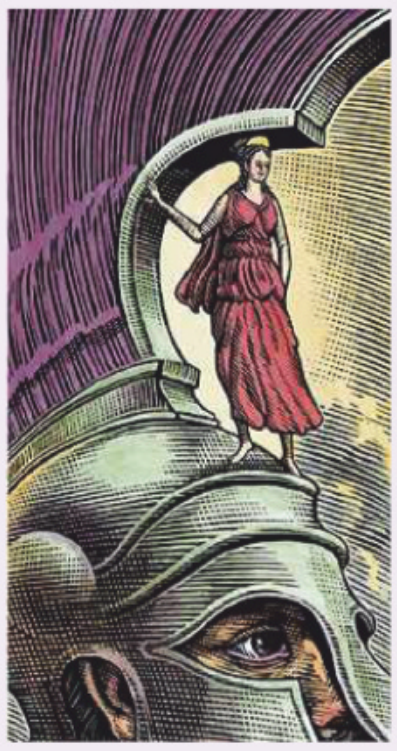
Today's Choices



The Forum
9.05am/12.05am BBC World Service

There is a scene in the Hollywood movie 300 when, confronted by a Persian messenger, Spartan king Leonidas kicks him down a well. Cue two hours of video-game blood, gore and CGI. The movie is a no-holds-barred reimagining of one of Ancient Greece's more eminent battles and the brutality depicted is rooted in truth; Sparta was indeed quick to dish out discipline, whether to invading armies, slaves and even its own children. In this edition of The Forum, however, Bridget Kendall and her guest professors put to the sword some of popular culture's fiercer representations of this strangest of societies. With In Our Time on its summer break, this is one for any curious minds missing Melvyn. TOM GOULDING

BBC Proms 2019
7.00pm Radio 3

Written for tonight's soloists, Swedish trumpet superstar Hakan Hardenberger and his Belgian colleague Jeroen Berwaerts, Swedish composer Tobias Brostrom's Nigredo was premiered in Malmo in March. Ominously subtitled Dark Night of the Soul and inspired by Carl Jung's redefinition of the old alchemical concept of "nigredo" (blackness) as, in Brostrom's words, "a moment of ultimate desperation that is a prerequisite for personal development", it's scored for a large orchestra plus huge battery of percussion, including such oddities as a waterphone, wind gong, four brake drums, Chinese temple bells, African thumb piano, sandpaper blocks and an "old-fashioned door/alarm bell". MARK PAPPENHEIM

FRIDAY Radio

Today's Choices

The Specials
11.30am Radio 4

Another Radio 4 sitcom pilot but a word of warning: this is not Madam Mayor. Jenny Laville, previously a contributor to the likes of Newsjack and The News Quiz, has been given a solo commission, and the result is issue-based family comedy that requires a level of indulgence. It's built around Alice (Ruth Jones, above) a single mother with a son on the autistic spectrum and a father who, for comedy purposes, is not dissimilar. It's set and was recorded in Wales, but for no apparent reason. There are no jokes as such, but plenty of comic observation ("He's not so much an open book as a free pamphlet"). Difficult to imagine where the situation might go. Possibly the jury will disagree as to whether the comedy/autism set-up works. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Music Planet at Womad
10.00pm Radio 3

Radio 3 has been broadcasting Womad for 20 years – testimony to the network's appetite for the new and the different, but not just any new and different. The quality of the music at Womad – the world music festival held every year in Charlton Park in Wiltshire – is breathtaking, the range mind-boggling. You feel it couldn't happen without the spirit of openness that Lopa Kothari brings to proceedings, and the wonderful longtime presenter of World on 3, the Friday night Radio 3 show recently reconfigured as Music Planet, presides this evening when the offerings range from southern Italy's Canzoniere Grecanico Salentino to Saharan Tuarag group Les Filles de Illighadad. SIMON O'HAGAN

Face behind the voice

Alan Raw BBC Music Introducing in West Yorkshire

Current job Introduces unsigned/undiscovered acts on BBC Music Introducing in West Yorkshire (Sat 8–10pm). He is also CEO of the Creative & Cultural Company, a not-for-profit social enterprise in Hull.
CV Grew up in Hull, in a family of musicians. Alongside radio, he mentors aspiring artists and musicians: "I didn't do very well at school, mainly because I'm very dyslexic. I went to university at 25 to study youth, community work and counselling, and spent many years working in that field."
Best moment "Introducing bands at Radio 1's Big Weekend – an opportunity to shout about acts who I think deserve a big audience. Also, starting the BBC Introducing stage at Leeds Fest."
Worst moment "At Leeds Fest, the power went off and I ended up talking to the audience with a megaphone for an uncomfortably long time. I wasn't the entertainment they hoped for."
Off air "I'm a happy dad, to a lovely boy. I also do a night called 360RAW, with my pal Richard Watson in Leeds. It's multi-genre and I get to play the stuff I can't really play on radio."
First radio break BBC Radio Humberside approached him at a music festival he put on: "I was the person who went on to introduce the bands, mainly because I couldn't find anyone else to. They said I wasn't too bad at it and asked me to do it on the radio."
Favourite broadcasters "I've aspired to be half as good as the late great John Peel. We became friends and I learnt a lot from that relationship."
Ambition "To DJ at Glastonbury. I've played the drums there before and that was loads of fun. It would be nice to go back with just a case full of tunes."
Dream job "Combining my work as an art curator with my work in music to do something really big, with lots of artists involved. I don't know what shape that would take, but that's part of the fun."
Secret skills "I have a little hobby that I've done since I was a kid – martial arts. I'm a black belt – I once featured in Martial Arts Illustrated when I was doing it in Las Vegas." MEG FIRTH

Alan Raw BBC Music Introducing in West Yorkshire

Current job Introduces unsigned/undiscovered acts on BBC Music Introducing in West Yorkshire (Sat 8–10pm). He is also CEO of the Creative & Cultural Company, a not-for-profit social enterprise in Hull.
CV Grew up in Hull, in a family of musicians. Alongside radio, he mentors aspiring artists and musicians: "I didn't do very well at school, mainly because I'm very dyslexic. I went to university at 25 to study youth, community work and counselling, and spent many years working in that field."
Best moment "Introducing bands at Radio 1's Big Weekend – an opportunity to shout about acts who I think deserve a big audience. Also, starting the BBC Introducing stage at Leeds Fest."
Worst moment "At Leeds Fest, the power went off and I ended up talking to the audience with a megaphone for an uncomfortably long time. I wasn't the entertainment they hoped for."
Off air "I'm a happy dad, to a lovely boy. I also do a night called 360RAW, with my pal Richard Watson in Leeds. It's multi-genre and I get to play the stuff I can't really play on radio."
First radio break BBC Radio Humberside approached him at a music festival he put on: "I was the person who went on to introduce the bands, mainly because I couldn't find anyone else to. They said I wasn't too bad at it and asked me to do it on the radio."
Favourite broadcasters "I've aspired to be half as good as the late great John Peel. We became friends and I learnt a lot from that relationship."
Ambition "To DJ at Glastonbury. I've played the drums there before and that was loads of fun. It would be nice to go back with just a case full of tunes."
Dream job "Combining my work as an art curator with my work in music to do something really big, with lots of artists involved. I don't know what shape that would take, but that's part of the fun."

Face behind the voice

Alan Raw BBC Music Introducing in West Yorkshire

Current job Introduces unsigned/undiscovered acts on BBC Music Introducing in West Yorkshire (Sat 8–10pm). He is also CEO of the Creative & Cultural Company, a not-for-profit social enterprise in Hull.
CV Grew up in Hull, in a family of musicians. Alongside radio, he mentors aspiring artists and musicians: "I didn't do very well at school, mainly because I'm very dyslexic. I went to university at 25 to study youth, community work and counselling, and spent many years working in that field."
Best moment "Introducing bands at Radio 1's Big Weekend – an opportunity to shout about acts who I think deserve a big audience. Also, starting the BBC Introducing stage at Leeds Fest."
Worst moment "At Leeds Fest, the power went off and I ended up talking to the audience with a megaphone for an uncomfortably long time. I wasn't the entertainment they hoped for."
Off air "I'm a happy dad, to a lovely boy. I also do a night called 360RAW, with my pal Richard Watson in Leeds. It's multi-genre and I get to play the stuff I can't really play on radio."
First radio break BBC Radio Humberside approached him at a music festival he put on: "I was the person who went on to introduce the bands, mainly because I couldn't find anyone else to. They said I wasn't too bad at it and asked me to do it on the radio."
Favourite broadcasters "I've aspired to be half as good as the late great John Peel. We became friends and I learnt a lot from that relationship."
Ambition "To DJ at Glastonbury. I've played the drums there before and that was loads of fun. It would be nice to go back with just a case full of tunes."
Dream job "Combining my work as an art curator with my work in music to do something really big, with lots of artists involved. I don't know what shape that would take, but that's part of the fun."

