THIS WEEK'S UNMISSABLE TV

ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR

'A drama I beg you not to miss'

TELEVISION'S NEW SEASON is full of richly shining rubies to bring a sparkle to the autumn/winter months. There's even a comedy that stands a good chance of making you laugh, (hang in there, the terrible Hold the Sunset is nearly over).

I have a soft spot for Derren Litten's Scarborough (Friday BBC1) not just because it's set in one of my favourite seaside resorts, but mainly because it reminds me of Peter Kay's Phoenix Nights. There's a mix of odd characters, some sharp humour, some gentle humour and a bit of a heart.

I've read newspaper reports from worried Scarborough grandees who are alarmed that the man who wrote mucky Benidorm has turned his attention to their town. They shouldn't fret – in the show Scarborough looks as lush as Monte Carlo (well, almost) and is a lot more fun. I have been to both Scarborough and Monte Carlo so I know what I'm talking about.

Dramas, too, are starting to come along in droves. There's Jeff Pope's excellent A Confession (Monday ITV) which I beg you not to miss – see our cover feature on page ten and my column on page 49). And The Capture (Tuesday BBC1) is highly promising. Holliday Grainger plays an ambitious, fast-tracked detective who's desperate to win her spurs on a case of murder and kidnapping so that she can go on to run her own terrorist command. It looks like she gets her wish when a soldier at the centre of a cause célèbre is accused of abduction.

THERE ARE STRONG documentaries, too. Untouchable: The Rise and Fall of Harvey Weinstein (Sunday BBC2) is a horrifying litany of sexual assault allegations (which Weinstein denies). And The Rise of the Nazis (Monday BBC2) has clearly been made to hammer home parallels between Germany in the 1930s and our current dangerous times.

'I love the Annika Stranded short dramas on Radio 4," says the novelist. "Nicola Walker is an astounding narrator, who brings the character to life in a way I'd never have thought possible. On TV, I've become addicted to Our Cops in the North, and not just because of the Vera connection – David Leon, the narrator, played Vera's sidekick in the first few series – it's the compassion and dedication of the cops that shines through.'

WHAT GETS US TALKING...

HITTING THE RIGHT NOTE

Heard the one about an all-female Muslim punk band? Well, the comedy Lady Parts was such a hit when it aired on Channel 4's Comedy Blap season last year that writer/director Nida Manzoor has been commissioned to pen a full series. The show follows Amina Hussein – a geeky PhD student who is recruited to be the band's lead guitarist by front-woman Saira who "uses Amina's desperation to find a husband as leverage, offering to hook up dates for her if she agrees to join the band". The broadcaster has high hopes for the six-parter, with head of comedy Fiona McDermott describing it as "audacious, celebratory and hilarious".

COMEDY STOWAWAY

Also continuing to tickle Channel 4's funny bone is the comedy Home – created by and starring Rufus Jones – which is returning for a second series. The first run followed Syrian immigrant Sami (Youssef Kerkour), who, after hiding in a British family's car in Calais, finds himself living in Dorking, Surrey, with Peter (Jones), Katy (Rebekah Staton, left, with Kerkour) and her son John (Oaklee Pendergast). Having adapted to British life, from visiting Stonehenge to learning about cryptic crosswords, Sami was last seen waiting to see if the Home Office would allow him to stay in the UK. Will series two find him living the dream?

TALKING POLITICS

Coming a lot sooner than that is For the Record, the memoirs of former prime minister David Cameron. To coincide with its publication on 19 September, the BBC plans to air a major documentary by political interviewer Denys Blakeway, who has been dubbed the "TV confessor of choice" for persuading prime ministers Tony Blair, John Major and even Margaret Thatcher to speak frankly on camera. So will Cameron tell us his thoughts on Brexit?

JOBS FOR THE GIRLS

There are also big plans in the pipeline for Billie Piper (below). She has co-created I Hate Suzie, a new drama penned by her friend Lucy Prebble, which explores the perils of fame. Piper plays the titular Suzie, a star on the wane, whose life is rocked when her phone is hacked and a compromising picture is leaked. Says Prebble (the star playwright behind the hit play Enron, who worked with Piper on ITV2's Secret Diary of a Call Girl): "At last I get to make my best friend Billie Piper do terrible things on screen again. It's all I live for." I Hate Suzie will be airing next year on Sky Atlantic. BEN DOWELL

Aisle be seeing you

If you're at the checkout and you hear the beep... you'll find Rylan Clark-Neal going wild in the aisles as host of a revamp of the game show Supermarket Sweep that's coming soon to ITV2.

"I was the biggest fan of the original," the 30-year-old presenter tells RT. "I used to bunk off school to watch it, and I genuinely think I've seen every single episode."

The inflatable bonuses are back, along with the contestants' lurid jumpers. "We've added new rounds and modernised some things – there might be a self-checkout in there," he explains. "It's the Sweep that we all know and love, with some extras."

Clark-Neal says the show stays "as true to the original as possible", even down to Dale Winton's catchphrases. "I'm using his exact words – why mess with perfection? Dale was such an iconic part of the show and I'm sure he would be doing it if he was still around."

Any more secrets? "Every item in the store is real, apart from the frozen aisle and the fresh meat," he says. "And we're donating all the fruit and veg to food banks."

Clark-Neal will next be seen joining Zoe Ball to present Strictly Come Dancing: It Takes Two. "I'm so excited," he says. "I just can't wait to get started". FRANCES TAYLOR

How to fix our broken politics

Move Parliament out of London and axe MPs after two terms

Have we ever had a worse bunch in Parliament? There comes a point when the citizen begins to suspect that what's wrong with political life is not a matter of individual failure, but of some rot deep within the system. I'm there.

I used to think that David Cameron was the worst prime minister in modern times. Then he was succeeded by that cornucopia of failure, Theresa May. Now we find ourselves required to entrust the country to a man you wouldn't trust alone with your sister.

Perhaps we ought to be talking about more than personal failings. Is there some deep malaise in the whole trade?

It was David Cameron's folly, in putting party before country and calling a referendum, that upset the applecart. In a representative democracy, making laws is the job of Parliament. Oddly, taking the initiative away from Parliament has made us all wonder why it is so useless. Yes, it's difficult, but what's wrong with our politicians that, three years after the event, they can't decide how to implement Brexit?

I have lost count of the number of politicians who say that good people are deterred from political life by the exposure they might face. "Why not just get on and make a shedload of money in the City?" they ask, as if that's the choice.

But there may be something in this argument. Who wants the tabloid press crawling over every adolescent grope and student toke? We all need to grow up.

The supply of candidates for Parliament has not dried up, anyway. At the last election, there were over 3,000 of them. So many people have claimed to have been the first to say that "politics is showbiz for ugly people" it must be true.

Apart from falling in love, there can be few more affirmative sensations than having people put their cross next to your name. That sort of endorsement for your existence cannot be bettered.

> 'David Cameron's folly was putting party before country'

But there is something wrong in the way you get it. Advancement in British politics comes from striking an attitude as a teenager, joining a political party and then working your way up the tree, winning the opportunity to fight an unwinnable seat and then, if the gods smile on you, being gifted somewhere with better prospects. It is a system that rewards arrested development.

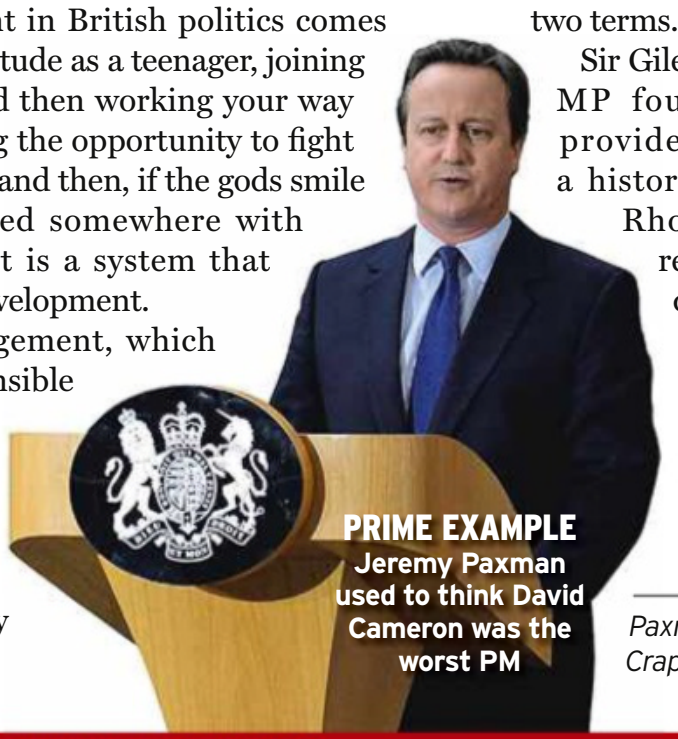

The party arrangement, which obliges perfectly sensible people to pretend the world is simple, turns representatives into drones. Let's hear it for spiky individualists.

Instead, being in Parliament seems to make too many think they're above the rules. Fiona Onasanya, the jailed MP for Peterborough, is an example. And remember the expenses scandal, duck house and all?

Turkeys do not vote for Christmas, so let me suggest some changes that might improve things. Why on earth do we need 650 MPs? Why do they need to be in London? Why must they only converse by standing on their hind legs?

Let's reduce the number of MPs by half and make them meet somewhere more plugged in to the nation. Let Parliament throw out most of its venerable traditions, don't let anyone become an MP until they have had a proper job and make it illegal for anybody to serve more than two terms.

Sir Giles Mompesson, a 17th-century MP found guilty of corruption, provides a model. According to a history of Parliament written by Rhondda MP Chris Bryant – revealed in the expenses scandal to have made a small fortune from the taxpayer – Mompesson was sentenced to be dragged up the Strand with his face in a horse's anus. Organise 650 horses now.

WHAT WE WATCHED

This was a week when TV history was made, as Eric Morecambe and Ernie Wise transferred from ITV to the BBC. The pair weren't to know what small-screen (and Christmas) institutions they were to become – especially once they teamed up with the legendary comedy writer Eddie Braben in series two – but they gave a flavour of their extraordinary chemistry in their chat with Radio Times.

"He's a great little business manager," Eric said of Ernie's management of their financial affairs. "A lousy actor and lousy straight man, but a great little business manager!"

WHAT YOU SAID

Proms season had got you writing in, with David Carle from Farnborough asking the BBC to showcase classical music throughout the year at different venues, "where the same orchestras and conductors have been known to appear from time to time". TB Sanders from Ilford, meanwhile, took against young Prommers, writing: "They may be the engagingly meritorious representatives of modern youth Radio Times makes them out to be, but to the listener in his home they sound like a multitudinous mob of vulgar hobbledehoys." BEN DOWELL

INVESTIGATING

A detective's downfall

A double murder case ended his career – now former Det Supt Steve Fulcher says the moment he extracted a confession his fate was sealed. Jeff Pope sets the scene…

Jeff Pope's new drama is set in the same bleak country we visited in Little Boy Blue and The Moorside, an England where boys are shot and young women are brutally slain. It's an unforgiving, conflicted and dark place – you could call it Popeland. "I think I'd have to own up to that landscape," he admits, at ITV's London headquarters. "I started out as a journalist on a local newspaper when I was in my late teens. It's bred in you: where is that police car going? Where is that ambulance going? It's not going to be a garden party, is it?"

This time it's the story of two murders near Swindon, that of 22-year-old Sian O'Callaghan in 2011 and 20-year-old Becky Godden, missing since 2003, whose body was found shortly after O'Callaghan's, when local taxi driver Christopher Halliwell admitted both crimes and took Detective Superintendent Steve Fulcher of the Wiltshire constabulary to their burial sites.

In the initial interview, Fulcher (played in the drama by Martin Freeman) failed to caution Halliwell or give him access to a solicitor; he wanted to keep Halliwell talking, in case O'Callaghan was still alive. "But she was dead," says Pope. "And that was a bitter, bitter thing for him. I think he genuinely believed, right up until the end, that there was a chance she was still alive." Fulcher had contravened the Police and Criminal Evidence Act (PACE) and, with his career effectively over, he left the police in 2014.

Today, the mothers of the two lost women (Godden's mother, Karen Edwards, is played by Imelda Staunton and O'Callaghan's mother, Elaine Pickford, by Siobhan Finneran) can't agree on whether Fulcher made the right call.

"Karen believes he did the right thing," explains Pope, "Elaine thinks he shouldn't have breached PACE." And what is Pope's view? "Well, if he hadn't have breached PACE, would he have found Sian?" MICHAEL HODGES

The detective's story

HIS CAREER AS a policeman, and probably Steve Fulcher's entire life, pivots on a few hours on a Wiltshire hillside in the winter of 2011. A detective superintendent with the county's constabulary, he was the senior officer in one of the most contentious police investigations of recent times: the murder of Sian O'Callaghan.

The 22-year-old disappeared after a night out in Swindon in the early hours of 19 March 2011. Fulcher was alerted the next day. The case was grim, but it was standard. Finding missing women and children was what he did. "I've dealt with dozens of kidnaps and my practice as a senior investigating officer was to go into any of these kinds of cases hard and fast," Fulcher says when we meet in London to discuss Jeff Pope's dramatisation.

"All your evidence is gathered or lost in the first golden hour, and if you miss that opportunity, you have these long-running cases, no hopers. Madeleine McCann's a classic case of that. So you put the resources in, and if you find the person, well OK, you've spent a few quid but that's your job. And when you get the child back alive, you've done the right thing and it's home for tea and scones."

Media appeals were made and officers drawn in from neighbouring forces to scour the woods where the last signals from O'Callaghan's mobile phone had been traced. As a body hadn't been found, this was still a "crime in action", not a murder enquiry. There was a chance she was still alive. "If you've got a dead body in a ditch, well, no further harm's going to occur," says Fulcher, now 52. "Crimes in action are far harder. You don't really know what's happened but you do know you've got a race against time to preserve life. But I'd dealt with over 15 crimes in action, I was the national homicide advisor to forces around the country. I wasn't making it up as I went along."

Witness reports suggested O'Callaghan had last been seen in a Toyota Avensis taxi driven by Christopher Halliwell, and the 47-year-old was put under surveillance. Then, on 24 March, Halliwell was seen buying a large amount of paracetamol. It was a clear sign of suicide risk and he was arrested outside a supermarket.

"If he's the only person who knows where Sian is, and if she's being kept bound and gagged, then she'll inevitably die if he takes an overdose. The way to prevent him from killing himself is to place him under arrest. But if he exercises his right to silence, Sian is consigned to inevitable death. In order to save his life, you've cost the victim her life. That's the dichotomy. So what else can I do but negotiate with the individual?"

And that's when Fulcher made his mistake, if you believe it was a mistake. Rather than caution Halliwell and give him access to a solicitor, as the Police and Criminal Evidence Act (PACE) dictates, he drove Halliwell, who was refusing to answer any questions about O'Callaghan, to a nearby beauty spot, Barbury Castle, hoping the setting would break his silence. It worked.

Over the next four torturous hours, Halliwell gradually began to talk. "I'd formed a bond with him," says Fulcher. "It was absolutely intense. One ill-chosen word from me, being too trivial ('Did you see the football last night?') or too authoritarian ('You're an evil bastard'), could have broken the moment, dropped him from the contrition that he was demonstrating."

Halliwell admitted the murder of O'Callaghan and also that of Becky Godden, a 20-year-old who had been missing since 2003. "It was a totally surreal moment because throughout this exchange we had a helicopter over our heads and a 12-vehicle surveillance crew following us. It was on an extraordinary scale."

'Crimes in action are a race against time to preserve life'

The case should have been a triumph, but it would end Fulcher's career. Halliwell was found guilty of the murder of O'Callaghan and sentenced to life in prison, but his confession to murdering Godden was declared inadmissible in court. The conviction for Godden's murder didn't come until Halliwell's second trial in 2016, where the taxi driver defended himself. Fulcher was discredited further when, in 2014, he was found guilty of gross misconduct for his actions in the case.

"That is why there is so much rich material for Jeff," says Fulcher. "You've got three court cases, effectively. The first in 2012, my discipline hearing, which is all recorded and transcribed, and you've got the 2016 court case, which is extraordinary – you couldn't make that up, a serial killer cross-examining me."

AFTER HIS DISCIPLINARY hearing, Fulcher was given a final written warning. "I was reduced to counting pencils in the office, where I had no operational role. My wife Yvonne said, 'This is not a reasonable way to live. I'm leaving Wiltshire, I'm going back to Sussex where we come from. You can come with me or we can part.' " Fulcher had little choice but to resign, but there was no demand for disgraced policemen in Sussex and he was obliged to take dangerous work as a security consultant in Africa, first in Libya, "where the chance of physical survival was that much slimmer", and then Somalia.

Eight years later, Fulcher has still not been exonerated but he claims his own fate is "slightly irrelevant". The real point of the case, he says, is it reveals that police officers' ability to rescue a missing person is fatally compromised by PACE. The act requires officers to give arrested suspects access to a solicitor, who will invariably advise them to remain silent; potentially fatal if the victim is still alive. "If it happens to your daughter, if she's bound and gagged in the boot of ▷ ◁ somebody's car, it means we're not coming."

And that is the crux of his argument. When he made his fateful decision to take Halliwell to Barbury Castle and not follow PACE, Fulcher was initiating a hostage negotiation, he says, not ignoring due process in a murder enquiry. He further argues that the provisions of the Human Rights Act, "Article 2, the right to life of the victim", should override PACE in these circumstances and that the police guidelines on kidnap instruct officers to prioritise the search for the potential hostage over the arrest of the suspect.

THERE WAS NO rescue for O'Callaghan. Halliwell had killed her on the night he took her and now, locked in strange communion with Fulcher on the hillside, he admitted as much, as the helicopter hovered above and dozens of officers looked on. He took police to where he'd left her partially buried body near the White Horse at Uffington in Oxfordshire. "He then turned to me," says Fulcher, "and said, 'Do you want to see another one?' You've got a choice to make. You can say, no thanks mate, I prefer living comfortably and keeping my career, or you do what I consider to be your responsible duty as a police officer.'"

Fulcher put Halliwell in the car. "He was in tears as he took me to this location, Eastleach, which we'd never have found in a million years. He described what he'd done and how he'd spent all night digging a five-foot-deep hole to bury Godden. And he paced it out, one foot in front of another, then said, 'She's under here.'"

Halliwell had been confused and picked the wrong spot but eventually they found the body. When DNA results came back from the laboratory they confirmed the identity of Becky Godden, a woman with a history of drug use who'd disappeared four years previously. Her mother, Karen Edwards, had never given up hope of her return, putting out presents and baking a cake on Becky's birthday every year.

'He turned to me and said: Do you want to see another one?'

The day that the DNA results returned, Fulcher realised, was Godden's birthday.

One of the most disturbing scenes in Pope's drama is when Fulcher tells Edwards (Imelda Staunton) that her daughter is dead as she stands by presents that will now never be opened. "Normally, I'd delegate somebody to go to see Karen," says Fulcher. "On her birthday I had to go myself."

There are, he says, lots of other factors that suggest the murder of Godden and O'Callaghan aren't isolated incidents. "The last thing Halliwell said to me that day was when I asked him if there were any more bodies. He didn't say no. He said, 'Isn't that enough?' It didn't register at the time because I'd been like a coiled spring for four hours. But now, in my mind he's unquestionably a serial killer. There are other victims."

IN MAY 2014, Wiltshire police found a stash of evidence, apparently hidden by Halliwell, near a pond in Ramsbury. "There's been a failure to investigate beyond Becky and Sian, but they found 60 items of women's clothing that contained Sian's boot and Becky's cardigan, identified by her brother, together with a shotgun," says Fulcher. "You don't have to be the top detective in the country to work out that's potential evidence of other offending. Sian was murdered within two minutes of her getting into the car, abducted for the purpose of murder. It would be strange to conclude that there weren't other victims."

Wiltshire constabulary are apparently unwilling to reopen investigations into Halliwell's crimes, though Fulcher hopes the ITV drama might change that. "I was told Jeff was the best and it's extraordinary what he's done. He went to the nth degree. He'd visit the most tangential character, spend a day with them, really test what I've been saying, test this whole story out."

Meanwhile, Fulcher will continue his campaign for the Human Rights Act to be given precedence over PACE, but he'll never work in the British police again. "I'm blacklisted, no employment prospects at all," he says. "Why would they employ a police officer guilty of gross misconduct? But I will keep banging on. If you can't get protection of life right as a police force, there's no point in having a police force, because that's the first duty of a police officer, to preserve life. Everything else is speeding offences." MH

‘WE’RE A MUCH BETTER NATION THAN WE THINK’

Nick Knowles says DIY SOS can’t heal Britain – but it has shown him how to repair the Brexit divide

INTERVIEW BY KATE BATTERSBY

WARNING: THE NATION’S tissue supplies are about to be strained to the extreme. If you’re habitually left emotionally wrung out by the stories of courage and resourcefulness from each episode of DIY SOS: the Big Build, then brace yourself for the 20th anniversary programme. Few broadcasts this year will pack a more affecting punch than this one-off edition where Nick Knowles revisits some of the scores of people in need whose lives have been transformed by the show.

“We didn’t want the anniversary programme just to be a self-congratulatory pat on the back,” says Knowles, rubbing his familiarly craggy face. “So it’s about the legacy, reflecting how we can give people the tools to go forward – the raising-a-barn thing, where people feel good about their community again.”

It’s a theme Knowles has a soapbox passion about. Ask him more or less anything on these matters and it can lead to a thousand intense answers all in one, each aspect peppered with anecdote and information. His message is that Britain isn’t broken – it just needs to rediscover its sense of self-belief.

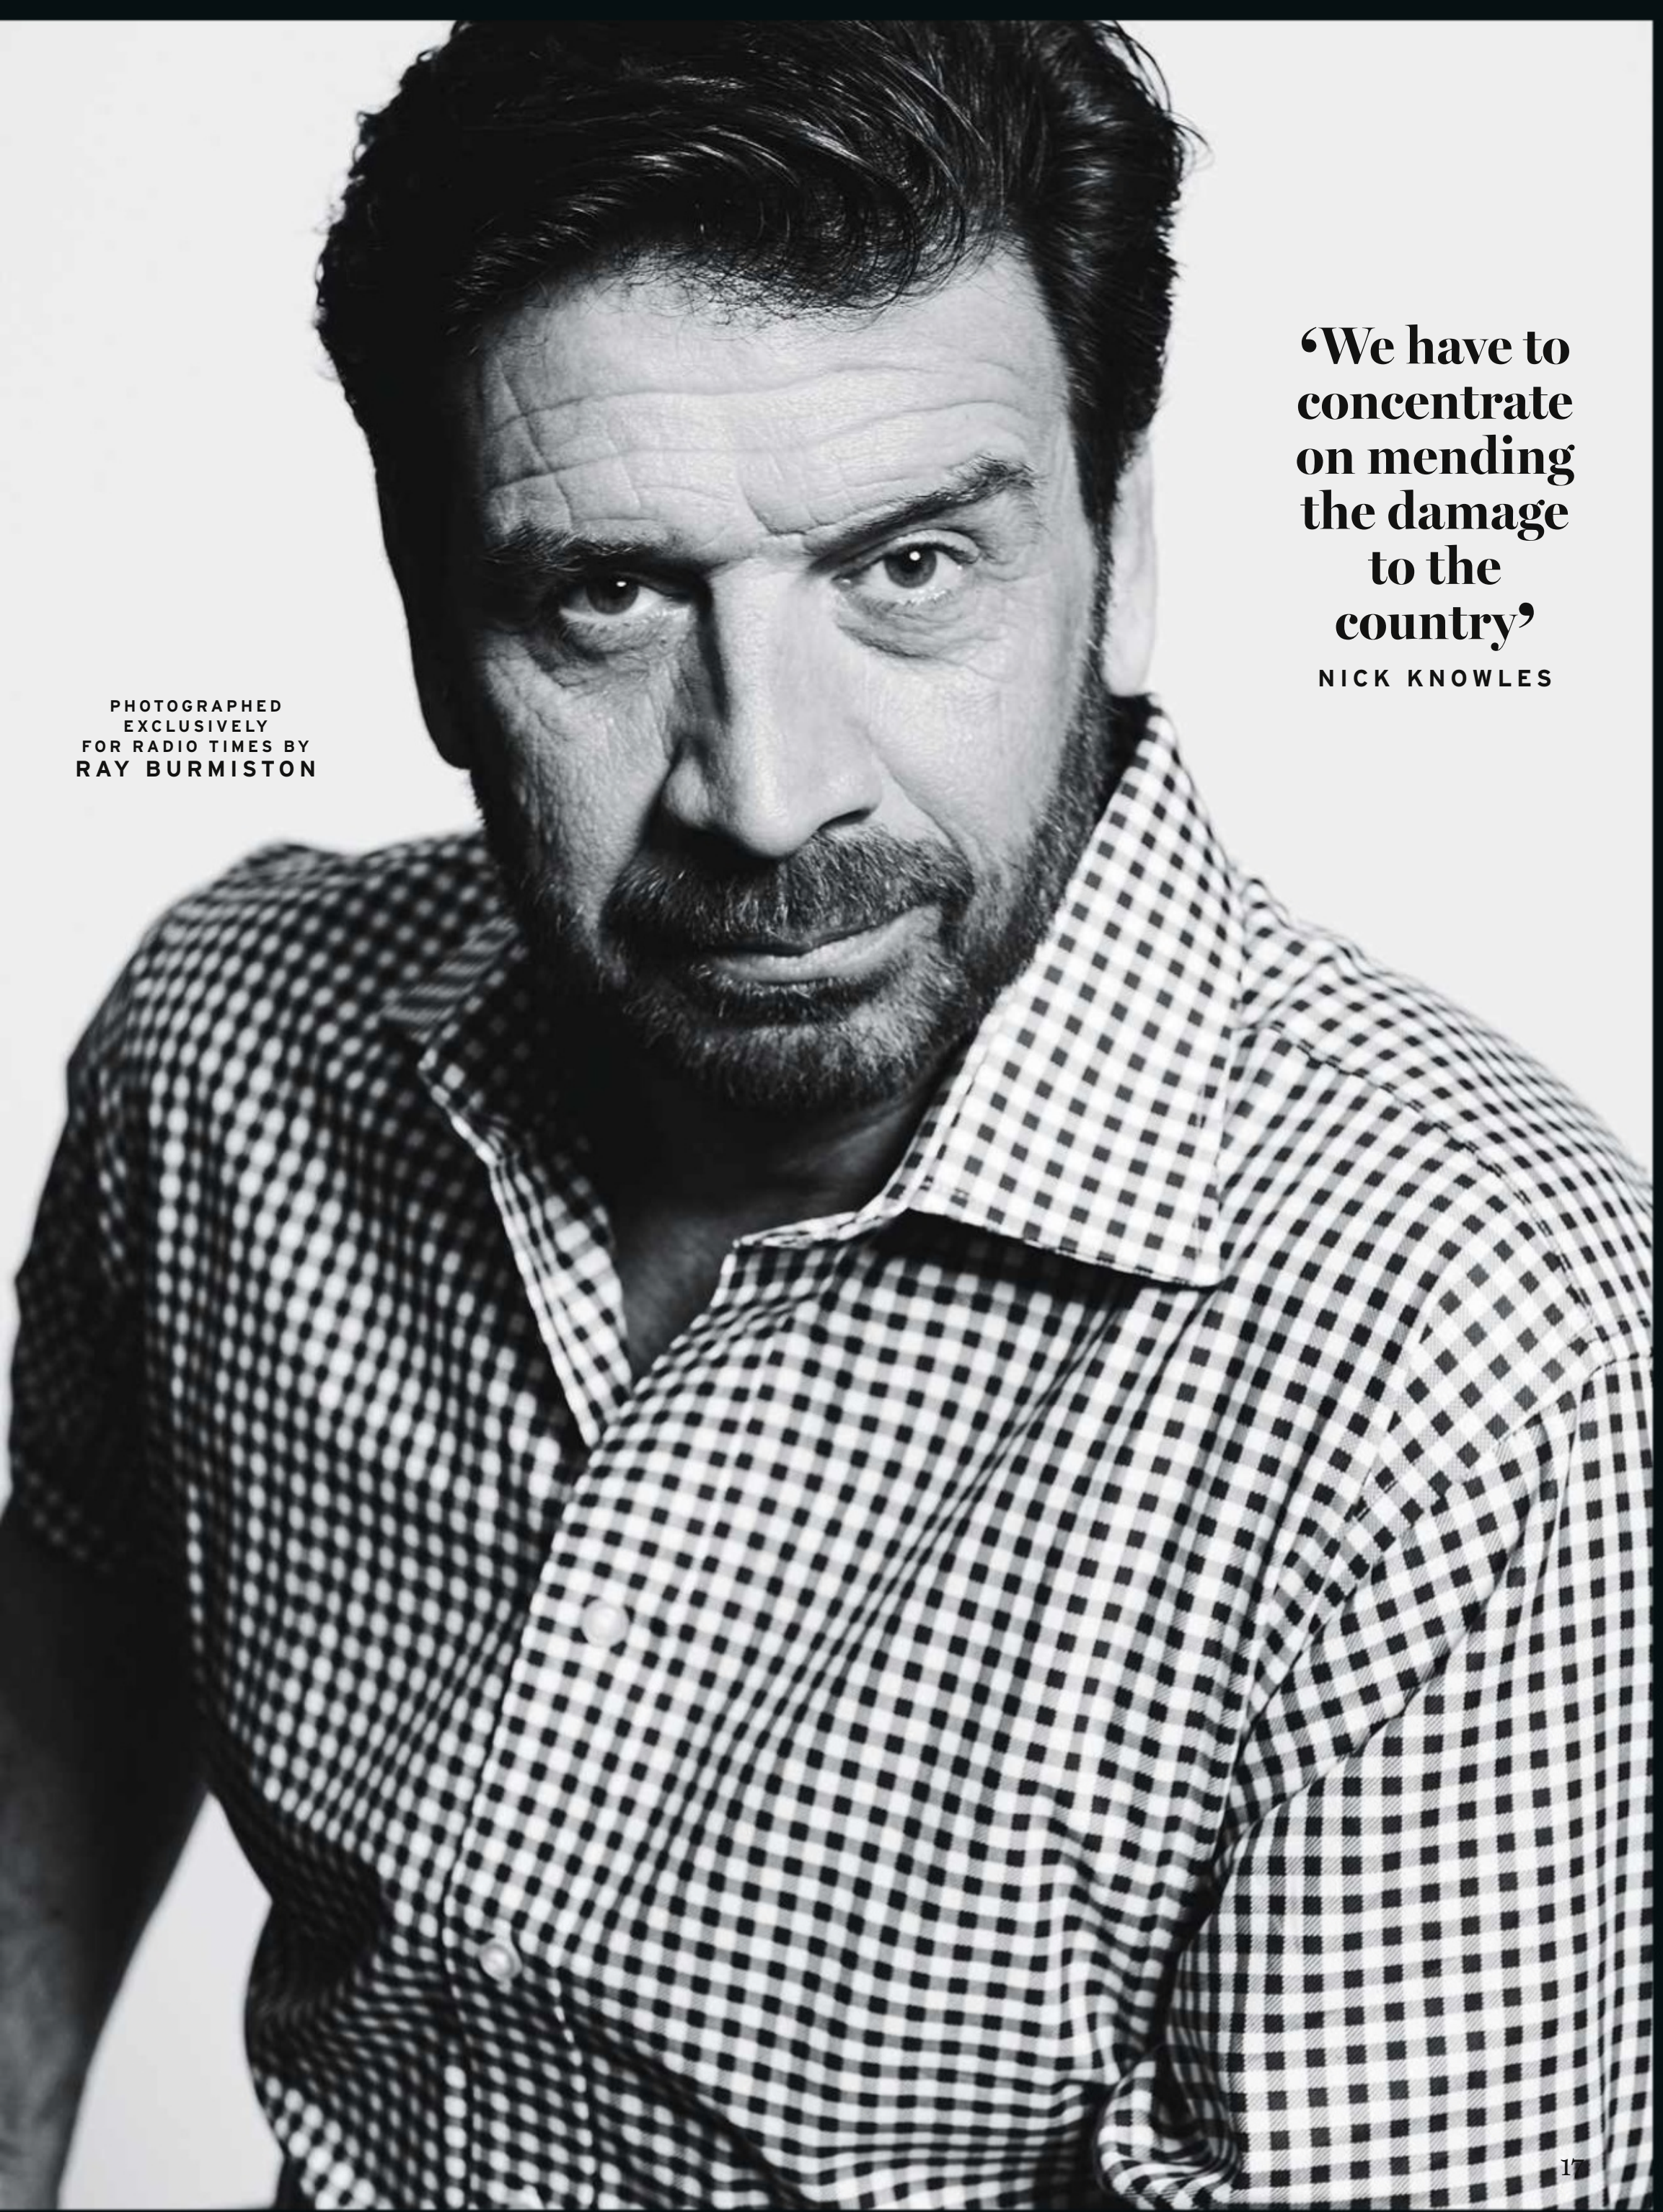

“We hear a lot on the news about disaster, people being ripped off or attacked, and so much about all the divides – rich/poor, north/south, Brexit/Remain,” he says. “So the narrative becomes that community doesn’t exist any more. But when The Big Build turns up, about 250 tradespeople volunteer along with the suppliers, and everyone gives nine days each lasting 12 hours or more, and they all feel great. We’re a much better nation than we think. There are over 160,000 charities in the UK surviving on donations, with volunteers all over the place. There is natural good in the country which is overlooked.”

