THIS WEEK'S UNMISSABLE TV

ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR

Make time for Dawn French's fun drama

IF YOU FANCY a bit of escapism during these wet and gloomy days (at the time of writing, so I hold myself a hostage to fortune if we are all wearing Hawaiian shirts in a 35 degree heatwave as you read this) try The Trouble with Maggie Cole (Wednesday ITV).

It's set in Cornwall – I think I see Launceston Castle in there – which has never proved a setback for any drama (Doc Martin, Poldark) and stars Dawn French as busybody Maggie Cole. She runs the gift shop of said castle, claiming that this makes her a "historian" and she likes to think she's the adored centre of village life.

But most people can't stand her, and think she's nosey, which of course, she is. Maggie's breezy world becomes stormy when she has far too many double gin and tonics and gossips to a predatory local radio "journalist". (I say this as a journalist who can still remember what she was taught about libel, and I know that nothing Maggie says would ever see the light of day in real life).

Suddenly, Maggie's world implodes. You'll be able to see where it's heading, which makes The Trouble with Maggie Cole all the more delightfully excruciating.

THIS WEEK, ITV is firing its drama big guns – as well as Maggie Cole, Monday sees the return of Liar, starring Joanne Froggat and Ioan Gruffudd.

I can't say I was ever very comfortable with a drama that was based on a series of sexual assaults, but it was a big hit back in 2017. As it returns, police investigate the attacker's murder.

However, if you like your murder mysteries to be a bit more leisurely and cosy and set in pretty places, then McDonald & Dodds (Sunday ITV) is for the one for you. Tala Gouveia and Jason Watkins are the titular cops who roam the mean streets of, er, Bath.

WHAT I'M WATCHING...

NINA NANNAR

'The last few months have been dominated by films," says the arts editor of ITV News. "I've watched loads leading up the Baftas and Oscars, but now I'm back from LA, I've binged on my beloved Coronation Street to catch up. I loved the incredible White House Farm, so compelling. Series two of Succession was simply brilliant, even though everyone is horrible in it. And at the other end of the scale there's This Country – so beautifully written and observed, gentle and funny.'

Malorie Blackman interview – page 16

Coronation Street

STUART MACONIE

'Apologies to all fine actors, dramatist and screenwriters," says the radio presenter, "but as a quiz nerd my unmissable appointments to view/hear every week are Only Connect and University Challenge, with Richard Osman's House of Games for hors d'oeuvres and a side order of Round Britain Quiz.'

The 6 Music Festival – page 120

WHAT WE'VE LEARNT THIS WEEK

Remember the charming scenes of Queen Anne – as played by Olivia Colman – fondling pet rabbits in The Favourite? Pure fiction. Anne didn't keep rabbits and she wasn't a dithering figure ruled by her favourites either. In fact, she was a shrewd ruler who won a major war and forged Great Britain. Oh, and as for the royal lesbian love triangle: forget it.

WHAT GETS US TALKING...

JUST MISBEHAVIN'

Michael Aspel had some hair-raising moments during his presenting career, but he's reliving one of the most chaotic in a new BBC2 documentary. Aspel was one of the presenters of the 1970 Miss World contest in London when it was disrupted by Women's Liberation Movement campaigners. "I certainly had the sense that the objections to Miss World were not simply among a few grumbling matrons," says Aspel now, "but I had no idea that there was an actual attack planned." Aspel is one of the contributors to the documentary, which is being aired to coincide with the release of Misbehaviour, a movie dramatisation of the story starring Keira Knightley. Also featured is Jennifer Hosten (above), who represented Grenada and became the first black woman to win the crown.

THE DOCTOR WILL SEE YOU AGAIN

Despite rumours of on-set discord and disagreement we can confirm that another series of Doctor Who is being made. The cast is expected to regroup in Cardiff later this year, though who among them will return is not yet known. The current series ends this week.

FAITH IN THE FUTURE

Adrian Chiles, Edwina Currie and Fatima Whitbread are among the recruits signed up to a new series of BBC2's religious travelogue Pilgrimage. Spiritual journeys are nothing new to Chiles, a converted Catholic – in 2015 he visited 46 churches in 46 days. At the time he thought it would be "a struggle, a penance". But concluded: "It was a rich and enriching experience." The series is expected to air before Easter.

ON THE HUNT FOR WHITE RHINO

A BBC wildlife film crew is about to fly out to South Sudan following reports that a lost herd of northern white rhino has been discovered. This species of rhino was thought to be extinct in the wild and, with the death of the last male two years ago, efforts to save the species were presumed doomed. But rumours of their demise might have been exaggerated. "We are cautiously very excited," says a BBC insider.

EXCLUSIVE FIRST LOOK

The first series of Flack – Anna Paquin and Sophie Okonedo's razor-sharp drama based in the murky world of a London PR agency – focused on the women as they tried to manage the image of their wayward clients, while also preventing their own lives from spinning out of control. The second series is coming soon on W and, says Paquin, "We're giving the boys a little bit of a chance to come and play, too."

"My husband's directing a couple of the episodes – he's my hero," she adds, regarding the involvement of Stephen Moyer, who was her co-star in US vampire drama True Blood. Sam Neill also joins the series in front of the camera as Okonedo's ex-husband and silent partner of the PR company. Neill is also very familiar to Paquin, having starred alongside her in The Piano, for which she won an Oscar when she was just 11 years old.

"It's kind of funny," Paquin says, "because I instantly felt I was about nine years old again and as if I'm not really sure what I'm doing. It put me right back – transported me to feeling like a little kid. But he's wonderful and so talented and I'm really excited he wanted to come play with us."

Radio rocks! Don't wreck it

BBC Radio will be destroyed if the bosses chase a "yoof" audience

AT THE BREAKFAST table the other day my youngest daughter asked, "Can Daddy give me a lift to school?" My wife pointed to the screen-less contraption in the corner, next to the broken toaster. The radio.

"That man talking," she said, "is Daddy. He's working. He presents the Today programme. He's not actually here."

When BBC bosses say the young aren't listening to BBC radio any more and we have to treat this as an emergency and run around as if our pants were on fire, my first reaction is: "Hey, what took you so long?"

My second is… Hmm. Perhaps the young will get old. It has happened before. Perhaps radio will outlive this panic, as it has outlived all others and potentially those to come.

But it will only outlive the panic if well-meaning bosses resist the temptation to destroy the wireless in order to save it.

Let me take you back to 1999, when the greatest brand in the history of British broadcasting eviscerated itself on a whim. Independent Television News was a power in the land. The evening news – News at Ten – was its flagship programme. Its presenters were famous, but so were the correspondents: Michael Brunson, Sandy Gall and others were household names.

But in a decision later described by ITV's executive chairman Michael Grade as "a shocking mistake", ITV executives ditched it. News at Ten became News at When. They moved it back to 10pm later, but by then it was too late.

The BBC faces a similar set of decisions in the age of digital everything. The temptation will be to reduce the funding of the core programmes and chop up its output into the bite-sized chunks those in charge think "yoof" might consume.

RARE SIGHT

GETTY; RADIO TIMES ARCHIVE

'The temptation is to chop up radio output into bite-sized chunks'

The problem with this was best expressed recently by a former editorial director of the BBC, Roger Mosey, who asked, "If you glimpse at the BBC headlines on your phone, does that make you want to pay the corporation £154.50 a year in the same way that a brilliant Panorama or an entertaining edition of PM would?"

Of course it doesn't. People love (or hate) live programmes. The latest radio audience figures provided by the independent analysts at Rajar say Today is at close to record levels, listened to by more than 7 million people in the average week. Across the nation, 48.1 million of us are tuning in to one or more radio stations – or, increasingly, asking our smart speakers to tune us in – for at least three hours a day.

Radio programmes are as successful as they have ever been. And for speech radio, the competition already offered to the BBC by LBC and Talk Radio is about to be refreshed and enlivened by Rupert Murdoch's Times Radio. It's all radio. Often digital, often clipped and retweeted. But always linear to start with. A programme with an identity. A presenter you feel you know or cannot stand, or both.

BOSSES AT THE BBC get a hard time from everyone. They are often – whisper it – right in their judgements. John Birt pressed reluctant junior staff into developing the BBC website. It's now a world-beater. A decade ago the corporation tried – with ITV – to set up a Netflix-like service that would have put British broadcasting in a much better place when the actual Netflix came to pass. It was properly innovative thinking from a public body – stymied, industry insiders agree, by the timidity of government officials.

So all is not lost. Nobody wants to fade away. Nobody wants to be the modern equivalent of the wreckers who destroyed News at Ten.

I hope one day my daughter will listen to a Today programme still broadcast as a distinct entity with a character and a presence. And say, "I think my father worked there once… though I was too young to care."

FROM THE RT ARCHIVE… 27 FEBRUARY–4 MARCH 1988

WHAT WE WATCHED

Dawn French was candid about what she and Jennifer Saunders had changed for the second series of their hit BBC2 sketch show: "The tacky variety theme of the last series has gone because it forced us to get too caught up in logic and story. That's not our strength. This series is more disjointed, but we've tried to do things that we think are funny, as opposed to things that make sense." Among the new characters were the ballerinas and bodybuilders, while Hollywood was again in their sights. "I play Elizabeth Taylor and Jen plays Liza Minnelli," said French. "And you play Cyd Charisse," added Saunders. "Because of your telescopic legs."

WHAT YOU SAID

"Water's going on?" punned Mrs Dee Barnfield of Chesham, Buckinghamshire, as she complained about the predominance of Perrier, not only in the sponsorship of the Edinburgh Fringe but in its "covert" appearance across a glut of recent BBC dramas, too. "I've seen it splashed all over Campaign (BBC2) and included in Rockliffe's Babies (BBC1). Does the French connection make it more acceptable in Bergerac (BBC1)? Naturellement, if wrong I'll feel a bit of a lemon (or a lime!)" Sparkling wordplay, there, I'm sure you'll agree.

JODIE WHITTAKER (THE DOCTOR) & MANDIP GILL (YAZ)

How would you describe each other?

MANDIP Jodie's really funny. At first I thought the fact she's funnier than me would really hurt, but it doesn't!

JODIE I think the reason we get on is that…

MANDIP I don't mind you taking the p out of me?

JODIE I was trying to find a way to say that politely! We can be so brutal in a brilliant way. Sometimes I walk over and know you're laughing at me. I love it because you're really constant. I never don't know where I stand with you. It's odd that we can spend so much time together. You, me and Tosin all have lunch together – Brad is always doing something more important because he's got a million other jobs – then we'll hang out after we get home. We FaceTime in the evening, even though we've been together all day.

MANDIP Or you make me sleep at your house, even though I live around the corner… And when we're not together, we've got a very active WhatsApp group. I thought Brad wouldn't join in much, but he posts funny stuff on there – when he didn't get a reply the other day, he messaged me, "Are people ignoring me?"

JODIE Did he? Oh bless him. We genuinely all, as a four, love each other. It's more than a job, isn't it? The hours on Doctor Who are so long, and the physical requirement and the amount of lines to learn are a lot. I can't stay in that immersed state all day: I'm better in short bursts. But there's no weirdness if I go off for an hour on my own, or if Tosin goes for a nap. We all respect how each other works.

Do you remember your first meeting?

JODIE It was in your final audition, wasn't it? Often with these things you walk in, everybody introduces themselves, and you go straight into your scenes. But this was more of a sit and a chat for ten minutes first. And it was lovely. You tell stories like I do, Mandip – you're not afraid to make yourself sound like a bit of a twit!

MANDIP I didn't think it came across like that… [laughs] The great thing was, you didn't know your lines!

JODIE I did that on purpose.

MANDIP Really? Thanks, because it made me feel at ease.

JODIE It's so intimidating when the other actor knows all their lines, but there's meant to be room for playing and having fun. I knew you'd be more comfortable if I wasn't overly prepared.

Would your ten-year-old selves ever believe what you're doing now?

JODIE Of course not!

MANDIP I'm going to say absolutely yes.

JODIE Really? No way!

MANDIP Yeah! It was just a given. I told myself from the age of six that I was going to be on TV. I've got no other skills. I'm a one-trick pony.

JODIE I always wanted to be an actor, too, and had this naive idea it was going to work out. But this role would've been miles from my thinking. I didn't look like Wonder Woman, chiselled out of rock. Never in my wildest dreams did I think these barrier-breaking roles would be mine.

MANDIP You've done a part that's changed history. Nobody else will ever be the first female Doctor Who – nobody can take that away from you. Although I've actually already become a doctor – I got an honorary doctorate from the University of Sheffield. You can call me Dr Gill.

Who inspired you to act, growing up?

MANDIP I watched a lot of soaps, The Bill and Goodness Gracious Me. I thought I'd be in Bend It Like Beckham.

JODIE I loved Mikey in The Goonies, Labyrinth and The NeverEnding Story. I knew I'd never be Princess Buttercup in The Princess Bride but I could be Westley! I loved epic adventures, so this is an ideal job for me in that sense.

Did you feel a pressure when you first joined Doctor Who and how did that change for the second series?

JODIE The new Doctor always feels a pressure, but I found it really liberating being the first woman. It sparked a conversation about gender, which was necessary and fascinating and sometimes hilarious. If I felt like I'd done something badly or upset someone, that would bother me. But when something is out of my control, I don't worry. When we first started, we thought it would be like Notting Hill, where he opens the door to all the flashbulbs. But actually there was a bit of noise, then it died down, and we've just been getting on with it since.

MANDIP The fans are really loyal. They might not like one thing in an episode, but that doesn't mean they're not going to watch the next episode.

JODIE I don't think we ever forget how lucky we are. It's a really special job, for all of us, and we don't lose sight of that.

EMMA COX

BRADLEY WALSH (GRAHAM) & TOSIN COLE (RYAN)

Have the two of you got much in common?

TOSIN I like to think I'm as funny as Brad… or maybe half as funny as Brad.

BRADLEY It's lovely to hear that for starters.

TOSIN I'm almost as good-looking as Brad as well.

BRADLEY Ha! The main thing we've got in common is a goal to better ourselves because we're both from humble beginnings. And what I love about Tosin is that while he's driven, he's also quite chilled and I wish I was like that. I've sort of realised later on in life that I need to be slightly more laid back, and not get so upset about the jobs I didn't get. I think that's what Tosin's got now, and I think that's a magic balance.

When did you both realise you wanted to act?

TOSIN It started off as a hobby at school – an easy GCSE! But I got introduced to this group called Intermission Youth Theatre, which I'm still a part of to this day, then I got scouted by an agency – although they then turned me down. But I started taking it a bit more seriously after that. I remember finding out Idris Elba was from Hackney – and I used to love The Wire – so I was like, "What, he's from London and he can go to America?!" I thought if he can do it, I can do it.

BRADLEY I started out acting just like Tosin when I was at school, but I was more of a clown really and I got quite into comedy. I didn't think I could earn a living out of just acting. It wasn't until I was about 41 or 42… I was playing football with Ray Winstone…

TOSIN What's that on the floor? You dropped that name!

BRADLEY Ha! And he suggested I try acting again. So that's what I did.