Face behind the voice

Alan Raw BBC Music Introducing in West Yorkshire

Current job Introduces unsigned/undiscovered acts on BBC Music Introducing in West Yorkshire (Sat 8–10pm). He is also CEO of the Creative & Cultural Company, a not-for-profit social enterprise in Hull.
CV Grew up in Hull, in a family of musicians. Alongside radio, he mentors aspiring artists and musicians: "I didn't do very well at school, mainly because I'm very dyslexic. I went to university at 25 to study youth, community work and counselling, and spent many years working in that field."
Best moment "Introducing bands at Radio 1's Big Weekend – an opportunity to shout about acts who I think deserve a big audience. Also, starting the BBC Introducing stage at Leeds Fest."
Worst moment "At Leeds Fest, the power went off and I ended up talking to the audience with a megaphone for an uncomfortably long time. I wasn't the entertainment they hoped for."
Off air "I'm a happy dad, to a lovely boy. I also do a night called 360RAW, with my pal Richard Watson in Leeds. It's multi-genre and I get to play the stuff I can't really play on radio."
First radio break BBC Radio Humberside approached him at a music festival he put on: "I was the person who went on to introduce the bands, mainly because I couldn't find anyone else to. They said I wasn't too bad at it and asked me to do it on the radio."
Favourite broadcasters "I've aspired to be half as good as the late great John Peel. We became friends and I learnt a lot from that relationship."
Ambition "To DJ at Glastonbury. I've played the drums there before and that was loads of fun. It would be nice to go back with just a case full of tunes."
Dream job "Combining my work as an art curator with my work in music to do something really big, with lots of artists involved. I don't know what shape that would take, but that's part of the fun."

Face behind the voice

Alan Raw BBC Music Introducing in West Yorkshire

Current job Introduces unsigned/undiscovered acts on BBC Music Introducing in West Yorkshire (Sat 8–10pm). He is also CEO of the Creative & Cultural Company, a not-for-profit social enterprise in Hull.
CV Grew up in Hull, in a family of musicians. Alongside radio, he mentors aspiring artists and musicians: "I didn't do very well at school, mainly because I'm very dyslexic. I went to university at 25 to study youth, community work and counselling, and spent many years working in that field."
Best moment "Introducing bands at Radio 1's Big Weekend – an opportunity to shout about acts who I think deserve a big audience. Also, starting the BBC Introducing stage at Leeds Fest."
Worst moment "At Leeds Fest, the power went off and I ended up talking to the audience with a megaphone for an uncomfortably long time. I wasn't the entertainment they hoped for."
Off air "I'm a happy dad, to a lovely boy. I also do a night called 360RAW, with my pal Richard Watson in Leeds. It's multi-genre and I get to play the stuff I can't really play on radio."
First radio break BBC Radio Humberside approached him at a music festival he put on: "I was the person who went on to introduce the bands, mainly because I couldn't find anyone else to. They said I wasn't too bad at it and asked me to do it on the radio."
Favourite broadcasters "I've aspired to be half as good as the late great John Peel. We became friends and I learnt a lot from that relationship."
Ambition "To DJ at Glastonbury. I've played the drums there before and that was loads of fun. It would be nice to go back with just a case full of tunes."
Dream job "Combining my work as an art curator with my work in music to do something really big, with lots of artists involved. I don't know what shape that would take, but that's part of the fun."

Face behind the voice

Alan Raw BBC Music Introducing in West Yorkshire

Current job Introduces unsigned/undiscovered acts on BBC Music Introducing in West Yorkshire (Sat 8–10pm). He is also CEO of the Creative & Cultural Company, a not-for-profit social enterprise in Hull.

CV Grew up in Hull, in a family of musicians. Alongside radio, he mentors aspiring artists and musicians: "I didn't do very well at school, mainly because I'm very dyslexic. I went to university at 25 to study youth, community work and counselling, and spent many years working in that field."

Best moment "Introducing bands at Radio 1's Big Weekend – an opportunity to shout about acts who I think deserve a big audience. Also, starting the BBC Introducing stage at Leeds Fest."

Worst moment "At Leeds Fest, the power went off and I ended up talking to the audience with a megaphone for an uncomfortably long time. I wasn't the entertainment they hoped for."

Off air "I'm a happy dad, to a lovely boy. I also do a night called 360RAW, with my pal Richard Watson in Leeds. It's multi-genre and I get to play the stuff I can't really play on radio."

First radio break BBC Radio Humberside approached him at a music festival he put on: "I was the person who went on to introduce the bands, mainly because I couldn't find anyone else to. They said I wasn't too bad at it and asked me to do it on the radio."

Favourite broadcasters "I've aspired to be half as good as the late great John Peel. We became friends and I learnt a lot from that relationship."

Ambition "To DJ at Glastonbury. I've played the drums there before and that was loads of fun. It would be nice to go back with just a case full of tunes."

Dream job "Combining my work as an art curator with my work in music to do something really big, with lots of artists involved. I don't know what shape that would take, but that's part of the fun."

Secret skills "I have a little hobby that I've done since I was a kid – martial arts. I'm a black belt – I once featured in Martial Arts Illustrated when I was doing it in Las Vegas." MEG FIRTH

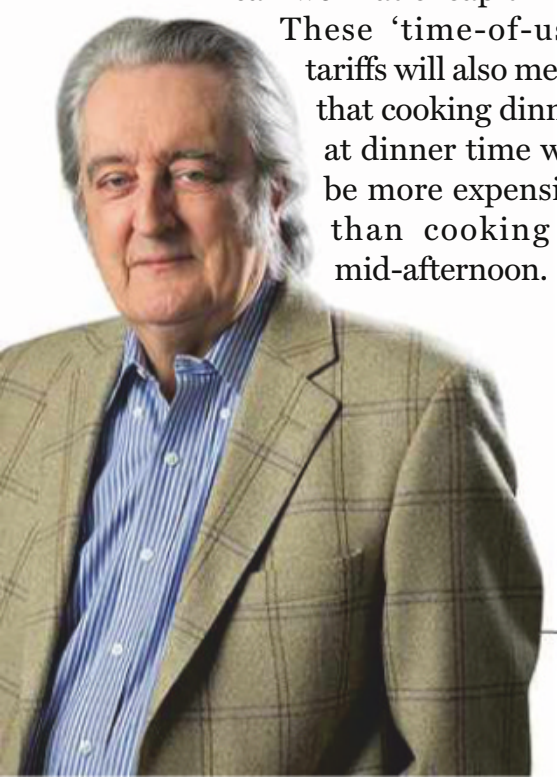
Should I get a smart meter?

If you don't know the difference between a SMETS1 and a SMETS2, Paul Lewis has the answer

Is it time to give in to demands from your energy supplier to replace your mechanical electricity and gas meters with a new smart meter? Sadly, my answer is still "not yet".

Smart meters tell your supplier exactly what energy you use in near real time (for electricity) or half hourly (gas), so your bills will be accurate rather than estimated. They also let you see how much energy you are using and what it is costing. The hope is that this will make us use less energy. In the long term, smart meters will allow charges to be higher at peak times and lower overnight. That will become more important as electric cars spread. Home charging points now only get a £500 subsidy if they can work at cheap times. These 'time-of-use' tariffs will also mean that cooking dinner at dinner time will be more expensive than cooking it mid-afternoon.

'If you want one, insist on the new model'



Some firms are still fitting first generation (SMETS1) smart meters. A deadline to stop doing that by 5 December 2018 was extended to 15 March for 12 energy companies, but it is still happening due to supply problems. A huge number of these SMETS1 meters are not smart enough to cope when you change supplier. After a switch they still measure what you use but cannot usually pass that data to you or your new supplier, so they still have to be read. Latest figures show that about 2.5 million of these meters have stopped working in 'smart' mode. An ambitious programme to upgrade more than 15 million SMETS1 meters to cope with switching has still not begun.