And the series itself has evoked some of that “natural good”, as volunteer DIY SOS groups have sprung up. Band of Builders is run by tradespeople and helps members of the construction industry when times get tough. Hull 4 Heroes is building an £8 million “veterans’ village” in East Yorkshire to support ex-servicemen and women as they make the transition back into civilian life.

“Those two charities, which I’m involved with, are harnessing what we see on The Big Build,” says Knowles. “They allow the whole community to look after one another again.”

IT’S NOT OFTEN that a presenter bumps into a role that becomes career-defining. Having started in television as a runner before presenting local news, Knowles now has a list of credits as long your arm. He was already 37 in the autumn of 1999 when he first presented what was originally a half-hour show of knockabout fun, righting Britain’s DIY disasters. It was not until 2008 that its format became socially significant, when floods prompted the programme to help a Doncaster foster family and local community space. From 2010 DIY SOS morphed into The Big Build, recruiting friends and local trades to help those seriously in need. Knowles is determined to drive forward the unique impetus already created.

“I’m hoping to announce something groundbreaking in the next few months about bringing big money from business into the social care arena,” he says. “Whether government should be tapping into this reservoir of goodwill is a discussion I ▷

◁ leave to other people. There's no doubt there's potential to make it happen outside the platform of television, and I'm determined I will find a way to play a part. I do have the ability to be that catalyst. I have a moral responsibility to do it.

"Brexit has drawn the country in opposite directions. Whichever way Brexit goes – and I won't give my view on it – we have to concentrate on mending the damage to the country. I absolutely believe it can be done. I'm not saying DIY SOS can heal the world. But we do see people come together. We all eat together – a plasterer sat next to a businessman, getting on like a house on fire. Get people in the same room and we can break down these divisions to create good."

He's wary of sounding evangelical, "or like a TED talk". But he does talk well about these things – rather better, in fact, than he does about himself. Ask him anything requiring a little reflection on the kind of person he is, and – consciously or not – he soon steers the subject away.

"I'm not one to look back," he shrugs. "I was born on a council estate in Southall but was lucky to finish my schooling at a grammar school in Tunbridge Wells, which couldn't be more different. There's an expectation that it means I've been trying to prove myself. But it's not really accurate. I always had a willingness to learn, which I attribute to my dad. He was my hero. He could walk into a room and talk to anyone easily. If I have a skill, it's probably that.

'I'm not going to be a hermit... Everyone likes to be loved'

"If I could tell my 16-year-old self anything, it would be to stop showing off. Young men spend the first ten years of their adulthood trying to show everyone how important they are, and they don't realise till they're 30 that they don't need to." So is he proud of where he's got to?

"I don't think in those terms. I'm not much of one for regrets. Everyone fails at various stages, in work and home life. I'm not someone who worries about things I can't change. I've tried to do my best and be a decent human being."

As is the lot of those in his profession, his personal life is well documented. He has two children, 26-year-old Tuesday and Charlie, 25, by his first wife Gillian. His son TJ, also 25, was born following his affair with Paula Beckett, while his four-year-old son Eddie is the product of his second marriage, to Jessica Rose Moore, which has now ended. Earlier this year he was linked with the Labour MP Louise Haigh, and the day after our interview he was photographed with 26-year-old public relations executive Emily Hallinan.

HIS LATEST FLAME
Knowles is keeping quiet about his relationship with Emily Hallinan

Asked about his current romantic status, Knowles grins ruefully. "I've finally decided I'm not going to talk about my private life," he declares. "Would I like to marry again? I think my work balance has been wrong in the past, and I'm trying hard to make that better. I'm not going to become a hermit, shave my head and live on a mountainside. Everyone likes to be loved, and I would like to be loved."

The one part of his life he consciously enjoys reflecting on is his relationship with his late father, who died in 1997. Knowles – who named his youngest son after his father – has often declared him his hero, but seems not to have contemplated whether he is a similar role model to his own children.

"I don't know if they see me as their hero," he muses. "Children don't say that sort of thing, do they? I never told my dad he was mine. He'd have been appalled. He wasn't a touchy-feely guy at all. Late in his life he had a stroke, and when he woke up in hospital I was sat next to him holding his hand. When he realised, he pulled his hand away because men don't hold hands, whereas I hug my sons all the time.

"My dad was old school, and that's a big reason why I stay at the BBC. There are benefits and difficulties in working at the BBC, but one of the benefits is that my dad would have been proud of it."

Knowles himself has always taken seriously the matter of providing for his family, and has admitted to spending too much time away working. Striking a balance remains a trick he has yet to perfect, perhaps.

"If you come from my background, you do think it's all going to end tomorrow, so you keep working," he says. "Even when I'm relaxing, I don't do nothing. I play music, cook, read, write, volunteer for archaeological digs.

"But I love work. If you can handle rejection and keep going, the world is an amazing playground. I hear about presenters who sit in their Winnebago until it's time to do their piece to camera, and then they leave again. I'm on site all the time. I love the vibe, love knowing what's going on in everyone's lives and asking them about it, love shovelling gravel, carrying steels. Nothing to do with making telly. I work with, and for, amazing people. Me and the others on The Big Build spend a lot of time away from our families to do it but it's the best job in the world. How could we ever give it up?"

THE BIG BUILD

BUILDING BLOCKS

FIVE THOUSAND applications for DIY SOS: the Big Build are received each year, 1,000 of which meet the strict criteria. These include need, location (can't be within the M25), nature of build (has to be capable of being finished in nine days) and absence of any savings. With only nine episodes a year, selection is tough.

FOUR applicants per episode are shortlisted and meet with the show's producer and occupational therapist.

About four months pass between confirmed selection and the build itself. Each build involves upwards of 250 VOLUNTEER TRADESPEOPLE, some of whom stay with local families, while others camp. No one – not even the businesses donating materials – can advertise its involvement.

As of 2019, there have been 85 Big Builds worth 16 MILLION POUNDS, involving 20,000 VOLUNTEERS (including Princes William and Harry). Knowles says the show celebrates "working-class people as working-class heroes". And adds: "They are using their skills to make a difference to someone's life and they are falling back in love with those skills."

CAUGHT IN THE ACT

She has landed her first lead role in a big BBC drama – so why does Holliday Grainger hate being the focus of attention?

THE RT INTERVIEW BY RICHARD GODWIN

PHOTOGRAPHED EXCLUSIVELY FOR RADIO TIMES BY MARK HARRISON

As I watch Holliday Grainger being photographed for Radio Times, I can't help but marvel at how businesslike she is. CLICK! She switches pose with every flash of the camera: one second she's unleashing a high kick, the next radiating a vixen-like glamour, the next turning coy and vulnerable. She scrolls through the spectrum of human emotion at the speed of a teenager scanning through selfies. But there's a steely core, something that doesn't move at all.

She seems surprised when I tell her afterwards that I found the performance impressive. "It's a business, isn't it?" she says in her faint Mancunian accent, eroded by years of costume drama. "That's how I see it. There are so many aspects of the business and you have to be on top of all of it. This" – she makes a gesture that I take to mean me, this conversation – "is work. I'm not doing this for fun." ▷

CHILD STAR
Grainger, aged six, with Colin Buchanan in All Quiet on the Preston Front

CAUGHT ON CAMERA
Taking the lead as DI Rachel Carey in the new BBC1 drama The Capture

◁ By now we're sitting outside, by Regent's Canal in north London. It's an absolute peach of a day. The sun seems to be shining on Grainger's career, but I will try not to mistake this for fun.

Grainger first appeared on most television viewers' radars thanks to her role as intern-turned-sidekick Robin Ellacott in Strike, BBC1's Sunday-night drama based on the detective novels written by JK Rowling under the pseudonym Robert Galbraith. Her on-screen chemistry with one-legged sleuth Cormoran Strike, played by Tom Burke, was a delight. But she has actually been acting for a quarter of a century – quite a feat, given that she's only 31.

HER FIRST ROLE came aged six, when she appeared in the comedy drama All Quiet on the Preston Front. Her mum had a friend who had a friend who was a casting agent and little Holliday aced the audition. She sees it now as a Sliding Doors moment. "It does make me wonder, if that never came up, would I have ever acted?" But the roles kept on coming so frequently as to make a career in acting feel almost inevitable.

She studied English at Leeds University, but dropped out when she landed a role in HBO's The Borgias (she eventually completed her degree via the Open University). Still, who needs lectures when you are being cast in Jane Eyre, Great Expectations and Anna Karenina?

Grainger's snow-white complexion made her a natural for dramas set in the 19th century, but she's keen to make her mark on the 21st century too – and ready to graduate from sidekick to the person solving the crimes. The Capture, BBC1's tense new surveillance drama, is the first series to place her front and centre.

The six-parter takes CCTV as its focus, a subject that ought to be close to our hearts, since Britain has more CCTV cameras per citizen than any other country in the world. Grainger plays DI Rachel Carey, an ambitious young detective with "a backbone of steel," as she puts it, and Callum Turner (who played surly rogue Anatole Kuragin in the recent BBC1 adaptation of War and Peace) plays Shaun Emery, a working-class soldier. When the series opens, Emery is appealing against a prison sentence for unlawfully executing an enemy combatant in Afghanistan. His lawyer manages to clear his name after showing that the video evidence that convicted him was flawed – and the idea that we can't always believe what we are seeing comes to be the dominant theme of a drama that plays on fears of fake news and digital manipulation.

'I'm not a young nubile Jane Austen lead any more'

Grainger is a huge fan of police dramas, particularly Scandi ones. She says she and her mum compete to do impressions of Saga Noren from The Bridge, and the only time she can recall being starstruck was during a Skype encounter with Sophie Grabol, star of The Killing.

She takes her research seriously – the best part of any job, she says, is the moment when the character is born in her mind – and she "wormed" her way into a police station in London to research this role. She ended up shadowing a couple of homicide detectives, including a female officer who, like Carey, was on the police's Fast Track programme, which is designed to catapult the most capable young constables into senior roles but often puts more experienced noses out of joint.

"It has this slight stigma that goes along with it. That's a real thing. And you can see where it's come from, too. Carey is ambitious, she is rude to people who are more experienced than her." She is also sleeping with a senior officer, something she doesn't seem too conflicted about. "True… But at the same time, she's genuinely good at what she does and she has this moral compass. She really believes in the police as an institution, and in the work they are doing."

THE BRITISH POLICE proved rather different from what she expected after all that Scandi noir. "What shocked me – and this is going to sound weird – is how much it feels like the BBC."

The BBC? "Yes!" she insists. "It's all open-plan, everyone hot-desks, and the more you're promoted up the hierarchy, the more managerial, and less interesting, your position becomes. The feet-on-the-ground stuff is the exciting part of the job, but by the time you're in Carey's position, it becomes really corporate. That was really eye-opening. You have this image of rookie cops on the street – but actually, Carey is more like a young businesswoman aspiring to be a CEO."

Grainger is aware that viewers won't necessarily find Carey endearing. "But in the end I didn't mind. I don't know if it necessarily matters. She doesn't need or want to be liked."

There's a hope that The Capture could do for her what Killing Eve has done for Jodie Comer. Grainger clearly has the talent – and the cheekbones – and Strike has already proved a huge audience hit. "I sometimes feel like there's industry buzz about certain things, and public buzz about certain things, and they don't always collide," she reflects. "My friends and family have all watched The Capture and loved it. It's the most positive response I've had from anything."

But Grainger's breaks haven't all worked out as intended. She starred opposite Chris Pine in The Finest Hours (2016), a big-budget American rescue drama, but it turned out to be a flop. She was also cast in Tulip Fever, a lavish 2014 Harvey Weinstein-produced period drama with Alicia Vikander and Tom Hollander, but it ended up in development purgatory and only recently saw the light of day. A few critics have noted that Grainger is the best thing in it.

Now that the costume-drama calls have stopped coming – "probably because I'm not a young nubile Jane Austen lead any more, am I?" – she has gravitated to independent films. She's a riot in Sophie Hyde's Animals, the tale of two eccentric female friends approaching their 30s, with more than a shade of Fleabag in its depictions of female friendship. And she recently starred opposite Anna Paquin in Tell It to the Bees, a lesbian romance set in 1950s Scotland. The reviews were not kind but Grainger emerged with credit.

'I was shocked by how much the police feels like the BBC'

I suggest that new doors seem to be opening. "Doors are opening… That's a funny thing to say," she counters. "People from the outside have been saying that for years. But to me, doors have always been opening."

At the least, due to the sheer amount of content produced for the new streaming channels and a new generation of female screenwriters and directors, the number and range of interesting female roles has expanded hugely in recent years. That must be exciting? "I don't know how anyone isn't working, to be honest," she deadpans.

After 25 years as an actor, she says she has seen a lot of changes in how women are treated on-set, most of it for the better. "For once it does feel like there's a burgeoning change that society is actually going to stick to."

She has recently been bingeing on Killing Eve and Fleabag, and dreams of working with their creator, Phoebe Waller-Bridge, one day. She is reassured that there is "a sort of meritocracy" at work in TV. "There is now so much stuff out there, but the cream of the crop will rise to the top. When there's interesting or truthful writing out there, people can find it. There's no reason for people to watch something they're not interested in."

As we continue talking and she goes back into DI Rachel Carey's character, I begin to see why the role appealed. "She's got incredible confidence and determination and belief in herself, but she doesn't give anything away. She ends up having this cool, reserved stillness. I love that."

Grainger is more than happy to talk about her roles, but seems deeply uncomfortable when I ask the mildest question about her life off-screen. She has been in a relationship with fellow actor Harry Treadaway for four years now. But when I ask about it she won't mention his name and only says she lives in "London". Which part of London? "North." Nothing more specific? She laughs awkwardly. It's Highgate, as it turns out.

When I ask if she has any favourite hangouts, she says Hampstead Heath, the easiest place to get lost in London.

She has recently returned from a trip to Los Angeles. I ask if she looks up any actors from past projects when she's there? "Not necessarily. For someone who… I'm quite socially shy, actually." It's not somewhere she would ever consider moving: "It took me long enough to leave Manchester for London."

I sense she's a private person? "I am!" she says, looking relieved at last, and laughs again. Has she had a bad experience with the press? "No, not at all," she says. "I just find it really exposing when I read an interview with myself and people get me right. If people misquote me and get things wrong, I'm fine with that – then it just seems a bit silly. But when people get me right, I find it so unnerving."

She would be far happier, she says, if I simply made up a load of nonsense about her rather than asking what she does at weekends and what she thinks of the #MeToo movement. Then she could laugh about it.

"I don't really think of myself as a public person. This is a job for me. I do it and I go home. If I couldn't do that, it would really trouble me. Where's the end point? Where's the line between the work and me? I'm super-open with friends. If we were in the pub I'd answer anything. But I don't want to see it in print."

I sense she might find the next few years a little awkward.

Away with the fairies...

After a career break to raise his son, Orlando Bloom is back to take the lead in a fantasy drama with real-world relevance

ORLANDO BLOOM IS about to star in one TV show, but first he wants to talk about another. "Did you see that Michael Apted series Seven Up?" he says, referring to the documentary classic that returns to the same group of people every seven years.

"Well, I saw that before my son was born and it said, 'Give me a child until he is seven and I will give you the man.' I think somewhere in my brain that lodged in my head. So I never wanted to leave my son for very long."

As a result, Bloom, the actor whose Errol Flynn cheekbones were, for a few years, emblazoned on every billboard, first in the Lord of the Rings series and then in Pirates of the Caribbean, has spent the years since 2011, when his son Flynn was born to his then wife Miranda Kerr, putting his career second. Last year Flynn turned seven – "He's at school and he's settled" – and so for Bloom it meant time for a new challenge.

The result is Amazon's Carnival Row, a sprawling, dark, neo-Victorian fantasy set in a world filled with mythological immigrant creatures – the "fae" – whose homelands have been invaded by the empires of man. Bloom plays a human detective, Rycroft Philostrate, opposite Cara Delevingne as refugee faerie Vignette Stonemoss. Philo, as he's known, is charged with investigating a string of murders in the immigrant quarter of his city – a case that soon spirals into a wider conspiracy.

"It's a look at life with the 'other'," says Bloom, speaking on set in Prague. "I've done years of work with Unicef and I've seen the migrants and the refugee crisis unfolding before my eyes; I've seen people go across the borders. We're really using the fae folk in our show to represent those migrant refugees."

Philo, Bloom points out, has been institutionalised his entire life, from being raised an orphan to military service to the police force.

"He's pretty much gone from one institution to another, which I think is always interesting. I went to boarding school at 11. Then I moved to London when I was 16."

He did a two-year A-level course in drama then joined the National Youth Theatre, spending two seasons there and earning a scholarship to train at the British American Drama Academy before studying at the Guildhall. Two days after he graduated he was cast as white-wigged elf Legolas in The Lord of the Rings. You sense he hasn't really had much time to stop and take stock since.

"The beginning of my career was a lot of big stuff and I was very visible. Having not been so visible for a while this show felt like a good time to get back on screen and work the muscles."

It takes a lot for an actor to admit that their visibility may have waned, but in the Czech Republic, away from home, Bloom is introspective. "I've moved out here for six months. I had my son come visit, but he's in school in LA now so mainly I've been on my own."

Has he been lonely? "Yes. The hardest thing is not being around, getting to do the school run and things like that. But it's been a time to reflect. I've enjoyed the time alone, and maybe that's where I'm at. I turned 41 out here. It's like I have a simpler view of life than I used to. I even got into cycling!" That's a cue for Bloom to show me a selection of pictures on Instagram of himself clad in head-to-toe lycra.

The experience of making a TV show has, he says, opened his eyes to other sides of the industry. "In those huge movies you can sometimes feel like a cog, part of a giant wheel. This experience has taught me a lot, because it's more intimate in many ways. When people used to ask me if I wanted to direct, I was like, 'How would you do that?' or, 'I could never…' Now I'd be more open to that. I wanted to finesse myself as an actor before I went into anything else."

Bloom was a megastar at 21 and went on to star in two of the biggest Hollywood franchises ever, back to back. He's worked on Broadway and in the West End. How much more finessing does he need?

"Yes, but I was under a giant magnifying glass at a really young age. I was Legolas for three movies and Will Turner for three movies and while I did other things, they were all in between those massive movies. Even if you're not pigeonholed, those roles set a really strong tone. I didn't get to do an indie here, an indie there, come up with a bit of TV, make a real mess of one thing or another."

Now he's getting his TV moment. When it came to launching Orlando Bloom 2.0, though, I wonder if he had any misgivings about returning to fantasy in Carnival Row.

"Not at all. I love that world. This isn't fantasy for fantasy's sake. This is very real, like Lord of the Rings, in a way. To be honest, you didn't look at Lord of the Rings and think it was a 'fantasy movie', even though there was more of the fantastical in that, when you went to Rivendell and Lothlórien and the Elven worlds. Carnival Row is much more steampunk, grounded in reality."

FITTING IN
Adopting the full lycra look in Prague

There's a pause. The studios we're in today are a cavernous series of warehouses where they used to make Communist propaganda films. Around Bloom, supporting artists walk by wearing wings and hooves, and everything is weird and otherworldly. Bloom and I are the only two Brits in the building. Does the boy who grew up in Canterbury miss the UK?

"I totally do. So much so. I haven't had a long period of time there in a while. I want to go back more, now that my son's of an age where I want him to understand where he's from. He's half English. I really want him to experience that, even though he won't be going to school there any time soon. Unless Trump blows up America."

'The hardest thing is not being around to do the school run'

Ever since moving to New Zealand to film the Lord of the Rings trilogy aged 20, Bloom has been more of a world citizen. His cut-glass accent has been ground down with a mid-Atlantic twang. When filming wrapped on Carnival Row, he returned to LA and proposed to his on-off girlfriend, singer Katy Perry, but with a second series announced he'll be preparing to pack his bags for Prague again. Britain will always be home, though, and he misses it.

"Through my 20s and into my early 30s I was never in one place for more than six months. But in my heart I feel very British. I miss the humour, the turn of phrase, the way we interact, the way in which you can be vocal about things."

Too vocal at times. He still, he says, gets the Legolas fans, nearly 20 years on, holding up pictures when, for example, he returned to London to star in the play Killer Joe last year.

"You push past that. When you've taken some time to raise a kid and live a bit of life, everything is more fun now." BENJI WILSON

Sexing up Sand

KRIS MARSHALL

MAN OF VISION
Kris Marshall plays Sanditon developer Tom Parker

‘There is an element of naughtiness to Jane Austen’

“I don’t have a problem showing my bum,” says Kris Marshall, referring to the startling scene in last Sunday’s first episode of Sanditon in which he appeared without his Regency-era britches, waistcoat, or anything else. “The simple fact was female nudity was a lot more hidden away in those days, and male nudity was kind of natural. So it’s completely historically accurate and Andrew Davies isn’t sexing Austen up at all.”

Still, as you might expect after Davies’s adaptations of Pride and Prejudice, Middlemarch and Vanity Fair, there are bits in this version that didn’t feature in Jane Austen’s original, unfinished manuscript – such as bare bums. The women are stuck in knitted costumes and woollen bonnets, but a large chunk of the male cast get to gallop naked along the beach; a very Davies touch. “The only issue for me,” says Marshall, “is that out of the male leads in the show, I’m the most senior by 14 years. These other boys are very beautiful and gym-ready. I had to watch the carbs.”

Marshall, 46, plays Tom Parker, a 19th-century developer seeking to create a society resort, a sort of Bath-on-Sea, in a Sussex fishing village called Sanditon. The Napoleonic Wars are over, the rich are turning their minds to leisure and there are fortunes to be made. “Tom Parker has confidence and brio,” says Marshall. “He’s a visionary.”

Austen began the novel in January 1817 but completed only 11 chapters before she died in July of the same year, most probably of Hodgkin’s lymphoma. Several writers have tried to finish the book since, mostly literary figures rather than an 82-year-old with a reputation for saucing up the classics. Is Davies’s script really in tune with Austen? “Absolutely,” says Marshall. “It’s witty and lustful but tastefully done, and that’s kind of what she was about. There is an element a naughtiness to Austen, slightly hidden, and puritans may disagree with me, but it’s there.”

Marshall has played some very popular parts. Between 2000 and 2005 he was Nick in the sitcom My Family. He squeezed in an appearance as the geekish Colin in Love, Actually in 2003, then starred as Adam in the BT television adverts that began in 2005 and ran for six years. From 2014 to 2017, he sleuthed in the Caribbean as Death in Paradise’s DI Humphrey Goodman.

Marshall has been married to Hannah Dodkin since 2012. Their first child was a boy but the arrival of a daughter persuaded Marshall to leave the BBC1 hit. “After Death in Paradise, I went back into the theatre for a year. Then I finished and thought, ‘Right, now I haven’t got any work. Maybe that wasn’t such a good idea…’ Plus I’d been living by a beach – what was I thinking? These things happen…

“But I consider myself entirely blessed,” he says. “I left school having completely fed my A-levels, then I made a living out of acting for 23 years. Even if it all ends tomorrow, that’s pretty much a career. I can’t really go anywhere without being recognised – a small price to pay.”

Andrew Davies is renowned for racy dramas, but the stars of his new adaptation say Jane Austen was doing that 200 years ago

ANNE REID

"At the risk of sounding extremely immodest," says Anne Reid, who is 84 but shows no signs of being an octogenarian, "I think I look absolutely fantastic in Sanditon. Though a bit like a dwarf, as the men are all six feet five, or a pink mushroom, when I've got a hat on."

Reid does look fantastic in Sanditon, and not at all like a pink mushroom. And rather than dwarfish, her Lady Denham, the rich widow whose fortune nearly everyone in town is eyeing up, is fantastically grand and brings bearing to the series. "Bearing!" she shouts. "No one has ever said anything so nice to me before in my life." Part of the effect, she explains, is the corsets. "The first time you put them on you think, 'Oh my God, I can't breathe.' But then you get used to it, and it makes the dress fit so much better."

As ever with Davies's adaptations, bosoms heave and eyelashes flutter, but it's the male nudity that surprised Reid. "I don't think it's Andrew. It's the times we live in. There are a lot of naked males around and I think it's unnecessary. Look at Poldark. But I'm old and it's what people want nowadays. It was Daniel Craig's fault, coming out of the sea [in Casino Royale, 2006]. It's just a thing now: if you've got the sea and you've got a bloke, then he has to take his kit off and get in the water. I said, 'I hope they don't ask me to do it.' I'd want a great deal of money." How much? "About four million pounds might do it. I could put the nation off their tea and then retire."

Reid objects when I say she could do whatever she wants as far as the nation is concerned. "I'm not universally popular. A lot of people find me very boring, actually." Really? "I'm sure they do. Nobody's going to tell me, though, are they?"

Reid first knew stardom playing Val Barlow in Coronation Street in the 1960s; recently she's become a national figure again thanks to her role as Celia Dawson in Sally Wainwright's Last Tango in Halifax, a part she'll be returning to when filming begins this September, after Wainwright relented and agreed to do another series. "I was always very publicly saying that Sally made a mistake in not doing any more," Reid says. "Eventually she rang me up and said, 'You've got to stop saying these things about me on the radio.' And I said, 'But it's worked!'"

Reid enjoys the flood of attention, but she'd have liked the good parts earlier in life. Would she have had a better career were she a man? "We've had terrible inequality, but I don't want to be a man. I like being a woman and the best thing of course is that you can have a baby. That was the most important in my life, having a child. And I might get killed for saying this, but I like men to open doors and carry my luggage. We're not supposed to like that, are we?"

'There are a lot of naked males around – it's Daniel Craig's fault'

ROSE WILLIAMS

Before she took the role of Charlotte Heywood, the young heroine of Sanditon in Andrew Davies's adaptation, Rose Williams, 25, hadn't read any Jane Austen. Now she's a convert to both writers. "I think Austen is the ultimate feminist," says Williams. "She pushed it as far as she could in the time that she was in – she didn't get married and she had the balls to publish her works under the name 'A Lady'." And Davies? "Andrew is honestly one of the funniest, cheekiest, most brilliantly bright people I've ever met. I was in awe of him really, but once you get to know him, he's just a great person."

'There was sensuality in all Austen's stories'

Previously in historical dramas The Borgias and Reign, she thinks Davies's physical take on the mores of 1817 is the right one. "There was sensuality and sexuality throughout all of Austen's stories if you pay attention. She indicates a lot of sexual tension and writes awkward conversations with bubbling sexuality between the characters. All of that energy is 100 per cent in her books, so Andrew just pulls that out and puts it on screen.

"I don't think that across the series there are any moments where the sexuality is overt or irrelevant to what the characters would be doing. People were having sex and people were falling in love in that time. I don't think it's bad to put a little bit of that in."

THEO JAMES

In 2009, Theo James, now 36, played Kemal Pamuk, the Turkish diplomat who had a heart attack while in bed with Lady Mary in Downton Abbey, so he knows all about the dangers of screen sex. "You have be conscious of salaciousness for the point of salaciousness," he says. "If there's going to be any nakedness, it has to be there for a narrative reason, and then it's fine. It's fairly pointless to have someone whipping their kit off for the sake of it, their sun-drenched bodies quivering in the wind. But if it adds to the story, it can be fun but also natural, and doesn't feel shoe-horned in for generated sexiness."

No danger of that with Andrew Davies. "There's a quality in the way Andrew writes," says James. "There's the romance of it, there's the pageantry, the gallantry, all the things that we used to do, but now there's a kind of a wryness and a twinkle."

James plays Sidney Parker, brother of Kris Marshall's Tom, who is drawn into a relationship with Charlotte Heywood, meeting her affection with a broody, mesmeric performance. "In Regency Britain, there's a sense of opulence, but also of authority and pomposity," says James. "And that bleeds into the clothing and how the women, and men particularly, peacock themselves." Harvey Weinstein was a master of the movie universe – now he's facing trial for rape and sexual assault. This week some of the women who want to see him face justice speak out

ALL EYES WILL be on New York in the coming weeks as Hollywood movie boss Harvey Weinstein finally comes to court, accused of rape and sexual assault.

The trial, currently scheduled to start on 9 September, will be a huge test for the #MeToo movement, the online campaign that began almost two years ago when actresses first claimed they'd been abused by the former Miramax boss. Weinstein has always denied the allegations against him.

Bafta-nominated film-maker Ursula Macfarlane, whose feature-length documentary about Weinstein is shown this week on BBC2, believes the trial will be a crucial moment for women around the globe.

"The [Manhattan] District Attorney is convinced they have a good case and good lawyers," she says. "If he doesn't go down, it's going to be a bad moment for the #MeToo movement. It will be a collective gasp, because it's such a huge thing for these women to speak out, and journalists have been trying to tell this story for decades. If he doesn't end up going to jail there is going to be so much heartbreak."

The documentary, Untouchable, premiered at the Sundance Film Festival in January – Entertainment Weekly described it as a "methodical, unmissable takedown". It features testimonies from several of Weinstein's accusers, including Pulp Fiction actress Rosanna Arquette, who claims she was assaulted in a hotel bedroom, and Boardwalk Empire's Paz de la Huerta, who is suing Weinstein in a civil case after he allegedly raped her.

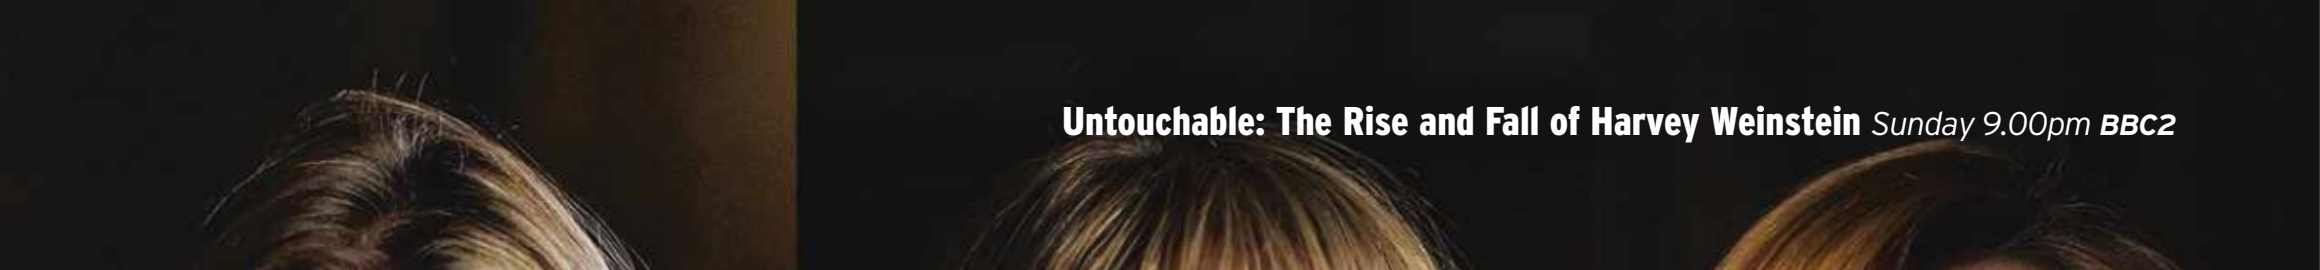

It also features Hope d'Amore, who says Weinstein raped her in a hotel room in the 1970s when he was a young concert promoter. She had not told anybody – even her husband – about the rape for 40 years.

In all, the film features eight female accusers, as well as journalists who pursued the story and former employees, many of whom claim they witnessed Weinstein's bullying and heard rumours of his sexual behaviour. Among them is Zelda Perkins, his former British PA.

"We spoke to a lot of employees," says Macfarlane, "many of whom wanted to share their stories of harassment but said they were frightened to go on camera. It just goes to show that there is a real fear that Harvey may not go to prison, and his power lingers on in some shape or form.

"But all of the female accusers went through with the interviews. That was the courage of them: once they'd decided to do it, they did it. [Canadian actress] Erika Rosenbaum said she'd watched Wonder Woman on the plane over because she wanted to feel brave. I think they all, to different degrees, felt empowered by the interviews."