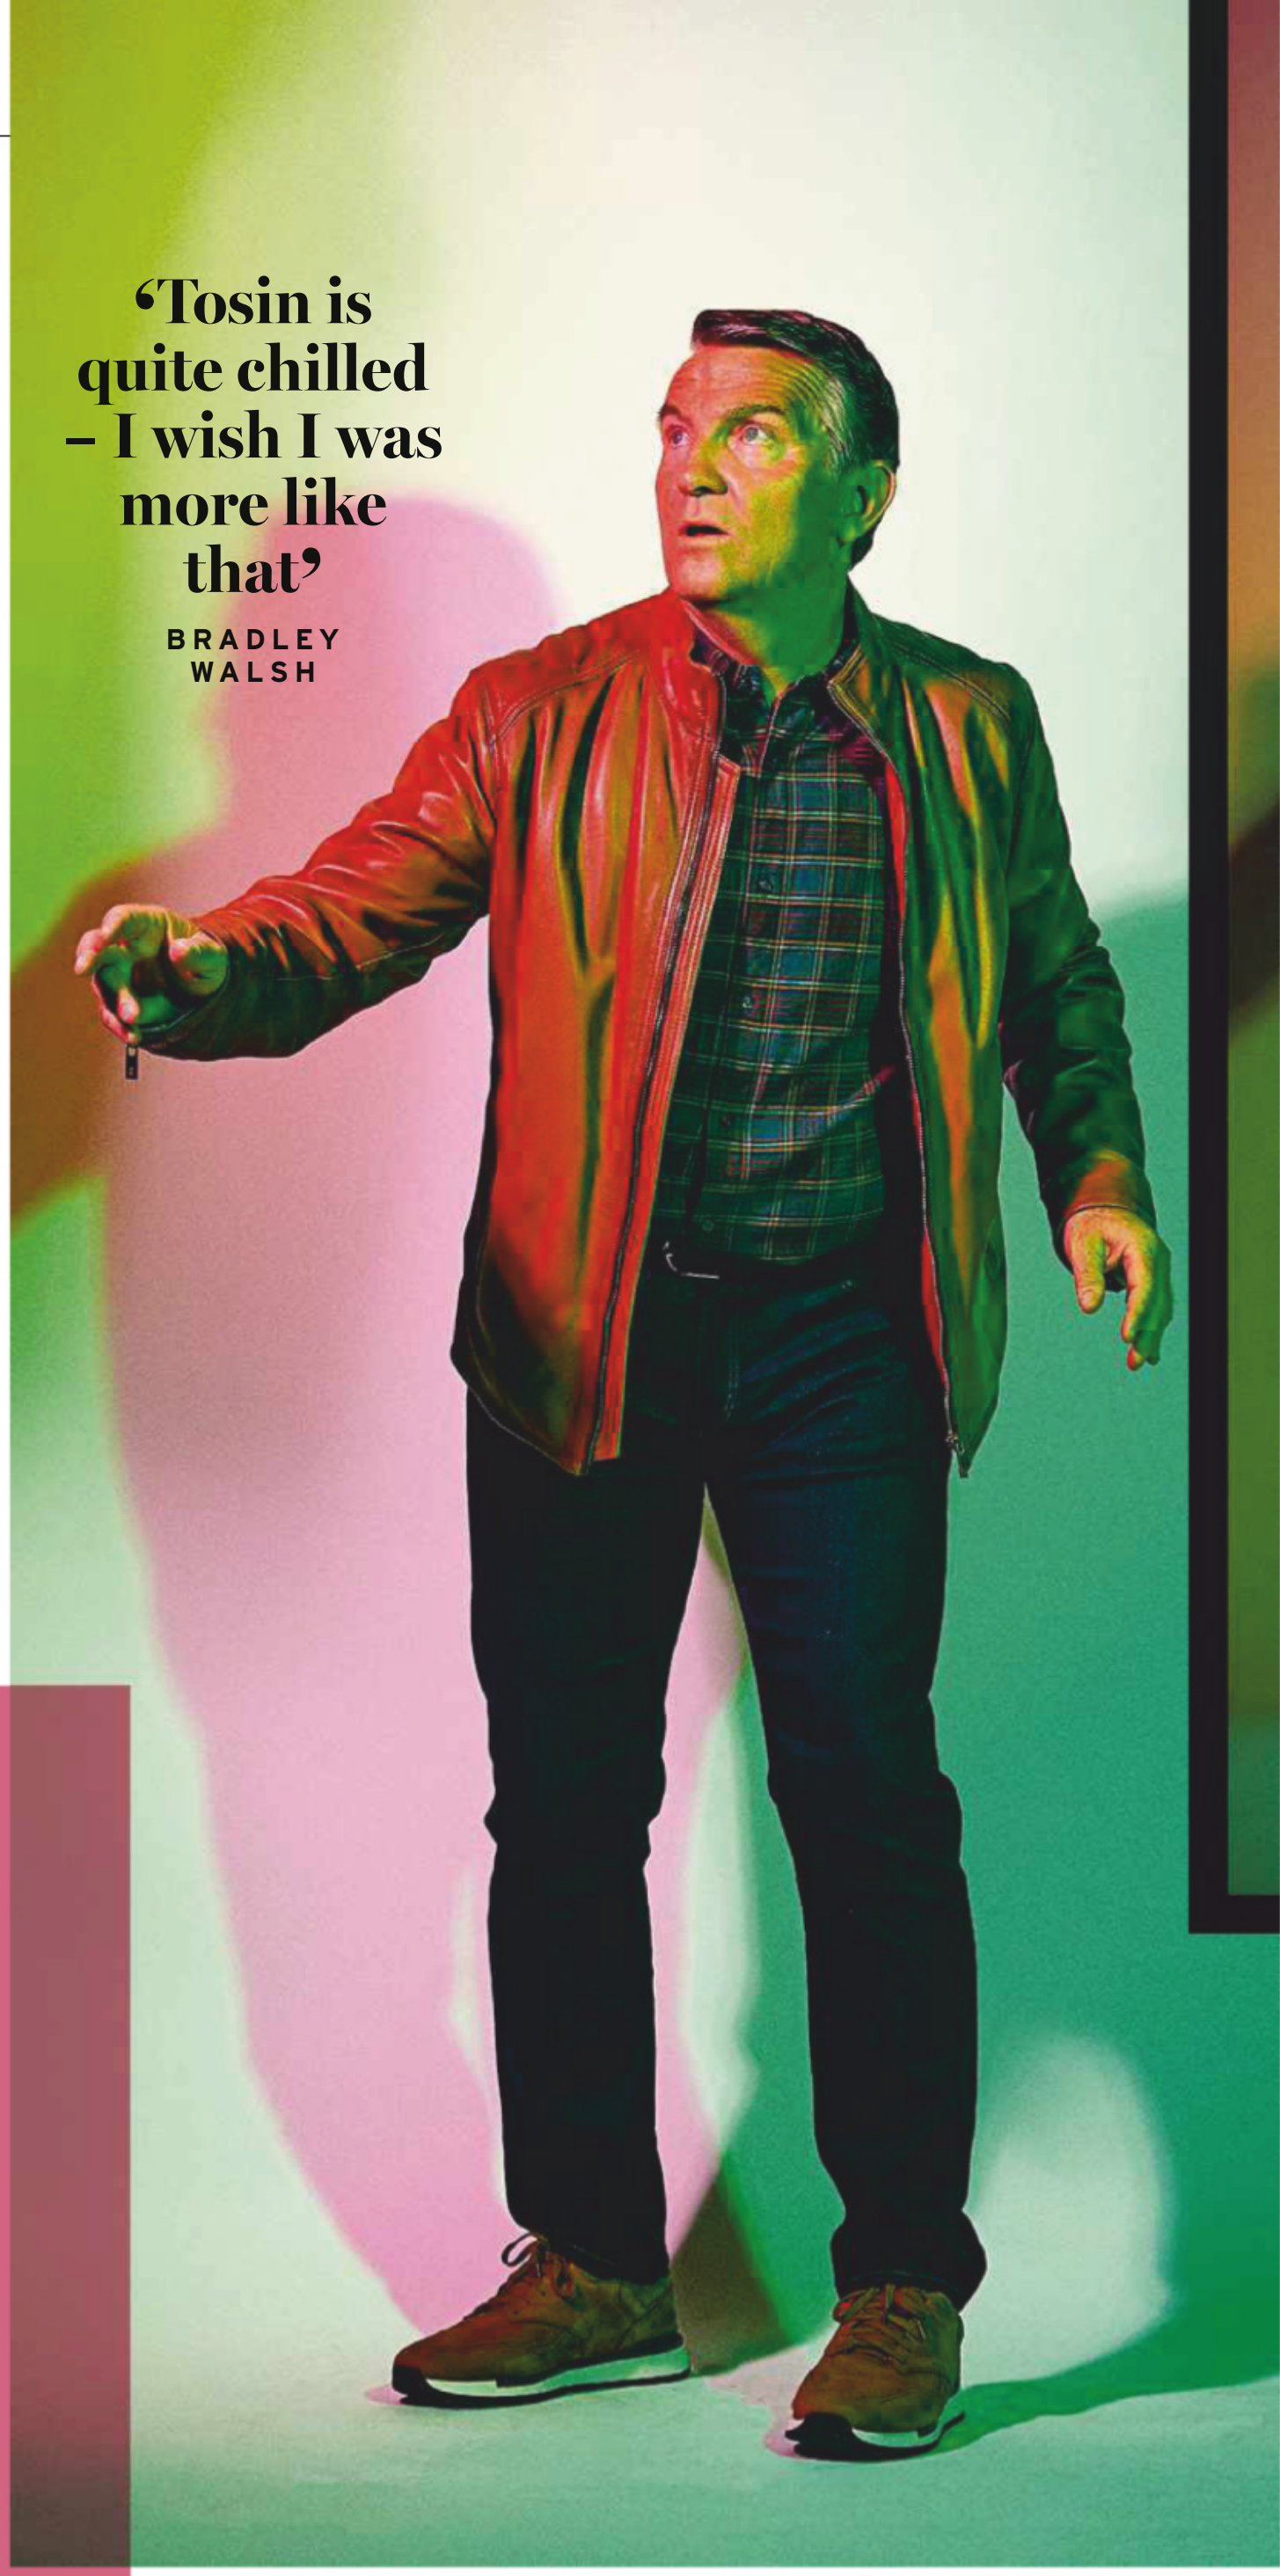

Do you remember your first meeting?

TOSIN We first met at the read-through. I didn't know Brad from his name, but when we met, I was like, "Aah, that's Bradley Walsh! This guy is big time!" You just knew he was showbiz from the stories he was telling and the names he was dropping.

BRADLEY What I immediately loved about Tosin was the way he was with all the people he met, so courteous and so respectful. He had kind eyes and his manner was very nice and laid back. He didn't really say much, though, I gotta be honest.

Did you feel a pressure when you first joined Doctor Who and how did that change for the second series?

TOSIN The first time we did it, it was a new Doctor, new companions, a new time for the show. And coming into a show that's been established for years, and changing everything, was always going to be nerve-racking. You don't want to change it so much the fans would be like, "Oh my God, what have they done?" But when the show aired, that pressure was relieved and when we came round a second time it was just like, "OK, back to work!" Just picking up where we left off.

BRADLEY I totally agree with Tosin, that's exactly what it was like. It was so nice to see the familiar faces again when we got back together. It's like having Christmas dinner with your family, you don't all get together all the time, but when you do, it's warm and comforting. We've spent two years all together and never once did we fall out! I can't wait to see all the guys again, I really can't. I think where we absolutely struck gold – and I'm pretty sure Tosin will agree – is having a boss of the acting department, who is also so lovely.

TOSIN Yep – that's Jodie.

BRADLEY If we'd had a number one actor who'd been difficult, then it would have made it a very miserable time. But Jodie Whittaker is something extraordinary. Her attention to detail, her work ethic, her sense of fun, and her love for everything and everyone is amazing. Long may she reign. She's a wonderful person.

What is the dynamic between the four of you like?

TOSIN Jodie's the most consistent because she's always quite high-energy, isn't she? Showbiz [Tosin's nickname for Bradley] is up and down – one minute he's grumpy, one minute he's pranking, or he's grumpy and he's pranking. You never know with Brad – he's the most unstable.

BRADLEY That's exactly what I'm like. Some things will make me grumpy, and then on the flip of a sixpence I'll go, "Oh well, that's all right then."

TOSIN Mandip's kind of in between Bradley and Jodie. And when I'm down, they get onto me for being a Debbie Downer.

BRADLEY Working with the two of you is such an insight into people in their 20s. I just love it and it's like having another couple of kids – I don't mean that to sound at all disrespectful.

TOSIN Well, we are children compared to you, Bradley.

BRADLEY What I think is brilliant about this industry is if you surround yourself with young people, you will remain forever young.

And finally, Brad, is it true you have a habit of falling down stairs?

BRADLEY That's my thing, yeah. Don't ask me why, I've always loved it, even as a kid. I reckon it's watching Norman Wisdom growing up. I'm quite a professional at it now. I don't hurt myself or bruise.

TOSIN I remember thinking you'd really hurt yourself once! Remember when we were doing the witches episode [in 2018] and you fell down the stone stairs? But that's just Bradley's humour. It's great when we get guest actors and Brad's like, "Oh, my heart!" They freak out and I'm just like, "Oh, leave him, he's fine!" It's a gag that never gets old.

BRADLEY We've had some fun times, Tosin! I've never worked in an environment like this before. It's wonderful, it really is.

TOSIN It's a great group of people who make filming fun. But it's the jokes and the laughter in between that make it for me. Those are the moments I really treasure. HUW FULLERTON

MIND OF EVIL
The Master (Sacha Dhawan) causes mayhem for the Doctor (Jodie Whittaker) in the series finale

MEETING THE MASTER

Why was Sacha Dhawan "absolutely terrified" of playing the Master?

TAKING ON A role previously played by Derek Jacobi, Michelle Gomez and John Simm is a daunting task, reflects Sacha Dhawan, the latest actor cast as Doctor Who's archvillain. "You can be high-octane, like the Joker from Batman, that's what the Master's known for," says the 35-year-old of the evil Time Lord played by almost as many actors over the years as the Doctor him/herself.

"But one of the things that I wanted to do was make the character quite dark, and not be afraid of being melancholic. [Showrunner] Chris Chibnall said, 'You don't have to reveal him all at once – you can unravel him slowly.' "

This unravelling was so subtle that fans didn't even know Dhawan was playing the Master until he was sensationally unmasked on New Year's Day in one of the most talked-about cliffhangers in the series' history.

"I was absolutely terrified," he recalls. "My first thought was, 'This is such a big, iconic role… I can't do this. Am I even right for this?' But obviously it ended up being one of the best decisions I've ever made in my career."

Born in Bramhall, near Stockport, Dhawan's career began early, working from the age of 12 on TV shows like Out of Sight, Weirdsister College and The Last Train. "I always get asked, being from an Indian family, 'Did your parents want you to be a doctor?' But they didn't. They encouraged me to follow my passion, which was performing. They were always getting me up in front of the family to sing and tap dance."

DHAWAN'S BIG BREAK came aged 22 when he was cast in the original run of Alan Bennett's stage play The History Boys, alongside a raft of young actors who were destined for global fame: Russell Tovey, Dominic Cooper and James Corden. "I do see a few of the History Boys – I love how we still call each other that." He recently visited Corden in Los Angeles. "My nickname for him is Cordelia. He's always just Cordelia to me," he laughs.

Dhawan has slowly been making a name for himself as well in shows like Last Tango in Halifax, Sherlock, Mr Selfridge, Dracula and Line of Duty, in which he played corrupt police officer Manish Prasad. "He did survive actually," he points out. "I could come back! A while ago Jed Mercurio got me to film a couple of new scenes. They didn't make the cut unfortunately, but I'd love to come back to it properly."

But Dhawan's greatest homecoming is in Doctor Who; he's circled and almost appeared in the sci-fi drama for years. "I always wanted to be part of it in some way. I just never thought it'd be something as big as the Master."

In 2013, he was cast in An Adventure in Space and Time, which dramatised the early days of Doctor Who's production (he played original director Waris Hussein), and in 2017 he was a favourite to succeed Peter Capaldi. "Quite a few fans of the show had put my name forward. That was a real honour."

Dhawan's home life also ties him to the series. His partner Anjli Mohindra (recently in Bodyguard) once starred in the spin-off The Sarah Jane Adventures, before being cast as an alien scorpion in this current series of Who. "I remember when the first episode aired with Jodie, we thought, 'Wow, this is amazing!' We'd never have guessed that we were both going to be in it – and at the same time."

IT'S A PARTICULAR honour, Dhawan says, to be the first person of colour to play the Master. "There was a time when I was constantly going up for the terrorist, or characters that just weren't as interesting. But I was adamant that I was going to prove the industry wrong.

"I assumed, being the first British Indian actor to play the Master, people would have a reaction – and they didn't. So that's even more brilliant. The fans have given me total ownership of it. It's made me want to do more – if they ask me back, that is…" Because despite the positive reception to Dhawan's evil Time Lord so far, he's worried that what's coming next may be more divisive.

"It all depends on how episode ten goes down," he says of the finale this week. "So far the fans like it, but the Master's so unpredictable. I was doing some extra voice work a couple of weeks ago and I was watching the finale going 'Wow – this is really dark,' " he laughs. HF

Malorie Blackman is the former children's laureate who created an alternative world for teenagers. As her bestseller comes to BBC1, she talks love, race and Meghan Markle

THE RT INTERVIEW BY NINA NANNAR

Malorie Blackman says it's good to talk, but better to listen. "My mum always said we have two ears and one mouth for a reason," the bestselling author and former children's laureate says. "We are meant to do more listening than talking."

We meet the day after Brexit has finally happened – Malorie, myself and my 15-year-old daughter, Mimi, who first introduced me to the Noughts and Crosses young adult fiction series, which the author began 20 years ago and which – at last – are being made into a TV series.

The subject of race permeates the five books of the series; Blackman refers to the "cacophonous roar" of conversations that the topic provokes, in which no one can make themselves heard. What the author has always wanted is for her books, and now the drama, to open up a more nuanced debate: "That's why books, TV programmes and films are so important, because they give you a safe way of discussing these issues."

Blackman wrote Noughts and Crosses in 2001. Having faced criticism for not writing about racism overtly in her earlier books – incredibly, it was her 50th novel – it was fuelled by the anger she felt at the racially motivated murder of Stephen Lawrence in 1993, and the subsequent treatment of his family.

The twist in the world she created is that Europe has been colonised by Africa (known in her books as Zafrica, but renamed Aprica in the TV drama). The ruling classes, the Crosses, are black, and the white population, the Noughts, are the slaves. Set in an alternative contemporary Britain, slavery has ended but segregation is still in force. Against all this is the central relationship between the two main protagonists, Sephy, who's black, and Callum, who's white.

Blackman had always wanted to be an English teacher, but was told at school that black people didn't go to university. She ended up as a computer programmer, while nursing ambitions to write. Eighty-two rejection letters later, a publisher finally said "yes", and she was off.

"When I wrote Noughts and Crosses, there wasn't a thing called dystopian fiction," she says. "But then came The Hunger Games and Divergent and suddenly people called my book dystopian, too. I see it as speculative fiction, and my inspiration was always Romeo and Juliet, just set in a different world."

'I've been told to stay off social media when it's broadcast'

From the very first episode, that theme is clear. The series opens in explosive form, with the love story threaded throughout. What really brings the world to life, however, are the details that tell us we are in a very different reality: the white characters' names are mispronounced, sticking plasters are dark brown (when she was younger, Blackman would wonder why plasters were only ever pink), in the party scene it's white people who serve the black. "I've been at functions where it's been predominantly white and only people of colour doing the serving," says Blackman.

STAR-CROSSED LOVERS
Masali Baduza as Sephy, a Cross, with Jack Rowan as Callum, a Nought. Below: Malorie Blackman

I WONDER WHY it's taken so long for the books to be translated to television. The adaptations were first announced in 2016, then it went quiet. Are we now in a time where diverse stories from diverse voices are demanding to be heard, and those making the decisions have realised they must listen?

"[Production company] Mammoth Screen and I felt it was better to have it done right than quickly," Blackman explains. "And it's going to be released at the right moment. If it had come out four years ago I think the impact would have been different... Now, there's the realisation that diverse stories do make money, like the films Black Panther and Hidden Figures – it would once have been much harder to get them off the ground. In publishing, too, people work for the bottom line, but now there's an audience desperate for new content and new voices and I think a lot of people are waking up to that."

When the books first came out, there was no such thing as Twitter – can she imagine what the online response to Noughts and Crosses might have been? She nods and says she is steeling herself for the response to the TV series. "My husband has told me to stay off social media, when it gets broadcast, to protect my mental health," she says. "I probably will."

She'd like to see social media companies such as Facebook and Twitter act more quickly when users are being racist or homophobic. She's also just as frustrated with traditional media and is saddened at the denials that race has played a part in the hounding of Meghan Markle. She's made a note of all the headlines comparing Kate Middleton to Markle. When Kate was pregnant she was "tenderly touching her baby bump", she says, "but when Meghan did it, she was 'just doing it for attention'.

"Kate wore an off-the-shoulder dress to an event and was described as stunning, but when Meghan wore one – and as far as I could see the only difference was the colour [of the dress] ▷

‘I thought writers were white men who lived in the country’

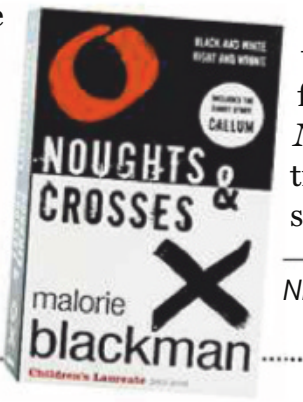

◁ – she was called vulgar. The same media outlets would treat Kate very differently from the way they would treat Meghan. It was nasty.”

The conversation moves to the actor Laurence Fox and his assertion on Question Time that racism was not involved in Harry and Meghan’s decision to leave the UK. In response, an audience member called him a white privileged male, which Fox then claimed was in itself racist.

“White privilege doesn’t mean that there are no white people in the world who are struggling, of course it doesn’t mean that, it just means that one of the things you are being judged on is not your skin colour. In my life when I’ve flown, only once in the last 40 years have I not been called over by Customs to search my bags.”

Blackman’s power on the written page is unquestionable, but get in a room with her and you’ll be hanging on her every word. It’s little wonder she’s writing her autobiography – the London-born author, whose parents were both from Barbados, has some astonishing tales to tell. Now, though, she enjoys a calmer existence, living in Kent with her husband and daughter.

The autobiography is due to be published by #Merky Books, founded by Stormzy, one of Blackman’s most famous fans, who has a cameo in the series. And even though it’s the story of her own life, she wants the book to speak to others who, like her, “always thought writers were white men who lived in the country somewhere”. Writers can come from all backgrounds, she adds.

Before the autobiography, however, there is the final book in the Nought and Crosses series. It’s called Endgame – can she reveal anything about the themes it will focus on? Its predecessor, Crossfire, was about ambition, she says, “so Endgame is my realistic take on where all that leads. It’s going to be honest in its treatment of people’s motivations.” I note that in the world she has created in Noughts and Crosses, though the colour of people’s skin has been swapped around, there is still oppression. “As the saying goes, absolute power corrupts absolutely,” she says, “but I rarely talk about books I’m currently working on,” she adds, laughing.

That’s all I’m going to get from her about the long-awaited finale. Blackman has always felt protective towards the characters in Noughts and Crosses, but now, she says, it’s time to let them go, for their new life on the small screen.

‘WEAR YOUR SWOTTINESS WITH PRIDE!’

Fifteen-year-old Mimi quizzes Malorie Blackman on colour-blind casting, climate change – and Stormzy

You have strong female characters in your books. What do you hope girls like me take away from them, and did you have characters like them when you were growing up? There weren’t really any books for teens when I was growing up, you had children’s books then adults’ books. By the time I was 11 I was reading adults’ books, a lot of which were not really appropriate. But when I read Rebecca and Jane Eyre I thought, wow! Children’s books tended to be happy ever after, girls and boys had separate roles, but Jane Eyre leaves school, becomes a governess and stands up for herself. She knows she’s not beautiful but also knows she is as worthy as those who are. So I was inspired by women who knew who they were and were unapologetic about it.

Mum sometimes calls me a swot! What were you like at my age? WEAR YOUR SWOTTINESS WITH PRIDE! I’ve been called a nerd and geek and I take it as a compliment. When I was at school I lived inside my head, I even carried a leotard and tights around in my satchel in case I needed to go into the toilets and change into a superhero if robbers came to the school. Now, of course, I make my living out of my imagination.

When you wrote Noughts and Crosses, were you writing about someone like you? Absolutely, Callum [the white male lead, who is a Nought] is most like me, the things he goes through particularly in school happened to me, like asking my teachers where the black scientists were on the curriculum and being told there weren’ any. Or my first time in first class on a train and being accused of stealing the ticket. It’s all based on true stuff. I thought I’d let these things go but I’d just buried them deeply, so it was cathartic to write the book.

Mine is the generation of Greta Thunberg and climate activism – do you think it’s our responsibility to clean up the planet, and are we capable? I don’t think it’s your responsibility, but I think that’s where it will fall because we messed it up. I look at my daughter and think, “You’re going have to work longer because the retirement age is going to go up, and you are going to have to work harder...” But I love the fact that Greta, and Vanessa Nakate from Uganda, are standing up and speaking out. That’s what I try to say to children and teens in my books – you have a voice, don’t be afraid to use it.

ANDAZ HOTEL

Stormzy follows you on Instagram and is in one of the episodes (he plays a newspaper editor, a role created especially for him). How did that come about? He really likes the Noughts and Crosses series and was really keen to be involved in the TV series, so it’s absolutely brilliant that he has got a part in it.

What do you think of the increasing use of colour-blind casting? Oh my gosh, that’s an interesting question! That’s what I love about the theatre, because there’s more of that going on there, while it seems TV and film are only just beginning to catch up. It lends a new sensibility to things, and I like that. That’s why I loved the recent BBC adaptation of A Christmas Carol when Mary Cratchit was played by Vinette Robinson. Some people complained that a woman of colour was playing her – they had no problems when Miss Piggy played the part though, did they?