The Government's target to get smart meters in every home by the end of 2020 cannot now be met. In the last 12 months 4.5 million were fitted. At that rate, it will be 2026 before the remaining 30 million old meters are replaced. The regulator Ofgem admits "smart meters will need to continue to be installed beyond 2020".

It's not compulsory to have a smart meter but some suppliers offer their best tariffs exclusively to those who do. If you want a smart meter insist on a SMETS2. If that cannot be guaranteed just say "no".

PLAN YOUR FUNERAL IN ADVANCE AND PROTECT YOUR LOVED ONES

Getting the right funeral plan has never been easier

There's never the perfect time to talk about your send-off, however, planning your funeral in advance is a sensible decision.

Not only does it alleviate the financial burden on your loved ones, it also offers you peace of mind that the ones you care about will have the support they need when the time comes.

We know that arranging a funeral is no easy task. But we also know that any support the important people in your life could get while arranging your funeral is not only handy, but a pragmatic decision.

A funeral plan could make planning your send-off that little bit easier. By planning in advance, it will give you peace of mind knowing that your family won't have the burden of covering the full cost of your funeral at an already emotional time.

Radio Times has teamed up with Dignity, one of the UK's leading funeral plan providers. Dignity have already helped over 910,000 people plan for their funeral in advance and will be there for the ones you love, when they need most.

Why choose the Dignity Prepaid Funeral Plan?

The Dignity Prepaid Funeral Plan allows you to pay for your funeral in advance – once paid for, you will never pay more for the services included in the plan. The Prepaid Funeral Plan from Dignity is a simple way of taking control of your affairs, protecting against future increases in funeral costs and gaining peace of mind for everyone concerned.