And it's easy to see why. Macfarlane chose to avoid any clichéd depiction of them as victims. "I wanted it to look like the Vanity Fair shoot that Annie Liebowitz does every year. I wanted the women to reclaim their power by looking epic and beautiful, because they are beautiful.

'As soon as I said no to him, the damage was done'

ROSANNA ARQUETTE

There is a kind of magic that happens when the camera is on. This is their moment."

As well as the women's stories, Untouchable also looks at Weinstein's rise to power. His company, Miramax, lobbied the Oscars committee by throwing cash around and hosting lavish parties; he was able to control the press and paparazzi to keep negative stories out of the headlines; and, crucially, he was able to control careers.

Rosanna Arquette believes her rise to stardom was halted after she turned down Weinstein's advances in the early 1990s. When she arrived at his hotel room to pick up a script, Arquette – then a young actress whose biggest role to date had been Desperately Seeking Susan – says he tried to make her touch him under his bathrobe. She refused and, furious at being turned down, she says he told her she was making a "big mistake".

"I knew exactly what he meant by that," she tells RT now. "And afterwards things did shift for me. Almost immediately, I was off the list. He was spreading rumours... 'That actress is really difficult to work with, she's a pain', that sort of thing. I had a conversation with a huge film-maker years later who said, 'I really wanted you for this film but I was talked out of it.' When I told people what he did to me, I was told, 'You'd better be careful', or 'you'd better shut up'. But as soon as I said no to him, the damage was done."

Arquette did sign for Pulp Fiction after the hotel-room incident, which ended up being a Harvey Weinstein movie, but it was to be her last big project: and she says she was the only actor not to have a "back-end" contract that entitled her to a percentage of the profits. Weinstein denies blocking her career.

After Arquette made her accusations in 2017, The New Yorker magazine unearthed documents that, it said, showed that Weinstein had hired a team of private investigators – including ex-Mossad agents – to draw up files on women at the centre of the allegations, including Arquette and Rose McGowan.

Arquette will, naturally, be watching the Weinstein trial and remains in touch with a supportive network of other accusers.

She says that no matter the outcome, they will not be silenced. "I would like the women whose lives have been shattered by this monster to have justice," she says. "I believe he deserves to go to prison. I believe he's destroyed lives and careers and he continues to do so."

"There are so, so many more women to come forward. I know them and there are big ones. But they're afraid. It's got to be in their own time. And there are definitely more Weinsteins. There are powerful men who don't want women's voices to be heard, and they are trying to shut us down. But we won't go away.

"What happened to us sparked a movement across the world where women in trauma can share their experiences. That's when healing and hope can happen and that's when we can change. We're here to say we are not going anywhere."

Weinstein has denied the charges. A statement on his behalf says: "Any allegations of non-consensual sex are unequivocally denied by Mr Weinstein. Mr Weinstein has further confirmed there were never any acts of retaliation against any women for refusing his advances.

"Mr Weinstein obviously can't speak to anonymous allegations, but with respect to any women who have made allegations on the record, Mr Weinstein believes that all of these relationships were consensual. Mr Weinstein has begun counseling, has listened to the community and is pursuing a better path. Mr Weinstein is hoping that, if he makes enough progress, he will be given a second chance." EMMA COX

SIMON BARNES

RIO GOLD MEDALLIST MOHAMED SBIHI

The heat is on for elite rowers setting their sights on 2020

Rowing: World Championships
Sat 1.15pm BBC1*, Sun 12.30pm* BBC2

IF YOU’RE INVOLVED in one of the sports that don’t make the back page every day, it helps to be creative in such matters as recruitment. If you confine yourself to its traditional participants, you find yourself paddling in a seriously shallow pool of talent. So you look beyond your sport – not for the right background, but for the right stuff.

That has been the achievement of British Cycling, and it is also the case with British Rowing. Among the British talent lining up for the World Rowing Championships, taking place at Linz-Ottensheim, Austria, until 1 September, there will be a giant named Mohamed, a lapsed showjumper called Vicky, who once did a bit of modelling, and a former triathlete.

Mohamed (Moe) Sbihi stands at 6ft 6in, looks a little like an Easter Island statue and sits right in the engine-room of the eight, generating rather more than his fair share of power.

He has a Moroccan father, went to school in Surbiton, Surrey, and loved sport, but couldn’t find the right one through which to express his colossal talents. Luckily, rowing found him, through the Team Start programme, and since then he has been driving boats with shattering power. He is now 31; he won bronze in the men’s eight at the London Olympics in 2012, and a gold medal in the four at Rio 2016.

Rowing is a sport defined by the Olympic Games, so at the World Championships you’re racing for a place at the Tokyo Games next year. “Only five nations can qualify directly and ideally we don’t want to go through extra qualification rounds next year,” Sbihi says.

A ROWING EIGHT, MORE than any other team in sport, is about transforming its members into a single machine: the power of many functioning as one. This is true, to a slightly lesser extent, of all the other crews that make up an elite rowing squad – with one exception, the single scull. This is the one event where you’re on your own: no one to support you and no one else to blame. Steve Redgrave, the greatest oarsman that ever sat in a boat, was unable to cut it at the highest level in a single; almost despite himself, he was a team man.

But Vicky Thornley, also 31, has taken that option. She too came into the sport by an unconventional route: a showjumper who rode for Wales, she did a little modelling work in her gap year, so she has to cope with “former model” every time she makes the newspapers. The World Class Start programme, which identifies potential champions with no previous rowing experience, selected her for training, and she won silver in the double sculls with Katherine Grainger at Rio. Since suffering problems from over-training, she has taken up the single scull and has been making gradual progress. The World Championships will be the measure of how far she has come.

Ben Pritchard has also taken the singles option. He rows in the para squad, in the PR1 single scull. He’s also pretty new to the sport: he was a triathlete until he came off his bike in an accident that left him paralysed from the ribcage down. “Without sport, I don’t think I could function as well,” he says. “It’s my mental release.”

So for this trio (and more) this is where the Olympic Games and the Paralympics start to get real.

‘Painting took hold of me’

Timothy Spall on how portraying two of Britain’s greatest artists helped him to discover a hidden talent

It takes a moment to get used to the trim, 62-year-old figure sitting opposite, clad in a smart-casual navy jacket, rather than the bear-like frame familiar from his signature film and TV roles. Timothy Spall captured our hearts as the stout Barry in 1980s TV drama Auf Wiedersehen, Pet, and as the immensely forgiving photographer Maurice in Mike Leigh’s 1996 film, Secrets & Lies, carrying the weight of life-altering revelations on his broad shoulders.

In Leigh’s later Mr Turner (2014), it wasn’t so much a performance as a complete embodiment of Britain’s greatest painter, JMW Turner, which fleshed out his obsessive artistry and rough-hewn manner large as life and won Spall the best actor prize at Cannes.

But it’s another revered yet very different British artist, LS Lowry, who has our attention this morning. Spall is here to talk about his turn as the Salford native in director Adrian Noble’s new biographical film, Mrs Lowry & Son (Martyn Hesford’s adaptation of his own Radio 4 play is in cinemas from Friday 30 August).

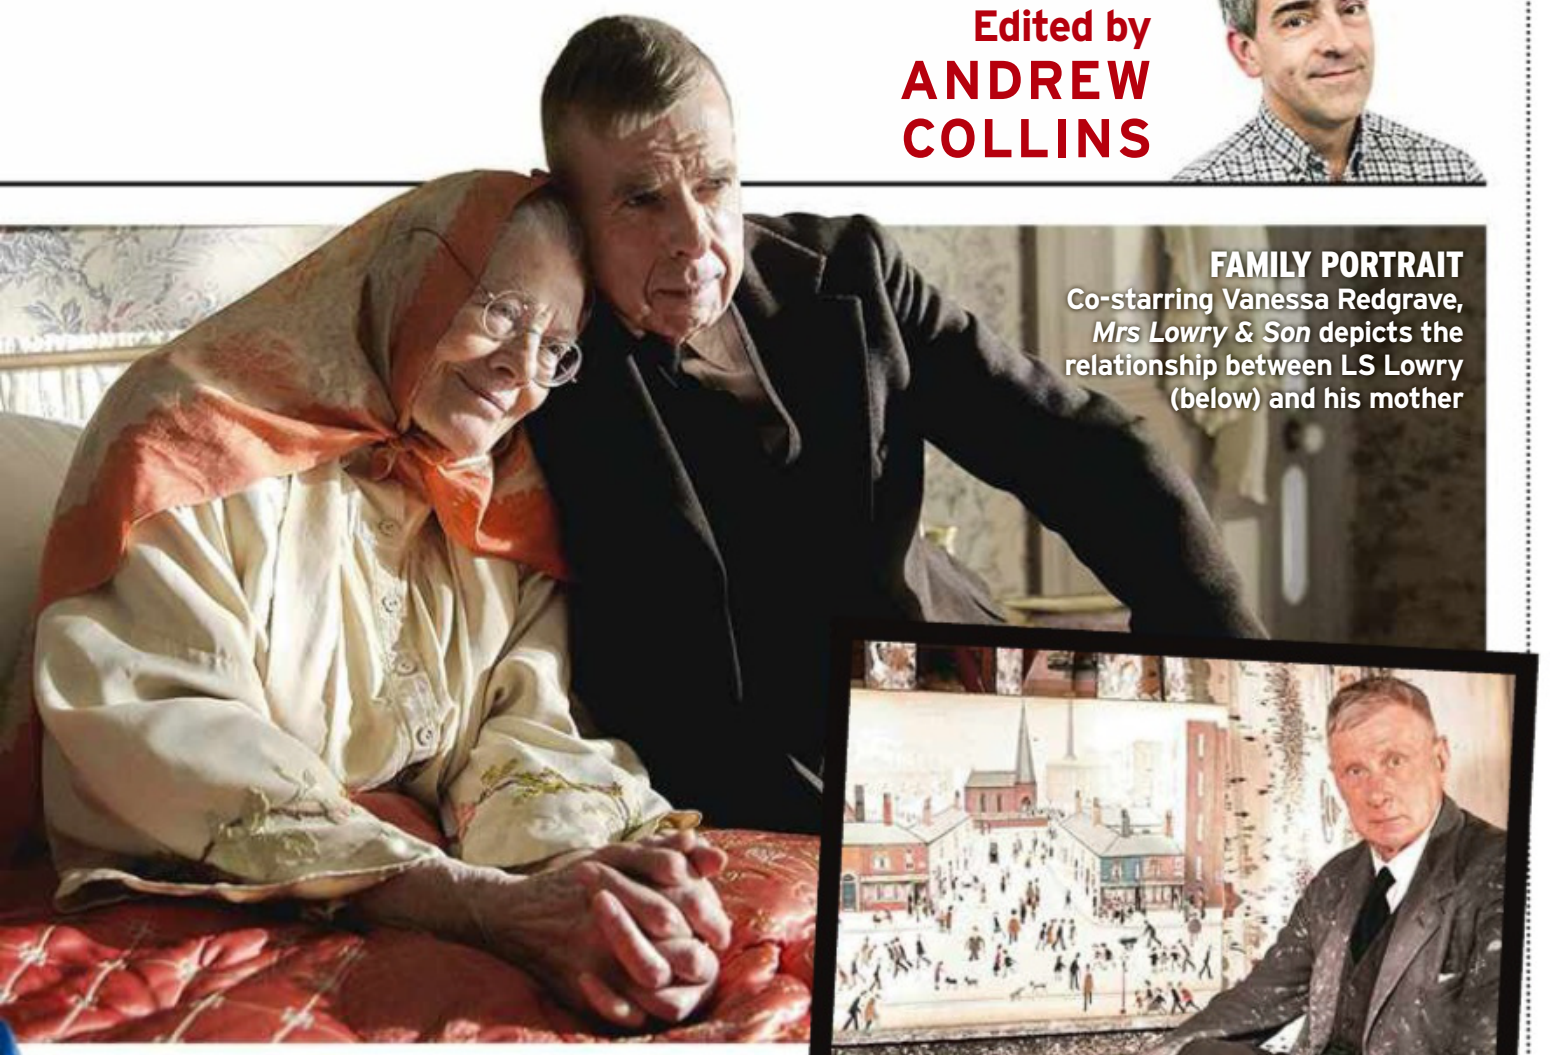

At just gone 9am in a swish London hotel, a pot of tea helps the interview go down nicely, but Spall can do without the chocolate muffins. “And you can keep the whisky in the cabinet as well,” he adds with a wry smile. Like the other roles the actor has taken this year, playing the somewhat gaunt artist of Lancashire’s industrial scene would obviously have been off-limits to the somewhat rounder actor of yore. “I wanted to change my lifestyle and lose weight,” he explains.

In the time between the 2013 filming of Mr Turner and its London Film Festival premiere in October 2014, the actor not only transformed his physical appearance but also his career. “And it’s done what I’d always hoped it might,” he adds. “As a character actor, it’s put me in a position where I’m not hobbled by being a certain shape. I’m no longer that avuncular round bloke. It does feel liberating on many levels.”

“Liberating”, however, isn’t quite the word to describe the situation portrayed in Mrs Lowry & Son, where the domineering title character (powerfully played by Vanessa Redgrave) seems determined to thwart her son Laurence’s creative aspirations. Spall’s task here was to get his head around the fact that one of the 20th century’s best-loved British artists almost had his career stymied by his beloved mum. “That’s the revelation,” says the former Battersea boy, who left school with one A-level in art before training at Rada. “This is a man who never had any intimate relationships as far as we know, and was brought up in thrall to this difficult woman. Yet he’s compelled to paint the world as he sees it, even though she doesn’t like his paintings. There’s an in-built tragedy to these lives, yet somehow that feeds into the grim beauty of his work."

Spall embarked on two years of painting tuition for Mr Turner, and eventually completed his own full-size copy of Snow Storm: Steam-boat off a Harbour's Mouth, which is on display at home. He still can't believe he did it. I'm tempted to wonder whether he's got a wall filled with Lowrys as well?

"Funny you should ask that," he says, as self-deprecatingly as he can, "but 14 of my paintings are now on display at The Lowry arts centre up in Salford, to flag up the release of the film. Several of them are essentially copies of Lowry, but ten are my own work, probably with a bit of Turner and Lowry mixed in."

Claire Stewart, curator at The Lowry, has said that Spall is "a talented painter in his own right" and has placed one of his copies beside the Lowry original. "I am chuffed," he admits, semi-grudgingly. "It sort of took hold of me during the shoot. I'd be painting in the dressing room between takes, but I'm always consumed with the idea that I really should have started this many years ago. Lowry and Turner were geniuses, of course. I'm just a bloke experimenting with something he never realised he'd be good at."

Even in a relatively brief conversation, what comes across is just how much Spall puts into preparing for each role. He's done a number of parts now since he moved down a few weight divisions, most recently as insidiously hard-to-read aristocrat Lord Wallington in Stephen Poliakoff's 1950s-set BBC drama Summer of Rockets, and wiry, wound-up thief Terry Perkins in ITV's assured account of the Hatton Garden raid. And with him, it's not just the physical facility of movement and expression – the key is the thought that goes into understanding each character. "I work from the inside out," is his guiding principle, even applied to playing the likes of Ulster politician Ian Paisley in 2016's The Journey, or controversial Holocaust denier David Irving in Denial the same year, where he has to understand views that many might find rather troubling. "You have to empathise with [the character's] feelings, in the moment, and to do that you have to get to the root which made that happen. You're looking for the humanity somewhere inside, often a fragility you can maybe relate to your own."

'Being seriously ill gives you a sense of profundity'

Two decades on from the leukaemia diagnosis that saw him preparing his family for life without him, he has every right to sound ruminative. It was an experience that left him with a new perspective on life. "When you're seriously ill, it gives you a certain sense of profundity," he says.

"All the day-to-day inconveniences and annoyances count for nothing when you might not make it through. When you come out the other side, however, you realise that all those little daily aggravations are actually the texture of life, so you need to make the most of them. Even when it's people continually asking me 'Are you all right now?'"

After a pause, he adds, "Which I am, of course." And that's without the complimentary chocolate muffins. TREVOR JOHNSTON

Bulldog spirit

Eighty years ago, on 3 September 1939, after an ultimatum to an expansionist Hitler was ignored, the UK, France, Australia and New Zealand declared war on Germany. This was not a drill. As this proud nation once again puts itself on a peacetime uncertainty footing, with equal parts "Don't tell him, Pike" determination and "We're all doomed" dismay, history is filtered through a misty-eyed nostalgia for that supreme national test, which most of its loudest fans didn't actually live through.

In commemoration, the BBC's carefully selected slate of films this week ranges from The Wooden Horse (1950) to A Matter of Life and Death (1946, see p45). Both capture the bulldog spirit with a humour that, in its own way, won the culture war.

A 2016 comedy drama written by Gaby Chiappe (with whom I worked in the trenches of Channel 5 soap Family Affairs) and directed by Danish ally Lone Scherfig (An Education, One Day), Their Finest gently satirises the courage of those not razing buildings but raising morale, specifically during the Blitz. Gemma Arterton joins the Ministry of Information as a scriptwriter, where her initially combative boss, Sam Claflin, informs her she's qualified only to write "the slop" (ie women's dialogue). Guilt-tripped by her resentful, war-wounded partner, Jack Huston, she throws herself into the production of an inspiring Dunkirk drama whose veracity only she knows is questionable. Mind you, the first casualty of war was truth long before Platoon.

PLUCKY
Gemma Arterton as Catrin Cole in Their Finest

A plucky film, this boasts among its many pleasures Bill Nighy's theatrical luvvie, who signs Arterton's script thinking she's an autograph-hunter, not the writer. To the delight of cinephiles everywhere, he also finesses the sight gag of walking between a beach location and the matte painting of a flotilla of ships, destroying the illusion.

Funny it may be, but Their Finest doesn't let you forget that this is still very much a matter of life and death.

FILM OF THE DAY

Bridge of Spies ★★★★ 9.00-11.35pm C4 12

SPY THRILLER The prodigious Steven Spielberg did a lot of TV work in 2015, but directed only one feature film, this cerebral Cold War sort-of-thriller. Typically, it's set in the past, the prosperous but paranoid Eisenhower era, and concerns the delicate exchange of captured British-born Soviet spy Rudolf Abel (Mark Rylance) for American Lockheed U-2 spy-plane pilot Francis Gary Powers (Austin Stowell), shot down while photographing in Russian airspace. A tale of co-operation and brinkmanship, it's told through a measured, if gallery-aimed, screenplay by the Coen brothers and British playwright Mark Charman, and is as chilly as a funeral in Berlin. Tom Hanks inhabits lawyer James B Donovan, as decent as a chorus line of Jimmy Stewarts, while theatrically grounded Rylance instinctively understands camera acting. Much of the action is slow, but a courtroom speech booms, "Who we are is the greatest weapon we have in this Cold War." Imagine such statesmanship today. (US 2015, violence, swearing, col/BW, HD)

DAYTIME

The Princess and the Frog ★★★ 10.30am-12 noon BBC2 U

FANTASY Disney's return to hand-drawn animation is set in New Orleans in the Roaring Twenties, where waitress Tiana (voiced by Anika Noni Rose) dreams of owning a restaurant. But a witch doctor's curse on playboy Prince Naveen (Bruno Campos) transforms him into a frog, and, when Tiana agrees to kiss him, she too is changed. Notable for featuring Disney's first African-American cartoon lead, this is a likeable enough southern-fried fantasia, but it lacks the magical quality of other more memorable Disney efforts. AJ (US 2009, HD)

The Man Who Never Was ★★★ 3.20-5.00pm BBC2 U

WAR Clifton Webb (Laura, Three Coins in the Fountain) takes the lead role in this intriguing Second World War espionage drama about the real-life plan to fool the Nazis into believing that the Allies had no interest in invading Sicily from North Africa. Webb plays Ewen Montagu, the mastermind behind the scheme, in which a British corpse is washed ashore with secret papers marking Greece as the invasion site. Directed efficiently by Ronald Neame and scripted by Nigel Balchin (who won a Bafta for his work), the picture may appear overly reverent by today's standards, but it remains a crucial wartime spy tale. AT (UK 1955, HD)

Five Golden Dragons ★★ 3.20-5.25pm Talking Pictures TV PG

ACTION The most appealing thing about this slice of hokum are the villains – Christopher Lee, George Raft, Brian Donlevy and Dan Duryea as members of a secret sect in Hong Kong. The hero, Robert Cummings, washes up there and finds himself caught between the Dragons and local Mafioso. A hammy Klaus Kinski pops up in this lively affair that fleeces everything from The World of Suzie Wong to the Fu Manchu films. Producer Harry Alan Towers also wrote the script under the pseudonym Peter Welbeck. AT (UK 1967)

EVENING

Marvel Avengers Assemble ★★★★★ 5.35-7.45pm BBC1 12

ACTION In this hugely entertaining superhero epic from writer/director Joss Whedon, Iron Man (Robert Downey Jr, at his quipping best), Black Widow (Scarlett Johansson), Thor (Chris Hemsworth), Captain America (Chris Evans) and the Hulk (Mark Ruffalo) are brought together in a cosmos-spanning adventure. What raises this escapade above the merely awesome, though, is a script brimming with the snappy, laugh-out-loud banter as the heroes brawl, bond and kick alien butt in a city-wrecking slugfest that puts the Transformers franchise in the shade. JA (US 2012, edited for violence, language, HD)

Quantum of Solace ★★★ 8.00-10.05pm ITV2 12

SPY ADVENTURE Picking up events directly after the end of Casino Royale, this middling sequel sees Bond looking for answers after the death of his lover. The trail leads to Quantum, an organisation that is moving to instigate a regime change in Bolivia. Marc Forster's take on 007 was hit by a writer's strike during its making, and the script suffers as a result, with the paranoid storyline as nonsensical as the Ian Fleming-inspired title. But viewed solely as an action spectacle, there's still plenty of excitement, not least an artfully staged gun battle at the opera. JH (UK/US 2008, violence, HD)

P Their Finest ★★★★ 9.00-10.50pm BBC2 12

Reservoir Dogs ★★★★★ 10.00pm-12.05am Dave 18

CRIME Shot in just five weeks on a tight $1.2 million budget, the film that many consider the most influential of the 1990s was a runaway success, much to the surprise of its debuting writer/director Quentin Tarantino, who was hoping for a cult hit rather than a phenomenon. Working wonders with Tarantino's pacey dialogue (packed with references to pop music, TV shows and hip movies), the ensemble cast is excellent, with Michael Madsen's sadistic Mr Blonde and Steve Buscemi's Mr Pink outstanding. Brash and abrasive, this is a must-see. DP (US 1991, violence, swearing, HD)

P Southside with You ★★★★ 10.50pm-12.05am BBC2 12

ROMANCE A charming depiction of Barack Obama's first date with his wife, Michelle, takes place over the course of a single day. It portrays the future President (Parker Sawyers) and his would-be First Lady (Tika Sumpter) as ambitious 20-somethings, following them as they stroll around Chicago's South Side during the summer of 1989. A disarming story, scripted and directed by Richard Tanne, it works better than you might expect thanks in part to superb performances from its leads. SC (US 2016, violence, swearing, drug references, HD)

DRAMA In this 1980s-set tale, black humour and poignant drama combine when the arrival of an eccentric elderly magician (Michael Caine) puts new spark into the life of a lonely ten-year-old boy (Son of Rambow's Bill Milner) who lives in an old folks' home run by his parents. While the story never really finds its feet, Caine holds it together, and his work here ranks as some of the finest of his career's marvellous Indian summer. TJ (UK/US 2008, swearing, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

Cinderella ★★★★

4.05-5.45pm BBC1 U

FANTASY While Disney's remaking of its own catalogue grinds on with juggernaut resolve, I'm pleased to recommend the live-action remake of Uncle Walt's 1950 animated fairy-tale, based on a story popularised in 1697. A full-bodied success, it stacks vast Pinewood sets against real National Trust exteriors. Lily James, absent from the imminent Downton Abbey movie, and a pre-Bodyguard Richard Madden play Cinders and the Prince. Meanwhile, Chris Weitz's script is wry and playful, Patrick Doyle's score swirls and pirouettes beautifully, and a couple of songs from the original provide a pan-generational connection under Kenneth Branagh's swirling direction. Helena Bonham Carter must have kicked down the door to play the Fairy Godmother, while small-screen comic input from Rob Brydon and Alex Macqueen further flavours the brew. My only complaint remains: Sandy Powell was robbed of winning her fourth Oscar for costume design. Nevertheless, this version will, I suspect, live happily ever after. (US 2015, HD)

The Little Foxes ★★★★

12.45-3.10pm 5Select PG

DRAMA It may have been something to do with the fact that director William Wyler and star Bette Davis were romantically involved that gave their many celluloid collaborations such an exciting buzz. This is a splendid example of Davis at the height of her powers as the deeply nasty Regina Giddens, the power-hungry schemer of a once wealthy southern clan. The critics always said of Wyler that he "understood women"; they meant that he was not afraid to give a talent like Davis's full flight while also managing to contain her worst histrionic excesses. The result here is a quite magnificent movie. SR (US 1941, BW)

The Dancing Years ★★

2.10-4.10pm Talking Pictures TV U

MUSICAL A pre-First World War love affair between a young composer (Dennis Price) and a star of the musical stage (Giselle Preville) falters through a misunderstanding that leads her to leave him and marry a prince (Anthony Nicholls). Directed by Harold French, this screen transfer of a musical by Ivor Novello is outmoded, sickly sweet and devoid of what charm the original stage show offered. The debonair Price is hardly a natural for the genre, but the film does offer plenty of Novello's melodies. RK (UK 1949)

Operation Daybreak ★★★

4.20-6.40pm C5 15

WAR A grimly exciting war thriller about the Czech resistance's plot to kill Reinhard Heydrich, deputy chief of the Gestapo and better known as Hitler's "Hangman". Based on real events and the novel Seven Men at Daybreak by Alan Burgess, this is drily, if expertly, directed by Reach for the Sky veteran Lewis Gilbert. It also features a motley cast, including American Timothy Bottoms and a particularly excellent Anthony Andrews as Czech patriots. TS (US/UK/Cz 1975, edited for violence, language, HD)

EVENING

The Best Exotic Marigold Hotel ★★★★

★★★★6.35-9.00pm More4 12

COMEDY DRAMA Masterfully directed by John Madden (Shakespeare in Love), this audaciously manipulative charmer sees a group of British pensioners relocate to India for their retirement, lured by the promise of cheap luxury. The place, run by ever-optimistic manager Dev Patel, turns out to be a dump, but the colourful location and the pensioners' shared experiences have a transformative effect. This poignant tale has an irresistible, heart-warming energy and also boasts sharp dialogue and a treasure trove of British stars. The film does become predictable – Maggie Smith's xenophobia mellows, henpecked Bill Nighy finds himself, and Judi Dench is faced with a romantic conundrum – yet it never once strays from satisfying, feel-good magic. AJ (US 2011, sexual references, edited for language, HD)

P Arena – Kusama: Infinity ★★★

9.00-10.10pm BBC4 12

DOCUMENTARY Still working in her 90s, Japanese artist Yayoi Kusama has led a life as colourful as the polka-dotted pictures that have become her trademark. However, as Heather Lenz reveals in this visually striking, if occasionally factually selective profile, Kusama has also felt the effects of betrayal and rejection. Growing up in provincial Matsumoto, she was ordered to spy on her adored father by her disapproving mother. On relocating to America, Kusama's art was often copied by rivals before she found acclaim. This documentary may be overly fawning at times, but cinematographer Hart Perry captures the tactile vivacity of Kusama's distinctive oeuvre. DP (US 2018)

LATE NIGHT

The Monuments Men ★★

11.15pm-1.25am C4 12

WARTIME DRAMA Presented as an affectionate Second World War mission caper movie in the Dirty Dozen mould, The Monuments Men didn't need to be a work of art, but it still proves a monumental disappointment. That its remarkable premise – a 1945 Allied "treasure hunt" for millions of paintings and sculptures stolen by the Nazis – is true proves a problem for co-writers George Clooney (who also directs and stars as the team leader) and Grant Heslov, whose dry fidelity to the facts neutralises the chance of any rip-roaring entertainment. A terrific cast – John Goodman, Bill Murray – are all equally underused, while the directorial precision shown in Good Night, and Good Luck deserts Clooney here. AC (US 2013, violence, swearing, HD)

Life of Crime ★★★

11.20pm-12.55am BBC2 15

BLACK COMEDY Adapted from the Elmore Leonard novel The Switch, this is an easygoing slice of sunny LA noir that plays like a less cartoonish version of Ruthless People. Mos Def and John Hawkes star as Ordell Robbie and Louis Gara, characters who also appear in the later novel Rum Punch (filmed as Jackie Brown by Quentin Tarantino). Here, the criminals hatch a plan to kidnap Mickey Dawson (Jennifer Aniston), the wife of rich property developer Frank (Tim Robbins). What they don't know is that Frank is planning to trade in Mickey for a younger model (Isla Fisher), and has no interest in paying the ransom. This is a likeable, if predictable, black comedy that feels like a Tarantino movie made by well-meaning committee. DW (US 2013, violence, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

The King's Speech ★★★★

12 midnight-1.55am BBC1 12

DRAMA In this marvellously moving tale, Colin Firth is impressive as King George VI, the British monarch who suffered from a terrible nervous stammer. From the outset, when he freezes on national radio, the tension of striving to uphold his image is palpable. It's George's wife Elizabeth (Helena Bonham Carter) who engages the services of a speech therapist (Geoffrey Rush), who is a breath of fresh air in a world of stifling formality. Director Tom Hooper deftly captures a man in limbo, and this is the type of thing the British film industry does so well – a bit of history, a bit of social comedy, a few liberties with the truth and a flag-waving finale. SP (UK/Aus/US 2010, swearing, HD)

Pirates of the Caribbean: the Curse of the Black Pearl ★★★★

6.15-9.00pm ITV2 12

ADVENTURE The fate of Pirates of the Caribbean, which began in 1967 as a Disneyland theme park ride, might be potentially coming off the rails. After five films, a promised sixth suddenly seems sketchy. But belay those spread sheets! Why not rewind and let the original trilogy wash over you on ITV2 over three consecutive nights. After all, there was a time when the whole CGI panto notion seemed fresh and fun, and Johnny Depp's Keith Richards schtick appealing. The first film has all the vigour of a new wheeze, and director Gore Verbinski, who stayed aboard through Dead Man's Chest and At World's End, should be proud to own the triptych.