We have gender fluidity and now racial fluidity – I’ve heard of people saying they “feel black”. Can you just feel black? It’s a tricky one. I believe in gender fluidity and that you can be born in the wrong body. With race, you can admire someone’s culture, but if you’re not born into it... Can I, for example, just turn around and say I am an Inuit because that’s how I want to identify? There’s more to it than that, it’s about being brought up in the culture. It’s an interesting thing to explore, maybe I’ll try and write a story about it!

The Trip to Greece Tuesday 10.00pm, 10.30pm Sky 1

Our Greek odyssey

KALIMERA!
Steve Coogan and Rob Brydon resume their travels with The Trip to Greece

They've enjoyed roaming for ten years, but why could this be Steve Coogan and Rob Brydon's final Trip?

ALEXIA SKINITIS

IT'S A SCORCHING July day in Pilos, a remote corner of the Greek mainland, and Steve Coogan is trying to find some respite from the heat in an olive grove at the foothills of the town's castle. There are no air-conditioned trailers, no gazebos offering shelter, no runners with fans handing out ice-cold water. Instead, he's perspiring, perched on a cool-box, under a lemon tree – dressed in traditional Greek leather body armour and sandals. It's actually only the cool-box that betrays we are in the modern day – that and the occasional shout of "Cut" and "Action" from director Michael Winterbottom, hiding out of shot. The two – plus three actors playing Coogan's wife, father and son and a small crew carrying cameras, microphones and towels – are filming a dream sequence for the new series of The Trip.

"Michael likes to have a skeleton film crew," explains Coogan the next morning, showered and refreshed, sipping a coffee on the terrace of his hotel, overlooking the sparkling blue sea. "It's all very stripped back and low key. There's no continuity person, no make-up artist – we just have Carla, who does all our costume and powders us now and again."

"We do like a light foundation," chimes in Rob Brydon, his ever-faithful travelling companion on the series, who's accompanied Coogan to Yorkshire, Italy, Spain and now Greece. "And maybe just a little colour in the cheeks. A little shadow around the eye. That's all. Some colour for the lip… Is 'guerrilla' a good word?"

"Performing monkey, you mean – but bigger?" retorts Coogan.

"Yes, like a very big ape," smiles Brydon.

This effortlessly sharp repartee between the two is what makes The Trip so enjoyable to watch, as well as the beautiful settings and luxurious lunches littered with the familiar impressions of Michael Caine, Roger Moore and Marlon Brando. "The people we do are mostly old or dead," observes Coogan. Have they thrown in any new impressions to refresh things, perhaps?

"You've been doing a very lovely Eric Morecambe," offers Brydon, "which you've never done before."

"Oh yes," says Coogan, "I've done a bit of Eric Morecambe. But what I don't do is, at the start of a trip, say: 'I must start practising my impressions.' The idea is that the audience are eavesdropping on our conversations. So the camera isn't really supposed to be there.

"There's the continuing conceit, with a modicum of truth, about us playing ourselves – I'm very pretentious, and Rob's really lightweight and we play up to that because, actually, if we were to just film Rob and myself having lunch, it would be quite boring." Having spent time in their company, I can guarantee it's anything but boring… ▷

◁ How are you finding Greece?

Steve Coogan It's wonderful – there'd have to be something wrong with you to hate Greece, there's such a rich culture and history. We're very lucky, though, because everything gets curated for us; we eat at the best restaurants, stay at the best hotels, visit the best sites.

Rob Brydon The only tricky thing is we have to eat at nice restaurants, again, and again, and again… In that sense we're a little bit like battery hens, forced to eat. We eat every course three times.

Steve Yes, it takes eight hours to film a meal, because you have to cover it from all angles. If we were making a normal film, we'd spit it out because it's impossible to eat that amount but, unfortunately, we tend to be served food that's properly cooked in a kitchen and tastes really great.

Rob I think there's a misconception that the cameras simply follow us around, and nothing could be further from the truth. It's a different way of filming, isn't it? It's much more – I don't want to use the word "organic", but it's much more…

Steve Organic. We're parachuted into places, we're given some homework to learn about where we are, so we can give people some context and be slightly conversant, and the rest is just Rob and I doing our thing. But there's a structure to the series, there's a story to it – we improvise but we know exactly where we're going and where we're supposed to arrive by the end.

And the structure of this series is based on the Odyssey, so you start at the site of ancient Troy in Turkey and end up in Ithaca?

Steve Every series we try to pick up something culturally relevant to the location, so for Greece, it's Homer's Odyssey, and we take themes from that and apply them to "my life". So I go on a journey to find my way back home. And at the end of this series, I seem to have resolved all my dysfunction and arrive at a place of serenity. But as I said, that's not based on my real life because I'm reasonably happy in my life. But obviously as you get older, you think about things more, including the fact that one day you'll die.

Rob Everybody worries about that. The natural conclusion of ageing, I don't know if you're aware, is death! I'm 54. He's nearly 54. Anybody our age, with any self-awareness, thinks about ageing. But at the same time, you can also come to appreciate things more with age.

Steve And the things you want to do when you're younger, you don't want to do any more.

Rob On one of my social media things I saw a picture of a guy about our age sat in his chair with the words, "Staying at home, not going to the party, going to bed early. The things that were punishments in my childhood are now life goals." Good, isn't it?

Steve Wow. I went to bed early last night. I don't go to parties any more. I don't really like premieres or public events. Not interested.

Rob We're just old men now… We were genuinely driving through a town this series and I said, "Oh, there's the chemist!"

Steve You don't even know what you want it for, you just think, "A chemist, that's probably quite useful for something." It's a pretty tragic state of affairs but the key to The Trip is we're not bothered about showing weaknesses.

Talking openly about your problems, the importance of friendship and men's mental health, is at the forefront of conversations at the moment. In that sense was The Trip ahead of its time?

Rob We were putting men's mental health front and centre ten years ago.

Steve The thing is, to be good at what we do, you have to look at yourself and what makes you weak, and that becomes part of your process. In some ways, if you're creative and you perform, you've got an outlet for all your dysfunction so you don't have to hide it. It's your stock in trade. Nora Ephron said, "Everything is copy." Which means there's no such thing as a bad experience, because everything is useable.

Rob Especially if you're an actor who writes, then it's even more so.

Steve You put it all in there, and then you shouldn't need a therapist. Men – in fact all people who don't have that – can develop psychological problems, especially if you're in a male-dominated corporate world where you can't show weakness. The whole human experience is about weakness. You look at Shakespeare, it's all about weakness. But people still feel like they have to cover up or explain away anything that makes them look flawed.

Rob I do think that actors are more open to their feelings.
Steve And what comedy allows you to do is talk about things that people might not say publicly. If you make people laugh, then it gives you licence to shine a light on things that you might otherwise be terrified of. The cloak of comedy enables you to say things that might be unsympathetic towards yourself and might portray you in a bad light. But it's a way of airing that stuff because you've created this nice, warm, safe area.

As privileged, middle-aged white men in the public eye, do you feel the tide is turning against you? Do you think The Trip would get commissioned now?
Steve I don't think it'd get commissioned now. Perhaps, because it's Rob and I they might think: "Well, those guys are funny. It's worth a punt." But yes, you might say that middle-aged white men are on the back foot, but in a very small way. It might seem like that in cosmopolitan media circles but…
Rob I think we've still got it quite good.
Steve If you go to any of the flyover states in America or most of the developing world, you'll find men are still calling all the shots.
Rob And when it comes to the commissioning question – when Michael came to us with the idea, we said no at the first lunch, and the second. I remember he said, "There's going to be six-and-a-half hours, I will structure it, but no script, you just talk." And I said, "About what? You may get one half hour of good stuff, but six?" And I meant that from the bottom of my heart.
Steve But within the first week of shooting, I remember thinking, this is going to be good.

THEIR FIRST TRIP
Steve Coogan and Rob Brydon toured the north of England in 2010

And are you planning on another Trip?
Steve Rob and I will never say never, but it feels like it might be the last one. If we did do another, it might be a longer gap.
Rob Yes, let's leave a nice big gap. We're at the stage we always are, three and a half weeks in, where we just want to go home But when we first came out it was all, "Oh, this is great. Let's do it again!" But I'm past that now. Come back to us in six months' time.

'We're like battery hens – we eat each course three times'

SIX MONTHS LATER BACK IN LONDON…

Hello again! Have you seen each other since Greece? Or did you have your fill over the five weeks of filming?
Rob While filming we're with each other from breakfast until bedtime.
Steve Sometimes beyond!
Rob That was one night… We get at least a year's worth of conversation in that time.
Steve I saw Rob in Gavin & Stacey with my family over Christmas – I sent a message to Ruth [Jones] saying that I cried.
Rob You didn't send it to me!
Steve I didn't want to admit it to you.

So, you told me to come back and ask – is this going to be your final Trip together?
Rob This feels like a natural end.
Steve The whole story is about an epic journey and it does feel like the coda of the series. And we should quit while we're ahead. Although if we did, we probably would have quit…
Rob After The Trip to Italy?
Steve Quite – well then, we should quit while we're not that far behind.
Rob And who knows, in ten years, if we still have our mobility…
Steve If we do one in ten years' time, I'd quite like to go back to somewhere in England. I do love our country.
Rob That's why you voted to take back control.
Steve Oh yes – that's why I have St George's flag bunting in my living room! I've actually got fatigue with it all. We'll see what happens. I'm trying to put a positive spin on it. My point of view now, is that Boris Johnson is in debt to a lot of working people in the north of England, and if he doesn't recognise that, then he will pay for it in five years' time.
Rob It's going to be very interesting, to see how this pans out.
Steve The austerity measures are no longer viable, because the main people who suffered from those voted in Johnson, so he owes them. All I will say is that throwing money at them won't do it. What people want in the provinces – to use an old-fashioned term – is power. They want to make their own decisions. Beyond that, the Labour Party needs a big, huge slice – if not an entire pie – that is humble flavoured. I hope this is a massive kick in the backside for them.

It is ten years since the first Trip – do you feel you've been on "a journey" in that time?
Steve I think I've gone on a journey and learnt lots of things. Whether I'm better, or just different…
Rob Well, you're certainly looking great. I take no pleasure from that, but you are.
Steve I'm a lot happier than I was when I did the first Trip. I'm less troubled. I'm a bit more laid back than I was at the start. As I am in The Trip. Rob and I both have a Venn diagram with who we are in reality, and who we are in The Trip. I'd say there's 30% of us and 70% not. You've got more money now, don't you?
Rob I've got more money, yes. I take more care of myself now. I eat better. I work out a little bit. You'd hope to change over ten years. But have I been on a journey? No, I hate that word. It makes me think of The X Factor. We'll both turn 55 this year – and really we're just lucky to be here. Some contemporaries are no longer here, who were around ten years ago. They're not dead, they just moved.
Steve I'll be bumping into lots of people I used to know in coming years at funerals. But that means there'll be a steady flow of social events. The weird thing is, when you get older they start to become fun.
Rob I think you enjoy yourself more generally as you get older.
Steve That's true. They do those surveys that find people in their 70s are the happiest. So something to look forward to.

STUFFED YET?

‘I have a voice’

When Jason Watkins suffered unimaginable tragedy, acting saved him – now he helps other bereaved parents

“Invisible,” is how DS Dodds, TV’s newest oddball detective, refers to himself when we first meet him. The description is apt: Dodds is overlooked, unappreciated and being nudged towards early retirement. But it’s certainly not a word you’d use to sum up Jason Watkins, the actor who portrays him.

NEW ROLE With Tala Gouveia in McDonald & Dodds

The 53-year-old’s TV CV dates back to 1987, when he made his screen debut on EastEnders, being punched by Queen Vic landlady Angie Watts. “She knocked me out! And because there were only a couple of channels at the time, everyone watched it. I was this yuppie type called Gerry Fairweather, all Perrier, Porsches and personal organisers. That was my first time on camera. I was pretty terrified.”

Three decades later, he’s gone from nervous Walford newbie to confident lead player in ITV’s McDonald & Dodds. “It’s a formulaic whodunnit, in one respect. Columbo-esque,” he admits, “but it has a lot of layers and there’s a great relationship between Dodds and his superior officer DCI McDonald [Tala Gouveia] that grows as it goes on. He’s rather off the wall and has deliberately put on a cloak to keep people at arm’s length. But her personality won’t allow him to stay concealed. She wants to prise him open.”

He comes to the series following an acclaimed performance in The Crown as Harold Wilson (“an incredible human being”) that took his profile to new heights. But screen success in hits like W1A, Hold the Sunset, A Very English Scandal and Line of Duty has come alongside trauma in his private life.

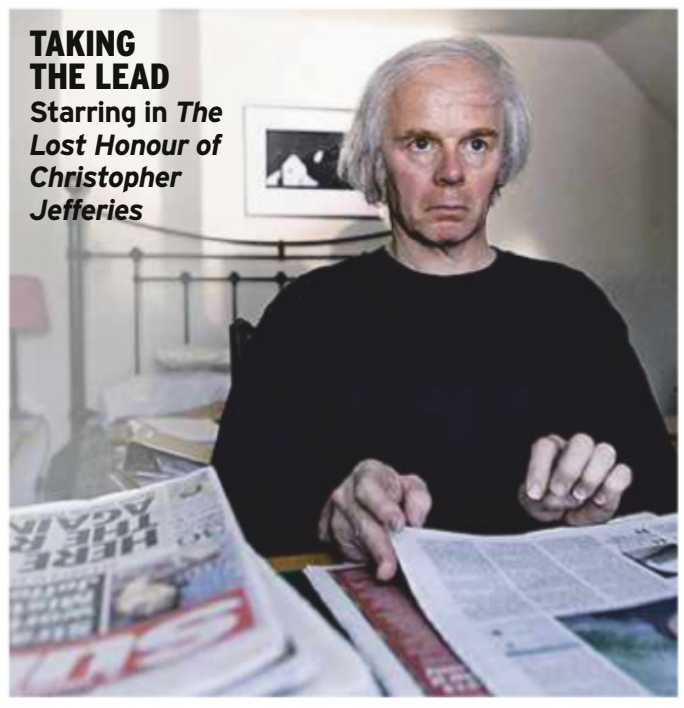

At the end of 2010, the unthinkable happened when Maude, his two-and-a-half-year-old daughter with wife Clara Francis, developed flu-like symptoms and suddenly found it difficult to breathe. A visit to the GP, followed by a couple of dashes to A&E, resulted in Maude being discharged from hospital on New Year’s Eve with a prescription for antibiotics for a suspected chest infection. The following morning, Watkins found his daughter dead. It was only six months later at the inquest that he learned Maude had been killed by sepsis.

Life had changed for ever, but the lack of a safety net in his profession meant that the pressure was on for a grieving Watkins to continue working to provide for his family financially [at the time, he had two sons from his first marriage, as well as a daughter, Bessie, with Clara]. “We’re very comfortable now, but back then, I wasn’t as established, so it was hard. I was helped a little bit by friends to get us through. But I found the strength to carry on because I needed the money to support my other children and my wife. And then Trollied came along, so I’m really grateful to them.”

The Sky 1 supermarket-set sitcom, which ran from 2011 to 2018, saw him reunited with a contemporary from Rada, Jane Horrocks, and it’s while recalling her support that his voice catches in his throat. “Having her there was brilliant. There was a lot of fun to be had in creating comedy, so it was catharsis. But I was still in the throes of grief. A lot of the babies that we used in the shopping trolleys were little dolls. And when we weren’t filming, they’d be left on the side of the set. Just try getting your head around that.”

BRAVE FACE With Jane Horrocks in the Sky 1 sitcom, Trollied

TAKING THE LEAD Starring in The Lost Honour of Christopher Jefferies

During this period, there were parts he turned down (“there was one set in a hospital, but I couldn’t put myself in that environment”), and he also felt a need to make those he did take on count for something.

He cites the 2014 true-crime drama The Lost Honour of Christopher Jefferies, about the ordeal of an innocent man suspected of murdering Joanna Yeates, as an example. Watkins, who dedicated the Bafta he won to Maude, was single-minded in his pursuit of the role.