Book of the Week: The Great Romantic

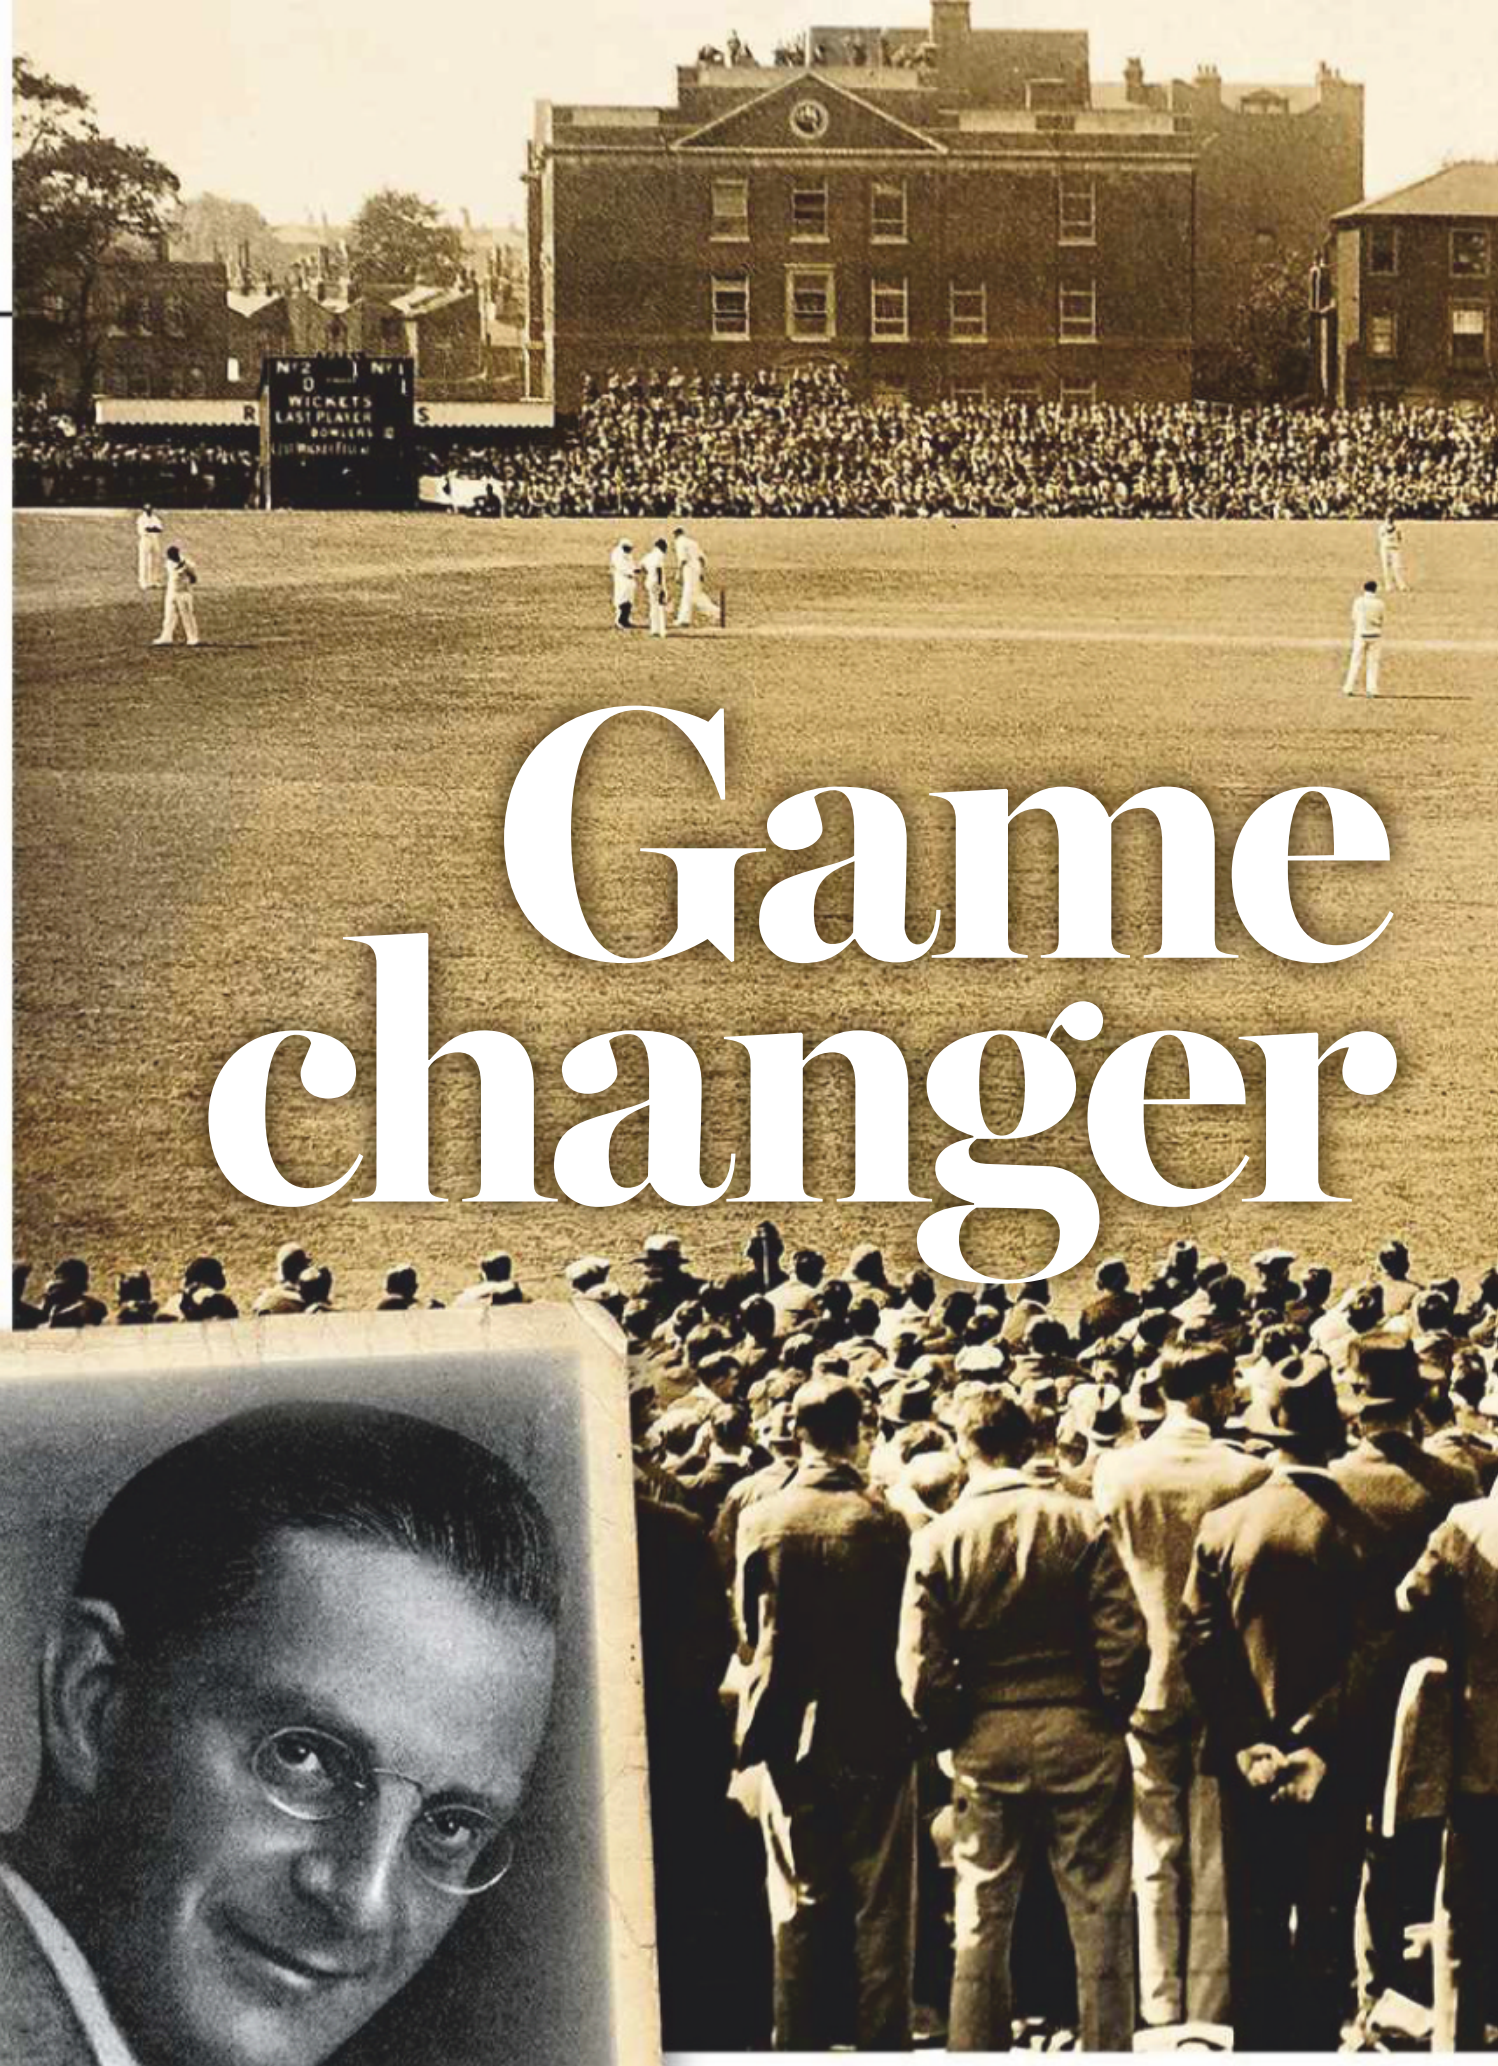
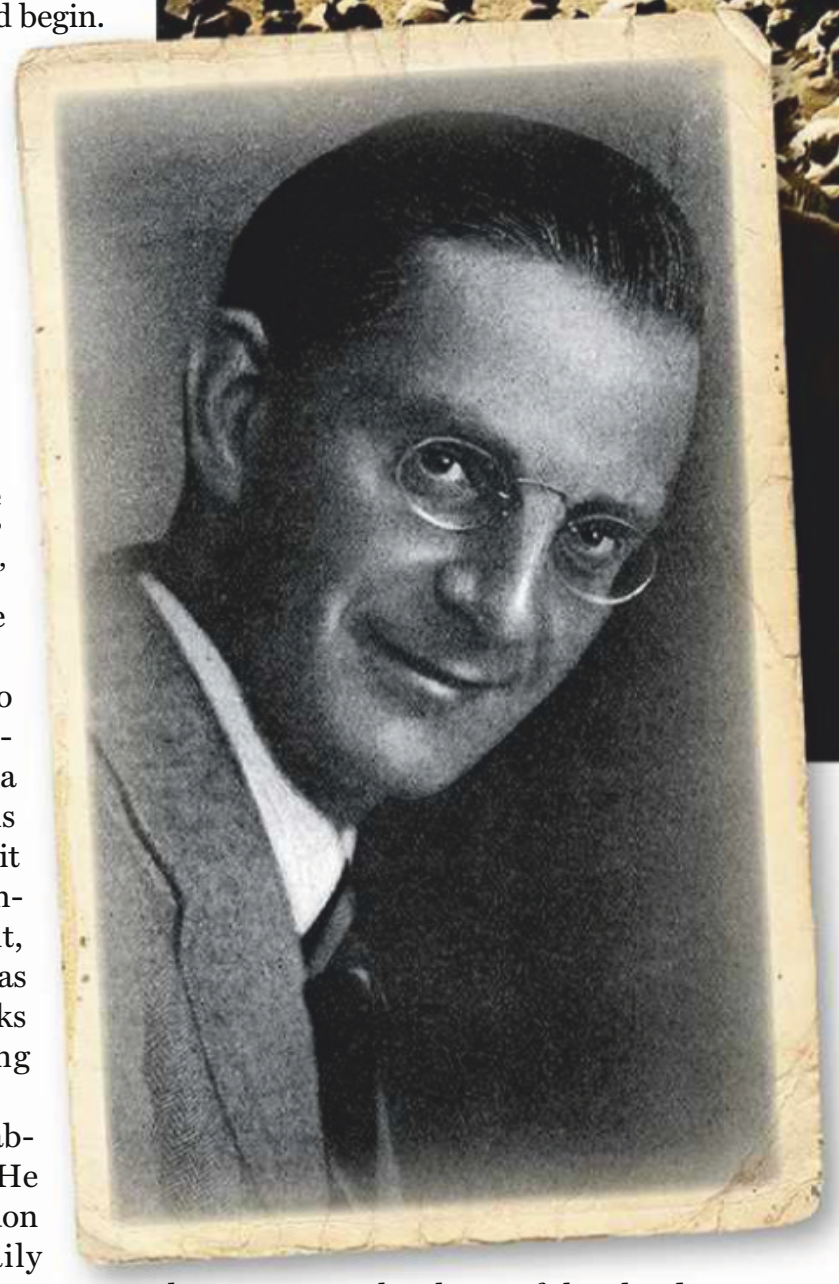
Game changer





IN THE SUMMER of 1919, when the black dust from the Great War had still to settle, an obscure reporter walked into a cricket press box for the first time. He soon transformed for ever the way in which sport in this country was written.

He was the most unlikely revolutionary: awfully gaunt, bespectacled and already past 30 years old. He was also an accidental one. For one thing, the decision to send him to a match at all was salted with compassion. He was recovering from a mental and physical breakdown. His newspaper, The Manchester Guardian, thought that a day or two in the sun would be restorative. For another, his sole ambition was to become a music critic. Cricket was no more than a pleasurable distraction to him; he'd enjoy watching "a few" games, get himself healthy again, then the graft of building a "serious" career would begin.

Even now, a century later, how Neville Cardus became "the father of literate sports writing" seems too extraordinarily serendipitous to be true. That title was bestowed on him by his friend and fellow cricket writer John Arlott, who justified it with a solidly logical argument. "Just as there can never be a greater cricketer than WG Grace – because he created the whole technique of modern cricket, and no one can ever do that again – so there can never be a greater cricket writer." Cardus, he explained, similarly "created" an art and "others performed what he showed" afterwards.

Cardus's background further adds to the romance of his story. He was illegitimate and raised in semi-slum in a Manchester suburb. He never knew his birth year, always believing it was 1889 (it was actually 1888). His mother, a laundress by day and a prostitute by night, practically abandoned him. And he was largely self-educated, borrowing books from the city's libraries and adoring Charles Dickens.

