'A seismic moment in British history'

Journalist Tom Mangold "covered and lived every single moment" of the Profumo scandal. Stephen Ward, the society osteopath and the spider at the centre of the web that brought together War Secretary John Profumo with Christine Keeler, even lived briefly at his house.

As the dramatisation of those events, The Trial of Christine Keeler, ends on BBC1 this Sunday, Mangold's BBC2 documentary Keeler, Profumo, Ward and Me provides the perfect companion piece, recounting one of the most seismic, far-reaching events in recent British history (read more in our feature starting on page 10).

Mangold was never far from the action as a Daily Express reporter who persuaded people in the news to sell their stories at the height of a flourishing market in chequebook journalism, as it was known. What would it be called now, I wonder, in days when cheques are rare and rather quaint.

The contemporary footage is illuminating. For instance, I had no idea of the size of the crowds that thronged the roads around the Old Bailey for Ward's trial. It was an undulating mass of thousands of people.

If you're looking for a polite mash-up of Big Brother and a very chilly, grown-up, property-centred Love Island (I'm sure you're not, but bear with me), have a look at Win the Wilderness (Sunday BBC2), where six British couples compete to inherit a house in a remote part of Alaska.

As someone who wouldn't know what to do with a wooden house that's so remote it can be reached only by a tiny plane, it's a bit puzzling. Where's the nearest Waitrose?

Everyone is very polite in the first episode, but I hope that they fall out soon, because I'm not sure how much more of it I can stand.

WHAT I'M WATCHING...

TOM MANGOLD

The veteran journalist, whose documentary on the Profumo scandal airs on Sunday, says he's been watching the TV dramatisation of the story in The Trial of Christine Keeler: 'The drama is accurate in how Stephen Ward enjoyed the company and the gossip and the chaos of the girls around him in quite a childish way," he says. "And, yes, he did call Christine 'Little Baby' – just not every two minutes.'

ROSIE MILLARD

'This week I binge-watched both seasons of Succession," says the former BBC arts correspondent. "Brian Cox is superb as Logan Roy in his cable knit and icy fury, and Kieran Culkin as Roman Roy is a delight. It's written brilliantly, with lacings of Shakespearean quotes, plot twists and a backdrop of eye-watering swearing and preposterous wealth. Apart from that, I caught the debut of Crackerjack!'

WHAT GETS US TALKING...

BACK TO BASICS FOR C4

Channel 4 unveiled its 2020 programmes highlights at a swanky Belgravia restaurant and it felt like a return to the controversial C4 of old. Eye-catching titles for the year ahead included Penises – in which men talk about "how it feels to be a man" – and Bring Back the Bush (starting this week) in which "writer and feminist Chidera Eggerue explores the relationship women have with their pubic hair."

I asked chief executive Alex Mahon and head of programmes Ian Katz whether the broadcaster, in its search for that elusive younger audience, is slowly turning C4 into its youth channel E4? "It's the first time I have heard that," said a slightly aghast Mahon, who assured me that more traditional viewers didn't need to put a sticking plaster over the "4" button on the remote just yet. "Bake Off is a family show," added Mahon, who said that the broadcaster was always aiming to "get the balance right".

REHABILITATING STEPHEN

Ricky Gervais may have grabbed the headlines hosting the Golden Globes, but his erstwhile Office co-creator Stephen Merchant is equally in demand. Jojo Rabbit, in which he plays a scary Gestapo officer, has been nominated for six Oscars, and he has been commissioned to make a series based on criminals engaged in community service, called The Offenders. Building on his own experiences (his parents used to work in the rehabilitation sector) the series follows seven strangers forced together to complete a Community Payback sentence in Bristol, who must unite to protect one of their own from Bristol's most dangerous criminal gang. "The show is part crime thriller, character study, and a state-of-the-nation commentary – with humour and heart," says the BBC.

WHAT NEXT FOR KEELEY?

A new drama starring Keeley Hawes is always eagerly anticipated, so get ready for ITV's Finding Alice, which is coming later this year. The six-part drama, created by Roger Goldby, Hawes and Simon Nye, follows a woman whose husband's sudden and accidental death unearths a trail of secrets, debt, suspicion and criminality. Hawes plays Alice, and will be joined by a star-studded cast including Joanna Lumley and Nigel Havers as Alice's parents Sarah and Roger, and Jason Merrells as her husband Harry. Also joining the cast are Gemma Jones and Kenneth Cranham as Minnie and Gerry, Alice's in-laws. BEN DOWELL

Keeping up with Harry and Meghan

EXCLUSIVE FIRST LOOK

One or two things have happened with the royal family since we last visited Channel 4's fabulously irreverent satire The Windsors. But, fortunately, the show is prescient enough.

The latest (third) series was filmed in late autumn, long before the Duke and Duchess of Sussex's "Megxit" decision, but there are enough parallels with the real-life royal news stories that mean it won't look bizarre, say production insiders. Series three focuses on the feud between the "Fab Four" – with Harry not allowed to drink and new mum Meghan (Kathryn Drysdale) finding Kate (Louise Ford) stiff and "up herself". There is a new Harry – Richard Goulding wasn't available and has been replaced by Tom Durant-Pritchard, who played Princess Margaret's former boyfriend Billy Wallace in The Crown.

Writers Bert Tyler-Moore and George Jeffrie tell RT: "A couple of our storylines predicted Megxit – in the first episode they're feuding with Wills (Hugh Skinner) and Kate and about to break up the fab four; in later episodes we have Meghan wanting to move to America; and Harry and Meghan go to the States with their surprising new nanny. So maybe we do have a crystal ball." The Windsors returns to C4 in February.

LIBBY PURVES

‘Money will go up in smoke’

For the good of the BBC, should equal pay claimants hold fire?

Samira Ahmed had a right to bring her case against the BBC. Particularly so after recent evidence that, in far more compelling cases, pay had indeed drifted into absurd inequality. Maybe due to slapdash management, combined with the less-grasping habits of females. It needed sorting out: as Sarah Montague remarked, nobody likes “feeling like a sap”.

Ahmed has won, though the ruling in this case – that she should hve been paid the same, for presenting her show Newswatch, that Jeremy Vine received for fronting Points of View – raises an eyebrow. Because showbiz is a market, and Points of View always was as fluffy as a fan-dance. Who could help giggling at the judges’ withering remarks after the BBC claimed there was a monetisable comedy glint in the former Africa correspondent’s eye? “Jeremy Vine read the script from the autocue,” says the ruling, impatiently. “He read it in the tone in which it was written. If it told him to roll his eyes, he did. It did not require any particular skill or experience to do that.” Ho ho. But the bald fact is that in public entertainment, ocular glintiness always was gold dust. And, admirable as she is, Ms Ahmed has less of it.

The real kicker in all this is her claim for £700,000 in back pay, on the principle either that she’s just as glinty as Vine, or that glints don’t matter. It’s a lot of money. So was the award to former China editor Carrie Gracie (which she gave to the Fawcett Society) and the £130,000 settlement with Caroline Barlow, the former head of product in the corporation’s design and engineering division.

VINDICATED Samira Ahmed won her equal pay tribunal

‘It may be virtuous feminist smoke, but it still chokes creativity’

There are another hundred women with claims: zeros multiply before the terrified eyes of BBC accountants. Thousands upon thousands of licence fees: programme-making money, news and fun and wisdom money, will go up in smoke. It may be virtuous feminist smoke, but it still chokes creativity.

Maybe some complainants, still in work, will boldly say, “I don’t want back pay just because you gits overpaid some greedy bloke. I just want an apology, and levelling up starting now.” In the same way I wish people suing the NHS and other public bodies would claim money only for solid relevant needs: caring for a disabled child, or recouping lost earnings, rather than “injury to feelings” or discrimination without loss. The only time I experienced medical incompetence (one eye is still slightly affected) my urge was for answers, acknowledgement, and for nobody else to suffer. “Going for the compo” felt a bit lowlife.

I often get asked whether I am one of the BBC women claimants, given that I knew perfectly well for years that they paid several other Radio 4 presenters of the live 9am shows more than me, just for being middle-aged-blokes-off-the-telly and (producers murmured) often doing less script and research. Nope: couldn’t bother complaining. I liked the job, it was fun, I’m a Reithian and BBC radio at its best is special. Frankly, meeting useful people like nurses, firefighters and ice-core scientists was a reminder that earning nearly twice the national average for a day-and-a-half a week is bunce.

But yes, there has been injustice towards women. The question, I suppose, is whether it’s enough to draw the line once you’ve had that acknowledged and amended for the future? Or are you so angry with the management and the graspingly glinty blokes who milked it dry that you’ll milk every penny yourself from the poor old worried BBC, and hang the consequences?

Maybe some of the remaining hundred women still working will make that choice. Meanwhile, it’s the tin hat and the bunker for me.

WHAT WE WATCHED

Winter nights in the late 1980s were warmed by the crackling sexual chemistry of Maddie Hayes and David Addison in the US detective series Moonlighting. Its stars, Cybill Shepherd and Bruce Willis, may have wisecracked their way into millions of hearts, but there were suggestions they didn’t get on off-screen, with Shepherd telling RT that she wouldn’t have been attracted to David in real life. “Too immature,” she said. The show ran until 1989, and ended in on a suitably surreal note with an ABC exec telling the pair that Moonlighting was being cancelled as the sets for the show were being dismantled.

WHAT YOU SAID

Our postbag was still full of praise – and some disdain – for the Christmas TV schedules. Mrs Le Lovell from Essex found little to interest her: “The few things worth watching were Dave Allen, Stanley Baxter and Only Fools and Horses.” But the comedian wasn’t to the liking of Mr and Mrs Smith from Southport, Lancashire. “Could he not find something more humorous than to mock the early chapter of the Bible? The worst show we have ever watched by Dave Allen; he is so talented, yet stooped to that.” BEN DOWELL

'I COULD HAVE STOPPED HIM...'

Why was the louche society osteopath at the heart of the Profumo scandal driven to suicide? Tom Mangold reveals what really happened to his friend Stephen Ward – and recalls the fateful decision he still regrets

IT'S TAKEN ME half a century after his death to meet the real Stephen Ward. I found him in a long-lost manuscript discovered quite by chance that he'd prepared for the autobiography he never wrote.

The Ward I first encountered in 1963, that extraordinary year of scandal, was a talented artist and osteopath, well read, highly intelligent, rather selfish, louche in the true Bohemian sense and a symptom of an age when Britain finally left the drab years of postwar austerity behind and replaced them with psychedelic colour, mini-skirts and the pill.

But he had the misfortune to be the linchpin of the Profumo scandal. He knew everyone, from a platoon of young, willing, girls from the suburbs to people who mattered; introduced everyone to everyone else; eccentrically regarded a Soviet agent as his closest friend while working quietly for MI5. He was the life and soul of parties and orgies, but he could attend an aristocratic dinner party and remain the centre of intellectual attention, or offer to help the Foreign Office organise a Soviet/American summit in London during the Cuban Missile Crisis. I think eclectic is the word.

In those stormy months when we worked together he was rarely his true self. He'd grown a carapace to cope with being permanently at the centre of the media storm. And for my part, as a journalist on the Daily Express, my friendship with him was not entirely sincere, a necessary media manufacture, not quite the real thing.

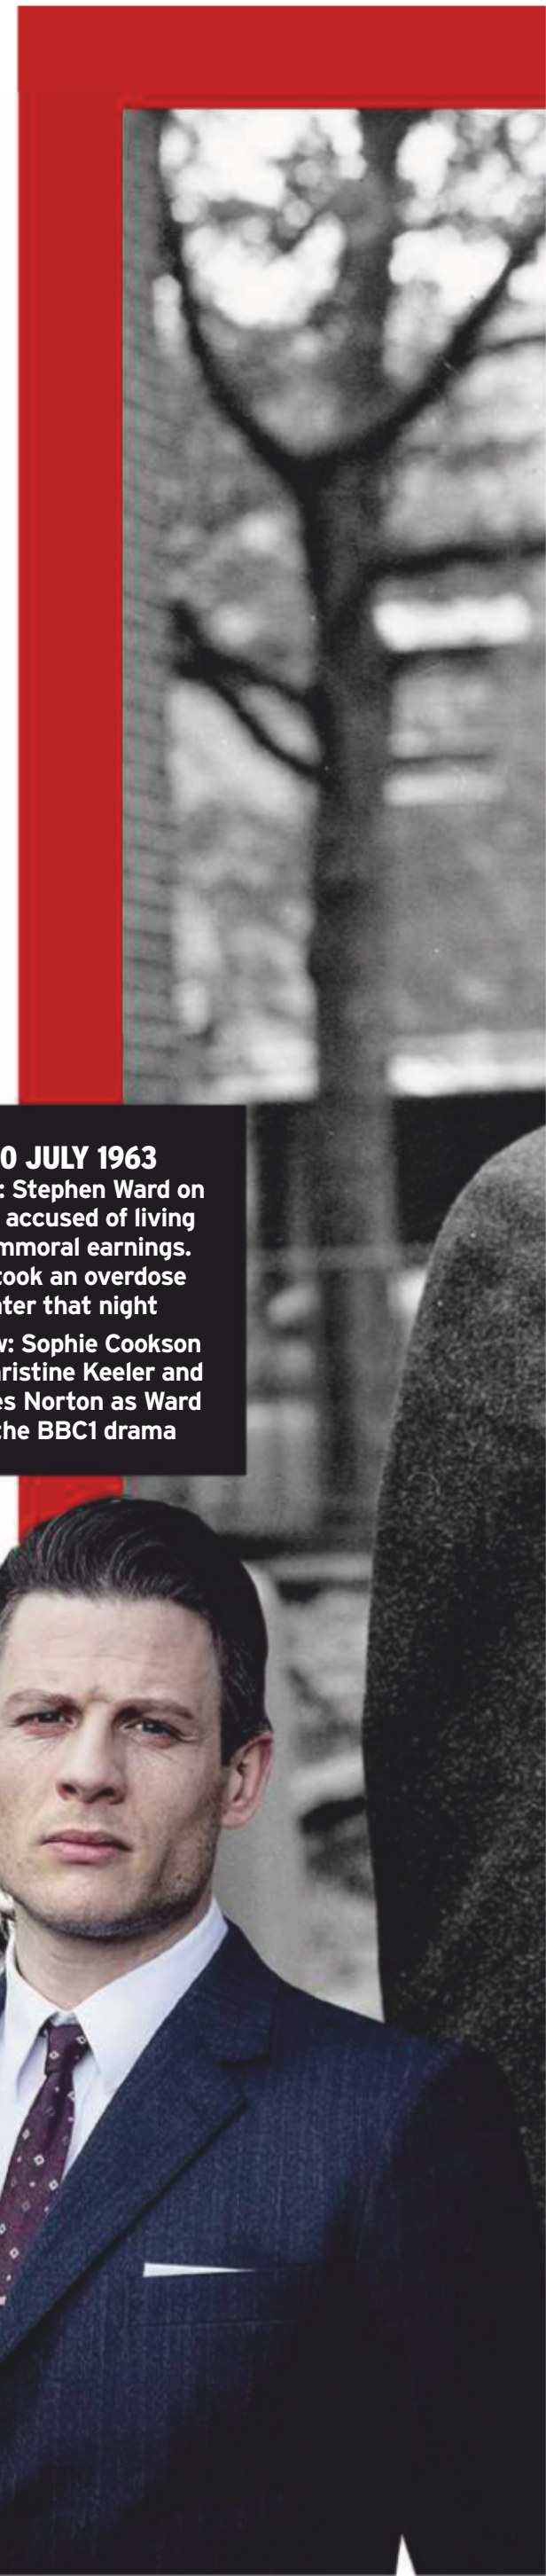

Occasionally, we did connect. Once during the few days when he stayed with my wife and me to avoid media hysteria during the height of his trial, we enjoyed end-of-day ruminations... incessant assurances from him that he'd never be found guilty, met by my more cautious doubts, leading to the very slow dawning on Stephen that just maybe, invisible forces generated by "the establishment" (whatever that was) were marshalled against him.

We fed and watered him at home, I drove him to keep him away from the hacks, but between us, in our naivety, we never dreamt that the state could actually hound a man to his death.

He remained convinced his wide circle of friends, from senior MI5 officers to Lord Astor, would come to his rescue and give evidence on his behalf. "They won't let me down, Tom. I know I can always rely on them," he said time and again.

I remained unsure. For Stephen, friendship had meaning; for his "friends" it meant avoiding contamination by association when it all hit the fan.

And when a terrified establishment sought to reassure "the people" (and angrier voices from Washington) about the woeful state of Britain's security, it did what it frequently does: found the perfect whipping boy to take the heat away from the Minister for War, John Profumo, whose libido did ▷ ◁ make him the one guilty party of the scandal.

"What do we know about this chap Ward?" said the Home Secretary to the head of Scotland Yard at a notorious secret conference in his office on 27 March that year. Decypher the code in those eight harmless words and he actually told the cops that it was now open season on Ward and, boy, did they take the hint.

TIME AFTER TIME I warned Stephen: "They'll come for you on a Friday evening when you can't reach your lawyer. They'll nick you and verbal you all over the weekend, and because you just cannot stop talking, they'll have three boxes of evidence against you by Monday."

"Nonsense, dear boy," Stephen always replied. "How can I be arrested if I haven't done anything? This is a civilised, democratic society – you Fleet Street boys, always exaggerating."

I hated being right. I am the opposite of a conspiracy theorist, but the way Number Ten, the Home Office, Scotland Yard and the cream of the legal establishment enthusiastically pursued Stephen to his grave – falsely portraying him as a common ponce living off the earnings of prostitutes – makes me wonder.

I was embedded in the story, but not emotionally involved. In those days of analogue journalism, he was just another client of the Express. These were brutal Wild West days in Fleet Street, the Beaverbrook cheque book dominated. I became friend, driver, consigliere, whisky and fine-wine provider, buyer of roses, personal ATM, and confidant to the principal players. But the very last full day of his life tore the curtains away from the theatre and revealed that there was indeed a depth to our friendship and that this placed on me the duty of care. I just didn't see it.

Stephen called me at the paper on 31 July, just as I was leaving. It was the evening before the jury was due to return. Even Stephen knew what the verdict would be. So many people had been forced to lie for the prosecution, including Christine Keeler and Mandy Rice-Davies, that Ward never had a chance. Worse still, no one of importance appeared for his defence.

"I need to see you tonight, Tom. It's important." I had twice been shown the yellow card by my then wife, who said, with justification, "If you're not home by 7pm, don't bother coming home." I'd been away for weeks. I told Stephen of my predicament and he was quietly persistent. "Tom, you're one of the very few I trust, please, please." I said I'd "pop in" but not for long.

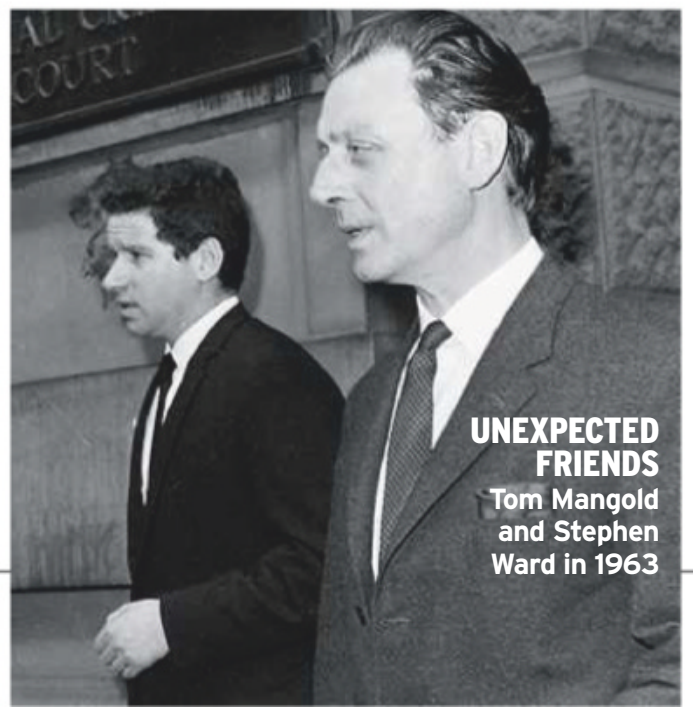

When I entered the flat of a mutual friend he was staying with just off the King's Road in Chelsea, I found him relaxed, dressed in an open-neck shirt. On a glass table were some 20 envelopes. He immediately gave me one: "This is for you. No need to open it now."

A cub reporter on their first assignment would've realised what was going on. I knew instantly I was faced with a choice: talk him out of what he was obviously planning, or save my marriage. Fatally, I made the wrong choice, and lost both my wife and Stephen.

We talked quietly for a while. "You realise I'm going to go down, don't you?" he said. I tried to cheer him up. "You'll get a few years, that's all. You'll go to Ford Open Prison and run the library. All the cons will get you to draft their letters home. You'll be a hero and a star, and when you come out, I'll buy your story for the second time." He wasn't in the mood.

"I'm going to be nailed tomorrow... it's not a pleasant thought. I'll tell you frankly I don't think I'm going to be able to do time for these offences. It's not prison that worries me, Tom, I can take all that. It's taking the blame, being the victim of a government witch-hunt. And my friends. How could every one of them let me down? And the lies in court, those dreadful lies."

'I could easily have stopped his suicide. Instead, I left'

UNEXPECTED FRIENDS
Tom Mangold and Stephen Ward in 1963

YET HE REMAINED composed in his bitterness. A new, mature, self-aware Ward had left the stage and was talking to me as a mate. I misjudged both his cri de coeur and my duty of care as a human being and not as a byline-hungry hack. I could easily have stopped his suicide: held his hand through the darkness of that terrible night, drank a bottle of wine with him, let him talk, find closure before the prison cell locked him in. I could have cheered him out of his depression. Instead, I left, showering him with banalities. "Don't do anything silly, Stephen..."

The next day my night news editor, a cheerful cockney, woke me at about 7am: "Get down to St Stephen's Hospital, sweet'art. Your mate Ward's topped himself." Stephen died three days later from an overdose of sleeping tablets.

It was seven years ago that I came upon the secret, uncompleted manuscript for the autobiography. The document was found hidden in a cupboard of a literary agent's office in New York.

Tucked away, sometimes almost lost in the 30,000-word document in which he name-dropped for page after page about his impressive list of patients and subjects for sketching, from British royalty to what he called "alley cats" like Keeler and Rice-Davies, I discovered gems of the true Ward, the man at the heart of the Profumo scandal who we had so failed to assess.

On sex parties: "It would be humbug if I did not confess that I looked forward to the sex orgy too… Many of the people who attend are rich and famous – many faces that are seen in public life and on television. If their public could only see them like this. The only appeal for me I found was in the extreme beauty of the girl and the interest as an observer in the proceeding."

STEPHEN WAS NOT a performer, but an enthusiastic voyeur: "I think my luck with girls has been due to the fact that I really do love girls for themselves and not for sexual reasons, that with me has been a secondary consideration. Class is never a thing… my girlfriends have come from fairly simple surroundings."

On his imminent arrest: "Now the full horror of the situation came home to me and I started to feel hunted. It is impossible to imagine the feelings of a person in this position. His predicament is appalling… I shall never forget the position as the police seemed to get nearer and nearer… My misery was intense… Life had become almost impossible to endure."

Not almost, as it transpired. But actually.

To my eternal shame I also discovered the following lines in an otherwise ferocious attack on Fleet Street: "Firstly let me say I have made during this business one or two friends among the press who I hope will remain friends whatever happens. Men of integrity who view events dispassionately and do not seek to create their own news. May I name right away Tom Mangold of the Express. He has refused to take advantage of any hospitality or off-record talks… in no case did he abuse his privilege."

No crocodile tears here, but after his death I quit Fleet Street immediately, carrying with me, hopefully for ever, the lessons learnt that incredible year on that incredible assignment.

His farewell letter to me? "Dear Tom, Thank you for everything. I despaired of everything after I heard the judge's summing up. My case, which rested almost entirely on my word, was hardly put at all. I have never taken a penny, which I knew to come from immoral earnings… Anyway times were once good."

Tom Mangold went on to work at the BBC, first as a war correspondent, later for 26 years on Panorama

'IT WAS MORE LIKE A RAPE'

Christine Keeler on her encounter with Profumo

Tom Mangold's documentary features never-before-heard interviews with Christine Keeler and Mandy Rice-Davies, the two women at the heart of the Profumo scandal. The audiotapes were traced by the director/producer Steve Anderson with the help of the man who had recorded them 30 years earlier as part of research for the film Scandal. They'd been locked away in a London storage facility along with scripts, props and souvenirs of Joe Boyd's career as a film and music producer. Anderson says the box of dusty old audio cassettes contained more than 20 hours of private conversations with Keeler and Rice-Davies, and extracts will be broadcast for the first time on Sunday.

Of the infamous weekend at Cliveden, Keeler says: "I was in the pool with no clothes, Stephen [Ward] kicked my swimsuit away and went: 'Aha, what are you going to do now?' Then Profumo happened."

Her recall of brief, brutal sex with the War Secretary: "He came on very strong. I mean, more like a rape, but it was a smiling one."

And of police pressure on both women to testify against Ward: "They threatened me. They said: 'Look, now you've got to sign this statement or otherwise you're going in the dock with Stephen.' I knew then it was Stephen or me. Oh, it was all bent. They knew and they forced me to lie."

Says Anderson: "Too bad the truth can only be heard now. In 1963, it might have saved Stephen Ward's life."

James Norton on Stephen Ward

‘WARD LIVED IN A BIZARRE WORLD’

Why do we still have such a fascination with the Profumo affair?

It was our Watergate, so it will for ever be a huge punctuation mark in our political history. There have been scandals in other forms but not one that’s brought down a whole government. There’s also a certain amount of Schadenfreude in seeing big, powerful men taken down by 20-year-old women. And it’s all still shrouded in mystery. We still don’t know the full truth. The campaign to clear Stephen Ward’s name has been delayed because the Government won’t allow full transcripts to come out.

He was accused of being a “pimp” and a “spy”. After your research what did you make of him?

Every account reveals something else quite peculiar – the best thing for any actor. We’ve tried to explore the fact that – while there was a horrible miscarriage of justice and he paid the biggest cost of everyone involved because he did lose his life – he also had a lot to answer for. He wasn’t perhaps making immoral earnings from prostitution, but he was introducing very young, vulnerable women to older men and curating this world around him – these relationships – that he gained from. They were his ticket into that men’s club. We shouldn’t forget his sinister side, particularly in the light of #MeToo and the massive distance that – thank God – we’ve made.

But he was incredibly progressive in his attitudes to sex and gender equality. The director, Andrea Harkin, planted a seed in my mind about how he was fascinated by the female, the power of femininity, and would imagine himself, perhaps, as a woman. Today he would have been allowed to express that in a much more honest way, but in the 1960s he wasn’t able to, and had to live in this bizarre and subversive world.

I don’t think he spent his time in self-flagellation, questioning his actions, but genuinely believed it was in those girls’ interest to start them on that path and give them those means.

Is playing a real person harder than a fictional character?

It’s two-sided. On the one hand, you have this wealth of information and people’s accounts – and towards the end, he wrote a version of an autobiography. That’s great guidance. But on the other hand, there is a responsibility to honour the real man.

And on the whole, I loved getting into his head. It’s a joyous place. I’ve definitely played a few tortured souls in my career, but I don’t think of Stephen as one of them until the Profumo scandal broke. There’s an amazing summing up in the court where his defence attorney says: “The truth is, most people in the country right now are looking at your life, and half of them are reviled by it, but also most of them are deeply envious because you’re able to express yourself in the way you wanted to, at least in the private sphere.”

One thing that constantly comes up about Stephen Ward is that people loved him. He had this incredible warmth and likeability and was a great guy to have around, by all accounts.

As a male actor, following #MeToo, are you more aware than ever of your behaviour and your conduct?

To have this moment of questioning and self-reflection is no bad thing. I’ve been very grateful to have been brought up in a very progressive, feminist household where my mum and dad both worked full-time. But alongside the #MeToo conversation, there has to be accompanying conversations about what it is to be a young man, and how one conducts oneself. How does one protect the world of conversation, flirtation and seduction? There’s a need for that. The idea of being a young teenage boy now, terrified about going up to a girl in a bar, is also sad to me. If we’re redefining masculinity, lost young men need guidance.

Do you feel that onus on yourself?

Up to a point, yeah. As an actor or politician, there is a certain responsibility. If kids follow your career, you should provide them with an example of how to lead life. They are the ones who enable me to have this incredibly privileged life, so it’s only right I should pay my respects to that. I try to be as private as possible but there’s also something to be said for recognising how valuable the voice I have can be.

I’m a type 1 diabetic and I really enjoy being allowed to talk about it. Every time I do, I get an incredible response, usually from mums of kids with type 1 saying, “You’ve no idea how wonderful it is for my seven-year-old daughter to see someone on TV who also injects himself ten times a day.” It’s very gratifying.

Sophie Cookson on Christine Keeler

‘WOMEN WERE PUNISHED FOR THEIR DESIRES’

Why do we still have such a fascination with the Profumo affair?

It has all of the ingredients of a brilliant story and an incredible list of characters who all collided and set off this bomb – from topless dancers to politicians. And as human beings, our nature is to be nosey – we love thinking that we’re seeing behind some kind of net curtain – we love prying. The British are notorious for being quite prudish with a stiff upper lip, but we love something a bit racy that titillates us. We have a bizarre attitude to sex and the body in general, compared to many other countries, so anything about sex and our little antiquated prudish ears prick up.

Christine Keeler was accused of being a “prostitute” and a “whore” – following your research, what did you make of her?

The things that people wrote and said about her are completely despicable, especially considering that when she had the affair with Profumo, she was 19. Barely an adult. It was a total witch-hunt. She was having to play by men’s rules; if women showed any sexual desire in that period, they were punished. She says candidly in her book: “I liked men and men liked me.” It really was that simple in some ways. She’s been absolutely crucified for having multiple relationships with men. Well, what were all the men doing?

I also wanted to put her behaviour into context, in light of the abusive relationship she had with her mother and stepfather, her abusive relationship with Lucky Gordon who stalked her and kept her in a room with an axe by the bed... I really wanted to redeem her character.

Is playing a real person harder than a fictional character?

Reading her autobiography – and she wrote several versions that are all slightly different – I wanted to do her justice. Amanda [Coe, who wrote the drama] charted her journey so beautifully and all of the facets of her personality: her vulnerability, feistiness, stubbornness. I want it all to come across. She’s often portrayed as a victim and that’s something that I really don’t want to convey. She never saw herself as one – she had so much fire in her. The dignity it takes to walk out of a front door and hold your head high in front of a barrage of press and people throwing eggs at you... the way she handled herself was so admirable. The really shocking thing is that this wasn’t all that long ago.

Do you think there would be the same fallout if the story played out today?

I read a great piece saying if Christine Keeler was around now, she would have got a lot of money to tell her side of the story, gone on Celebrity Big Brother and become a big star. But back then, she had no voice, no agency. There were so many people that wrote about her and controlled her story.

Although, I was talking about it with some friends in relation to the Brett Kavanaugh hearing [which saw the then US Supreme Court nominee accused of sexual misconduct]. Seeing the woman at the centre of that being asked horrendous questions about her sexual history in the most blunt, detached way – by practically an all-male panel of senators – isn’t so dissimilar to what happened to Christine.

Do you believe that people in positions of power and in the public eye should be role models and held to higher standards?