3.30-5.25pm BBC2 PG

WAR DRAMA There is an inescapable predictability about wartime movies, even though there is no denying the magnitude of the achievements of people such as Odette Churchill, who endured Nazi torture while working for the French Resistance. However, director Herbert Wilcox has little new to offer in this depiction of underground activities and, playing with more reverence than she accorded either Queen Victoria or Florence Nightingale, Anna Neagle suggests a certain stiffness in the upper lip region, but she is not at her best. DP (UK 1950, BW)

The Manchurian Candidate ★★★★

9.00-11.40pm Sony Movie Channel 15

THRILLER It's rare for a remake to match the standard of a much lauded original, but this update of John Frankenheimer's classic 1962 thriller comes pretty close. An intelligent and believable tale of brainwashing and political corruption, it relocates the military conflict from Communist Korea to the first Gulf War in Kuwait. Denzel Washington steps into Frank Sinatra's shoes, playing a tormented US Army major who unwittingly becomes the key to a complex political conspiracy. As with his The Silence of the Lambs, Jonathan Demme's controlled direction is exhilarating, and he elicits brilliant performances from a fine cast. SF (US 2004, violence, swearing)

Battle Los Angeles ★★★

9.00-11.15pm Sky1 12

SCI-FI War of the Worlds meets The Hurt Locker in director Jonathan Liebesman's down-and-dirty alien-invasion flick. Aaron Eckhart stars as a marine who leads a misfit platoon (that includes Avatar's Michelle Rodriguez) against intergalactic aggressors. The intriguing gimmick here is filming all of the hectic military operations from the soldiers' point-of-view, creating newsreel-type immediacy. However, the repetitive displays of jerky firepower are more tedious than exciting in a film that is somehow still a watchable action epic. AJ (US 2011, violence, swearing, HD)

The Crying Game ★★★★

11.20pm-1.35am Film4 18

DRAMA An offbeat, beguiling blend of romantic drama and political thriller, this became a monster hit in America and even earned an Oscar for best original screenplay for writer/director Neil Jordan. Stephen Rea plays an IRA terrorist who flees to London after the botched kidnapping of a British soldier. Ridden with guilt, he locates the dead man's former lover (an extraordinary performance from Jaye Davidson that was deservedly Oscar-nominated) and finds himself falling in love. After a series of Hollywood flops, this marked a major return to form for Jordan. JF (UK 1992, violence, swearing, nudity, HD)

Scent of a Woman ★★★★

11.30pm-2.35am Paramount Network 15

DRAMA This lengthy melodrama is kept alive by a towering Oscar-winning performance from Al Pacino. He plays the blind ex-soldier who heads to New York for Thanksgiving weekend. As his unworldly teenage escort, Chris O'Donnell is quietly impressive, but it's Pacino's picture, whether tangoing with Gabrielle Anwar, berating O'Donnell's cowardly schoolmates or barking out his famous "hoo-ha" cough. It's loosely based on Dino Risi's 1974 Italian film of the same name. DP (US 1992, swearing)

DRAMA The debut feature from Turner Prize-winning artist Steve McQueen is a harrowing but poetic depiction of the protests that took place among Republican prisoners in the Maze Prison, Northern Ireland, in 1981. Focusing on the hunger strike of Bobby Sands (Michael Fassbender), this often wordless film creates an unsettling atmosphere and doubles as a work of art from which it's impossible to avert your eyes. Andrew Collins (UK/Ire 2008, violence, swearing, HD)

3.15-4.45pm BBC2 PG

WAR DRAMA Inevitably suffering in comparison with that other tribute to the Royal Air Force, The Dam Busters, this drama features a less audacious mission, and less precise casting (Cliff Robertson as an American in the RAF and George Chakiris as a Norwegian Resistance fighter). And while the flying sequences are thrilling (particularly the Scottish Highlands training exercises), they cannot compensate for the dull Norwegian-set scenes. DP (UK/US 1964)

A Matter of Life and Death

★★★★★ 3.30-5.15pm BBC2 U

DID YOU KNOW? Kim Hunter got the part after Alfred Hitchcock – who screen-tested her for Notorious – recommended her to director Michael Powell

ROMANTIC FANTASY Blurring the line between writer, director, producer and editor with classics like Black Narcissus and The Red Shoes, cinematic all-rounders Michael Powell and Emeric Pressburger hit the jackpot in 1946 with A Matter of Life and Death, a great favourite for its bold mix of agnostic fantasy and wartime reality. Its opening sequence leaves the heart in the mouth when doomed RAF pilot David Niven effectively falls in love with the voice of an American radio operator, Kim Hunter. Thereafter, a French aristocrat (Marius Goring) pauses the film to explain Niven's predicament in limbo. The giant staircase to heaven is a triumph: a motorised, 106-step, 20-foot wide feat of engineering. This movie absolutely has to be seen. (UK 1946, BW/col, HD)

3.05-5.05pm Talking Pictures TV U

ADVENTURE Dirk Bogarde dons some serious checked shirts and sets out to prove that he can stand up to mean Stanley Baker, who is out to swipe his land, in this unconvincing adventure set in Canada. There is some stunning location photography and a reliable British supporting cast, but director Ralph Thomas – who did uncredited work on Carry On Cruising in 1962 – looks a little out of his depth in this genre. JF (UK 1957)

Pirates of the Caribbean: at World's End ★★

5.45-9.00pm ITV2 12

ADVENTURE This bloated third entry in the Pirates of the Caribbean franchise is a resounding disappointment. The swashbuckling CGI spectacle of its predecessors is gone, replaced here by talky plot exposition. THRILLER Sylvester Stallone stars as an explosives expert who is hired by the mysterious Sharon Stone to avenge the death of her parents. There is, of course, more to her motives than is at first apparent. The stars apart, it's the robust playing of the supporting cast (which includes Rod Steiger and Eric Roberts as Miami mobsters) that makes this worth a look. John Barry's lush, Bond-like score is a plus, too. DP (US 1994, edited for violence, swearing, a sex scene, nudity, HD)

HELP COMBAT CLIMATE CHANGE WITH GREEN ENERGY

Reduce the impact of your carbon footprint by switching to a green energy tariff...

We've all got a responsibility to help protect the environment, so it's important to take some time to examine the size of your carbon footprint and consider what you can do to reduce it. One simple way to contribute toward the global fight against climate change is to switch over to a green energy tariff.

The good news is that, as public awareness and concern about climate change has drastically increased, real change has started to occur. In 2018, 33 per cent of all the electricity generated in the UK came from renewable sources*.

A huge variety of the UK's suppliers now offer a choice of green energy tariffs including many of the Big Six and plenty of smaller independents. Some of these come with added benefits like discounted energy between certain hours of the day to make charging an environmentally friendly electric vehicle much cheaper, as well as the option to have solar panels fitted to your house for an extra charge.

Finding an inexpensive green energy deal is incredibly easy with the Radio Times Switching Service. All you need to do is provide us with a few details about your current usage and then filter by "green plans" to see what's available in your area.

Once you've seen a tariff you like, you can switch online or simply call us and we'll handle the rest to ensure a seamless switchover. There's no obligation to take a deal if you can't find anything suitable.

The Radio Times Switching Service is completely free to use, so don't wait: starting saving the environment today!

For more information please call 0800 083 6528 or visit radiotimes.com/energy

SCI-FI COMEDY This smash-hit film has secret agent Tommy Lee Jones and new recruit Will Smith as part of a top-secret agency responsible for regulating alien activity on Earth. The pair become involved in the search for a missing galaxy to appease an interstellar force and avert the Earth's destruction. Great special effects, inventive alien designs and Smith and Jones's hip, hilarious double act make director Barry Sonnenfeld's Lethal Weapon-style buddy picture a fast-paced pleasure. AJ (US 1997, edited for violence, language, HD)

P The Levelling ★★★

11.45pm-1.05am BBC2 15

DRAMA Shaping a peculiarly British genre known as "Farm Noir", The Levelling, God's Own Country and Dark River seemed to arrive in 2016 and 2017 on a new wave of interest in the precarious fate of farming. God's Own Country saw director Francis Lee fêted for its rugged sheep-shearing tryst, while Clio Barnard's Dark River touched on sibling conflict in the face of financial ruin. The Levelling, written and directed by debutante Hope Dickson Leach, sees a loyal veterinarian daughter grudgingly return to a Somerset dairy farm that is on the brink after flooding, in the aftermath of her brother's death. An impressive Ellie Kendrick (Game of Thrones) gets her hands dirty with the husbandry along with David Troughton as her unstable father, who appears to have buried infected badgers, and Jack Holden as the even less trustworthy, hedonistic labourer. There's a potential film festival here. (UK 2016, swearing, HD)

DID YOU KNOW? Hope Dickson Leach was partly inspired by Matilda Temperley's photos of floods in Somerset, and met with her before filming

The Wooden Horse ★★★

3.45-5.25pm BBC2 U

WAR DRAMA This is one of the most famous escape stories of the Second World War, in which PoWs use a vaulting horse to hide their tunnel. Scripted by Eric Williams (from his own bestseller) and directed by ex-documentary maker Jack Lee (A Town like Alice), it has a ring of authenticity that is reinforced by a splendid cast led by Leo Genn and David Tomlinson. However, the action only really becomes compelling outside Stalag Luft III as the escapees make for the coast. DP (UK 1950, BW, HD)

The Green Mile ★★★

9.00pm-12.40am Film4 18

FANTASY DRAMA Set in a Louisiana prison in 1935, this overlong but masterful fantasy is clearly aimed at the Forrest Gump audience. Tom Hanks plays a guard who forms a life-affirming relationship with a black prisoner, on death row for the murder of two little girls. Suspension of disbelief is essential if you're to enjoy Frank Darabont's reverential adaptation of Stephen King's 1996 novel – all the wardens are angels, bar one. Yet Darabont, directing his first film since The Shawshank Redemption (also a Stephen King prison drama), cleverly manipulates the emotions and only the very hard-hearted will remain dry-eyed throughout. The film received four Oscar nominations, including best picture and a well-deserved best supporting actor nod for Michael Clarke Duncan, who passed away in 2012, as the convicted child-killer. DM (US 1999, violence, swearing, HD)

A Million Ways to Die in the West ★★★

9.00-11.15pm E4 15

COMEDY WESTERN Take Blazing Saddles, throw in a bucketful of modern expletives and you've got a future classic. Director, co-writer and star Seth MacFarlane (Ted) plays a frontier nerd who loses his girl (Amanda Seyfried) and meets the divine Anna (Charlize Theron), who teaches him gunplay and love – but he doesn't know that Anna's husband is feared gunman Clinch Leatherwood (Liam Neeson). This is a big old-fashioned cowboy movie, but, be warned, it is a very Marmite experience that won't be to everyone's taste. KK (US 2014, violence, swearing, sexual references, drug abuse, HD)

Dracula – Prince of Darkness ★★★★

10.00-11.50pm Talking Pictures TV 15

HORROR Two English couples dare to go travelling through the Carpathian mountains in this superior horror film, one of the best in the Hammer Dracula series. Veteran horror director Terence Fisher brings out the innate sexuality in the tightly plotted story and Christopher Lee is awesome as the count, despite having no dialogue. The sequence where he is resurrected in a perverse religious ritual still retains its shock value. AJ (UK 1965, some violence)

The Hobbit: the Battle of the Five Armies ★★★★

10.45pm-1.05am ITV 12

ADVENTURE An epic but uneven journey comes to an end at the Lonely Mountain as Peter Jackson marshals elves, dwarves, orcs and mortal men in awesomely staged conflict after Thorin (Richard Armitage) hunkers down to protect the dunes of gold Smaug has left behind. Despite having the title role, Martin Freeman's Bilbo is again a supporting character, but the one-on-one battles generate intensity, especially Legolas (Orlando Bloom) going toe-to-toe with an orc on a falling bridge. Even if Jackson doesn't match the gravitas of Tolkien's writing, he leaves Middle-earth on an adrenaline-pumping high. SP (US/NZ 2014, violence, HD)

McLaren ★★★

11.35pm-1.40am ITV4 12

DOCUMENTARY The World's Fastest Indian director Roger Donaldson turns his attentions to Kiwi racing legend Bruce McLaren with a straightforward documentary tracing the extraordinary career – and tragically short life – of the founder of the Formula One motor racing team. As well a treasure trove of classic racing footage, there is also a wealth of interviews with colleagues and fellow drivers. Petrolheads will be in seventh heaven, but this tale is inspiring enough to appeal to those who have little time for the sport. JF (NZ 2016, violence, HD)

P Avengers: Endgame ★★★★ 12
From Mon Sky Store/Virgin Movies (also DVD, Blu-ray, 4K UHD, and download)

ACTION ADVENTURE After a truly crushing defeat in 2018's Avengers: Infinity War, Marvel's colourful cast of superheroes comes together again with a new plan to resurrect their friends and defeat Thanos (Josh Brolin).

Returning directors Joe and Anthony Russo here delve deeper into the psyche of the six original Avengers – Iron Man, Captain America, Black Widow, Hawkeye, Thor and Hulk – to make Endgame a different sort of movie from its predecessor, albeit one that's hugely ambitious and over-the-top fun. Chris Evans's Cap and Robert Downey Jr's Tony Stark particularly shine in the twisting, complex story.

It's by no means perfect – Chris Hemsworth's comedic turn as Thor is played too broad, and the film is far too long – but it's hard to begrudge the Marvel Cinematic Universe getting a little self-indulgent in what largely amounts to a three hour victory lap. Huw Fullerton (US 2019, some violence, HD)

Amazing Grace ★★★★ U Released 2 Sep on DVD, Blu-ray and download

It's taken nearly half a century, but Aretha Franklin fans will consider it well worth the wait to finally be able to see Sydney Pollack's verité record of her two-night sojourn at New Temple Missionary Baptist Church in the Watts district of LA. Having released 20 albums and 11 chart-topping singles, Franklin felt the need to go back to her roots in January 1972. She's in soul-tingling form here, as she sings a selection of gospel standards and contemporary items. With her preacher father, CL Franklin, gospel diva Clara Ward and Rolling Stones Mick Jagger and Charlie Watts in attendance, this is, in every sense, a momentous event. Thrillingly inspirational.

ALISON GRAHAM

True-crime master

Jeff Pope's latest drama rings horribly true, says Alison Graham

MANY YEARS AGO, when I was working as a local newspaper reporter, I went into homes to interview family members after the murder of a loved one. It was horrible and I'm thankful that I've never had to do it again. You might be appalled, but it was my job.

I last crossed such a threshold decades ago, but I can still remember a very specific feeling in such violently bereaved households, the sense that all the atoms in the room had shifted to become a thick and enervating mass. Grief truly did feel tangible.

There's a dreadful lassitude and an awful quiet about such homes that writer Jeff Pope gets absolutely right in the brilliant A Confession, based on a true story, which starts on Monday on ITV. Chris Chibnall captured it perfectly, too, in the first series of Broadchurch.

In the first episode, the family of Sian O'Callaghan, a young woman who went missing after a night out in Swindon in 2011, can do nothing but sit and wait for news, hour after hour. These are yawning acres of time when they can do little more than hover over their phones.

SEARCHING FOR SIAN
Martin Freeman, Charlie Cooper and Siobhan Finneran in A Confession

'Pope is so good at peering through the ripples of a violent act'

Her mother Elaine, played by Siobhan Finneran, is a remarkable woman who refuses to become a news item, to play the part that everyone wants her to play, to react the way people want her to react. At the police's insistence, she takes part in a televised appeal for information but she's angry: "We have to be that terrified family. Maybe one of us will cry on cue." After it's over she refuses to be hugged and insists, "I felt manipulated."

It's moments like these that mark out A Confession as something special. It's primarily the story of Det Supt Steve Fulcher (Martin Freeman), who leads the hunt for Sian, and later for her killer, who also murdered another young woman, Becky Godden. Fulcher commits a well-intentioned but serious act of omission he will live to regret and which so fundamentally contravenes crucial police procedural rules it reverberates much further than his inquiry.

Pope was also once a local newspaper journalist and is so good at peering hard through the ripples of a violent act to see the people often floundering beneath. He did it, too, to stunning effect, in the 2017 series Little Boy Blue, about the murder of 11-year-old Rhys Jones in Liverpool.

WHEN I WAS a reporter, I remember a very senior detective telling me that the worst part of any murder investigation for him was that wrenching moment when the family realised that their loved one would never walk through the door again. That he or she was gone and would never come back. That they'd been robbed for ever by a violent act.

That's why A Confession is so haunting. Imelda Staunton plays Becky Godden's mother Karen. Her troubled daughter went missing years previously, but Karen believes that Becky simply doesn't want to be found. The moment when she learns from Fulcher what she has always in her heart of hearts suspected is utterly heartbreaking. Becky will never come back and Karen's fragile hope is gone.

BEYOND A JOKE

There's a joke about Jimmy Savile in the new BBC1 comedy Scarborough (Friday). I will now stand back as you prepare to blow a gasket. Or not. Best listen to it first before you react, as it's not a joke about child abuse. Just by drawing attention to it I'm probably making this into a big deal, but I don't know how I feel about it.

Or maybe I do. Maybe I think everything is fair game for humour, because if it isn't, where do you start and where do you stop? Who decides what's funny and what isn't? No one has the right not to be offended. Social media stokes up far too many clarion calls to silence views somebody somewhere doesn't like, and it's dangerous.

1 Preacher

HERE ENDETH...

Amazon Prime

A fourth and final series, updating on Mondays, for a comic-book adaptation that's always been better at cool moments – and by cool we mean mostly disgustingly imaginative violence – than it has compelling narratives or rounded characters. It's probably time to go, but fans of the original will enjoy the story the show has to tell before it self-destructs – and Dominic Cooper (right), Ruth Negga and Joe Gilgun still give it a strutting energy.

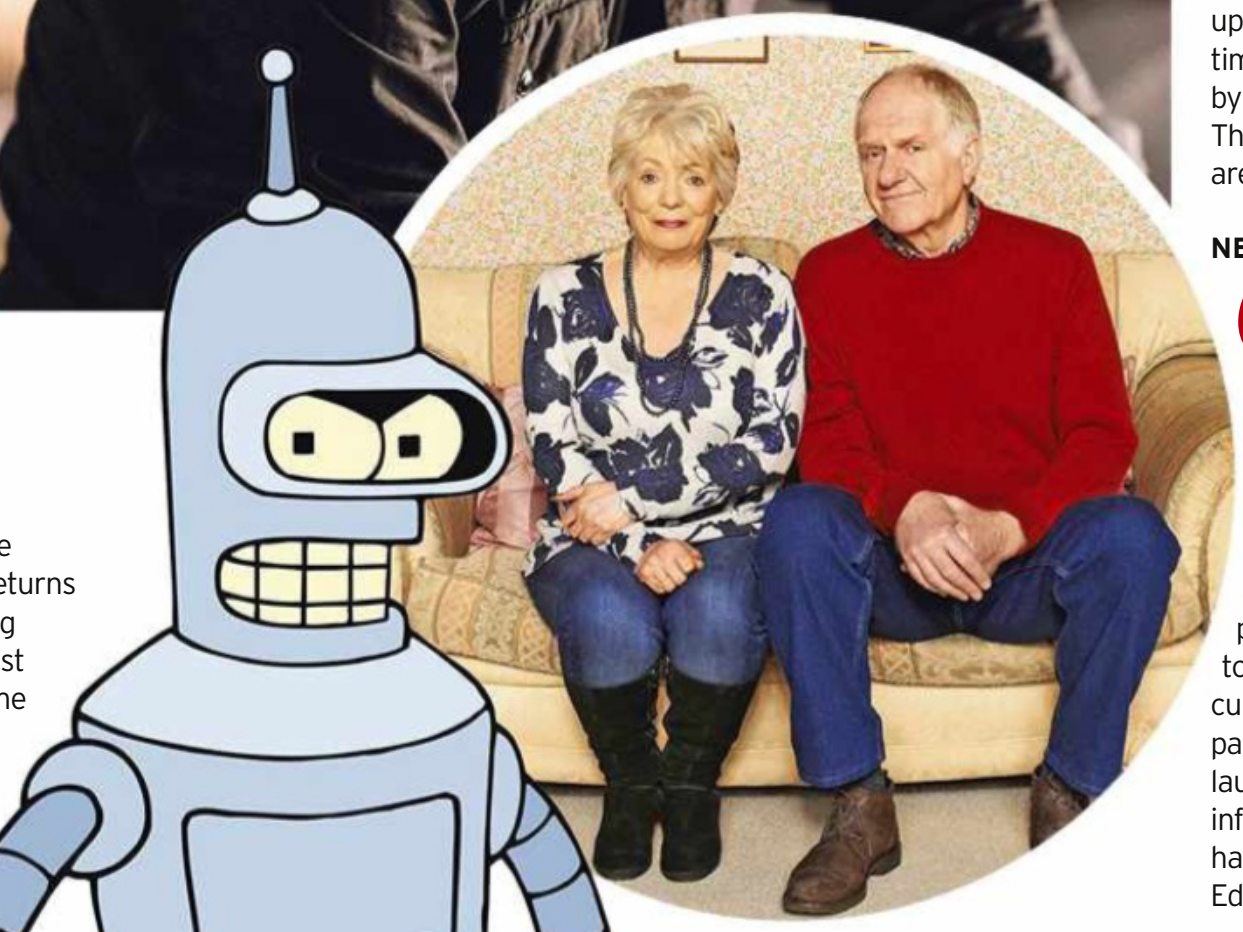

DARK DRAMA FROM INDIA

5 Sacred Games

Netflix

Series two of an impressive Indian thriller that combines gangster violence and dirty double-crossing with a dose of mystical magical realism. While flashbacks continue to fill in the meandering story of charismatic crime lord Gaitonde, upstanding cop Sartaj races against time to stop Mumbai being destroyed by some sort of nuclear conspiracy. The tense set pieces and gritty visuals are often brilliant.

CULT CLASSIC

2 Futurama

Amazon Prime

After The Simpsons and before Disenchantment – the latter returns to Netflix soon – Matt Groening created a comedy set in the 31st Century that is, at its best, some of his funniest work. The satirical ideas have all the sharpness of The Simpsons and, when characters like selfish robot Bender and preening space ranger Zapp Brannigan get going, they're classic creations. Amazon has all ten series.

BEHIND THE SCENES

3 Take Us Home

Amazon Prime

This doc lacks the final triumph its makers would have hoped for, but the first season at Leeds United for head coach Marcelo Bielsa has loads of drama. As well as "SpyGate" there's an extraordinary scene showing a transfer deal collapsing.

ANOTHER CHANCE

4 Love and Marriage

Amazon Prime

There wasn't a second series for this comedy drama that aired on ITV in 2013, but it had a great cast, led by Alison Steadman and also featuring Duncan Preston (above, with Steadman), Celia Imrie and Ashley Jensen. Steadman's a lollipop lady for whom retirement means looking afresh at family life: it's a solid, bittersweet series about starting again late in life, full of world-weary women and blundering men.

NEW COMEDY

6 Chris Ramsey: Approval Needed

Amazon Prime

A new hour-long special by one of the best modern purveyors of traditional, observational stand-up comedy. Ramsey is irresistibly relatable and a streamlined performer as he rattles through topics ranging from caravans and curries to sex education and seagulls, pacing the stage energetically and laughing at his own routines with infectious delight. Amazon also has specials by Paul Chowdhry, Ed Gamble and Flo & Joan.

GRIDIRON FOR KIDS

7 QB1: Beyond the Lights Netflix

Last Chance U (Netflix) and All or Nothing (Amazon) have shown us that American football at college level is almost as intense as the NFL. This show steps back further, introducing us to high-school players who are about to graduate and who dream of college stardom. The three boys we follow come from different social backgrounds, lending extra layers to the issue of how football interacts with family and academic life.

BACK TO SAINT MARIE

8 Death in Paradise

Amazon Prime

Netflix now has series six and seven of the immensely popular sunny crime drama, which means reliving the end of Kris Marshall in the lead role and the arrival of Ardal O'Hanlon (above, with Joséphine Jobert). The streaming service also recently added the sixth run of Call the Midwife – the one where Sister Ursula briefly takes over, and thalidomide and the pill make an impact – with the seventh series to come in September.

MEDICAL MYSTERIES

9 Diagnosis

Netflix

Googling your symptoms isn't usually a great idea, but this fascinating factual series shows that a connected world can profoundly affect the practice of healing. It spins off from a New York Times column in which Dr Lisa Sanders crowdsources answers to obscure health issues: we see what happens when patients have access to solutions doctors didn't provide. It highlights failures in US healthcare but can also be uplifting and extremely emotional.

SEE IT ALL, NOW

10 Brassic

NowTV/Sky Box Sets

Former Shameless writer Danny Brocklehurst has found a neat way to enliven a comedy with a similar vibe: his foul-mouthed rule-breakers are thieves, not just rascals. While soapy storylines bubble under the surface, one-episode tales such as a heist on a strip club or a raid on a cannabis farm give it extra punch. As well as Joe Gilgun, Michelle Keegan and Damien Molony in the leads, Dominic West pops up playing rather against type.

YOUR NEXT BINGE

Get to know one of the dancing greats

If the measure of a great dancer – think Fred Astaire, Gene Kelly – is that they make their art look supremely easy, Gwen Verdon was one of the greatest. But it's her professional and emotional relationship with choreographer/director Bob Fosse that is the focus of Fosse/Verdon. Sam Rockwell of Three Billboards fame is convincingly transformed into the chain-smoking, drug-addled obsessive Fosse, but Michelle Williams as his wife and muse is nothing short of magnificent.

There is some trepidation when you realise actors will be playing such cinematic icons as Liza Minnelli and Shirley MacLaine, yet the glorious musical numbers are choreographed with all the care and precision that the perfectionist Fosse would have demanded.

Beginning with the Big Spender rehearsal from Sweet Charity, the story jumps back and forth, like a trick of the memory. Each new section counts down the passage of time in terms of the momentous events in their lives – for instance, the death of Fosse's first wife and even his own. But to really understand the muddled timeline, a tasty entrée – the supremely well-researched BBC4 doc Merely Marvelous: the Dancing Genius of Gwen Verdon (on iPlayer until 2 Sep) – will make this eight-episode dramatic main course digestible.

The big reveal there is that Verdon was born with rickets, corrected by dancing every day after school. To think that this ailing child would become the toast of Broadway is extraordinary, but to learn that she was not just the muse of one of musical theatre's geniuses, but also taught him some of his signature moves, allows her to take her place among the greats of the genre. That Williams's dancing comes close to mirroring Verdon's style is remarkable, but it's in the emotion of difficult times that Williams captures Verdon's pain perfectly. SUE ROBINSON

DOCTOR DIGITAL

Is it time for a projector?

As the average TV gets larger, readers have asked Doctor Digital: why not just plump for a projector?

It's only recently that 4K HDR projectors have become remotely affordable. The BenQ W2700 (£1,400) will give you a 120-inch image when placed about ten feet away from the wall, while around the same money will get you the snappily named Panasonic TX-55GZ950B (£1,600), a high-end 55-inch telly. However, perfectly adequate TVs like the 49-inch Panasonic FX750B (£750) have bright colour and deep blacks.

Then there are the issues with setting up. Most modern projectors are bright enough to deal with anything other than direct sun, and you don't need a special screen if you have light-coloured walls. But unless you live in a large mansion you are likely to need a "short throw" projector (so it can be placed relatively close to the wall) and external speakers, perhaps rewiring your TV's existing soundbar.

The point is projectors are still more of an occasional treat than a daily device. The Anker Nebula Capsule (£370) is not 4K, but with a built-in battery it's truly portable (so will live happily in a cupboard most of the time) and has a brilliant speaker built in. Use it to make your next movie night or sporting occasion special. JONATHAN

GOING GLOBAL
The BGT judges take their pick of winners around the world

PICK OF THE DAY Britain's Got Talent: the Champions 8.00pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT You may have to delve deep into your memory banks to recall the past winners of BGT. It's been 13 years since the series started, after all. But you stand very little chance indeed of recognising the other acts in what promises to be the Olympics of Talent, because they're some of the winners of the 72 versions of Got Talent shows that have gone out around the world (see right). Reassuringly, the judging panel are familiar faces, as are presenters Ant and Dec.

Each week the judges vote one act through to the final while the audience vote for a second. But that doesn't mean you can't play along at home. The challenge is to decide, say, whether you think Paul Potts's singing is better than the Ukraine's Kseniya Simonova's sand artistry; and whether Boogie Storm's Star Wars-style dancing beats American father-and-daughter duo Bello and Annaliese Nock's daredevil circus act. It's certainly going to perk up Saturday nights for many of us. JANE RACKHAM

1.15pm BBC1

SPORT To a lake off the Danube at Linz-Ottensheim, Austria for an event that, quite apart from crowning the world's best rowers of 2019, is a major qualifier for Tokyo 2020. Today's events include the men's and women's fours, and the men's and women's quadruple sculls, with decent chances of medals for Team GB in all of them.

The BBC team is packed with Olympic champs: Matthew Pinsent and Katherine Grainger are the hosts on the bank; James Cracknell and Garry Herbert man the commentary box. More tomorrow on BBC2 at 12.30pm, with the traditional regatta finale of the men's and women's eights. JACK SEALE Sport: page 37

Rugby Union: Wales v Ireland

2.00pm (kick-off 2.30pm) C4

SPORT Which World Cup contenders are in the best shape? The picture gets a little clearer with another warm-up game. So far the answer is Wales, newly crowned as the number one side in the world after a controlled victory over England in Cardiff a fortnight ago. This is another chance for stand-in fly-half Dan Biggar to impress.

Ireland have, so far, spent the summer focusing more on trying out fringe players than sticking to a settled World Cup side, but that's likely to change as they face a stiff test with the tournament looming: next week's return fixture in Dublin is the final chance to get everything right before flying out to Japan. JS

Proms Encore

7.00pm BBC2

MUSIC The Proms' founder-conductor Henry Wood was born 150 years ago and this week's Encore is a special in his honour. Katie Derham looks at his legacy with music historian Dr Hannah French, saxophonist YolanDa Brown, Ilan Volkov (conductor of tomorrow night's Prom on Radio 3) and jazz pianist Monty Alexander. (You can see him in Duke Ellington's Sacred Music Prom this coming Friday.)

In the dotty "maestro in a Maestro" segment, Tom Service goes for a spin in his Austin motor with Jules Buckley, the dynamic chief conductor of the Heritage Orchestra, to tease out his musical tastes and inspirations. PATRICK MULKERN

Pointless Celebrities

7.45pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT If any edition should be a laugh, it's this one because there are eight comedy actors behind the podia. Among them is Ralph Ineson (aka "Yorkshire's Barry White") who instantly gets an apology from Richard Osman: "You've often been a Pointless answer because you've appeared in so many things but I've always pronounced your name wrong!" Ralph doesn't seem bothered.

In between obscure questions about Americanisms, pantomime dames and pop music, we get some insights into the filming of Benidorm and It Ain't Half Hot Mum. And you will definitely laugh – in absolute disbelief – when, in round two, the scores reach stratospheric levels. JR

THE WORLD'S GOT TALENT

■ Britain's Got Talent: the Champions, (8pm ITV) is set to star some of the most well-known acts who've appeared on BGT down the years, including Stavros Flatley, Collabro and Lost Voice Guy.

However, there will also be plenty of international variety performers from Got Talents all across the world. Tonight's episode will feature the likes of Kseniya Simonova (pictured), who won Ukraine's Got Talent with her incredible sand art act, and American daredevil duo Bello Nock (left) and his daughter Annaliese.

Later episodes will see Australian comedians the Nelson Twins – whose stand-up riffs on the fact that they're identical – as well as India's Got Talent's Bad Salsa, an ironically named troupe of dancers, and Asia's Got Talent 2017 winner, the ever-so-slightly creepy magician the Sacred Riana. FRANCES TAYLOR

Darkness: Those Who Kill

9.00pm, 9.45pm BBC4

DRAMA New series It's typically Scandi-dark, this Danish thriller. Barely lit offices, wintry cityscapes, spooky soundtrack and a creepy story about a killer who targets young blonde women. In this opening double bill, Det Jan Michelsen has been investigating the disappearance of Julie, abducted from a Copenhagen street, for six months. He and criminal psychologist Louise Bergstein think there's a connection with an older murder case. They're right, of course.

Jan and Louise are coolly professional. Maybe too cool, though working on such a deeply unpleasant case (oddly, a Psycho element is the least disturbing bit) doesn't leave room for jovial bonding. JR

Endeavour

9.00pm ITV3

DRAMA Grinning young female dancers are performing a colourful routine in plastic macs and umbrellas to a chirpy pop number on the lawn of an Oxford college in this 2017 episode. Meanwhile protesters, led by a Mary Whitehouse-type figure, are denouncing the goings-on as degenerate filth. Endeavour Morse (Shaun Evans) is bemused, particularly by the music of top pop group, the Wildwood. But his thoughts are distracted by the discovery of a body with links to the band.

It's a very leisurely tale with smatterings of jittery mysticism, though boss Fred Thursday (Roger Allam) has the measure of the young pop stars: "They are a rum lot and no mistake." AG

Casualty

9.20pm BBC1

DRAMA Consider this a severe weather warning: Jac Naylor is making a guest appearance. Yes, Holby City's ice queen is called upon to perform emergency surgery – and yet she still finds time to tell Dylan off for being impolite. Now, if you're not a regular Holby viewer, you may not be familiar with Jac's mordant wit, but it's basically the equivalent of being told by Friends' Chandler Bing to cut back on the sarcasm.

But maybe a cool head is what's needed – after all, the patient going under the knife is David's son Ollie. If, like me, you're a fan of the reserved, bumbag-wearing nurse, you'll find yourself moved as he anguishes about the welfare of the person who means the most to him. DAVID BROWN

Wild Shetland

8.00pm BBC2

NATURE There's thrilling footage of a pod of orca whales hunting for food off the coast of Shetland. They are silent and deadly, all audible communication between them stops (ie there's no clicking) and they work as a group to corner an unfortunate seal pup.

They are ruthless, but this is Nature and it's dinner-time, the whales have travelled hundreds of miles and they mean to eat well. Like graceful, speedy submarines they rush in for the kill.

Viewers in Scotland will have seen Wild Shetland when it was first broadcast earlier this year, a rather dreamy bit of escapism narrated by Ewan McGregor, who wastes little time before he uses the word "iconic". But get past that, and the sometimes icky anthropomorphism ("A little romance is required," he says of returning arctic terns) and this is all rather lovely.