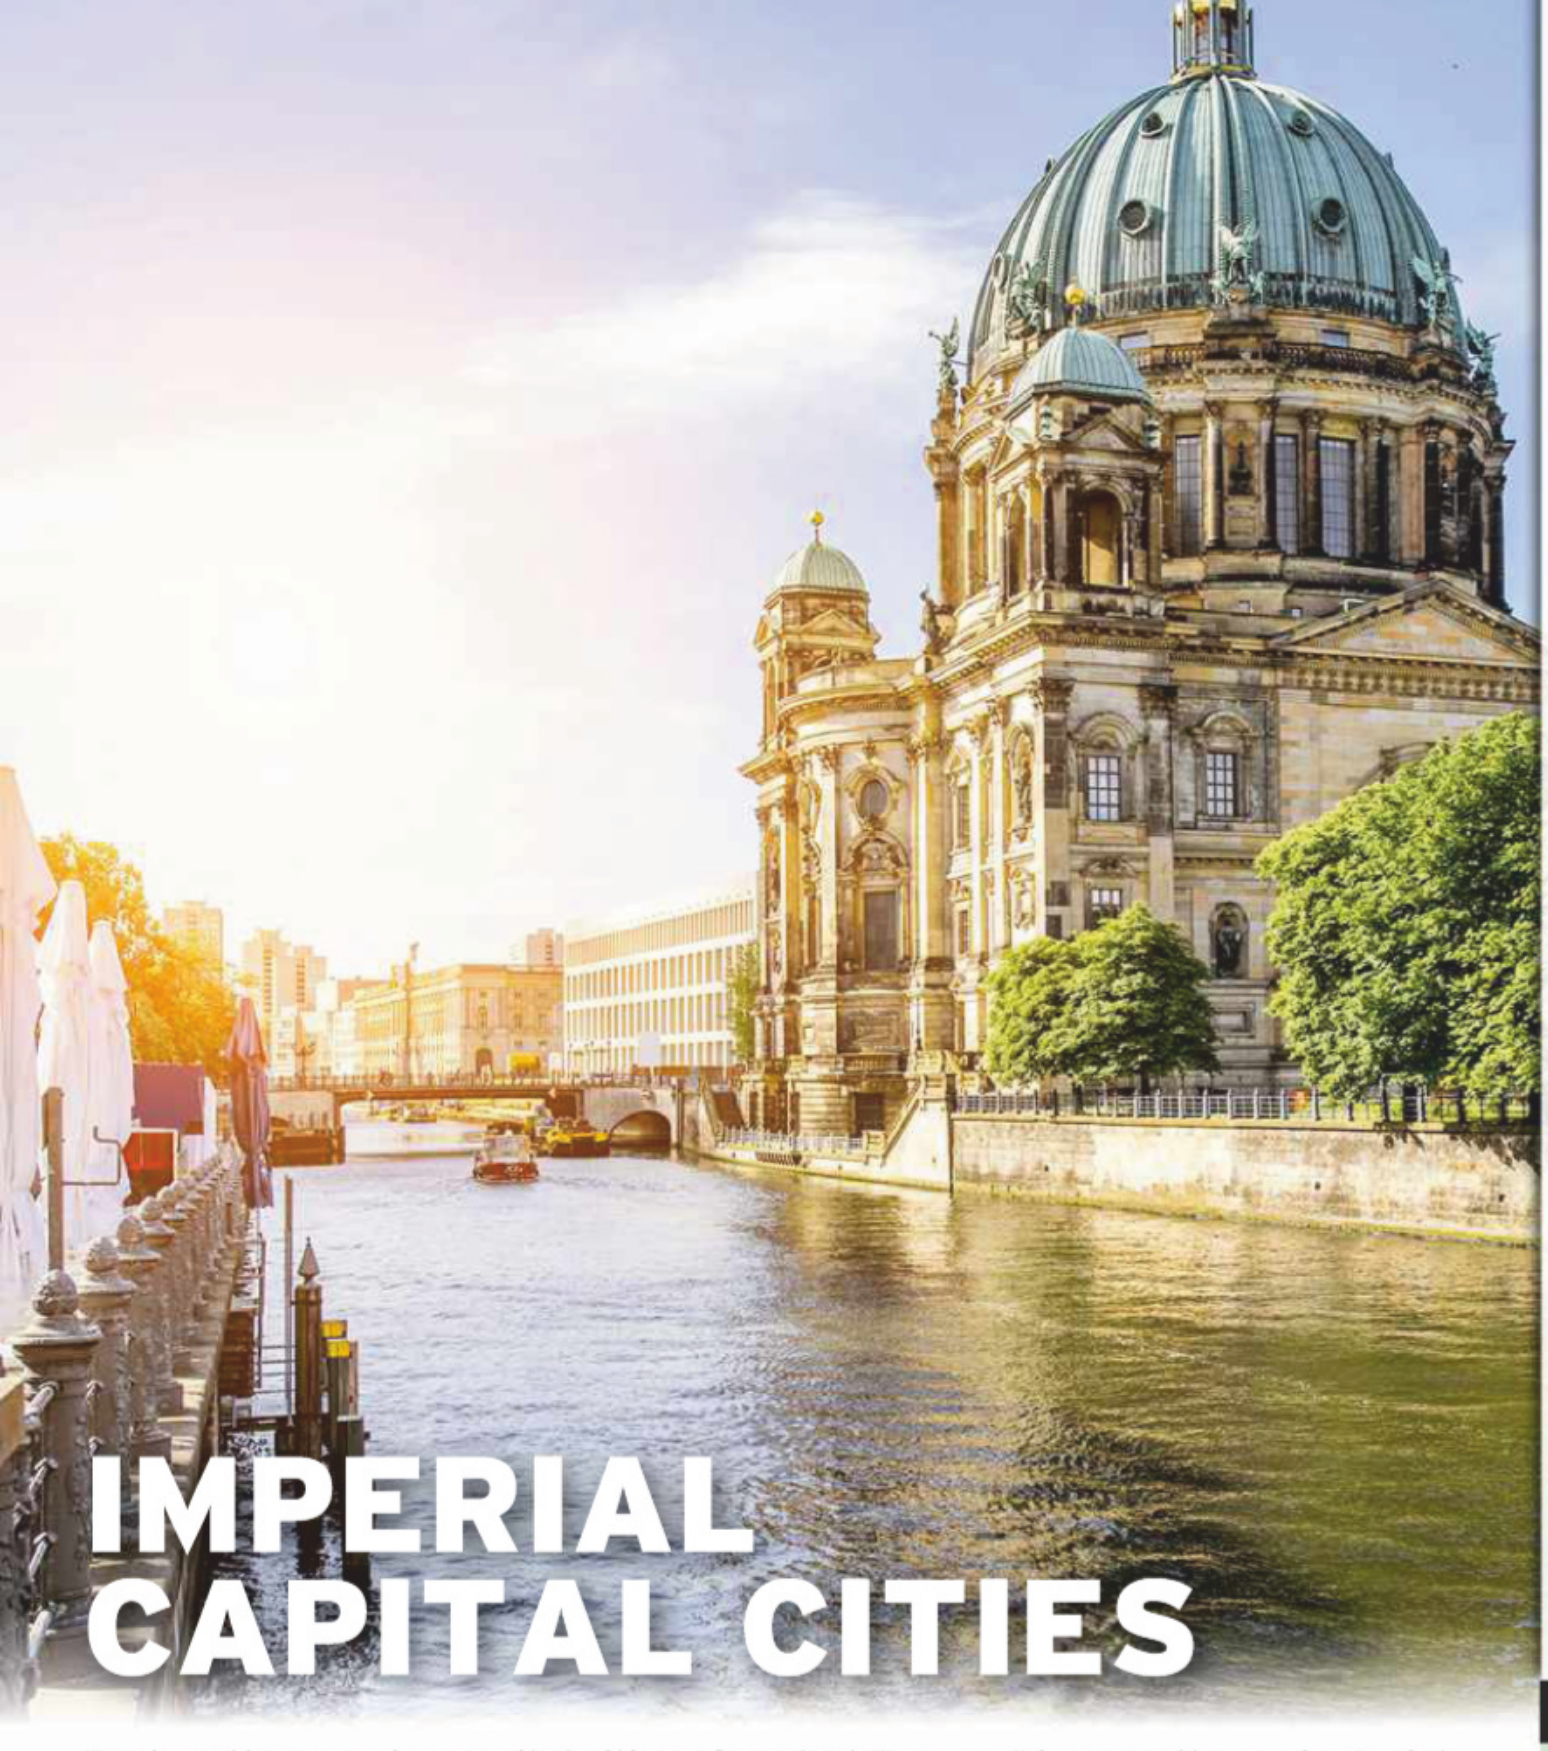

“A lot of luminaries were in the frame for it, but the director Roger Michell hung out for me. He actually said that he wouldn’t do it if I didn’t do it. So, once I got it, I was completely focused. I saw it as a great opportunity because it was about the death of a daughter. And the disappearance of Jo Yeates happened at the same time as we lost Maude. I was very driven and it was purely a grief-filled exercise.”

Nine years on from losing Maude, it seems Watkins now has two vocations: the one that finds him starring in dramas such as McDonald & Dodds and the other that sees him aiding those who have experienced similar tragedies.

UNBREAKABLE
Watkins with his wife, designer Clara Francis

◁ designer) are involved with charities such as Child Bereavement UK, the UK Sepsis Trust and the SLOW Group, a support network for bereaved parents. It's clear that they still live with the trauma. "We have our moments, as you've seen just now. But what we very much didn't want was to be cheated by fate. We have another child now, Gilbert, who's seven. He came hot on the heels. We wanted to define our own path and not be seen as victims, which is a very hard thing for the bereaved.

"There's this feeling of, 'Oh, it's them, they lost their daughter.' My wife certainly felt that at the school gates. You want to break the chains and say, 'I'm all right. I can do this.' The charity work is great. Clara has just walked the Alps for Child Bereavement UK. Proper hiking. I'm calling her 'Iron Thighs' because she's superhuman."

'I'm dyslexic, so script read-throughs are really tough'

When I ask what their life is like now, he says, "Both of us have got a bit of post-traumatic stress disorder, which pops up every now and again. But it's probably a deeper life than we would have had, if that's the right word. And we're able to help others – I've handed my skills on to people like Rob Delaney, who lost his son Henry. That's a bit of a gift."

What's obvious is that Watkins meets challenges both in front of and away from the camera with the same admirable boldness. He says, "I'm dyslexic, so script read-throughs are really tough. I just have to do a lot of homework beforehand to get me to the point where it almost feels like improvising.

"Things can be a struggle, but if you're going to do something, you just have to go for it. Otherwise, what's the point? After what I've been through, I now get very determined.

"And I never forget that I have a voice. Here I am, speaking to you now. I have the privilege of being able to talk about what happened and remember my daughter. It can be very hard for those who aren't in the same position and are at home, dealing with their grief." He pauses and then ends with two words that sound both poignant and courageous: "I'm lucky." DAVID BROWN

A MURDER MYSTERY WITH A TWIST

McDonald & Dodds co-star Tala Gouveia is delighted to be the new face of British police dramas

The first episode of McDonald & Dodds has, in many respects, a very familiar, cosy murder-mystery set-up. The summer sun casts a picturesque golden glow over Bath, where a wealthy patriarch with warring offspring becomes the focus of an investigation, which our detectives crack within the leisurely two-hour timeslot.

But for actress Tala Gouveia, who plays the no-nonsense DCI McDonald, there's something radical to be found amid the classic crime drama trappings. "When I read the script, I was thinking to myself, 'Which TV detective can I compare my character to?' And I couldn't really come up with anyone. What can happen with women of colour is that they get to be on a TV show, but they're there to support someone else's journey. Here, McDonald is driving the story, which feels progressive.

"There are a lot of issues within the police, concerning racism and sexism towards female police officers. But what we're saying here is that you can succeed in the police as a woman of colour. That's really important. And maybe it's going to inspire someone somewhere."

Jason Watkins – who plays McDonald's police partner, DS Dodds – is in agreement with his co-star, but adds that characterisation is also key. "A black female officer paired with a white, middle-aged guy is immediately interesting," he says. "TV productions should be making sure that we have people of different ethnicities working together. But it has to be done well, otherwise it becomes tokenism, and that's bad for everybody."

As with all good screen odd couples, it's eventually revealed that McDonald and Dodds have more in common with each other than they initially think. And it's this factor, Gouveia believes, that will endear them to viewers: "They are both underestimated by a lot of people because they're perceived as unthreatening.

"Dodds has been at his desk for years and this is his first time back out in the field. And McDonald is thought of as this young, loud woman from London who isn't going to last long in Bath. But both their colleagues and the criminals make a mistake. Hopefully, the audience will fall in love with these characters and be willing us to solve the crime, so they can see us getting that win." DB

Shore thing

The stars of new comedy Sandylands celebrate the British seaside holiday

CRAIG PARKINSON

plays nightclub owner Terry Chino

I grew up in Blackpool, and at its summertime peak it was a riot. You know the scene in Jaws when all the holidaymakers just turn up at Amity Island? That's what Blackpool was like – but without the shark attacks.

I was quite an indie kid when I was growing up and I'd go to this place called Jenks Bar. It was a very small, sticky-carpeted, cider-fuelled club and I'd be there in big socks, Doc Martens and combat trousers. Afterwards, you'd see all these kids walking home from the hip dance clubs without any shoes because if you wore your best trainers, you would get robbed of them! People would come up to you and ask your shoe size, and if you were a nine or a ten, that was it. Your trainers would be gone.

There is such an eccentricity to the seaside, too. The towns are huge magnets that pull in the most odd, eccentric and bizarre characters. In Blackpool, there used to be a version of Madame Tussauds called Louis Tussauds, and the waxworks looked nothing like any famous people. If they had been doing it for comedy, then hats off to them. But they weren't – they were really trying. It was tragic how bad it was.

I try to go back to Blackpool as much as I can with my little boy. He is just coming up to nine years old, so he loves going there. He still sees the glamour, whereas I see faded grandeur, but he's getting to that age where he wants to go on the rollercoasters and the pier so I'm kind of reliving my youth through my son.

I'm so proud of where I was born and so I have carte blanche to give Blackpool a bit of a ribbing. But if you start slagging off Blackpool, then I'm coming for you!

SIMON BIRD

plays police officer Nathan Wild

Oddly, I don't have any childhood memories of the British seaside. My parents used to teach summer school in Boston every July and August, so we would leave for the US as soon as school broke up, which meant I literally didn't experience a British summertime until I was in my 20s.

To be honest (and I'm aware that this makes me sounds like a fully paid-up member of the liberal metropolitan elite), my experiences of the British seaside have all come from filming there – so I'm not sure they're an accurate representation of what it's really like… Unless maniacal vets really do chase evil hamsters down Blackpool Central Pier, as I had to on The Harry Hill Movie.

I also vividly remember James Buckley

I grew up in Hounslow and we'd go to Brighton with the family. It felt like a trek – it'd take ages to get there, and ages to get back. We spent twice as long travelling as we did on the beach.

Although I grew up next door to a fish and chip shop, my dad absolutely believed that if you bought it at the seafront, it was fresher. He obviously thought that somebody dropped a line off the end of the pier, caught a haddock and that's the one we were eating.

Meanwhile, my mum and my aunt would go into the sea with their saris on and they would fill with air, so they looked like James and the Giant Peach, floating with a head sticking out of the top.

There's a slightly faded grandeur and something quite romantic about the British seaside that I like. More recently, I stayed in the most ludicrous room in a Brighton B&B. It was small and there was a little telly with a 12-inch screen, but it was on top of the wardrobe and the telephone for the room was in the toilet, and I could reach the toilet from my bed. And if I pulled the curtains back, there was a brick wall, with a tiny bit of light at the top of it. It's those eccentric things that are so specific to a seaside resort. It all feels like a slightly different world.

I'm a Devon girl, so a lot of my life was spent at the seaside. I grew up in Plymouth and was very lucky that my parents used to traipse me around seaside villages for most of my weekends. My very first boyfriend was a surfer, and I was so desperate to impress him that I decided to be a surfer girl.

But the first time I got on my surfboard, I went under a wave and then, as I came up, the surfboard was horizontal and it smacked me in the face. It hit my nose and I could taste blood starting to trickle down my face but I was like, "Don't cry, don't cry, just don't cry". It absolutely scarred me and I haven't been on a surfboard since I was 18. I used to pretend I was into it for years. I made my mum keep the surfboard for about ten years and then she was like, "Natalie, it's just rotting in the garden. You have to get rid of it."

DAVID WALLIAMS
plays B&B owner Derek Swallows

"Can you see the sea yet?" teased my mother and father, as we drove to Brighton on a day trip. Crammed in the back of the maroon Vauxhall Viva, my sister and I looked over our parents' heads, trying to be first to spot the expanse of turquoise that seemed to go on for ever.

Brighton was the nearest seaside town when I was growing up. As a child, it always gave me a giddy sense of pleasure. Staring down through the planks on the pier at the swirling sea below; whirling down the helter skelter; spinning on the bumper cars; hobbling across the pebbly beach; catching my breath at the cold of the sea.

Those days were always a dream but, like dreams, they couldn't last forever. The sun would set and a chill would hang in the air. We would be packed in the car, clutching the spoils from the day – a cuddly toy won on the pier, a stick of rock, a fishing net – and fall asleep on the drive home. Being at the seaside is a joyous reminder of what life could be, if only there was no school, no work and no need to eat anything other than fish, chips and ice cream.

SOPHIE THOMPSON
plays Derek's wife Jeannie

The seaside conjures up myriad memories: getting a pair of naughty knickers from a vending machine in Southend-on-Sea on a date with my now ex-husband; buying fossils in Lyme Regis while we were filming Persuasion; tucking into prawns in newspaper with Amanda Root; eating my own body weight in shellfish in Aldeburgh in Suffolk, where I went on a bus during a day off from filming Detectorists. I bought a towel in a charity shop, and went swimming in my pants and vest. It was lovely.

I also remember going to Margate when I was a bit heartbroken, looking at paintings, drinking warm white wine from a plastic beaker, and taking meaningful photographs of gulls and graffiti. The seaside is so poignant. Usually, you're there with people that you love, or maybe people that you love but you're not with any more, and the memories somehow become incredibly vivid. It's very profound, I think, to be at the seaside.

Tigers: Hunting the Traffickers Wednesday 9.00pm BBC2

KILLED FOR HIS BONES

In South East Asia, tigers are being bred and butchered in illegal farms – an undercover documentary reveals the horror of this grisly trade