Yes, I do. Obviously we’re all fallible humans, but if you are purporting to be a pillar of society, then you have a responsibility to uphold standards that you expect everyone else to live by.

Yet Donald Trump was elected US president, despite his documented disrespectful treatment of women. What do you think that says about society?

It makes me very sad! I was filming in New York when he got elected and that was truly awful. On set it felt like everyone was in mourning. The day before, there had been elation because, being in New York, the circles that I was hanging with were an incredibly anti-Trump environment. And then suddenly watching the results roll in... It was a really dark day. Now we’re all feeling the domino effect of that day. FT

TOP OF THE WORLD

INTERVIEW BY TARA CONLAN

On the face of it, the return to form of Top Gear is due in no small measure to the fizzing on-screen chemistry between new boys Freddie Flintoff and Paddy McGuinness. But behind the camera, keeping a lid on the combustible mix of testosterone and petrol, is a person just as important to its success. And she's a woman – in her own estimation, a "really bossy" woman.

"There's no point in pussyfooting around," says Clare Pizey. "What would you call a man who was like that: direct? Men don't get called bossy, do they? But I have to admit that I am, because you need to be."

The new series – starting this week with Flintoff attempting a breathtaking car bungee over a dam – cements Top Gear's bounce-back following a period in the doldrums after the departure of Clarkson and co.

But when Pizey began overseeing the show in 2016, it was, she concedes, in "meltdown". The previous executive producer, Lisa Clark, had left after a difference of opinion with presenter Chris Evans. Pizey was then the head of factual entertainment, and it was "strongly suggested" to her by her BBC bosses that she "needed to come and look after" their multimillion-pound global brand.

"I'm going to be honest, I didn't want to do it," she admits. Despite being a fan of the show, she knew it was going to be a struggle.

"I've been around long enough to know, when a show's in meltdown, how terrifying it is for the team making that show. But I did know that I was senior enough that people would listen to me – if I said something's not possible, I would be heard."

With ratings down to 1.9 million, from 4.3 at the start of the series. Evans, who had creative control of the show, left four months after her arrival.

Pizey remains diplomatic. "I don't particularly want to speak ill of people, but I don't think it worked out with Chris Evans as a presenter. I would never normally 'exec' a show if I don't have final editorial say… so I could make sure that nothing was going to be done that would bring the BBC into disrepute [Matt LeBlanc had been castigated for doing wheelspins near the Cenotaph]. I think the showrunner needs to be the showrunner."

However, she credits Evans for "being brave enough" to front the show after the original trio left, saying it would have been tough for anybody to take it over: "Let's be a little bit grateful to Chris… he sort of drew a lot of the poison."

She says the new incarnation is "100 per cent" collaborative. "Often the presenters will say, 'Can we do this?' or 'Have you thought about that?' ▷

OVER THE TOP
Freddie Flintoff braces himself for his car bungee over a dam in Switzerland

‘It doesn’t always have to be more and more dangerous...’

◁ and you make changes, absolutely. But somebody’s got to be in charge and it’s probably best if it’s someone on the production side because you can see things slightly more clearly.”

After LeBlanc announced his departure in 2018, Pizey and key BBC executives met and shuffled cards on a table with the names of more than 30 potential presenters to work alongside Chris Harris (“We knew we wanted to keep him, there’s nothing he doesn’t know about cars”).

Pizey will “never say” who the other candidates were, but after lots of discussion and screen-testing, the day McGuinness, Flintoff and Harris came together, she had a feeling that the chemistry was right.

“Obviously I knew Chris really well. I’d never met Paddy before, but there was a side of him I felt I could relate to... he’s so quick-witted and warm. Then Fred came and he’s slightly shyer, but actually he’s so incredibly decent and likeable. He’s a national treasure, people love him. And Paddy and Fred knew one another... of course, that helped. Matt LeBlanc was amazing in very many ways, but our numbers weren’t as good as they are now with three British guys.”

Did she consider adding a female presenter?

“Yes, we did. But it didn’t quite click in the same way. To me there’s something about three blokes going on an adventure. There’s an insight into what they’re like and the truth is they’re exactly as they appear. They’re lovely, they’re handfuls –my God, they’re handfuls – but the fact they’re all dads is great. They’re genuine.”

On location when her back is turned, the presenters have “gone off in different directions... a bit like mercury”. She jokes that she’d like some “grown-up baby reins... to hold them close and have them where I want them to be”.

During her career – which began as a secretary to the then BBC head of arts and music Alan Yentob – Pizey has worked on big shows such as Children in Need, Sport Relief and the Rough Guides series, but she says this is “the toughest job I’ve ever had”.

“It’s very much like childbirth,” says Pizey, a mother of two grown-up children. “It’s absolute agony, but you forget it when you see the end product... you remember the good times.”

An obvious camaraderie grows out of filming in adversity – which includes sharing “team pees” on the roadside with other women in the crew. “We’ve had to get a bit tougher,” she laughs.

In Borneo she recalls the convoy being stuck in torrential rain for two hours. “The safest place to pee is in front of your car because nobody can see you, so you crouch down – but Freddie beeped the horn and made me jump!”

HOME COMFORTS SUCH as pillowcases and teabags help on location, plus McGuinness’s “brilliant cheapest rider [the contractual food and drink supplied to stars] in history” – which includes Crunchy Nut Cornflakes, Pot Noodles and Ambrosia Creamed Rice. “We’ve made sure it’s in tins – we had them in cartons and at altitude they exploded!”

The daredevil stunts aren’t the most stressful part of the job because, as she says, “our risk assessment forms are like books. Funnily enough, I was less worried about the car bungee than any other item because we had structural engineers all over it.” The car bungee was tested by a stuntman before Flintoff attempted it. Other challenges are tried out by researchers.

Pizey says she wants “to make things that people are going to talk about” and thinks the bungee is “a massive moment that I really hope people say, ‘Did you see that?’” She acknowledges, though, that the show has to be more than just grand stunts. “We’ve got to be careful. It doesn’t always have to be more and more dangerous; our job is to be creative.”

So, what of the future? It’s understood the presenters are contracted until the end of the year, so negotiations to keep them will probably begin in the autumn. Pizey won’t be drawn, but says of the successful new line-up: “I don’t think it works unless there’s a three,” adding she’s “happy for the presenters and the BBC, but most of all it makes me really happy for the team.”

THE BEST FUN ON FOUR WHEELS

UNDER FIRE ON A DRIVING RANGE

“This is a ridiculous test to see how agile their cheap convertibles were. We took them to a golf driving range and had 40 golfers firing balls at them. They had to drive round the range trying to collect the balls. We gave them protective clothing: Fred was in his hockey kit, Paddy in a suit of armour [above] and Chris we gave a T rex outfit with protective clothing underneath. He got out of the car and started running around with loads of golf balls being fired at him... everybody’s literally crying with laughter. That’s Top Gear at its best. You’re doing something with cars, you’re being creative and you’re laughing your head off.”

UP THE ANDES ▼

“The lads kept asking us if they could go to America and we said, ‘America’s a bit too easy...’ So we said they could do an American road trip, but sent them to South America on Inca roads and made them buy cars out there. Paddy chooses one [below] and things don’t go according to plan.”

THE DIRTY RASCAL

“There’s a new Land Rover coming out, it’s big news and quite expensive, so Paddy thought he could make a cheaper version – with mixed results. That’s a big moment for Paddy. He even had monogrammed slippers made to keep it clean.”

CHRIS v THE RAF ▶

“You may remember Richard Hammond raced a Eurofighter Typhoon jet. The RAF’s got a new jet so we’ve raced that with Chris in a McLaren Speedtail. Only Top Gear could do that. Sometimes I feel really proud we’re on a show that can open doors like that; it’s quite something.”

WORLD HOLOCAUST FORUM2020

‘I LOST EVERYBODY’

Arek Hersh escaped death in Auschwitz for the peace of the Lake District, but the horror of the camps will never fade

GRAEME THOMSON

AREK HERSH SITS in a hotel lounge on the shores of Lake Windermere and gestures towards the water. “It was just over there,” he says. “We had no idea where we were. Once we got off the planes, the pilots said, ‘Now you are in England.’ That is all we understood.”

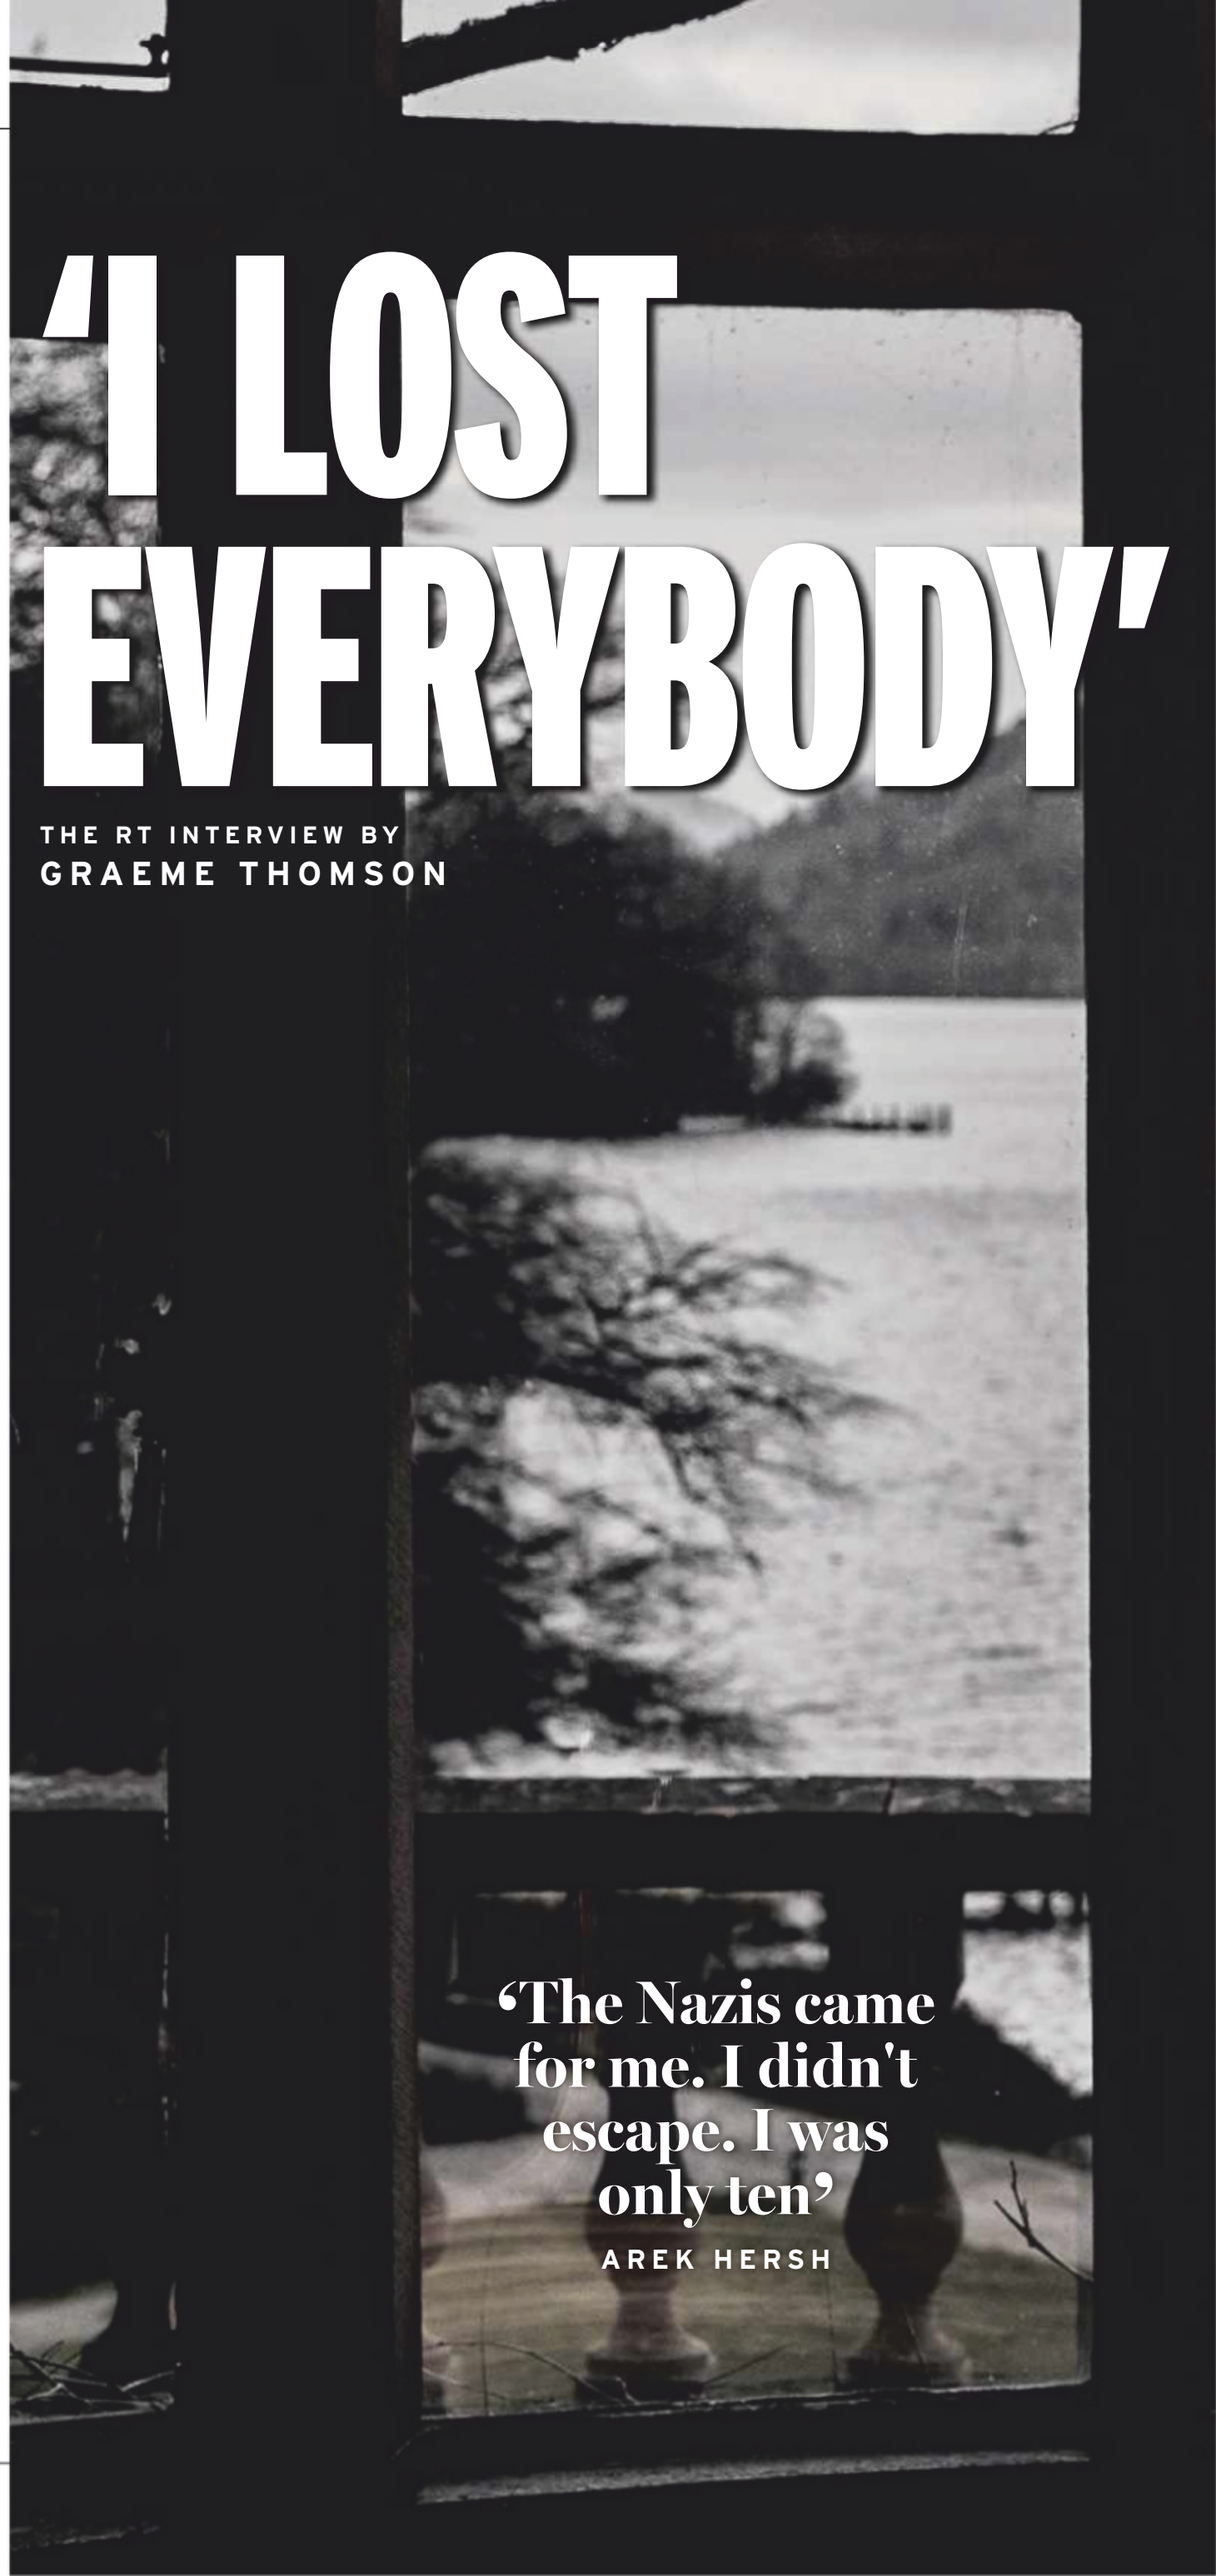

On 14 August 1945, less than half a mile from where he’s now enjoying soup and a sandwich, Hersh spent his first night on British soil, one of 300 children brought to the Lake District following the liberation of the Nazi concentration camps in eastern Europe. He spent four months at Calgarth, living on a site that had just been vacated by 1,500 British munitions workers engaged in the production of Sunderland flying boats. There, painfully slowly, among the lakes and mountains, the healing process began. “I still feel good when I come here,” says Hersh. “But it was hard for us, too. Very hard.”

This little-known corner of wartime history has inspired a powerful 90-minute BBC drama starring Tim McInnerny, Iain Glen and Romola Garai. Drawing on the testimony of survivors, The Windermere Children focuses on five of the boys sent to the Lakes in 1945. Hersh is one of them. He has seen the final cut and is happy, partly because he’s the closest thing the film has to a romantic lead. “Did you see one of the girls give the boy a kiss?” he asks. I nod and he smiles. “That was me! She kissed me – and that was the end.”

SHARP AND DAPPER at 91, Hersh has travelled two hours today from his home near Leeds to return to Windermere and its bittersweet memories. Born in 1928 in Sieradz, a small Polish army town, he was one of five children. When Hitler invaded Poland in September 1939, life became increasingly precarious for the local Jewish community.

“One night they came for my father,” he says. “They took him, and he escaped. Then they came back for my older brother. They took him, and he escaped. Then they came for me. I didn’t escape. I was only ten. I didn’t get a chance to understand what was happening.”

He was taken to Otoschno camp in Pozdan. By 1942, out of 2,500 prisoners, Hersh was one of only 11 left alive. The camp commandant “was a very aggressive type. He used to love to hang people. ▷

THE WINDERMERE CHILDREN

1 CHAIM "HARRY" OLMER, 92
played by KACPER SWIETEK

As a teenager Harry (Polish-born like all the survivors pictured) was moved between various labour and concentration camps, before being liberated by the Russians. "We were semi-savages when we arrived in Windermere," he says. "But we were brought back into humanity. Reborn, really." Harry later moved to Glasgow and trained as a dentist, a position he held until he retired in 2013.

2 AREK HERSH, 91
played by TOMASZ STUDZINSKI

See main feature.

3 SIR BEN HELFGOTT, 90
played by PASCAL FISCHER

After his arrival at Windermere in 1945 Ben discovered a flair for sport and a decade later was captaining the Great British weightlifting team at the Olympic Games. In 2018, he was knighted for his work on Holocaust remembrance. "The night was a completely different thing," he says of the terrors many survivors experienced for years later.

4 SAM LASKIER, 92
played by MAREK WROBLEWSKI

A teenage prisoner in four concentration camps, Sam, like the others, was eventually liberated from Theresienstadt (Terezin) in a part of German-held Czechoslovakia. Today, he says they're like a big family. "We have a bond together that has lasted for 70 years."

5 IKE ALTERMAN, 91
played by KUBA SPRENGER

"We were a bit like wild animals," says Ike of his earliest memories of Windermere. "Our eyes were popping out at the food – we just weren't used to it. And clean things, and washing facilities. That was a happy, happy time."
Ike eventually settled in Manchester and became a successful jeweller and diamond mounter.

◁ He was horrendous, but he had pity on me, because I was a small boy."

The commandant sent Hersh home, but within ten days Nazi forces had rounded up Sieradz's remaining Jews in a church. "No food, no water, no toilet facilities, nothing. It was a horrendous time." Hersh was sent to the Lodz ghetto and then, aged 15, to Auschwitz-Birkenau, where he joined a line of 182 children awaiting inspection by the camp's notorious Angel of Death, Josef Mengele.

Asked his age, he lied and said he was 17. Asked his trade, he lied again, and told them he was a locksmith. "The first camp taught me lessons," he says. "Don't be too young – and have a profession." His presence of mind saved his life. "Three of us were told to go to the right side of the line. All the others were killed the same day."

In January 1945, he was transferred to Buchenwald and then to Theresienstadt (Terezin), a camp in the former Czechoslovakia. The journey there was the lowest point of his years of imprisonment. "I was a whole month on a train, out on the open wagons, no roofs. It was unbelievable. We ate grass. I took my left shoe and burned the leather, hoping that I can eat." He shakes his head. "We had no option. It was shocking, terrible."

Shortly after he arrived, the camp was liberated by the Russian army and Hersh was sent to Prague. His passage from there to Windermere was organised by the Committee for the Care of Children from Concentration Camps, funded by the Central British Fund for German Jewry and supported by the UK government. From there 300 children boarded ten Lancaster bombers, sitting on the floor along each side. "We had no idea what was happening. We arrived in Carlisle after a few hours. Buses were waiting for us, and they brought us here."

The film captures the disorientation and fear many new arrivals felt on entering yet another makeshift military facility dominated by low huts and smiling strangers. "The buildings did look a bit like a camp, but we went in, and each one had a room, with a bed and a chest of drawers." His eyes widen still at the unimaginable luxury of it all.

Some experiences at Calgarth remain etched in his memory. He recalls going to the cinema in Windermere, armed with a gifted sixpence. "I saw Judy Garland on the tram," he says, and starts to sing The Trolley Song from Meet Me in St Louis.

Hersh has met the excellent young Polish actors portraying him and his fellow survivors in The Windermere Children (pictured above) ▷

◁ and commends the drama's dedication to authenticity. There's a scene where the children grab handfuls of bread from the table in the dining hall and rush away to stash it in their rooms. True? He nods. "We hid the bread under the bed, because we didn't think tomorrow we would get any more." It was also the case that, initially, there was insufficient clothing, meaning many of the children walked around in their undergarments.

LIBERATED

In other respects, life and drama subtly diverge. There was little interaction with the local community, and while screen Arek and friends pick up the language quickly, in reality Hersh left Windermere with no English at all. "We had just seven hours of English lessons in total," he says. "There were some Jewish people who had come here before the war and spoke to us in German."

Dr Oscar Friedmann, the German-born social worker and psychoanalyst portrayed in the film by Thomas Kretschmann, was one of them. From a medical perspective, the simple hope was that the peace and beauty of their surroundings would help assuage the horrors suffered by the children. To some extent, it worked. "They took us into the mountains and the lakes and that was good," says Hersh.

But the natural cure could only go so far, however, particularly as there was no attempt at formal counselling. "That was a terrible shame, because we needed the therapy after coming out from these places," says Hersh. "You can't go through the things we did to come out OK." He suffered horrific nightmares. "I used to wake in the middle of the night and see terrible things. After 30 years they suddenly left me. I've no idea why."

'They took us into the lake... we needed therapy'

While the children were at Windermere, the Red Cross brought word of their families. For Hersh, as for most, the news was unimaginably bleak. "I lost everybody," he says. "About 80 people – parents, cousins, uncles, everybody. I knew my sister Mania got away to Russia, she was in Siberia, but I had no idea [if she was alive]." In 1947, he received news that she had survived and went to visit her in Germany. Shortly afterwards she moved to America.

By then, Hersh had also moved on. After leaving Windermere at the end of 1945, the children were split into smaller groups. He spent time in hostels in Liverpool and Manchester, still struggling with the language and the culture. "It was very, very difficult. We just had to pick up words as we went along. But it was an uphill struggle all the time: no money, no parents to help me out. It was just after the war, people had problems of their own. Eventually I was OK."

That is an understatement. Hersh carved out an admirable life in Britain. He trained as an electrician, worked in jewellery sales, and ended up renting houses to students in Leeds. Along the way he married his wife, Jean, with whom he has three daughters.

His accent reveals his Polish roots, but in all other respects he feels British. While he acknowledges the issue of anti-Semitism, he says he has never experienced anti-Jewish prejudice in this country. "I'm very happy here in England," he smiles. "I've never been talked to wrongly by anybody."

Hersh has returned to Auschwitz many times. The first occasion, in 1980, was "terrible. I went to the gate, stopped, looked in and went away. It took me three times to get through, but I wanted to. I needed to." For decades, he didn't speak to anyone of his wartime experiences. "Now, I never stop talking, talking, talking," he laughs. (He will be recalling his experiences at the Holocaust Memorial Day commemoration on Monday; see right.)

A few years ago, his wife decided that Hersh should slow down a little. "She gave my cycle away, my roller blades, all the different things," he sighs. "Enough is enough, she says. I didn't like it, but I had no option!" He remains active, however, regularly visiting schools on education programmes. His book, A Detail of History, has sold 70,000 copies, with all the proceeds going to the National Holocaust Centre.

In 2009, the terrified orphan who arrived in Windermere in August 1945 was awarded an MBE for Voluntary Service to Holocaust Education. "I believe in helping people," he says. "Whatever I can do, I do, and I'm happy I can do it. I was lucky to come out alive. Very few did."

A WEEK TO REMEMBER

How television is marking National Holocaust Day and the 75th anniversary of the liberation of Auschwitz

Holocaust Memorial Day Monday BBC2
Huw Edwards hosts this annual ceremony of remembrance with music, readings, poetry as well as testimony from survivors, including Arek Hersh interviewed here. Among the participants are Rebecca Front (pictured), David Olusoga, Warwick Davis and brothers Sheku and Braimah Kanneh-Mason, who'll be performing Bloch's Prayer (Sheku is interviewed overleaf).

The ceremony honours all survivors of genocide, including those in Rwanda and Bosnia. This year's theme is Stand Together.

The Windermere Children: In Their Own Words Monday BBC4
A documentary companion to the BBC2 drama in which the now 90-plus-year-olds tell their stories of surviving the Nazi death camps, arriving at Windermere as refugees and creating a new life in the UK.

Belsen: Our Story Tuesday BBC2 Belsen, unlike Auschwitz, wasn't designed as a place of mass execution. There were no gas chambers, for instance. Yet, in the final stages of the war, barbaric neglect led to the deaths of more than 50,000 people, mostly through starvation and disease. The few who still survive tell their harrowing story, alongside footage of the British liberation of the camp.

Auschwitz Untold: in Colour Sunday More4
Restored and colourised archive footage provides a vivid new backdrop to this two-part documentary in which 16 people – including writers, doctors and a Roma resistance fighter – tell their stories of surviving the Holocaust.

COMING SOON

Holocaust Denial: a History with David Baddiel BBC2 It seems unthinkable that there's any scope to make a programme like this, but Baddiel finds that the voices of those who seek to deny the deaths of six million Jews are growing louder. Why is Holocaust denial on the increase and how best can it be countered?

My Family, the Holocaust and Me BBC1
Following his moving edition of Who Do You Think You Are? in 2018 exploring his own family links to the Holocaust, Rob Rinder follows other families in their search for answers about the fate of their relatives.

How will you #BigGardenBirdWatch?

25–27 January 2020

Enjoy an hour counting birds and help monitor our wildlife.

Thank you for taking part

1. Watch the birds in your garden or local park for one hour.
2. Only count the birds that land in your garden, or local park, not those flying over.
3. Count the most birds that land at any one time – not the total number you count over the hour. (Otherwise you could be counting the same bird more than once!)
4. Tell us what you saw. Submit your results even if you saw nothing. It is still very useful information!
5. Submit your results online by 11 February 2020 at: rspb.org.uk/birdwatch using the code BH13.
   It is quick, easy and the savings made on postage costs help us spend more on conservation. (However, if you are unable to do so, please complete and return this form to us, following the instructions below.*)

Sheku Kanneh-Mason may be the world's most famous cellist. But he has one unfulfilled ambition…

INTERVIEW BY ROSIE MILLARD

Sheku Kanneh-Mason is possibly the most modest MBE appointee I have ever met. He turns up fresh from an audition at the Royal Academy of Music, where he is still a student. "We have a lot of orchestral auditions," he says. Auditions? For the cellist who played in front of a global TV audience of 1.9 billion at Harry and Meghan's wedding? Oh, yes, he says. Anyway it was a blind audition, so he would have played his venerable Amati cello, made in 1610, behind a screen. Blind auditions are increasingly deployed by orchestras in order to cut unconscious bias and improve diversity, but here it presumably would have turned down the noise that has escorted Kanneh-Mason ever since he won BBC Young Musician of the Year in 2016, at the age of 17.

Since then, the honours have piled up; the MBE at the end of last year, a bus named after him in his home town of Nottingham, a top-selling debut album, two Brit awards, sofa space on TV chat shows. On Monday he is playing with his violinist brother Braimah at the Holocaust Day commemorations: "It's a huge honour. Music, war and Holocaust suffering are very closely intertwined." Posters advertising his latest album Elgar hail him as "the world's most famous cellist"; maybe he is. Anyway, this album will do little to dent that, since it includes his take on the Elgar Cello Concerto in E minor, one of the most beloved pieces in the repertoire and one made famous by his only serious rival for Most Famous Cellist, namely the late Jacqueline du Pré.

Is that why he attempted it? "Well, I think it is one of the most amazing pieces of writing for the cello, and I grew up listening to it. He seems in no way daunted about attempting the Everest of the cello world, and one scaled by such an international heroine. "Du Pré was a big inspiration for me. I think the thing I take most from her is her freeness of expression."

That's not all; the Decca album (which could be the first by a classical cellist to get a top ten slot in the UK album charts) also includes that other Elgar monster, an arrangement of Nimrod from the Enigma Variations. "Well, that was hard to take on, because some people think they know it. But when it comes to playing a piece that's very well known, the best thing to do is to get to know it yourself, and the music itself has many clues."

Not everyone is so convinced. The album got a pretty frosty reception from David Mellor, who certainly knows his way around the classical repertoire. "However well Kanneh-Mason plays, frankly, it's a mess," was the damning report from the former Culture secretary.