The Constant Husband ★★★★

5.25pm Talking Pictures TV FREEVIEW

Movie stars regularly feign anonymity, but what of the characters they play? Not all would raise their hand during registration. In his breakthrough role, Clint Eastwood squinted through an entire spaghetti western trilogy as "The Man with No Name". In The Constant Husband (review, p46), Rex Harrison's amnesiac ("Mr X") has no idea who he is. Marilyn Monroe was "The Girl" in The Seven Year Itch, Ed Norton just "Narrator" in Fight Club, and the 12 Angry Men are referred to only by their numbers. ANDREW COLLINS

6.15pm Sky Premiere

Passable but patchy, this animated adventure wobbles between laugh-out-loud funny and charmlessly frenetic. Village druid Getafix decides it's time to find a suitable successor for his role as maker of the village's secret potion, but the self-appointed prime candidate is dark druid Demonix. Much mayhem ensues before Demonix gets his comeuppance in a fast-paced film that will struggle to appeal beyond existing Asterix fans. DAVE ALDRIDGE

Hunky Dory ★★★

BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

With its mix of social realism and high-school musical, this plays like an episode of Glee as directed by Ken Loach. Minnie Driver is the teacher rehearsing a rock opera take on Shakespeare's Tempest with her Swansea students, and pop hits from the likes of David Bowie and ELO are used to stirring effect. ALAN JONES

KISS AND TELL
With his trial looming, Harvey Weinstein's accusers reveal all

PICK OF THE DAY Untouchable: the Rise and Fall of Harvey Weinstein 9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK Harvey Weinstein is described by one of the former executives of his production company Miramax in Ursula Macfarlane's riveting, sobering and harrowing film as "a monster you wouldn't want to cross... he broke a ton of people".

Weinstein described himself as the "sheriff", a man who could do as he pleased, protected by powerful friends, all-encompassing non-disclosure agreements and his own reputation within the film industry. He's now accused of multiple sexual assaults on women, going back decades. He denies any wrongdoing, claiming such encounters were "consensual". But as one woman says here: "If I [Weinstein] get what I want, then it's consensual."

Women talk with courage of these encounters – the invitations to hotel rooms, Weinstein's nakedness, his insistence on massages and, sometimes, much worse. And the threats – "I can make your career or I can break your career. So show me your breasts." ALISON GRAHAM See feature: page 30

BBC Proms 2019

7.00pm BBC4

MUSIC In 1927, in the early days of "the wireless", conductor Henry Wood observed in Radio Times, "You cannot force Bach and Beethoven down people's throats. Give it them in small doses and, perhaps, after a little while, they may learn to love it and ask for more." Well, he wasn't far wrong; all these decades later the Proms that he'd founded in 1895 are still going strong.

This season has been marking 150 years since Wood's birth. Tonight's concert is wholly dedicated to him, showcasing works he premiered or arranged, from Ravel to Debussy, Granados to Wagner, John Ireland to Percy Grainger. Bramwell Tovey conducts the BBC Concert Orchestra. PATRICK MULKERN

Dragons' Den

8.00pm BBC2

REALITY "I'm like Bobby Ewing in Dallas! I've just been in the shower and now I'm back," jokes former Dragon Theo Paphitis, who's standing in for a poorly Touker Suleyman. Negotiations start with an interesting pitch from a man who works in the nutrition business and who, despite battling an eating disorder, has managed to lose ten stone in weight. But has he also lost a lot of money over his diet business proposition?

Also up for consideration is a music venture needing the smallest investment ever mooted in the Den – a mere ten grand – and a business making cakes and flavoured popcorn for dogs. Is that barking or not? JANE RACKHAM

Expedition with Steve Backshall

8.00pm Dave

DOCUMENTARY Steve Backshall and the gang arrive in Greenland, coincidentally in the news recently after President Trump declared he wanted to buy it from Denmark. The team kayaks up the Scoresbysund fjord (named after North Yorkshire-born explorer William Scoresby).

But as they camp on the ice, they invade someone else's territory. A cry of "A polar bear is coming!" goes up. The beast is clearly hungry, the seal population has dropped and there's little for it to eat. So a TV crew must look tasty. The bear comes close and Backshall is at pains to point out that no one wants to shoot it; this is its home, after all. AG

Peaky Blinders

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA Who'll take violent revenge first? All right, so that's the theme of every episode but particularly here, as the battle lines become sharper. While Arthur Shelby hunts for his wavering wife, Aberama Gold is set on avenging the horrors brought upon him by our new friends in Scotland. At the first proper meeting between north and south, let's just say things get heated.

Tommy has more than one murky conversation with Oswald Mosley, played with stratospheric superciliousness by the excellent Sam Claflin. Surely Tom won't pledge allegiance to the fascists? Then again, in Westminster in 1929, allegiance is as meaningless a term as it is up in Small Heath. JACK SEALE

TV CV KATE ASHFIELD

Ashfield is currently starring in two of ITV's biggest dramas, playing Mary Parker (right) in Sanditon (9pm, ITV) and Yvonne Fulcher in Jeff Pope's A Confession, which begins tomorrow.

The 47-year-old actress's first TV roles came in the mid-90s with bit parts in Prime Suspect and drama No Bananas before landing her first major role as Cate Hobbs in ITV's Soldier Soldier. She went on to star in BBC comedy A Many Splintered Thing, in 2002's Crime & Punishment with John Simm and in zombie comedy Shaun of the Dead.

Ashfield has also recently turned writer, penning 2017 drama miniseries Born to Kill starring Daniel Mays and Romola Garai. Speaking about making the transition to the other side of the camera, she said: "It's quite exciting to have a whole other career. It's so different from acting – you're not waiting for a script. I've got lots of things bubbling away, writing-wise." FRANCES TAYLOR

Sanditon

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA The magnificently monstrous Lady Denham (Anne Reid at her excoriating finest) hosts a gruesome lunch party for heiress Miss Georgiana Lambe. It's an uncomfortably undisguised attempt to throw her creepy nephew Sir Edward at Miss Lambe in the hope that they'll marry and he'll benefit from her huge fortune.

But Georgiana (Crystal Clarke) is a spirited woman who hates being paraded like some kind of exotic thing: "The heiress from the West Indies... rich and black as treacle." She's already been the subject of a tormented analogy about "ladies" unspooled in church by an unwise vicar (Kevin Eldon) who gets lost in his own pomposity. AG

See feature: page 26

The Handmaid's Tale

9.00pm C4

DRAMA "Where does it come from, this talent for ruthlessness? Seems so easy for them, for these men," June reflects in her opening voice-over. "It isn't about being right, or having the people or God on your side... in the end, victory goes to the hardest heart." Certainly June has hardened her heart over the course of this season and yet, remarkably, has avoided any consequences for her increasingly violent actions.

For now her plan to get 52 children out of Gilead is gaining momentum. Their night-time exodus through the woods is similar to the drama's very first scene – and equally heartstopping – while there's a satisfying twist in the Waterfords' story. Gripping. JR

50 Years of the Troubles: a Journey through Film

10.20pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Film maker Mark Cousins left Belfast aged 18, and returns to look back at what cinema and films meant to the city during the Troubles. Musician David Holmes tells Cousins how being confined to home because it was dangerous outside was "a great luxury, living in a place where there was absolutely nothing to do". So they stayed in to watch videos.

In a sometimes ridiculously pretentious documentary (Cousins is filmed variously hurling himself naked into a lake and having the name of Senegalese film director Djibril Diop Mambéty tattooed on to his arm) Cousins still manages to say much that is punchy and relevant. There's a tie-in season of movies on Film4. AG

POTTERING ABOUT
Presenter Fiona Bruce presides over more jaw-dropping valuations

Antiques Roadshow

8.00pm BBC1

FACTUAL The Roadshow really hits pay dirt on its visit to Morden Hall Park in south London. The big-ticket items come thick and fast: a dazzling diamond brooch in the shape of the Prince of Wales feathers, a tiny German Impressionist painting of 1920s café society, jewellery with a "fruit salad" of gems given to a socialite by Prince Ali Khan in the 1950s and an unusual Cartier watch get valuations to make the crowds gasp.

Andy McConnell, meanwhile, is stunned by three glasses bought for a few pence: "I've never had a deal that good in my life!" he exclaims, before pretending to run off with one of them. But perhaps most astonishing is a scribbled drawing signed by John Lennon and Yoko One, which its current owner "lost for a few years" in the back of a cupboard. After hearing its valuation, he'll probably keep a closer eye on it in future. JR

A bolt from the blue by Jeremy Deller: the Turner Prize-winning artist delivers a lecture to a school politics class on the British acid house scene. Three sides to the story

Battle of Midway ★★★

6.20pm Movies4Men FREEVIEW

The Battle of Midway of June 1942 was the United States's triumphant riposte to the tragedy of Pearl Harbor. John Ford filmed the action as it happened for a 1942 documentary (available on Netflix) and was injured by enemy fire in the process. Some of his footage found its way into the all-star 1976 re-creation of the battle showing today, while disaster-movie specialist Roland Emmerich is set to release his own $100-million-budgeted Midway in November. JAMIE HEALY

Disappearing act

P The Vanishing ★★★ 10.30pm Sky Premiere

Gerard Butler and Peter Mullan are top of the bill in this lurid drama "inspired by" the disappearance in 1900 of three keepers from the remote Flannan Isle's lighthouse off Scotland's Outer Hebrides. The Vanishing plumps for a wildly improbable explanation involving a washed-up treasure chest and some Scandi baddies. After a claustrophobic start, the movie mutates into a melodrama that's slickly done, but casts no credible light on what actually happened on Flannan Isle. DAVE ALDRIDGE

Now on Netflix

Dead in a Week (or Your Money Back) ★★★ Netflix

This British comedy about "assisted" suicide is blackly chucklesome and entertaining, but it lacks the subtlety that might better have fulfilled the promise of its premise. Aneurin Barnard plays a morose author who outsources his suicide to an ageing contract killer, played by Tom Wilkinson. DA

MONDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

MISSING PERSON Elaine O'Halloran (Siobhan Finneran, far right) is a mother expecting the worst

PICK OF THE DAY A Confession 9.00pm ITV

DRAMA OF THE WEEK New series Writer Jeff Pope is a master of true-crime dramas, but the six-part A Confession is one of his finest: a quiet, considered examination of murder and one detective's well-intentioned misjudgement.

It begins as a missing person inquiry in 2011, when 22-year-old Sian O'Callaghan doesn't return home after a night out in Swindon. Her mum Elaine (brilliant Siobhan Finneran) believes that her daughter is simply staying at a mate's, sleeping off a hangover. But as time drags on, a horrible, sick panic consumes the family and Elaine, a fierce pragmatist, knows something is wrong. "This is going to be bad," she tells her son. "Wherever she is, it's against her will. When we get her back it won't be the same Sian."

Martin Freeman is Detective Superintendent Steve Fulcher, who leads the hunt for Sian. He will go on to make a fateful decision that has the most devastating fall-out. ALISON GRAHAM

Garden Rescue

3.45pm BBC1

DAYTIME CHOICE Tracey doesn't really have a plan in mind for her garden in the Yardley district of Birmingham. It's a "Steptoe's yard" of old building materials, so anything would be an improvement.

However, Tracey and her late husband Simon – who sadly died only days before they were accepted for a garden transformation – were keen to have a pergola and a seating area. "It's nice to have a bit of maturity in the garden... apart from me!" jokes Charlie Dimmock as she spots the large shrubs. But will it be her design or that of the trendy Rich brothers that gets the thumbs up? It's emotional on many levels. More garden rescues throughout the week. JANE RACKHAM

Born to Be Wild

6.30pm BBC2

NATURE New series Even if you're not a big fan of foxes, you can't help but be charmed by the litter of orphaned fox cubs brought in to the Scottish SPCA wildlife rescue centre at Fishcross in Clackmannanshire. They're tiny bundles of mewling brown fluff that look like miniature teddy bears – although, as one of the workers reveals, "They're cute, but they're smelly!"

As the film tracks their progress (and that of the hedgehogs, birds and other creatures being rehabilitated), we learn that the runt of the litter (she's a quarter of the size of the others) may have to be put down. But there's joy later when her brothers and sisters are finally released back into the wild. JR

Only Connect

8.00pm BBC2

QUIZ All is right with the world, because Only Connect is back for its 15th series. So settle down to enjoy some excellent quizzing in the first episode, between the Darksiders, united by their love of Pink Floyd, and bridge players the Suits.

It's a half-hour packed with drama, from increasingly frantic button-pressing in front of the connecting walls to a head-in-hands moment when one contestant is furious with himself for failing to come up with a correct answer in a field in which he's an expert. "I had a complete brain freeze there," he wails.

And, incidentally, there's a perfect gem of info from Victoria Coren Mitchell about a theme from a certain sci-fi franchise. AG

Jamie's Meat-free Meals

8.00pm C4

FOOD NEW SERIES A lot of us already know that vegetables aren't boring, but Jamie Oliver's pimped-up plant-based recipes certainly prove the point, whether you're a vegetarian or simply want to eat less meat. His "turbo-charged" cottage pie would probably satisfy the most ardent carnivore, but it's his Indian-inspired chip butty that made me salivate. "This makes me so happy. I dare you to have a go at that," he chortles, punching the air.

He also visits a school where the youngsters already appreciate the benefits of vegetables and, thanks to a progressive canteen, eat way more than their five a day. One little cutie even identifies kohlrabi! JR

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

There's a temptation on soaps to have returning characters make a comeback looking unbelievably preened and tooth-whitened (and that's just Alfie Moon). But I love the fact that Patsy Palmer, despite now living the LA dream in real life (see page 162), has remained true to Bianca's roots. As we see on EastEnders (8pm BBC1, right), she remains a short-fused, loud-mouthed scrapper with claws to match her lurid animal-print tracky tops. Should Whitney and Callum's wedding go awry (as we suspect it might), Queen B will no doubt be in the thick of the action.

Corrie's Andy McDonald hasn't been seen on the Street for a decade and is now only ever mentioned when brother Steve or mum Liz goes on holiday to Spain. But actor Nick Cochrane makes a guest appearance on Doctors (1.45pm BBC1), which is returning after its summer break. He plays Dean, who gets into trouble for dealing drugs from his pizza business after getting in debt to a local gangster. DAVID BROWN

Rise of the Nazis

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY New series This excellent series, timed to mark the 80th anniversary of the start of the Second World War, begins in the early 1930s with an exploration of the rise of fascism in a once-flourishing democracy. Right at the end of this first episode, the experts are unequivocal. Of course there are modern parallels – too many. The slide of Germany into a far-right hell led by Adolf Hitler in the 30s "informs our current world", says one historian. "It is a warning to us." Why, he wonders, was no one able to prevent it?

Barrister Helena Kennedy and former Army chief General Sir Mike Jackson are among those dissecting the events that led up to the ascendancy of Hitler. AG

Paxman: Why Are Our Politicians So Crap?

9.00pm Channel 5

CURRENT AFFAIRS Trust in our MPs is at an all-time low. How did this happen, and what can be done? Jeremy Paxman searches tetchily for answers in a polemic that's too angry to focus: Brexit, the First Past the Post system, MPs' expenses, spin doctors... numerous complex issues get a blast of exasperation in a sweeping rant that will have you saying ,"Now, hang on..." It's also questionable whether interviewees such as Jonathan Aitken and Alastair Campbell can correctly diagnose the problems of 2019.

All that said, shows like this are meant to spark controversy – and a debate, hosted by Jeremy Vine, duly follows at 10pm. JACK SEALE

The World's Most Beautiful Railway

9.00pm More4

DOCUMENTARY Another pleasant excursion up and down the tracks in Scotland, and beyond: we spend some time this week at King's Cross station in London, where Highland enthusiasts are handing out goody bags to encourage long-distance travellers. There's even more amateur fervour on the much shorter Bo'ness and Kinneil Railway: it's one thing looking at or riding on a vintage train, but getting the chance to work as the fireman is quite another.

Meanwhile, if you're playing the "sloppily written voiceover" drinking game, where you pour a finger of Scotch for each use of the word "iconic", expect a warm glow by the end of the episode. JS

Celebrity MasterChef 9.00pm BBC1

FOOD "Anything on toast!" is Joey Essex's alarming reply to Gregg Wallace's question, "What can you cook?" You'd think that would stand him in good stead for his stint in an Indian restaurant making keema-topped naan bread. It doesn't, although he and Zandra Rhodes are clearly having a laugh and not taking this challenge too seriously.

The others in the first batch of five celebs are more competitive. "Little Chef" Oti Mabuse says it's "Big Chef" Neil Ruddock's fault – he's brought out the beast in her. Even so, none of them gets close to the culinary prowess of last year's winner, John Partridge, who was told, "You've smashed it!" on day one. On the other hand, Joey Essex reckons his bread pudding is worthy of a "Michigan" star.

Continues Wednesday. JR

Streep's inspiration

9.00pm Sony Movie Channel FREEVIEW

She may be a Trump-baiting Democrat, but Meryl Streep was cast against type in Jonathan Demme's remake of The Manchurian Candidate (review p44), playing a manipulative conservative senator. While Reagan speechwriter turned columnist Peggy Noonan accused her of copying Hillary Clinton, it turned out that Noonan was one of the people Streep took inspiration from. She also admitted to a bit of Margaret Thatcher, an equally divisive figure whom she would go on to play in The Iron Lady. ANDREW COLLINS

Star Wars Episode IV: a New Hope ★★★★★

5.45pm Sky Star Wars

The Force is strong with Sky this month, as the Star Wars saga is given its own pop-up channel until 15 September. Go back to the beginning with 1977's A New Hope, which introduces the holy trinity of Luke, Leia and Han Solo, and then watch the rest of the original trilogy, the prequels, plus the stand-alone Solo and animated Clone Wars. Latest episode The Last Jedi sets up the action for The Rise of Skywalker, in cinemas on 19 December. JOSH WINNING

P Out of Blue ★★

Virgin Movies

Ace British director Carol Morley (Dreams of a Life) gives us her sadly disappointing take on the American cop thriller, with Patricia Clarkson investigating the murder of a black-hole expert (Mamie Gummer). There's beauty and intrigue, but the tonal shifts are harder to predict than the killer.

SEEING IS BELIEVING
But can DI Rachel Carey (Holliday Grainger) trust the cameras?

PICK OF THE DAY

The Capture 9.00pm BBC1 (10.35pm in Northern Ireland)

DRAMA New series Don't let a hackneyed and over-used plot device (we see something, then we flash back, in this case to "18 hours earlier") put you off this crisp, absorbing thriller. Writer/director Ben Chanan (Cyberbully) has come up with an accidentally newsy, thoroughly contemporary story about CCTV surveillance and the use of facial recognition software.

Disgraced soldier Shaun Emery (Callum Turner) is a popular hero with huge public support after he's convicted of shooting dead a member of the Taliban during a tour of duty in Afghanistan. The incident is filmed on a colleague's helmet-cam and it appears Emery murders the man as he is helpless and about to surrender.

But at Emery's appeal hearing a smart barrister demolishes the evidence and Emery walks free. Hours later he's once again caught on camera in the thick of a terrifying incident and smart, ambitious cop DI Rachel Carey (Holliday Grainger) investigates. Can she believe what she sees? ALISON GRAHAM

Women's Football: Norway v England

4.45pm (k/o 5pm) BBC2

SPORT The World Cup inquest is over, and Phil Neville is looking to the future: he's included four senior debutantes in his squad for this friendly, including Chelsea forward Beth England and defender Aoife Mannion, who signed for Manchester City over the summer. Also named in the 23 are US-based youngsters Sandy MacIver, a goalkeeper, and defender Anna Patten (just 21 and 20 respectively).

With key senior players missing – including Jill Scott and Ellen White – and given Neville's willingness to blood new talent, all four could feature tonight, in this reprise of the World Cup quarter-final that England won 3-0. HANNAH SHADDOCK

Mama Twiga in the Garden of Eden

7.50pm PBS America

NATURE Unlike BBC's recent Serengeti series there are no child-friendly stories grafted on to this gentle doc that, although ostensibly about a female giraffe, actually spans all the species on East Africa's savannah.

But while there are dozens of sweet babies to coo over, there's blood and death, too, because Mama Twiga doesn't have much luck with her long-limbed offspring. She can only stand guard when her newborn calf struggles to get to its feet while a hyena endlessly circles. Bet she wishes she was a male giraffe; they spend their time chasing fertile females and neck-wrestling their rivals. JANE RACKHAM

Saving Lives at Sea

8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY There's a difficult and dangerous rescue beneath cliffs in Sheerness, Kent, when a young man, Logan, gets stuck fast in mud. The tide is rising and it's cold and dark. To compound the peril, Logan's mobile phone battery is dying and he will shortly be unable to use its torch to alert his rescuers in the gloom.

In the Bristol Channel, three sailors who are supposed to have made their way back to their ship in an inflatable are missing and overdue. And in Chiswick, west London, a woman who's tried to rescue her dog from the Thames hangs on to a ladder for dear life as the water laps around them both. AG

The Chefs' Brigade

9.00pm BBC2

FOOD Last week's astonishing result, which Jason Atherton decided not to share with his fledgeling brigade in case they got too cocky, should mean this week's challenge will be as easy as pie. As long as it's a Michelin star pie.

For the final, they're in Paris, competing against Mathieu Pacaud, owner and head chef of Michelin-starred restaurant Apicius. He's also Jason's culinary hero, which should make things interesting. While the series is in essence a cookery competition, it's been less about the food (bar a few quietly ecstatic "mmmm"s as they taste something) and more about the way that Jason has forged a tight-knit crew. The man takes no prisoners. JR

Holby City (8pm BBC1; Scotland: 10.35pm) is overdoing it with the portentous imagery: a storm is brewing, thunder is rumbling, rain is lashing the windows... honestly, the writers may as well have just spelled things out completely and called it Hurricane Kensit. Because, yes, "Patsy Comeback Week" (my term, not the BBC's) continues. Yesterday, it was Bianca in Walford, now it's Faye (right) in the hospital as a patient, but still possessing the energy to spar with old rival Jac

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Naylor like they're Krystle and Alexis. There's even a Blake Carrington- style man to argue over, what with Faye having reunited with Joseph (Luke Roberts also doing a guest turn).

The trouble is, though, that the outlook for Faye isn't all that rosy. In her years away, she's been knocking back the alcohol and is now in need of a transplant. Not that Jac is sympathetic – "booze-addled tramp" is one of the nicer things she says prior to Faye's life-or-death operation. DAVID BROWN

Fighter Pilot: the Real Top Gun

9.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY Britain is ready to receive its first four F-35 Lightning fighter jets as, with a colossal din, they fly out from their US base in South Carolina. The welcome from the country's press waiting at RAF Marham in Norfolk might not be entirely warm, as the vastly expensive F-35 programme is dogged by controversy. But the even bigger band of planespotters waiting by the runway is thrilled, and there's a cheer as each plane peels away from formation to land. "You could feel the ground moving," says one enthusiast.

Back at camp Danners and the gang face their final tests before learning whether they have done enough to become fully fledged fighter pilots. AG

The Affair

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA Claes Bang (soon to be seen in Dracula) is terrific as the insufferable Sasha, who takes the lead as the Noah character in the movie adaptation of Noah's semi-autobiographical novel.

He's the kind of poltroon who has "yoga hammocks" in his fabulous ocean-side house and who makes green tea with absurd ceremony. Helen (Maura Tierney), Noah's ex, is not impressed when Sasha, keen to get her take on her marriage break-up with Noah, asks her over.

We also see last week's funeral of Vik from the perspective of the poised, angry Janelle (Sanaa Lathan), who can't bear to be described as Noah's "girlfriend" and faces casual racism with admirable fortitude. AG

High Society: Cannabis Café

10.15pm C4

DOCUMENTARY A new two-part reality experiment, testing Britain's attitude towards cannabis. A diverse group of 20 volunteers hops over to Amsterdam, where one can legally "rock the ganj". It seems the programme is set to go further than merely investigating weed's medicinal properties, although two of the guinea pigs are there to try it as pain relief.

Other travellers include an 82-year-old woman who wants to sample marijuana to better understand her grandson's obsession with it, and a young couple and a pair of best friends who hope that getting high and losing some of their inhibitions will fix problems in their relationships. JACK SEALE

COLOUR CODE
It's not black and white for this lot

The Great British Bake Off

8.00pm C4

FOOD The expression "too many cooks spoil the broth" clearly doesn't apply to bakers, because when one poor soul struggles with their rather gloopy chocolate-coated biscuit bars the other bakers in the tent rush to help. There's not much they can do to salvage the situation, but it sweetens the blow of the judges' comment that they're like "biscuits after an earthquake".

However, there are some sophisticated bakes this week, which might explain why one young man is wearing a tie – a first for the tent. Some of the 3D biscuit sculptures are breathtaking. There's a positive menagerie of biscuity animals: two dragons, a highland cow, a sheep, a spider and a chicken, but one baker "pulls out all the stops" with a church organ. Which prompts a risqué comment from Paul Hollywood. JR

iPlayer (expires today)

An understated and yet at times devastating documentary about the daughters of painter Stanley Spencer, first shown last year. Shirin and her younger sister Unity, the latter filmed just before her death, recount how their artistic-genius father's chaotic personal life left them with scars that never properly healed. Their forgiving honesty is startling.

Hunger ★★★★★ 11.10pm Film4 FREEVIEW

Michael Fassbender underwent an extreme physical transformation for this film about IRA hunger striker Bobby Sands (review, p44). To drop the required three stone in weight, Fassbender holed up in a Venice Beach apartment where he fasted and power-walked for ten weeks ("I was just another freak on the beach," he told the Telegraph). Under medical supervision, Fassbender's diet revolved around nuts, berries, sardines and yogurt. When filming wrapped, the first meal he treated himself to was sushi. ANDREW COLLINS

P Trouble ★★ 10.30pm Sky Premiere

Bill Pullman plays a man looking to regain the piece of land he sold to his sister (Anjelica Huston) in this sedate rural comedy, which lumbers its talented cast with the weight of an uninspired story. We are here mainly to watch the two stars argue, although the script does offer sporadic moments of levity, mostly involving Pullman getting what he deserves. Sadly, Huston's one function is to shout at him, and, beyond the spite, there's simply not enough for either actor to really sink their teeth into. JAMES LUXFORD

Exhibition
★★★★ MUBI

The beautiful, ponderous work of British director Joanna Hogg is celebrated on subscriber service MUBI this month. Joining Archipelago (starring Tom Hiddleston) is Exhibition, a London-set story about an artist couple (played by Viv Albertine and Liam Gillick). Hogg's latest, The Souvenir, is in cinemas now. JOSH WINNING

FACE OFF

PICK OF THE DAY Raiders of the Lost Past with Janina Ramirez 9.00pm BBC4

HISTORY New series The world may have marched towards war in 1939, but in the same year, archaeological discoveries helped transform our knowledge of our past. In this series, Janina Ramirez explores three of these finds, starting with the Sutton Hoo Anglo-Saxon ship burial in Suffolk.

In the summer of 1938, local landowner Edith Pretty decided she wanted to know more about several mounds on her property. She recruited local self-taught archaeologist Basil Brown, with her gardener and gamekeeper to help him out. The first year they found evidence of boat burials, but the following summer they hit the mother lode – a 27m wooden ship, containing a burial chamber littered with finely wrought gold, gems and weapons. Ramirez's eyes positively gleam as she handles a 14oz, solid gold belt buckle.

As she points out, almost as important as the finds themselves was what they told us about "page one of England's history", dispelling the idea that society had collapsed into a Dark Age after the Romans left. GILL CRAWFORD

Cricket: the Ashes Fourth Test

10.00am SS Cricket/Main Event,
7.00pm (h'lights) Channel 5

SPORT A packed schedule means RT is going to press just as the third Test begins at Headingley – defeat means England is unable to regain the urn. However, if the absence of injured Aussie star Steve Smith and the continuing rise of pacy England bowler Jofra Archer mean England produce a result in Yorkshire, we're in for a thriller at Old Trafford.

It's a ground where many runs have been scored this year, but this is the point at which the pressure on batsmen can be unendurable. But if the start of the series is anything to go by, we can anticipate an even match full of the narrative twists that make Test cricket great. JACK SEALE

Interior Design Masters

8.00pm BBC2

PROPERTY The rooms in halls of residence are notoriously bland. And usually very tiny. So the challenge to radically transform a student room so that it is functional, but fun to live in, is a tough one for the remaining six designers. Although why are they all surprised by how small the rooms are? Can't they visualise a space from the measurements they're given? To add more pressure they're split into two teams, with the brief to spruce up a communal kitchen.

Most are happy with their design, but with a judge renowned for her love of patterns and colour, a couple of them maybe needed a few more pots of paint. JANE RACKHAM

Location, Location, Location/Grand Designs

8.00pm/9.00pm C4

PROPERTY C4's got the property market covered with the return of both these series. Kirstie Allsopp and Phil Spencer are house-hunting for two couples in the West Country who are fed up with renting. While one is £100k short of their dream home, the other admits they're probably looking for a "property unicorn".

Then Kevin McCloud meets Andy and Jeanette, a brave (or is that foolhardy?) couple building a house on top of a sheer cliff on the west coast of Scotland. Guess what? There are budget overruns, schedule delays and some challenging weather to battle – plus the worry that, in the end, Jeanette won't actually like the finished build. JR

The Big Hospital Experiment

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY New series
Fourteen young volunteers are put to work on the busiest wards of the Royal Derby Hospital. They get some training, but are still shocked at the responsibility.

Clinical educator Andy (who's a bit of a star) is nervous: "They could kill somebody!" he says. Erik's never made a cup of tea before, Will hasn't stuck at any job but Charlotte throws herself into every aspect of the work.

The experience of caring for others can be emotional, but it changes the volunteers' attitude towards work, life and death. More importantly, if they can make a difference, this radical scheme could prop up the understaffed NHS. JR

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Robert on Emmerdale (7pm ITV) is getting irritable, because his solicitor is telling him to plead guilty. He's adamant he won't, because Victoria's testimony will turn his case around. But she's wrestling with something we've often feared Robert lacks: a conscience.

Secretly, what we all know is that Robert (Ryan Hawley, third right) wasn't acting in self-defence when Lee was injured. He was actually a one-man sword (or shovel) of Damocles, opting to lamp Lee across the head with a spade while the horrible rapist had his back turned. As the court date looms, Victoria frets that should she lie on the stand, it'd make her no better than the man who denies sexually assaulting her.

Sean on Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV) is horrified that Eileen is planning to run away with Jan and has a go at him for endangering her. Because, of course, Eileen has always been so safe living at No 11. I mean, it's not like she was once married to a serial killer or anything. DAVID BROWN

Deep Water

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA By now you've probably hazarded a good guess at what the very odd, brittle Kate (Rosalind Eleazar) is up to. But we'll have to see how this strange, unhappy, unlikely drama plays out (unless you've watched it all on the ITV Hub), as kennel owner Lisa spots something curious at the Riverty house, which gives her reason to look even more worried than usual. Poor Anna Friel, having to yomp around in dreadful knitwear while looking tormented.

Meanwhile, downtrodden physiotherapist Roz (Sinead Keenan) must deal with a dreary pervert and the constant intrusions of her nosey neighbour, miserable cop Joanne (Faye Marsay). ALISON GRAHAM

Taskmaster

9.00pm Dave

COMEDY Greg Davies announcing at the top of the episode that this is series nine of Taskmaster prompts rapturous applause from the studio audience – and rightly so. Not many shows get to their ninth run still able to surprise, amuse and throw up little nuggets of joy quite like this. It's unlikely you'd see Jo Brand earnestly stamping on an aubergine until it turns to mush anywhere else on TV.

Completing the new line-up alongside Brand are comedians Ed Gamble, Rose Matafeo, Katy Wix and David Baddiel who, proving his commitment to the cause with some unadvisable ingesting, notes how close this madcap show has come to KGB torture. Long may it continue. FRANCES TAYLOR

Outlander

9.00pm More4

DRAMA Our heroes hit the open seas, and it's not long before Jamie Fraser demonstrates his fabled lack of sea legs, spending most of the episode either retching into a bucket or holding on to any piece of wood he can find. He and Claire are on a rescue mission to the Caribbean, so have to delay any difficult decisions about where their relationship is going.

When he's not throwing up, Jamie is being very much the 18th-century man, romancing Claire one minute, laying down the law to young Fergus – and a stowaway – the next. But the crew of the Artemis are superstitious, particularly where women and red-headed men are concerned. And temperatures fray when the wind dies down. GC

Sharon Osbourne explores the life of her grandmother, Dolly (inset)

Who Do You Think You Are?

9.00pm BBC1 (N Ireland: 10.40pm)

DOCUMENTARY The only time Sharon Osbourne gets emotional is when she discovers that her grandmother's Brixton home, which she dimly remembers, has been replaced by a supermarket. So although her mother's family tree (rock fans will be disappointed she isn't looking into that of her father, band manager Don Arden) turns up tales of poverty, childhood deaths and the workhouse, there's none of that hand-flapping, lip-trembling stuff we usually see.

Instead, Sharon's simply happy that "my impressions of [my grandma] when I was a child were totally wrong". She wasn't a frightening "witch" after all, but a tough woman who did whatever she could to survive. Even more inspiring for Sharon is the pioneering Irish ancestor who took off for America, in the hope of a better life. Sadly it wasn't. JR

10am BBC3/10.35pm BBC1 (N Ireland: 11.40pm)

Investigative reporter Ellie Flynn dives into another highly controversial issue. Instances of black citizens in the US receiving terrible treatment from law enforcement officers are well known, but there are more and more complaints from women who say they've been sexually assaulted. Are some states' laws set up to let offenders in uniform off?