When his chance came, Cardus established himself in a wondrous rush. He became venerated even among the London literati for his phrase-making, daily producing prose that passed as poetry.

Reports on cricket had generally been written chronologically and in a stiff, starkly factual manner. They comprised a lot of dry facts, piled up like kindling, and the language around them was antique. The ball was "the crimson rambler". The wicketkeeper was "the custodian of the gauntlets". With Cardus, you got every blade of grass and the light and shadow that fell across them. You got the shape of the clouds. You got the physical appearance and quirky mannerisms of the players. Cardus shared not only what he saw, but also what he felt, because aesthetics always mattered more to him than statistics.

This began during the fevered climax to a Roses Match, his beloved Lancashire beating Yorkshire at Old Trafford. In a eureka moment, Cardus decided to treat the game as though it was a spotlit stage drama. He treated the players as actors within it. This abundant, passionate style characterised his golden age, a roaring heyday between the wars that produced at least three million lovely words. You can pluck paragraphs as bright as flowers out of all that work and still be struck by the colour in them.

Cardus wrote of "the very gargoyle of a ball", which drops slowly out of the air "with a twisting grin". He revealed his fondness for Trent Bridge as "a Lotus-land for batsmen, a place where it is always afternoon and 360 for two wickets". His admiration for Jack Hobbs he expressed as a stroke-maker so impeccable that "a snick" from

Accidental cricket correspondent Neville Cardus changed sports reporting for ever, says his biographer Duncan Hamilton

FIELD OF DREAMS
The main picture was taken at the Oval on the first day of the fifth Ashes Test on 16 August 1930, and Neville Cardus (inset, left) was there, reporting for The Manchester Guardian him was "a sort of disturbance of cosmic orderliness". He observed that the garrulous conversationalist, Sussex's Maurice Tate, would shade his eyes in the outfield "like a longshoreman sweeping the horizon" and then "come on to bowl at the Sea End at Hove in the middle of a sentence".

EVEN A SOON-TO-BE-FORGOTTEN game brought out the best in Cardus. After an icicled wind blasted across a ground for umpteen hours, he wrote: "The real heroes were two spectators, who sat near one of the sightscreens all day, from noon to evening, exposed but never once leaving their seats. But perhaps they were only dead…"

While Cardus wrote eruditely on music, he fretted that his popularity on cricket eclipsed that achievement. He was relieved when his 1967 knighthood acknowledged his "twin personality". Cardus once lamented nonetheless: "If anyone had told me I was destined to make a reputation as a writer on cricket, I should have felt very hurt".

He died in 1975, but has been quoted regularly every summer since. For without him cricket's past – and some of the prominent figures in it – would be nothing more than ghostly smoke.

How to repair a family heirloom

THE REPAIR SHOP: A MAKE DO AND MEND HANDBOOK
KAREN FARRINGTON

Since it began in 2017, the BBC's Repair Shop has earned a fervent following for showcasing emotional human stories and fascinating practical skills; it's certainly one of the most popular topics in the RT mailbag. If you've been inspired to give your family heirlooms a new lease of life, the Repair Shop team – with author Karen Farrington – have put together A Make Do and Mend Handbook (out 24 July; pre-order for £14.99 inc p&p), with advice from the Shop's experts on caring for and maintaining your precious objects.

NATURALLY TAN
TAN FRANCE

It's hard to imagine a world without Queer Eye, Netflix's reboot of the Noughties original, but in fact the makeover show with a social conscience first debuted just 18 months ago. Since then there have been three series, with the fourth arriving last week. For stylist Tan France, one of the show's five experts, this steep rise to US stardom has been particularly unexpected: he was born and raised in Doncaster, and is from a Muslim Pakistani family. In his memoir Naturally Tan (£16.50, incl p&p) he explains how he ended up on one of the most popular TV shows of recent years while offering typically straight-talking advice on questions of style – and matters of the heart.

EXPEDITION: ADVENTURES INTO UNDISCOVERED WORLDS
STEVE BACKSHALL
Expedition with Steve Backshall
Sunday 8pm Dave

In April, Steve Backshall proved that he's come a long way from The Really Wild Show, his first BBC presenting gig; in Undiscovered Worlds with Steve Backshall, he ventured into some of the world's most obscure and dangerous places. It certainly wasn't child's play. In Expedition (£18, incl p&p) he recounts some of the most memorable and dramatic moments from those trips, from his close encounter with a polar bear in the Arctic to discovering ancient Mayan bones in caves in Mexico. A run of six new episodes starts this Sunday on Dave. HANNAH SHADDOCK

JOE SWIFT OFFERS

Salvia for ever!

There's only one plant that gives you six months of gorgeous flower, says Joe Swift

THE BEST-PERFORMING flowering plant in my garden of the past few years is Salvia "Amistad". One mild year it started flowering in late May and still had blooms on the first of December. It's not simply long-lasting, either, being a stunner with silky, rich purple flowers made even more dramatic by the purple-black hooded calyces (sepals) and dark stems.

The salvia genus contains nearly 1,000 species of shrubs, herbaceous perennials and annuals from across the world. The best known is the culinary sage but there are so many other fabulous garden plants to choose from that really earn their keep in high summer, many continuing right through to the first frost.

With such a range it's hard to break it down, but as a general rule some salvias are hardy, some aren't and how they perform depends on where you live, your aspect, soil and how you overwinter them. The hardiest will get through winters in most areas as long as the drainage is good. The S. nemorosa varieties are hard to beat. "Caradonna" has violet-blue flower spikes and is a favourite with designers who like to set the vertical brush strokes off against complementary colours like orange and yellow. "Ostfriesland" has lighter, more luminescent flowers that light up the evening border whereas "Schwellenburg" has fluffier plumes of pinky-purple flowers held above grey-green foliage. They all reach about 60cm: very useful for the front or mid-border.

Salvia patens (gentian sage) varieties are a little less hardy but generally taller at around 1m in height, so at home in the middle of the border. They may get through winter in a mild spot or with protection. The hugely popular Salvia x jamensis "Hot Lips" is a daintier choice with small bicoloured red and white flowers.

THE WORLD OF tender salvias is mind-boggling but fun and just popping one or two into a border at this time of year can bring a very exotic feel to it. Salvia confertiflora is a marvel, reaching 1m with masses of small, rich orangey-red flowers, or how about Salvia fulgens (the Mexican red sage), a similar height with unmissable scarlet-red flowers. The combination of the latter with my bestie "Amistad" is a winner if you can cope with the invigorating colour clash.

To look after your salvia, remove flower spikes after flowering to promote further display and feed with a liquid feed such as seaweed every two weeks.

If you're putting tender plants in a protected garden, cut back in early autumn before frosts, and mulch thickly using a dry compost such as leaf mould. Take cuttings in August or September to grow indoors for planting out next spring in case those in the ground don't make it.

IF YOU DO ONE THING THIS WEEK

HOW TO MAKE A BENCH...

Gardens need places to sit. A good garden will lead you round, speed you up and slow you down to pause in all the right places. Without somewhere to sit and take it in from, you'll stand around, admire a bit and then move on. A well-placed simple bench – in the shade of a tree or towards the end of a path – will not only form a visual feature but also give the garden a destination point. You may want to buy something ready-made but it's easy to make something unique yourself, too.

HOW BIG?

The ideal height and depth (from front to back) is around 45 to 50cm. Sit on chairs you already have to find the right height for you. For two people to sit next to each other it should be a minimum of 105cm long. There's no maximum, but think about where it will be positioned in the garden. Be as generous as possible; you may even want to lie on it!

TRY IT IN TIMBER

New railway sleepers are clean, chunky and inexpensive. The simplest way is to place a length (or two side by side) supported with bricks or stone blocks at each end. Saw to length with a sharp handsaw and lightly sand. You can buy bolts specifically designed to fix sleepers together (requiring a drill) to easily make some legs using the same material.

STURDIER IN STONE

OK, stone is heavy to shift around but it brings a sense of permanence to a garden. You may have a nice big piece lying around or see one at a reclamation yard. Again, the legs could be brick or stone or you could make a simple, strong wooden frame from 4 by 2in (100 x 50mm) treated timber to support it beneath. Place some cushions or a rug on it to make it more comfortable.