Is criticism hard to take when you're only 20? "People are always entitled to their opinion," says Kanneh-Mason easily. "The opinions I listen to mostly are the ones of my teacher. I have lessons every week and I'm constantly challenged. I have to trust what I instinctively feel about the music and trust the people around me. Of course, with music, which is very personal, you're never going to please everyone. And I think the only mistake you can make is to not try and be as expressive and meaningful as you can. To play neutrally doesn't exist, and so therefore you have to be very strong with your ideas." Take that, Mellor.

Kanneh-Mason is famously the third of seven children who all play classical music to a very high standard, and who have all been educated in the state sector. He is a passionate advocate of creative education within the national curriculum, although he acknowledges that it was a sustained parental push that enabled him to first find his life calling. "I feel very lucky that I was firstly exposed to great classical music recordings and live concerts and by having amazing teaching when I was very, very young. And I went to a school where the idea of wanting to spend my time dedicated towards music was supported."

STAR QUALITY
Sheku Kanneh-Mason with his treasured Amati cello and, above, grime star Stormzy

'I have lessons every week; I'm constantly challenged'

For Kanneh-Mason, who began learning the cello at the age of six and passed Grade 8 with the highest marks in the UK at the age of nine, music is one of the things that has to be laid down when you are a child. "I've benefited from having so much music education. And the thought that lots of people won't have something even close to that same level is a real shame." Early engagement in his view is the only way that the lack of diversity in orchestras is ever going to be properly tackled. "Diversity needs to start way, way before people are auditioning. If actual education is not invested in and supported then nothing will change."

He does his bit, working as an ambassador for London Music Masters, a charity that encourages classical music in state primaries across the capital. "I do a lot of going into schools, playing to children and helping with what they're doing. The thing I find most amazing about children is their curiosity. If they see me playing the cello they ask me amazing questions, because they listen without any preconceived ideas."

He acknowledges his wow factor has been turned up quite a bit after he played at the royal wedding in May 2018. Quite a lot of young children want to have selfies with him, it seems. Does he feel there is now a weight of expectation around him? Nope. "I just focus on day-to-day development of my personal goals." Does he have access to half a dozen cellos, and a bevy of staff to carry them for him? Er, no. He just has the Amati on permanent loan from an anonymous sponsor. "I don't leave it anywhere. It's a big responsibility playing an instrument that old and valuable but it deserves to be played."

He's as cool as they come. Even during the BBC contest that made his name he seems to have been practically horizontal. "When I was in the strings category final, my C string snapped one minute into the performance. So I stopped, took a bow, went off stage and changed my string." Weren't you in a state of meltdown? "No. It was kind of a shame to be interrupted as it was going well, but when you go off and come on again, you've already broken down the barrier between you and the audience. It's interesting."

Could things get much cooler for Kanneh-Mason? Apparently they might. "I'm definitely open to working with anyone who is a great musician. I would love to work with Stormzy. I really rate him as a musician. I've never met him, but I'd like to." Watch this space, I think. Then I take a selfie with him (above left).

Call of th

With grizzly bears for neighbours and 100 miles to the nearest shop, who would live here?

LOST IN THE FOREST
The remote home the six competing couples hope to win (circled)

SWEET HOME ALASKA
Duane and Rena Ose at the log house it took them nine years to build

MINUTES INTO THE first episode of new BBC2 series Win the Wilderness, Duane Ose sounds a warning. "If you don't love a challenge, then you don't belong out here," he says. Some would say that's an understatement, given that "here" is the heart of Alaska – 100 miles from the nearest road, in forest territory where there are far more bears than people.

Remote barely covers it. Yet it's the place that Duane and his wife Rena have called home for more than 30 years, the location of a unique three-storey house they painstakingly built from logs on a piece of land that Duane walked 15 days to find and then stake his claim to.

Creating that home has been an epic labour of love – but one that Duane and Rena, both now in their 70s and in failing health, are ready to leave behind. With their children unable to take on their legacy, they're looking for a couple "to carry on what we started", as Duane puts it.

"The house needs maintaining and, as God won't grant me another 100 years of youth, I am going to have to pass the buck to someone else," he says. "It's time for a new chapter."

It's perhaps in keeping with the couple's unorthodox approach to life that they have allowed a film crew – who got in touch initially, after reading about them in a newspaper, with a view to making a documentary – to help them write that chapter. The result is Win the Wilderness, a six-part series in which six couples compete to inherit Duane and Rena's home and way of life.

Along the way, and in order ultimately to win the property, they must face some of the same challenges that Duane and Rena did all those years ago to establish their fitness to cope in this beautiful but inhospitable landscape.

"You're not an Alaskan just because you live here," as Duane says. "To become an Alaskan you have to prove yourself."

BORN AND RAISED in Minnesota, Duane is a former army engineer who, by the 1980s, had started his own company selling and delivering concrete. Then, in 1982, he was invited by his second cousin to spend a summer with him in Alaska. He fell in love with its remote beauty, and after learning that the federal Homestead Act of 1862 still applied in that area – meaning that under certain conditions he could lay claim to a piece of land – decided to do just that.

And what a piece of land: a five-acre plot on a remote hilltop deep in the forest. He named it Ose Mountain, and set about building a home.

"I had no ties, other than family back in Minnesota. I wanted my own land and my own property," he recalls.

He was just in the nick of time. "Two days after I filed, the Act closed for ever more. I am the last to file in America," he reveals.

Four years later he was joined by Rena – with whom he had started corresponding after spotting her lonely hearts advert – having convinced her to leave her old life behind and join him.

It was a tough prospect: the couple lived in a very basic, 11ft by 9ft shelter for nine years while building their permanent home from 2,000 spruce trees felled, peeled and shaped by hand.

It's 100 miles from the nearest town – a tiny strip called Burbank – but both insist that the isolation has never bothered them. "It took me five minutes to get over the solitude – once the plane leaves and the sound disappears, it's time to go to work," says Duane.

Myriad challenges face any couple who take on this life – and not just the wildlife, although there's plenty of that. "I had two scary encounters with grizzly bears. Neither one was killed, but I was ready to," reveals Duane.

Survival depends on caution and knowledge. "Knowing what is bad water and what is good water. Making a fire, a shelter," says Duane. Equally vital is teamwork: "They've got to be able to work together," says Rena. "You have a good fight now and again to clear the air, but then you get on with what has to be done."

With Duane and Rena now resettled in Minnesota, the winners of this unique contest will actually own the wilderness home. But the BBC couldn't tell us whether there are conditions attached that affect any future sale. Regardless, the couple say they are sad to leave.

"Building this house has been a joy and an accomplishment," says Duane. "But this way," adds Rena, "we're giving it to somebody who we feel is worth it." ISOBEL JAMES

LIVING THE DREAM

The six British couples who want to make Alaska home...

TINA AND CHRIS Chris is a sales manager and Tina an industrial designer. They've been together for seven years, having met in California while they were both travelling – but as they've already visited 35 countries together, can they persuade Duane and Rena they're ready to settle down?

MATT AND RACHEL RAF engineer Matt and accountant Rachel are newlyweds – but their relationship is clearly built on solid ground as they have been together since they were young teenagers. Matt proposed after 12 years together, so they're likely to pass Rena's teamwork test.

MARK AND EMILY This pair of farmers based in Warwickshire, who have been together for eight years, have all the practical skills needed to live in the wilderness – but having farmed the same land all his life, is Mark truly able to leave his home and start afresh on the other side of the Atlantic?

BEE AND THEO Lifestyle vloggers Bee and Theo may find the lack of wi-fi a challenge – but as they have been together for 14 years and have already lived "off-grid" for five, they have their eyes open about the demands of self-sufficient living. Being pescatarians might make their diet a bit trickier...

JEROME AND LAURA Academics Jerome and Laura are perhaps outsiders, having only been together a year. Jerome is a university lecturer and Laura a "sustainability consultant", but turning theory into reality may prove too much of a shock to their adventurous spirits.

PETE AND JANE Midwife Jane and retired policeman Pete have long dreamt of living in a remote property in a stunning location. Their children are grown up and the couple have travelled widely since their retirement. Could this be the chance to make their dream come true?

Sport that unravels over hours and days creates unique drama

TIME, LADIES AND gentlemen, please. Yes, let's discuss the elastic concept of time, much loved by followers of Doctor Who. It will play a key role in two major sporting events this week: the fourth and final match of England's Test series in South Africa and, in tennis, the Australian Open, which – bushfire smoke permitting – continues in Melbourne.

In grand slam tennis, men play the best of five sets, instead of just three. Test matches take place over five days. We live in an era when attention spans are measured in seconds – so why do we voluntarily turn to sporting events that lasts hours and days longer for our pleasure and edification?

It can only be because this extended play brings its rewards. At Wimbledon last year, the men's singles final lasted three minutes under five hours, and all five sets were needed before Novak Djokovic beat Roger Federer. The Second Test in South Africa three weeks ago went to the last session of the fifth day: England won with half an hour to spare.

Both events were great sport – and not in spite of their duration, but because they took place over a long time. You can argue that such protracted contests are the very best of sport, the most thrilling and satisfying things it has to offer us.

It follows, then, that sports administrators are trying to change them. They have already done so in tennis: at Wimbledon, instead of playing on in the fifth set until they find a winner (John Isner famously beat Nicolas Mahut 70–68 in 2010), they have a tie-break at 12-all. The first of these in a Wimbledon final saw Djokovic win the fifth-set tie-break 7–3 last year. And in cricket the idea of trimming Test matches to four days is getting an airing (although for the time being five-dayers will remain).

I'm sure that sports administrators are all absolutely marvellous people, but they shouldn't be allowed to administer sport. That's because they believe that everything that makes more money is, by definition, better. They can't see the sport for the cash.

Time is required for the most searching examination of certain kinds of sporting brilliance. A novel is different to a short story; the same is true of the extended events in sport.

The five-day Test match format allowed England opener Dom Sibley to take over eight hours to score 133 not out in his team's second innings in the second Test against South Africa – which in turn made it possible for his team-mate Ben Stokes to launch his thrilling up-tempo 72. This combination gave England the time they needed to bowl South Africa out. South Africa resisted wonderfully: they didn't break until the match was almost over, when Stokes took the last three wickets.

GETTY

In the same way, the 2019 Wimbledon final saw alternating passages of excellence, Federer sometimes playing tennis in the way angels do on their days off; but Djokovic outlasted him. The extended time not only gave us great drama, but allowed the players to find the very best of themselves.

SURE, THE LONGER time-span can make for some dull bits, but shorter formats make for a great deal of very ordinary stuff. And remember that sport isn't supposed to be entertaining – for that you must turn to professional wrestling. Sport is about the search for victory and for excellence: and when that happens, the idea of mere entertainment seems hopelessly trivial.

Just as there are brilliant short stories and ho-hum novels, long sport is not by definition better than short sport – if it were, the 100m wouldn't be the blue riband event at the Olympics. But novels have more scope, and so does sport when played in a format that examines the players to their very marrow and forces them to seek – and find – the greatness that lies within them.

Ordinary hero

Paul Walter Hauser stars in Clint Eastwood's drama about a loner who saved thousands from a bomb

If there's a lesson from Clint Eastwood's new movie, Richard Jewell (in cinemas from 31 January), it's that appearances can be deceptive. That's true for its real-life title character, a loner security guard who saved thousands of lives after discovering a bomb during a concert to celebrate the 1996 Olympics in Atlanta. But it might also be true for Paul Walter Hauser, the actor who becomes Eastwood's latest – and perhaps unlikeliest – hero.

On a chilly winter's day, Hauser is ensconced in a London hotel, wearing a camel coat, jeans and lilac polo-neck. You might recall him from I, Tonya as the dim-bulb pal who aided Margot Robbie's ice-skater. Or as a white supremacist in Spike Lee's BlacKkKlansman. But for the most part, his "regular" appearance preserves his anonymity. "I look like a guy who works at Burger King-slash-still eats at Burger King!"

Hauser, 33, is not your typical leading man, compared to, say, Tom Hanks or Bradley Cooper, the stars of Sully and American Sniper – two other recent Eastwood films about real-life heroics. How did he cope with shouldering a movie? "By being blanketed in prayer from my friends and family – and I don't even say that in a silly way," he says. "I really did have people praying that the film would do well and I would maintain my composure."

Of course, it helps when you've got a master film-maker like Eastwood at the helm. Hauser's deep admiration for the actor/director – who turns 90 this May – is clear. "I think he's got a lot left in him. He takes good care of himself. He eats healthy. He doesn't overdrink. He doesn't abuse anything. He just keeps himself in great condition… the dude's gonna be making movies until he's gone, for sure."

As for Hauser, he has a sweet, self-deprecating nature. Big guy, bigger heart. Take his feelings towards Jewell's mother, Bobi (played in the film by Oscar-nominated Kathy Bates). At the LA premiere, they met again on the red carpet. "We started crying when we saw each other," he reveals, choking up. "Oh, man… sorry!" There's a long pause as he holds back tears. "Yeah, it's a little hard to talk about. That was so meaningful."

When they first met, Bobi told him how much he looked like her son (who died in 2007, aged 44, of complications relating to diabetes). Talk about a thumbs-up. "It means more than the approval of Clint or Warner Bros or Rotten Tomatoes or my family!" he says, earnestly. "Having her sign off on me playing her son… there isn't a word for how impactful that is."

The title protagonist's journey isn't just about his heroism but what came next, as the FBI, media and even local Atlanta resisaw a woman being accosted in Los Angeles. "I slammed my backpack at the guy's feet and gave him a look: 'You touch her, I'm gonna touch you.'"

Even more dramatically, he rescued a man whose wheelchair had rolled backwards onto train tracks. "I lifted him off the track. And then my fat ass couldn't get back up on the train platform!" With just a minute before the train was due, thankfully two people hauled him to safety. And then what did he do? Rip off his shirt and make a pillow for the blood-soaked man he'd just rescued. "I don't fear death and I love people," he shrugs.

HAUSER'S OWN BACKGROUND goes some way to explaining this. Born in Grand Rapids, Michigan, he had a father and brother who were both Lutheran ministers, though his upbringing was not as conservative as this might sound. "They wanted me to love Jesus and to love people, but as far as me watching R-rated films or being obsessed with WWE, they let me be me. They said, 'We couldn't change you if we wanted to. Be you, but make sure you're leading with love and being a person of character.'"

Reared on the movies of Christopher Guest, Chris Farley and Jim Carrey, Hauser knew in his early teens that he wanted to act and make people laugh. "I didn't know if I'd succeed but I knew I'd give it my blood, sweat and tears. I was always ready for this. It was always just a matter of how high the ceiling was going to be. I didn't think it would be this high."

Quite. He's just wrapped Cruella, a new live-action Disney movie based on 101 Dalmatians and starring Emma Stone. "It's got all the makings of a really special film," he promises. He's also got his second Spike Lee "joint" in the can, Da 5 Bloods, a Vietnam veteran saga featuring a "murderer's row" of talent, including Black Panther's Chadwick Boseman.

Whatever happens next, Hauser is enjoying the ride. "Life is fragile, man. This could all go away tomorrow. If somebody doesn't like a tweet or some random thing I do, or they take something out of context, I could get Richard Jewelled!" But he's not scared of exposure. "I'm cool with the media. I'm not cool with people who are bullies or unkind. So I'll keep a watchful eye on that, and hope I can maintain some dignity and love, even if it does get ugly."

dents turned against Jewell, claiming he planted the bomb. The title of the Vanity Fair article the film is based on, American Nightmare: the Ballad of Richard Jewell, encapsulates what this authority-respecting law-abider endured. "His naivety was cracked wide open," argues Hauser. "I think his whole life was upended; everything he thought was sacred, was tainted."

Hauser clearly sees Jewell as a kindred spirit. "We both have some serious chivalry, and I'm not patting myself on the back… I just mean to say that I love rising to the occasion for somebody else when it warrants it." He's not kidding, either: there was the time when he

Funny women

When I first bust a gut at Bridesmaids in 2011, the first creditably feminist-facing (if scatological and potty-mouthed) comedy from the laughter stable of sage-like mogul Judd Apatow, what was impossible to overlook was the potential of its cast. Melissa McCarthy was known to North American audiences for sitcom Mike & Molly, while Kristen Wiig and Maya Rudolph had cut their teeth on comedy factory Saturday Night Live. But it was Apatow who empowered these self-starting women and redirected the traffic.

Apatow's previous hits such as Anchorman, The 40-Year-Old Virgin and Superbad were all funny, but all male-led. With Bridesmaids, on the other hand, written by Wiig and Annie Mumolo, you had to run your finger way down the cast list to get to token bloke Chris O'Dowd, and by then you'd already fallen in love with raunchpot McCarthy (who ended up being Oscar-nominated). Although directed by a chap, Paul Feig, the film's signature is defiantly Wiig's and Mumolo's, as we follow bride-to-be Rudolph and her mismatched crew on their bumpy path to her big day.

Just as Becky Sharp, Elizabeth Bennet and Cathy Earnshaw are the characters we remember from 19th-century literature, so we love Wiig's singleton, the more capable Rose Byrne and, crucially, McCarthy's one-woman weather front. (She's the most successful of the whole new wave, finding more serious roles in the process – such as 2018's Can You Ever Forgive Me?, for which she secured another Oscar nomination.)

If the success of Bridesmaids meant more women making comedies about women without first seeking permission, then everybody wins. The definitive gross-out scene in the bridal shop after an ill-advised lunch helped it to a different kind of gross: $288 million.

FILM OF THE DAY

The Diary of Anne Frank ★★★★★

10.45am-1.30pm BBC2 U

WARTIME DRAMA Like many of my generation, I had The Diary of a Young Girl by Anne Frank read to me at school. Interested in the subject at a young age, I found the famous account of a Jewish family hiding out above a factory in occupied Holland compelling. "The air raids are getting worse," reads a 21-year-old Millie Perkins in her debut role as Anne, in this first screen adaptation from 1959. Shot in austere black-and-white, it's a prestige production from director George Stevens, whose previous movie was the Technicolor epic Giant. This couldn't be more different. I remember when I first saw it, almost jumping in unison with the family (led by Austrian actors Joseph Schildkraut and Gusti Huber) as they react to the sound of bombs. Shelley Winters won the best supporting actress Oscar, and awards were also handed out for the film's cinematography and art direction. Monday marks Holocaust Day, and you can also see The Boy in the Striped Pyjamas tomorrow on BBC2, while Night Will Fall and The Book Thief are showing over the weekend on More4. (US 1959, BW, HD)

The Princess Diaries ★★★

11.30am-1.50pm C5 U

COMEDY Julie Andrews projects her usual sweet-faced radiance as Queen Clarisse Renaldi of Genovia – and revives memories of her My Fair Lady on Broadway – in this pre-teen-focused variation on Pygmalion. The Eliza Doolittle character here is a clumsy San Francisco schoolgirl (Anne Hathaway in her breakthrough role) who finds out she's next in line to the throne of Genovia. Pretty Woman director Garry Marshall has another wish-fulfilling romance on his hands, but gives too much time to humdrum school scenes over Hathaways's royal dilemmas. Thank heavens for a performance of class from Andrews. TH (US 2001, HD)

Rio Bravo ★★★★★

1.55-4.45pm ITV4 PG

WESTERN Underrated on its release, this majestically paced western is one of the finest achievements of the genre and stands as a career-best for many of its participants. Originally intended by director Howard Hawks as a riposte to the liberal High Noon, it offers a definitive study of male camaraderie, particularly in the wordless opening sequence where John Wayne attempts to preserve the drunken Dean Martin's dignity. The casting is perfect (if you can believe Ricky Nelson as a gunslinger) and the sense of fun contagious. Superb Technicolor photography and a Dmitri Tiomkin score provide the icing on a very impressive cake. Wayne and Hawks return for Red River, showing tomorrow on ITV4. TS (US 1958, HD)

Ocean's Thirteen ★★

4.35-6.55pm C5 PG

CAPER Despite returning to Las Vegas where the series began, Steven Soderbergh's second sequel to 2001's Ocean's Eleven fails to rediscover the sheer insouciance of the original. George Clooney, Brad Pitt, Matt Damon and the rest of the cast reprise their roles as the charming conmen, who this time target the hi-tech casino of ruthless Vegas businessman Willy Bank (Al Pacino). The strength of the series was always its breezy enthusiasm, but here there's a chronic lack of fun. Only Ellen Barkin appears to be enjoying herself, shining in a comic role. JR (US 2007, edited for language, HD)

The Taming of the Shrew ★★★★

6.35-9.00pm Sony Classic U

COMEDY It was made at the height of one of their violent love affairs, and Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor breathe their own personal life into Shakespeare's not so politically correct tale of Petruchio subduing his shrewish wife. Directed by Franco Zeffirelli – who would return to the Bard with Romeo and Juliet (1968) and Hamlet (1990) – the film opts for colourful action over well-wrought articulation. With its ravishing photography, impressive sets and costumes, it's certainly a feast for the eyes, and benefits from the ebullient performances of one of moviedom's greatest couples. TH (US/It 1967)

Jack Ryan: Shadow Recruit ★★★

9.00-11.05pm C4 12

THRILLER This reboot for novelist Tom Clancy's CIA agent finds Chris Pine stepping into shoes formerly worn by Alec Baldwin, Harrison Ford and Ben Affleck, and presents Ryan as a rookie up against post-9/11 terror threats. Director Kenneth Branagh (who co-stars as a scenery-chewing Russian oligarch) pitches his high-octane film directly at fans of Bond and Bourne, giving a wide berth to the more geopolitical and cerebral elements of Clancy's stories. Pine is good value as the government penpusher who finds himself out of his depth as he is thrust into the front lines. TeS (US 2013, violence, swearing, HD)

As Good as It Gets ★★★★

11.15pm-2.10am Sony Movies 15

COMEDY DRAMA Jack Nicholson stars here as a homophobic bigot who lives alone, writes trashy novels for a living and has obsessive-compulsive disorder. However, the story is really about Helen Hunt, who plays that corniest of Hollywood characters: the lonely, waitress with a problem child. Hunt was offered the role when Holly Hunter turned it down and breathes life into the part, outshining her co-star and his trademark grouchy act. It's lazily directed by James L Brooks and far too long, but Hunt in particular is a revelation, and she and Nicholson were rewarded with Oscars for their work. AT (US 1997, violence, swearing, drug abuse)

Z for Zachariah ★★★

11.20pm-12.50am BBC2 12

DRAMA This thoughtful film asks what truly matters when all is lost. It follows a young woman (Margot Robbie) living in a remote valley after the apocalypse, whose world is changed when two strangers fetch up on her land. Robbie enjoys an intriguingly complicated relationship with the excellent Chiwetel Ejiofor, playing a man who values science over faith. Chris Pine isn't quite as convincing as a mysterious late arrival, but stirs tensions effectively. Post-apocalypse movies are ten a penny, but it's rare to find one like this, which actually has something to say. JL (Ice/Swi/US 2015, swearing, HD)

Elizabeth: the Golden Age ★★★★

11.50pm-1.50am C5 12

HISTORICAL DRAMA Almost ten years after her dazzling role in Elizabeth, Cate Blanchett shows that she is still a force to be reckoned with in this sequel. Queen Elizabeth I is now a little older and a lot wiser, as she faces conflict with Philip II of Spain (Jordi Mollà) and betrayal by her own cousin, Mary Stuart (Samantha Morton). It's only in her personal life that she's imprudent, flirting with Sir Walter Raleigh (Clive Owen). Director Shekhar Kapur cleverly makes the dilemma of the 16th-century monarch relevant today, as Elizabeth is forced to sacrifice love for duty. SP (UK/Fr 2007, violence, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

P Wonder ★★★★

4.25-6.30pm C4 PG

DRAMA Julia Roberts is Mom, Owen Wilson is Dad, and all seems well in the middle-class world of Brooklyn. They're walking their ten-year-old son Auggie (Jason Tremblay, whom you may remember from Room) to school for the first time. He's been taught at home until now, following a series of surgical procedures to help correct a facial condition he was born with. Mom is the one to vocalise what we're all thinking: "Dear God, please make them be nice to him." It doesn't work out that way. "Look at his face!" sneer some unkind bullies. Adapted from the 2012 children's novel by RJ Palacio, this is an "issue" movie that might have been made for afternoon TV. But with a welcome blast of smart, honest dialogue counteracting the misery, it emerges as a moving parable with a message for us all. (US 2017, violence, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?
The film was praised by some advocacy groups, while others criticised the fact it didn't feature an actor with a real craniofacial condition

Out of Africa ★★★★

11.45am-3.00pm 5Select PG

BIOPIC Or "Afreeka" as Meryl Streep would have it, using a bizarre Danish accent that manages to overshadow her entire performance as awkward, free-spirited writer and farmer Karen Blixen. This is a beautifully filmed movie, with director Sydney Pollack propelling the camera across a lush Kenyan landscape that teems with all manner of exotic beasts. The other exotic beasts – Streep, Klaus Maria Brandauer as her husband and Robert Redford as her adventurer lover – overact on a level to match the magnificence of the backdrop. But what the movie lacks in emotional realism, it makes up for in sheer epic audacity. SH (US 1985, may be edited for violence)

Never Been Kissed ★★★

2.20-4.25pm C4 12

ROMANTIC COMEDY Drew Barrymore does what she does best – cute, funny romance – in this simple teen comedy. She plays a bumbling young copy editor on the Chicago Sun-Times who tries out as a reporter when she's sent under cover to a high school to find out what students get up to nowadays. It gives her the chance to rewrite her own painful school memories – she was the class nerd – and get that first memorable kiss she never had. She also falls for English teacher Michael Vartan, which sets off a rather predictable chain of events. Barrymore gives a captivating performance, while David Arquette is lots of fun as her slightly odd brother. JB (US 1999, may be edited for content, HD)

Road to Morocco ★★★★

2.50-4.35pm Sony Classic U

COMEDY "Like Webster's Dictionary, we're Morocco-bound," sing Bob Hope and Bing Crosby in arguably one of the best – and certainly the funniest – of their zany Road series for Paramount. There's much to cherish here: Dorothy Lamour and Moonlight Becomes You; Anthony Quinn as a villainous Arab; the utterly delectable Dona Drake as a slave girl; and, especially, the talking camels. These comedies may seem dated now – and certainly they remain sadly and stubbornly unfashionable – but for sheer inventiveness and innate good humour they're hard to beat. And in these postmodern times, they're simply full of surreal cinematic in-jokes. Not just for 1940s nostalgics. TS (US 1942, BW)

Alice in Wonderland ★★

3.15-5.20pm C5 PG

FANTASY Tim Burton tackling the nonsense prose of Lewis Carroll would seem a perfect match, something the visionary director could do in his sleep – which is what this oddly conventional and ponderous "re-imagined" offering often induces. It's the second journey to "Underland" for the now teenage Alice (Mia Wasikowska), where she again encounters familiar characters such as the Mad Hatter (Johnny Depp), Tweedledum and Tweedledee (both played by Matt Lucas), and the Cheshire Cat (voiced by Stephen Fry). Burton's trademark quirkiness is in full evidence in the trippy, acid-coloured excursion through Carroll's literary landscapes, but the film's tone is as uncertain as Alice's decision-making. AJ (US 2010, HD)

Guardians of the Galaxy Vol 2 ★★★★

6.20-9.00pm ITV2 12

SCI-FI Three years after turning bottom-tier comic-book characters into one of the biggest cinematic successes Marvel Studios has ever seen, writer/director James Gunn repeats the trick with this funny and surprisingly soulful sequel. Battling foes through a series of imaginative action set pieces, the spacefaring Guardians must overcome their differences to save the universe, while Star-Lord (Chris Pratt) finally meets his enigmatic alien father Ego (Kurt Russell). There's a few flat gags and dodgy new characters, but other than that it's a galactic triumph. HF (US 2017, violence, swearing, HD)

Signs ★★★

6.55-9.00pm Sony Movies 12

SCI-FI The Sixth Sense writer/director M Night Shyamalan once again deals with extraordinary events from an intimate perspective. Mel Gibson stars as a Pennsylvania farmer who discovers crop circles in his wheat field. This, combined with other inexplicable events, leads the reluctant hero and his family to believe that an alien invasion is imminent. Credible performances from Gibson and Joaquin Phoenix (as his brother) combine with a spooky ambience to lead us into what should have been an enthralling final act. Sadly, it's spoilt by mawkish sentimentality and a ludicrously melodramatic climax. Showing in a double bill with Shyamalan's Unbreakable. JC (US 2002, violence, some swearing)

An Officer and a Gentleman ★★★

10.00pm-12.15am C5 15

ROMANTIC DRAMA Hugely popular in its day and appealing to the incurable romantic in all of us, this is a highly manipulative mixture of "boot camp is good for you" and "every girl loves a man in uniform". More sophisticated thoughts on human relationships form no part of Taylor Hackford's glossy hymn to overcoming a trailer-park background. Richard Gere looks a treat in his pristine white togs, and gives a performance more wooden than a wardrobe, but who cares! Not even the combined talents of Debra Winger and an Oscar-winning Louis Gossett Jr can turn this one into a great movie, but if you're in the mood for a wallow, it's perfect. SH (US 1982, violence, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

The Boy in the Striped Pyjamas ★★★

11.00pm-12.30am BBC2 12

WARTIME DRAMA Childish innocence provides stark contrast to the darkest depravities of Nazism in this affecting adaptation of John Boyne's bestselling novel. The film follows Bruno (Asa Butterfield), an eight-year-old boy living in Berlin, who is uprooted with his family to the countryside. There, he mistakes the nearby concentration camp for a farm and, through the barbed wire, befriends another little boy (Jack Scanlon) wearing striped pyjamas. The crushing inevitability of what the children don't know is heartbreaking, their naivety boldly underlining the unfathomable nature of the crimes surrounding them. Available for 30 days on iPlayer. SP (UK/US 2008, violence, HD)

Now You See Me ★★★

12 midnight-2.05am C4 12

CAPER This fast-paced movie features a quartet of flashy Las Vegas magicians, including Jesse Eisenberg and Woody Harrelson, who use their elaborate stage illusions as a front for a series of audacious bank robberies. As they boldly shower audiences with cash, FBI agent Mark Ruffalo enlists the help of magic specialist Morgan Freeman to thwart the modern-day Robin Hoods. It's a likeable but light tale, and the gaudy Vegas setting and snappy dialogue recalls the Ocean's Eleven franchise, with the conjurer element offering an intriguing twist. TeS (US 2013, some violence, swearing, sexual references, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

Terminator 2: Judgment Day ★★★★★

10.00pm-12.50am ITV4 15

SCI-FI The hard-wearing dystopian Terminator franchise boasts at least two modern classics, one decent sequel and a reboot that was better than it ought to have been. Directed and co-written by James Cameron, Terminator 2 is an exhibition of intelligent, multiplex-pleasing action; a high watermark for expensive blockbusters. Cameron's masterstroke is flipping Arnold Schwarzenegger from villainous 'bot to the sequel's saviour. Edward Furlong's smart-mouthed relationship with his mechanical protector gives the story its humorous backbone. And those shape-shifting special effects of Robert Patrick's T-1000 terminator were cutting edge in their day. (US 1991, violence, swearing, nudity, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?
The sound designer used the combined noise of two cannons to create a suitably explosive effect for Arnie's shotgun

P Affairs of a Rogue ★★★

2.25-4.20pm Sony Classic

DRAMA Cecil Parker might strike some as a left-field choice for a dandyish Prince Regent, but he's both cunning and vain in this melodrama. George wants to marry off his daughter, Princess Charlotte (Joan Hopkins), to the Prince of Orange. But she prefers to follow her heart with Leopold of Saxe-Coburg (Jean-Pierre Aumont). Director Alberto Cavalcanti prevents things from becoming too mawkish by emphasising the witty screenplay and the elegant set design and cinematography. DP (UK 1948, BW)

Mission: Impossible 2 ★★★★

9.00-11.20pm Sky1 15

ACTION Director John Woo here creates a sequel that's as different from the first movie as it is superior to it, replacing the tired spy shenanigans of the original TV series with slick, slow-motion mayhem. Admittedly, there's a distinct shortage of action in the first hour, as Tom Cruise's agent woos lady thief Thandie Newton before heading Down Under to stop bad guy Dougray Scott from unleashing a killer virus. But around the halfway mark, Woo cranks up the pace, bombarding the viewer with hi-tech lab raids, jaw-dropping motorbike stunts and balletic martial arts moves. If it's an adrenaline fix you're after, look no further. NS (US 2000, violence, swearing, HD)

P Braven ★★★

9.00-10.50pm Sony Movies 15

ACTION Logger Jason Momoa and his father find themselves in a wilderness stand-off with drug dealers in this tough action thriller. After a first act that establishes the characters, we are thrown into a modestly assembled face-off that always remains the right side of believable. While the dialogue is shaky and certain plot points obvious, the film makes a virtue of its impressive action scenes. Despite being given little to work with, Momoa's star quality shines through, while Garret Dillahunt is diabolical in all the right ways as the lead villain. JL (Can 2018, violence, swearing)

Scary Movie ★★★

10.00-11.50pm 5STAR 18

HORROR SPOOF Director Keenen Ivory Wayans's lampooning of 1990s teenage horror movies (including Scream and The Blair Witch Project) might seems a bit of a redundant exercise when you consider that Scream was itself a dig at the genre. Luckily, Wayans and family (among the writers are his brothers Shawn and Marlon, who also star) get some good laughs in along the way. The film includes in-jokes and send-ups of Dawson's Creek and I Know What You Did Last Summer, plus a superb skit on The Matrix that will have fans chuckling. JB (US 2000, violence, swearing, sex scenes, drug abuse, HD)

Defence of the Realm ★★★★

10.00pm-12 midnight
Talking Pictures TV PG

THRILLER The role of the sozzled veteran reporter who for once finds himself involved in a meaningful story is brought wonderfully to life here by Denholm Elliott, as he attempts to clear the name of an MP who's forced to resign after a sex scandal. Gabriel Byrne, as Elliott's ambitious young colleague, is less effective, but co-star Greta Scacchi proves a worthy accomplice. This unsettling movie proves the truth of the maxim that all governments are up to no good. TH (UK 1985)

P Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles ★★★

9.00-11.00pm Film4 12

ADVENTURE Director Jonathan Liebesman's "Turtle Recall" origin story is an entertaining and smooth ride. Frustrated TV news reporter Megan Fox discovers the existence of the four half-shelled heroes, and realises her connection via her late researcher father's experiments. The movie strikes a fluid balance between pop-culture banter, cartoon fisticuffs and family friendliness, and the grit of the source material peeps through in the action sequences. Alan Jones (US 2014, some violence, swearing, HD)

Walk, Don't Run ★★★

6.40-9.00pm Sony Classic U

ROMANTIC COMEDY Cary Grant is as magically urbane as ever in his final movie, but, sadly, leaves the romance to the youngsters. It's a so-so comedy set during the 1964 Tokyo Olympic Games, with Samantha Eggar as the embassy secretary with whom British industrialist Grant lodges, and Jim Hutton as a member of the American Olympic squad. A remake of the 1943 film The More the Merrier, it's lower on laughs but remains enjoyable thanks to Grant's effortless charm as the matchmaker. TH (US 1966)

FILM OF THE DAY

Separate Tables ★★★★

4.40-6.45pm Sony Classic PG

DRAMA A pair of one-act plays by august British playwright Terence Rattigan forms the basis of this hotel-set exploration of loneliness. Table by the Window and Table Number Seven, collectively known as Separate Tables, premiered in London in 1954. They were filmed with American dollars four years later, rather confirming the 1950s as a fruitful decade for torrid, buttoned-up melodrama on stage and screen. Neither play is a bag of laughs, but director Delbert Mann (Marty) gleans fine performances from an Oscar-winning David Niven and co-producer Burt Lancaster: the former playing a major accused of sexual impropriety; the latter a former lover of the cool, manipulative Rita Hayworth. Cleverly cut together, the two plays work as one – and won another of its stars an Oscar: best supporting actress for Wendy Hiller. (US 1958, BW)

DID YOU KNOW?