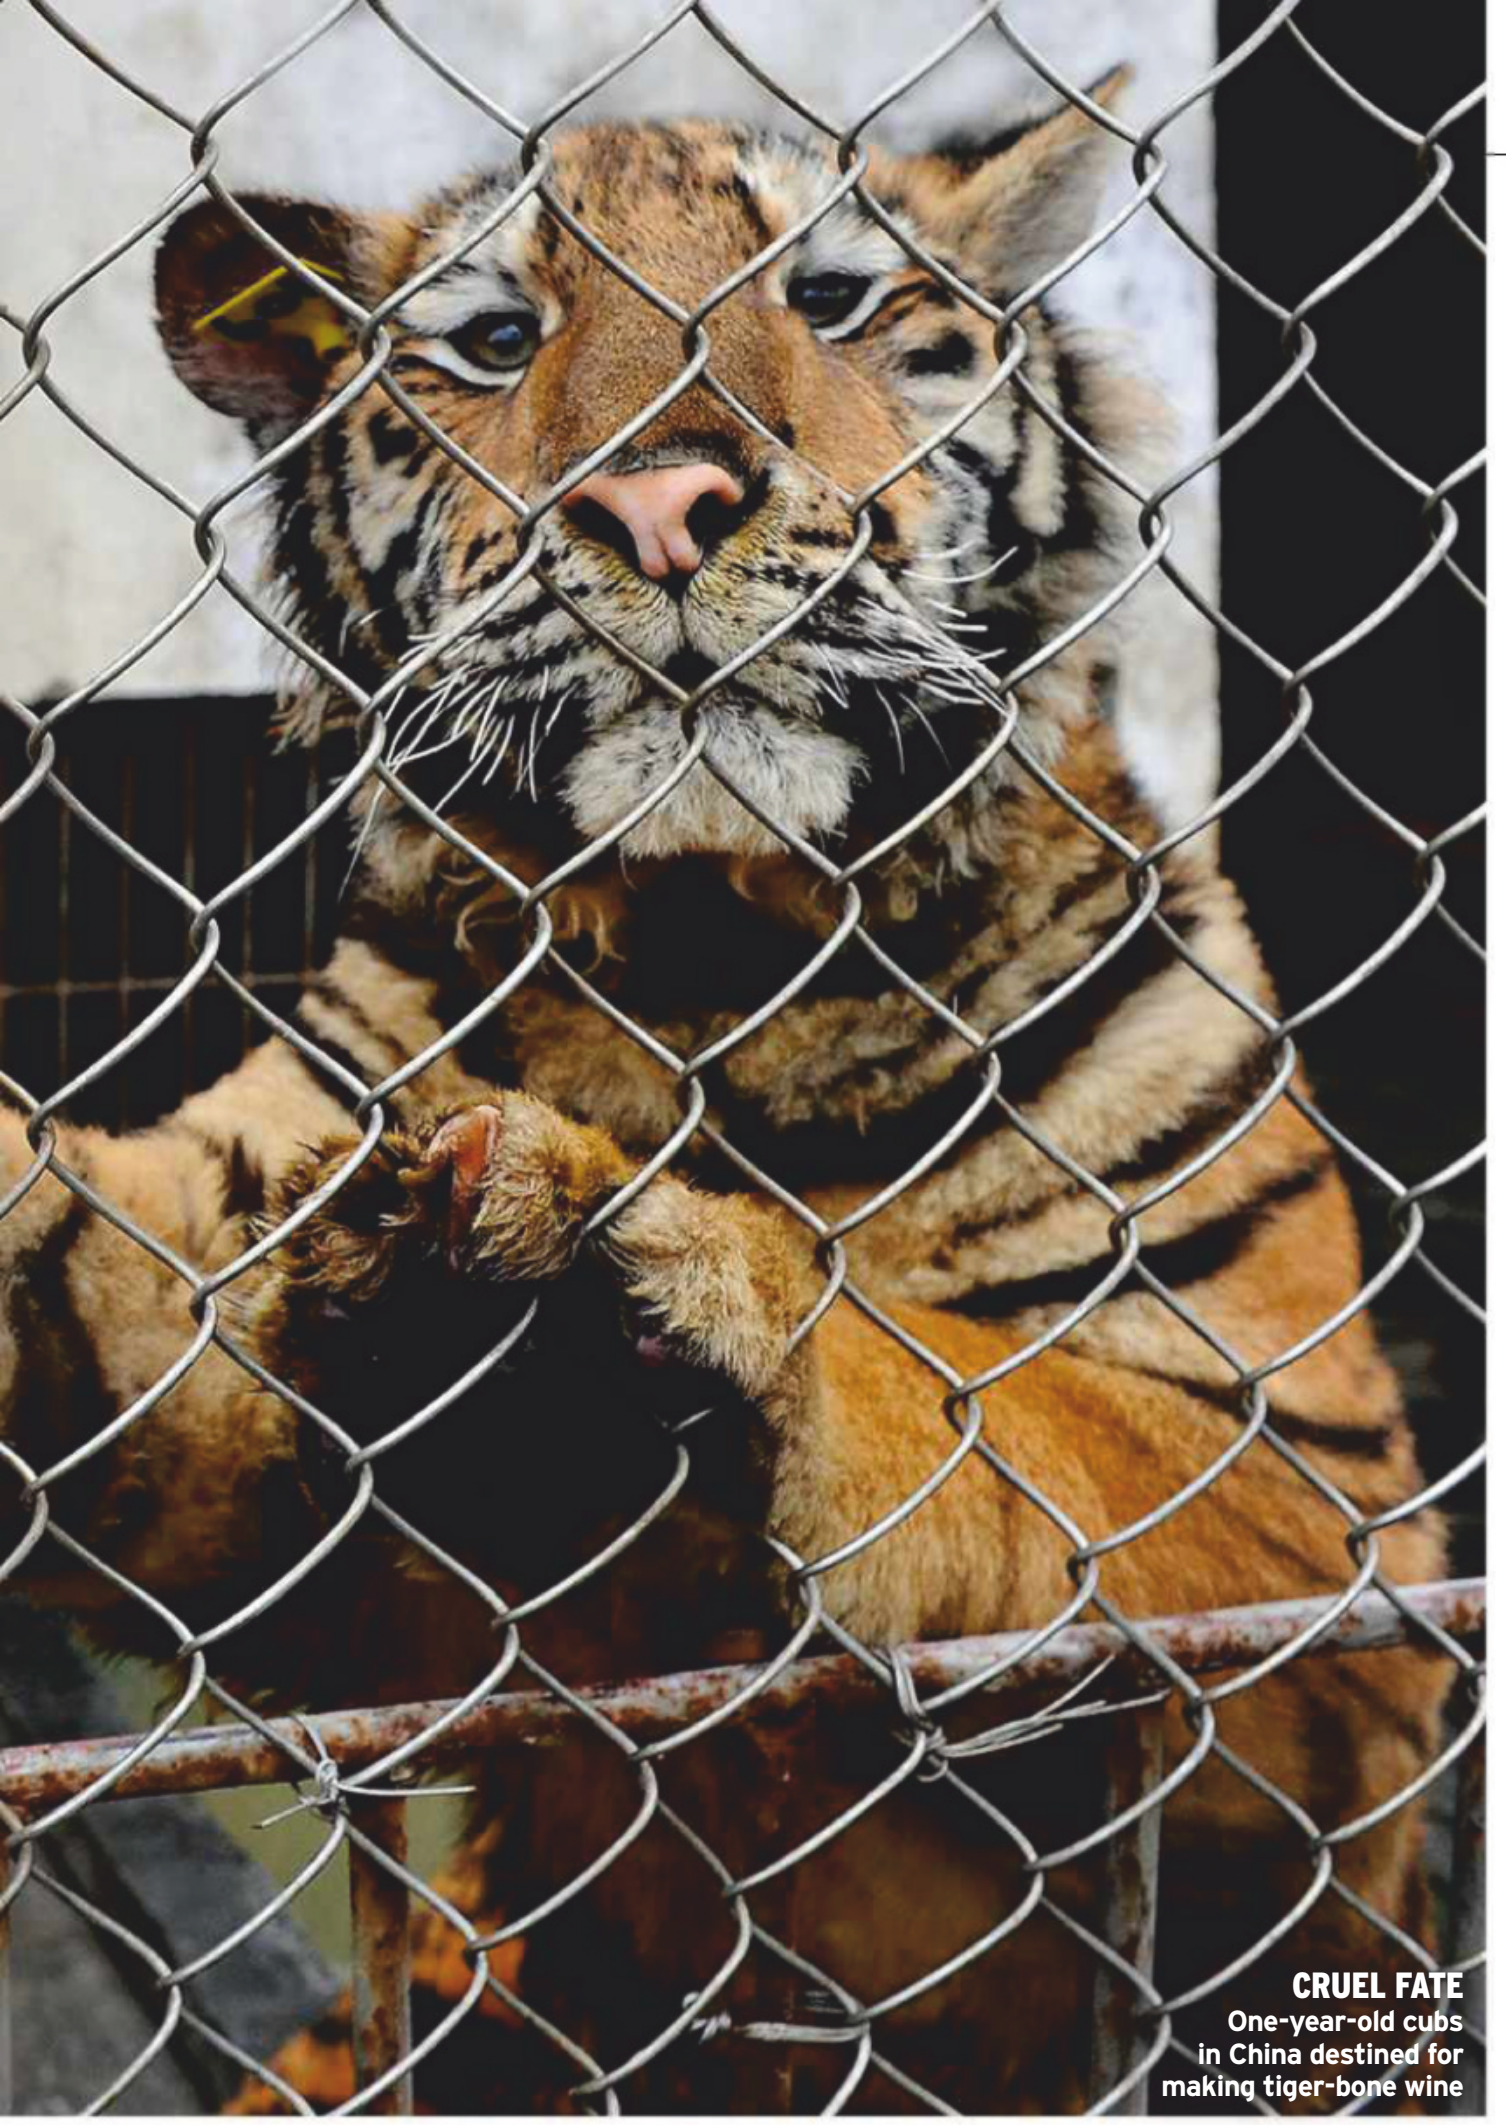

SECRET FILMING
Aldo Kane with a caged tiger in Chon Buri province, Thailand

IF THIS REPORT was a news bulletin, it would come with a health warning. But the printed word can also conjure up imagery that shocks, so it's right to say that this article contains some distressing images.

This story – and the BBC2 documentary it's signposting – highlights a barbaric, but little-known, trade that sees hundreds of captive tigers killed each year for so-called "lifestyle" products in South East Asia.

The tigers are bred in places described, benignly, as zoos and sanctuaries. Outwardly they look like places of safety, but in fact they're commercial slaughterhouses, as former Royal Marine Commando Aldo Kane discovered when he spent six months filming undercover.

"There are two very different markets," he tells us. "In Vietnam they drown or electrocute the

CRUEL FATE
One-year-old cubs in China destined for making tiger-bone wine tiger, skin and butcher it and then boil the bones for three days until you end up with a heavy stock that's then dried and mixed with other products, like the shells of tortoises and the bones of monkeys."

Men seeking sustained sexual vigour then sprinkle shavings from the product – known as "tiger glue" – into alcoholic drinks.

In China there's a different approach, says Kane. "There they make tiger-bone wine. They kill the tiger, skin it and hang the body in a barrel of wine for anything between two and eight years. Imagine a distillery with 200 whisky barrels – each one of those has a tiger suspended inside it. It's industrial-scale production."

I tell him it sounds like an exaggeration, if not an eco-driven invention. "I wish it was," he replies. "Sadly it's 100 per cent true. I have spent a lot of my time in hostile environments and seen some pretty nasty stuff, but that made me sick to my core."

With director Laura Warner, Kane – who served as a sniper in the Commandos – criss-crossed between Thailand, Laos, Vietnam and China, covertly filming inside these illegal, but apparently flourishing, tiger farms.

"It's quite a risky environment to be working in," he says. "The people who traffic tiger parts are also involved in trafficking people and drugs. So we were continually having to move hotels and locations to let the situation cool down."

On one occasion they filmed inside an establishment after scrambling over a high wall. Kane says the end justified the means.

"The BBC has very strict protocols on what you can and can't do, and you can't just go breaking and entering into a place. You have to have a hefty weight of evidence collected from several different sources that suggest wrongdoing and law-breaking, which then allows you to do a bit more of a deep dive.

"And when we did, I couldn't believe how large some of these places were. Some of them had hundreds of tigers locked up in cages." It's estimated that there are up to 8,000 tigers held in captivity in South East Asia, twice the number that there are left in the wild across the world.

And there's the rub. According to Kane, the breeding of tigers for their carcasses is having a catastrophic effect on the wild population. The availability of farmed tiger products is fuelling demand among the burgeoning Chinese middle class for the real thing – wild tigers.

"There will always be the wealthy elite who want the best of the best of that product, and in this case that's your wild tiger. In China and Vietnam, if the traffickers can prove it's a wild tiger they will get a much higher price."

But the horror doesn't end there. Perhaps as a consequence of the in-breeding at these so-called zoos, more cubs are stillborn. Why dispose of them when they might make money?

"The traffickers are the new entrepreneurs," says Kane. "So now you have tiger foetuses in jars that people then put in wine and drink. This is a new phenomenon in the past ten years."

> 'They skin it and hang the body in a barrel of wine'
> ALDO KANE

The Natural World film that's come out of Kane and Warner's undercover investigation pulls no punches. Yet when Warner received footage of a tiger being killed and prepared for the pot, she decided, after much consideration, to spare the viewer the moment of death, though we do see the carcass being butchered.

Warner says: "Unlike rhino horn or elephant ivory, this slaughter happens behind closed doors, and these scenes have never been captured on camera before. I wanted the viewer to be shocked and appalled without feeling we had unnecessarily exposed them to grotesque footage of the actual moment of death. Hopefully these images will help viewers understand the true brutality of the trade and galvanise people into action against the pointless butchering of these magnificent creatures for their bones."

Kane hopes that the film does shock people, but also that it will find an audience in the countries where this ugly trade is rife.

"If we can get countries like Vietnam and China and Laos on board, we can turn it around. Look what China has done with pandas. These countries are trying, but from what we saw, they need to do so much more." TERRY PAYNE

This Critically Endangered tiger has been pushed to the edge of extinction – less than 400 remain. Give to stop the poachers at www.FFIsumatrantiger.org

Without action now, this extremely rare big cat faces imminent extinction. Latest figures confirm there are less than 400 Sumatran tigers left. We must act now to save them.

- This is one of the final strongholds of the incredibly rare Sumatran tiger.
- FFI's work here could be all that stands between the Sumatran tiger and extinction.
- FFI is seeking needed immediately which could help fund more rangers and step up action against the poachers in Kerinci Seblat National Park.

The ongoing threat to the Sumatran tiger has put FFI's anti poaching team on red alert. Habitat loss has already pushed the species to the brink of extinction but to make matters worse, the international demand for tiger skins and bones is rising, intensifying the pressure on these magnificent cats.

Fauna & Flora International (FFI) has put out an urgent call to the global community to help save the last Sumatran tigers currently existing in the wild – and specifically to employ more rangers. There are now less than 400 Sumatran tigers left.

FFI is urgently seeking funds to step up their crucial conservation programme in Kerinci Seblat National Park, Sumatra, Indonesia. In order to safeguard the future existence of these magnificent creatures, it is imperative that more rangers are employed.

The fact is that, right now, the Sumatran tiger faces a number of very serious threats, which are putting their very survival in jeopardy. And, sadly, they are all man-made.

Poaching is a constant danger for the elusive Sumatran tiger. Hunters make good money from the tiger's beautiful skin, which remains in great demand as a status symbol across Indonesia and beyond. Also, its bones are illegally exported to use as ingredients in traditional Asian medicines. FFI investigations indicate that the black market prices make this grisly trade all too profitable.

These grave threats have been exacerbated by a very serious loss of habitat. In the last 10 to 15 years, natural forest cover in Sumatra has been slashed by a staggering amount - almost 40%.

With such dramatic loss of habitat, these majestic forest dwellers are struggling to survive and have been designated as Critically Endangered on the IUCN Red List, making the Sumatran tiger one of the most endangered tiger subspecies on the planet. This is a rating reserved for animals that face an extremely high risk of extinction in the wild.

Latest surveys have indicated that there may now be as few as 350 Sumatran tigers remaining in the wild. Thanks to the vital work of FFI's Tiger Protection and Conservation Programme, the numbers have stabilised in the Kerinci Seblat National Park, but the species is still under severe threat.

The illegal poaching syndicates are ruthless and will stop at nothing to supply the market. Other poachers are also in the area, sabotaging FFI's conservation work. In 2016, bird poachers vandalised 16 camera traps set by the tiger conservation team, which meant vital evidence was lost.

This is an ongoing battle, but it is one we must win. Debbie Martyr, FFI Team in response to severe threat from poachers. 10 March deadline.

Leader of the Kerinci Tiger Project in Sumatra, says: "Ranger teams walked almost 1100 miles on forest patrols in and bordering the national park and destroyed more than 16 active tiger snares. That is why we need to step up patrol regimes".

Tiger populations are dreadfully fragile.

The signs suggest that FFI's approach is working, as patrols are reporting more evidence of tigers. FFI's work has also led to the arrest and prosecution of two poachers, including a key figure in the international poaching syndicate. Yet if FFI cannot recruit more rangers to protect the tigers against the increased efforts of the poachers then all our good work could be undone.

That's why it's absolutely vital that we keep up our patrols to protect tigers from poachers – and work towards greater protection for their delicate habitat.

If we're going to save the Critically Endangered Sumatran tiger from complete extinction, it's crucial that we have the means to take action now.

That's why FFI is raising funds which could help pay for this vital work. To do that, the charity is calling on you to make an urgent contribution today.

Please send a gift by no later than 10 March - your action today could help safeguard the future survival of the last few remaining Sumatran tigers in the wild.

Together, we can save the Sumatran tiger from extinction – but only if we take action immediately.

To take action for the Sumatran tiger please donate online at www.FFIsumatrantiger.org or cut the coupon.

If the coupon to the bottom right is missing, please send your cheque (payable to FFI) to: Freepost RTTH-TXTL-AJRK, Fauna & Flora International, The David Attenborough Building, Pembroke Street, Cambridge, CB2 3QZ by 10 March.

FFI's work spans the globe, with over 130 projects in more than 40 countries. FFI's goal is to prevent the extninction of the world's most threatened animals and plants - protecting key locations & helping people live in harmony with nature. We spend 94% of our income on charitable acitivities.

FFI is driving down wildlife crime, and in conjunction with local police, is successfully investigating and arresting wildlife criminals. Your support today could help stop the senseless killing of Sumatran tigers and their cubs.

Fauna & Flora International (FFI) is asking for your help as we prevent tiger poaching in Sumatra through ranger patrols.

This work is crucial to the survival of the Critically Endangered Sumatran tiger.

Now you could help fund this essential work – saving the Sumatran tiger from extinction in the wild – by cutting the coupon below, calling 01223 749019 or go to www.FFIsumatrantiger.org. Please respond by 10 March. Thank you for whatever you can do.

Your gift could help FFI carry out critical conservation work in Kerinci Seblat National Park in Sumatra. These items are on FFI's shopping list of essential needs and could help save the last Sumatran tigers surviving in the wild.

£5,776 could pay for a pair of motorbikes, to help rangers access remote locations.

£1,925 could pay for a session of field training, helping to get new rangers into the forest.

£448 could buy uniforms, rucksacks and boots for 4 rangers - vital equipment for patrols

£72 could help cover the cost of wildlife crime investigations to help convict traffickers.

£32 could help buy charging units for telephones; essential to getting extra help if poachers are spotted on patrol.

Any donations, large or small, will be received with thanks – and could go a long way towards helping to save the Critically Endangered Sumatran tiger.

Please accept my donation of £_____, which could help save the remaining Sumatran tigers

Is silent sport sexy?

Formula E doesn't roar, but it's clean, green – and free to air

Formula E: Marrakesh ePrix Saturday 9.45am (qualifying) BBC red button, 1.30pm (race) BBC2

Lewis Hamilton once said that part of his love for Formula One came from the noise: "The roar of awesomeness". Can we learn to love Formula E, whose awesomeness is expressed in a whisper? As the BBC prepares to broadcast the Marrakesh ePrix, the fifth race of the current season, this could be the season in which the new formula starts to gain traction.

Formula E has been racing electric cars on city tracks since 2014. The cars can now reach speeds up to 174mph and teams include Jaguar, Audi, Mercedes, Nissan and BMW. A race lasts 45 minutes plus one lap – and if you watched the silent speedsters ripping up the track in Mexico City last time out, you couldn't help but make comparisons with Formula One.

You start noticing that Formula One is becoming like Jurassic Park. The whole event is packed full of awesomeness, no doubting that: but it's awesomeness of a seriously dated kind. It's all about yesterday's thrill. I was reminded of York Railway Museum, where I admired Mallard, the locomotive that, as every schoolchild used to know, holds the world speed record for a steam engine – 126mph. The world record for an electric-powered locomotive is currently 267mph.

Perhaps Formula E will benefit from Bronze Syndrome. This is named (by me) for Lioness Lucy Bronze as the England women's football team reached the semi-finals of the World Cup last year. Most football played is on the subscription channels: the free-to-air World Cup was a stunning breakthrough for the women's game.

Other sports have benefited from Bronze Syndrome. Free-to-air channels are outcompeted in many sporting arenas these days, so must look for bargains. As a result, track cycling, netball and gymnastics find themselves almost mainstream. Cricket went the other way, lost popularity and has almost begged free-to-air TV to take on their new competition, the Hundred.

> 'The Mexico City ePrix was full of crashes and overtaking action'

Can the public be persuaded to love Formula E? With some sports, especially when there's an engine involved, you're either a fanatic or totally indifferent. These are sports that ghettoise themselves. Other sports have a knack of picking up floating viewers, and Formula One does that, at least to an extent. So does gymnastics, while track cycling had benefited from the combination of British success and the craze for bikes.

Formula E's biggest problem is Formula One. Formula E isn't just a poor relation: it also seems sanitised and a bit unsexy. The visceral vibe and dirty technology of Formula One, along with the familiar personalities and the aura of Hamilton, make up a package the newer formula can't hope to rival – at least at first.

But there is action in Formula. The Mexico City event was full of crashes and overtakes, which always grab the attention. But perhaps more significantly, the decisive move of the race was characterised by that combination of brilliance, vision and nerve that motorsports offer at their best. It came about as New Zealander Mitch Evans took the lead from the start, then dominated the race while the rest crashed and bashed behind him.

The sport must now go on to develop its own narrative: must find the rivalries and personalities. I look at Formula One and remember books of my boyhood: that image of the battle between tyrannosaurus rex and triceratops. Awesome: and part of the past.

Read all about it...

The library is a dream movie location, says Andrew Collins

THE FIRST FILM I ever saw at the cinema – Walt Disney's 1967 adaptation of The Jungle Book – opens with a book. We alight upon a handsomely bound hardback edition of Rudyard Kipling's stories, which seems to get caught in a light breeze, causing the pages to turn by themselves. A trope trademarked in 1937 for Snow White, it continues to bookend children's films from Shrek to Elf, and is gently subverted by Wes Anderson in The Royal Tenenbaums, in whose prologue the book-of-the-film is stamped out for lending by a librarian.

In Hollywood shorthand, literature is intrinsically good and all books have significance, whether it's Michael Caine wooing Barbara Hershey in Woody Allen's Hannah and Her Sisters by "bumping" into her near the Pageant Book and Print Shop in the East Village and buying her a book of e.e. cummings poems, or the paranormal investigators in Ghostbusters tracking down the "full-torso apparition" of a floating woman browsing in the New York Public Library, who spectrally shushes them.