Dylan in the frame

Don't Look Back ★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

This brilliantly filmed record of Bob Dylan's British tour of 1965 was shot by DA Pennebaker, one of the masters of cinéma vérité, who died last month, aged 94. Pennebaker followed Dylan around, picking up truthful insights along the way, including revelatory moments with Joan Baez, Alan Price and, particularly, Dylan's manager Albert Grossman. The end result, edited down from over 20 hours of material, is a telling portrait of a unique performer at the height of his powers. It's available on catch-up till Monday. TONY SLOMAN

New to TCM today

Air America ★★★ 9.00pm TCM

Laos during the Vietnam War provides the backdrop for this amiable action comedy from director Roger Spottiswoode. It follows the adventures of a CIA-organised air freight operation, which is smuggling heroin on behalf of the local drug barons. As head pilot, Mel Gibson reprises his Lethal Weapon role of the bonkers tough guy, with Robert Downey Jr as his wild-card sidekick. The flying sequences are neatly staged but, given it is loosely based on fascinating true events, this is a bit of a missed opportunity. JOHN FERGUSON

Prime Thompson

The Children Act
★★★★ Amazon Prime

Emma Thompson delivers arguably the finest performance of her career in this drama, adapted by Ian McEwan from his novel. Thompson plays a High Court judge whose life starts to veer off-course as she deals with a case involving a teen Jehovah's Witness, played by Fionn Whitehead (Dunkirk).

PURPLE PATCH
Nick Knowles with team-mates Billy Byrne and Mark Millar (and early days with Lowri Turner, inset)

PICK OF THE DAY DIY SOS: Celebrating 20 Years 8.00pm BBC1

PROPERTY Can it really be 20 years since Nick Knowles and Lowri Turner first set out to repair botched home DIY projects? There were bad bathrooms, walls with gaping holes and quite a bit of banter and slapstick along with the makeovers.

As time went on, the projects got bigger and Knowles and his purple shirt brigade – Julian, Chris, Mark and the butt of everyone's jokes, electrician Billy – started their Big Builds in 2010, enlisting local tradespeople and volunteers to transform lives and communities in nine days. In this celebration Knowles travels round the country revisiting some of the projects and people DIY SOS have helped. There are families who had their entire home demolished and rebuilt, and larger schemes like the Manchester veterans' street and the Grenfell Tower boxing club. Expect buckets of tears, but also hope and inspiration aplenty. "We've unleashed a monster," says Billy. Maybe, but a very cuddly one. GILL CRAWFORD

The Dog House

8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY New series When a dog gets a new owner in Paul O'Grady: For the Love of Dogs, it's inevitably emotional. But, as we see in this doc about the Wood Green animal charity, it's not always that straightforward – there isn't always an instant bond. An abandoned dog, such as Tiny, may be too nervous to go anywhere near an unfamiliar person. Then again, a boisterous dog may be too much for youngsters – the Kerry children are tearfully anxious about bundle-of-fun Daisy.

Mozart, on the other hand, doesn't seem at all interested in his (lovely) potential new owners. We also see how distressing it is when an owner has to leave the dog with the home. JANE RACKHAM

Billy Connolly's Great American Trail

9.00pm ITV

TRAVEL New series The Big Yin stays close to his new home of America but true to his Scottish roots in this three-parter. The idea is for him to follow the migratory trail of the Scots through the States; although there was no preview at the time of writing, we know how Connolly delights in getting side-tracked – these adventures are really just an opportunity for him to meet wacky characters and muse on the idiosyncrasies of the human race.

He starts at New York's Tartan Day parade and meets a group of naughty nuns in Boston, but we're also promised gangsters, moonshiners and two presidents with Scottish ancestry. JR

Lost Films of WW2

9.00pm BBC4

HISTORY Eighty years on, there are still new ways in which to look at the Second World War. Portable movie cameras were just about affordable to, and usable by, ordinary people at the time: some of the previously unseen footage shown here is stunning. The first wow is a tour of Europe on the brink of war, shot by a family who enjoyed much more adventurous holidays than average Brits and had the political nous to know what to film.

After that are insights into Dunkirk and the bombing of Sheffield, plus the story of the RAF pilots who oversaw the Battle of the Atlantic. Interviews with relatives and surviving participants help to fill in what are often emotive details. JACK SEALE

The Loudest Voice

9.00pm, 10.05pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA New series Russell Crowe dons a "gimme an Emmy" fat suit for a biographical drama about Roger Ailes, the former CEO of Fox News who was one of the US media's most powerful figures before allegations of sexual harassment finally caught up with him. We start in 1996, with Ailes being discreetly eased out of CNBC and setting up Rupert Murdoch's new rival network.

There the bully excels by hanging on to three beliefs: conservative viewers are an untapped market, news need no longer be about facts, and if Fox is flying he can't be fired. In a drama lacking nuance, Ailes's command of a company is better handled than his disturbing treatment of female employees. JS

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

EastEnders (7.30pm BBC1) must have thought it was a bit of a gamble to have escaped criminal Hunter Owen (Charlie Winter, right) orchestrate an armed siege in the Queen Vic, seeing as the guy wasn't exactly Mr Charisma when he was first in the show. But, do you know what? He's actually pretty menacing during this showdown. Maybe it's because the actor has finally been given some decent material to work with? Or perhaps he's got one eye on a showreel for casting agents? But whatever the reason, he's certainly coming up with the goods.

In fact, the whole show has improved of late. These past few years, I'd been worried that EastEnders would never be able to recover its edge. But suddenly, there's a proper sense of jeopardy and tension, as well as characters in who we can emotionally invest. So, when Hunter's gun goes off (as all loaded guns in drama must), I guarantee that you'll be anxious to discover who has taken the bullet. DAVID BROWN

FBI

9.00pm Sky Witness

DRAMA When recently elected American senator Gary Lynch (Eion Bailey) returns to his lovely home with his lovely wife after a successful political rally, your mind will be buzzing with potential catastrophes. Don't read on if you like surprises...

OK, it's a kidnapping, and the ransom note – as well as asking for an astronomical sum of money – is headlined "You Lied!"

The more that agents Bell and Zidan investigate, the more they discover that the apparently squeaky-clean senator has a cupboard full of skeletons – but which one of them is capable of kidnapping? If you can overlook the occasionally hammy bits of acting, there's an intriguing story lurking in here. JR

I Am the Night

9.00pm Alibi

DRAMA Knowing where fact ends and fiction begins is a big issue as this dark 1960s Los Angeles drama ends. Young Fauna Hodel has learnt what might be a horrific fact about her origins, but will she get closure if she confronts her grandfather George Hodel?

After being brought to his house (scenes here are filmed in the same distinctive building that the real George lived in), she's now in his rather terrifying clutches.

Journalist Jay, meanwhile, is frantically trying to persuade the LAPD to take his theories about George as the Black Dahlia killer seriously. As the smoke rises over the city during the Watts riots, he takes a fateful journey... GC

This Way Up

10.00pm C4

COMEDY DRAMA This is an underpowered, foot-tapping episode of Aisling Bea's dark comedy, which is more dark than comedy, with more of those painful changes in tone. Aine (Bea) tips over into being too tiresomely flippant because her sister Shona (Sharon Horgan) isn't around – she's having a weekend away with her attentive boyfriend.

So Aine is on her own, and must throw herself on the mercy of anyone who wants to spend any time with her. Unfortunately this includes her ex, Freddie, the man we've been led to believe triggered her breakdown after the end of their relationship. But the episode is just about saved by a magnificently judgemental barmaid. ALISON GRAHAM

First Dates Hotel

9.00pm C4

REALITY Rugby player Michael describes himself as "tall, dark and a handful", which perhaps explains why, when his date Robyn, a receptionist, tells him her age, he replies, "Oh! I thought you were older than that." Ouch! That's hardly a good start to a date, but you can never tell where these couplings are going.

Elsewhere in the Hotel di Amore, the usually level-headed builder Richard asks his date, the mystical Carly, to marry him within 60 seconds of meeting. "It's like I made you in the computer!" he says, because she seems so perfect.

But it's 46-year-old perfumer Perry who'll take your breath away when he parades past the pool wearing gold swimming trunks. Kylie Minogue he isn't. Even so, Fred Sirieix is confident that Perry and his blind date will get on like a house on fire JR

Ms Kelly, full of grace

Rear Window ★★★★★ 2.35pm Film4 FREEVIEW

Alfred Hitchcock paid close attention to every detail of Grace Kelly's costumes for Rear Window (review, p46). But he obviously didn't look closely enough. He reckoned that Kelly's bosom was too small for some of her outfits and insisted that she wore falsies to pad them out. Kelly was appalled and asked designer Edith Head to come up with another solution. The veteran costumer, who won eight Oscars from her 35 nominations, merely bunched and tucked the fabric and Hitch never knew the difference. DAVID PARKINSON

New films on My5

Bypassing the usual TV scheduling, Channel 5 has added more new content from the Pluto TV Movies library to its catch-up service. Among the under-the-radar titles worth a look are Kids in Love, in which Will Poulter comes of age in London and Man Down, with Shia LaBeouf as a traumatised US Marine. East meets West in the form of Jackie Chan and John Cusack in Dragon Blade, while Anton Yelchin embarks on an affair with a married woman in the seductive 5 to 7. Best of the bunch is The General (pictured), starring Brendan Gleeson as Irish criminal Martin Cahill. JAMIE HEALY

FRIDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

WORKING AT IT
Jason Manford and Catherine Tyldesley as Mike and Karen

PICK OF THE DAY Scarborough 9.30pm BBC1

COMEDY OF THE WEEK Writer Derren Litten had huge success with the broad and bawdy sitcom Benidorm on ITV, but he's treading more gently with Scarborough, give or take a joke about Jimmy Savile. Stand by for a controversy-klaxon because someone, somewhere will be offended.

But actually, Scarborough is rather sweet and very old-fashioned, a mixture of Peter Kay's Phoenix Nights and Still Open All Hours (there are alumni from both shows in the cast). The star, Jason Manford, even looks and sounds a bit like Kay as Mike, an amusement arcade manager attempting to stabilise his rocky relationship with the kind and very forgiving Karen (Catherine Tyldesley).

Clearly Scarborough is set in, well, Scarborough, the fine North Yorkshire seaside resort, and centres largely on a local pub (Litten plays the manager) and its karaoke nights. There are some good lines and an excellent joke about The Northern Echo. ALISON GRAHAM

7.30pm, 10.10pm BBC4

MUSIC A globe-spanning range of music in this double bill. Prom 57 has a Chinese flavour with the debut of the Shanghai Symphony Orchestra and their director Long Yu. We'll hear Qigang Chen's tone poem The Five Elements, and Eric Lu, the Chinese-American who won the 2018 Leeds International Piano Competition, plays Mozart's Piano Concerto No 23. The concert includes Rachmaninov's Symphonic Dances.

Later, big-band jazz meets gospel in Duke Ellington's Sacred Music. The Duke called his late-in-life musical exploration of spirituality "the most important thing I have ever done". That sound is re-created by Peter Edwards and his cool Nu Civilisation Orchestra. PATRICK MULKERN

Mortimer & Whitehouse: Gone Fishing

8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY An air of melancholia hangs over this final episode, as Bob Mortimer and Paul Whitehouse patiently fish on the River Ure, musing on retirement. Bob reckons he'll be eating pancakes and watching TV rather than fishing. He's not a natural with a rod, falling over at least once every session: "What is it with you and gravity?" Paul wonders.

They also ruminate on the perfect afterlife. For Paul, it's somewhere he can "land a big fish", but he thinks Bob would be happiest in "an eternal pub where you can have a pint of some dodgy old bitter". Let's hope they return for more fishing adventures first. JANE RACKHAM

Hold the Sunset

8.30pm BBC1

SITCOM Anne Reid is developing a yen for scene-stealing in series finales: after her speech in Years and Years, her character here, Queenie, has something different up her sleeve during the long-awaited wedding of Phil (John Cleese) and Edith (Alison Steadman). It's a brief, heartfelt interruption of the normal breezy parade of erratic silliness, in a sitcom that is never encumbered with trivial concerns, such as events that make sense or dialogue that flows.

Of course, the jeopardy on the big day centres around Roger (Jason Watkins), the implausibly weird puppet-toting manchild. Can he or any of the other crazy relatives derail the nuptials... or could this be the last ever episode? JACK SEALE

Fosse/Verdon

9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA The signs weren't good for the Gwen Verdon/Bob Fosse marriage, as in a flashback we see Gwen yelling at Fosse after he has a fling with a chorus girl. "You know I'm crazy about you," he whines. It works, and he proposes to her amid the wreckage of their apartment. Gwen threw a lot of glasses and plates. And Fosse slept with a LOT more chorus girls.

These frequent trips back in time are off-putting and mess with the flow of Fosse/Verdon. But it still has its moments and Sam Rockwell and particularly Michelle Williams are tremendous as the warring couple. There's real meanness when Fosse humiliates Gwen during the Broadway run of Chicago. AG

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

I don't know what Daniel (Rob Mallard, right, with Lucy Fallon) has done to annoy the writers on Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV), but they currently have him caught between two women who are both set to leave the show. Tonight, we see him gazing lovingly at Bethany, while his fiancée Sinead plans a surprise wedding. Enjoy the attention while it lasts, Daniel. It might prove to be fleeting.

Neighbours (1.45pm, 5.30pm Channel 5) is making a virtue out of Paul Robinson's (Stefan Dennis) crazy history by having his ex-wives resurface to gang up on him. Today, it's the turn of his most famous ex: Christina Alessi, who will soon be joined by her twin sister Caroline – played by twin sisters, Gayle and Gillian Blakeney. But don't expect their comeback to be long term: the actress twins now live in America. "I don't think they've got a desire to tread the boards again," says Dennis. "Gill's next-door neighbour in Los Angeles is Tom Hanks!" DAVID BROWN

Lethal Weapon

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA As we discovered last week, Sofia Vasquez (Leonor Varela) is the head of a vicious Mexican drugs cartel, but it's now looking like her interrogation techniques could do with some work. After kidnapping Cole, she prises out his fingernails and jabs him with a blade – all while wearing a white trouser suit. Now excuse me for questioning your methods, Sofia, but it's going to take a lot of Vanish to get the bloodstains out of that designer outfit.

Cole, to give him credit, handles the torture as well as can be expected. Which is more than can be said for me. By the time Sofia's gang started burying him alive, I was cowering and wondering how all this made it past the network TV censors. DAVID BROWN

The Berlin Wall: Escape to Freedom

9.00pm PBS America

DOCUMENTARY What should be a straightforward history of the Berlin Wall and the attempts to cross it from East to West is marred by jarring terminology – "a deadly mega-wall", the "death strip" that lay in between – and cheesy reconstructions.

Get past that, however, and the stories are proof of the determination of so many to escape the strictures of life under the Stasi. As the Wall grew – or entered its second, third and fourth generation, as this puts it, as if it were a mobile phone – so the escape attempts became more creative. I particularly liked the story of the three ingenious Bethke brothers, who all got to the West in one piece. Not everyone was so lucky. GILL CRAWFORD

Activate: the Global Citizen Movement

10.00pm National Geographic

DOCUMENTARY Not so much a documentary as an advert, although perhaps it can be excused since the beneficiary is a lobbying organisation aiming to eradicate extreme poverty. Hugh Jackman is among the celebs backing Global Citizen's programme of social media storms, music events and face-to-face persuasion, coordinated by a New York office full of energetic young achievers.

Much of the focus is on gender inequality as a driver of poverty: it's debatable whether asking Procter & Gamble and Accenture to alter where their money goes is a sustainable solution, but case studies – such as the female-driven small businesses in Mexico – illustrate the task in hand. JS

QUIZ QUEEN
Sandi Toksvig takes the helm for another look at letters

QI

10.00pm BBC2

ENTERTAINMENT When longtime QI host Stephen Fry left the series in 2015 after 12 years, some doubted that anyone could replace him – but, as she begins her fourth series in charge, it's now nearly impossible to imagine anyone but The Great British Bake Off's Sandi Toksvig in the main chair.

By turns witty, deadpan and less self-effacing than Fry was, Toksvig has made the show her own and revitalised the format, without undermining the delicate balance of book smarts and banter that made it work.

This week, she's testing Jason Manford, Sarah Millican, newcomer Loyiso Gola and regular Alan Davies on all things Quirky, ranging from the mythical history of tea-making (how DID they decide to put the milk in?) to who actually has "Q" type blood. And no, it's not the Queen...

With teen dramas enjoying a renaissance, it's a good time for this Spanish series to return with a new, second run of episodes. There's not much of a gimmick here aside from a small gang of scholarship kids getting a mixed reception at an incredibly posh private high school – instead, it's simply very strong on the lies, murder and aggressive fashion choices that make similar American shows such a hoot.

P Holmes and Watson ★ 8.00pm Sky Premiere

Fiction's most brilliant detective is reduced to buffoonery in a woefully poor comedy that fails on every level imaginable. Sherlock Holmes (Will Ferrell) and Dr John Watson (John C Reilly) are on the trail of Professor Moriarty (Ralph Fiennes) via a succession of puerile gags and underwhelming set pieces that illicit groans at every turn while insulting the audience's intelligence. The mugging of the title characters sinks the whole enterprise, leaving this as a sad stain on the CVs of everyone involved. TERRY STAUNTON

Stephen King's It: Parts 1 & 2

9.00pm Sony Movie Channel FREEVIEW

With It: Chapter Two arriving in cinemas, now is the perfect time to revisit the 1990 mini-series adaptation of Stephen King's novel, in which teens are terrorised by an ancient evil that takes the shape of Pennywise the Clown. "I think of him all the time as a smile gone bad," actor Tim Curry said of his red-nosed monster. He kept the fear alive during filming by distancing himself from the child actors. "Whenever [we] got too close, he would grin at us with his horribly pointed teeth," recalls actress Emily Perkins. Beep-beep. JOSH WINNING

Frankenstein

★★★★★ 6.15pm TCM

"It's alive!" Showing away from Sky Cinema for the first time in a decade, director James Whale's interpretation of Mary Shelley's classic tale of man playing God is a true gothic masterpiece. Its superb cast and Whale's innovative direction mean it remains the most influential genre movie ever made. ALAN JONES

The next big thing

A bright future beckons for Isa Guha – the commentator shaking up cricket's old boys' club

From Wednesday 10.25am Radio 4 LW/5 Live Sports Extra

Faced with a challenge, Isa Guha approaches it in much the same way that she ran towards the crease in her days as a right-arm, medium-fast bowler: at full tilt. She's been doing it her whole life. Whether it was as the only girl on the colts' team at her local club, the first woman of South Asian descent to play for England, winning the World Cup, completing a Master of Philosophy in neuroscience or learning the subtle art of cricket commentary, she always wants "the next thing".

"With anything in life, you have to be taken out of your comfort zone," she says. "It's like a magnet for me to go somewhere I haven't been before and to be constantly challenged."

'I'd love to get to the point where we don't talk about gender'

We're at the home of cricket, Lord's, as England's men take on Australia in the Second Test. Guha is taking a break between commentary shifts for the BBC's Test Match Special. The talk – aside from Steve Smith's batting and Jofra Archer's bowling – is that the next thing for Guha, 34, might be to replace David Gower as lead anchor on Sky Sports Cricket, for which she has done ball-by-ball commentary since 2018. Understandably, she deflects the question. As does the former England batsman when I ask him for a comment. "I'd rather not, sorry," he says, amiably.

It's easy to see why Guha has risen to sit alongside names such as Michael Atherton, Nasser Hussain, Jonathan Agnew and Phil Tufnell. She is composed, amusing, eloquent and exudes expertise. As we chat, the TV shows a review of the umpire's decision not to give an Australian batsman out LBW. "He's gone," Guha says, matter-of-factly, and she is, of course, spot on.

Her cricketing life began with High Wycombe, in Buckinghamshire, and she went on to play for Thames Valley, nipping out to join her dad in the car to listen to Test Match Special.

"It would have been Darren Gough bowling," she says. "He was my hero. I've always been inspired by characters like Gough. It's quite an Australian mentality to think you're never out of the game. But he had that, the personality to make something happen on the pitch – that's what I always wanted to do."

Guha made her international debut in 2002 and played for England 113 times. She was in 2009's World Cup-winning squad and the triumphant Ashes sides of 2005, 2008 and 2009.

After England's men won the Ashes in 2005, they drove through London on an open-topped bus. Trailing behind them were the victorious England women's team. Guha remembers someone shouted: "Are you the Wags?"

Back then, she found the reception amusing.

PHOTOGRAPHED EXCLUSIVELY FOR RADIO TIMES BY MARK JOHNSON

"It was an incredible time," she says. "My thought process was, 'How good is it that we're here with the guys?' It just felt very privileged. Whereas now I'd be like, well, no, the women are there on merit – they should be there with the guys."

Since retiring in 2012, Isa – pronounced "Eesha" – has become a familiar voice in broadcasting, not least on TMS, the radio institution that once had a reputation as being the preserve of overgrown public schoolboys. She's young for a cricket commentator, but what rarely passes without mention is her being a woman. Not the only one, she's always quick to point out, citing fellow pioneers such as Alison Mitchell and the Australian Melanie Jones. Yet they're invariably still seen not as commentators, but as female commentators. "I'd love to get to the point where we're not talking about the gender issue," she says. "It's about how good you are."

Former Australian spinner and fellow commentator Shane Warne has been crucial in building Guha's confidence, and he tells me that she's up there with the best. "She's so bloody good at it," he says. "She can see why something is happening and she will also pick up things about the tactical side of the game."

Guha is eager to help girls progress in the game, particularly those from an Indian background – one of many values she says she inherited from her mother and role model, Roma, who moved here from Calcutta (now Kolkata) with her husband Barun in the 1970s, two weeks after their arranged marriage. "She was never fazed by anything," Guha says. "She wanted to always put herself in challenging situations."

Roma died, aged 65, from cancer in January, which came up on TMS after a poignant discussion about bereavement between Agnew, Andrew Strauss and Glenn McGrath. (On day two of the Test, many people wore red for the Ruth Strauss Foundation, in memory of Strauss's late wife.) Guha's composure cracked on air.

"It was emotional," she admits, her eyes watering. "Days like that bring people together as everyone's got their own battle. I do feel like two separate people at the moment – one that's dealing with that and one in my work environment. I'm trying to get to the point where I'm one person. I think guys tend not to reveal what they're feeling. But it's something Rich [singer/songwriter Richard Thomas] is very good at. I'm super lucky to have him in my life." They married last September, and she laughs when she recalls how little he knew about cricket before he met her. Now, she says, "He absolutely loves it."

As Guha says goodbye, a head pops around the door. It's one of Australia's veteran cricket correspondents. "We love her in Australia, too!" he exclaims. "She knows her stuff. You have to or the boys will eat you alive." Rest assured, that won't happen to Isa Guha. JACQUELINE FULLER

PICK OF THE WEEK

Python at 50: the Self-Abasement Tapes Wednesday 11.00pm Radio 4

We at Radio Times were well prepared to pay tribute to the Pythons as they celebrate 50 years since the first broadcast of the Flying Circus on BBC1 (see page 40 for details of how to buy RT's official Monty Python at 50 bookazine). But the BBC are no slouches themselves. In the run-up to the official anniversary on 5 October, Radio 4 offers up this five-part appetiser in which Michael Palin (below) is to be found in a sewer beneath Johnson's Pâtisserie on London's Edgware Road, scrabbling around in the effluent in search of some of Python's great lost works.

Today he unearths gems that have never before been broadcast – and when you hear the gloriously scabrous and profane sketch about the Fat Ignorant Bds' political convention in the USA, you'll understand why they never went to air. The N-word is rightly bleeped, but what's just as shocking is how relevant the sketch is to contemporary America's political landscape.

We're safely back to the absurd in a courtroom sketch with a hang-'em-high jury, a disinterested judge and two love-rival lawyers, while the country and western version of Terry Jones's angsty song I'm So Worried – from the 1980 Contractual Obligation album – is an amusing diversion.

Palin presents his material with the silly, mock-serious air of classic Python BBC presenters – his updates on the fate of Johnson's Pâtisserie are wonderful – and there's a welcome appearance by Terry Gilliam at the close. There's gold in them thar sewers.

AMBRIDGE DIARY

The Archers this week…

Pregnant Lexi is back, which is good news for Adam and Ian, who have been on tenterhooks. However, a night out for Ian's birthday proves to be a little overwhelming for her. And when Roy makes a kind gesture later on in the week, Lexi finds herself in an uncomfortable position.

Emma continues to navigate her newly single life with an ever-attentive Tracy at her side, but things take a bizarre turn when Tracy makes a drastic decision that leaves her employers at Grey Gables baffled. And Kate digs herself a hole – unintentionally awakening Peggy's mischievous side.

Plus Jim and Jazzer continue to be the show's best double act as the Prof gets some help following an anxiety attack. DAVID BROWN

SOUND BITES

How will John go?

Today's loss may well be a rival's gain

TOMORROW IS ABOUT to arrive at Today. News-gnasher John Humphrys is soon to leave, taking with him the memories of 10,000 mornings and a single pair of Bakelite headphones. The wizened word-wizard from Wales has been threatening to leave for years. But this time it's for real. I know because the BBC has just ordered the sandwiches. In an organisation run on meetings, you can tell a lot by following the tuna and sweetcorn around.

His departure is a revolution for radio's morning routine because he's been banging on at breakfast since 1987. I could look it up, but I'm sure I remember Margaret Thatcher calling in. "Good morning, John," she threatened.

His career takes him from TV newshound to Mastermind. But nothing can replace years of lost sleep to wake the nation on Radio 4. In the nicest possible way, over on TV, many people come and go. Fashions change. Reality shows like Love Island make the public the stars.

So now there are two big questions for all radio listeners: 1 What will JH say on his last morning? 2 What will he do next?

As for what will come out of his mouth, a heartfelt Wogan-style sign-off is out of the question. Such personal moments are just not right on Radio 4. He couldn't get away with it, even if he was in The Archers. When Nigel Pargetter was killed off in a rooftop plunge, all the actor Graham Seed was allowed was a blood-curdling "Aaaaaaargh!" The screech is said to have lasted longer than a plummet from the Eiffel Tower. Somewhere in those extra screaming seconds, you can hear the sound of an actor losing a job.

'A heartfelt Wogan-style sign-off is out of the question'

For John Humphrys, his last moments on Today will feel exactly the same. But to leave breakfast-time radio is much worse than a rooftop slip-up. Especially one in which you die.

You see, this planned professional plunge comes just as the daily news delivers its biggest bangs in years. There's Brexit, there's Trump, and if you can tell me what will happen next in Parliament, you should have a column in RT. So Humphrys should say as little as possible.

GETTY

Will the production team try to surprise him with a tape of his best bits, like Big Brother? I hope not. He needs to say something enigmatic at his end, like "That's it. Coming up on Saturday Live, jugglers and pottery. Pottery! HAH!" But of course, my advice will be ignored. John and the Today team will inevitably go for something more than the nothing I've advised.

His voice still emerges in my bedroom from the same small radio-cassette player I've used since my O-levels. I will feel older when he's gone. I shall miss him.

THIS BRINGS ME to question two... after it's all over, what will he actually do next? He'll keep doing Mastermind. Strictly have been ringing him for years, but I predict here in this hit new column in *RT he'll be offered a show on a rival station – John Humphrys as we've never heard him before. Rivals are gaining listeners, using strong speakers and a mixture of magnetism and marketing.

So when tomorrow comes at Today, JH might not leap into radio oblivion quite like Nigel. Yes he'll jump, but watch out BBC, he may jump ship.

Paddy O'Connell hosts Broadcasting House on Sunday at 9am on Radio 4, and co-hosts the podcast Dogpod

It's not the Proms that are for the elite

We went to the BBC Proms. It was, as usual, civilised. We could see. We could hear. The audience was made up of those Londoners (and visitors) who could get through 40 minutes without whooping or loudly sharing their opinion on the experience with the people around them. Furthermore, the tickets didn't cost a fortune. That's the thing that needs stressing. If there ever was a time when going to classical music concerts was something that only the wealthy could afford to do, that time is not now. If there's anything that's only for the elite nowadays, it's pop music.

When pop was affordable

Tickets for pop shows used to be cheap. As a rule of thumb you could get to see your favourite band for less than it would have cost you to buy their record. That's no longer the case. Oh boy, is it no longer the case! I've just glanced at what I would have to pay if I wanted to see Ariana Grande (right) at London's O2 Arena and even I was startled to see that prices ranged from £66 to an eye-watering £613 – this for one of those packages that probably buys you some meet-and-greet with the star.

The bank of Mum and Dad

This changes the nature of the experience. No teenager is financing that from their own resources. The days when kids just turned up at gigs and paid on the door have gone, as have the days of teenagers turning up at top-level football and paying at the turnstile. These days it's all charged to Mum and Dad's credit card and booked via the office internet. What's more, it's Mum and Dad who get on the phone to You and Yours or 5 Live Breakfast when they find that the prices have gone up again, this time to pay for a more expensive "production" to make people feel better about how much they're paying.

Blame your favourites

Today's pop acts are touring more and more and charging more and more to make up for what they no longer earn from record sales. They're also doing it because they can't believe how lucrative it is. They set the prices, not the promoters. If you're going to blame anybody, blame your favourites. I fear the current madness will only change when people stop paying the prices they charge. This, I predict, will happen the day after Newcastle United supporters stop turning up at St James' Park. Meanwhile, it's not too late to go to the Proms.

Today's Choices

Presenter Matthew Sweet tells me how he prepares for his show; "I always put out a call on Twitter so the audience can inform our choice of music." Today's featured film is Laure de Clermont-Tonnerre's Sundance award-winner The Mustang. Sweet's shout-out for horsey movie music produced a stampede. One suggestion was from a representative of the British Animal Studies Network, another from someone who runs an account concerned with the representation of zebras. "Look at all these great composers," Sweet enthuses about his final selection. Indeed: Norman Luboff's Champion the Wonder Horse, Danny Elfman's Black Beauty (above), John Williams's War Horse, Lerner and Loewe's Ascot Gavotte from My Fair Lady, and others including Jed Kurzel's music from The Mustang. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Archive on 4: Beating Hitler with Humour

It sounds like a joke in itself. But throughout the Second World War, German exiles in the UK, under the supervision of the government and the BBC, produced satirical comedy that was beamed to Germany as counter-propaganda. Listeners risked their lives by tuning in. The programmes included Kurt und Willi, about two bungling Nazi propagandists, and Frau Wernicke, a monologue by a fictitious Berlin housewife. German writer Timur Vermes, who wrote the bestselling Hitler satire Look Who's Back, studies an extraordinary and little-known archive that once again raises the question: does satire actually change anything?

From mid-1940 until the very end of the war, pioneering satire feature programmes were written by German exiles under the close supervision of the British authorities. Vermes pours over the archive with experts and hears testimony from those who risked their lives listening to the satire.

Today's Choices

September 1, 1939

1.30pm Radio 4

WH Auden wrote his most memorable poem, 1 September, 1939, in response to the invasion of Poland by Germany. But he soon disowned the often quoted collection of words as "the most dishonest poem I have ever written. I pray to God I shall never be memorable like that again". Many of the experts – including a biographer, a critic and a scholar – consulted by Maria Margaronis agree with Auden that it is not his best. So why do people remember it so well? Why was it widely reprinted in newspapers on the morning after 9/11? What does it still have to say? It's "a zombie poem" that never dies, says one commentator. This is a game attempt to answer why that is. FIONA HUGHES

BBC Proms 2019

11.00am Radio 3

Making their Proms debut, the Shanghai Symphony Orchestra bookend their programme with evocations of the five key elements of ancient Taoist philosophy – courtesy of the 1999 suite Wu Xing by the Shanghai-born Qigang Chen, Olivier Messiaen's last composition pupil – and the three ages of man, as represented in Rachmaninov's orchestral swan song, the Symphonic Dances of 1940, whose final "Midnight" movement is haunted by the Russian composer's habitual use of the ancient Dies irae chant as a symbol of death. In between, Chinese-American pianist Eric Lu – a popular winner of last year's Leeds International Piano Competition – performs Mozart's characteristically life-enhancing Piano Concerto No 23.

2.15pm Radio 4

Self-made tycoon Max Silver (Robert Glenister, above) can't help but admire how London's skyline has changed dramatically over recent years. The Shard and the Gherkin, to name but two, stand proud cheek-by-jowl with old favourites such as St Paul's Cathedral and the Bank of England. In Paul Sellar's taut drama, Silver decides he wants a piece of the architectural action. With the City backing his plans for an iconic new skyscraper, the mogul also spies an opportunity to shore up his family's future and slather the icing on his personal legacy. But Silver will nevertheless require all his ruthless deal-making skills to avoid the manifold and unforeseen traps laid in his path by the world of business – and by sheer human folly.