Man of Aran ★★★ 11.30am-1.10pm Talking Pictures TV U

DOCUMENTARY Having virtually pioneered the feature documentary with Nanook of the North (1922), Robert Flaherty unintentionally highlighted its shortcomings with this poetic realist re-creation of a bygone way of life presented as contemporary fact. Keen to depict shark hunting off the Irish coast, Flaherty spent a year on Aran selecting photogenic locals and teaching them techniques that had not been used for generations, thus violating the documentarist's code to capture, not mould, the truth. However, there's no denying the dramatic and visual power of the titanic struggle on the cruel sea. DP (UK 1934, BW)

Evolution ★★★

7.05-9.00pm Sony Movies PG

SCI-FI COMEDY This amiably daft film was pitched as Ghost Busters (an earlier smash for director Ivan Reitman) meets Men in Black. While it shares those films' laid-back performances, tongue-in-cheek approach and cute special-effects creations, it lacks some of their wit and sparkle, and there's a little too much reliance on obvious scatological humour. Fortunately, its stars David Duchovny, Orlando Jones, Seann William Scott and Julianne Moore lay on the comic charm, and there's an entertainingly mad menagerie of digital creatures. JC (US 2001, violence, swearing)

Waterworld ★★★★

10.00pm-12.40am ITV4 12

ADVENTURE The making of this Mad Max on jet skis was beset with nightmarish problems, but the film emerged as a spectacular sci-fi fantasy. In the far future, the polar icecaps have melted, covering the planet in water. Hunting for the mythical Dryland, enigmatic loner Mariner (Kevin Costner) offers hope to Helen (Jeanne Tripplehorn) and Enola (Tina Majorino), victims of bandits led by the manic Deacon (Dennis Hopper). There are plenty of comic-book heroics and stunts, and Costner gives a fine turn as the half man/half fish. AJ (US 1995, violence, swearing, brief nudity, HD)

P Daphne ★★★

10.50pm-12.35am Film4 15

DRAMA Director Peter Mackie Burns's low-budget debut feature is nicely made and played, if tricky to get a handle on. Emily Beecham (soon to be seen in cinemas in Little Joe) is magnetic as the title character, a struggling young woman unable to connect with anyone. But her bubble is burst when she witnesses a violent event. Daphne isn't very likeable, and the film is more slice-of-life than structured narrative. Go with it, though, and this smart British drama will reward the effort. DA (UK 2017, swearing, sex scene, drug abuse, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

Snowpiercer ★★★★

9.00-11.35pm Film4 15

SCI-FI DRAMA South Korean showman Bong Joon-ho is tipped for Oscar glory thanks to bravura black comedy Parasite, which takes him out of festival circuit notoriety and into the major league. Snowpiercer, Bong's fifth film as director and his first predominantly in English, is a post-apocalyptic sci-fi fable, in which a train constantly circumnavigates a ravaged, snowbound world. It's a bracing metaphor for society, with the lower orders (led by Chris Evans and Jamie Bell) condemned to the rear carriages of the train while the upper classes luxuriate up front. But revolution is brewing... The pace is relentless and elements of Soylent Green are disgustingly conveyed, with caps doffed to the game Tilda Swinton, John Hurt and Ed Harris. (SKor/US/Fr/CzRep 2013, violence, swearing, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?
Bong Joon-ho thought Chris Evans was too buff for his malnourished character, so hid the star's physique with costume and make-up

Earth Girls Are Easy ★★★★

6.50-9.00pm Sony Classic PG

MUSICAL SATIRE In this enormously entertaining comedy, three randy aliens crash-land in LA and are given a guided tour through its craziness by two beautician Valley Girls. Geena Davis and Julie Brown, an American cult singer/comedian whose songs inspired this "Martian Beach Party", are terrific in a popcorn movie full of bitchy one-liners and frothy fantasy. There's no attempt at a reality check in this hairsprayed Lost in Space, just breezy glitz, garish glamour and Grease-type songs in a contemporary trash setting. AJ (US 1988, some swearing)

The Hunger Games: Mockingjay Part 1 ★★★★ 9.00-11.25pm E4 12

ACTION The hidden dissidents of Panem's District 13 prepare to take on the Capitol in the series' penultimate instalment, with Katniss (Jennifer Lawrence) the reluctant face of the revolution and Peeta (Josh Hutcherson) still a pawn of President Snow (Donald Sutherland). While this can feel a little like a bridging film, Lawrence delivers complexity and conviction in her role. It's crammed with well-drawn characters and clever ideas, meaning the franchise remains as robust and rule-breaking as its idiosyncratic heroine. EAS (US 2014, some violence, HD)

P Steven Gerrard: Make Us Dream ★★★★ 9.00-11.15pm ITV4 15

DOCUMENTARY Liverpool fans should feel a twinge of guilt while watching this intimate profile of Steven Gerrard. By placing all their hopes of ending the long wait for a Premier League title on their No 8 and captain, they imposed an intolerable physical and psychological burden that almost broke his body and spirit. This film blends poignant archive footage with frank voiceover commentary to tell Gerrard's story, from gifted youngster to hero of his home-town team, with the transfer saga following the 2005 Champions League miracle in Istanbul a pivotal part of the story. DP (UK 2018, swearing, HD)

Revolutionary Road ★★★

10.00-11.50pm BBC4 15

PERIOD DRAMA In this adaptation of Richard Yates's acclaimed novel, Titanic lovers Leonardo DiCaprio and Kate Winslet portray a jaded couple struggling to reconcile their youthful dreams with the humdrum reality of life in 1950s suburbia. It's a return to familiar territory for director Sam Mendes (Winslet's then husband), who also went behind the picket fence in American Beauty. The dialogue often feels stagey, but Winslet and DiCaprio get beyond the bluster of their roles to prove that, however special we think we are, we all share the same heartaches. SP (US/UK 2008, swearing, a sex scene, brief nudity, HD)

Tom Jones ★★★★

9.00-11.40pm Sony Classic PG

DID YOU KNOW? During one take, Hugh Griffith whipped Albert Finney with a riding crop, drawing blood; in return, Finney punched him in the mouth

COMEDY ADVENTURE Woodfall Films spearheaded the British kitchen-sink revolution in the 1950s and 60s. But if one film seemed to change the face of home-grown product it was the Oscar-winning Tom Jones. In 1963, the company cast aside monochrome melodrama to create a full-colour costume epic under director Tony Richardson. Adapted by John Osborne from Henry Fielding's 18th-century romp, the film generated $20 million on release, becoming the third-biggest film in the UK that year. It remains iconic, not least for Albert Finney and Joyce Redman's lusty polishing-off of a meal of lobster, chicken, pears and oysters. As long as you don't mind pigs being pushed about, it has aged rather well. (UK 1963, nudity)

The Three Musketeers ★★★★

12.35-2.45pm Film4 U

ADVENTURE This sparkling version of the Alexandre Dumas classic restages the famous duel between the all-for-one swordsmen and the duplicitous pairing of Cardinal Richelieu and his accomplice, Milady. Michael York gives D'Artagnan a clever twist of yokel to contrast him with his more worldly companions, who are played with wit and gusto by Oliver Reed, Richard Chamberlain and Frank Finlay. Showing in a double bill with 1974 sequel The Four Musketeers. DP (UK/Sp/Pan 1973, edited for violence, HD)

V for Vendetta ★★★

9.00-11.40pm Sony Movies 15

THRILLER Adapted from the graphic novel by Alan Moore, this futuristic thriller is set in a totalitarian Britain where an enigmatically masked vigilante called V (Hugo Weaving) ignites a revolution with the help of unlikely ally Evey (Natalie Portman). It's by turns an audaciously risk-taking and clunky curio, featuring banned Muslim texts, avian flu, Tube-bomb terrorism and pro-gay manifestos, and it has an oddly empty atmosphere reminiscent of TV's The Avengers. Though overly serious, the film delivers a stunningly executed finale. AJ (UK/Ger 2005, violence, swearing)

Blood from the Mummy's Tomb ★★★

10.00-11.50pm Talking Pictures TV 15

HORROR Statuesque Valerie Leon is possessed by the spirit of an ancient Egyptian queen in this cult Hammer horror based on Bram Stoker's The Jewel of Seven Stars. With hardly a bandage in sight, director Seth Holt tried to radically rethink the mummy genre, and largely succeeds in creating a fascinating fantasy with a uniquely menacing atmosphere dripping in delicious irony. Sadly, Holt died during shooting; Hammer boss Michael Carreras took over and the film is not as interesting as it should have been. AJ (UK 1971, violence)

Romeo & Juliet ★★

11.55pm-1.45am BBC2 PG

ROMANTIC TRAGEDY Shakespeare's classic tale of star-crossed lovers from feuding families is given a new treatment from director Carlo Carlei, this time with Downton Abbey's Julian Fellowes putting his own spin on the script. Douglas Booth makes a decent Romeo, but Hailee Steinfeld is something of a disappointment as Juliet, and the movie as a whole remains a decidedly unremarkable affair. DA (UK/US 2012, some violence, HD)

ALISON GRAHAM

Meeting a legend

Tony Garnett, the man behind Kes and Cathy Come Home, was my hero, says Alison Graham

I loved Tony Garnett, who has died aged 83, but he could be infuriating. I went to interview him about a drama I can now barely remember, called Attachments. (I've just had to look it up and still can't bring it properly to mind.)

It was about the lives and loves of a group of employees at an internet start-up (this was in 2000, so it was fairly cutting-edge) and Tony Garnett was an executive producer. I think it had its own website in real life, which doesn't sound remotely questing now, but back then was a big deal.

'I was dead nervous, assuming he'd be humourless and scary'

But when I reached Garnett's office, he told me, very politely in that lovely soft Brummie accent, that he wasn't going to discuss the show with me, audiences would seek it out themselves without my, or his, help. Unfortunately, they didn't, Attachments quietly expired.

That was Tony Garnett: he did things his way and I would never fault him for that. If anyone else had agreed to be interviewed by me then refused to say anything, I would not be so forgiving, believe me. I would have words, all of them choice.

I'd hero-worshipped Tony Garnett since I was a child growing up in the north, when Kes came out. As an adult I realise that Kes, the love story between a lonely lad and his kestrel, probably accounted for the fact that people in the south would forever assume northern kids were issued with kestrels at birth and we all were dead miserable and lived in horrible houses. But back then, I loved it. I love it so much I've watched it just once and can never watch it again. It's too heart-breaking.

I feel the same way about Cathy Come Home, his and his long-time collaborator director Ken Loach's 1966 polemic about homelessness, voted by RT readers in 1998 as the best drama of all time. It you haven't seen it, please, find it. Or at least find online the final scene as four social workers march up to homeless, destitute Cathy (Carol White) at a railway station and forcibly remove her screaming children. It will get you, hard.

Tony Garnett shaped my television viewing probably more than anyone else. He made Law and Order, which to a kid weaned on blandly good cops in Z Cars and Softly Softly was like a truth-taser. I was enthralled, and it's the first proper drama I can remember watching as a late-teen grown-up as I started my working life as a journalist.

Law and Order was written by GF Newman, who went on to create Judge John Deed, but never mind that now. Garnett was the producer. There were four films, each focusing on different aspects of the legal system (this was in 1978). Honestly, I can still recall my gasps of shock, it was so brutally raw.

So when the time came, decades later in 1998, for me to interview (for the first time) Garnett about his new, highly controversial, police series, The Cops, I was dead nervous. I assumed he'd be humourless, rude, challenging and scary. Well, he wasn't. He was great. We got on so well, he even sent me a little note afterwards to thank me for the feature I eventually wrote. To my shame, I lost it, probably during an office move, but it was pinned on my wall for years.

Every generation needs a Tony Garnett. Gosh, I was lucky.

HOW TO ENLIVEN AN INTERVIEW

Veteran reporter Tom Mangold's excellent documentary Keeler, Profumo, Ward and Me (on BBC2 this Sunday after the final episode of BBC1's dramatisation of the scandal, The Trial of Christine Keeler) contains many jaw-dropping moments. But I laughed at a clip from a TV interview Lord Hailsham did with, I think, Bob McKenzie, of BBC Election Night swingometer fame.

Hailsham, a pillar of the establishment, can't control his contempt when McKenzie asks if the Profumo affair imperilled national security. "Of course there was a security problem, don't be silly! Be sensible!"

Imagine how lively such bluster would make contemporary interviews with politicians.

4 Atlantic: a Year in the Wild

Available now

David Suchet's deep thespian vowels give this nature series, first shown on Channel 5 in 2019, a luxurious warmth – just as well, since the magnificent photography captures the bleak majesty of life in and around the Atlantic Ocean. Orca, seals, red deer and gannets are among the stars of a series that often shows animals surviving in harsh conditions.

NETFLIX

GRAND PERIOD DRAMA

5 The Bonfire of Destiny

Available now

A handsome but gritty French period drama, inspired by real events that took place in 1897: a conflagration in the building hosting a grand charity bazaar claimed the lives of 126 Parisians, most of them aristocratic women. That catastrophe takes up the first episode and it's a spectacular set piece, but the drama's about what comes next for the survivors – who have a chance of a new life.

NEW EURO COMEDY

6 The Neighbor

Available now

Slacker comedy with a superhero twist, from Spain: the lives of a few nerdy 20-somethings, living with or next to each other in a boring block of flats, are somewhat enhanced when one of them gains numerous new abilities after witnessing the crash landing of an alien spacecraft. But can he harness his powers without just breaking stuff? The visual gags are laugh-out-loud funny.

CARTOON ADVENTURES

7 Kipo and the Age of Wonderbeasts

Available now

A sparky, mildly trippy animated series from Dreamworks, set in a future where almost all humans live underground. When a girl is washed up onto the surface by mistake, she finds a dystopia overrun by giant, mutated animals, some of which are friendly. With her new pal Mandu the four-eyed pig, can Kip find her way home and maybe make friends on the way? Wry millennial humour offsets the animation's colourful creations.

BBC iPLAYER

COMEDY BOX SET

8 King Gary

Available now

The whole series of Tom Davis's lovable sitcom is available to binge: if it's true that we don't yet have a broad, heartfelt comedy about ordinary suburban people that can replace Gavin & Stacey, this is not too far off. Davis is a strutting geezer whose efforts to be the alpha male in his street are forever foiled by his own vanity and ineptitude. Around him are a gallery of solidly observed, very well performed characters.

DOCUMENTARY GOLD

9 The Last Climb

Available now

A cracking documentary about Eric Jones, one of the most famous exponents of "solo climbing": that is, going up a cliff face on your own with no ropes. Ahead of a swansong in the Dolomites at the age of 82, Jones looks back on exploits including scaling the North Face of the Eiger and, extraordinarily, climbing Cemetery Gates in Snowdonia, live on ITV's World of Sport in 1982. But can he complete one more feat?

CRIMINAL JUSTICE, UP CLOSE

10 The Disappearance of Margaret Fleming

Available now

Cameras were inside Glasgow High Court last year for the trial of Edward Cairney and Avril Jones, accused of killing the woman they were meant to be caring for. As well as capturing the ebb and flow of proceedings – the work of defence counsel in identifying weak evidence is fascinating – a bleak mystery story is told by this steely two-parter about a vulnerable woman who never got the help she needed.

GET AWAY!

11 Earth's Tropical Islands

Available now

A handsomely filmed natural history three-parter, narrated by David Harewood and offering a splash of colour for a January evening as it tours around Madagascar, Borneo and Hawaii. Seasoned wildlife-watchers will know that remote islands form unique ecosystems, which means unusual, eccentric species. There are loads of them here, crisply photographed.

ALL 4

CATCH UP, QUICK

12 Home

Available now

Get up to speed, ahead of the imminent second series, with one of the sleeper comedy hits of last year. Writer/star Rufus Jones and the always superb Rebekah Staton (above left) play a middle-class, Home Counties couple who accidentally welcome an illegal Syrian immigrant into their household. Humane, thoughtful and politically pointed, its breakout star was Youssef Kerkour (above right), whom you might have seen recently in Dracula.

TALKING POINT

13 Meat the Family

Available now

Chiming with this year's bigger-than-ever craze for "Veganuary" is a reality series that could well change a few habits and minds. Families who eat meat participate in an experiment where they welcome new pets to their back gardens: pigs for a household that eats a lot of bacon, chickens for a clan of Nando's fans etc. Beyond the question of whether they can still stomach the relevant meat are hard facts about meat production, simply and accessibly presented.

BRITBOX

REMEMBER THIS?

14 Cradle to Grave

Available now

Peter Kay was a big "get" for the lead role in this 2015 comedy, but you can see why he went for it: based on Danny Baker's memoirs, it's a likeable, retro affair set in 1970s London. The focus is on Baker's dad Spud (Kay), a docker whose constant money-making schemes are the bane of the lives of his wife (Lucy Speed, above right) and kids. Baker co-wrote it with multiple award-winner Jeff Pope and you can tell: the funny reminiscences are forged into sturdy sitcom shapes.

A SHERIDAN SMITH CLASSIC

15 The Moorside

Available from 23 January

This drama is Sheridan Smith at her peak. She often plays real people, drawing out aspects of them that received wisdom has overlooked: here that's not so much the individual she portrays as a whole community. The true story is the disappearance in 2008 of Dewsbury girl Shannon Matthews, which led to intense media scrutiny of the locals – including Julie Bushby, who led the campaign to find Shannon and refused to betray her friends when the truth came out.

SATURDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

ON TARGET Brentford's Ollie Watkins and Leicester's Jamie Vardy

The Greatest Dancer

6.30pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT Concentrating on the dancers is difficult this week owing to the distraction Todrick Hall is toting on his shoulder – a bizarre Basil Brush-esque fluffy fox stitched onto his suit. One of the performances is almost as surreal: a historical dance group that leads presenter Alesha Dixon to comment: "I think this might be the most bizarre thing I've seen on The Greatest Dancer."

After the last auditions take place, the second half of tonight's episode sees the dance captains fighting over which 12 acts they're taking through to the live shows, which start next week. It's hard to tell where the angst for the cameras ends and genuine testiness between the captain begins. FRANCES TAYLOR

The Masked Singer

7.00pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT There's so much that's wrong with The Masked Singer: the judges are irritating, presenter Joel Dommett isn't the best – bless him – and many of the guesses as to who the singers could be are just plain daft. Could it be Olivia Colman inside the Queen Bee costume? Well, no, obviously not.

And yet this has become one of TV's most talked-about shows. Admittedly it's great fun trying to work out who could be inside those costumes – and as the competition intensifies, so does the fervour regarding who's behind the masks. FT

Digging Up Britain's Past

7.00pm Channel 5

HISTORY The Green at Worsley, near Manchester, is a charming spot: mock-Tudor houses overlook a patch of trees and lawn. But 250 years ago, things were very different. This was where the celebrated Bridgewater Canal began, and helped kickstart the Industrial Revolution. Alex Langlands and Raksha Dave learn more about the history of the canal and how life changed for the local population, as an archaeological dig uncovers the original works.

Over on Channel 4 at 8pm, Tori Herridge and her Bone Detectives colleagues try to make sense of a tangle of Anglo-Saxon bones found near Andover. GILL CRAWFORD

PICK OF THE DAY FA Cup Football from 12.15pm BBC1*, 5.00pm* BT Sport 1

SPORT Fourth-round weekend continues with a battle between two of England's sharpest shooters in Brentford v Leicester City (k/o 12.45pm BBC1). The Championship high flyers boast one of the league's top scorers in Ollie Watkins, while Leicester's Jamie Vardy leads the pack in the Premier League. Vardy is yet to appear in the FA Cup this season, but with Leicester's title hopes all but extinguished, the Foxes will be keen to pick up some silverware elsewhere – and Vardy, though nearly a decade older than Watkins, remains their danger man.

Later, it's Hull City v Chelsea (k/o 5.30pm, BT Sport 1), while tomorrow brings three more fixtures, including the possibility of a giant-killing for the ages in Shrewsbury v Liverpool (k/o 5pm, BBC1). Finally, it's Bournemouth v Arsenal (k/o 8pm BT Sport 1) on Monday – will Eddie Howe's league strugglers bow out? HANNAH SHADDOCK

SATURDAY NIGHT'S ALL RIGHT

Channel 5's history documentaries have become a place of refuge for those seeking sanctuary from the ubiquitous Saturday-evening entertainment shows. And the good news is: there are more to come. Victorian Britain on Film will chart everyday life in that era, Trains Which Changed the World looks at the influence of the railways from the industrial revolution to the commuter age, while The British Steam Museum covers a year in the life of Bressingham Steam and Gardens.

"Saturday night history on Channel 5 is proving a great antidote to the traditional shiny-floor shows," says factual commissioning editor Lucy Willis. "Series such as Tony Robinson's History of Britain and Bettany Hughes's [pictured] Top 10 Egyptian Treasures have really struck a chord with viewers. We're delighted that there's an appetite for history at the weekends." DAVID BROWN

Great American Railroad Journeys

8.00pm BBC2

TRAVEL To give Michael Portillo credit, he doesn't seem to care about risking ridicule. At one point here, he turns up at a base for US troops in Anchorage in a lemon-yellow blazer and red trousers, looking like a walking, talking Fruit Salad sweetie. As camouflage paint is daubed on his face and a heavy parachute strapped to his back, all I wanted to know was what the smirking soldiers were saying to each other in the background. Now, if all this sounds familiar, it's because this is actually a couple of spliced-together episodes from Portillo's Great Alaskan Railroad Journeys. But the scenery and our host's lack of vanity make it worth a repeat trip. DAVID BROWN

Tony Robinson's History of Britain

8.00pm Channel 5

HISTORY Tony Robinson ends his Horrible Histories-style series by exploring what the Second World War was like for ordinary Londoners. There are familiar tales about evacuation, rationing, GIs and life in the ATS (Auxiliary Territorial Service), although Babs, a child at the time, recalls a lesser-known tragedy at an East End underground station, when 173 people were crushed to death. And Maisie, also a child during the war, remembers that because of food shortages in occupied Jersey, German soldiers shot her pet cat to eat.

Later, in How The Victorians Built Britain at 9pm, Michael Buerk discovers the effect electricity had on Blackpool tourism. JR

Wisting

9.00pm, 9.45pm BBC4

DRAMA So we reach the final double bill of the Norwegian crime drama that's been noodling on for weeks, never really going anywhere and with far too many dead blondes, or blondes entombed in sex dungeons, for my liking. Suspended detective William Wisting is a free-roaming maverick who's gone completely rogue, breaking into his own nick and pinching evidence as he pursues his own investigation into the disappearance of a young woman.

As Wisting is so full of weird, creepy men, there are plenty of suspects, but tonight Wisting and his daft daughter crack the case. Though she's a journalist, and oddly doesn't immediately phone her editor with a scoop. ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR

HIGH DRAMA
Patrick Baladi guest-stars as a pilot who hijacks a plane

Casualty

9.20pm BBC1

DRAMA Actor Patrick Baladi, so often cast as a "smoothie charmer", plays against type as an on-the-edge pilot whose anxieties lead to him hijacking a plane. I know, an actual plane. On actual Casualty. It's certainly a step up from people falling off ladders or crashing Ford Fiestas. And an exciting opening set-up it is too, especially when Baladi's character Liam tries to make a run for it and has an encounter with a security officer's Taser gun.

It's the injuries sustained here that land Liam in hospital, where we then get one of those outrageous coincidences so beloved of soaps. Even if your tolerance for remarkable occurrences is high, this one may have your inner Monty Python colonel yelling, "No, stop it! Too silly!" But it's not enough to spoil an episode that contains a fair few dramatic high points and even the odd touching moment. DAVID BROWN

7.00 The Royal House of Windsor
5/6. Correspondence from the Queen's personal family archive features in this look at the impact that Diana, Princess of Wales had on the House of Windsor. The fairy-tale wedding to Prince Charles brought fresh lustre to the royals, but, after her marriage faltered and she expressed disaffection in a 1995 interview, divorce was inevitable. Deprived of her royal status, she still remained outspoken until her tragic death in 1997.

The Limehouse Golem ★★★★

BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

The legend of Jack the Ripper looms large, but the spectre of his possible predecessor haunts this penny dreadful-style thriller. Adapted with a gory flourish by Jane Goldman from Peter Ackroyd's novel, the film sees an actress (Olivia Cooke) accused of murder, forcing detective John Kildare (Bill Nighy) to race against time to save her from the noose. The result is a ripe and fun gothic romp that's peppered with knowing cameos from real-life characters. DAMON WISE

Youth gone Wilde

Booksmart ★★★★ Amazon Prime

A recent arrival on Amazon, this razor-sharp high-school comedy sparkles with wit and quotable dialogue. Best friends Molly and Amy (Lady Bird's Beanie Feldstein and Kaitlyn Dever, star of Netflix hit Unbelievable) are straight-A students who decide to take a walk on the wild side before they get their heads down at college. Making her directorial debut, actor Olivia Wilde captures the essence of female teenage life in a film that boasts plenty of artistic visual touches plus a killer soundtrack. TERRY STAUNTON

California schemin'

P Billionaire Boys Club

★★ 9.45pm Sky Premiere

Ansel Elgort and Taron Egerton head a fine cast in this true-life tale of a 1980s Ponzi scheme. The LA-set drama tries to capture the stylised hedonism of The Wolf of Wall Street, but it lacks the charisma to pull you into its morally ambiguous story. The result is a film that falls apart as quickly as the scam it portrays. JAMES LUXFORD

SUNDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

THE PARTY'S OVER
Christine Keeler (Sophie Cookson) faces prison for perjury

PICK OF THE DAY The Trial of Christine Keeler 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA Everyone in the country has an opinion about Christine Keeler, and none of them is complimentary. "Shameless slut"... "common prostitute"... even her own mother describes her as an "evil little bitch". Though War Secretary John Profumo has resigned in disgrace and Stephen Ward is clinging grimly to life, Keeler (Sophie Cookson) is still at the eye of a storm that's about to become a tempest. Someone has to pay for the convulsion that rocked the British establishment, and it's going to be Christine Keeler.

In the final part of Amanda Coe's excellent account of a scandal that left lasting scars on Britain, Keeler faces prison for committing perjury after she lied at the trial of that violent pest, Lucky Gordon. Meanwhile, Valerie Profumo (Emilia Fox) at last gives vent to the feelings she has sat on since the whole mess began. And she's impressive.

Running Wild with Bear Grylls

7.00pm National Geographic

REALITY Actor Channing Tatum was a guest in series one. Now he's in Norway to do more "things they don't let you do in movies", starting with launching himself out of a helicopter.

He lands in a wilderness populated with fjords, boulders and sheep. Lots of sheep. Channing even manages to get nutted by one in a Tomb Raider-style cave. On the other side, the pair ingest some protein with a snack of foraged worms. But arguably the scariest point of the adventure comes when they squeeze themselves through an extremely thin crack between rocks. Not one for the claustrophobe. It's cold out there, but the lads' campfire chats warm the heart. GARY ROSE

Doctor Who

7.10pm BBC1

DRAMA There's a blast(er) from the past this week as David Tennant-era monsters the Judoon make a grand return to Doctor Who, with the rhino-faced space police descending on the cathedral city of Gloucester to track down a mysterious fugitive. With hindsight, not the best day to be taking a tour of the attractions.