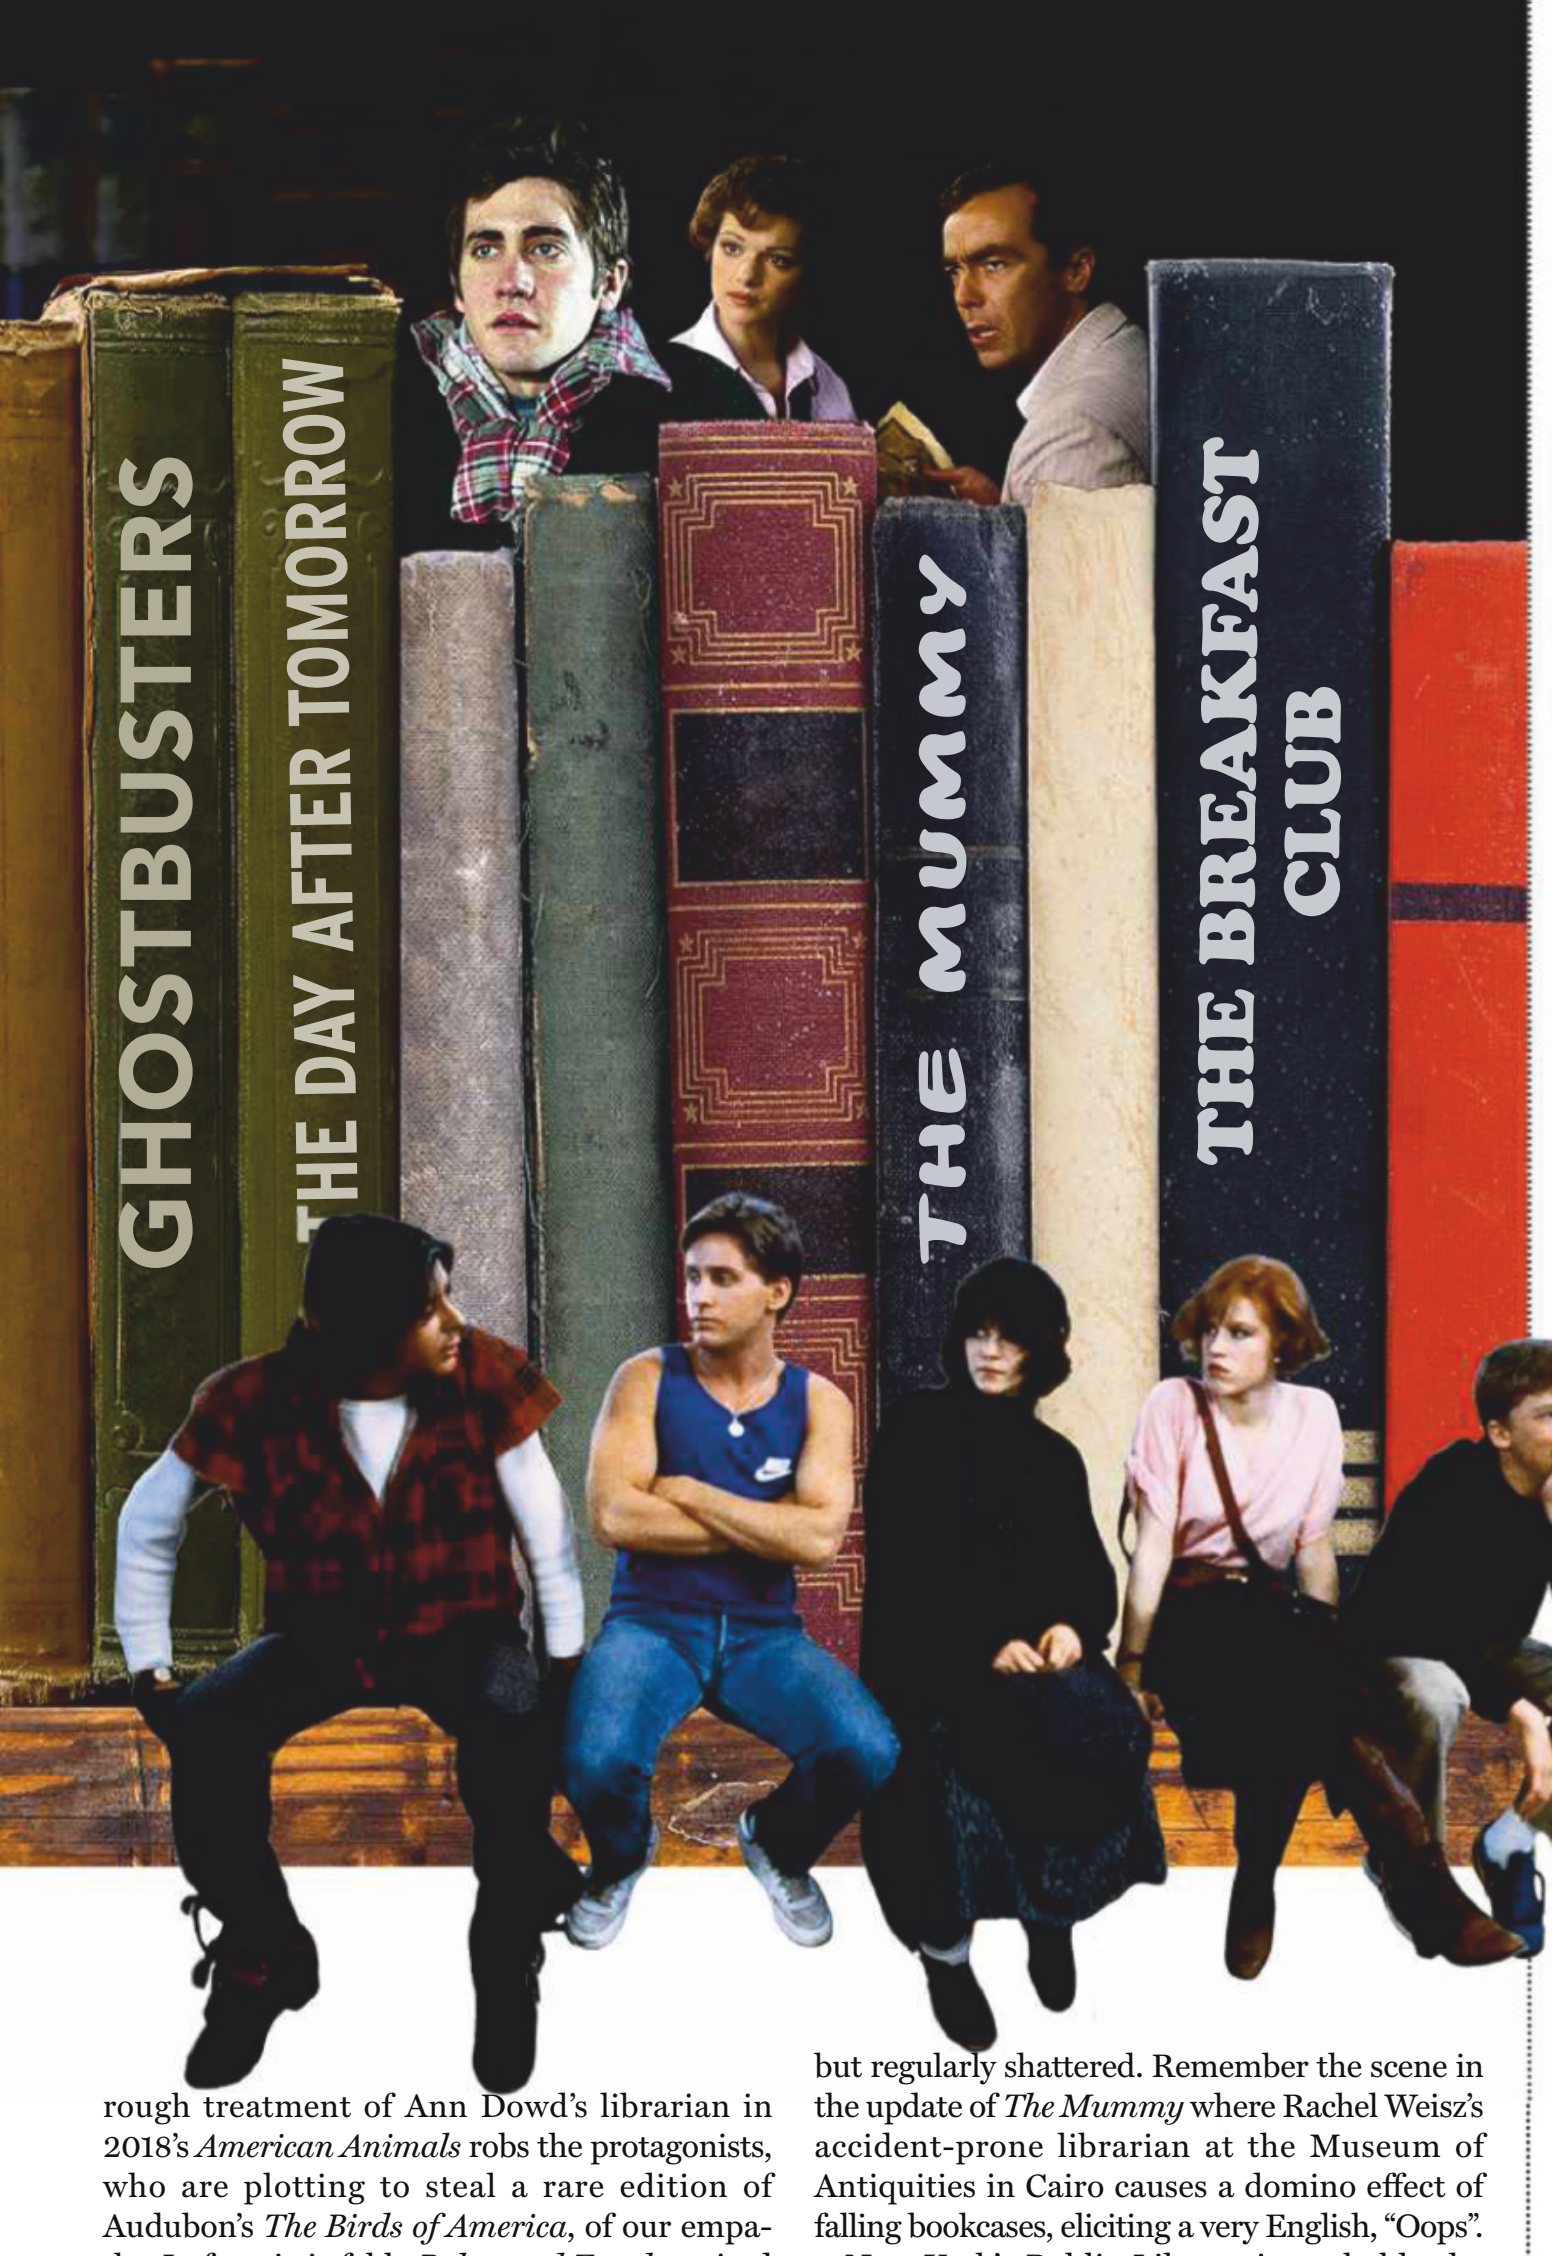

And now the egalitarian welcome of libraries lies at the heart of The Public (in cinemas now), a wily, witty, "woke" new film written, directed and co-produced by its star, Emilio Estevez. As well as saluting the community spirit inherent in borrowing books, it depicts the actual Public Library of Cincinnati as a place of refuge. On the coldest night of the year, Estevez's character Stuart Goodson invites the library's homeless regular users to sleep in the building, and causes escalating municipal conflict.

Libraries and librarians crop up regularly on our screens. Both Indiana Jones and the more contemporary Robert Langdon from the Dan Brown novels are rarely far from an archive. In the adaptation of Brown's Angels & Demons the parchments from the Vatican Archive are kept in a protective partial vacuum until Langdon's sidekick Vittoria Vetra eschews the white gloves to rip out a page from a sacred text. In Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade, our hero discovers catacombs under a library's stone floor. The message is: read a book – in this case Indy's dad's diary – and find the answers.

Harry Potter and his gang are rarely out of the endless Hogwarts library ("thousands of shelves, hundreds of narrow rows"), and in The Goblet of Fire discover a book on how to breathe underwater. For sheer fictional size, Beast's library in Disney's Beauty and the Beast is hard to beat. And who knows which books were displaced during Keira Knightley and James McAvoy's against-the-bookshelves tryst in Atonement.

THE IMAGE OF a student, journalist or amateur sleuth flicking through bound volumes or rummaging in a drawer of index cards is one that's deeply cinematic, especially in our digitised age. In a visual medium, a hand-cranked microfiche will always be more romantic than googling at a computer screen. Only in the Bratpack movie The Breakfast Club (featuring a young Estevez) would the library act as a prison.

In visual terms, the library or bookshop is the equivalent of a church swinging wide its doors to all comers. The image of the librarian is of a kindly saviour; in The Music Man, they get their own number, Marian the Librarian – "I need you badly, badly, Madame Librarian," shifty Robert Preston sings to Shirley Jones, adding, "the civilised world accepts as unforgivable sin/ Any talking out loud with any librarian". The rough treatment of Ann Dowd's librarian in 2018's American Animals robs the protagonists, who are plotting to steal a rare edition of Audubon's The Birds of America, of our empathy. In futuristic fable Robot and Frank, retired jewel thief Frank Langella conducts a courtship over the library counter with Susan Sarandon.

Books have never threatened the entertainment industry's hegemony, and the library remains a safe place for the ruminative and the investigative, which is why detective Somerset (Morgan Freeman) spends so much time there, lit from below by those green glass lampshades, in serial killer thriller Se7en. It's only when Denzel Washington's ambulance-chaser in Philadelphia witnesses subtle discrimination against Tom Hanks's HIV-positive lawyer in a reading room that he decides to take his case.

The library is a place where silence is golden but regularly shattered. Remember the scene in the update of The Mummy where Rachel Weisz's accident-prone librarian at the Museum of Antiquities in Cairo causes a domino effect of falling bookcases, eliciting a very English, "Oops".

New York's Public Library is probably the most featured library in all of cinema. Audrey Hepburn wore shades in there in Breakfast at Tiffany's. There's even a 197-minute documentary about the institution, Ex Libris, which will keep you as warm as Emilio Estevez's best intentions. But the building's most significant cameo came in director Roland Emmerich's ice-age thriller The Day after Tomorrow: a superstorm floods Manhattan, sending survivors scurrying for safety at the library, where in sub-zero temperatures the refugees are forced to burn books to keep warm and stay alive. While texts are thrown into the fireplace in the Rose Main Reading Room, one pre-apocalyptic wag lightens the mood, saying, "There's a whole section on tax law that we can probably burn."

Digit-ally perfect...

My 1976 diary tells me that on 21 January, aged ten, I swapped James Bond paperbacks with my friend Nigel; my doodled-on copy of Ian Fleming's Dr No for his Live and Let Die and The Man with the Golden Gun. These rather lurid, painterly editions – published by Pan before the first film in 1962 – were later redesigned with strikingly graphic uniformity by Raymond Hawkey, whose fine work was usurped by covers reflecting the hit movies with stills of Sean Connery and, in the case of From Russia with Love, a cover design that brilliantly simulated a strip of celluloid.

I've been inspired to seek out these cherished items not just because ITV4 are running the entire Bond series in readiness for the release of the 25th film, No Time to Die, on 2 April, but because the Royal Mail has produced a set of ten stamps (above) – six Bonds and four vehicles (including my favourite as a boy, the Little Nellie autogyro from You Only Live Twice). The term "iconic" has lost most of its meaning, but some of these add-ons are as golden as Scaramanga's gun.

Dad took my brother and me to see all the Bond films as they were released, as well as in ridiculously heady double-bills at our local ABC. Imagine the rush seeing Dr No and Goldfinger in one sitting. We chuckled at Roger Moore's reign and, as adults, breathed a sigh of relief when Pierce Brosnan stepped into Timothy Dalton's loafers. But Goldfinger is still hard to top, with its surfeit of memorable moments – henchman Oddjob's bowler-hat decapitation of a statue; the horrifying gold-plating of Shirley Eaton, a blameless employee of Gert Frobe's titular bullion-loving megalomaniac; the industrial laser aimed at 007's crown jewels – and a witty energy under four-time Bond director Guy Hamilton.

The only way anyone's going to lick James Bond is to put his face on an envelope.

CRIME DRAMA For Hollywood, any film that's set and shot within the city limits of Los Angeles is loaded with significance. It's a home movie, basically, with those high palms, an implicit no-pedestrians policy and its name nailed to a hill in the background in case anyone forgets. From all those black-and-white noirs, through Sunset Blvd to any of the A Star Is Born quartet, the link is explicit. In 1997, writer/director Curtis Hanson drew on all available mythology, stripping out much of James Ellroy's impenetrable, 50s-set, 500-page novel with co-writer Brian Helgeland to produce the second greatest neo-noir after 1974's Chinatown. The plot hinges on a multiple homicide and snakes through the corridors of power. Three LAPD officers – Jack (Kevin Spacey), the glamour guy; Ed (Guy Pearce), the idealist; and Bud (Russell Crowe), the muscle with a soft spot for battered wives – root the labyrinthine plot, while a deserving Oscar went to Kim Basinger as a Veronica Lake lookalike.

FANTASY Director Andy Tennant brings new freshness and vitality to the Cinderella story in this delightful and handsomely mounted reworking that treats the legend as if it were hard historical fact. All the pantomime sorcery and comical sidekicks have been jettisoned, and the result allows the romance between Drew Barrymore's feisty servant girl and Dougray Scott's prince to shine even brighter. Anjelica Huston re-interprets the evil stepmother role with deft assurance, and Leonardo da Vinci makes a surprising fairy godmother figure. AJ

4.00-5.50pm ITV4 PG

WESTERN Originally known in the UK as Where the River Bends, this is a magnificent western, one of a superb series of films starring James Stewart and directed by Anthony Mann. Stewart is a wagon train scout trying to hide his past, pitted against former partner Arthur Kennedy in a story that feels like Greek tragedy. It's a satisfying work, with action sequences and performances that repay several viewings. Look out, too, for an early star-making appearance from a young Rock Hudson, who forms a bond with reformed outlaw Stewart. TS

COMEDY After this early effort, Ealing director Charles Crichton went on to greater acclaim for making The Lavender Hill Mob and The Titfield Thunderbolt, and, some 40 years later, A Fish Called Wanda. There's much to enjoy in this slight but entertaining caper – the first of the genre from the famous studio – as Alastair Sim and a gang of East End urchins set out to thwart some fiendish crooks. It's a fun frolic from a more innocent age, with Sim in fine form and featuring some evocative location footage of postwar London. PF (UK 1947, BW)

ACTION COMEDY Kevin Hart stars here as an accountant who's lured into an international spy mission by Dwayne Johnson, his former classmate and then a social outcast, who's now working for the CIA. The film will be wholly familiar to fans of Hart's work, as he once again plays the fast-talking comedy whirlwind who's in over his head. But of Hart's many movies, this is one of the more enjoyable, thanks to the entertaining star collaboration and a heartfelt anti-bullying message. The partnership of "a little Hart and big Johnson" proved so successful, they reteamed for Jumanji: Welcome to the Jungle the following year. JL (US 2016, some violence, swearing, HD)

Leap Year ★★★

ROMANTIC COMEDY Today being a leap day makes this a timely showing for this gentle riff on the traditional free pass for women. Over-organised Amy Adams rushes from Boston to Ireland to propose to her beau (Adam Scott) on 29 February, only to be confounded by the one thing she can't control – the weather. Miles off course, in the wilds of Dingle, she enlists the help of handsome minicab driver-cum-publican Matthew Goode. This frothy romance has just enough blarney to charm the susceptible, Adams is enchanting, and Goode just manages to hang on to an often-strained Irish accent. KK

The Magnificent Seven ★★★

10.10pm-12.30am ITV 12

WESTERN Director Antoine Fuqua gives John Sturges's classic an action-injection makeover. The premise is the same: seven hombres with deadly skills come to the aid of a community bothered by bad guys. Here, however, it's not Mexican peons and bandits, but a small town of settlers under siege from a vicious land baron (Peter Sarsgaard). Joining forces against him are a black-clad gunslinger (Denzel Washington), a wise-ass gambler (Chris Pratt), a sharpshooter (Ethan Hawke), a knife-throwing assassin (Lee Byung-hun) and a burly tracker (Vincent D'Onofrio). Fuqua delivers the quick-fire gunplay and respects his source material; he just can't match the epic romanticism or magnificence of the enduring 1960 original. JA (US 2016, violence, HD)

P After the Storm ★★★★

10.50pm-12.45am BBC4 PG

DRAMA Director Hirokazu Koreeda's considered studies of the modern Japanese family continue a tradition founded by master film-makers Yasujiro Ozu and Mikio Naruse. Filled with mournful humour, this saga centres on Hiroshi Abe's one-time literary sensation, whose gambling addiction has reduced him to extorting money as a private eye in a Tokyo suburb. His mother and ex-wife have all but given up on him, but his son is prepared to give him the benefit of the doubt, as an approaching typhoon confines the family to a tiny flat. The beautifully judged performances impart piquancy to this bittersweet rumination on memory, paternity and the different ways men and women approach things. DP (Jpn 2016, some swearing, HD)

DRAMA The luminous Michelle Williams may have enjoyed one of her biggest paydays with The Greatest Showman, but the musical did little to show off her abilities. Judge her instead on Manchester by the Sea, a tough-centred, melancholy melodrama set in Massachusetts, from assiduous auteur Kenneth Lonergan. The plot follows laconic handyman Casey Affleck, who is entrusted with the care of his teenage nephew (Lucas Hedges) after his brother dies. As Affleck's ex-wife, Williams is offered a meaningful space to show what she can do, and she becomes one with the fabric of the movie. Affleck's relationship with Hedges is the beating heart of it all, and there's a big flashback reveal – beautifully scored by Tomaso Albinoni – that may break your heart. (US 2016, swearing, HD)

The Wrong Box ★★★

9.55-12.10pm Sony Classic U

COMEDY New to Sony Classic today, this period comedy actually owes more to the freewheeling Swinging Sixties than to the Victorian era in which it is set. Based on a novel co-written by Robert Louis Stevenson, it centres on a family inheritance, with John Mills trying to bump off brother Ralph Richardson. Though slackly directed by Bryan Forbes, the cast list is to die for. Best of all is the redoubtable Peter Sellers, while new boy Michael Caine more than holds his own; but there are also quality turns from Tony Hancock and Wilfrid Lawson, as well as a sublime chance to see Peter Cook and Dudley Moore together in their prime. TS (UK 1966)

Scott of the Antarctic ★★★★

12 noon-1.45pm BBC2 U

ADVENTURE This is a documentary-like account of the ill-fated British expedition to the South Pole that ended in 1912. Although sticking closely to Scott's journal, it plays down his probable errors of judgement in order to concentrate on his reckless courage and the unswerving loyalty of his men. Many of the team's actual possessions were used to increase the sense of authenticity, but the cast is only rarely allowed to demonstrate the humanity behind the stiff upper lips. John Mills is splendidly British in the title role, although he nearly came a cropper when he fell through the snow while filming in the Alps. DP (UK 1948, HD)

Uncle Buck ★★★

2.35-4.35pm ITV 12

COMEDY This was the movie where director John Hughes made a decision to leave the world of adolescence behind (after the likes of Ferris Bueller's Day Off and The Breakfast Club) and regress into childhood. It was also the film that unleashed Macaulay Culkin on to the world at large, but don't hold that against it, as there is still much to enjoy. John Candy makes the most of his starring role as the lovable slob who is pressed into looking after his brother's children. Hughes stages some neat comic set pieces, and it's only the sentimental moralising that strikes a false note. JF (US 1989, swearing, HD)