BBC Proms 2019

7.00pm Radio 3

Like Hector Berlioz, Italian Renaissance sculptor Benvenuto Cellini is as famous for his colourful memoirs as for his art. No wonder the maverick French composer saw him as a kindred spirit and based his first completed opera on a carnivalesque account of Cellini's racy love life and artistic struggles, climaxing in the casting of his masterpiece, Perseus with the Medusa's Head. A famous fiasco at its 1838 Paris premiere, Benvenuto Cellini was successfully revived in a revised version in Weimar 14 years later, and tonight receives its first Proms performance on period instruments in a semi-staged amalgam of the two versions conducted by John Eliot Gardiner. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Today's Choices

Birds and the Bees 2.0

8.00pm Radio 4

As a parent of two tweens, it feels daunting embarking on a facts-of-life conversation that now needs to include sexting, internet porn, sexuality and gender – and that's just for starters. Which makes the introduction of compulsory RSE (relationship and sex education) in the English national curriculum from this year music to my ears. However, not all parents may agree, arguing that this remain solely the domain of the family. So who can best engage our children? Comedian and journalist Jordan Dunbar launches his own frank and irreverent consultation, talking to educators, his old school friends and his own mother among others, and discovers that while parents may want to talk to their children about sex, it's often the children that can't quite bear to hear what they have to say.

BBC Proms 2019

7.30pm Radio 3

It's more usual to be celebrating arrivals at the Proms than farewells. But tonight marks not only the welcome return of the Vienna Philharmonic – arguably the world's finest orchestra – and of the much-loved American pianist Emanuel Ax (replacing Murray Perahia, who is sadly indisposed), but also the last ever Proms performance by the revered Dutch maestro Bernard Haitink, who has announced that, after celebrating his 90th birthday and the 65th anniversary of his conducting debut earlier this year, he will be retiring at the end of this month. Aptly, he'll be conducting works by Beethoven and Bruckner that also offer musical farewells. MARK PAPPENHEIM

The Documentary: Detours

11.30am BBC World Service

Where has your life taken you? That is the rather loose theme connecting each episode of this series hosted by acclaimed film-maker Asif Kapadia (above). This bleak first episode takes us to Veles in North Macedonia, where medical student Elena recounts manufacturing fake news targeting Trump supporters to pay for her studies. It was a cynical but lucrative business for the country's struggling youth, and one Elena had no qualms in joining given the poor prospects in the city. David Borenstein explores how local problems can have global consequences in this disquieting documentary. TOM GOULDING

BBC Proms 2019

7.00pm Radio 3

"More corn than gold" was one critic's unjust verdict on the scrummily tuneful 1945 Violin Concerto by Erich Wolfgang Korngold, the sometime Viennese wunderkind who had become the doyen of Hollywood film composers after seeking asylum in the USA following the Nazi annexation of Austria. It's framed in tonight's Vienna Philharmonic Prom by works from another Central European composer who helped to shape the future sound of American music, not least in his New World Symphony: Antonin Dvorak. MARK PAPPENHEIM

THURSDAY Radio

Today's Choices

BBC Proms 2019

7.30pm Radio 3

Her tendency to perform in eye-catching and often flesh-baring concert dresses has sometimes conspired to distract attention from the sheer technical range, ease and power of her playing, but there's no doubt that Chinese pianist Yuja Wang (above) is increasingly revealing herself as a distinctively serious and compelling artist. She's certainly laying down a marker today by performing Rachmaninov's challenging Piano Concerto No 3. The Staatskapelle Dresden's programme under its Principal Guest Conductor, the distinguished South Korean maestro Myung-Whun Chung, ends with Brahms's Second Symphony, a work often dubbed his "Pastoral" symphony because of its echoes of romantic nature symbolism.

MARK PAPPENHEIM

I'm Sorry I'll Read That Again

8.30am/12.30pm/7.30pm

Radio 4 Extra

I'm Sorry I'll Read That Again derived from a 1963 Cambridge Footlights revue called A Clump of Plinths. Retitled Cambridge Circus, it opened in the West End the same year. The BBC snapped up its entire cast, who developed the anarchic ISIRTA. Today Radio 4 Extra broadcasts the first episode from 1964. The show had a much wider appeal than the earlier Beyond the Fringe, using a degree of its public schoolboy humour, but mixing it with Goon-like surrealism, pure corn and indeed smut. Who now remembers that the writers included Johnnie Mortimer and Brian Cooke, who also wrote Round the Horne? DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Iris Murdoch: Dream Girl

10.00am/3.00pm

Radio 4 Extra

This kaleidoscopic portrayal of the romantic exploits of Iris Murdoch (above), which first aired in 2015, gets a welcome repeat in her centenary year. Brace yourselves – it's no less lively the second time round. The opening moments promise a "a midsummer comedy night's carol in wonderland", which sets the scene: this is a semi-comic literary mash-up, as three spirits – in the mould of Dickens, Dostoyevsky and Henry James – visit an elderly Murdoch while she sleeps, plunging the writer back into her past to relive some of her most momentous trysts. Helen McCrory as Murdoch and Jonathan Cullen as the spirits do a fine job of shifting between voices in Fiona McAlpine's gloriously polyphonous production, which despite its light-hearted approach, offers real insight into the novelist's colourful, complicated private life. HANNAH SHADDOCK

The Placebo Effect

11.30am Radio 4 FM

Darling of the Edinburgh Fringe, Kwame Asante combines two very different but decidedly complimentary skills here. The medical doctor cum stand-up comic (who doesn't need a sense of humour in A&E these days?) is joined by fellow comedians Felicity Ward and Lauren Pattinson to put an irreverent spin on some genuine and some decidedly fake methods of staying healthy. They put their ideas – from folk remedies and hair of the dog to detox and yoga – to a panel of medical experts. So, are we thinking ourselves well, or do some of these popular fixes actually work? SUE ROBINSON

Claire Summers BBC Radio Wales

Age 44
Current job Presenter of the BBC Radio Wales breakfast show (Mon-Thu, 6am) since May this year.
CV Brought up in Cowbridge, in the Vale of Glamorgan. Studied English and Drama at Aberystwyth, then a post-grad degree in journalism at Cardiff University. First job was at Channel One in Bristol: "I just went in and within three months I'd learnt to do a bit of everything!" Then joined BBC Wales, as a presenter on BBC Wales Today (Weekdays, 6.30pm).
Best moment "Saying 'Good morning!' for the first time on my own breakfast show. There's a lot of button-pushing involved in radio, and I was terrified of pushing the wrong one! But the best thing about radio is when listeners get in touch. To think people are out there listening to you is just the best feeling."
Worst moment "It's the panic that I might oversleep! (I get up at 3am.) The other week I woke up, thought I'd missed the alarm, jumped out of bed, ran into the bathroom, tripped over the cat, twisted my ankle – and it was only 11pm!"
Off air "I live with my husband Chris and our three-year-old. My job is done early on, so I spend my days with my little boy. Our new house needs a bit of work, so I'm in bathroom and kitchen shops a lot!"
First radio memory "My grandfather tuning the wireless to get the horse racing results. And later, my dad listening to Sounds of the 60s."
Favourite broadcasters "Emma Barnett on Radio 5 Live. She's a great interviewer, really engaging, and pushes boundaries. And rugby commentator Bill McLaren – I loved the lyrical way he summed up a try or a great conversion."
Ambition "For now, to keep learning, as it's very new to me, this radio world. I want to find my voice and my sound. Now I've got the buttons down..!"
Dream job "A Welsh version of Desert Island Discs – my first guest would be Sir Tom, straight off! There are so many Welsh legends – not just famous people, but female business leaders and others who have made a big impact on Wales."
Secret skills "I'm really good on a pair of roller skates! I can go backwards, round, fast, I can jump..." CAROLINE MEYER

Face behind the voice

Claire Summers BBC Radio Wales

Age 44
Current job Presenter of the BBC Radio Wales breakfast show (Mon-Thu, 6am) since May this year.
CV Brought up in Cowbridge, in the Vale of Glamorgan. Studied English and Drama at Aberystwyth, then a post-grad degree in journalism at Cardiff University. First job was at Channel One in Bristol: "I just went in and within three months I'd learnt to do a bit of everything!" Then joined BBC Wales, as a presenter on BBC Wales Today (Weekdays, 6.30pm).
Best moment "Saying 'Good morning!' for the first time on my own breakfast show. There's a lot of button-pushing involved in radio, and I was terrified of pushing the wrong one! But the best thing about radio is when listeners get in touch. To think people are out there listening to you is just the best feeling."
Worst moment "It's the panic that I might oversleep! (I get up at 3am.) The other week I woke up, thought I'd missed the alarm, jumped out of bed, ran into the bathroom, tripped over the cat, twisted my ankle – and it was only 11pm!"
Off air "I live with my husband Chris and our three-year-old. My job is done early on, so I spend my days with my little boy. Our new house needs a bit of work, so I'm in bathroom and kitchen shops a lot!"
First radio memory "My grandfather tuning the wireless to get the horse racing results. And later, my dad listening to Sounds of the 60s."
Favourite broadcasters "Emma Barnett on Radio 5 Live. She's a great interviewer, really engaging, and pushes boundaries. And rugby commentator Bill McLaren – I loved the lyrical way he summed up a try or a great conversion."
Ambition "For now, to keep learning, as it's very new to me, this radio world. I want to find my voice and my sound. Now I've got the buttons down..!"
Dream job "A Welsh version of Desert Island Discs – my first guest would be Sir Tom, straight off! There are so many Welsh legends – not just famous people, but female business leaders and others who have made a big impact on Wales."
Secret skills "I'm really good on a pair of roller skates! I can go backwards, round, fast, I can jump..." CAROLINE MEYER

Face behind the voice

Claire Summers BBC Radio Wales

Age 44
Current job Presenter of the BBC Radio Wales breakfast show (Mon-Thu, 6am) since May this year.
CV Brought up in Cowbridge, in the Vale of Glamorgan. Studied English and Drama at Aberystwyth, then a post-grad degree in journalism at Cardiff University. First job was at Channel One in Bristol: "I just went in and within three months I'd learnt to do a bit of everything!" Then joined BBC Wales, as a presenter on BBC Wales Today (Weekdays, 6.30pm).
Best moment "Saying 'Good morning!' for the first time on my own breakfast show. There's a lot of button-pushing involved in radio, and I was terrified of pushing the wrong one! But the best thing about radio is when listeners get in touch. To think people are out there listening to you is just the best feeling."
Worst moment "It's the panic that I might oversleep! (I get up at 3am.) The other week I woke up, thought I'd missed the alarm, jumped out of bed, ran into the bathroom, tripped over the cat, twisted my ankle – and it was only 11pm!"
Off air "I live with my husband Chris and our three-year-old. My job is done early on, so I spend my days with my little boy. Our new house needs a bit of work, so I'm in bathroom and kitchen shops a lot!"
First radio memory "My grandfather tuning the wireless to get the horse racing results. And later, my dad listening to Sounds of the 60s."
Favourite broadcasters "Emma Barnett on Radio 5 Live. She's a great interviewer, really engaging, and pushes boundaries. And rugby commentator Bill McLaren – I loved the lyrical way he summed up a try or a great conversion."
Ambition "For now, to keep learning, as it's very new to me, this radio world. I want to find my voice and my sound. Now I've got the buttons down..!"
Dream job "A Welsh version of Desert Island Discs – my first guest would be Sir Tom, straight off! There are so many Welsh legends – not just famous people, but female business leaders and others who have made a big impact on Wales."
Secret skills "I'm really good on a pair of roller skates! I can go backwards, round, fast, I can jump..." CAROLINE MEYER

Face behind the voice

Claire Summers BBC Radio Wales

Age 44
Current job Presenter of the BBC Radio Wales breakfast show (Mon-Thu, 6am) since May this year.
CV Brought up in Cowbridge, in the Vale of Glamorgan. Studied English and Drama at Aberystwyth, then a post-grad degree in journalism at Cardiff University. First job was at Channel One in Bristol: "I just went in and within three months I'd learnt to do a bit of everything!" Then joined BBC Wales, as a presenter on BBC Wales Today (Weekdays, 6.30pm).
Best moment "Saying 'Good morning!' for the first time on my own breakfast show. There's a lot of button-pushing involved in radio, and I was terrified of pushing the wrong one! But the best thing about radio is when listeners get in touch. To think people are out there listening to you is just the best feeling."
Worst moment "It's the panic that I might oversleep! (I get up at 3am.) The other week I woke up, thought I'd missed the alarm, jumped out of bed, ran into the bathroom, tripped over the cat, twisted my ankle – and it was only 11pm!"
Off air "I live with my husband Chris and our three-year-old. My job is done early on, so I spend my days with my little boy. Our new house needs a bit of work, so I'm in bathroom and kitchen shops a lot!"
First radio memory "My grandfather tuning the wireless to get the horse racing results. And later, my dad listening to Sounds of the 60s."
Favourite broadcasters "Emma Barnett on Radio 5 Live. She's a great interviewer, really engaging, and pushes boundaries. And rugby commentator Bill McLaren – I loved the lyrical way he summed up a try or a great conversion."
Ambition "For now, to keep learning, as it's very new to me, this radio world. I want to find my voice and my sound. Now I've got the buttons down..!"
Dream job "A Welsh version of Desert Island Discs – my first guest would be Sir Tom, straight off! There are so many Welsh legends – not just famous people, but female business leaders and others who have made a big impact on Wales."
Secret skills "I'm really good on a pair of roller skates! I can go backwards, round, fast, I can jump..." CAROLINE MEYER

Face behind the voice

Claire Summers BBC Radio Wales

Age 44
Current job Presenter of the BBC Radio Wales breakfast show (Mon-Thu, 6am) since May this year.
CV Brought up in Cowbridge, in the Vale of Glamorgan. Studied English and Drama at Aberystwyth, then a post-grad degree in journalism at Cardiff University. First job was at Channel One in Bristol: "I just went in and within three months I'd learnt to do a bit of everything!" Then joined BBC Wales, as a presenter on BBC Wales Today (Weekdays, 6.30pm).
Best moment "Saying 'Good morning!' for the first time on my own breakfast show. There's a lot of button-pushing involved in radio, and I was terrified of pushing the wrong one! But the best thing about radio is when listeners get in touch. To think people are out there listening to you is just the best feeling."
Worst moment "It's the panic that I might oversleep! (I get up at 3am.) The other week I woke up, thought I'd missed the alarm, jumped out of bed, ran into the bathroom, tripped over the cat, twisted my ankle – and it was only 11pm!"
Off air "I live with my husband Chris and our three-year-old. My job is done early on, so I spend my days with my little boy. Our new house needs a bit of work, so I'm in bathroom and kitchen shops a lot!"
First radio memory "My grandfather tuning the wireless to get the horse racing results. And later, my dad listening to Sounds of the 60s."
Favourite broadcasters "Emma Barnett on Radio 5 Live. She's a great interviewer, really engaging, and pushes boundaries. And rugby commentator Bill McLaren – I loved the lyrical way he summed up a try or a great conversion."
Ambition "For now, to keep learning, as it's very new to me, this radio world. I want to find my voice and my sound. Now I've got the buttons down..!"
Dream job "A Welsh version of Desert Island Discs – my first guest would be Sir Tom, straight off! There are so many Welsh legends – not just famous people, but female business leaders and others who have made a big impact on Wales."
Secret skills "I'm really good on a pair of roller skates! I can go backwards, round, fast, I can jump..." CAROLINE MEYER

Face behind the voice

Claire Summers BBC Radio Wales

Age 44
Current job Presenter of the BBC Radio Wales breakfast show (Mon-Thu, 6am) since May this year.
CV Brought up in Cowbridge, in the Vale of Glamorgan. Studied English and Drama at Aberystwyth, then a post-grad degree in journalism at Cardiff University. First job was at Channel One in Bristol: "I just went in and within three months I'd learnt to do a bit of everything!" Then joined BBC Wales, as a presenter on BBC Wales Today (Weekdays, 6.30pm).
Best moment "Saying 'Good morning!' for the first time on my own breakfast show. There's a lot of button-pushing involved in radio, and I was terrified of pushing the wrong one! But the best thing about radio is when listeners get in touch. To think people are out there listening to you is just the best feeling."
Worst moment "It's the panic that I might oversleep! (I get up at 3am.) The other week I woke up, thought I'd missed the alarm, jumped out of bed, ran into the bathroom, tripped over the cat, twisted my ankle – and it was only 11pm!"
Off air "I live with my husband Chris and our three-year-old. My job is done early on, so I spend my days with my little boy. Our new house needs a bit of work, so I'm in bathroom and kitchen shops a lot!"
First radio memory "My grandfather tuning the wireless to get the horse racing results. And later, my dad listening to Sounds of the 60s."
Favourite broadcasters "Emma Barnett on Radio 5 Live. She's a great interviewer, really engaging, and pushes boundaries. And rugby commentator Bill McLaren – I loved the lyrical way he summed up a try or a great conversion."
Ambition "For now, to keep learning, as it's very new to me, this radio world. I want to find my voice and my sound. Now I've got the buttons down..!"
Dream job "A Welsh version of Desert Island Discs – my first guest would be Sir Tom, straight off! There are so many Welsh legends – not just famous people, but female business leaders and others who have made a big impact on Wales."
Secret skills "I'm really good on a pair of roller skates! I can go backwards, round, fast, I can jump..." CAROLINE MEYER

Rising cost of funerals

The price of a final send-off has escalated, says Paul Lewis, and it's time for a rethink

FUNERAL COSTS HAVE more than doubled in 14 years – rising on average by 6% a year, way above the normal rate of inflation of around 2%. By 2018 the average cost of a funeral across the UK was around £4,300; cremations average about £500 less than that, and burials about £500 more. Relatives can spend a further £2,000 on things like flowers, catering and other expenses. For those on low incomes, this is a massive chunk of their salary – more than they spend all year on electricity and gas, food and clothes.

'The bereaved are ripe for exploitation'

Those figures come from the Competition and Markets Authority (CMA), whose job is to keep businesses trading fairly. It says "for a considerable number of years the largest firms of funeral directors have implemented large annual price increases without reference to underlying operating cost". These rises were, it says, "a matter of policy".

Comparing prices is probably the last thing bereaved relatives feel like doing. The CMA found that barely one in seven asked more than one firm to quote, and fewer than one in 20 went online to find the best deal. One funeral director told the CMA that a funeral is the "ultimate distress purchase made by inexpert and emotionally vulnerable clients under time pressure". In other words, we are ripe for exploitation.

The CMA found that people can save as much as £1,000 by looking for the cheapest firm locally, but admits that can be difficult as prices are not displayed clearly, making comparisons difficult.

It will be a year before the CMA's final report is published. It could impose remedies on the funeral business to make it more competitive. Meanwhile, if you have to organise a funeral, think carefully about what you can afford and find a local firm who can do the job at reasonable cost. Ignore how kind and sympathetic they seem – that is their job. Be as hard-nosed about buying a funeral as you would any other £5,000 purchase, and avoid the funeral RIP off.

For more information, see the CMA's advice document at bit.ly/2KHKzKn or go to moneyadviceservice.org.uk and search "paying for a funeral"

COULD YOUR HOME GIVE YOU A CASH BOOST?

More and more over-55s are looking at their house not just as a home, but as a way to help fund a better retirement with equity release. With so many features now available, it's easier than ever to take tax-free cash from your home with a plan that suits your needs.

A lifetime mortgage is the most popular type of equity release. This is a loan secured against your property that lets you unlock cash while remaining the owner. With a lifetime mortgage you can take an initial lump sum, or a smaller initial sum followed by further amounts when you need them.

CAN I GUARANTEE AN INHERITANCE FOR MY FAMILY?
Some plans offer a guaranteed inheritance feature, allowing you to protect a percentage of your home's future value for your loved ones. Equity release will reduce the value of your estate and may affect your entitlement to means-tested benefits.

WHAT IF I NEED TO MOVE HOME LATER IN LIFE?
Downsizing protection is designed to give you peace of mind should you sell your home and move to a property that does not meet the lender's criteria. If it's at least five years after taking out your plan, you can repay in full without incurring any early repayment charge. If you're considering releasing equity from your home, it's a requirement to seek advice from a qualified specialist, which is why Radio Times has partnered with Key, the equity release advisers, to produce a free guide to unlocking the cash in your home.

Unless you decide to go ahead with a plan, Key's service is completely free of charge, as Key's usual advice fee of 1.99% of the amount released would only be payable on completion of a plan, subject to a minimum advice fee of £1,499.

Now, more than ever, equity release is one solution that could help you fund your plans for retirement, and in a way that meets your needs.

In Vera's footsteps

Ann Cleeves created Vera and Shetland – now her latest detective novel is also destined for TV, she tells Alison Graham

Ann Cleeves is embarrassed. Very embarrassed. "I am the luckiest writer alive," she says as she reveals that The Long Call, the first in her new series of crime novels, will be adapted for television.

This will be Cleeves's third – yes, third – TV series. Vera is a huge hit for ITV (work is underway on the tenth instalment), Shetland is massive for BBC1 and now the producers of both, Silverprint Pictures, will start work on The Long Call, which is set in north Devon.

Surely no other writer in any genre ever has blazed such a trail. I wonder if Cleeves's fellow crime writers plot her downfall with glee – maybe they would love her to come to a sticky end…

They wouldn't, of course. Cleeves, a winner of the Crime Writers' Association Diamond Dagger in 2017, its highest accolade, is much-loved within a very supportive and cheerful genre community.

"I just feel embarrassed. There are so many absolutely fabulous books out there, I am just lucky that both Vera and Shetland have been done [on TV] so well. I am a lucky, lucky writer."

The Long Call introduces a new detective, Matthew Venn, whom we meet loitering outside his father's funeral service, unable to bring himself to go inside. Venn has long been estranged from both his parents, after he left the suffocating evangelical sect in which he was brought up.

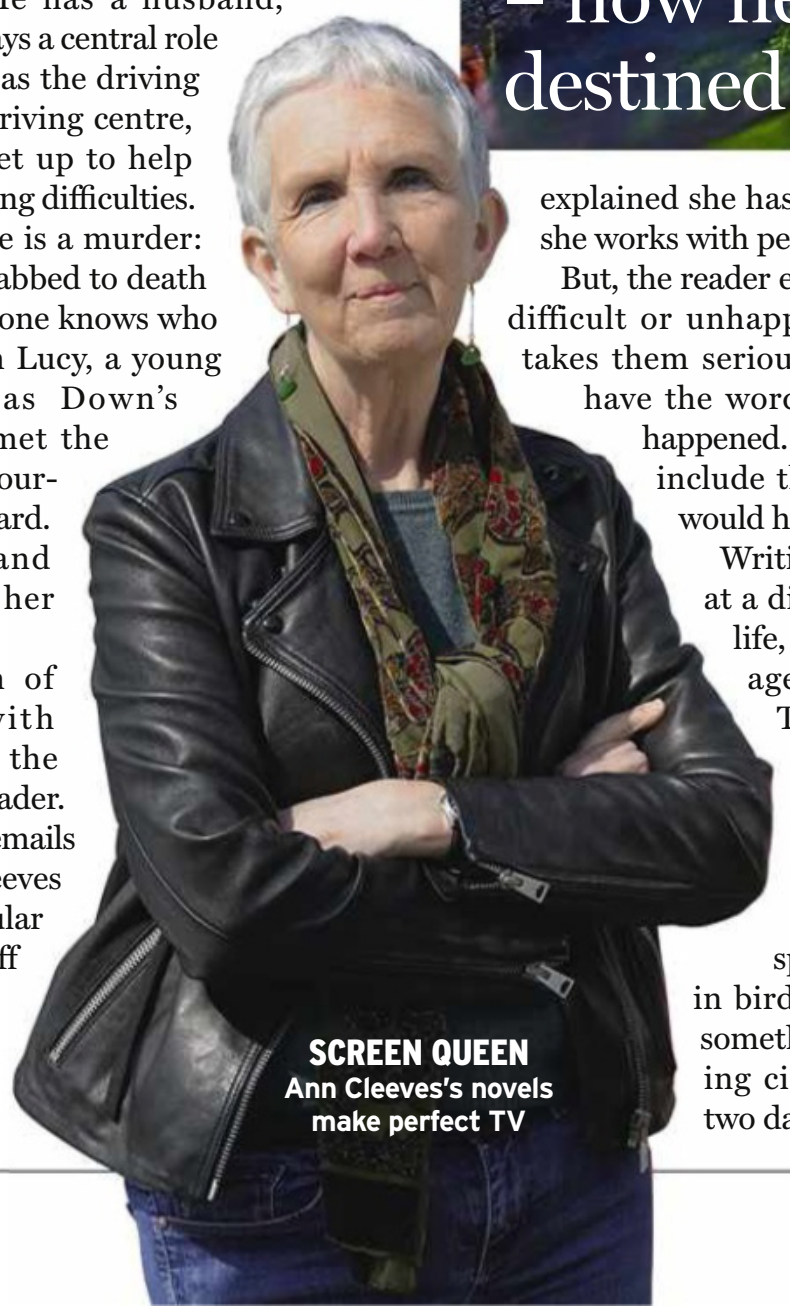

He is shunned, not just for escaping, but also for being gay. He has a husband, Jonathan, who plays a central role in The Long Call as the driving force behind a thriving centre, the Woodyard, set up to help people with learning difficulties.

Of course, there is a murder: a man is found stabbed to death on the beach. No one knows who he is. Apart from Lucy, a young woman who has Down's syndrome. She met the man on her bus journey to the Woodyard. He was kind, and keen to talk to her about her life.

The inclusion of a character with Down's came at the prompting of a reader. "I get a lot of nice emails from readers," Cleeves says. "This particular woman started off by telling me how much she enjoyed my books. Then she explained she has a son with Down's and she works with people who have Down's."

But, the reader explained, if they suffer a difficult or unhappy experience "nobody takes them seriously because they don't have the words to explain what has happened. She wondered if I could include that in a story, maybe I would have the words to tell it."

Writing The Long Call came at a difficult time in Cleeves's life, after the sudden death, aged 66, of her husband Tim, in December 2017. They married in 1977 after meeting at a bird observatory where Ann was a cook and Tim a visiting expert (he spent his career working in bird conservation and was something of a legend in birding circles). The couple had two daughters.

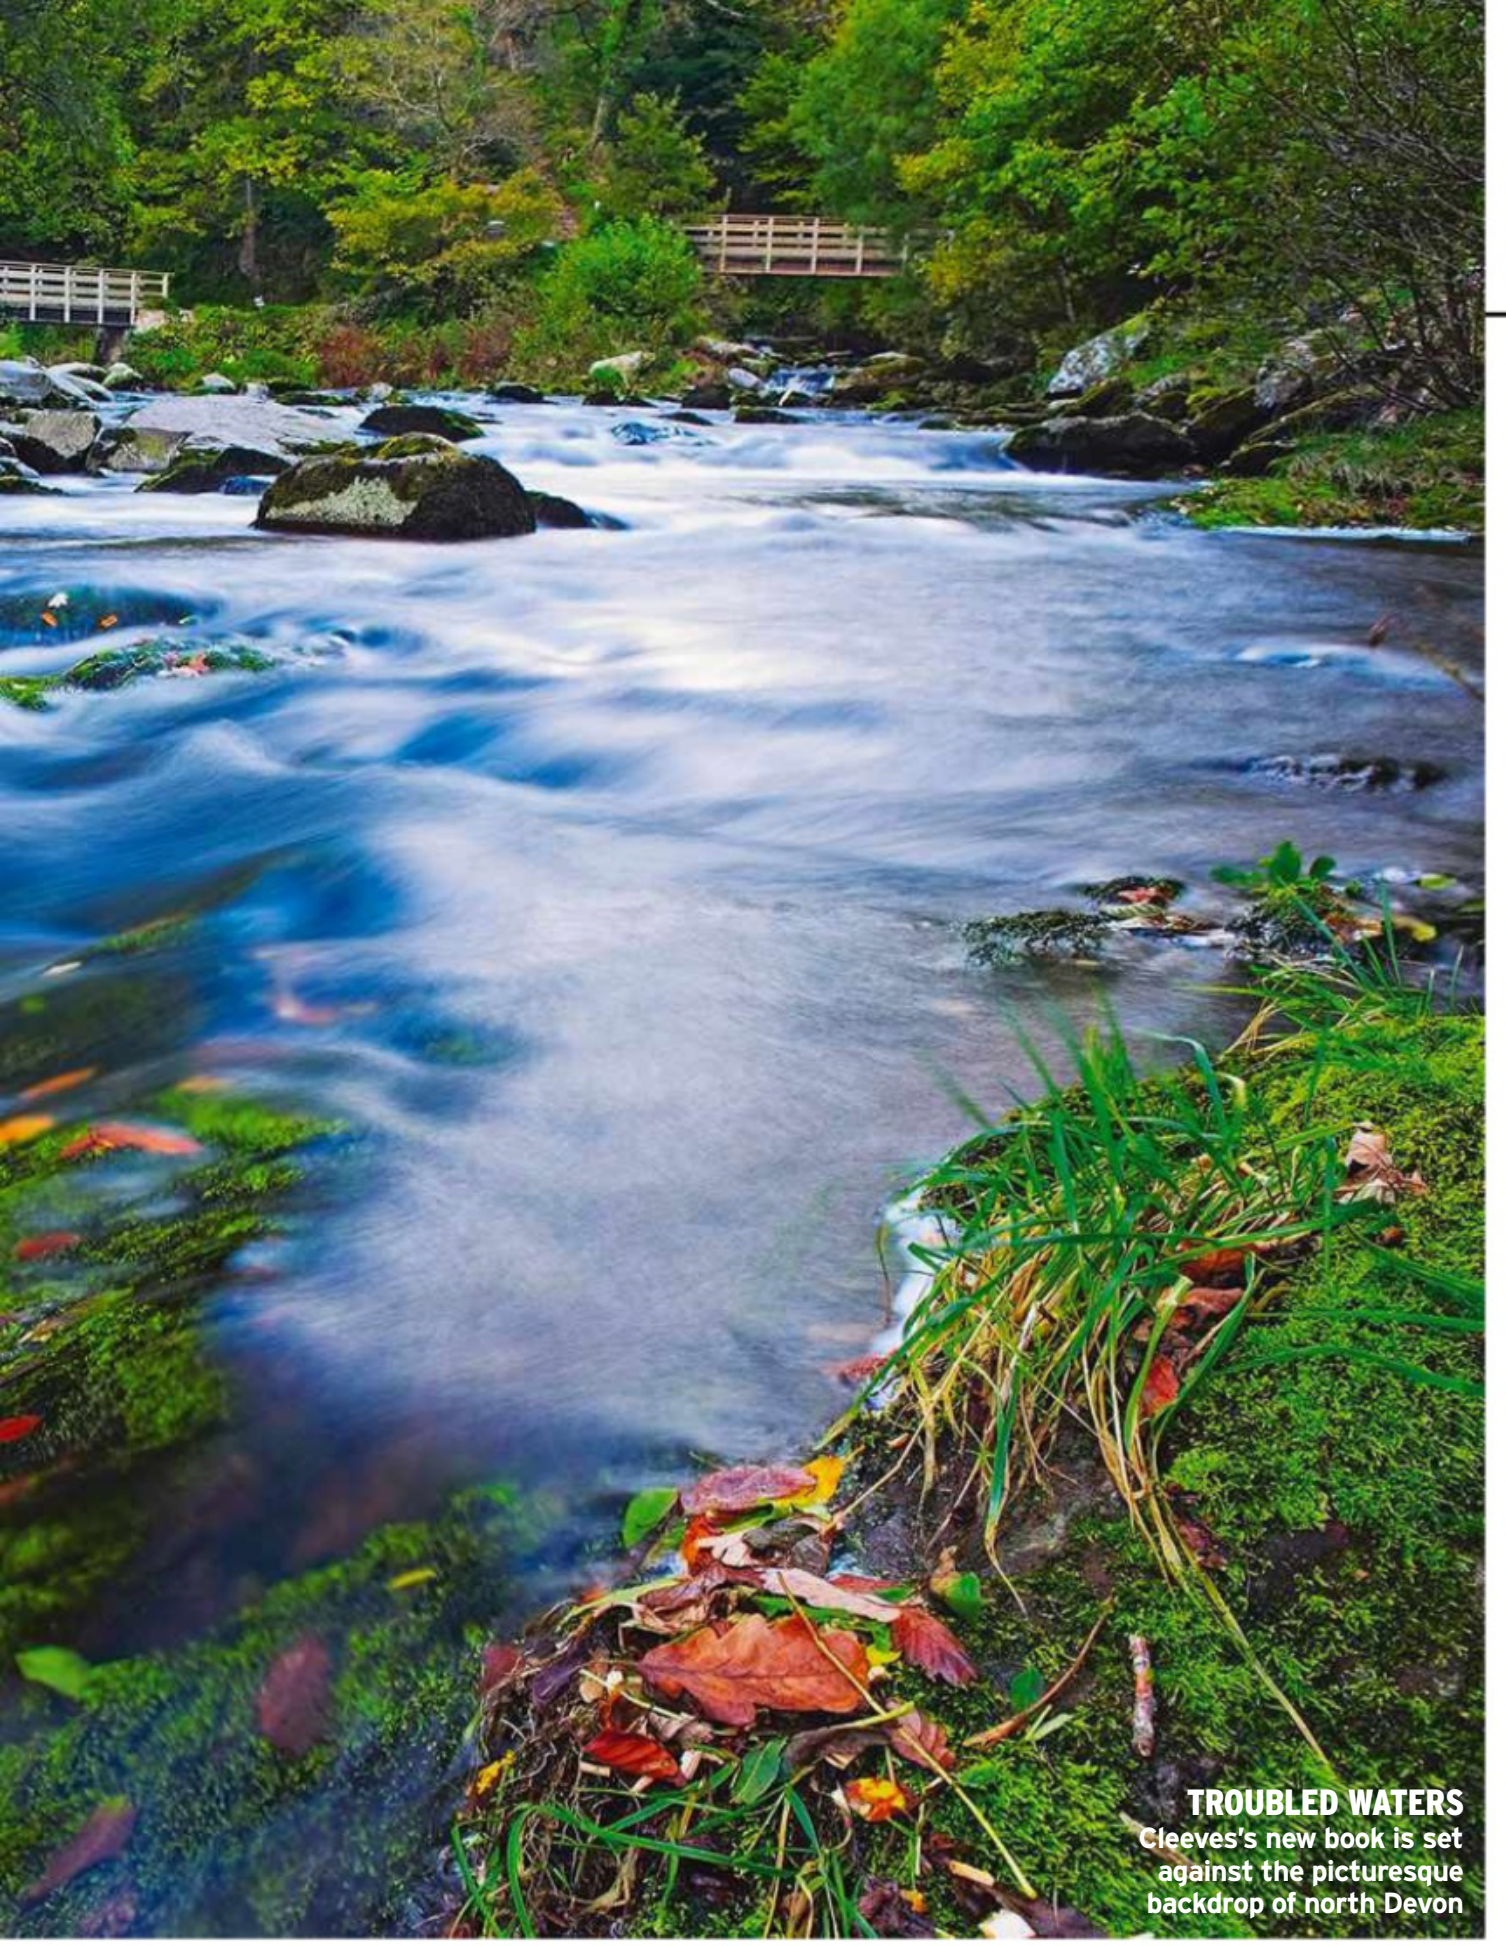

SCREEN QUEEN
Ann Cleeves's novels make perfect TV

DAVID HIRST; ALAMY

Cleeves needed to get away from the memories crowding in on her at the home she and Tim had shared in Whitley Bay, on the North East coast, and fled to north Devon to stay with an old schoolfriend, Sue. Though born in Herefordshire, Cleeves grew up in the north Devon village of Umberleigh, where her dad taught at the local school.