While we've seen the Judoon pop up from time to time over the past few years, this is the first episode they've played a major part in for quite a while, meaning they've had a bit of a makeover (well, their boss has a new mohawk, anyway). Shame their small talk ("Ko Sho Blo!") still leaves something to be desired... HUW FULLERTON

Call the Midwife

8.00pm BBC1

DRAMA Class and a teeny-weeny bit of the most chaste sexual tension rear their smirking heads when a quartet of male junior doctors arrives at Nonnatus House to train with the midwives.

One of them is a stereotypical entitled posh boy whose dad is a trailblazing gynaecologist, and the son feels he Lives in His Father's Shadow. While another has to work hard every step of the way because of his lack of privilege. The other two remain strangely silent throughout.

The Nonnatus midwives take no nonsense from their interlopers, while Sister Julienne (Jenny Agutter) gets fearsomely cross with the boys when they play cricket and break a window. AG

Vera

8.00pm ITV

DRAMA A young man is found dead by binmen, and it looks like he's been attacked – his body is covered in bruises, though the fatal blow was a strike to the head. Vera and her little gang discover that the victim worked punishing shifts for a commercial cleaning company, where he was liked and respected.

But he had a difficult, tragic history: his dad was killed by a burglar years before and the lad carried a huge burden of sadness and guilt. It's an unexpectedly poignant story and one where Vera (Brenda Blethyn) clearly finds it hard to separate herself from her duty as she digs deep into the past to uncover all manner of lies and unhappiness. AG

PHIL DANIELS'S TV CV

The year 1979 was a big one for Phil Daniels, who appears in Call the Midwife (8pm BBC1). He was in two movies that became cult classics. In the film of Alan Clarke's Scum, he played violent gang member Richards, while the Who's Quadrophenia found him starring as Mod idol Jimmy. "These were low-budget films that didn't make much of a stir at the time," he recalled recently. "I remember getting the bus to the premiere of Quadrophenia. That's how glamorous it was."

The now 61-year-old has become the go-to actor to play edgy London geezers, having honed this persona on EastEnders, in Only Fools and Horses prequel Rock and Chips and as the narrator on Blur's hit Parklife. DAVID BROWN

Win the Wilderness: Alaska

9.00pm BBC2

FACTUAL New series Six British couples have the chance to inherit the self-built wilderness home of a pioneering old couple, Duane and Rena Ose, who want an easier life. They'll be chosen by the Oses after they've completed a series of challenges. Couples who don't make the mark go home. It has promise, though the first episode is repetitive (yes, we get that living in Alaska is tough) and not terribly involving as the group builds shelters and competes to be the first to be invited to meet their putative benefactors.

But it's long enough for you to decide who you like, who will annoy the hell out of you and, of course, who will be the first to cry. AG See p30

Auschwitz Untold: in Colour

9.00pm More4

HISTORY If you feel any unease at watching restored and colourised footage of Auschwitz concentration camp, listen to the words of one survivor: "We were wearing colour! We were not all grey!" Though not on the scale of Peter Jackson's They Shall Not Grow Old, the process has the same effect: removing the grainy, black-and-white images makes the horrors more immediate and shrinks the distance between generations.

Sixteen Jewish survivors and one Romani man, who were all children in the camps, talk of the unspeakable: desperate hunger, and the murder of their families. It concludes tomorrow, or wait until Wednesday, when Channel 4 show both episodes as one film. AG

Keeler, Profumo, Ward and Me

10.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK Here's the perfect accompaniment to BBC1's Profumo drama. Tom Mangold was in the thick of it as a Fleet Street reporter when the scandal broke and he befriended Stephen Ward, though "he was a true libertine and no paragon of virtue," says Mangold.

We hear tapes of Christine Keeler and Mandy Rice-Davies, but the real interest lies in Mangold's friendship with Ward, who lived at Mangold's house at the height of the furore. And he called Mangold in desperation on the night that he would take his own life.

BACK ON THE ROAD

Top Gear

8.00pm BBC2

MOTORING As series 28 opens there's no sign the car-show-with-a-death-wish is slowing down. Last time out, Freddie Flintoff rolled over a souped-up hearse and thought he'd wiped out Paddy McGuinness. This time, it's his own life on the line as Flintoff is guinea pig in one of the show's crazier stunts: taking an old Rover Metro bungee jumping. Off a dam.

So the next six Sunday evenings won't be dull, as Flintoff, McGuinness and Chris Harris revisit the treble-act that has put the show back on the road after the oversteer of the Evans/LeBlanc era.

Tonight's opener includes a trip from Bognor Regis to Essex in cheap second-hand convertibles. (At one point, for reasons that will become clear, McGuinness dons a suit of armour.) And Harris drives the Ariel Atom, a new version of the car that once rearranged Jeremy Clarkson's face. DAVID BUTCHER

Man like Mobeen

BBC3, available from today

Series three of Guz Khan's broad but savvy sitcom about a Birmingham man caring for his younger sister while keeping his idiot friends out of trouble. Racism and gang violence have always been strong undercurrents beneath the character comedy, and last year the latter came to the fore. Expect a thoughtful but funny treatment of the issues as Mobeen sets out to make things right.

9.00 Fake or Fortune?
Series 3. Philip Mould and his research director Bendor Grosvenor choose two works from public collections that they believe could be by portrait artist Thomas Gainsborough. The first is a depiction of St Albans mayor Joseph Gape that Bendor thinks dates back to the artist's days as a high-society portrait painter. Philip's choice is a rare landscape, painted when the artist was experimenting with dreamlike scenes. But why is conservationist Aviva Burnstock troubled by the presence of a distinctive blue pigment?

The best days of your life?

P Eighth Grade ★★★★ 9.45pm Sky Premiere

Elsie Fisher turns in a delightful, naturalistic performance in this warm comedy drama. She plays 13 year-old Kayla, who spends her spare time recording self-help videos on subjects including "Being Yourself" and "How to Be Confident". In reality, however, she's quiet and socially awkward. The feature debut of Bo Burnham is filled with cringe-inducing situations that are painful to watch, and is therefore guaranteed to resonate with anyone who may have endured embarrassing moments in their youth. STEPHEN CARTY

Now on Netflix

Roman J Israel, Esq ★★★ Netflix

A lawyer is caught in the grip of a personal crisis in this character-driven drama from Nightcrawler writer/director Dan Gilroy. Denzel Washington plays the back-room brief whose genius-level insights suggest he's on the Asperger's spectrum. Faced with the closure of the firm where he's served for years, he joins Colin Farrell's bigger, slicker operation, which seriously unbalances his moral compass. The film contains a few clunky moments but is worth watching for Washington's performance alone. TREVOR JOHNSTON

Going it alone

Liam Gallagher: As It Was ★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

This candid documentary charts former Oasis singer Liam Gallagher's emergence as a solo artist. The film doesn't include any Oasis songs, due to brother Noel refusing Liam the rights, but you can hear them in all their (morning) glory in Supersonic, also on iPlayer until Tuesday. ELLIE PORTER

MONDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

BRUSH WITH HOPE Will refugee Sala (Anna Maciejewska) find solace in art therapy with Marie (Romola Garai)?

PICK OF THE DAY The Windermere Children 9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA OF THE WEEK It's 1945 and a bus full of child survivors of the Nazi death camps arrives at a disused wartime housing estate near Windermere. They are exhausted and stunned by grief, having lost everything – parents, siblings, entire families – and having experienced hideous cruelty.

This affecting drama from writer Simon Block, which will be shown simultaneously on German television, follows a handful of the group as they face new lives supported by kindly strangers. Romola Garai plays an art therapy teacher, Tim McInnerny is the philanthropist behind the project and Iain Glen is a football coach. Night after night the air is pierced by the sleeping children's barely suppressed terrors, but slowly they begin to adapt and grow, though all of them are desperate for news of their lost families.

The final scene, featuring real-life Windermere children, now proud and happy old men, will undo you. (They also appear in BBC4 documentary In Their Own Words, 10.30pm BBC4.) ALISON GRAHAM See feature: page 22

Crime: Are We Tough Enough?

9.15am BBC1

DAYTIME CHOICE New series Violent crime has increased, but even those working within the justice system don't agree how to get it under control. QC Chris Daw, who defends the accused, and solicitor Ayesha Nayyar, who represents victims, have strongly opposing opinions on whether there should be more prosecutions and longer sentences or whether we need other ways to stop reoffending. In this daily series they explore real cases, talk to police officers and others working in the justice system before, on Friday, making their case to a "jury", who give their verdict. An interesting concept, it may make you question your own views. JANE RACKHAM

Great Asian Railway Journeys

6.30pm BBC2

TRAVEL New series "I'm in a fifth-floor flat [in Kowloon] with a man I've never met before... who's bouncing up and down on a bamboo pole!" explains a heavily sweating and slightly incredulous Michael Portillo. It's not as seedy as it sounds. The man is simply making noodles the traditional Cantonese way.

Portillo is starting his 2,500-mile exploration of South East Asia in Hong Kong, one of the world's most densely populated cities. Its historical connections with Britain are shameful so Portillo feels he must tread carefully, but a night in the luxurious Peninsula Hotel helps to make up for all that diplomatic effort. JR

Only Connect

8.00pm BBC2

QUIZ Oh, for heaven's sake. The question setters have gone rogue. Round two, the sequences round, has several questions tonight that go beyond difficult into unfathomable and duly flummox both the (very good indeed) teams. Care to try one? OK, what comes next in this sequence: 21. Hip...22. Hic...23. Sip...?

Neither the Endeavours nor the Junipers crack the sequence, though the Junipers are on fighting form, backing themselves early on to call three- and five-pointers correctly – with mixed results. It's another splendid contest, with references to Bjorn Borg, Gandalf and the greatest musical of all time (which, Victoria Coren Mitchell confirms, is Guys and Dolls). DAVID BUTCHER

Silent Witness

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA By the end of tonight's episode the story has meandered to a cryogenics lab where a dead child's body is being stored. How do the Lyell team conduct a postmortem on that? But we start in a multistorey car park. Joy riders are speeding around in a hatchback when they crash into a pillar – and expose a skull encased in the concrete.

Not just a skull either, but, after a good deal of chipping away from Nikki, an entire skeleton. Or almost entire – the hands are missing. A DI played by Jemma Redgrave leads the investigation to the dead man's reclusive sister, whom you may recognise as Louise Jameson, once leather-clad Doctor Who companion Leela. DAVID BUTCHER

Community justice is the only kind of comeuppance that criminals get on soaps. The police are invariably useless and juries usually send innocent people to prison, so it's up to the regular characters to band together and take on the ne'er-do-wells.

Take Leo in EastEnders (8.00pm BBC1), whose creepy pursuit of Whit (even the name of his market stall, Nite and Whey, is an anagram of Whitney Dean) has made him the Square's public enemy number one. Now, we get Kat ripping that aforementioned stall to pieces before a night out at the Prince Albert ends with an angry Kush shoving Leo off the balcony. Though why pallid, stringy Leo thought he could take on the might of Kush is a mystery.

It's going to be like that scene in the first Avengers movie when Loki tries to fight the Hulk. In fact, the next time a villain turns up in Walford, Kat should just say, "We have a Kush," and then send her boyfriend into battle. DAVID BROWN

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Cold Feet

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA Those who watched last week's episode will no doubt have been googling "when did Adam and Rachel try to adopt Laura on Cold Feet?" as the credits rolled. Fear not, though, because we get more of this backstory recounted when Adam tracks down the girl who almost became his daughter back in the early 2000s. It's a little bit disturbing, but we'll let him off.

But we're not just delving around in the past, as there are some incident-packed trips away from Manchester, too. The men head up Scafell Pike, while the women drive away in fancy dress on a 1980s' Weekender – both excursions prove to be equally disastrous, but for very different reasons. DAVID BROWN

The Gene Revolution

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY Jurassic Park, Brave New World and Nazi propaganda films are, perhaps inevitably, among the mix in this terrific overview of the revolution in gene-editing technology and how it could impact medical treatments and increase demand for "designer babies". They're used as easy jumping-off points for a deep-dive introduction to the gene-editing tool Crispr, with a legion of geneticists, biologists and tech gurus describing how it works and getting into knotty discussions about the ethics of messing with the human genome, which has become so much easier and cheaper thanks to Crispr.

If you want to know about the future of medicine and reproduction, you need to watch this. DAVID CRAWFORD

Yellowstone

9.00pm Paramount

DRAMA For a series that is only at episode two, this gets to an emotional pitch pretty fast. Maybe it's because the tale of cowboys and reservations, ranchers and politicians, hits deep notes. The characters may ride helicopters and quad bikes but it's very much a western, with a majestic backdrop and a primal theme of who really owns the land.

Ranch king John Dutton (Kevin Costner) won't shy away from a fight, but the cattle dispute between him and the reservation chief escalates alarmingly. Costner is more than solid as the ornery old patriarch, fighting enemies on all fronts. Some of the other characters have yet to come into focus, but there's still plenty of time. DAVID BUTCHER

HEAVEN HELP US Craig Bog (Daniel Radcliffe) is God's (Steve Buscemi) right-hand man

Miracle Workers

9.00pm Sky Comedy

COMEDY OF THE WEEK New series

Say hello to a new Sky channel devoted to comedy. Series ten of Curb Your Enthusiasm will start here tomorrow, as will The Late, Late Show with James Corden, a day after its US broadcast. But leading the line is this enjoyable supernatural sitcom where God works in mysterious ways, because he's played by Steve Buscemi. This God is a petty, beer-swilling slob, so depressed by the way things are going on Earth ("Do you know how long it's been since someone sacrificed a ram to me?") he decides to blow his creation up.

Some of the best jokes are incidental details of Heaven Inc, a drab bureaucratic office where prayers (mostly for lost keys and gloves) are answered by one sad loner (Daniel Radcliffe). New recruit Eliza (Geraldine Viswanathan) hopes to shake things up – and with luck, save the world. DAVID BUTCHER

P Downton Abbey ★★★ Sky Store/Virgin Movies

King George V and Queen Mary visit Downton in this incident-packed spin-off from the beloved TV series. Although feeling like a whole season of storylines crammed into a dramatic Christmas special, it's safe, sumptuous and unsurprising to a fault. The wonderful ensemble – featuring all the regulars, plus new additions Imelda Staunton, Tuppence Middleton and David Haig – plays it to the hilt, with Maggie Smith stealing all her scenes. It's everything you want it to be, with a cocktail olive on top. ALAN JONES

Sky Oscars is here!

Sky's new pop-up channel, Sky Oscars, arrives today, showcasing previous winners in readiness for the 92nd Academy Awards on Sunday 9 February. Among the highlights is 2018's dreamy best picture-winner The Shape of Water (above), whose four awards also included a best director gong for Guillermo Del Toro. Also this week, you can enjoy the statuette-snaffling Titanic on Tuesday, a Tom Cruise double bill of Jerry Maguire and Top Gun on Wednesday, and the country twang of Crazy Heart and Walk the Line on Friday. ELLIE PORTER

Based on the bestseller by Louis de Bernières, this is the touching, endearingly quirky tale of a scruffy dog adopted by an Australian mining community in the 1970s. Director Kriv Stenders papers over the episodic plotting with the help of a talented cast, but it's the marvellously expressive canine star Koko who steals the show. JOHN FERGUSON

TUESDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

MAIN MEN

PICK OF THE DAY The National Television Awards 7.30pm ITV

AWARDS Tonight the NTAs answer a burning question: what does TV's biggest popularity contest look like without Dermot O'Leary? He has hosted the giant awards bash for the past ten years and it feels moulded in his easy-going, so-what-if-it-goes-a-bit-wrong image. New presenter David Walliams has big shoes to fill, but is likely to go for more of a court-jester vibe, mocking and teasing the ranks of stars and producers gathered (if their limos make it on time) in the vast hangar of the O2.

As for the winners, remember that here they aren't chosen by industry juries, but by public vote. That could mean acclaimed series like the devastating Sky drama Chernobyl lose out to more mainstream fare. Or take Phoebe Waller-Bridge: she has had a belting run of award-show wins for Fleabag, but she hasn't had to take on the might of Mrs Brown. One thing seems certain; lining up for a 19th win in a row in the presenter category, Ant and Dec will be quietly confident. DAVID BUTCHER

League Cup Football

7.00pm (k/o 7.45pm) Sky Sports Football/Main Event

SPORT Aston Villa v Leicester City It's still all to play for in tonight's League Cup semi-final, after the first encounter between Aston Villa and Leicester City ended in stalemate. It was a fine result for Dean Smith's injury-hit side, who'll be relishing the chance to have another go at the Foxes, this time on home turf.

Leicester – who travel to Villa Park just three days after their FA Cup outing – have looked wobbly without Wilfred Ndidi, who's out until February after undergoing surgery on his knee, so booking a spot in the final tonight would be a much-needed morale boost for Brendan Rodgers's men. HANNAH SHADDOCK

Crazy Delicious

8.00pm C4

FOOD It didn't end so well when Eve offered Adam an apple in the Garden of Eden, so let's hope for a happier result when astrophysics enthusiast Harry, flavour maverick Elainea and Italian dessert queen Gabi attempt to wow the judges with a dish starring the fruit. Black pudding dessert and rainbow ravioli are also on the menu.

This series is mainly eye candy – from the mad Willy Wonka set to the extraordinary culinary creations the Gods taste – but will the visuals be enough to sustain our appetite for more? Host Jayde Adams is a delight, though, striking the right balance between wacky and empathetic. JANE RACKHAM

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA Clarissa is tense and preoccupied: her mother's illness is taking a toll. There are more of those painful scenes at the hospital and other moments when people try to persuade Clarissa to go easy on herself, only to get a snappish reply. Even the DI played by Jemma Redgrave tells her, "You need to sort yourself out."

But Clarissa is more keen to sort out the murder case which, since the end of last night's episode, now has a second victim, apparently a suicide but with wounds that are, Thomas thinks, too perfect to be true. The grim, deranged story starts to spiral in on itself and point to a very twisted tale of woe. DAVID BUTCHER

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

I complained recently about the lack of Jewish characters in our evening soaps, forgetting, of course, about the beloved Sacha Levy (Bob Barrett) on Holby City (8pm BBC1; Scotland: 10.35pm). A reminder of his heritage comes as Holocaust Memorial Day is marked with a reappearance for Sacha's great aunt Maria (Susan Engel), who's admitted with a serious illness, but finds the strength to recount her traumatic experiences in Auschwitz.

Personally, I would have liked the entire hour to have been devoted to this affecting storyline. But there's also a clichéd subplot about a lift breaking down and Cameron having to perform a thoracostomy on a critically ill patient. While I realise that all this taps into the guilt Cam feels about his decision to let evil Evan die, it still feels hackneyed to have him face a moment of crisis in a malfunctioning elevator. It feels like lifts have gone on the blink during an emergency in every hospital drama on TV... DAVID BROWN

Belsen: Our Story

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY After British troops liberated the Bergen-Belsen concentration camp in April 1945 it was burnt to the ground, destroying all physical evidence of what happened there. But the accounts here from survivors offer a vivid picture of what the camp was like, and often the details are heartbreaking.

The sculptor Maurice Blik, imprisoned there when he was four, remembers making a present for his sister's first birthday – a carrot with sticks stuck in to resemble a boat with masts. But she died before her birthday and Blik saw his other sister laying her on a pile of bodies. As another survivor, Anita Lasker-Wallfisch, says, "Nobody's ever seen anything like Belsen." DAVID BUTCHER

Curb Your Enthusiasm

9.00pm Sky Comedy

SITCOM It's been three years since Larry David last went about his dangerously under-employed daily business, committing social faux pas all over LA, offending even his closest famous friends (Ted Danson is back, like so many in this show playing an almost-true version of himself).

In series ten (Curb began 20 years ago), Larry spies a new opponent and fellow smart ass in Mocha Joe, the coffee vendor last seen in a 2009 episode where Larry stuffed up a Seinfeld reunion. He'll be locking horns with Orange Is the New Black's Laverne Cox and 30 Rock's Jane Krakowski – while the major coup is Larry buddying up with Mad Men's Jon Hamm. Pretty, pretty good. PATRICK MULKERN

Jett

11.00pm Sky 1

DRAMA The pace has dropped a little in this quirky crime thriller. That's fair enough, we can't expect heists and shoot-outs every week. What we do get each week is minor characters fleshed out with deft touches.

I love the two detectives, Jack and Josie, who are inclined to bicker on the job, particularly on the subject of their informant, Jett. And Bennie the henchman is still touchingly obsessed with the woman he briefly had to kidnap. More mysterious is Evans, the Moldovan gangster's emissary played with lovely menace by Gil Bellows (from Ally McBeal!).

Tonight Jett is back on the trail of the gold bars she stole for him... that someone then stole from her. DAVID BUTCHER

Winterwatch

8.00pm BBC2

NATURE Chris Packham, Michaela Strachan and Gillian Burke are wearing their warmest padded jackets, woolly hats and snow boots, because once again, along with Iolo Williams, they're in the Cairngorms National Park, one of the coldest places in the UK but also a remarkable haven for wildlife and a terrific barometer of the changing climate.

The team have been shining head torches into bird boxes and turning thermal cameras onto nocturnal creatures since 2013. In the last series we saw pine martens in their nest and a brown hare scampering across a field, plus an update on Freya the golden eagle. So expect similar things this year, although, nature being red in tooth and claw, we should also be prepared for some distressing footage. The Animal Winter Olympics (starring weight-lifting badgers and acrobatic red squirrels) sounds fun, though. JANE RACKHAM

9.00 Belsen: Our Story
RT Almost 50,000 people, mostly Jews, died inside the infamous Bergen-Belsen concentration camp. Using interviews with some of those that survived as well as dramatic reconstructions, this documentary reveals the day-to-day experiences of those trapped inside. Unlike the death camps of Auschwitz or Treblinka, Belsen wasn't designed as a place of industrialised killing. Instead, prisoners died of neglect, either starving to death or succumbing to diseases. When the Allied troops liberated Belsen in 1945 they felt they had no choice but to burn the camp to the ground, inadvertently reducing much of the evidence of Nazi crimes to ashes. See page 77.

7.30 The National Television Awards
RT New host David Walliams introduces the star-studded ceremony from the O_2 in London as the awards for the top television shows of 2019 are presented.

Long-running series Line of Duty and Peaky Blinders are both nominated in the best drama category, while the latter's Cillian Murphy is up for the best drama performance alongside Jodie Comer of Killing Eve and Suranne Jones for Gentleman Jack. Among the nominees for the new drama award are A Confession and Chernobyl, both based on real-life events.

The shortlist for the best comedy award looks particularly strong, with Phoebe Waller-Bridge's acclaimed Fleabag up against the much-loved Derry Girls and Mrs Brown's Boys.

In the best serial drama performance category, Danny Dyer from EastEnders will be squaring up to the likes of Emmerdale's Danny Miller and Katie McGlynn from Coronation Street. And the announcement of the best TV judge should be interesting, with host David Walliams hoping to beat Simon Cowell, Sir Tom Jones, RuPaul and will.i.am to the prize. See page 76.

Cradle to the rave

P Beats ★★★★ 10.00pm Sky Premiere

Two working-class youths (played by Cristian Ortega and Lorn Macdonald) bond as they attempt to escape their humdrum lives and attend an illegal rave in this 1990s-set comedy drama. The suburban new-town setting and spiky humour initially give the impression of an expletive-heavy Gregory's Girl set to a frantic dance music soundtrack. But what emerges is an often heart-warming film about friendship and rites of passage, which is confidently played by the two rascally but lovable leads. TERRY STAUNTON

Journey to the stars

Ad Astra ★★★★ Sky Store/Virgin Movies and DVD

Astronaut Brad Pitt is sent to investigate destructive power surges emanating from the edges of the solar system in an extravagant, thrilling and thought-provoking sci-fi drama. Director James Gray references everything from Field of Dreams to Apocalypse Now, with philosophical questions punctuating the intergalactic action. Pitt's charisma carries the human element, assisted by dazzling visuals and an intelligent screenplay. It may try to cram in too much, but the film reaches further for the stars than most in the genre. TS

When cultures clash

East Is East ★★★★

All4 FREE TO VIEW

Films about Asian integration in Britain have tended to be both serious and marginalised, but this comedy broke the mould. Om Puri stars as a Pakistani dad who faces resistance as he insists on arranged marriages for his sons. Accessible and refreshing, this great little film leaves C4's catch-up service on Thursday. LORIEN HAYNES

WEDNESDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

SAFE HANDS
Sue Pryke, Keith Brymer Jones and Melanie Sykes

PICK OF THE DAY The Great Pottery Throw Down 9.00pm More4

REALITY It's not so much throw downs this week as slip-ups. The remaining nine potters must create two different-sized vases using the (very, very messy) slip casting method. It's a useful way to create tricky shapes and is used for everything from teapots to toilets. But it's not easy. "I'd rather go through labour again," says one frustrated contestant as liquid clay either spatters onto the ground or sets rock hard, while moulds come apart at the crucial moment.

They're a very laid-back, jolly bunch who get on well together, but it's clearly an extraordinarily stressful task. And so is their next challenge, although Keith Brymer Jones's demonstration of throwing a pot while blindfolded is as soothing to watch as that famous old BBC interlude film The Potter's Wheel. You might like to note that the Keith weep-o-meter goes up a notch with not one but two tearful moments... and an emotional snort. JANE RACKHAM

7.00pm (k/o 7.45pm) Sky Sports Football/Main Event

SPORT Manchester City v Manchester United After United emerged the unexpected victors when these local rivals met in the league in December, you'd be forgiven for expecting a similarly close contest in the first leg of this semi-final. Instead, United found City in merciless mood: despite starting without a striker, they ran riot in the first half, scoring three in a 20-minute spell. United did claw one back, but only because City took their feet off the gas.

So now it's the turn of the Reds to seek retribution – they'll need to be firing on all cylinders if they want to mend their wounded pride at the Etihad tonight. HANNAH SHADDOCK

Bradley Walsh & Son: Breaking Dad

8.00pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT I was unwittingly right when I wrote on these pages last week that the extreme activities Barney Walsh makes his dad try could end with a hospital visit. "We might have taken it too far this time," admits a concerned Barney after a painful misadventure.

The pair are in Dayton, Ohio, birthplace of aviation, where Bradley (a Rolls-Royce engineer in his youth) is beside himself with excitement at the prospect of a 35-second flight in an early biplane designed by the Wright brothers. He's less keen when his son takes the controls of another small plane for the first time. That's not what does for him, though. JR

Spy in the Wild

9.00pm BBC1

NATURE Some of these spy creatures are enough to give you nightmares. The robotic macaque surfacing from a Japanese pool is reminiscent of Martin Sheen's swampy emergence in Apocalypse Now. The real snow monkeys aren't bothered (maybe they don't go to the cinema), so the camera records some truly delightful scenes.

The advantage of spy-cams is that they can get up close to capture previously unseen behavior, such as billions of monarch butterflies cascading down from the trees and the astonishing sight of rays doing a sort of aquatic Mexican wave. Medal for bravery is awarded to spy salmon for running (or swimming) the gauntlet of hungry grizzlies. JR

Good Omens

9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA Just how did a demon and an angel become friends? In a brilliantly inventive opening sequence we find out, with the backstory of Aziraphale (Michael Sheen) and Crowley (David Tennant) revealed as the pair keep bumping into each other throughout history, gradually deciding to work together to keep a kind of balance between good and evil.

Whether it's flouncing around in full suits of armour, checking out one of Jesus's speeches, chatting with William Shakespeare or avoiding the guillotine of the French Revolution, watching Tennant and Sheen jump from era to era is madcap, gleeful fun. And watch out for a few sneaky cameos... HUW FULLERTON

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Maria on Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV) has been suffering from repeat plotline syndrome for years. Look up the phrase "wrong 'un" in the dictionary and you'll find all the men that Maria has been entangled with over the years. As soon as she breaks up with one be-stubbled bad boy, she opts to get beard burn from another.

Tonight, though, there's repetition of a different kind as a pregnant Maria is told by doctors that she's lost her baby (long-time viewers will recall that, in 2008, she had a stillborn son). But this latest tragedy looks set to become a story about missed vaccinations, thanks to Maria discovering that she's caught measles from little Bertie, who hasn't had his jabs. "Measles is on the rise again, and it shouldn't be," says actor Samia Longchambon. "Some people are choosing not to vaccinate their children. Obviously, it's a personal decision but it can have a snowball effect, so it's really important to show that." DAVID BROWN

White House Farm

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA Though White House Farm is a commendable dramatisation of terrible events, so far it's been moving too slowly, with episodes strung out beyond comfort. I'm sure it's because everyone involved wishes to be respectful, but it's a television drama; there has to be pace, however tough the subject.

Tonight a hangdog Mark Addy, as persistent Det Sgt Stan Jones, tries once again to persuade his bosses to take another look at the case and at Jeremy Bamber's clear involvement. Once again, he is rebuffed, as Bamber (Freddie Fox) puts on an extravagant show of grief at his family's funerals. But, at last, a vital witness comes forward. ALISON GRAHAM

Richard Hammond's Big

9.00pm Discovery

DOCUMENTARY Richard Hammond is negotiating the switchbacks of Austria's Carpathian mountains in a lovely Porsche 356. Are we watching the wrong show? Fear not, he's on his way to conduit this week's lesson in extreme engineering. The main wall of the Kölnbrein hydroelectric dam is 200m high, but is able to hold back some 200 million tonnes of water. It's become such an attraction that the works office has been turned into a hotel.

As ever, the staff Hammond meets have the patience of saints as he messes about, calmly telling him not to touch anything. But will he be able to overcome his fear of heights to meet someone at the bottom? GILL CRAWFORD

Avenue 5

10.00pm Sky 1

SITCOM After last week's gravity flip sent the luxury liner Avenue 5 careering off course and way behind schedule, it behoves main man Ryan Clark (Hugh Laurie) to allay the passengers' fears. Cue a wonderful captain's address in which too many people have access to a microphone – followed by some space-black comedy mined from a succession of unforeseen funerals.

After creator Armando Iannucci's success with Veep and with cable giant HBO, this snarky new sci-fi has an understandably US-skewed script ("That pregnant pause was in its third trimester"; "fetid barf bag"), but this Poseidon-among-the-planets is shaping up to be a riotous journey. MARK BRAXTON

MUNCH ON THIS
A taste test for Hugh Fearnley-Whittingstall and Steph McGovern

Easy Ways to Live Well

8.00pm BBC1 (Wales: Friday 7.30pm BBC2)

HEALTH I like the way this series isn't afraid to road-test the kind of health fixes most of us might dismiss as somewhere between faddy and daft. This week in quackery corner there's belly dancing to help with pregnancy, using singing to treat chronic pain and tackling memory loss via knitting.

But suspend your scepticism. There's real science at work here and in one case the results are pretty mind-blowing. Steph McGovern and Hugh Fearnley-Whittingstall visit a garden centre in the Wirral where the staff have so many aches and pains they take 249 over-the-counter painkillers a week between them. Surely starting a choir won't make a dent in that?