Shrek 2 ★★★★

3.00-4.25pm BBC1 U

ANIMATION This sequel is every bit as cute, clever and funny as the original. It picks up after the marriage of Shrek (voiced by Mike Myers) and Fiona (Cameron Diaz), and follows their trip to her homeland of Far Far Away. If Fiona's parents (John Cleese, Julie Andrews) are shocked to discover she's an ogre, it's nothing compared to their reaction to her new husband. The parodies, pop references, Disney-baiting and Hollywood send-ups (the kingdom of Far Far Away is etched as a medieval Tinseltown) are hilarious – as is Eddie Murphy, who's on great form as Donkey – and there's plenty of subtle satire and double entendres for young and old alike to savour. AJ (US 2004, HD)

The Golden Voyage of Sinbad ★★★

6.50-9.00pm Paramount Network U

ADVENTURE John Phillip Law – best known as the blind angel Pygar in Barbarella – here takes over the role of the legendary seafarer from Kerwin Mathews, who'd impressed in The 7th Voyage of Sinbad. However, the actors and the plot once again end up playing second fiddle to the magnificent Dynamation stop-motion sequences meticulously created by the godfather of special effects, Ray Harryhausen. Particularly memorable are the walking figurehead, the hideous one-eyed centaur and the multi-armed Kali statue that tests Sinbad's swordfighting skills to the max. DP (UK 1973)

Transformers: Revenge of the Fallen ★★ 8.00-11.00pm E4 12

ACTION Action maestro Michael Bay piles on heavy metal noise and epic explosions in this slick yet soulless first sequel, which returns to Freeview today. This time, Shia LaBeouf and Megan Fox are on a mission to save mankind from the first-ever Decepticon. But neither the silly, fragmented plot nor the proficient acting really matter; the point here is giant robots turning into cars, planes and anything else you can imagine. Despite being visually impressive on all counts, the well-staged mayhem feels tiresomely synthetic and the robot characters are just not that engaging. AJ (US 2009, edited for violence, language, HD)

Daddy's Home Two ★★★

9.00-11.05pm Film4 12

COMEDY Will Ferrell and Mark Wahlberg reprise their roles as competitive "co-dads" in this inevitable sequel to the 2015 comedy hit. It's a four-way father face-off this time, though, as Ferrell and Wahlberg find themselves joined for Christmas by their respectively touchy-feely and tough-guy dads, played by John Lithgow and Mel Gibson. Competitive one-upmanship and slapstick comic mayhem ensue during a "together" Christmas at a ski resort. The film doesn't always work, but among the highlights are Ferrell's trashing of an elaborate Christmas lights display and a Nativity scene where eggnog plays a pivotal part. DA (US 2017, swearing, HD)

Paper Towns ★★★

11.00pm-1.05am C4 12

ROAD MOVIE The consequences of a nerdy Florida teen's infatuation with the free-spirited girl across the street shape this adaptation of John Green's young adult bestseller. One evening, Cara Delevingne's independent night-owl calls on uptight neighbour Nat Wolff for help with a revenge spree against an errant beau – an encounter that proves a pivotal moment in his deepening affections, and the catalyst for her sudden disappearance. Credibility isn't the movie's strongest suit (Delevingne's Whitman-reading dream girl is absurdly precious), but there are some useful insights into the downside of youthful romantic obsession. TJ (US 2015, some swearing, HD)

The History Boys ★★★★

12 midnight-1.50am BBC4 15

DRAMA This is an efficient translation of Alan Bennett's hit stage play about grammar school boys being drilled for their Oxbridge exams. Director Nicholas Hytner wisely opts to change as little as possible, which brilliantly serves Bennett's witty screenplay. The darker subject of a teacher (Richard Griffiths) who is sexually attracted to the boys is the film's only flaw: there's something implausible about their nonchalance towards his attentions. Still, this niggle is more than made up for by the performances of a cast that includes a young Dominic Cooper and James Corden among the pupils. AS (UK/US 2006, swearing)

FILM OF THE DAY

An American Haunting ★★★

9.00-10.50pm Horror Channel 15

PERIOD HORROR When an ordinarily comforting American quilt is pulled slowly off a sleeping girl (Rachel Hurd-Wood), seemingly of its own accord, she pulls it back. Cue the woodwork squeaking and a violin screech on the soundtrack... You may wish to keep the lights on for writer/director Courtney Solomon's 2005 chiller, which is filled with bad dreams and witchy visions that will make you jump or laugh, or both. An overqualified cast includes Donald Sutherland and Sissy Spacek as the concerned parents living in a creepy house with an off-limits attic (really?). If you hand in your cynicism at the creaky door, and treat the reveal with suitable scorn, there's late-night spooky fun to be had. (US 2005, violence, swearing, col/BW)

The film is based on a recorded incident of a 19th-century Tennessee farmer being tormented by an entity known as the "Bell Witch"

Mr Blandings Builds His Dream House ★★★★

9.25-11.20am Sony Classic U

COMEDY Many viewers will identify with the plight of Cary Grant and Myrna Loy in this sublime comedy. They play the married couple who move to the countryside and do, quite literally, what the title states – and get conned by every cowboy builder along the way. The film was remade in 1985 as The Money Pit, but it wasn't as funny or stylish as this version, as neither Tom Hanks nor Shelley Long could compete with the original stars at their best. Just watch Loy recite her proposed colour scheme! TS (US 1948, BW)

The Conquest of Everest ★★★★

11.30am-1.05pm Talking Pictures TV U

DOCUMENTARY Ever since Herbert G Ponting recorded Captain Scott's ill-fated bid to reach the South Pole, the movie camera has been there to capture heroic ventures. Shot in even more arduous conditions, this is a remarkable account of the expedition that saw Edmund Hillary and Sherpa Tenzing become the first to reach the peak of the world's highest mountain. It's a pity the camera couldn't make the final ascent, but what it captured during other stages of the climb make for gripping viewing thanks to the inspired editing, Louis MacNeice's literate commentary and Arthur Benjamin's rousing score. DP (UK 1953)

COMEDY DRAMA After a pre-wedding boating accident leaves her single, Gray Wheeler (Jennifer Garner) makes an unwelcome discovery about the man she almost married. A secret bank account reveals payments made to a massage therapist (Juliette Lewis) and her young son. Making her directorial debut, Erin Brockovich writer Susannah Grant tries to blend grief and light-hearted moments into a weepie comedy drama. However, it rarely works, as the contrived storyline stretches both credibility and goodwill. JR (US 2007)

Die Hard 4.0 ★★★★

9.00-11.35pm Film4 12

ACTION Twelve years after he last wore the white vest in Die Hard with a Vengeance, Bruce Willis again stars as John McClane in this unashamedly retro blockbuster. As Timothy Olyphant's cyber-terrorist threatens to hack the US to a standstill, McClane is once more the wrong guy in the wrong place at the wrong time. Willis enjoys a witty rapport with Justin Long's hacker, and among the impressive set pieces is a fighter jet playing chicken with an 18-wheel tanker truck. JR (US 2007, violence, swearing, HD)

Run All Night ★★★

11.05pm-1.15am C5 15

THRILLER Liam Neeson plays a retired hitman who has one night to save his son from being killed by his ex-boss in this edgy thriller. Those expecting another Taken will be surprised by the twist on the "geriaction" formula from director Jaume Collet-Serra, who employs an interesting visual style that underlines the plot's claustrophobic feel. Ed Harris co-stars as a sympathetic villain and Vincent D'Onofrio as a detective, while Neeson brings a sense of regret to his world-weary warrior. JL (US 2015, violence, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

DRAMA Chris Evans adopts a change of pace from his Captain America heroics in this heartfelt family drama. He plays a boat repairman raising his niece (Mckenna Grace), a seven-year-old maths genius, when the girl's estranged grandmother (Lindsay Duncan) arrives on the scene. Although it is entirely predictable, Gifted has some lovely scenes, and is surprisingly affecting in places. Evans is a likeable and engaging, and happily the same can be said about the film as a whole. Stephen Carty (US/UK 2017, swearing, HD)

Eyes of Laura Mars ★★★

9.00-11.05pm Sony Classic 15

THRILLER Designed as a vehicle for Barbra Streisand (she sings the theme song), this ended up starring Faye Dunaway as the photographer who develops a psychic link with a killer and witnesses his gruesome murders while they are being committed. Co-written by John Carpenter, it's a standard slasher melodrama with a glitzy face-lift. Although effectively done, the film lacks psychological substance. AJ (US 1978, violence, swearing, nudity)

FILM OF THE DAY

Trouble in Store ★★★

7.15-9.00pm Talking Pictures TV U

COMEDY I grew up on black-and-white British comedies, seemingly always on during the school hols, and Norman Wisdom was an instant hallmark of quality in our house. A big draw in the 1950s and 60s, his cap-on-sideways slapstick shtick eventually grew tired, but in more innocent times, his "Norman" alter ego (surname: Pitkin, Wilkins, Puckle) brought daft laughter and deft ballet to a bleak postwar landscape. Today marks a rare showing for his 1953 Rank debut, where he proves himself a liability as a department-store clerk. The window-dressing routine draws on his entire armoury of silly skills and his laughter remains infectious. (UK 1953, BW)

DID YOU KNOW? Norman Wisdom was already 38 when he made his starring debut in this film, which won him a Bafta for most promising newcomer

The Tin Star ★★★★★

2.35-4.30pm Film4 PG

WESTERN Here's a real western. It's a sturdy, finely wrought work from masters of the genre in their prime, with lawman-turned-bounty hunter Henry Fonda helping young sheriff Anthony Perkins to hold down his job in a town ravaged by outlaws. Written by Dudley Nichols (Stagecoach) and Oscar-nominated for best story and screenplay, it's directed by maestro Anthony Mann, who takes a linear, classic and deliberately under-emphatic approach, allowing the setting and characters to tell the story. Mann eschews false High Noon ethics and really understands the essence of heroism. It stands up to the test of time and proves an underrated, must-see experience. TS (US 1957, some violence, BW)

Hacksaw Ridge ★★★★

9.00-11.40pm Paramount Network 15

WAR DRAMA After falling out of favour with Hollywood thanks to a drunk-driving incident in 2006, Mel Gibson returned with an olive branch: directing a love letter to America, albeit one made so far outside the Hollywood system it was actually shot in Australia. In a true story of humility and redemption, Andrew Garfield stars as a US Army medic who refuses to fight, only to show his bravery during the battle of Okinawa in 1945. The film earned Gibson six Oscar nominations, including best director. DW (Aus/US 2016, violence, some swearing, HD)

The Blue Lagoon ★★

9.00-11.10pm Sony Classic 15

ADVENTURE Brooke Shields and Christopher Atkins play the youngsters who are shipwrecked on a deserted island in this remake of a 1949 British film directed by Frank Launder. Here, teenage self-discovery and love ensue as the pair grows up isolated from the world in a Swiss Family Robinson-style shack. It's beautifully shot and there's much nudity and suggested sex, but it's all very, very silly, as the love birds conform to traditional marriage-and-baby values – strange for a couple with no sociological context to draw on. LH (US 1980, sex scenes, nudity)

Snatch ★★★

11.00pm-1.05am 5 Star 18

CRIME DRAMA What was fresh about Lock, Stock and Two Smoking Barrels feels dated in Guy Ritchie's follow-up. Although Snatch has its merits – not least a talented cast including Brad Pitt, Benicio Del Toro, and Jasons Statham and Flemyng – the diamond heist and East End Mob plot are just more of the same. Gangs, cheeky chappies, bare-knuckle boxing and cameos from Vinnie Jones and Mike Reid merge into a "seen it all before" mix. Ritchie can direct, but falls short in the screenplay department. LH (US/UK 2000, violence, swearing, brief nudity)

An End to Getting Frustrated with your Smartphone

Finally discover how to get it to do what you want, easily (and find out what else you can do with it, too)

Smartphones can do so much more than make phone calls.

You can text, browse the web, video call your family or keep up with friends on Facebook, anywhere from your home to a cafe to the bus.

But using them isn't always as easy as you'd want – and that's putting it mildly.

Do the manufacturers do it on purpose?

It can seem like they make it hard on purpose, hiding away how to use the best features. Swipe up, swipe down, swipe sideways or in... double swipe... how on earth are you suppose to know what to do until you've been shown?

And there's no manual with it - or if there is, there might as well not be for all the good it does!

That's why I've published two books: iPhones One Step at a Time and Android Phones One Step at a Time.

Plain English... and that's not all

These books explain how to use the phone in plain simple language, with pictures of the screen showing you exactly where to tap or slide your fingers. No jargon!

Only Half the Story...

That's only half the story, but I don't have room to explain what I mean by that here. So I've put together full information about the books – who they're for, what they cover and so on.

What's more, the books also come with a small free gift – no room to explain that here, either!

"Should come with every smartphone"

Here's what one reader said:
"Thanks for a fantastic smart phone book. Very pleasant staff as usual.

I think this book should be sold with every smart phone. I have learnt so much from it, the info you get with the phone is non-existent."

Don't buy now, do this instead:

These books aren't available in the shops or Amazon. Instead, you can find out the full details about them: what's covered, who they're suitable for and what you might be missing out on, then decide. Just ask for a free information pack.

Quick and Easy to get Yours

Why not ring or send off for the free information now? There's no obligation at all. Discover what the books will do for you and about the free gift. (And don't worry, we won't share your details with anyone else.)

FILM OF THE DAY

P My Friend Dahmer ★★★★

9.00-11.10pm Film4 15

DRAMA Serial killers have become ubiquitous in this grisly age of true-crime overkill, but there have been too few genuinely illuminating films about them. I would add this 2017 twist on the genre to the worthwhile pile. This indie-styled biopic of notorious Ohio mass murderer Jeffrey Dahmer is told from an interesting vantage point by cool-headed director Marc Meyers. The unusual angle is that we only meet Jeffrey – played by Disney Channel escapee Ross Lynch – before he has committed a murder. The tension comes from knowing that he will eventually strike. Meyers tightens the screws effectively, presenting a clearly disturbed young man who, given different circumstances and less encouragement to act out his dark fantasies, might have stopped before he started. (US 2017, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

The Devil at Four o'Clock ★★★

6.30-9.00pm Sony Classic PG

ADVENTURE Director Mervyn LeRoy always enjoyed an exotic location, but this overlong Pacific island-set hokum was probably more fun to make than it is to watch. Our advice is to park your brain and enjoy old-fashioned Hollywood as it lurches into the 1960s, exploding volcano and all. Cast as an agnostic convict, Frank Sinatra gets a chance to act with his idol Spencer Tracy, who never turned down an opportunity to play a priest, his original calling. On sheer star power alone, it makes for compulsive viewing. TS (US 1961)

Breaking Dawn Part One ★★

8.00-10.15pm 5 Star 12

FANTASY The fourth and final book in Stephenie Meyer's Twilight saga is split in two for clear commercial reasons, but this first half is really just ponderous melodrama. The story continues with the lavish marriage of Bella (Kristen Stewart) to her undead lover Edward (Robert Pattinson), their Rio honeymoon and her pregnancy. However, a certain ennui sets in that is not helped by the banal dialogue and thin plotting. Fans will no doubt love the movie irrespective of its flaws, but this absurdly serious vampire love story sadly comes off as nothing more than a parody of the fine first film. AJ (US 2011, edited for violence, HD)

The Intern ★★★

9.00-11.30pm Comedy Central 12

COMEDY Robert De Niro is a senior citizen on work experience in this sprightly if rather unlikely comedy from writer/director Nancy Meyers (What Women Want). Anne Hathaway's young high-flyer is aiming to close the generation gap, so she takes the old guy under her wing at the shopping website she has started up, before inevitably finding that she is the one who is on a learning curve. There are some wryly amusing, well-observed moments in a story otherwise littered with dramatic shortcuts, but the connection between the two leads works surprisingly well. SP (US 2015, swearing, HD)

Whistle down the Wind ★★★★

10.00pm-12.05am
Talking Pictures TV PG

DRAMA In this daring allegorical tale, Alan Bates plays a dishevelled murderer on the run who is confronted by three Lancashire children who think he is the persecuted Jesus Christ deserving of their protection. Director Bryan Forbes treats his material with gravity and delicacy, and the symbolism only starts to come to pieces when the grown-up need for justice intrudes. Young Hayley Mills is wonderfully wide-eyed, while Bates gives one of his most involving performances. TH (UK 1961, BW)

ANDREW COLLINS

FILM OF THE DAY

Con Air ★★★★

9.45pm-12.05am C5 18

ACTION Letchworth-born Simon West went on to work on noisy and overstated brands like Tomb Raider, The Mechanic and The Expendables, but this, his directorial debut, remains his finest hour. The screenplay by Scott Rosenberg is full of upfront dark humour that obliges West to max up the theatrics accordingly. Nicolas Cage edges towards self-parody yet again as a convicted man who has served his sentence and is due to return home on a prison transport plane. Cue a well-planned hijack by high-security nutcases (John Malkovich, Ving Rhames and a Hannibal Lecter-like Steve Buscemi), followed by a Cage counterstrike that involves his daughter's toy rabbit, before the action hits fresh heights of insanity in Las Vegas. There are great comic turns by John Cusack and Colm Meaney – and who wouldn't want to hear Sweet Home Alabama on the soundtrack? (US 1997, violence, swearing, HD)

An Inspector Calls ★★★★

2.30-4.10pm Talking Pictures TV PG

MYSTERY JB Priestley's celebrated play sadly loses some of its impact on screen. The revelations made by the unwelcome visitor seem so much less shocking away from the intimate confines of the stage, especially as the use of flashback to reveal the family's guilty secrets deprives us of their reactions as the truth emerges. Yet this remains a highly polished production, made all the more irresistible by Alastair Sim's superb performance as the mysterious police officer. DP (UK 1954, BW)

The Watch ★★★

9.00-10.55pm 4Music (Freeview 29, Sky 139, Virgin 337) 15

SCI-FI COMEDY Ben Stiller stars here as a store manager who forms a neighbourhood watch group after a security guard is murdered. But his call to action attracts only misfits: boorish Vince Vaughn, angry Jonah Hill and oddball Richard Ayoade. It transpires that the killer is an alien acting as advance guard for a full-on invasion, and our hapless heroes are faced with saving not only the local area but also the planet. The premise is on the flimsy side, but the jokes keep on coming. TeS (US 2012, violence, swearing, sex scenes)

DRAMA This first major Hollywood movie to deal with Aids won Tom Hanks his first best actor Oscar. He stars as a gay lawyer who takes his employers to court for sacking him for what they say was incompetence, but which he suspects is his Aids-related illness. Playing his counsel is Denzel Washington, who despises homosexuals but worships fair play, while Jason Robards is the company boss who masks his intolerance with bluff camaraderie. Hanks makes the lawyer a disabled everyman whose life has lessons for all of us. TH (US 1993, some swearing)

WESTERN DRAMA Director Sofia Coppola replaces Civil War gothic with pastoral southern discomfort in her trifling version of Thomas Cullinan's novel, also the basis for the 1971 film starring Clint Eastwood. Here it is Colin Farrell who plays the soldier arousing a lot more than curiosity at a girls school in Virginia where he seeks sanctuary. Farrell's charm and headmistress Nicole Kidman's high-buttoned repression give little respite from the dull melodramatics. AJ (US 2017, sex scenes, HD)

FIVE-STAR ALL INCLUSIVE STAY IN MADEIRA

Departures March to October 2020

Madeira is a wonderful island that combines natural landscapes with a welcoming culture, luxury hotels and great dining options. It recently won World Travel Awards as Europe's Leading Island Destination 2019 and World's Leading Island Destination 2019, which proves the island should be on everyone's bucket list.

Madeira has a subtropical climate, meaning the weather is pleasant all year round, making it a great destination for travellers after a winter sun getaway, or those looking to soak up some summer sun. The island has a tremendously varied landscape, from prominent mountains, lush greenery, levadas and botanical gardens to quaint traditional villages.

The five-star Pestana Royal is a great hotel that offers accommodation on an all-inclusive basis, along with panoramic views of the Atlantic and a swim-up bar. Enjoy some quality time in the spa, or take a short stroll to the nearby beach.

What's included ■ Return flights from selected UK airports ■ Seven nights' stay at the five-star Pestana Royal, Madeira ■ Classic room ■ All-inclusive basis ■ Return private transfers ■ One free night: pay for six, but stay for seven

ALISON GRAHAM

London's not that bad

Why is TV so phobic about the capital, asks Alison Graham

DECADES AGO WHEN I was young, my great dream, my tip-top fantasy, was to be in the studio audience for Top of the Pops.