"I needed somewhere to run away to and I went to stay with Sue soon after Tim died," Cleeves explains. "She drove me round all of the possible locations and places [for a novel] and we were chatting, so that's when the idea of setting a book there became solid. I made lots of notes and started writing."

Like her Vera and Shetland series, The Long Call (opening the new Two Rivers series) has a strong sense of place and a focus on the deep, troubled waters that often run below the surface of a small, seemingly tightly knit community where there is much to hide and horrors are often bundled away to remain for ever unseen.

TROUBLED WATERS
Cleeves's new book is set against the picturesque backdrop of north Devon

'I am lucky that Vera and Shetland have been done so well'

ANN CLEEVES

And Cleeves knows that north Devon will prove fertile territory for future Venn novels. "There are so many different communities that I will be able to write about, like the wealthy public schoolboys who come to surf, and the arty people, but also the transients who work in the hotels then don't have anywhere to go once the season is over, so they become drifters."

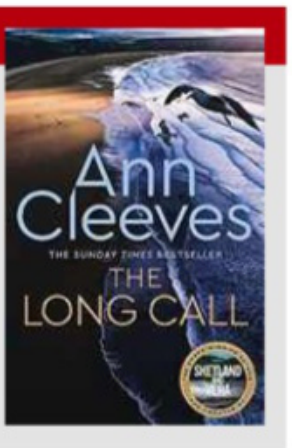

Cleeves's new protagonist does have some things in common with her thoughtful, moody Shetland detective Jimmy Perez. He doesn't waste words, he's unsentimental and he's unimpressed by wealth and power. Who would she like to see cast in the television version?

Cleeves laughs. "I don't do casting! I mean, who would have thought of Dougie Henshall as Jimmy Perez? Yet he is brilliant." As with both the Vera and Shetland series, Cleeves will play no part in the screenwriting process. "I just leave them [Silverprint Pictures] to get on with it. I don't get picky about details or casting. This will happen with The Long Call. I don't even know who is writing the script.

"I love writing the books and think that creative television people ought to be allowed to have that joy of taking on a new project and making it their own."

Bowled over by a knight's tale

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY
ALASTAIR COOK
The Ashes Live Wednesday 10.00am Sky Sports Cricket, Test Match Special 10.25am Radio 4 LW/5 Live Sports Extra

Alastair Cook ended his international career in fairy-tale style, making 147 in his last-ever innings during the fifth Test against India last September to become the fifth-highest run-scorer in Test match history. But those stats don't tell the full story of Cook's England career. The Autobiography (£19, incl p&p) does, though, and it makes for fascinating reading, as the former England captain recounts what it took to succeed at the top of his game – and reveals what made him decide to hang up his whites at the relatively early age of 33.

THE BURNING LAND
GEORGE ALAGIAH

Before George Alagiah was the cool, collected presence behind the BBC News at Six desk, he was a foreign correspondent, specialising in Africa; in 1994 he moved to Johannesburg to become the BBC's South Africa correspondent. In The Burning Land (£14.99, incl p&p) – Alagiah's first novel – he draws upon his experience there, creating a portrait of a country that, post-apartheid, still has many fault lines. When a young man – one held up as a bright hope for the future of South Africa – is murdered, those cracks are violently exposed.

HEY GRANDUDE!
PAUL McCARTNEY
The Zoe Ball Breakfast Show
Thursday 6.30am Radio 2

To most of us, Paul McCartney is a music icon. But to his eight grandchildren, he's just Grandude. That's what inspired the former Beatle to pen the children's book Hey Grandude! (£12, incl p&p) – with a little help from illustrator Kathryn Durst – which sees the titular hero sweep his four grandchildren off on wild adventures. As you might expect, the audiobook version contains some particular delights: not only does McCartney read the story himself, but he's also composed original music for the soundtrack. HANNAH SHADDOCK

Ornamental grasses add easy-going style to any garden, says Joe Swift

ONCE A CONTENTIOUS issue, ornamental grasses are now much loved for their versatility, enhancing any size and style of garden. What appeals to me is their fluidity and the natural feel they bring, moving in a light breeze.

Most have a surprisingly long season, with fresh leaves in spring, then flowers and seedheads from mid-to-late summer. Now they can be seen effortlessly setting off late-summer perennials such as asters, verbenas and rudbeckias, and most will hold their form into deep winter, lighting up when backlit by a low winter sun.

There is a huge choice of grasses for every part of the border, dry or damp soil and everything in between. Tall ones (such as Miscanthus) are good for screening, while low growers (such as Deschampsias, Melicas and Uncinia) knit together as ground cover. Most prefer sun but some – such as the arching Japanese forest grass Hakonechloa macra and the most useful grass ever, Anemanthele lessoniana (pheasant's tail grass) – thrive in dry, dappled shade. Milium, Acorus and Luzula varieties do well in partial shade and damper soils.

Grasses are easy to care for, with some evergreen and some deciduous. Leave foliage over winter, then cut deciduous ones back hard in late February. Comb dead leaves out of evergreen varieties, and divide tired plants in spring.

LATE SUMMER GRASSES

Miscanthus* varieties include some of the tallest, ideal for a statement or an elegant hedge. M sinensis "Malepartus" (2.2m) has arching leaves with a white stripe down the centre. M sinensis "Morning Light" (1.2m) has narrow leaves with cream edges and reddish-brown flowers.

Molinia caerulea (purple moor grass, above) is ideal for wetter, poorer soils. M caerulea "Transparent" has a neat mound of foliage (2m) and an airy, open flower head. M "Moorhexe" is shorter (60cm), forming a narrow upright clump of grey-green leaves and dark stems.

Calamagrostis are upright forms with straw-coloured stems, useful as vertical punctuation in a border. C "Karl Foerster" reaches 1.8m whereas C brachytricha is shorter (1.5m), clumps nicely and has more arching, golden-brown stems.

Stipa gigantea (golden oats) is one of the best tall (up to 2.5m) grasses, with clumps of grey-green leaves and airy sprays of golden flowers and seedheads in mid-summer.

FASCINATING RHYTHM

IF YOU DO ONE THING THIS WEEK

TAKE SOME CUTTINGS

Who wouldn't say "yes" to free plants? Betwixt summer and autumn is the ideal time to take "semi-ripe" cuttings. But don't panic – it's not as technical as it might sound. Shrubby plants, including herbs (rosemary, sage, thyme, bay), climbers (passionflower, ivy, trachelospermum) evergreen shrubs (Escallonia, Elaeagnus, philadelphus, choisya, hydrangea) and trees (holly, magnolia) can all be grown this way. Cuttings are taken from this season's growth, where the stem tip is still soft but the base is harder. This is the spot where the new roots will come from.

MAKE THE SNIP

With sharp secateurs, cut a decent section of this year's growth (the stem will be noticeably paler green and more flexible than last year's woody growth). Then shorten to approximately 10–15cm long, cutting cleanly just below a leaf (where the new roots will come from). Take off the top just above a node (a slight swelling). Pinch or cut the lower leaves off the bottom third to half of the stem.

POP IT IN A POT

Insert the cutting into a pot containing a compost mix of around half sharp sand or perlite and half potting compost or similar. Depending on the plant and size of pot, you can place a few around the outside edge of a single pot, but make sure they don't touch. Water well and let it drain.

Keep frost-free and don't allow to dry out – a greenhouse or cold frame is ideal, if you have one. Otherwise, use a clear plastic bag secured with a rubber band to act as a mini greenhouse and place in a light, frost-free spot out of direct sun, such as a porch. Keep compost moist at all times, but allow air in to circulate and remove excess moisture from the plastic bag when needed.

MOVING DAY

By mid-spring, your cuttings should have rooted and be ready to pot into larger pots or plant out into the ground (see hydrangeas, left). Acclimatise them to the outdoors by "hardening off" for two or three weeks – leave them open to the elements on a warm day and protect at night when temperatures drop.

CAFE CULTURE
Dénia is a Costa Brava treasure

'DENIA IS A BEAUTIFUL PORT CITY NEAR ALICANTE' JEAN JOHANSSON

"We have a summer house on an island called Gotland, which is between Sweden and Finland. My husband Jonatan is Scandinavian and it was in his family for years before we took it over. We try and spend three or four weeks there every summer, enjoying the simple life: swimming in the sea, going for walks along the beach, fishing, barbecuing outside every day. It's pretty idyllic, but Scandinavia's a bit like Scotland, where we live – sometimes you get a summer and sometimes you don't.

"I'd love to have a place in the east of Spain one day, ideally in Dénia, a beautiful port city about an hour north of Alicante. It's a hidden gem that I discovered while filming A Place in the Sun – while I was trying to find my house-hunters a place, I was keeping an eye out for myself as well!

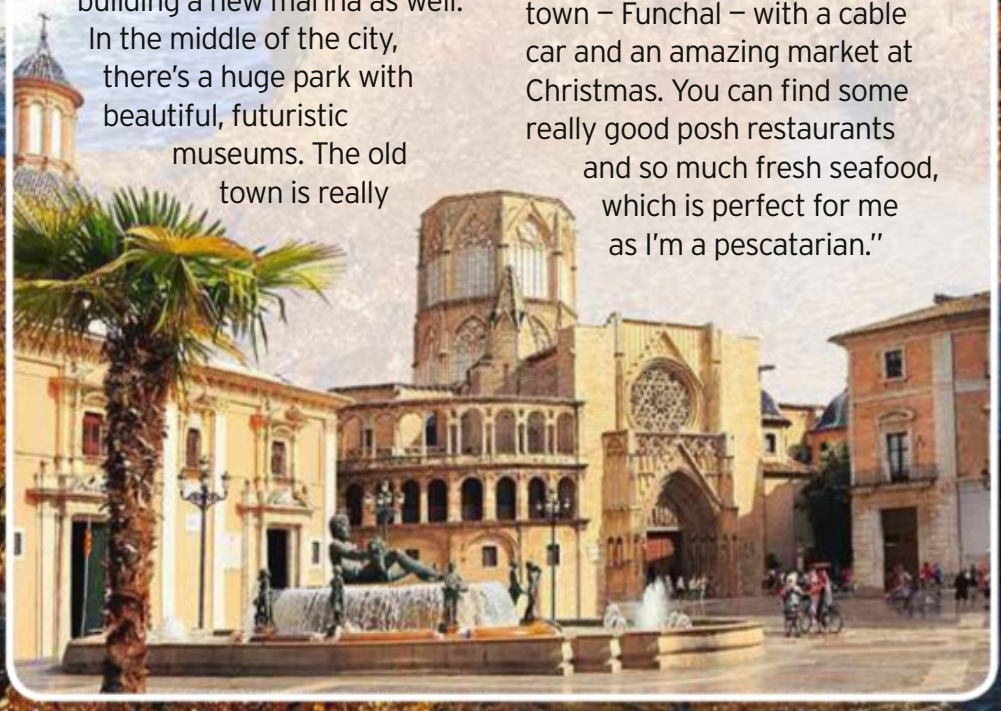

"Dénia is quieter than other resorts on the Costa Blanca with a really nice mix of locals and tourists. It has a traditional old town, a medieval hilltop castle, beautiful beaches and a really good food scene. You can get a little catamaran over to Ibiza from there as well."

'VALENCIA IS FULL OF HISTORY' SCARLETTE DOUGLAS

"I'm trying to buy a holiday home in Valencia at the moment. I filmed there in March and completely fell in love with it. The beach is a kilometre long, they've got a new beach club with cool restaurants and bars, and they're building a new marina as well. In the middle of the city, there's a huge park with beautiful, futuristic museums. The old town is really nice and there's so much history there – in the cathedral there's a chalice that they say was used by Jesus at the Last Supper.

"My second choice would be Madeira, a Portuguese island in the Atlantic. It's sub-tropical and is covered in lush forest, and it's great if you want to be active – there are lots of hiking trails up through the hills, and the sea is quite rough so it's good for water sports. Again, there's a lovely old town – Funchal – with a cable car and an amazing market at Christmas. You can find some really good posh restaurants and so much fresh seafood, which is perfect for me as I'm a pescatarian."

OLD TOWN
Marbella is close to San Pedro

'SAN PEDRO OFFERS THE BEST OF BOTH WORLDS'

LAURA HAMILTON

"We already have a family holiday home in San Pedro de Alcántara, on Spain's Costa del Sol. I love it there because it's a traditional Spanish town that offers the best of both worlds: we're right across the road from the beach and in winter we can be on the ski slopes in the Sierra Nevada mountains within two and a half hours.

"I wouldn't say San Pedro has the best beaches in Spain, but the promenade is right outside our front door so it's a really nice place to go running, and the kids go up and down on their scooters.

"It's also very close to Marbella's stunning old town and Puerto Banus, Spain's answer to Saint-Tropez, which is great for people-watching. People assume that Puerto Banus is just a playground for the rich, but that's just one small part of it. Málaga, 75km away, is a beautiful city, especially when it's lit up at Christmas, and the drive from Málaga to Granada is spectacular. And, the Alhambra is amazing."

DREAM LOCATION
Jean Johansson would love to own a home near Dénia's Las Rotas beach

'SKOPELOS IS THE PERFECT GREEK ISLAND'

BEN HILLMAN

"I'd like to own a little house on Skopelos. It is your quintessential Greek island: turquoise waters, quiet little coves where you can swim and snorkel, beautiful white houses with blue shutters that tumble down the hillside. For £70,000 to £80,000, you can get a traditional two-bed which could be on a movie set. In fact, it's where they filmed Mamma Mia!, but it's not too touristy because it's a bit of a pain to get to – you fly to Skiathos and then hop on a boat.

"Skopelos is quiet but it's got everything that you need, including wonderful restaurants. Most of the beaches are shingle, which is perfect for a boy from Brighton. I don't want sand in my jam sandwiches! It's also fantastic for paddle-boarding. The island is covered in pine forest and, at certain times of the year, thousands of butterflies fly out of the trees as you drive along. It's pure escapism."

ARE YOU SHOPPING AROUND FOR THE BEST RETIREMENT INCOME?

However you are planning to take an income from your pension, seeking independent financial advice is key to securing the best possible retirement income

If you're planning your retirement, aside from making a list of all the things you would like to enjoy, you may be wondering which income option is best to make the most of your pension savings. Reviewing the options on your own can be overwhelming, and you can't be sure that you're making the right decision. Seeking independent, specialist advice could increase your income and give you the peace of mind you need to enjoy your retirement.

Flexibility in Retirement

Retirement doesn't make life any more predictable – plans change, and if you need an income plan that can change with your circumstances, then pension drawdown may be the right option for you. Drawdown will allow you to set the income level you require while keeping your fund invested to allow further potential growth. You can alter your income level if your circumstances change, and if you don't require an income from the fund, you could even take your tax-free cash and leave the remainder invested until a further date. As with all investments, it is important to remember that growth cannot be guaranteed, and the value of your fund could reduce as well as increase.

Security in Retirement

If you are looking for greater security in your retirement, then a lifetime or fixed-term annuity may be more suitable. Both options provide you with a guaranteed income either for the rest of your life or for an agreed term, with the remaining amount available to review your options. The amount of income available to you from a lifetime annuity could increase by up to 40%* depending on your health and lifestyle.

How did the saying "in a nutshell" originate? Frank Boocock by email

"In a nutshell" is one of those expressions in English that sounds entirely metaphorical but has surprisingly literal origins – at least, that was the belief, some two millennia ago. In AD 77, the historian Pliny the Elder recorded the rumour that a parchment copy of Homer's poem the Iliad had been found within the shell of a nut. Given the poem's length this is highly unlikely, but the belief persisted.

Shakespeare, who drew regularly on the classics, clearly liked the image, and gave Hamlet the line: "I could be bounded in a nutshell, and count myself a king of infinite space, were it not that I have bad dreams."

It wasn't until two centuries later that the use of the expression to mean "in a few concise words" began to emerge in English.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

Kathy's a wonder woman

ON BEAUTY
Kathy Burke with Love Island's Megan Barton-Hanson

As someone with the privilege of having six beautiful granddaughters, aged from two to 23 years old, I am thankful to Channel 4 and Kathy Burke for her series Kathy Burke's All Woman, especially the first episode, which focused on female beauty (13 August).

Her concern for girls being cajoled into anxiety about some tyrannical vision of female perfection was admirable. And her entreaty to us to be more accepting of each other and our differences in bodily appearance was done with great good humour. Women need to give each other support as much now as they ever have. More power to Kathy's elbow.
Dora Bush Bristol

Dora Bush wins a BOSE SoundLink Revolve speaker, in either black or silver. One of BOSE's best-performing portable Bluetooth speakers, it is water-resistant, has a rechargeable battery that plays for up to 12 hours and delivers true 360° sound, wherever you place it in the room. SUBLIME STORYTELLING

Serengeti (BBC1) was beautifully filmed, and I wasn't bothered about the narrative style of presentation – indeed I found it rather appealing, and the "storytelling" approach may have captured the attention of younger viewers. It's essential that coming generations should learn to care about wildlife, or we face the prospect of its extinction.
Dora Alker Folkestone, Kent

BEYOND THE HEADLINES

I was amazed at the out-of-touch response from the BBC News spokesperson to the letter about inadequate coverage of the Yellow Vests protests (Feedback, 17 August).

Battles between the demonstrators and the police are increasing. The Yellow Vests are now being joined by both immigrants and advocates of "Frexit". In most cases the police are in full riot gear and using tear gas and batons.

Come on, BBC News, show it as it really is.
Paul Wright Walsall, West Midlands

THE COUNTDOWN IS ON

I am super excited about the return of Strictly. I need some sparkle to brighten up the autumn evenings! I'll miss Darcey Bussell and Pasha Kovalev, but I can't wait to find out what new judge Motsi Mabuse is like! The Strictly stars are also an interesting bunch – I like football pundit Alex Scott. Finally something to look forward to on Saturday evenings…
Jennifer Shelden Orpington, Kent

We're just as excited! And we have a treat for you next week – an interview with Motsi. Look out for more of RT's great Strictly coverage in the weeks to come.

I'M A FAN OF FAITH

Keeping Faith (BBC1) is one of the many great reasons for paying the licence fee! This second series was as addictive and emotionally charged as the first, each and every character was acted brilliantly, including the fantastic children. And the music was wonderful.

There were moments of humour, tenderness and sadness, and I am moved to tears in every episode. Please let there be another series! Thank you to all involved.
Karen Presho Annahilt, Down

…What is the accent of the actress, Anastasia Hille, playing Gael Reardon? It seems to sway between Irish and American. Why didn't Angeline Ball, who's Irish, play her again?
Louise Wilkinson Nelson, Lancashire

There's no news yet on the possibility of a third series. As for Gael, she is "a complex Irish character whose roots were in both Dublin and South Wales, her brother being bilingual Irish/Welsh," say S4C. A spokesperson for Vox Pictures, who made the series, adds: "We offered Angeline Ball the returning role of Gael Reardon in series two, but sadly she was unavailable. Therefore we had to recast and we are delighted that Anastasia Hille accepted the role and has embraced the character." Turn the page to find out why it helps to be bilingual.

THE WAY FORWARD

Channel 4's comedy drama This Way Up (Thursday) is a superbly sensitive portrayal of mental illness and its aftermath. Aisling Bea's pitch-perfect portrayal of Aine's use of humour as an emotional crutch is brilliantly authentic: both funny and powerful, a balance so many similar efforts struggle to keep. It should be a contender in awards season.
Mike Martin Kirkbymoorside, North Yorkshire

WHERE'S CAROL?

What has happened to Carol Tregorran in The Archers (Radio 4)? She was a wonderful addition to the cast, a much-needed soothing presence with her herbal potions and of course the mellifluous voice of Eleanor Bron.

I appreciate that, with such a large cast, not every character will get a crack at the storylines week in week out, but I think she's only featured briefly in one episode in the past year or more, and is rarely mentioned. When will she be heard again?
Flo Lingfield London NW3

A BBC spokesperson responds: "While Carol hasn't been on air in recent times, she is still resident in Ambridge and happily accompanying Jill and others to social events.

"As the kaleidoscope of village life ebbs and flows, some characters naturally take centre stage for periods while others make way. We can't say when, or if, individual characters will be featured again, but it's always good to hear listeners have enjoyed the variety and colour they provide."

GOODBYE (FOR NOW)
Is this the last we'll see of Ross Poldark (Aidan Turner)?

POLDARK RIDES AGAIN

I have enjoyed the Poldark series, but why does it have to end now? There are a further five books by Winston Graham that could be interpreted. I know all good things must come to an end, but there is still life in this. As for all quality series, such as Peaky Blinders, there will always be an audience. You make them and we will watch them!
David Roberts Leighton Buzzard, Bedfordshire

… Don't despair, Poldark fans, it isn't "goodbye for ever" – there are five more books in the series. They may not have bare chests in them, but there are all the main, and more, interesting characters, and your imagination is up to you… You could even read all 12 Winston Graham novels!
Anita Purnell Congresbury, Somerset

REMEMBER THIS?

I was delighted that Foyle's War topped the RT poll (3 August) as the programme readers most wanted to see on our screens again, as I have always greatly admired actor Michael Kitchen.
It would be wonderful if we could see again the marvellous drama in which he and Peggy Ashcroft shared a journey by night train to Vienna.
C Stewart Edinburgh
This must be the early Stephen Poliakoff drama Caught on a Train (1980), starring a younger Michael Kitchen, which won Baftas for both best single drama and best actress for Peggy Ashcroft. A DVD was produced, but sadly is now hard to find online.

CLASSIC DRAMA
A young Michael Kitchen (top) in Caught on a Train

NOEL TO THE RESCUE

I very much enjoyed Animal Rescue Live: Supervet Special (12–16 August C4). Some of the stories were heartbreaking, but it highlighted the fabulous work the rescue centres do. Kate Quilton, Noel Fitzpatrick and Steve Jones [left] did a brilliant job, putting across how important this cause is, with a bit of humour in the mix.
The impressive amount donated just shows there are plenty of animal lovers out there. Maybe Channel 4 should do this annually.
Jill Kelly Sutton, Surrey

THANK YOU, PAUL!

I would like to thank RT Money columnist Paul Lewis for his advice. My husband and I are both retired and I am a non-taxpayer, so it was useful to read about transferring my tax allowance to him. The online claim was painless and we have just received a cheque from HMRC for almost £700, backdated for the past four years!
Julia Hills Bedfordshire

…I have obtained a refund of £338.95 from M&S Bank in respect of a purchase made online from a company that refused to respond to emails or telephone calls when the product proved faulty.
If I hadn't known about claiming under Section 75 of the Consumer Credit Act, I probably would have lost the money. Thank you, Paul.
Angela McAllister Ayr

…In January 2004, I purchased a new car, along with GAP [Guaranted Asset Protection] insurance of nearly £900 to cover loss of the vehicle in the first three years. Prompted by Paul's article [RT, 25 May, revealing that dealerships earn massive commission], I made a complaint and they agreed to refund the premium in full. Without Paul I would have been none the wiser, so to him, a very big thank you from a very big fan! Moneybox and Moneybox Live (Radio 4) are excellent!

Was Keeping Faith dubbed?

My wife and I watched the Welsh version of Keeping Faith [Un Bore Mercher] earlier this year, with English subtitles. Presumably one version was dubbed – but if so, which?
Derek Hooper, Whitley Bay, Tyne & Wear

Each scene, in fact, was shot in both Welsh and English (and the Welsh version is slightly shorter because of the ad breaks on S4C). Creator Matthew Hall says: "Actors had to know their lines in both languages and be prepared to switch between them in different takes. I try to write scripts with maximum room for the actors to express what is going on beneath the surface and Pip Broughton, the director, is an expert at guiding them to their characters' exact state of mind. So when it comes to the camera rolling, the language becomes a very secondary thing."

For series one, that meant Eve Myles had to learn Welsh – and she's now a proficient speaker. "Not having the opportunity when I was younger to speak Welsh and to do it at my age – I'm very proud. It took four months of intensive work – I would drop the kids off at school and start to work on it. It has been so rewarding."

POLYGLOT Eve Myles learnt Welsh to star in Keeping Faith

HAIL THE HIGHLAND CHEF

What is Lorna McNee, the talented young chef who won Great British Menu (BBC2), doing now and will we see her again soon? She is a real inspiration to other women thinking about going into the industry.
Irene Stewart, Glasgow

Lorna tells RT: "I'm still working as sous chef at Restaurant Andrew Fairlie at Gleneagles in Perthshire, though I would love one day to be head chef somewhere or running my own restaurant. I loved doing Great British Menu – it was out of my comfort zone, but I was just myself and it's nice to know that people enjoyed watching me cook.

"Hopefully I might get more offers in the future, but I don't think you'll be seeing me on GBM next time – I'd like to let some more of Scotland's talented chefs shine!

"At the restaurant I help run the kitchen and develop dishes. A big part of what I do is to teach new young chefs, which I love. One of my first winning competition dishes is my signature, I guess, which is blue mountain hare. You don't see a lot of people using it. I serve it with a smoked-game bonbon, a red cabbage purée and a classic poivrade sauce."

◁ Blinders, which were in the listings for 26 and 27 August. What are BBC4 playing at?
Hazel Crouch London NW11

A BBC spokesperson replies: "We made a late change to the schedule after listings went to press, which we communicated on air. This was to ensure viewers could catch up on the whole of Peaky Blinders before the new series began on BBC1. We appreciate that this may have disappointed viewers, but the programmes have been rescheduled to air soon."

WARM WELCOME

From Syria to Scotland – Our Lives (19 August BBC1) was a lovely programme. The depiction of these family-oriented, hard-working people was all the evidence we need that any help we give Syrian refugees will be truly repaid. And the warmth shown to them by the islanders of Bute was gratifying. Good came out of horrendous experiences.
Brenda Charlwood Hay-on-Wye, Powys

JAWS FAN? Elisabeth Moss as June in The Handmaid's Tale

JUMPING THE SHARK?

In the final scene of The Handmaid's Tale (11 August C4), June (Elisabeth Moss) looked directly into the camera and said, "We're gonna need a bigger boat."

I laughed with delight – "You're gonna need a bigger boat" is a line from Jaws, improvised by actor Roy Scheider, as Chief Brody, when the boat is being torn apart by the great white shark. Director Steven Spielberg was so impressed, he left it in. Brilliant!
Ginny Lockwood Norwich, Norfolk

Ginny Lockwood wins Still Game: the Complete Collection, starring Ford Kiernan and Greg Hemphill in this box set of the Glaswegian sitcom. It's available to buy for £49.99 (RRP £64.99) at radiotimes.com/dvds36

View from my sofa

PATSY PALMER

The EastEnders star is embracing fluorescent leggings again

What’s the view from your sofa?
My TV is on an art easel next to the fireplace, though I don’t watch much telly these days. On the other side I have a nice big window that looks out onto nature. I can see butterflies and rabbits and lizards, and that’s a bit more interesting.

Where are you living?
Malibu, California. Me and the kids [Charley, 27, Fenton, 18, Emilia, 17, and Bertie, eight] love it here.

That’s a long way from Walford…
Yeah, I’ve been here for five years. I moved for different reasons, mainly lifestyle, and ended up having a break [from acting] for a while. I’ve been DJing, which I love, and running a not-for-profit company. I host women’s networking breakfasts to raise money for homeless women.

Do you feel any pressure to look a certain way in LA?
God, no. It’s so chilled here. I go for a coffee in bare feet and I never wear make-up.

Do you think you’ll live there permanently?
This is my home now, but I like going back and forth. I was back in London over the summer and that was great, too.

That would be to film your return as Bianca in EastEnders…
Yeah, that’s right. The truth is they never usually ask people back for a short stint. So when they asked me, of course I said yes. EastEnders is always a wonderful experience. To go back just for a few weeks was a blessing.

Yeah! It’s great fun being immature and getting back into her costumes. I noticed that Bianca’s puffa jackets and fluorescent leggings seem to be back in fashion in London, which is a bit worrying. Everything always comes around again: that’s a sign you’re getting old.

Will you get back into acting now you’re back in LA?
I think I will, but I have kids and it’s hard to juggle everything. There are only so many hours in the day. I like presenting, too. I’ve been doing some films for Lorraine Kelly about the holistic and meditative things I’m into over here, and I’m really enjoying that – they’ll be on air soon.

Your son Charley Palmer Rothwell is also an actor now. Did you encourage him?
No, I was a typical mum: “Don’t do it! You can get a really good profession.” Luckily, he didn’t take my advice. He’s never out of work.

Can the kids remember what pie and mash is?
Probably not! I ate so much of it growing up, but I’m veggie now.

Do you watch telly as a family?
In the mornings we have Disney on for Bertie. We don’t watch much, but I loved After Life with Ricky Gervais. It was so funny and so sad.

The news. It’s so horrible here.

It’s not great here either…
That’s true. I don’t like it on at all, especially around Bertie. I don’t want to fill my mind with all the bad things happening in the world. I miss British TV. I miss the panel shows, the comedy. Sometimes I’ll watch an old Whose Line Is It Anyway? – it still makes me laugh.

EMMA COX

Patsy Palmer returns as Bianca Jackson in EastEnders on Monday 8.00pm BBC1

NOTHING TO WATCH?

MY BOOK The Power of Awareness by Neville Goddard. I read a lot of spiritual books.

MY FILM Love Sonia is a brilliant film. It’s about human trafficking so it’s not an easy watch.

MY GIG Adele at the Hollywood Bowl. I know her so we always see her when she plays LA.

Palmer returns to EastEnders as Bianca – and she hasn’t changed a bit…