Steph tries that approach while Hugh's drug-free pain relief solution involves taking a daily placebo. He even tells them in advance it's a dummy pill. And the weird thing is, it still works. DAVID BUTCHER

RT 2/3. Hugh Fearnley-Whittingstall and Steph McGovern visit a garden centre in the Wirral where the staff, who are on their feet all day, are looking for alternatives to over-the-counter painkillers to deal with their aches and pains. Will Hugh's suggestion of an "open label placebo" or Steph's idea of 15 minutes of group singing each day prove the most efficacious? Turning guinea pigs themselves, the pregnant Steph sees whether belly dancing is a suitable exercise for women bearing a child, while Hugh finds out if knitting can improve his mental acuity. Finally they look at a counterintuitive solution to fussy eating and whether protein shakes and bars are worth the money. See page 87.
Director/Series producer Nick Angel (S) (AD) (HD)

9.00 Spy in the Wild
RT 2/4 Series 2. In Japan's mountains, "spy macaque" joins snow monkeys gathering at steaming hot thermal pools, slipping beneath the surface as the monkeys bathe and socialise to offer a new and intimate view of the world's northernmost monkey. In the mountains of Mexico, "spy hummingbird" joins billions of monarch butterflies as they overwinter. As the spring sun warms their wings, they take flight in a stunning display, beginning their migration north to recolonise North America. Meanwhile in Manitoba, Canada, "spy snake" lurks within a writhing carpet of garter snakes emerging from under ground and reveals an impostor in their ranks – a male cannily pretending to be a female. Tonight's film also affords insights into the behaviour of beavers in Germany, and grizzly bears, bald eagles and salmon in Alaska, while, closer to home, "spy squirrel" finds himself caught up in a fight between rival stags. Narrated by David Tennant. See page 86.

Dunkirk ★★★★★ Netflix

Director Christopher Nolan takes on British wartime history with this tour-de-force treatment of the miracle of Dunkirk. His utterly immersive epic plunges the viewer into a three-pronged story that unfolds on land, sea and air, charting the ordeals of Fionn Whitehead's soldier, Mark Rylance's boat owner and Tom Hardy's Spitfire pilot. Dunkirk the event may have been "a colossal military disaster" according to Churchill, but Dunkirk the movie is a breathtaking triumph from a director at the top of his game. JEREMY ASPINALL

The baas are back in town!

Shaun the Sheep Movie ★★★★

BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

With sequel Farmageddon shortlisted for a Bafta next month, here's a chance to revisit Shaun the Sheep's feature debut. After the Farmer finds himself lost and alone in the city, Shaun and friends mount a daring search-and-rescue mission, leading to more japes, scrapes and hilarious woolly gags. There's more animated fun from Aardman in Wallace & Gromit in The Curse of the Were-Rabbit, also available on iPlayer until Friday. JAMIE HEALY

Dolly directs

Good Posture ★★★★

iTunes

BBC1's recent Dracula adaptation proved fairly divisive, but most viewers agreed on one thing: Dolly Wells, who played "sassy nun" Sister Agatha, was a standout. Wells moves behind the camera for this crafty comedy about a spoilt film-making graduate (Grace Van Patten) and a reclusive writer (Emily Mortimer). ELLIE PORTER

THURSDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

NEW HORIZONS? DI Jack Mooney (Ardal O'Hanlon) is in reflective mood

PICK OF THE DAY Death in Paradise 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA "To be true to yourselves, you need to listen to your heart," a pastor tells his congregation. And we get the feeling that, Grantchester-style, his sermon will hover meaningfully over the action – particularly as we've just seen DI Jack Mooney on the beach, gazing wistfully out to sea.

Jack does a fair bit of wistful gazing this week, as he tries to decide whether to join his new love Anna (Nina Wadia) when she goes off on her travels. But as he ponders his future a murder case intervenes: the pastor's son is found dead in a rowing boat drifting off the coast of the island. It proves to be a sad affair, with the usual deadly knot of secrets, lies and bizarre scraps of evidence – in this case, a tiny plastic ballerina found at a lighthouse.

But it's hard to focus on a murder investigation when we sense something bigger is in the air. Jack is nervously toying with his tie more than usual. His daughter Siobhan is coming for a visit. Is he preparing to sail into the sunset?

DAVID BUTCHER

Father Brown

2.15pm BBC1

DAYTIME CHOICE Bad-tempered Lord Hollingworth is murdered in a youth hostel where the Kembleford Ramblers and Twitchers Association are staying in this 2019 episode. But can his death really be down to a row over public access to footpaths across his lordship's estate?

It's always risky when a long-running drama takes its characters out of their familiar surroundings, but there's something delightful about seeing Father Brown wearing tweedy knickerbockers rather than his clerical robes. This, plus the usual morass of intrigue and appearances by Shameless and EastEnders star Maggie O'Neill and The Durrells' Callum Woodhouse, adds up to a very enjoyable outing. JANE RACKHAM

Rugby Super League

7.30pm (k/o 7.45pm) Sky Arena/Mix

SPORT Wigan Warriors v Warrington Wolves Super League begins its 25th season tonight, but don't expect any silver tankards or carriage clocks to mark the occasion as Wigan face fierce rivals Warrington at the DW Stadium.

The match brings together the teams that finished second and fourth in 2019, although both fell short in the play-offs as St Helens stormed to victory in the grand final.

Warrington will be looking to their electric stand-off Blake Austin to recapture the form that brought him 18 tries last season, while Wigan have bolstered their squad with half-back Jackson Hastings, the 2019 Man of Steel, from Salford.

CHRIS HUGHES

Best Home Cook

8.00pm BBC1

FOOD This is a perfectly agreeable show, but it's curious the way Chris Bavin dominates the judging. Despite working alongside culinary goddess Mary Berry and Michelin-starred chef Angela Hartnett, Bavin never lets the fact he's not a chef cramp his style.

We're more interested in Mary and Angela's comments on taste and technique but Bavin tends to make the most noise, and thinks using the word "flavour" again and again makes him a connoisseur. He's not a bad judge by any means ("I'd brush my teeth with that if I could," he says of a rich sauce) but you wish, now and then, he'd tone it down. Tonight's dishes include veg curries, banger inventions and steamed lemon pud.

DAVID BUTCHER

The Supervet: Noel Fitzpatrick

8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Tissues at the ready because one of the dogs that Noel Fitzpatrick sees in this episode can't be helped and has to be put down. It's deeply distressing for everyone concerned and the owners are, understandably, inconsolable.

He starts by seeing Lola, a ten-year-old beagle that needs a challenging spinal operation, but he also performs a ground-breaking total knee replacement on Brandi, an elderly labrador with bone cancer. She's a clumsy dog so her owners think she won't manage if she has a leg amputation. Then an emergency case is brought in: bulldog puppy Molly has been accidentally hit by a car. JR

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

By this stage, viewers will know who ended Graham's life on Emmerdale (7pm, 8pm ITV). Incredible as it sounds, this is a rare instance of a soap deciding not to drag a whodunnit out for months. Although I can't help but feel that Emmerdale did time this high-profile mystery to coincide with the voting period for the National Television Awards shortlist. Cynical? Me?

However, despite the murderer being unmasked to fans, key players on the show are still in the dark when it comes to the identity of the village's latest homicidal maniac. Rhona (Zoe Henry, left), for one, has been left horror-struck that one of her neighbours may have killed her partner and is now determined to discover the truth. Best friend Vanessa, though, is warning Rhona against looking for clues and implores her to stay safe. But since when did a character erring on the side of caution make for good drama? I fully expect Rhona to be cornered by the killer before the month is over. DAVID BROWN

Inside the Crown: Secrets of the Royals

9.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY This episode in particular has topicality because it deals with the Windsors' fraught relationship with the media. It's a story of how their grip on the press began to slip and why deference by reporters gave way to defiance when it came to the pursuit of a story.

The royals, too, have changed their attitude down the decades: "Never complain, never explain," was the Queen's mantra at the start of her reign, something you wouldn't hear coming from the lips of Harry and Meghan. But back in the 1950s, the palace didn't foresee fame becoming such a double-edged sword, or that control of their own narrative would prove so problematic. DAVID BROWN

Sam Mendes: Life Cinematic

DOCUMENTARY New series
Whatever happened to programmes about film on TV? Apart from Mark Kermode, pickings are slim, so this is a welcome new series in which directors explore their own influences, starting with Sam Mendes. It's been 20 years since he won his first Academy Award for American Beauty. Seven films on, and with a couple of Bonds under his belt, he's in with a shout again with visceral war drama 1917, which has received ten Oscar nominations. Here he talks to Edith Bowman about why he loves everything from The Godfather to The Social Network.

It's followed at 10pm by Mendes's troubled relationship drama Revolutionary Road. GILL CRAWFORD

Law & Order: Special Victims Unit

9.00pm 5 USA

DRAMA Last week, a reprehensible mum was brought to book; this week, we have a despicable dad in our sights. He's one of those bullying fathers who failed to achieve his sporting dreams and is now piling pressure on his 13-year-old son. But has his overbearing attitude led to a sexual assault?

That's the question the cops are asking after a post-match argument following a hockey game leads to one boy collapsing from a horrendous hazing injury. Some of the grim details that emerge will have you wincing, but the case suffers from a lack of any courtroom showdowns. So, if you watch SVU for the banged gavels and tearful confessions, you'll be slightly miffed. DAVID BROWN

GRASS-ROOTS GERMANY
Ed Balls meets Rico, who says politicians are ignoring ordinary people

Travels in Euroland with Ed Balls

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY "The EU are more concerned with whether chips are fried correctly and the cucumbers are straight, than our problems," says east German woodsman Rico. He lives in Dorfchemnitz, dubbed the Nazi Village because the controversial Alternative for Germany party did so well there. The villagers' complaints about being ignored by politicians – and those of the Polish miners and the gay taxi driver in Bremen that Ed Balls meets – sound horribly familiar.

Although Ed reveals his heart always sinks when he hears rhetoric about people versus the elite, he does understand why ordinary people vote for the populist parties they think listen to them.

There are no daft dancing sequences to lighten the mood this week, although Ed does scamper around for a bit as a football mascot wearing a boar's head. JR

Woody on demand

Everyone Says I Love You ★★★★

My5 FREE TO VIEW

Woody Allen fans are in for a treat, as a host of his films have just been added to Channel 5's catch-up service. Among them is Everyone Says I Love You, a musical that dares to be different in that none of the cast (which includes Goldie Hawn and Julia Roberts) can sing. Celebrity, Bullets over Broadway, Deconstructing Harry, Sweet and Lowdown, Mighty Aphrodite, Small Time Crooks and the documentary Wild Man Blues are also available to stream. ELLIE PORTER

Happy birthday, Gene!

The French Connection ★★★★★

11.15pm Sky Thriller

Set against the backdrop of a sleazy New York, William Friedkin's 1971 classic stars Gene Hackman as wild-card detective "Popeye" Doyle, who's tasked with chasing down Fernando Rey's suave French drugs lord before the "connection" can be made. The Oscar-winning movie is one of a quartet of films screening today to mark Hackman's 90th birthday, with The Mexican, The Firm and Enemy of the State also on offer. ANDREW COLLINS

The real Mr Rogers

Won't You Be My Neighbor? ★★★★

Netflix

A Beautiful Day in the Neighborhood arrives in cinemas tomorrow, starring Tom Hanks as kids' TV guru Fred Rogers. A perfect opportunity, then, to watch this documentary about the man himself, whose message of kindness and tolerance is just what we need in these divisive times. KAREN KRIZANOVICH

FRIDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

GRIEVING
Jess Milner (Cush Jumbo) and Carol Kendrick (Maureen Beattie)

PICK OF THE DAY

Deadwater Fell 9.00pm C4

DRAMA There are broken lives all over the small Scottish town that's seen terrible tragedy, the deaths of three small children and their mum in a fire that she was blamed for starting deliberately.

The only survivor, local GP Tom Kendrick (David Tennant, never better), is now under a painfully bright spotlight, shunned by the villagers who feel deeply uncomfortable around him. There's an excruciating scene where Tom and his long-suffering mother Carol turn up at a fundraiser in memory of his family. His former neighbours and friends can barely bring themselves to meet his eye as he tries to glad-hand everyone.

As Daisy Coulam's very accomplished, absorbing domestic psychological thriller ends, Jess (Cush Jumbo) is determined to discover the truth about what happened on that night, while also mending her damaged relationship with her partner Steve and helping his children face their sadness.

ALISON GRAHAM

The Goes Wrong Show

8.30pm BBC1

COMEDY The Mischief Theatre company ends its run of farcical flops with a steamy Southern melodrama about a wealthy Tennessee family whose father is on his deathbed. It's as bananas as all their efforts, but it uses the fact the production is in a TV studio rather than a theatre stage to good effect.

Thanks to a misunderstanding, the set for one of the rooms has, we're warned, been turned on its side – so, to compensate, the cameras have been rotated 90 degrees, too. The result is scenes where gravity acts sideways – fun if you're pouring iced tea or handing out cans of beer. It's disconcertingly daft but, as with all their work, expertly done.

DAVID BUTCHER

Modern Family

8.30pm Sky 1

SITCOM The fact Modern Family has a dozen lead characters is one of its strengths. There's always another storyline to cut to. But it can also make the show manic. Tonight is one of those episodes where everyone gets a look-in and five storylines collide.

Gloria is worried that her sister is about to marry a no-good gold-digger from Colombia – but then learns his family is the one that's rich ("They own a soccer team, 12 hotels and five judges"). Phil is preparing his magic act to perform at a realtors' event, but worries it won't be good enough ("Does this straitjacket look right on me?"). And swanky lodgers make Mitch and Cam feel inferior. DAVID BUTCHER

Would I Lie to You?

9.00pm BBC1

COMEDY Tonight, the show gets self-referential. When silent guest Christina comes on for the "This Is My..." round, David Mitchell tells the opposing team: "This is Christina. When my list of implausible things that have happened to me that I can use on WILTY? blew away, she returned it to me." It's enjoyable watching Mitchell try to keep that claim afloat, while Lee Mack insists that he uses a mnemonic to make sure he has packed everything for his holidays (lipstick, mostly, it turns out).

Simon Day, Henning Wehn, Kiri Pritchard-McLean and Jo Brand make up the teams and Rob Brydon does some terrible beat-boxing. His rapping is even worse.

DAVID BUTCHER

Grantchester

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA Goodness, this show is gloomy. Week after week, the characters' unhappiness and guilt stack up like hymnbooks on a pew. The fact their woes play out against such a lovely backdrop of country lanes and college lawns makes it worse. At the vicarage, Leonard tries to persuade a glum Mrs C that God would want her to cheer up, but she's not so sure: "Where in the Bible does it say He wants us to be happy?" she demands.

Meanwhile, vicar Will is torn over his relationship with Ellie – and chooses an odd way out. And in the murder case of the week, a tormented student dies after taking LSD – or, as his professor calls it, "God in a bottle". DAVID BUTCHER

Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV) has been like a slow puncture of late, with several plotlines wheezing their way onto the screen. Gary and Derek's armed siege over Christmas, for instance, was weirdly lacking in tension, while all the nonsense involving Gemma, Ches and their quads becoming the corporate playthings of Freshco's felt laughter-free. However, Geoff's (Ian Bartholomew) insidious gaslighting of poor Yasmeen (Shelley King) is getting steadily more unsettling, to the point where I'd like to climb into the TV and threaten him with one of those vacuum cleaner attachments he keeps forcing her to use around their spotless home.

Geoff's latest ploy to undermine Yasmeen's confidence has been to make her believe she's an alcoholic – but when she attends an AA meeting with Peter (Chris Gascoyne), it leaves her believing she doesn't have a drink problem. Geoff seethes and begins plotting more ways to make her doubt her own sanity. DAVID BROWN

Cobra

9.00pm Sky 1

DRAMA A week after the geomagnetic storm struck Earth (or maybe just Britain, because no other country is mentioned), a national emergency has been declared in the North East. There's no power and no water, so unsurprisingly there's violence and anarchy, especially at the relief zone set up outside a hospital. The scene where vigilantes think they've found "Freckles", the Lithuanian criminal at the forefront of last week's university massacre, is deeply distressing.

Thankfully, Prime Minister Robert Sutherland (Robert Carlyle) isn't banned from travelling like everyone else, so he visits Northumberland and gives such a stirring speech it instantly calms the baying mob. If only it were that simple in real life. JANE RACKHAM

Stewart Copeland's Adventures in Music

9.30pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY The Police percussionist's trilogy concludes in uplifting style with our host becoming misty-eyed while hearing Jerusalem sung by choristers. An American born to atheist parents, Copeland went to boarding school in Somerset and recalls being scared by visits to church – until he heard the music. In a mad dash from English plainsong to the trance-inducing street drumming of Marrakesh and the gospel and blues of Mississippi, Copeland explores music's power to transport us.

Our host is unafraid of getting carried away while in the zone, and it's that passion that has made his journey such a delight, and a recommission a shoo-in... surely? MARK BRAXTON

The Graham Norton Show

11.15pm BBC1

CHAT No need to wheel out Miriam Margolyes to liven things up as they did a few weeks ago, because among tonight's guests is the most manic star in Hollywood: Jim Carrey, who's currently evil Dr Robotnik in Sonic the Hedgehog. On his last appearance, he did manage to tell one serious story.

He's joined by Margot Robbie (let's hope she won't tattoo anyone this time). Oscar-nominated for Bombshell and up for two Baftas (for Bombshell and Once Upon a Time... in Hollywood), she's talking about female ensemble action film Birds of Prey. "There's a misconception that action films are for dudes," is her view of playing comic book character Harley Quinn. JR

PARTY ANIMALS
Gary (standing, centre, played by Tom Davis) plans a posh soirée

King Gary

9.30pm BBC1 (Wales: 12.05am)

SITCOM Gary is planning a loft extension. The only snag? He hasn't got planning permission... yet. He hatches a plan to throw a sophisticated soirée to break the news to the "movers and shakers" of Butterchurn Crescent in the hope that the free booze will result in zero objections – not even from his nemesis Stuart (Romesh Ranganathan, excellent as ever).

While his mum Denise offers to cater for the party with her "big salmon", Terri insists she can handle it with a monster-sized Deliveroo order. Nothing, of course, quite works out the way either of them hopes.

Much of the humour is broad, yet there are nuggets of surreal silliness that are a treat, alongside neat turns of phrase – such as when Gary bellows to one of his workers, "If your spanner ain't turning, you're not earning." FRANCES TAYLOR

The phenomenal animated comedy for adults reaches its end, with the second half of the sixth and final series. It's grown into a fearsome (but still very funny) examination of addiction, self-absorption and celebrity, and can be expected to maintain its acid wisdom as our equine friend (voiced by Will Arnett) makes a last attempt at some personal growth. A 21st-century classic.

Wearing a different crown

P The Favourite ★★★★★ 8.00pm Sky Premiere

The capriciousness of court and the perils of falling from favour are explored in this tragicomic take on the reign of Queen Anne. Those that flank the erratic queen (played by The Crown's Olivia Colman) are a dastardly bunch, including her companion Lady Sarah (Rachel Weisz). The arrival of Sarah's cousin Abigail (Emma Stone) causes more strife, as the fallen aristocrat becomes a rival for Anne's affection. Expletives fly, bodices are ripped and plans are hatched, while deceptions deepen. EMMA SIMMONDS

New on Netflix

P Uncut Gems ★★★★ Netflix

A New York wheeler-dealer jeweller believes an Ethiopian opal is the answer to all his problems in this breathless thrill-ride of a movie. Adam Sandler is a revelation as Howard Ratner, whose ability to juggle family life, a young mistress and an addiction to gambling begins to fray when debt collectors come a-calling. Idina Menzel and Julia Fox stand out in a classy cast, but this is Sandler's show, and you can't help but root for his helpless risk junkie, all the way up to the film's nerve-jangling climax. JEREMY ASPINALL

In cinemas today

From The Witch director Robert Eggers comes another unsettling horror, The Lighthouse, starring Robert Pattinson (right) and Willem Dafoe. Also on release is Clint Eastwood's 41st film at the helm, true-life drama Richard Jewell (see feature, p34). And Terry Gilliam's much-delayed The Man Who Killed Don Quixote finally hits screens – but has it been worth the wait? ELLIE PORTER

Books Palliative care doctor Rachel Clarke YOUR RT P140

Wow! Did I just hear that?

Here's your chance to vote for the greatest radio moment of the year...

GREAT RADIO STOPS us in our tracks. It grips, it surprises, it captivates, it stays in the memory. No other medium affects us in the same way. The upcoming Arias – the Baftas of radio – honour all aspects of radio and podcasts, and RT is sponsoring the Moment of the Year. It's the category that recognises the power that audio has to thrill, move and astonish, and it's the only category to be decided by public vote.

So what was the greatest radio moment of the year up until September 2019? In conjunction with the Radio Academy (the organisers of the Arias), we've come up with a shortlist of ten moments, based on submissions from academy members, all of them remarkable in their own way. Now all you have to do is visit the Radio Times website, listen to the moments, and choose the one you think is the greatest. Will it be an amazing interview? A dramatic news story? A piece of vivid commentary? Dazzling presentation?

Your votes will decide, with the result announced at the Arias on Wednesday 4 March at the London Palladium.

HOW TO VOTE

Visit radiotimes.com/arias to listen to each of the ten clips and choose your favourite. Voting open until 11.59pm on 4 Feb 2020. One vote per person. For terms and conditions see website.

CHRIS EVANS'S NEW START ▶

21 JANUARY 2019

Chris Evans Virgin Radio

After nine years at the helm of his Radio 2 breakfast show, Chris Evans's return to Virgin Radio, where he'd first broadcast in 1997, was a huge deal – not least because of the decision to broadcast his breakfast show without ad breaks. Coming a week after Zoe Ball's Radio 2 debut, Evans (right) introduced Richard Ashcroft to play his first song live – Lucky Man.

Iain Lee's Late-Night Alternative goes out on talkRADIO every weekday night from 10pm to 1am and is one of the most compelling phone-in shows around. Anything and everything is up for grabs – from intimate procedures to the true spelling of 'Iain" – but the night a listener who was overdosing called in to Lee (right) produced a moment like no other.

The fatal shooting of journalist Lyra McKee (left) while covering rioting in Derry was one of the darkest days of Northern Ireland's post-Troubles era. Priest Joe Gormley's words cut home: "What cause, in God's name, has been served by this?"

The death of the Leicester City owner Vichai Srivaddhanaprabha and four others in a helicopter crash traumatised the club and its fans. Radio Leicester's Ian Stringer movingly described the scene at the ground the following morning as flowers were laid.

MENTAL HEALTH MINUTE

13 MAY 2019

Across UK radio

A moment that brought together BBC, commercial and community stations – some 500 of them – as they simultaneously marked Mental Health Minute. Katy Perry and Stephen Fry, alongside the Duke of Cambridge, were among those who contributed.

◀ ZOE BALL'S NEW START

Zoe Ball Radio 2

The departure of Chris Evans for Virgin opened up arguably the biggest gig in radio – breakfast presenter on Radio 2, the most listened to show in Europe. The mic was handed to Zoe Ball (main picture) and on 14 January, she welcomed her "superstar listeners", making history as the first ever female host of the show.

Holocaust Memorial Day

Saturday, Sunday Radio 4

Elisabeth Charlotte Gloeden – known as Liselotte or Lilo – was a Berlin lawyer who with her architect husband Erich gave shelter to Jewish people during the Second World War. When they were betrayed to the Gestapo for sheltering a general who had been involved in a plot to assassinate Hitler, they found themselves on trial (below).

Their story – one of two programmes on the network marking Holocaust Memorial Day on Monday – is told in The Remarkable Resistance of Lilo (1.30pm Sunday Radio 4), and you won't forget it quickly.

The other programme is equally outstanding. In The Science of Evil (8.00pm Saturday Radio 4) David Edmonds examines the origins of social psychology – the study of "how our thoughts, feelings, and behaviours are infuenced by others". He focuses on five of social psychology's pioneers – all of whom were Jewish, and all of whom lost family in the Holocaust. Finally, Radio 3's Words and Music (Sunday 5.30pm) commemorates the 75th anniversary of the liberation of Auschwitz.

45 MILLION MyPillows have been sold in the USA & Canada

...is the answer to getting a good night's sleep...

45 Million American & Canadian consumers have found the answer to a good night's sleep and it is called MyPillow, which is now available here in the UK.

It was invented by Mike Lindell from Minnesota. After years of not getting enough sleep, tossing and turning all night and waking up with a sore arm and painful neck, Mike started researching alternative pillows.

He couldn't find anything on the market, so he decided to invent his own and even obtained a US patent on the filling.

Mike tried 94 different designs over a 2 year period before he found the perfect formula for the best night's sleep. The secret is in the unique fill that adjusts to your exact individual needs regardless of your sleep position. The results are outstanding, it's everything you would ever want in a pillow.

- MyPillow doesn't go flat during the night
- MyPillow helps you stay cool all night
- MyPillow adjusts to your sleeping position
- MyPillow is washable and dryable

Millions of Americans and Canadians are sleeping soundly, isn't it time the UK woke up feeling refreshed? Well, the good news is, MyPillow is now available in the UK, manufactured at our factory in Coventry.

They say, nothing in life is guaranteed, but with MyPillow you can be safe in the knowledge that there's a 60 day Money Back Guarantee and it comes with a 10 year warranty.

What our North American customers say...

Kathryn S. wrote:
"Both my son and I have been having problems getting neck comfort at night. When I first felt the pillow I fell in love with it. We both now have a great night's sleep with soft comfort for our necks all night long since we have had the MyPillows."

"I personally guarantee MyPillow will be the most comfortable pillow you'll ever own or your money back."

Paddy O'Connell

A radio riddle

The mystery of the departing 5 Live host

Arriving in Middlesbrough for my new radio job, the door immediately blew off my car. An angry storm hammered at the door of Radio Cleveland long before I could do the same. I wrestled the mangled steel in the wind and rain, pushing at the razor-sharp wreckage of my white Citroën 2CV. "Welcome to the North East, young man," said the news editor, glancing at the mix of oil and blood that streaked my face. "You're not in Surrey now."

I've not bothered you much in the pages of Radio Times with my long and happy life in local radio. I haven't told you before that it all started for me on hospital radio in Aberdeen. I conducted an interview with a war hero of Bletchley Park, interrupted by the constant backfiring of his neighbour's Cortina.

Nor have I confessed to my near-electrocution in Essex as I raised the hydraulic radio car aerial on the Austin Mondeo estate steadily upwards towards the power lines of Chelmsford railway station. You've not yet read of the slug plague in Exeter cured by a ring of salt poured around the skirting board, as if warding off evil spirits.

'Mark Pougatch has been there for years. Why's he going?"

Anyway, during these carefree days, one of my housemates was a young man called Mark Pougatch. Mark has since become successful and famous, as a sporting guru on BT Sport, ITV Sport and Radio 5 Live. At Wimbledon years ago, Dan Maskell coined the phrase "Ooh I say!" to cover all eventualities at the net. Mark developed this kind of skill in cricket commentary.

The ball travels at 90mph: if the batsman edges it, you've got a fraction of a second at most to explain what happens next. It's not so much poetry in motion as poetry on willow. So I've followed Mark's rise to fame and, like me, he can come over as a bit posh. But unlike me, he always knows what he's talking about.

For this reason, fans of rugby, football, cricket, tennis and more have come to cherish the man, even if they can't understand his surname. So why am I telling you about him? Well, this former housemate of mine is at the heart of an intriguing radio mystery. He's leaving 5 Live after more than 25 years. All radio listeners are slow to like new voices, and slower still to let them go. Mark's been there through wet Saturdays and sunny Sundays for two decades. So why is he going? The newspapers say he's being culled, at 51, for being "too old". The BBC says Mark is leaving because of "his other commitments". Mark himself says the move is "not his choice".

Call Hercule Poirot! "Missing at the Mic!" "Riddle as Radio Man ruled offside and off air!" I wish the new people taking over from Mark every good fortune. These moments of change are needed, or every radio presenter would die at the microphone. "I'm sorry we can't bring you Paddy O'Connell this morning, he's just expired."

I've listened to Mark in every car I've owned, including that old 2CV. I've got the scars to prove it. And just as I correctly predicted in Radio Times that John Humphrys would get a new radio job, I'm reading the same tea leaves now. And they're spelling good news for all 50-something broadcasters. I'm predicting that Mark, unlike my old Citroën, hasn't reached the end of the road.

Paddy O'Connell hosts Broadcasting House on Sunday at 9am on Radio 4, and co-hosts the podcast Dogpod.

SOUND BITES

BY DAVID HEPWORTH

The Archers' pub name fiasco: no bull

It had to happen. Lilian has called in the management consultants to run the rule over the Ambridge pub and they've decided that while the hostelry itself does a good job in almost every respect, what it really needs is the new beginning that can only be provided by a change of name. In accordance with this thinking it will be farewell the Bull. Apparently animal names are no longer popular with the new generation of pub-goers, so we can expect the air to be thick with proposed vegan alternatives. Finally good sense will prevail and they will leave well alone.

Change for change's sake

What's true in the fictional world of Ambridge is true in the wider world. It's never a good idea to change the name of a place or product if you don't have to. There may be times when a change is forced upon you by events in the wider world. This was certainly the case with the American diet food that was called Ayds. There clearly wasn't much future in that. The same probably applied to Isis chocolate. The same definitely doesn't apply to the Bull. There's no groundswell of revulsion here. It's not as though Ambridge people are making plans to meet down the Veal Calf.

Name changes never work

Ninety-nine per cent of name changes, or "rebrands" as they're called by the consultants who make fortunes from them, are commissioned by executives hoping it will solve a problem that only they see as a problem. Believe it or not, only a few years ago Netflix seriously considered calling their streaming arm Qwikster before pulling back at the last minute. No such luck with the Post Office who spent a year and a half labouring under the handicap of their new name, Consignia, before going back to what they had before.

Radio Times proves it

The fundamental truth about brand names, as I'm sure Lilian will concede when the scriptwriters have had their fun, is that the customers never think about a name once they've decided they like the product it refers to and the management never stop worrying that the name is preventing new people from trying the same product. In this they are entirely wrong. The Beatles is a terrible name when you think about it, which is why you never do. Where brand names are concerned, what matters most is familiarity. If Lilian needs some reassurance on this, Radio Times will be happy to provide it.

Drama: Riot Girls: The Trial of The Well of Loneliness

3.00pm Radio 4

The chief fascination today in Radclyffe Hall's novel about a lesbian called Stephen is her tragic questioning of her "condition" – "Am I an abomination?", she asks. But in 1928, on its publication, Hall (above) found that the book was the subject of an obscenity trial, which is what gives rise to this affecting drama by Shelley Silas. The law hadn't even thought to make sexual activity between women illegal, so the case rested on the book's potential to corrupt. With a seething Kate Fleetwood as the author and Anastasia Hill as her supportive lover. FIONA HUGHES

Opera on 3 from the Met

6.30pm Radio 3

Based on a novel by Henri Murger, Puccini's most popular opera was written in the midst of a public quarrel, after his former friend Leoncavallo (composer of Pagliacci) announced that he too was setting La Bohème to music, insisting he'd thought of it first. Puccini won the race to get his work performed; Leoncavallo's version limped on to the stage a year later, rarely to be heard again. Today's Met relay stars US heartthrobs Ailyn Pérez and Matthew Polenzani as Puccini's ill-fated lovers.

Today's Choices

Between the Ears
6.45pm Radio 3

We have always enjoyed being transported to other worlds with the aid of manufactured sounds and images. Sound artist Lance Dann's kaleidoscopic journey takes him to a building near London's Regent's Park that once housed Louis Daguerre's Diorama, an elaborate system of apparently moving pictures that existed more than 60 years before the arrival of cinema. He revisits a Georgian house where he once helped owner Dennis Severs (1948–99) create a soundscape that helps visitors believe that Huguenot weavers are still in residence. A virtual-reality games designer also encourages Dann to jump from the top of a virtual skyscraper.