The Handmaid's Tale
Sunday 9.00pm C4

Visitors to Toronto can't help but compare the city to New York, and usually remark on how much cleaner it is. In fact, Canada's biggest metropolis was called York until 1834, and it often doubles for American cities in TV shows. In recent years, Torontonians have occasionally spotted women clad in scarlet cloaks and stiff white bonnets filming The Handmaid's Tale, the drama series based on the 1985 novel by Canadian author Margaret Atwood (Toronto happens to be Atwood's adopted home and the setting for many of her other novels).

Toronto has long been a liberal mecca for migrants and is one of the world's most culturally diverse cities – over half its citizens were born outside of the country. It truly is a cultural melting pot that offers everything you'd expect of a world-class city, while a favourable exchange rate makes it considerably cheaper for Brits than its neighbour.

FEEL ON TOP OF THE WORLD

A spindle-like building towers above Toronto's skyscrapers: the CN Tower (cntower.ca), a 553m-tall antenna and lightning rod (pictured below) that's struck an average of 75 times a year. When a storm isn't raging, you can soar up it in a glass elevator and peer down at the toy cars on the highway, and the dinky boats gliding across the endless waters of Lake Ontario.
If you want to feel like Spider-Man, brave the EdgeWalk. You're harnessed to an overhead rail so you can stroll hands-free along a 356m ledge around the perimeter of the observation deck.

ADMIRE ANCIENT WONDERS

The Royal Ontario Museum (rom.on.ca) is Canada's answer to the British Museum and its treasures include Egyptian mummy cases, a Ming dynasty tomb and a mesmerising Neo-Babylonian bas-relief of a lion. A more recent arrival is a life-size 3D-printed model of a Wendiceratops, a species of herbivorous dinosaur with flamboyant horns. It's named after Wendy Sloboda, the Canadian fossil hunter who unearthed it in the western province of Alberta in 2010.

DISCOVER INDIGENOUS ART

Over a third of the Art Gallery of Ontario is dedicated to art by First Nations, Inuit and Métis – the "First Peoples of North America" – and other global indigenous art. Current exhibitions include a celebration of Brian Jungen, who creates sculptures from repurposed everyday objects such as trainers. There's also a room of Henry Moore's monumental sculptures, and a hugely popular new acquisition allows visitors to come face to face with countless variations of their reflection for 60 seconds – Yayoi Kusama's Infinity Mirrored Room – Let's Survive Forever.
From 21 September, Toronto will hold its first Biennial of Art (torontobiennial.org), a 72-day contemporary art festival along the city's waterfront.

PIG OUT IN HOGTOWN

As you'd expect in a city where more than 140 languages are spoken, there are restaurants catering to every whim and budget, from a new wave of First Nations chefs serving seasonal dishes with an indigenous twist, to Chinatown's perennially popular, no-frills establishments and Torontonians' beloved all-day brunches. Whet your appetite with a stroll around the wrought-iron St Lawrence Market, which has been feeding the city since 1803. Join the queue at Carousel Bakery to try the city's famous peameal bacon sandwich: a soft roll piled with cornmeal-encrusted, mustard-topped bacon – it's one of the reasons Toronto's nickname is "Hogtown".

TIME FOR A DRINK

In 1832, two English millers built a windmill on the shore of Lake Ontario. They ended up swapping flour for whisky, and Gooderham and Worts became the world's biggest distillery. Nowadays their red-brick warehouses contain artists' studios, galleries, boutiques, coffee shops, a craft brewery, restaurants and a German-style Christmas market. Go Canada's walking and Segway tours (gotourscanada.com) explore the Distillery District's history.

SPLASH THE CASH

In the 60s, Yorkville was a hippy hangout that attracted the likes of Leonard Cohen and Joni Mitchell. Nowadays it's decidedly chichi and crammed with designer shops. In Holt Renfrew – Canada's Selfridges – you can find some of Meghan Markle's favourite labels, including Mother, Aquazzura and Mackage. The Duchess of Sussex lived in the area when she starred in the New York-set legal drama Suits, which was filmed in Toronto's Financial District. Footwear aficionados will want to hotfoot it to the Bata Shoe Museum, which houses more than 13,000 shoes and related items, and hosts stylish exhibitions. CLAIRE WEBB

ARE YOU LOOKING TO BOOST YOUR FINANCES?

Whether you're planning for retirement or looking to increase your retirement income, your home could help

Retirement is the time to do all the things you've wanted to, but with diminishing pensions and the ever-rising cost of living, even maintaining your current lifestyle can be difficult.

WHY EQUITY RELEASE?

Equity release could offer a way to release a tax-free cash lump sum from your home without the stress of downsizing.

The cash released from your home can be used however you like – from travelling to making those home renovations you've always wanted to. Thousands of homeowners aged 55–95 are already using equity release to take advantage of their home's value and unlocking cash to improve their retirement.

UNLOCKING THE CASH FROM YOUR HOME

If you're considering releasing equity from your home, it's important to seek specialist advice. That's why we've teamed up with Key, the trusted independent equity release experts.

KEY'S FRIENDLY EQUITY RELEASE ADVISERS WILL EXPLAIN THAT

- Equity release may involve a lifetime mortgage, which is a loan secured against your home, like a traditional mortgage
- With a lifetime mortgage, the most popular type of equity release, you still own your own home and can live in it as long as you like
- There are typically no monthly repayments to make as the loan, plus roll up interest, is repaid when the plan comes to an end
- Equity release will reduce the value of your estate and may affect your entitlement to means-tested benefits
- You can guarantee an inheritance for your family with some plans

Key's advisers will tell you if equity release isn't right for you and there's no obligation to go ahead.

Unless you decide to go ahead, Key's service is completely free of charge as Key's usual advice fee of 1.99% of the amount released would only be payable on completion of a plan, subject to a minimum advice fee of £1,499.

HOW KEY HELPED US

FIRST CLASS SERVICE

"One phone call and a visit has given us the ability to pay off our existing mortgage along with extra cash to spend on home improvements and treats for ourselves. It's eased out outgoings and made life a little more comfortable. There was no pressure at all. Key arranged everything and took the stress away by making things clear and giving us the ability to make the right choice."

Angela B, Trustpilot Review

WHY NOT CALCULATE HOW MUCH YOU COULD RELEASE FROM YOUR HOME?

Use our free online calculator to find out how much you could release from your home. Last year Key customers were able to release an average of £86,000 from their homes. Your home could help fund the retirement you always dreamt of.

Celebrate the Fourth of July in New York

SAVE UP TO £1,200 PER COUPLE

NO-FLY NIAGARA AND INDEPENDENCE DAY EXTRAVAGANZA

22 nights departing 21 June 2020 on board Queen Mary 2

Enjoy a close encounter with the Statue of Liberty

Be charmed by the beautiful Queen Mary 2 as you experience all the grandeur of Cunard's style of ocean travel on your journey from Southampton to New York. Call at Normandy's Le Havre, from where you can take a trip to Paris, before settling in for your transatlantic crossing. As you sail into New York at dawn, you'll wake up to the most iconic skyline in the world.

Your North America adventure begins with a journey to Niagara Falls, one of the world's greatest waterfalls. Get soaked in the cascade's spray during a Hornblower cruise, before enjoying a change of pace in the pretty town of Niagara-on-the-Lake where you'll enjoy a wine tasting.

Leaving Niagara behind, you'll head to the US capital, Washington DC, for a fascinating glimpse into America's epic history. Your tour takes you to some of the city's most famous icons, including the Lincoln Memorial, the National Mall and of course the majestic White House, which you'll get to view from the outside. On your way back to New York, you'll also stop in Philadelphia, known as the "Birthplace of the Nation", where the Declaration of Independence and the US Constitution were signed.

The final part of your North American adventure takes place in unforgettable New York, arriving on Independence Day. New York is without doubt the best place in America to celebrate Independence Day, as Macy's Fourth of July fireworks burst over the city skyline and an electric party atmosphere fills the air. Following three nights in the city you'll embark the Queen Mary 2 one final time for your return voyage to Southampton.