Radio 3 In Concert
8.45pm Radio 3

Founded as a showcase-cum-hothouse for young classical performers – offering them a two-year opportunity to give concerts with the BBC's house ensembles, make studio recordings and premiere new works – the BBC Radio 3 New Generation Artists scheme is 20 years old. Of its 100-plus alumni, many are now household names and a selection can be heard both in tonight's Radio 3 in Concert and in Afternoon Concert every day this week, starting with pianist Paul Lewis. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Today's Choices

Analysis
8.30pm Radio 4

If you can't bear to hear the – frankly overused – 2019 word of the year, "woke", any more, then I can't advise you listen to the first episode in the latest run of this exemplary series exploring the facts behind news stories and current trends. Which is a shame as you'll be missing out on an excellent deconstruction of whether "woke capitalism" – or corporate social responsibility if you were born before the 1990s – is just a thin veneer for companies to display right-on credentials while carrying on as usual, or if businesses can genuinely have a social conscience. There are no easy answers. DAVID CRAWFORD

Book of the Week: Motherwell
9.45am FM/12.30am Radio 4

The death of the journalist Deborah Orr at just 57 last year was widely mourned among her many friends and colleagues. A columnist of great integrity, originality and humanity, she completed this memoir not long before succumbing to cancer, and it's a piercing account of growing up in the west of Scotland steel town of Motherwell, and of the troubled relationship Orr had with her mother. Siobhan Redmond's reading is infused with Orr's questing spirit. SIMON O'HAGAN

Today's Choices

A Good Read
4.30pm Radio 4

Author Nick Hornby (above) loves Viv Albertine's memoir To Throw Away Unopened, but when it's theoretical physicist Carlo Rovelli's turn to comment on the musician's account of bruising family life, he reveals that he "has a problem with contemporary narrative". Hornby laughs nervously, and it's a moment that encapsulates the joy of A Good Read, returning today for a new series. How will one guest react to another's choice? Host Harriett Gilbert always throws a choice of her own into the mix, and it all adds up to a terrific half-hour. SIMON O'HAGAN

The Crisis Inside
11.00am Radio 4

The London Bridge attack in November was yet another chilling reminder that terrorism can explode at any time. In the wake of it, former prison governor Ian Acheson claimed we were "treating terrorist prisoners with jaw-dropping naivety". His grounds? In 2015 he had led an in-depth review of Islamist extremism in the England and Wales prisons and probation system, uncovering a system-wide failure: "It was a shambles." Here, he discusses those shortcomings and asks whether Usman Khan's murderous assault could have been prevented. CHRIS GARDNER

7.30 Radio 3 in Concert
Continuing a 20th-anniversary celebration of the BBC New Generation Artists scheme, Georgia Mann introduces British mezzo-soprano Alice Coote in a performance of Schubert's epic song cycle Winterreise, recorded last month at Wigmore Hall in London. Schubert wrote his melancholy cycle in 1827 when he was already wracked by the illness which was to kill him. Schubert felt these bleak songs were the greatest he'd written, and told friends, "Today I will play you a cycle of terrifying songs; they have affected me more than has ever been the case with any other songs."

Today's Choices

In Wordsworth's Footsteps

9.00am/9.30pm Radio 4

"There are in our existence spots of time," writes William Wordsworth (above), in which "Our minds are nourished and invisibly repaired". These wise words on the healing power of memory appear in Book 12 of his epic masterpiece The Prelude and are the starting point for this three-part exploration of the making of the poet by Jonathan Bate. This is an exquisite biography and a total immersion in words, music and the sounds of nature. With readings by Simon Russell Beale, contributions from Melvyn Bragg and specially composed music, prepare to be transported to another world, "fostered alike by beauty and fear".

JANE ANDERSON

Thinking Allowed

4.00pm Radio 4

Polari, the secret language used most famously by British gay men after the Second World War, should have died out after the decriminalisation of homosexuality. But Polari words such as "bevy" and "naff" are still in general use, and a dictionary of Polari was published as recently as 2002. In today's live discussion I trust the subject of radio will come up. In the 1960s Round the Horne brought Polari into our living rooms. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

The Score: Bank Robber Diaries

An engrossing, although not entirely pleasant, insight into the mind of Joe Loya, a former bank robber. He's articulate and entertaining but, as our obsession with true crime grows ever larger, should we be celebrating his like?

Today's Choices

The Forum
9.05am BBC World Service

With a blockbuster Tutankhamun exhibit under way in London, it's an apt moment for The Forum to blitz us with facts about one of Ancient Egypt's lesser known icons. While no one could mistake Nefertiti's remarkable bust, dug up in 1912 complete with flat-topped crown (above), much of this Egyptian queen's life remains shrouded in mystery; what power did she wield in her society? And does her legendary beauty obscure how we perceive her status? Bridget Kendall's three guest experts each have their own take on Nefertiti's journey from pharaoh's wife to 3,000-year-old celebrity. TOM GOULDING

Radio 3 in Concert
7.30pm Radio 3

On the eve of the UK's departure from the EU, hopefully even the most belligerent of Brexiteers will have stopped complaining about the BBC broadcasting Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, aka "the European anthem". With its choral hymn to universal brotherhood, it's perfect for launching Manchester's "Beethoven at 250" cycle, co-presented by the city's two symphony orchestras, the BBC Philharmonic and the Hallé, which unveils its first instalment tonight under its music director Mark Elder. MARK PAPPENHEIM

DISCOVER RADIO

In Our Time: Tutankhamun
After Nefertiti (The Forum, above), catch up on the In Our Time devoted to the riches unmasked when Howard Carter led the excavation of the tomb of Tutankhamun. Why did some Egyptologists scorn the blingy findings? JANE ANDERSON

8.30 In Business
The Business of Clicks. Online retail spending has increased more than fourfold in the past ten years. It now accounts for almost one in five pounds we spend shopping. But while times are tough for our high streets, e-retailing is far from a licence to print money. With widespread discounting and the growing cost of delivery and returns, margins are being squeezed and many are finding it a struggle to survive. In this programme, Adam Shaw investigates how the economics of e-commerce work, what the move to predominantly online will mean for many retailers, and what our shopping environment may look like in 10 years' time.

FRIDAY Radio

Today's Choices

Roots
11.00am Radio 4

The Nottingham Television Workshop has trained many of Britain's best working-class screen talents, with alumni including Samantha Morton, Shane Meadows and Vicky McClure (above). This comedy is obviously inspired by the Workshop (it's directed by the founder Ian Smith, and features current members and McClure) but is no flag-waving hurrah. There's plenty of bite to gags about inverse snobbery, and diversity box-ticking as a rich businessman tries to give something back to the acting workshop that helped him in his youth – and there are salient remarks about how much working-class success often comes down to luck.

DAVID CRAWFORD

Friday Night is Music Night
8.00pm Radio 2

Into the bleak midwinter comes a ray of sunshine, a Burt Bacharach concert recorded last July at London's Hammersmith Apollo. This "master of the softest arts" (The Guardian) is now 91, but age has not withered his variety. The concert included recent songs written in response to Trump and school shootings. The highlight, however, was Joss Stone's elegant covers of classics such as Wishin' and Hopin' and I'll Never Fall in Love Again. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

10.00 The Verb
How can writers make "goodness" compelling – as a theme or character trait – and is poetry the best form for exploring it? Do we need more writing on "goodness"? Ian McMillan is joined by guests Frank Cottrell-Boyce, Will Harris, Kate Fox and Toby Litt.
10.45 The Escape Artist
10/10. The Resurrection. Ross Sutherland traces the life of Swiss writer, poet, artist and boxer Arthur Cravan, whose anarchic art heralded Dada, surrealism, situationism, punk rock and alternative comedy. His whole life was an extravagant show and his influence spreads right across the 20th century. Here, Ross investigates one of Cravan's most outrageous stunts.
11.00 Late Junction
Verity Sharp hears from Berlin-based composer and artist Holly Herndon, who often uses the voice to explore the boundaries between the human and the technological. Her last record, Proto, was created with a choral ensemble and a nascent AI "baby" called Spawn that was conceived with her partner Mathew Dryhurst and created by AI expert Jules LaPlace. It uses neural networks to process audio and respond to music it "hears".

Face behind the voice

Helen Scott BBC Essex

Age 30
Current job Presenter of the weekday evening show (Mon-Thu 7pm).
CV "I'm a Basildon bird!" Trained as a dancer and singer, then toured professionally. In 2015, won a performance contract at Proud Cabaret. "One night, the host called in sick and I was asked to stand in. It was a lightbulb moment! I loved interacting with a live audience – so I rebranded myself overnight as a presenter!" Hosted various events, plus presented a show for Phoenix radio in Brentwood, then an on-line gaming show for Virgin, and then Jackpot 24/7 on ITV. Returned to Phoenix radio for a stint last June. "Then a job popped up on BBC Essex for the evening show – great timing! And I also saw that the BBC were searching for new voices, so I entered that as well. Four weeks later, I started. A bit of luck and a lot of hard work..!"
Best moment "Going live on my very first show – the most exciting moment of my life so far! It's an absolute dream to be on the radio. They've let me loose with my own ideas and content, and I've had lovely messages of support."
Worst moment "I haven't had a bad moment on air yet, but I don't want to jinx myself! Sure, I've pressed the wrong buttons a few times, tho..."
Off air "I'm an ambassador for the LGBT community and I host a lot of events promoting equality. I have a mini yorkshire terrier called Tallulah. I like to dance, any chance I get. And I watch a lot of Netflix – I love psychological thrillers!"
First radio memory "At my nan's – she's an avid listener to The Archers. When I was eight or nine, I got a tape recorder and pretended to do a radio show – my co-host was a made-up dog called Bruce!"
Favourite broadcasters "I love the new presenters of today – radio is really diversifying. I love Maya Jama on Radio 1, and I love that Rylan's on the radio, too. We used to go out clubbing together!"
Ambition "To really get my teeth into this radio job. I'm passionate about bringing a new voice and point of view to the people of Essex. I want to brighten their day – bring a smile to their faces."
Dream job "I want Strictly! Tess, whenever you're done, I'm ready! I've even perfected the 'Keeeeeeeep dancin'!' moves, with just a little 'jazz hands'..."
Secret skills "I have a fully diamantéd ukelele and I can sing and play all of Bette Midler's greatest hits! She's my absolute idol." CAROLINE MEYER

Face behind the voice

Helen Scott BBC Essex

Age 30
Current job Presenter of the weekday evening show (Mon-Thu 7pm).
CV "I'm a Basildon bird!" Trained as a dancer and singer, then toured professionally. In 2015, won a performance contract at Proud Cabaret. "One night, the host called in sick and I was asked to stand in. It was a lightbulb moment! I loved interacting with a live audience – so I rebranded myself overnight as a presenter!" Hosted various events, plus presented a show for Phoenix radio in Brentwood, then an on-line gaming show for Virgin, and then Jackpot 24/7 on ITV. Returned to Phoenix radio for a stint last June. "Then a job popped up on BBC Essex for the evening show – great timing! And I also saw that the BBC were searching for new voices, so I entered that as well. Four weeks later, I started. A bit of luck and a lot of hard work..!"
Best moment "Going live on my very first show – the most exciting moment of my life so far! It's an absolute dream to be on the radio. They've let me loose with my own ideas and content, and I've had lovely messages of support."
Worst moment "I haven't had a bad moment on air yet, but I don't want to jinx myself! Sure, I've pressed the wrong buttons a few times, tho..."
Off air "I'm an ambassador for the LGBT community and I host a lot of events promoting equality. I have a mini yorkshire terrier called Tallulah. I like to dance, any chance I get. And I watch a lot of Netflix – I love psychological thrillers!"
First radio memory "At my nan's – she's an avid listener to The Archers. When I was eight or nine, I got a tape recorder and pretended to do a radio show – my co-host was a made-up dog called Bruce!"
Favourite broadcasters "I love the new presenters of today – radio is really diversifying. I love Maya Jama on Radio 1, and I love that Rylan's on the radio, too. We used to go out clubbing together!"
Ambition "To really get my teeth into this radio job. I'm passionate about bringing a new voice and point of view to the people of Essex. I want to brighten their day – bring a smile to their faces."
Dream job "I want Strictly! Tess, whenever you're done, I'm ready! I've even perfected the 'Keeeeeeeep dancin'!' moves, with just a little 'jazz hands'..."
Secret skills "I have a fully diamantéd ukelele and I can sing and play all of Bette Midler's greatest hits! She's my absolute idol." CAROLINE MEYER

Face behind the voice

Helen Scott BBC Essex

Age 30
Current job Presenter of the weekday evening show (Mon-Thu 7pm).
CV "I'm a Basildon bird!" Trained as a dancer and singer, then toured professionally. In 2015, won a performance contract at Proud Cabaret. "One night, the host called in sick and I was asked to stand in. It was a lightbulb moment! I loved interacting with a live audience – so I rebranded myself overnight as a presenter!" Hosted various events, plus presented a show for Phoenix radio in Brentwood, then an on-line gaming show for Virgin, and then Jackpot 24/7 on ITV. Returned to Phoenix radio for a stint last June. "Then a job popped up on BBC Essex for the evening show – great timing! And I also saw that the BBC were searching for new voices, so I entered that as well. Four weeks later, I started. A bit of luck and a lot of hard work..!"
Best moment "Going live on my very first show – the most exciting moment of my life so far! It's an absolute dream to be on the radio. They've let me loose with my own ideas and content, and I've had lovely messages of support."
Worst moment "I haven't had a bad moment on air yet, but I don't want to jinx myself! Sure, I've pressed the wrong buttons a few times, tho..."
Off air "I'm an ambassador for the LGBT community and I host a lot of events promoting equality. I have a mini yorkshire terrier called Tallulah. I like to dance, any chance I get. And I watch a lot of Netflix – I love psychological thrillers!"
First radio memory "At my nan's – she's an avid listener to The Archers. When I was eight or nine, I got a tape recorder and pretended to do a radio show – my co-host was a made-up dog called Bruce!"
Favourite broadcasters "I love the new presenters of today – radio is really diversifying. I love Maya Jama on Radio 1, and I love that Rylan's on the radio, too. We used to go out clubbing together!"
Ambition "To really get my teeth into this radio job. I'm passionate about bringing a new voice and point of view to the people of Essex. I want to brighten their day – bring a smile to their faces."
Dream job "I want Strictly! Tess, whenever you're done, I'm ready! I've even perfected the 'Keeeeeeeep dancin'!' moves, with just a little 'jazz hands'..."
Secret skills "I have a fully diamantéd ukelele and I can sing and play all of Bette Midler's greatest hits! She's my absolute idol." CAROLINE MEYER

Face behind the voice

Helen Scott BBC Essex

Age 30
Current job Presenter of the weekday evening show (Mon-Thu 7pm).
CV "I'm a Basildon bird!" Trained as a dancer and singer, then toured professionally. In 2015, won a performance contract at Proud Cabaret. "One night, the host called in sick and I was asked to stand in. It was a lightbulb moment! I loved interacting with a live audience – so I rebranded myself overnight as a presenter!" Hosted various events, plus presented a show for Phoenix radio in Brentwood, then an on-line gaming show for Virgin, and then Jackpot 24/7 on ITV. Returned to Phoenix radio for a stint last June. "Then a job popped up on BBC Essex for the evening show – great timing! And I also saw that the BBC were searching for new voices, so I entered that as well. Four weeks later, I started. A bit of luck and a lot of hard work..!"
Best moment "Going live on my very first show – the most exciting moment of my life so far! It's an absolute dream to be on the radio. They've let me loose with my own ideas and content, and I've had lovely messages of support."
Worst moment "I haven't had a bad moment on air yet, but I don't want to jinx myself! Sure, I've pressed the wrong buttons a few times, tho..."
Off air "I'm an ambassador for the LGBT community and I host a lot of events promoting equality. I have a mini yorkshire terrier called Tallulah. I like to dance, any chance I get. And I watch a lot of Netflix – I love psychological thrillers!"
First radio memory "At my nan's – she's an avid listener to The Archers. When I was eight or nine, I got a tape recorder and pretended to do a radio show – my co-host was a made-up dog called Bruce!"
Favourite broadcasters "I love the new presenters of today – radio is really diversifying. I love Maya Jama on Radio 1, and I love that Rylan's on the radio, too. We used to go out clubbing together!"
Ambition "To really get my teeth into this radio job. I'm passionate about bringing a new voice and point of view to the people of Essex. I want to brighten their day – bring a smile to their faces."
Dream job "I want Strictly! Tess, whenever you're done, I'm ready! I've even perfected the 'Keeeeeeeep dancin'!' moves, with just a little 'jazz hands'..."
Secret skills "I have a fully diamantéd ukelele and I can sing and play all of Bette Midler's greatest hits! She's my absolute idol." CAROLINE MEYER

Face behind the voice

Helen Scott BBC Essex

Age 30
Current job Presenter of the weekday evening show (Mon-Thu 7pm).
CV "I'm a Basildon bird!" Trained as a dancer and singer, then toured professionally. In 2015, won a performance contract at Proud Cabaret. "One night, the host called in sick and I was asked to stand in. It was a lightbulb moment! I loved interacting with a live audience – so I rebranded myself overnight as a presenter!" Hosted various events, plus presented a show for Phoenix radio in Brentwood, then an on-line gaming show for Virgin, and then Jackpot 24/7 on ITV. Returned to Phoenix radio for a stint last June. "Then a job popped up on BBC Essex for the evening show – great timing! And I also saw that the BBC were searching for new voices, so I entered that as well. Four weeks later, I started. A bit of luck and a lot of hard work..!"
Best moment "Going live on my very first show – the most exciting moment of my life so far! It's an absolute dream to be on the radio. They've let me loose with my own ideas and content, and I've had lovely messages of support."
Worst moment "I haven't had a bad moment on air yet, but I don't want to jinx myself! Sure, I've pressed the wrong buttons a few times, tho..."
Off air "I'm an ambassador for the LGBT community and I host a lot of events promoting equality. I have a mini yorkshire terrier called Tallulah. I like to dance, any chance I get. And I watch a lot of Netflix – I love psychological thrillers!"
First radio memory "At my nan's – she's an avid listener to The Archers. When I was eight or nine, I got a tape recorder and pretended to do a radio show – my co-host was a made-up dog called Bruce!"
Favourite broadcasters "I love the new presenters of today – radio is really diversifying. I love Maya Jama on Radio 1, and I love that Rylan's on the radio, too. We used to go out clubbing together!"
Ambition "To really get my teeth into this radio job. I'm passionate about bringing a new voice and point of view to the people of Essex. I want to brighten their day – bring a smile to their faces."
Dream job "I want Strictly! Tess, whenever you're done, I'm ready! I've even perfected the 'Keeeeeeeep dancin'!' moves, with just a little 'jazz hands'..."
Secret skills "I have a fully diamantéd ukelele and I can sing and play all of Bette Midler's greatest hits! She's my absolute idol." CAROLINE MEYER

BBC Radio Wales

Face behind the voice

Helen Scott BBC Essex

Age 30
Current job Presenter of the weekday evening show (Mon-Thu 7pm).
CV "I'm a Basildon bird!" Trained as a dancer and singer, then toured professionally. In 2015, won a performance contract at Proud Cabaret. "One night, the host called in sick and I was asked to stand in. It was a lightbulb moment! I loved interacting with a live audience – so I rebranded myself overnight as a presenter!" Hosted various events, plus presented a show for Phoenix radio in Brentwood, then an on-line gaming show for Virgin, and then Jackpot 24/7 on ITV. Returned to Phoenix radio for a stint last June. "Then a job popped up on BBC Essex for the evening show – great timing! And I also saw that the BBC were searching for new voices, so I entered that as well. Four weeks later, I started. A bit of luck and a lot of hard work..!"
Best moment "Going live on my very first show – the most exciting moment of my life so far! It's an absolute dream to be on the radio. They've let me loose with my own ideas and content, and I've had lovely messages of support."
Worst moment "I haven't had a bad moment on air yet, but I don't want to jinx myself! Sure, I've pressed the wrong buttons a few times, tho..."
Off air "I'm an ambassador for the LGBT community and I host a lot of events promoting equality. I have a mini yorkshire terrier called Tallulah. I like to dance, any chance I get. And I watch a lot of Netflix – I love psychological thrillers!"
First radio memory "At my nan's – she's an avid listener to The Archers. When I was eight or nine, I got a tape recorder and pretended to do a radio show – my co-host was a made-up dog called Bruce!"
Favourite broadcasters "I love the new presenters of today – radio is really diversifying. I love Maya Jama on Radio 1, and I love that Rylan's on the radio, too. We used to go out clubbing together!"
Ambition "To really get my teeth into this radio job. I'm passionate about bringing a new voice and point of view to the people of Essex. I want to brighten their day – bring a smile to their faces."
Dream job "I want Strictly! Tess, whenever you're done, I'm ready! I've even perfected the 'Keeeeeeeep dancin'!' moves, with just a little 'jazz hands'..."
Secret skills "I have a fully diamantéd ukelele and I can sing and play all of Bette Midler's greatest hits! She's my absolute idol." CAROLINE MEYER

How low can you go?

In his first column for RT, wine expert Joe Fattorini guides you through low-alcohol drinking

I HAVE RED WINE in my fridge. White wine under my bed. And champagne behind my lavatory. That's because I'm a full-time wine expert, and this is what we do. Over the next few weeks I intend to share as much wine wisdom with you as I can.

I hope you've had a damp January. A "dry" month off alcohol isn't necessary for your liver. Or kind on your palate. It's better to have damp months all year round.

'Make "less but better" your mantra'

Rather than 11 months of bingeing on vino collapso and one month trying to recover, make "less but better" your mantra for 2020. You'll fall in love with wine all over again.

That's why I have red in my fridge. I spend as much on wine as anyone, but I buy fewer, better bottles than most. After a couple of glasses of something delicious, I put it in the fridge to preserve it. Then when I come in from work the next day, I take it out and let it warm back up to room temperature while I cook supper.

There are other ways you can cut back on alcohol deliciously. German whites from the Mosel River aren't fashionable, but they are naturally low in alcohol – and mouth-wateringly zesty, floral and intensely fruity. One hundred and fifty years ago they were among the most valuable wines in the world; today they're the best value.

WHAT IF YOU really do want an entirely alcohol-free option? You don't have to explain yourself, but I should let you know that the available wines are a mixed bag. Leitz Eins Zwei Zero riesling is my favourite, in a style meant to be a bit sweeter. Torres Natureo wines are also close to "proper" wine. The white muscat and the rosé work on their own but try making the red into a sangria. Drop in some sliced oranges, lemons and cherries with cinnamon syrup and leave overnight, ready to serve the next day with half lemonade, half soda water and plenty of ice. With that, get yourself off to bed. Above the cases of white, past the champagne in the bathroom.

RT WINE OFFER

Enjoy a taste of the Mediterranean good life with fruity La Vida Bonita – for just £3.29 a bottle! Pick up a case of six bottles for £19.74, saving £13, plus FREE delivery

LOW ALCOHOL, HIGH QUALITY
If you're a fan of sparkling wine but trying to cut down, meet this dazzling new low-alcohol fizz. It's made from the moscatel grape into a feather-light, fruit-filled fizz – and there's another reason to cheer: it has only 5% alcohol!

TASTING NOTES
Perhaps its appeal is due to the seductive peach and orange blossom aromas and lovely, fruity grape flavour, plus a tantalising hint of sweetness – all joyfully delivered on a soft wave of delicate bubbles, popular in Valencia's seaside bars and restaurants: a style captured perfectly by La Vida Bonita.

SAVE £13 PLUS FREE DELIVERY
We've teamed up with our friends at Laithwaite's Wine to bring RT readers this special offer. Pick up a case of six for just £32.94 £19.74. This saving of £13 means you are paying only £5.49 £3.29 a bottle. What's more, we'll deliver to you for FREE (usually £7.99).

Life and loss

When cure is no longer an option, every moment counts, says palliative care doctor Rachel Clarke

DEPEND UPON IT, sir," wrote one of the greatest literary figures of the 18th century, Samuel Johnson, "when a man knows he is to be hanged in a fortnight, it concentrates his mind wonderfully."

These words often cross my mind at work. It's hard to think of anywhere in modern Britain more likely to distil what matters in life than the unfamiliar world of a hospice. People often assume these citadels of dying must be dark and dismal places, full of fear and taboo, where there is nothing left for a patient to experience but suffering.

But as a palliative care doctor – someone who has chosen to make dying her day job – what strikes me every day at work is not so much the proximity to death, as my patients' unabated hunger, so often, for life. A terminal diagnosis changes everything and nothing. Dying people are not some alien breed, consumed by gloom and misery. They are exactly like us, only more so – more focused, more attentive, more aware of what matters. When cure is no longer an option, every moment counts.

This winter, one patient's mood was as low as the sun slanting in from icy skies. Although she was 92 – when the prospect of dying might seem entirely expected – a new diagnosis of terminal cancer had shattered Elizabeth's* sense of her place in the world. A matriarch who cherished being the linchpin of her family, she thought nothing of striding several miles through muddy fields before breakfast. Her vivacity astounded everyone who knew her.

Now, though, cancer had eaten into the bones of her legs, fracturing both femurs. So long as she remained absolutely still, pinned to her bed like an insect on cardboard, the pain was kept at bay. But try to stand, and it screamed blue murder.

"Elizabeth," I began one day, concerned at her sadness, "I have a suggestion I think you might like."

When a patient cannot leave their bed, we'd reasoned, then perhaps it is time for the bed to leave the hospice. After all, do hospital beds not have wheels? Can December chill not be wrapped up warm?

Elizabeth leapt at the idea. It was the first time I'd seen her smile. And so, bundled up in more blankets than Yoda, she was wheeled out by the nurses onto a frosted lawn where she lay in her bed, beneath a blue vault of sky in which red kites wheeled and soared. The bite of fresh air, the glittering light, the touch on her cheek of a wintry sun: all left her enraptured.

From that moment on, come rain or shine, Elizabeth revelled in her daily excursions into the world at large. It wasn't much, we all knew; so much less than she'd known. Yet it was life nonetheless – in all its astonishing loveliness – and she grasped it with a fierce joy, an intensity Samuel Johnson would surely have marvelled at.

None of this is to deny the heartache, for patients, of time cut short. Everything is heightened in a hospice, and that means sorrow as much as pleasure. There is an exquisite suffering to losing all you hold dear – everything and everyone you love in the world – that is beyond the reach of a doctor's drugs. Grief cannot be palliated. Yet even for this, I've learnt, there is a potent medicine. No matter how anxious, fearful or tormented a patient feels, what helps is human connection. The nurse who holds your hand in the dark when you're frightened, the housekeeper who remembers you like extra butter on your toast, the doctor who can recite all your grandchildren's names. These small acts of sweetness are code for something that means more than any volume of morphine: that you matter, that you are cared for and that even here, at life's end, you are not alone.

CAREER CHANGE Before becoming a doctor, Rachel Clarke was a television journalist

GETTY; LAURA GALLANT

'Grief, I believe, is the form love takes when someone dies'

The currency of a hospice is kindness. Organising a date night for a man who would never reach his wife's next birthday might seem trivial, inconsequential against what he knew was to come. But when husband and wife sat at the NHS table cloaked in white linen, the nurses had somehow sourced fresh rose petals and champagne flutes. The candlelit Chinese takeaway burnt bright against the dark. I'd seen the care and attention with which the nurses had prepared the room that day. They knew that long after he died, in his wife's mind, this evening might live on.

Perhaps the most important thing I've learnt about dying is that rarely, if ever, does talking about it make it worse. I have never yet met a patient who felt more afraid after discussing what dying might be like for them. The gradual weariness, sleepiness and eventual unconsciousness that typically precede death are so much less alarming than their worst fears.

Loss, in the end, is the necessary price of being alive yet mortal. And grief, I believe, is the form love takes when someone dies. We seem to have an astonishing capacity to find a way of still experiencing pleasure and meaning in life with even the most severe of illnesses. It is an enormous privilege to be with my patients, hovering in the doorway between life and death, displaying such resilience. The best bits about living – kindness, courage, love, tenderness – infuse every inch of a hospice.

A Tex/Mex family drama

AMERICAN DIRT
JEANINE CUMMINS
Open Book Sunday 4pm Radio 4

Lydia lives in Acapulco, Mexico, where she runs a bookshop; she has an eight-year-old son, Luca, with her journalist husband. Her life is comfortable, full, mostly unaffected by the city's drug cartels – until her husband writes an article about a local gang leader, invoking a chain of events that alters her family for ever. American Dirt (£14.99, incl p&p) by debut author Jeanine Cummins tells Lydia's story, as she embarks on the perilous journey across the Mexican/US border to keep her son safe. Early reviews have tipped the novel as a modern American classic that vividly brings to life the risks taken by nearly a million migrants and asylum-seekers every year.

THE OUTSIDER
STEPHEN KING
The Outsider Mon 9pm Sky Atlantic

For most authors, the chance to see their work adapted for the screen doesn't come around that often; for Stephen King, it's rare for him to publish a novel that doesn't get the Hollywood treatment. His work has spawned nearly 50 films and 25 TV series; this month brings the 26th, as The Outsider (£8.99, plus £1.50 p&p) comes to Sky Atlantic. The story has all the hallmarks of a King fable: in a town in Oklahoma, a man is arrested for the murder of a young boy. It looks like an open-and-shut case – but police detective Ralph Anderson soon uncovers a complication...

THE MERCIES
KIRAN MILLWOOD HARGRAVE
Jo Whiley Monday 7pm Radio 2

The Mercies is the first adult novel from Kiran Millwood Hargrave, whose books for young adults have earned her many plaudits. She brings the same sense of magic to her grown-up debut (£14.99, incl p&p; published 6 February), which draws from a real-life tale. In 1617, a ship goes down off a Norwegian island, taking most of the settlement's men with it and leaving the women to forge a new-look society. Eighteen months later, Absalom Cornet arrives from Scotland, bringing order and religion – but he doesn't get the capitulation he expects. HANNAH SHADDOCK

YOUR RT Money

Are your investments as ethical as you'd like them to be?

There are new concerns – from the climate to the gender pay gap – to consider, says Paul Lewis

Ethical investing used to mean avoiding things like tobacco, gambling, or the arms trade. Nowadays it's more likely to mean investing positively in firms that sustain biodiversity and help reduce our carbon footprint. That may include companies involved in renewable energy, pollution management, or water efficiency. Climate concerns can also extend the list of avoided firms to any that extract oil or gas, mine coal or metals, or make the plastics that are found in our oceans.

'Beware investments masquerading as "green"'

Other criteria might include companies that treat their workers well, do not use complex structures to reduce their tax bill, or are dealing with the gender pay gap among their staff. Only two banks feature on many ethical lists: Co-operative Bank and Triodos.

If you want to invest ethically, you can find a good independent financial adviser by using a web search. I like adviserbook.co.uk. Enter your postcode, then tick "investment", "confirmed independent" and "chartered financial planners". You can also go to paullewismoney.blogspot.com and search "financial advice".

Many people ask if investing in what is now called ESG (environmental, social and governance) means getting a lower return. Research organisation EIRIS says it does not. One caller to Radio 4's Money Box last year said she was happy earning whatever she got from her animal welfare-friendly investments; more importantly, she slept better at night.

Over the last year, the amount of money invested by individuals in green or ethical funds has grown by around a quarter, and is five times what it was in 2004. That is still a tiny fraction of the total, but it shows that attitudes are changing.

One final warning. Beware investments masquerading as "green" – many people have lost their money by investing it in forests in South America or firms involved in fitting solar panels. Assume any promised return of four per cent or more is risky at best, a fraud at worst.

WILL MY DAUGHTER LOSE OUT ON PREMIUM BONDS GIFTS?

Claire writes: "I have gifted my grandchildren £15,000 of premium bonds each. As a single mother with three children under 16, my daughter gets tax credits and is worried this money may affect it or her claim to Universal Credit, now or in the future. Could you please clarify?"

Paul Lewis replies: The good news is that for both tax credits and Universal Credit, investments owned by children do not count as the parent's, and so do not affect those benefits, and nor do any prizes they may win.

However, other older means-tested benefits, such as Income Support and Jobseeker's Allowance, may be affected.

With those benefits, if the capital of a child exceeds £3,000, then no benefit will be paid for that child, but the rest of the benefit is not affected. The income earned by a child's capital is generally not added to the parent's. But if the benefit has been claimed since 2004 and the capital of a child is less than £3,000, then the income may be added to the parent's when benefit entitlement is calculated.

Always check with the Department for Work and Pensions if your circumstances or those of your children change.

LASTING POWERS OF ATTORNEY – ONLY £399* pp

There may come a time when you are unable to make decisions for yourself, maybe through illness or injury. If that were to happen, who would make decisions about your care or manage your finances?

It's important you make your wishes clear in a legal document known as a Lasting Power of Attorney (LPA).

There are two types of LPA – one that covers your health and welfare, and one that covers your property and financial affairs.

A health and welfare LPA deals with your medical care and can only be used once you become unable to make decisions for yourself.

A property and financial affairs LPA deals with financial matters, and can also be used while you still have full mental capacity, for example if you become frail or immobile.

If you're married and your partner becomes unable to make decisions, marriage does not give you the authority to make decisions on their behalf – you will only be able to do this if you're formally appointed as an attorney.

READER OFFER – SAVE £250

For a limited time, Key Estate Planning is offering to create both your property and financial affairs LPA and your health and welfare LPA for £399 per person. Offer ends 17 February 2020.

Key Estate Planning has a team of estate planning specialists who can explain and arrange these documents. They can also offer you a free no-obligation consultation and recommendation on wills and trusts, based on your circumstances and legacy objectives*.

To arrange your LPAs, please call 0800 408 7180, or to download a free guide, visit radiotimes.com/lpa

Lines open Mon–Thurs 9am–7.30pm, Fri 9am–5.30pm and Sat 9am–1pm

*Normal price £649pp (per person. All prices include VAT). Excludes the Office of the Public Guardian registration fee. Products only available in England and Wales. Any recommendations will be quoted and only charged for if you instruct Key to proceed.

Vera's tours

The detective series inspires visitors to flock to the North East to follow in the bootsteps of Brenda Blethyn...

Vera
Sunday 8.00pm ITV

OVER THE PAST ten years, Brenda Blethyn's detective drama Vera has visited the North East's wildest and most beautiful corners. It's been credited with significantly boosting visitor numbers and there are even Vera tours of the Northumberland and Newcastle locations.

The latest series has taken Blethyn to Britain's highest pub, a tiny Scottish fishing village and a gigantic slag-heap sculpture. It's sure to inspire followers in DCI Vera Stanhope's footsteps, says executive producer Phil Hunter.

Admire the Lady of the North

A huge land sculpture some ten miles north of Newcastle is glimpsed briefly in this week's Vera. "The slag heaps of an old open-cast colliery have been recultivated with greenery, and they've carved an enormous woman who's called the Lady of the North," says Hunter. "There's a shot of Vera driving past, and you've got Northumberlandia looking down the lens." The Lady of the North is 100 feet high and a quarter of a mile long. She's the centrepiece of Northumberlandia park, and visitors can walk the four miles of winding paths that mark out her reclining figure.

Head for the hills

The remote village in this week's Vera is Alwinton, a one-street village surrounded by hills on the edge of Northumberland National Park. "It's an amazing place. There's a shot towards the end and it looks like we digitally enhanced those enormous, rock-clad hills because they're so vivid," says Hunter. A popular five-mile walk from the village to the River Alwin follows one of the many drove roads in the border hills that used to be frequented by whisky smugglers as well as shepherds, cattle drovers and pedlars.

Go for a seaside stroll...

Whitley Bay is the home of Vera's creator, crime writer Ann Cleeves, and regularly has a cameo. In this series, look out for Seaton Sluice, a tiny fishing harbour north of the seaside resort. "It's a beautiful little harbour," enthuses Hunter, "which we've shot a number of times from different angles" – though you wouldn't know it. "From there, you can walk round to St Mary's Lighthouse, which we've shot in the past – an elegant white tower that you can walk out to at low tide across a causeway. Follow the path round to the heart of Whitley Bay, then along the promenade and sea wall to Tynemouth Priory, which featured in the very first episode." If you're in need of a pitstop, stop at the art deco Rendezvous Café or Spanish City, an Edwardian palace housing restaurants and cafés – both have appeared in the drama.

...or a wild cliff walk

Episode two of Vera's new series was filmed in a Scottish fishing village, Burnmouth. "Just after you get over the border, you hit this amazing coastline," says Hunter, "which is where we found Burnmouth harbour. When we shot the scene where Vera attends the crime scene, it was just stunning – beautiful skies and the North Sea was a millpond. The next day, you could only see a hundred yards out to sea and the whole coastline was getting battered!" The harbour is reached via a road that winds down a steep cliff and ends at a little row of whitewashed cottages and brightly painted houses. For more dramatic scenery, walk a stretch of the 30-mile Berwickshire Coastal Path, which wends north from Burnmouth to Cockburnspath and south to Berwick-upon-Tweed.

Have a pint in Britain's highest pub

The lonely tavern in episode one is 400-year-old Tan Hill Inn, which sits atop an exposed hill in the Yorkshire Dales, 1,732 feet above sea level and almost five miles from the nearest village. "It was one of those serendipitous moments," Hunter explains. "The director, Paul Gay, said to me, 'I've found a pub that's perfect. The travelling distance is a bit of a killer, but it sounds exactly like the one in the script.' When we told the writer, Paul Logue, about it, he said that was the pub he'd based it on!"

Originally the Tan Hill Inn served coalminers, but now walkers warm up in front of its roaring log fires because the 268-mile Pennine Way meanders past the front door.

Retreat to Holy Island

Vera's cottage is on the Holy Island of Lindisfarne, a tidal isle off the Northumberland coast that you can drive to at low tide. "We've got to plan the cottage scenes meticulously," Hunter says, "because if you get stuck there, you'll be waiting four or five hours or so to drive back across. It hasn't happened yet, but it's been close."

The Irish monk who converted Northumbria to Christianity, St Aidan, founded a monastery on the island in the seventh century. Today you can visit the striking ruins of 12th-century Lindisfarne Priory and a 16th-century castle with a walled garden, which is looked after by the National Trust. Although the island only has a population of 160, the village has plenty of places to stay, a couple of pubs and cafés, and a winery that makes mead. CLAIRE WEBB

Word of the Week – dysania

When the alarm goes off on a cold January morning, it's worth remembering that "alarm" came to us from the Italian alla arme!: "to arms!" – a military call to soldiers to prepare for imminent attack. Although now much diluted in meaning, it may seem apt for the body's reaction to the insistent buzz from the bedside table.

The medical term dysania feels particularly relevant at this time of year. Dysania is a condition characterised by the physical impossibility of getting out of bed. It may be a symptom of a serious disease, but the term, from the Greek for "bad sorrow", has slipped into the mainstream to fill a gap in our language for a profound reluctance to get moving.

Dysania is often paired with clinomania, an equally useful term for the near-irresistible desire to lie down.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

Cold Feet's close to home

LIFE GOES ON
How is Jenny (Fay Ripley) bearing up?

It was brilliant to see the return of Cold Feet (13 January ITV), with the trials and tribulations of these ageing friends. In saying that, James Nesbitt as Adam seems to be looking younger each series!

Fay Ripley's acting as Jenny, just getting her life back to some kind of normality after her treatment for breast cancer, is so convincing – and a little too close to home for me, as I'm waiting to go into hospital for tests myself, after discovering a lump. It was quite difficult to watch, knowing how worried my husband is for me, but Fay's performance was heart-wrenching.

The revival of Cold Feet is such a success, with storylines that are current and interesting. They keep you wanting more, especially to see how it all pans out with Karen (Hermione Norris) and Adam...

MUSIC OUT OF TIME

We very much enjoy Call the Midwife (Sunday BBC1), not least as we are of an age where we can increasingly remember the era depicted, and especially the recent story showing Churchill's state funeral in January 1965 (5 January). However, we noticed that the music accompanying the episode (the Beach Boys' California Girls and the Byrds' Turn Turn Turn) were American tracks that were not released until much later that year. Surely some contemporary music from the British pop charts of the day would have been more fitting?

Jack Kirk Slough

A Call the Midwife spokesperson tells RT: "For artistic and licensing reasons, we always choose songs that either date to the year in question, or slightly pre-date it. Dating them month by month wouldn't work creatively, and it would be a shame to exclude music from America, which made such a rich impact in the UK at the time."

LET'S TALK ABOUT IT

What a brilliant afternoon drama My Dad's Wardrobe (10 January Radio 4) was. Appearing to be a comedy at the start, it only dawned much later that it was about bereavement and how members of a family and their friends manage, or perhaps fail to manage, to deal with it. It was so sensitively written by Frazer Flintham: right to the end where Louie (superbly played by Aaron Gelkoff) apologises to his friend John, "I thought you had forgotten my dad. You never talked about him." "Only because you didn't," John replies.

I had tears in my eyes. Please, let's have more plays of this quality.

Terry Jones
Cinderford, Gloucestershire

SPOOKED BY AMBRIDGE

David Hepworth's claim that Radio 4's Ghost Stories from Ambridge failed to work as a stand-alone series (RT, 11 January) must not be allowed to go unchallenged. John Rowe's (as Jim Lloyd) fine reading of three very different tales of the supernatural and the macabre was one of the highlights of Christmas radio. May it become a regular feature for many years to come.

Cynthia Reavell
Hastings, East Sussex

IT'S AN EMERGENCY...

Is anyone else worried about the return to Casualty (Saturday BBC1) of the angel of death, Connie Beauchamp (Amanda Mealing)? I'm assuming the General Medical Council doesn't exist in Holby. It's clearly OK for a doctor to lie, steal drugs, treat patients while on said drugs and then come back to work – albeit with a new hairdo – to explain away her wrongdoing. I'm sticking to my local hospital!

Jonathan Topping
Hove, East Sussex

LOSING THEIR BEARINGS

Having enjoyed the epic journey of the Red Arrows to Canada in episode one of Red Arrows Take America (8 January Channel 5) and been reminded frequently how risky it was, I hope that the pilots were not given the same map as us viewers, which showed the route of their final leg to Halifax in... Newfoundland!

Perhaps they were taking the scenic route?

Dr Alan Gibson Bristol

A spokesperson for Channel 5 says: "We apologise for the editorial inaccuracy in our episode of Red Arrows Take America – this is being corrected before being re-uploaded to our catch-up service My5."

SPEED FREAK

Please could the BBC use my licence-fee money to commission another 300 episodes of The Speedshop (12 January BBC2)?

TEARS FOR SOUVENIRS

I'm a latecomer to Soul Music (Wednesday Radio 4), featuring music with a powerful emotional impact, and am writing to thank everyone involved in making it. My daughter, a physiotherapist in the community, was listening to Days (15 January) as she drove between patients. She messaged me to say, "This is so beautiful I am crying in my car..." So I listened and I, too, cried. It was very moving to hear of the impact this 1968 song by the Kinks has had on the people who contributed.

I've seen the breadth of music that has featured in 28 series of Soul Music since 2000: I have a lot of catching up to do.

ON THE WING Tony Garnett with David Bradley during the filming of Kes in 1969

Ken Loach pays tribute to producer Tony Garnett, 1936–2020

There has not been a more innovative or daring producer of drama for television than Tony Garnett, my good comrade and loyal friend, who died recently.

Tony joined the Wednesday Play in the mid-60s as a story editor. Our brief was to reflect contemporary life and not to be boring. Along with Roger Smith and Ken Trodd, Tony’s job was to find new writers with original voices who had something to say. As directors, we had to let their words sing out loud and clear. Some task for a bunch of youngsters still in their 20s!

Tony relished the challenge. And we got into trouble. The plays and films would seem mild today, but back then they caused shivers down the spines of the great and good: “Too much swearing!” “Is it fact or fiction?”

With Tony at the helm, we managed to move from studio productions, with their heavy cameras and theatrical sets, to filming on the streets, catching the reality of daily life. The stories were sometimes tough, shocking even. Tony steered them through the hierarchy at the BBC, so that they went on air as the writers intended.

Later he produced series for World Productions, which he founded – Cops, This Life and Ballykissangel were all his. Those who worked with him remember him with affection and great respect. His encouragement for writers, directors, actors and the whole team gave everyone confidence to do their very best work.

But one thing marked Tony out: everything he did was founded on a clear view of society and its tensions and contradictions. He understood that there is a conflict of interest between those who exploit and those who are exploited; those who grow wealthy from the labour of others and those who receive less than the value of their work; and those who use their power to oppress and those who suffer that oppression.

That is why his subject – our subject – has been the lives of ordinary people, their struggles, their laughter and tragedies. Because Tony knew that when change comes, and it must, it will come not from the rich and powerful, but from the rest of us.

Mark Pougatch leave the station. He’s a wonderful radio presenter and his departure follows that of the likes of John Inverdale in recent times. The voices of my youth are hard to replace. I hope the BBC knows what they’re doing on this station, particularly in respect of its sports coverage. Youth is no equal for experience.
Adam Lovatt London N3

SISTER ACT

What a pleasure to see Sorcha Cusack (Mrs McCarthy in Father Brown) acting alongside her real-life “little sister” Niamh (13 January BBC1). It was an affecting story, beautifully acted by the sisters. And then the next day we had the return of Father Brown’s long-standing friend Sid (Alex Price); the odd-couple relationship between the priest and the “artful dodger” has always been one of the many joys of the series.

SISTERS Niamh and Sorcha Cusack in Father Brown

BRISTOL OR LONDON?

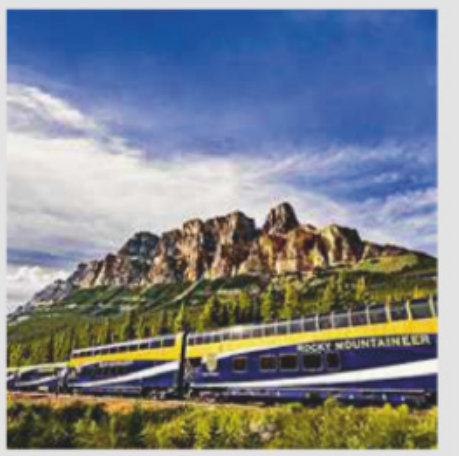

I live in the historic and architecturally fascinating city of Bristol, which frequently doubles as London in dramas. In the excellent The Trial of Christine Keeler (Sunday BBC1) I have spotted Great George Street and the Georgian House, Brandon Hill, the Grand Hotel and the Guildhall in Broad Street, St Augustine’s Gate and Queen Square. ▷

RT ARCHIVE UPDATE

Time travel back to the *RT*s of the 1950s!

The BBC Genome Project, which has been steadily digitising back issues of Radio Times, decade by decade, has recently released copies of the magazine from the 1950s into its online archive – and what a treasure trove they are! You can explore entire issues from 1950 to the cusp of the 1960s, and see the features, listings, cartoons and adverts that give a real flavour of the era.

Excitingly, the 50s saw the first TV coverage of a general election (in February 1950 – Labour's Clement Attlee won), and RT printed an alphabetical list of all 625 constituencies to fill in as the results came in – "from the studio, with the visual aid of maps and charts, and from Trafalgar Square where viewers will see the latest returns as they are flashed on a huge screen".

In this distant world, Test cricket and Miss World were live on BBC TV, daily TV news was launched (in July 1954, with Richard Baker) and viewers saw the Queen's Christmas message for the first time (1957). Strictly's big sister, Come Dancing, arrived on our screens, along with Blue Peter and Zoo Quest, presented by a talented young film-maker called David Attenborough...

BBC historian Jean Seaton tells RT: "Radio Times in the 1950s reflects an era of TV 'firsts', with the BBC bringing the nation together for events like the Coronation, in 1953. The magazine perfectly captures the fun-seeking energy of the decade with ballroom dancing, cooking, holiday and children's programmes, alongside enthralling TV horror (Quatermass) and radio thrillers.

"Radio Times also exposes the dark undertow of anxiety in the decade: the Cold War is reflected through programmes like Panorama (1953) and perhaps by the smash-hit adaptation of George Orwell's Ninety Eighty-Four (1954), starring Peter Cushing and Yvonne Mitchell. RT was a window on the BBC, and the BBC was a window on the nation and the world."

The archive is at http://genome.ch.bbc.co.uk – go to Issues, then 1950s, and search by year and date.

EXPLORE OUR PAST
Highlights include 1956's Zoo Quest, and Peter Cushing in 1954's Nineteen Eighty-Four

◁ I'm looking forward to seeing more of my city, which has been used in the forthcoming Agatha Christie adaptation, The Pale Horse. And I'm told there are still the Daleks to see on Brunel's Clifton Suspension Bridge in a future episode of Doctor Who. What wonders we have in store!
Paul Main Bristol

MARRIED LIFE...

I know they were playing it for laughs, but Steve and Tracy's couple counselling in Coronation Street (13 January ITV) was ludicrous. Having trashed the counselling room – lamps knocked over, pictures askew, the clock smashed! – they would have been ejected for bad behaviour.

Finally, the "counsellor" told them to "be kinder to each other". This so wrongly represents the value of couple counselling I wonder how the storyline got past the test of "credible"!
William Bennett Croughton, Northamptonshire

WITTY
Doctors'* nod to the Frazer Hines era of *Doctor Who

THE DOCTOR IS IN

What a joy it was to see Frazer Hines in a guest role on Doctors (10 January BBC1), playing Sonny Troughton – a homage to his time playing Jamie, companion to Patrick Troughton in Doctor Who from 1966 to 1969. But the homage didn't stop there – I chuckled happily when I saw that the local newspaper website had the titles of four Who stories from that time.

Well done to Doctors' cast, crew and writers for a great show.

View from my sofa

DANIEL RADCLIFFE

‘I play games. It’s super nerdy’

He likes an afternoon of Scrabble – and is proud of his small TV…

What’s the view from your sofa?
We don’t have a huge TV. It’s not tiny, but I go to friends’ houses and think, “Whoa, the TV is like a cinema screen.” That’s crazy to me. People come over to my house and say, “Wait, really? This is your TV? This is it?”

Where do you live?
I split my time between London and New York, but I’m in the USA as much as possible right now.

What are you watching?
I love cartoons like BoJack Horseman and Rick and Morty. I genuinely think you’re missing out if you say, “I don’t watch cartoons because they’re just for kids.” BoJack Horseman is an amazing piece of television. I also love Netflix documentaries.

Wait… Weren’t you in BoJack Horseman?
You’re right, but I’m not praising it because I was in it. BoJack Horseman is one of my favourite shows from the past few years.

What’s your guilty TV pleasure?
I’m obsessed with Top Chef in the States. The other week, we watched six episodes in a day.

Do you watch many dramas?
I’m really bad about watching drama or anything worthy. There have been loads of amazing series that I haven’t seen yet, including Breaking Bad. I haven’t seen Mad Men all the way through. When it comes to drama, I get bored easily and I don’t like to commit myself to a show I’m not enjoying. And when I do enjoy a drama, I usually sit there feeling jealous and wishing I was in it. That’s why I stick to documentaries, cartoons and cooking shows.

What’s your favourite thing to do when you turn off the TV?
My girlfriend [actor Erin Darke] comes from a big family of card players, so she’s introduced me to a lot of card games. We play a lot of board games, too. I feel very lucky that I’ve found somebody I can turn to at four o’clock in the afternoon and say, “Do you want to play Scrabble?” And for her to say, “Yeah, sure.” It’s super nerdy.

Who wins at Scrabble?
Erin wins – I haven’t won a game in weeks. She plays [the app] Words with Friends all the time, so I feel like she’s getting practice all day long and I’m way behind.

Are you a super nerd?
I grew up doing lots of things where I thought, “This is super nerdy. I’ll never be able to do this around a girl.” But that’s the wonderful thing about the moment you find the relationship you’re meant to be in. It’s like, “Oh, I can do all of that stuff and you don’t mind. And you actually think it’s fun, too. This is fantastic!” We play a lot of games. We watch a lot of TV. We go and see movies. We hang out and eat. We read. And in my spare time, I generally go to the gym, which is a super boring answer, but I go to the gym a lot.

Do you miss any television when you’re away from the UK?
I miss British quiz shows, like University Challenge. I think Britain has the best quiz shows of any country. Here’s my observation about quizzes around the world… The harder the quiz show in the UK, the less prize money you win. Whereas coming third on Wheel of Fortune wins you a grand. It’s crazy. ADAM TANSWELL

Daniel Radcliffe stars in Miracle Workers, Mon 9pm on new channel Sky Comedy

NOTHING TO WATCH?

MY MUSIC Joanna Newsom. Her 17-minute songs with harps aren’t to everyone’s taste, but she has an amazing voice.

MY MOVIE 12 Angry Men from 1957 – it’s a feat of writing.

MY BOOK The Master And Margarita [by Mikhail Bulgakov] is the only book I’ve read twice.

8 PAGES OF HOLIDAY INSPIRATION

Sail and rail

Get on board with the latest way to cruise

IN ASSOCIATION WITH IMAGINE® CRUISING
MORE THAN JUST A CRUISE.

Pack your dancing shoes

Dancing has long been a tradition on sea voyages, and who better to prepare you than Strictly Come Dancing champion Kelvin Fletcher and his partner Oti Mabuse? Imagine Cruising's American Smooth cruise holiday includes an exclusive dance lesson and Q&A with TV's nimble-footed duo at one of New York's grandest hotels.

After enjoying a black-tie gala dinner and dance show in the Big Apple, set sail for Southampton on board Queen Mary 2 and perfect your new moves in the most fabulous ballroom on the high seas.

Claire Webb caught up with Kelvin to discover more about this event for Imagine Cruising customers...

So Kelvin, where do you keep your glitterball trophy?

It has pride of place on the mantelpiece in my kitchen. Whenever we have visitors, the first thing people say is, "Where is it and can I have a picture with it?" So it's probably due a polish!

Have you put on your dancing shoes since the Strictly final?

My legs had a well-earned rest for a couple of weeks, then I started rehearsals for the Strictly live tour. Oti's not doing the tour so we won't dance together again until New York – it'll be great to be reunited. Hopefully I've not forgotten anything because I don't think she'd be too happy with that!

What will Imagine Cruising guests learn during their dance lesson with you and Oti?

They'll get a taste of Ballroom and Latin dances, from the American Smooth to Cuban salsa. It'll be very informal, very relaxed and a lot of fun – nothing too intense. And I'll be there to show how I did it and where I struggled.

What's your top tip for dance novices?

Patience is absolutely key. When I started, I got very frustrated when I couldn't master a step – ▷

THE AMERICAN SMOOTH

Enjoy a dance extravaganza in a lavish New York hotel and a luxury cruise on the Queen Mary 2. 10 nights from £1,699pp – departing 11 June 2020

Fly to the Big Apple for a date with TV's favourite dance duo, Kelvin Fletcher and Oti Mabuse. Spring is a great time to visit this city of yellow cabs and landmarks familiar from the big screen. Settle in to your hotel and spend the next day exploring the best Manhattan has to offer, from the bright lights of Broadway to dazzling Times Square. You'll then spend the following day with Kelvin and Oti at one of New York's most lavish hotels, The Pierre, where you can learn anything from Cuban salsa to the American Smooth.

In the evening, enjoy a black-tie gala dinner-and-dance, where Kelvin and Oti will take to the floor with routines that have been fine-tuned to perfection.

Price includes

- Outbound flight (London departure)
- Three-night hotel stay at the Millennium Hilton New York Downtown

CUNARD

TOP LOCATION
The Pierre Hotel, facing Central Park in New York

◁ and that's one thing I really battled with. You have to trust the process. There's so much technique involved and so many things to think about: Are you on the heel or ball of your foot? Where is your weight? What's your head doing? But if you're patient and keep practising, you'll be doing that tricky step before you know it.

What makes a good dance partner?
Enjoying yourself and showing it. When you're both smiling, you can laugh about your mistakes and move on.

'I love cruises: you learn so much and meet so many interesting people'

KELVIN FLETCHER

Which dances will you perform during the black-tie dinner?
We're still deciding, but they will be all-new dances – the ones where you're sitting there thinking, "I want to get up there myself." And hopefully that's what will happen: people will grab their partner, get up on the dancefloor and practise what they learnt earlier in the day.

Will you be wearing amazing outfits?
Absolutely. Oti's got a few ideas… You'll definitely notice me, put it that way!

NEW YORK, NEW YORK!
Times Square, Manhattan

New York is a great place for a dance lesson – have you been to the city before?
I've been a couple of times and I'm very much looking forward to going back. It's one of those rare cities where I can absolutely imagine myself living. There's a real buzz and energy about New York that's quite unique.

Any recommendations?
There's a café called Ellen's Stardust Diner and the waitresses are all budding Broadway stars. As you're eating, all of a sudden one of them will jump up onto the tables and give a rendition of a song from Les Mis or Cats or a classic song from another show. They belt out amazing numbers and the rest of the staff join in and then, five minutes later, they're back serving coffee.

What are you planning to do when you're not dancing?
I'm a big theatre fan but I've never seen a Broadway show, so that's top of my list.

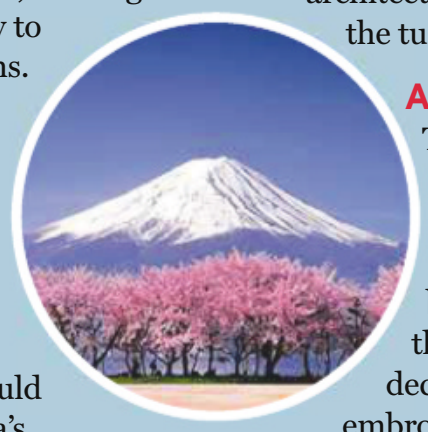

For you, what's the best thing about cruising?
The people you meet. I love travelling because there's so much to see out there, you learn so much and you meet so many interesting people. It's those memories you'll look back on for years to come and cherish the most.

Welcome to the world of sail and rail

Combine easy days on board luxury liners with eye-opening trips by train with Imagine Cruising. The best of both worlds beckons, so what are you waiting for!

LUXURY CRUISES AND deluxe trains transport passengers back to the golden age of travel and a sail-rail holiday is a great way to combine adventure and total relaxation. Imagine Cruising's rail packages pair spectacular train journeys with fabulous cruises, offering an unforgettable, stress-free way to discover far-flung destinations. And if you're a cruise connoisseur and your other half is a rail aficionado, they're the perfect solution to give you both the happy holidays you deserve.

If you've always wanted to venture Down Under, you could couple a cruise with Australia's greatest rail trip: the Indian Pacific. This train journeys 2,700 miles from Perth to Sydney, travelling between two oceans. You'll follow in the tracks of TV's Michael Portillo as you traverse Australia's wild interior in style, stopping in laid-back Adelaide and the Outback.

Imagine's Discoveries Down Under holiday package also includes a Princess cruise exploring the myriad delights of New Zealand's North and South Islands: the glacier-carved inlets of Fiordland National Park, the perfectly preserved Victorian and Edwardian architecture of Dunedin, vibrant Auckland and the turquoise waters of the Bay of Islands.

ASIAN ODYSSEY

Thinking about heading east? Imagine Cruising's Exotic Eastern Escape begins with an opulent slow train and ends with a trip on one of Japan's bullet trains. The holiday begins with three nights on board a hotel-on-wheels decked out with Thai silks and Malaysian embroidery: Belmond's Eastern & Oriental Express. Its green and gold carriages carry travellers from Bangkok to Singapore, with time to enjoy the lush scenery of the Malay Peninsula and a tour of the Bridge on the River Kwai – immortalised by the classic war film.

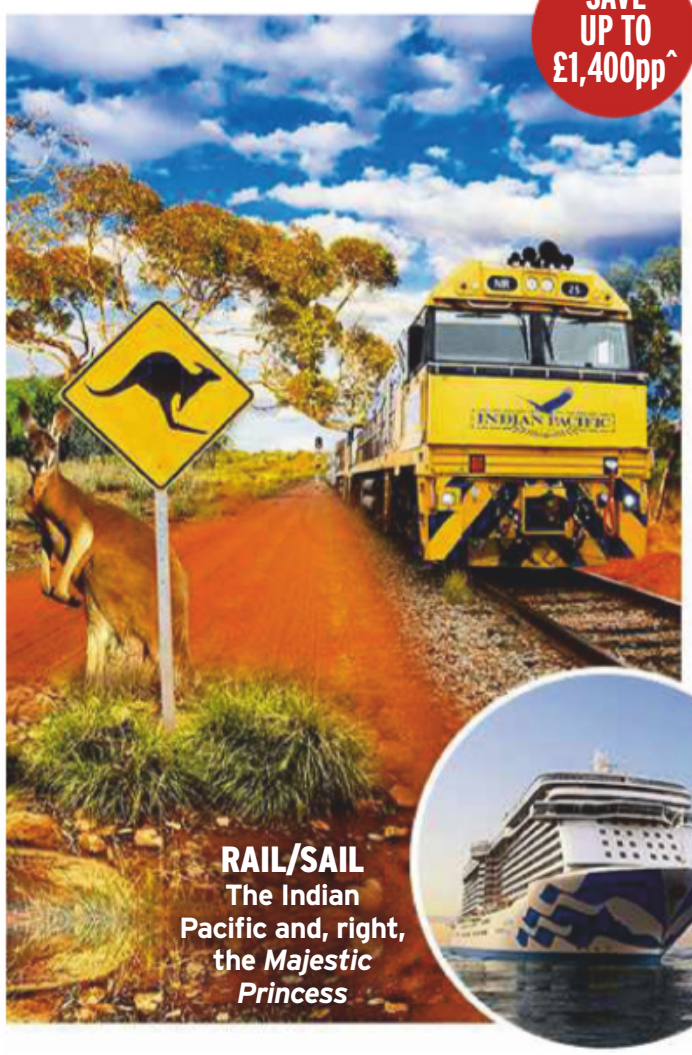

The five-star treatment doesn't end there. After exploring Singapore, set sail on Queen Elizabeth – Cunard's art deco-inspired ocean liner – and visit Vietnam's Ho Chi Minh City, Hong Kong, Manila, Hiroshima and Tokyo. Before flying home, zoom from mystical Mount Fuji (left) to Tokyo on a high-speed shinkansen.

THE MED AND THE ALPS

If you prefer to avoid planes, Imagine Cruising's Italian Lakes and Venice Simplon-Orient-Express combo (from £5,199pp) includes a Mediterranean cruise on Cunard's Queen Victoria, two nights in Venice and a week exploring Italy's great lakes: Como, Garda and Maggiore. Savour two slow rides through the Alps on the narrow-gauge Centovalli – the "100 Valleys" railway – and the panoramic Bernina Express (right). The grand finale is an overnight journey on the lavishly appointed Venice Simplon-Orient-Express.

So get booking for a trip of a lifetime! CLAIRE WEBB