ITINERARY Southampton (embark Queen Mary 2), Le Havre (Paris), New York (disembark Queen Mary 2), Niagara Falls (hotel stay and tour), Washington DC (hotel stay and tour), Philadelphia (tour), New York (hotel stay – embark Queen Mary 2), Southampton (disembark Queen Mary 2)

Why is a slice of bacon called a "rasher"? Terry Cattermole Southsea

Most dictionaries will tell you that the origin of the name for a thin slice of bacon is shrouded in mystery. Early lexicographer John Minsheu decided it must be because it was "rashly or hastily roasted". More plausible is that it comes from an old sense of "rash" meaning to cut or slash (from the French aracher, "to tear away").

"Bacon" itself is a sibling of "back", while "ham" is from an ancient word meaning "crooked" and originally described the back of the knee before it came to mean the thigh or hock of an animal, hence "hamstring".

As for sausages, in the 19th century they were dubbed "bags of mystery", because no one was ever quite sure what was in them. A century later, they were known in the Navy as "links of love".

Worth the licence fee

FORCE OF NATURE
Suranne Jones in Gentleman Jack

Every now and again, a drama series knocks me off my feet and reminds me what my TV licence pays for. Gentleman Jack (BBC1) was that. Anne Lister was an extraordinary woman, fiercely independent and clever, and Suranne Jones was born to play her. I loved it when she marched forth like she was going to war, going nose to nose with the most powerful men in 19th-century society. The way the series portrayed mental illness, through Ann Walker's terrifying breakdowns, was also sensitively done, and very timely when sufferers like myself are being encouraged to talk about their illness.

Lister's sexuality was in many ways her driving force. Even then, she was aware of one simple principle – that love has no gender.

Judi O'Regan Longfield, Kent

Judi O'Regan wins a BOSE SoundLink Revolve speaker, in either black or silver. One of BOSE's best-performing portable Bluetooth speakers, it is water-resistant, has a rechargeable battery that plays for up to 12 hours and delivers true 360° sound, wherever you place it in the room. RRP £179.95. bose.co.uk

...Great fan of Alison Graham though I am, and while like her I am looking forward to the second series of Gentleman Jack, I disagree that next time Sally Wainwright should cut out the "deadly dull" coal theme. It has been riveting social history, and also demonstrated how difficult it was for a woman to do business with men at the time, even one as intelligent and dynamic as Anne Lister.

Suranne Jones is a joy to watch – her face is so expressive, especially when she is having to watch her words to obey convention.

Kate Phillips
High Wycombe, Buckinghamshire

... I very much enjoyed Gentleman Jack and thought the last episode excellent. However, my enjoyment was spoilt by an announcer talking over the whole of the closing song, finishing just in time for us to hear the final note! As is often the case, the titles were squished up to half their proper size in order to show what was coming up next. I would add, "BBC, please take note", but I don't expect they will. Grrr!

CORNISH TASTY

I've just finished reading RT's great interview with Aidan Turner (RT, 13 July), who was absolutely correct to say that in Poldark (Sunday BBC1) he and Eleanor Tomlinson, as Demelza, shared the lead roles. I fell in screen-love with her from the first episode – she has the most mobile and striking face and voice of any of the great current TV actors, even Keeley Hawes. (To be appropriately inclusive, I was also keen to watch Harry Richardson as Drake Carne, too – I first spotted him in 2016 drama Doctor Thorne.)

Tim Pearce Sevenoaks, Kent

REPEATS PLEASE!

Does the BBC think of what fans might like when planning repeats? Poldark was very popular from the outset, so what a great opportunity to repeat Aidan Turner's other BBC work, such as his Dante Gabriel Rossetti in Desperate Romantics (BBC2) or his vampire in Being Human (BBC3), giving fans a chance to see what they may have missed, or to watch again.

I enjoyed seeing Andrew Scott as the priest in Fleabag and would love to see his Hamlet, shown on BBC2 last year. Surely it's not hard to work out what would be a popular repeat or iPlayer offering.

Rose Windmill Bristol

Being Human isn't currently available on iPlayer, but you can watch all five seasons on Netflix.

A SCRIPT THAT SPOILT

We settled down to watch the first episode of Serengeti (4 July BBC1) and, as usual with BBC nature series, the filming was exceptional, capturing the wildlife and landscapes beautifully. However, the programme was badly let down by the awful script. Must we be subjected to anthropomorphic musings?

Baboons brooding on injustice or finding courage they never knew they had and hyenas consumed by grief were just some of the silly comments we had to listen to. Keeping things factual and professional on wildlife documentaries has always set British film-makers apart, to my mind, and adding all this nonsense really did take away from what was otherwise a wonderful programme.

Market Drayton, Shropshire

WHAT NEXT FOR KIRSTY?

...We were very sad to hear that Kirsty Young won't be returning to Desert Island Discs (Sunday/Friday Radio 4). She was by far the best presenter in the programme's long history. Here's hoping she feels better soon and we look forward to hearing about her next project. Time to go and listen to some of her old editions of Desert Island Discs...

JUNGLE JUDI
Judi Dench's Wild Borneo Adventure

A VERY GAME DAME

What a privilege to travel with the wonderful Dame Judi in Judi Dench's Wild Borneo Adventure (2/9 July ITV). Her gentle but mischievous manner coupled with her zest for life and learning made this not only a wonderful travel programme, but an intelligent approach to investigating the damage that's being done to the rainforest and the amazing work and research being carried out. More from Dame Judi, please.

VERSATILE JILL

What an interesting variety of work actors have! I watched Jill Halfpenny playing a stunned and heartbroken mother of an abused son in Dark Money (8 July BBC1), immediately followed on Channel 4 by her performance as a sex-crazed Victorian comedy sniper in Year of the Rabbit.

She was wonderful in both, but what a contrast!
Gary Stark Kettering, Northamptonshire

OVER THE MOON

I can clearly remember setting an alarm to watch grainy footage of the Moon landing in the early hours of 20 July 1969. It's one of those moments you never forget. So my husband and I were really looking forward to seeing the new and highly rated film Apollo 11. However, even the large-screen footage left me feeling strangely unmoved: I should have waited for the brilliant BBC2 programme Eight Days: to the Moon and Back (10 July BBC2).

Yes, it shared much of the same footage and audio material as Apollo 11, but gave so much more. It added subtitles so the conversations on board were clearer but, more importantly, shared more personal footage, such as Buzz Aldrin taking the sacrament with him and the conversations between Mike Collins and his colleagues in the lunar module.

Congratulations, BBC2, on truly reminding me of that early July morning 50 years ago.
Pat Samuels Nottingham

THE HIPPY PROFESSOR

I notice Doctor Digital has undergone a radical change. Still white-coated and with mouse slung, stethoscope-like, around his neck, but his erstwhile short back and sides appears to have been replaced by luscious flowing locks.

DRAMA...

AND COMEDY
And in Year of the Rabbit

Is this a true-to-life representation of Doc Dig? Or just wishful thinking... Will the real Jonathan Holmes step forward, please!
Stephanie Hudson

What eagle eyes – we wondered if our readers might notice! Jonathan has grown his hair longer in recent months so we thought we'd better update his profile.

ACE SERVICE...

Well done, BBC! I could choose the match I wanted to see at Wimbledon via iPlayer, not just watch the ones selected for me on the TV. What a bonus, and thank you, BBC.
Brenda Symes Harrow, north-west London

OR NET LOSS

...I'm not a fan of tennis so don't take kindly to having it intrude on my viewing – but recognise that others are and, if a game is in full swing, let it finish. However, not even the most ardent fan could possibly justify the same game being shown simultaneously, on both BBC2 and BBC1, on the evening of Saturday 6 July!
Gary Cooper Egham, Surrey

...I have always enjoyed the BBC's coverage of Wimbledon, but I also enjoy other programmes. This year we have been engulfed by tennis, with other regular programmes, like Casualty (BBC1), cancelled.

Surely coverage on one station is sufficient at any one time? Sport is an important part of our culture, but not everyone enjoys it and they, too, pay their TV licence.
Mary Lloyd Hull
A BBC spokesperson replies: "Wimbledon is one of the biggest tennis events in the world, with millions of viewers and listeners following every match. Our commitment to broadcast it does mean that schedules are subject to change – particularly if matches overrun. On 6 July, there was an overlap between channels that meant the same match was covered simultaneously for four ▷

YOU ASK US

Who is Swann's sparring partner on TMS?

How are the pundits chosen for Test Match Special (Radio 4 LW/ 5 Live Sports Extra)? For this World Cup we were treated to the best in the business. Can you tell us more about Isa Guha? She is so funny, and her rapport with the others gave me my favourite moments. Please give her and Graeme Swann their own show!
Heather Turner, Solihull, West Midlands

SKILL AND KNOWLEDGE Cricket commentator Isa Guha today, and celebrating a wicket while playing for England

There will always be fans of the old-school TMS who mourn the departure of such great characters as Henry Blofeld and regret the changes under way. But in truth they have been incremental, with new voices, more women and a wider range of characters bringing wit, wisdom and variety to the TMS box while preserving the banter and much of the eccentricity.

"Test Match Special's World Cup team features former players, commentators and experts from many of the participating nations," a BBC spokesperson tells RT. "We choose which commentators and summarisers work on each game based on their expertise in relation to the teams playing, as well as providing balance to the voices heard."

As for Isa Guha, 34, she was born in Buckinghamshire and made her international debut at just 17 – the first woman of South Asian origin ever to represent England in any sport. As a fast-medium bowler, she was ranked the ICC women's number one in the world in 2008, and was part of England teams that won the Women's World Cup and the Ashes, twice.

Her broadcasting career began with ITV, commentating on the Indian Premier League; and since she retired from playing in 2012, she's worked for broadcasters all over the world, including the BBC's TMS, first as a summariser and then as a ball-by-ball commentator on men's internationals.

Look out for Guha beyond the commentary box, as she is keen to develop ideas for her own documentaries. And she has considerable talents in the scientific field, too: after a biochemistry degree, she did an MPhil in neuroscience, researching neuro-degenerative diseases such as Alzheimer's.

◁ minutes. We try to ensure that our published schedules carry notices that overrunning may impact on later programmes, and when this happens we endeavour to find a solution that will satisfy as many people as possible."

TIME FOR A CHANGE

With the appointment of a new Radio 4 controller, Mohit Bakaya, may we hope for a shake-up? The average age of listeners is over 40, yet we certainly aren't the priority for the schedulers.

Of the so-called comedy shows, 90 per cent would not be missed and the dire canned laughter is a turn-off. I live in hope for a caring ear for us oldies (and non-podcasters) from the new team at Radio 4.
Astrid Smith Walton-on-Thames, south-west London

SUNSHINE AHEAD

As ever, the speculation has begun about who will be competing in the next series of Strictly Come Dancing (BBC1), including, apparently, Andy Murray!

It got me thinking as to whether it's time that Strictly allowed the public to vote for who they would like to see on the dancefloor – perhaps there could be a shortlist for voting, as on BBC Sports Personality of the Year. What fun that would be!

My vote would go to weatherman Tomasz Schafernaker, who always brings a smile to my face. How about it, Strictly?
Elaine Thorogood Leighton Buzzard, Bedfordshire

RT MONEY PARTNER

SAVE UP TO £458* ON ENERGY

COULD YOU SAVE MONEY ON ENERGY?

Radio Times has teamed up with energyhelpline to help you beat rising energy prices. Switch your energy provider with us and you could save up to £458*

The energy price cap was only introduced at the start of the year, but it's already going up. The Big Six energy providers have followed suite and raised the prices by 10%^ on 1 April 2019. If you're not on a fixed tariff with one of these providers then you could find yourself paying even more for energy.

Ofgem, the industry regulator, has already said that 54%^^ of consumers are on a default tariff, which are the ones affected by the price cap rise. Getting yourself on to a better deal could save you money, and mean your prices will be fixed for the year so you aren't affected. With plenty of options available, now is a great time to switch to something cheaper. It's a simple, fast and hassle-free process, with no interruption to your supply.

Why use our switching service

We want our readers to start enjoying cheaper energy so we've set up our Radio Times Switching Service. We compare over 70 providers, looking at the latest tariffs and trying our best to save you money. We're working with comparison specialists energyhelpline to bring you this service, and switchers have saved as much as £458* on their bill. There's absolutely no obligation, and the service is free, so it's just a great way of finding out whether you could save money on your energy.

You can visit us online or speak to one of our advisors, and we'll let you know whether you could be on a better energy deal. Our unbiased, impartial service is there to help you, and if you do decide to switch then we can handle it for you. Get in touch today, and see whether our free switching service could start saving you money.

Switch in minutes

It's easy and you don't need a bill to hand! To get started, call us or visit the website below. You can type in your postcode online, and answer a few simple questions about your current energy plan to calculate how much you can save by switching providers. We look after the switch and handle the paperwork for you with no interruption to your supply.

HOW IT WORKS

COMPARISONS CALCULATED

Our comparison calculator takes the current usage details that you enter and compares all UK suppliers to see who can offer you the best deals. The calculation takes into account a number of different factors including where you live, your energy usage, what type of meter you have, your preferred payment method and whether you are looking to switch both gas and electricity tariffs, or a single tariff.

Comparisons use the most up-to-date energy prices available and our website is updated often within hours of a price change being announced, meaning that the results you see are as accurate as possible at any given point.

In addition to showing you how much you could save, you can also see whether it's a fixed or variable tariff, the customer service ratings for the supplier, and an estimated annual cost and how long you would be tied in for.

Survey of over 100,000 switches. energyhelpline compares all publicly available energy tariffs under the OFGEM Confidence Code.^11 million UK energy bills are going up by 10% at midnight of 31 March 2019, as detailed in an Ofgem report from February 2019.

JOELY RICHARDSON

The actor loves to ditch digital tech and seek out real adventure

What are you watching at the moment?
Fleabag. I didn’t know the scenario, just that all the young ones were talking about it, and I was blown away by the acting and the artistry. The other programme I watched all in one night was After Life. Ricky Gervais is completely hysterical. I’m also watching The Virtues. Wow! I haven’t finished it yet but apparently I should brace myself.

What’s the view from your sofa?
I live in the countryside, so I can see my dog, a fireplace, a lovely view of my garden through the window, a really cool ceramic lion that belonged to my grandfather… And Mum’s [Vanessa Redgrave] Golden Lion is here, which she won for lifetime achievement at the Venice Film Festival last September. This is her home, too; she stays here a lot.

How often have you worked with your mum?
Very occasionally something like [2018 film] The Aspern Papers comes up – it was incredible to see my mum in that other capacity, to see the way she works rather than sitting in the audience watching her, which I’ve done a million times. She played my mother in Nip/Tuck and that was the most interactive we’ve been.

Would you keep watching if an episode of Nip/Tuck or Lady Chatterley came on?
I haven’t seen Lady Chatterley for a long time. If I came across it, I’d be curious. I happened upon an early episode of Nip/Tuck recently and it felt like something from 60 years ago. At the time it seemed so modern and racy.

Do you ever watch things featuring your late sister, Natasha?
If I was flicking through and saw her face or heard her voice, that would be a lovely thing. I was going for a walk with a friend and we walked past a beach hut – through the window you could see Tash’s face in The Parent Trap and it was a lovely surprise.

But there is a line drawn between who someone is when you know them privately, and their work. They coexist, but one isn’t a substitute for the other.

What is your new series The Rook about?
It’s a psychological thriller about a secret Secret Service where we have special abilities. I play Linda Farrier, the King, Adrian Lester is the Queen and Emma Greenwell plays my protégé, the Rook, who has supreme powers. It’s been described to me as a mix between the Bourne series and The X-Files.

Are you tech-savvy?
Not really. It’s one of my ambitions to get a bit more so, but I also think it’s a rabbit hole. It worries me that people can’t problem-solve without help. I was working with a terrific actress and we were about to do a scene where someone got killed. She wasn’t doing the killing, but went, “Gosh, I don’t know how to do this, I’m going to look it up!” It seemed so nutty to me that you’d have to look up how you’d react. Can’t we just imagine?

Mum and I love to go for drives somewhere new of a weekend. Although I’m addicted to Google Maps, we like to plan our routes on old maps just for fun. It makes it feel a bit more like an adventure.

GABRIEL TATE

NOTHING TO WATCH?

MY RADIO Often when I’m working and there’s a wait, I’ll listen to Desert Island Discs.

MY MUSIC When I’m driving I often sing along to musicals because, in my dreams, my voice will one day be good enough to be in one… Today it was Gypsy with the brilliant Imelda Staunton.

MY BOOK I’ve just finished Circe by Madeline Miller. I bought it at the airport and it was wonderful.