Wouldn't that be the best thing ever? I could be within touching distance of the Osmonds (I was young, I didn't know any better). I could be one of those girls dancing self-consciously as Pan's People traduced yet another chart hit, or who clustered around the DJ of the week, looking gormless. Obviously, we didn't know then what we know now about that cigar-wielding TOTP presenter I cannot bring myself to mention.

But I knew in my heart of hearts that it would never happen, because TOTP was filmed in London. And I lived 250 miles away, in a drab little town near the North East coast. To me, London might well have been Samarkand and the A1 the Silk Route.

It's hard to convey to this well-travelled new world how impossibly glamorous London was to any kid in my geographical position in the 60s and 70s. We would go on holiday to London (staying with my aunty in Neasden) as people now go to Singapore or San Francisco – it was a Big Deal.

'Television dramas that aren't set in London tend to make a thing of it'

I've lived and worked in London for years now and there is no glamour, it's just the place where I happen to be. But it always tickles me when I come across people who look upon it as I once did, as a place of infinite dreamy possibilities, or as a hell-hole of gin palaces and children sent up chimneys.

Television dramas that aren't set in London tend to make a thing about not being set in London. The latest, McDonald & Dodds (Sunday ITV) is set in delightful Bath, but its lead detective, Det Chief Insp McDonald (Tala Gouveia), arrives, box-fresh, from LONDON.

ON THE CASE
Watkins and Gouveia in Bath-set McDonald & Dodds

ALAMY; GETTY

Bearing in mind this is 2020, everyone reacts as if she's turned up on a stagecoach in a crinoline. "You're not in London now," someone tells her, as if she didn't know. Certainly as if she didn't know that Bath is less than 90 minutes from London on the train. It's hardly Cairo.

DCI McDonald has no truck with Bath, "this bloody city, where everything looks the same" (a curt dismissal of all of that beautiful Georgian architecture). "I never had to deal with this kind of st in London!" she flounces. So, what kind of st DID you have to deal with in London? Pick-pocketing urchins? Lightfingered tinsmiths, perhaps?

Having lived in London for so long, it always amuses me when it's presented as some kind of Hogarthian cesspool – you know when characters in northern soaps "go to London", it means bad things will happen to them. And when it's referred to as a city that acts outside any normal rational rules: "Maybe this works in London, but this is Bath", a character says repressively in McDonald & Dodds.

No one comes out and actually expresses why London is so utterly alien to them. It's presented as if the entire audience will nod along – "ah yes, LONDON, that Satanic pit, you don't have to explain anything, we know" – but it feels small-minded. In these angry days of fractures and ill-feeling, let's not shrink ourselves any more than we have to.

DAFT QUESTION OF THE WEEK

During the recent floods after Storm Dennis, a reporter in a boat sailed up a suburban street and shouted to a woman leaning out of her bedroom window: "How do you feel about this devastation?"

Reporter, the woman was upstairs as it was the driest, safest place in her house. Her entire road was full of water, as were her neighbours' houses. How do you THINK she felt about the devastation?

VISIONARY SCI-FI

Altered Carbon

S2 available from 27 February

Very few sci-fi/fantasy shows are as visually sumptuous as this knotty US series, which takes place in a world where consciousnesses can be uploaded into different bodies. In the second run there has, once again, been a murder.

CLEVER TEEN DRAMA

I Am Not Okay with This

Available from 26 February

Teen troubles are trickier than usual in this acutely observed dramedy, starring Sophia Lillis as Syd – a girl who, just like her friends, is kicking against her parents and her uncertainty about what sort of person she'll grow into. That Syd is also coping with being telekinetic gives the relatable drama a well-realised supernatural edge.

ENGROSSING SPORTS DOC

F1: Drive to Survive

S2 available from 28 February

Another F1 season means another series of this immersive documentary, recapping what happened in the previous year. The 2019 F1 championship was won fairly easily by Lewis Hamilton, so although he features here, we mostly look elsewhere for stories of rivalry and intense pressure to succeed. Individual races are placed in a fresh new context.

SNAPPY NEW COMEDY DRAMA

Gentefied

Available now

Smart, light and full of heart, this comedy-drama takes you into the Mexican quarter of eastern LA, where a taco shop run by a grizzly patriarch is struggling to survive the area's gentrification. Young versus old, modern versus traditional and Spanish versus English are the battlegrounds in a show where the observational barbs come with a warm smile.

BBC iPLAYER

HILARIOUS TRAVELOGUE

Frankie Boyle's Tour of Scotland

Available now

Boyle both subverts the celebrity travel format and improves on most other exponents of it, in a series that follows him on a small-venues tour of his home nation. His trademark rude jokes – often delivered here with disarming calmness on Boyle's voiceover – have always had a large amount of brainpower behind them: Boyle equally brings fierce intelligence to his take on the usual "meet a quirky local" gubbins.

GUILTY-PLEASURE DOC

Young, Welsh and Pretty Minted

Available now

A second series of one of those not-wholly-edifying reality documentaries that you might find yourself watching all of, despite yourself: we're back with Wales's hottest, blingiest entrepreneurs. In the spotlight are 19-year-old currency speculator Ashley, model and Instagram "influencer" Erin, and ambitious 24-year-old Swansea fashion designer Alex.

ROLLICKING HISTORY

Elizabeth I's Secret Agents

Available now

What's the secret of a long reign? Inspiring oratory, a healthy diet, looking fab in portraits? A dark and gossipy three-parter (first shown in 2017) posits that for Elizabeth I, the key was having advisers who pioneered modern espionage, spin and political manoeuvring. We begin in 1570: the Queen's furiously loyal counsel, William Cecil, is on the hunt for Catholic traitors.

ITV HUB

SHOCKING TRUE-LIFE DRAMA
White House Farm

Available now

A claim of newly discovered evidence kept this true-crime drama in the news towards the end of its recent ITV run: the case of a family shot to death in an Essex farmhouse in 1985 still fascinates. Its status as both a creepy psychodrama and horrific tragedy is borne out by a series that has vivid atmosphere and several fine performances to compensate for the odd bit of slow storytelling.

BINGEWORTHY THRILLER
Flesh and Blood

Full series available from 27 Feb

A skilfully executed thriller in the Big Little Lies vein: we know that the arrival of a new man in a widow's life is going to cause very serious ructions for an extended family, but it'll take four episodes to untangle all the strands and bring us back up to date with the opening scenes' shocking flashforward. By that time, a great ensemble cast has ensured we feel we know a clan of absorbing characters.

MORSE GOES DARK
Endeavour

Available now

A short, sharp shock of a seventh series, with just three new episodes of one of TV's classiest detective dramas. It pushes Morse and Thursday into the dank, tense 1970s, where they're beset by disillusionment, bad politics and some awful clothes. Underneath it all is a lost love and, perhaps, a lost friendship, as one of TV's classiest detective dramas has a moment of gloomier-than-usual reflection.

ALL 4

TOUGH EURO-CRIME DRAMA
Fenix

Available now

From the Netherlands, a bleaker than average take on the familiar "young adult reluctantly returns to home town" story. A police chief's daughter and a drug dealer's son both come back to crime-infested Brabant, but only after an appalling event that takes up the whole of the impenetrably tense, brilliantly directed first episode, which has notes of David Fincher and paranoid thrillers like The Parallax View.

NOW TV/SKY BOX SETS

HARD-BOILED US DRAMA
Ray Donovan

Available now

Liev Schreiber is a mighty presence as a Hollywood "fixer" whose work dousing million-dollar scandals doesn't quite give him access to the good life, in a tough, deep US drama with Jon Voight and Eddie Marsan among the strong original cast, and the likes of Alan Alda, Kerry Condon and Susan Sarandon lending it even more dramatic weight in recent years. All seven seasons are available again now.

DO NOO-NOO-NOO...
The Twilight Zone

Available now

The revival of the revered 1950s/60 anthology does a good job of mixing old-school scares with modern subtexts. Fans of US cable dramas will spot at least one performer they love in every instalment: Chris O'Dowd is the lead in a morbid tale called The Blue Scorpion.

BRITBOX

BELOVED CULT DRAMA
The Hour

Available now

Bring it back! Fans were dismayed when this was cancelled in 2013. Why the lasting affection? A combination of dream cast (Dominic West, Ben Whishaw, Romola Garai) and delicious period setting made the saga of a fledgeling BBC current affairs programme, trying to establish itself in 1956, irresistible.

NASTY THRILLER
The Last Weekend

Available from 27 February

Remember three-part ITV psychological thrillers? Back in 2010, a classic example was this series about old pals, reunited on a weekend away, who have a mass of simmering resentments between them. It's unapologetically malignant.

SATURDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

READY, SET, GO! Eboni Usoro-Brown, Darren Harriott, Paddy McGuinness, Susan Calman and Johannes Radebe

PICK OF THE DAY Catchpoint for Sport Relief 8.30pm BBC1

GAME SHOW Paddy McGuinness hosts a charity/celebrity edition of a quiz that debuted last year. It's the one where multiple-choice questions have ten sequential answers, each corresponding to one of a straight line of circles on the floor: you pick a spot to stand on and if it's right, you'll have a better chance of catching the prize ball that drops from the ceiling.

It's a fun game and, especially given that it's fundraising for Sport Relief, it's not too important that it doesn't give celebs much chance to make it more fun than a regular episode. Catching the balls, or suffering a slow-motion replay of them not quite doing so, are comedians Susan Calman and Darren Harriott, plus Strictly dancer Johannes Radebe and England netball international Eboni Usoro-Brown. JACK SEALE

SPORT The search for the marginal gains that could bring Great Britain another haul of Olympic golds begins on the boards of the Berlin Velodrom.

Team GB's 20 riders are headed by Jason Kenny, who needs to win just one medal in Tokyo to overhaul Sir Chris Hoy as Britain's greatest Olympian, and his wife Laura, who will be aiming to add to her own four golds in Japan. Mark Cavendish, however, failed to make the cut.

Jill Douglas presents highlights of the first three days from Berlin today, with live coverage of day four on the BBC Sport website (from 3.25pm) and Eurosport 1. The final session is live tomorrow on BBC2 from 1.45pm. CHRIS HUGHES

The Greatest Dancer

6.30pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT It's interesting that the acts who the studio audience are keen on aren't always the same as those being voted for by viewers. A few weeks ago, Ainsley Ricketts was eliminated despite placing joint first on the night, winning over 93.8 per cent of the crowd. One act that is proving unanimously popular is Michael and Jowita, possibly because their Latin style mirrors that of Strictly Come Dancing, which the show is so keen to emulate.

One series highlight was in the first live show, when the dance captains put on a scintillating group performance. In this semi-final, they're teaming up with their acts for another routine. Here's hoping it's as memorable. FRANCES TAYLOR

Ant and Dec's Saturday Night Takeaway

7.00pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT Regardless of what's going on in the wider world, it's comforting to settle down for 90 minutes on a Saturday night for a solid slice of entertainment.

Essentially, with nothing but nice and uplifting things happening, Takeaway serves as a tonic. Tonight, more viewers win money-can't-buy prizes, including seats for the Place On the Plane, while another gets the chance to Win the Ads.

Meanwhile, the guests dropping by to join Ant and Dec live in the studio are Rob Brydon, who steps into the booth as the show's Guest Announcer, and popstar Anne-Marie, who gamely takes part in the End of the Show Show. FT

Building the Billion Pound Mega Bridge

7.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY Strident music and manly adjectives accompany this film about the construction of the Samuel de Champlain Bridge, a 3.4km monster of a super-mega-crossing that will carry billions of dollars of cargo a year across the St Lawrence river into Montreal.

It has to last for at least 125 years, meaning this beast has to be a lot tougher, harder, stronger and more massive than the existing bridge, a crumbly cissy that pathetically gave up the ghost after only half a century. The challenges are many, but it's winter that's the real killer. How many ways can you think of in which ice might destroy a bridge? Oh, there are more than that. JS

SPOTLIGHT ON: DAN WALKER

Dan Walker has hosted Football Focus (12 noon BBC1) since the 2009/10 season, making him the longest-serving presenter of the show since Bob Wilson vacated the chair in 1994. One former Focus frontman, Gary Lineker, graduated to Match of the Day – Walker regularly stands in when Lineker is absent from MOTD, and in 2016 he said: "If Gary ever wants to step down I'd be more than happy to get in there."

No luck with that so far, but Walker has another prime presenting role as a host of BBC Breakfast. It's recently led him into controversy: last year, he was sharing the sofa with Naga Munchetty when she made her remarks about Donald Trump; and not everyone thought his January interview with Boris Johnson was aggressive enough. "I believe in being fair, polite and robust with every guest," Walker tweeted. "You can 'speak' truth to power... you don't have to 'shout' it."

Pointless Celebrities

7.45pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT An eve-of-St David's Day special, this week, with the studio podia featuring an all-Welsh line-up of familiar and slightly less familiar faces. Rugby union great Shane Williams is paired with former athlete Colin Jackson, who the last time he was on the show, Richard Osman points out, fell at the first hurdle, ironically. But it's another team that risks going out in a blaze of 100-pointer glory.

The teams' first challenge is to think of obscure words ending in -een. Will "evergreen" or "tureen" score lower? Among the other contestants are Charles Dale (once Casualty's Big Mac), Eurovision singer Lucie Jones and actors Ruth Madoc, Di Botcher and Sophie Evans. DAVID BUTCHER

Hidden

9.00pm BBC4

DRAMA Oooh, this is dark, and bleak and very unsettling... As villagers gather for Geraint Ellis's memorial service, his killers join the throng, one of them at least getting a sinister kick out of being an observer.

But another is torn apart by guilt and remorse and he must be kept in line by the others, who fear he will flee to the police to tell all. In a nod to the previous series of Hidden, he is taken somewhere very bad, a place of violence, pain and murder, in the deepest, darkest woods.

There's little respite from the overall slow-burning horror of what's happening in the small Welsh community. Shown on BBC Wales last week.

ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR

Snowfall

10.30pm, 11.15pm BBC2

DRAMA If you follow Snowfall and haven't watched it all on iPlayer, this season three finale takes it to new levels. In the big picture, the story follows how the CIA used drug sales in Los Angeles to fund its Nicaraguan war, but it always comes back to dealer Franklin Saint's struggle, and right now he's in a bad way.

Mostly, Damson Idris plays him as one step ahead, a Godfather-in-the-making seeing all the angles. But now, for the first time, Franklin is rattled, jittery, his back to the wall. The tension keeps piling on in a double bill that does what long-running dramas must – shocks us, blows everything up, then starts again, with the characters dug in deeper. DAVID BUTCHER

FLYING VISIT
Zsa Zsa (Sharon Gless) drops in on Dylan (William Beck)

Casualty

9.10pm BBC1

DRAMA Here was I, thinking that all we'd get of Sharon Gless would be last week's video call. But there she is, striding into the hospital, having flown over especially to operate on young Luka. Things are understandably very fraught, but super surgeon Zsa Zsa still finds time to patronise Connie. You can sense those hackles rising when Zsa Zsa deliberately mispronounces Connie's surname and calls her "Mrs Bo-champ".

Charlie is also back, having returned to the ED earlier than expected following Duffy's death. And it soon turns out to be a tough shift thanks to a butcher by the name of Henry, who's had a nasty encounter with a bandsaw. As is soon revealed, Duffy used to frequent Henry's shop, but he's unaware that she's passed away. Cue Charlie having to address the very topic he was hoping to avoid. DAVID BROWN

How We Built Britain

iPlayer (ep1 expires today)

From 2007, a stirring but not overly stiff factual series by David Dimbleby, at the time still the BBC's most senior political broadcaster. His architectural odyssey begins in the east of England, an area that was the richest in Britain in medieval times. Consequently it has huge cathedrals, such as Ely's, as well as imposing castles for Dimbleby to hold forth on.

A feast of Coogan

24 Hour Party People ★★★★ All4 FREE TO VIEW

Now available on C4's catch-up service, this comedic biopic from Michael Winterbottom charts the rise and fall of Manchester's Factory Records and Hacienda nightclub. Using TV presenter and Factory impresario Tony Wilson to tell the tale is the movie's masterstroke, and he's played with relish by Steve Coogan. There's more from Coogan and Winterbottom on All4 with The Look of Love, and they are also in cinemas with Greed and return to TV this week in The Trip to Greece – see feature p20. ANDREW COLLINS

New this weekend

All the Bright Places ★★★ Netflix

Mental-health issues complicate a teen romance in this adaptation of Jennifer Niven's young adult novel. Violet (Elle Fanning) is contemplating suicide after the death of her sister, while Theodore (Justice Smith) is a high school rebel. They bond while working on a project to visit some of the naffer "sights" of Indiana, such as the world's smallest rollercoaster. But their shared emotional journey is far from smooth. The story dares to go to some uncomfortable places, but is nicely played by the attractive leads. DAVE ALDRIDGE

'Nam busters

Full Metal Jacket ★★★★★ 9.00pm TCM

Stanley Kubrick's Vietnam War drama is as harrowing today as it was on its release in 1987. It was shot entirely in Britain, with palm trees uprooted from Spain and the cast imported from Hollywood. The performances are superb, especially Lee Ermey as the foul-mouthed drill sergeant. ADRIAN TURNER

SUNDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

THE ODD COUPLE
DS Dodds and DCI McDonald (Jason Watkins and Tala Gouveia) are tasked with catching a killer in Bath

PICK OF THE DAY McDonald & Dodds 8.00pm ITV

DRAMA Ambitious, unpleasant DCI McDonald arrives from London to start her new job in Bath. Remember, she is from London – this is very important to McDonald & Dodds, a new light detective drama.

But don't worry if you do forget, because DCI McDonald (Tala Gouveia) reminds us frequently that she's from London, as does everyone around her. In London, they do things differently. But we are in Bath, which is treated as some kind of hick town full of tiny parochial minds.

DCI McDonald arrives at a crime scene to be paired with ploddy, anorak-wearing DS Dodds (Jason Watkins), a man who habitually misplaces his glasses (they are on his head! All the time!).

But, of course, DS Dodds is quietly brilliant. The bosses might want him out, but he's not going anywhere, as chalk-and-cheese cops McDonald and Dodds investigate a murder at the home of a wealthy businessman.

League Cup Final

3.30pm (k/o 4.30pm) Sky Sports Football/Main Event

SPORT Two sides at opposite ends of the Premier League table meet at Wembley today, as Aston Villa face Manchester City in the League Cup final. Though mired in a relegation battle, the Villans possess a rare talent in playmaker Jack Grealish; if he's fully fit and firing, he can cause problems against anyone.

Defending champions City haven't scaled the heights of last season, but they remain one of British football's most fearsome sides. The prospect of a potential Champions League ban will have shaken the club, but it may also have provided a focus that could see them power to League Cup glory for a third consecutive season.

HANNAH SHADDOCK

Blue Planet II

4.25pm BBC1 (Wales: 3.25pm)

NATURE This was one of the first series to show the impact of plastic pollution on the ocean and its wildlife. In this episode (first shown in 2017) we're in the "Big Blue", thousands of kilometres from land in what David Attenborough calls "the world's greatest wilderness". But it's still a place where a whale calf can ingest dangerous amounts of plastic...

Elsewhere, there's a mighty feeding frenzy starring spinner dolphins, tuna and sailfish, and the strange and beautiful sight of a family of sperm whales simply hanging vertically in the water, the owners of the biggest brain on the planet taking time off for a sleep.

DAVID BUTCHER

Antiques Roadshow

8.00pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT It's a glorious day at Battle Abbey in East Sussex. As the crowds bask in the sunshine, they also gasp at a staggering valuation for an electric guitar once owned by both John Lennon and George Harrison. The owner, a session musician, can barely muster any words, so he lets his guitar-playing abilities do the talking.

There are, coincidentally, other Beatles items, including a jacket worn onstage by Paul McCartney and an Abbey Road road sign.

Among the mega-valuations is a profoundly moving story of Second World War resourcefulness and bravery from a member of RAF Coastal Command that has everyone, including the expert, in tears. AG

My Family and the Galapagos

8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY "It's a bit gruesome – but it's the reality of conservation at the sharp end." Monty Halls is in a forest on the island of Isabela in the dead of night, watching hunters cart off the carcass of a razor-tusked pig. Such beasts eat turtle eggs and other endangered species, so they have to be controlled. As do stray dogs and rats, for which there is an ambitious extermination plan.

Not that the Halls's last dispatch from Galapagos is all about vermin. An encounter with the Floreana mockingbird is, as the family end their sojourn, a wonderfully intimate meeting of human and animal. JACK SEALE

TOP GEAR IN THE FAST LANE

Tonight Paddy McGuinness, Chris Harris, and Freddie Flintoff (right) test which of the emergency services has the fastest vehicles. It's the last Top Gear (8.00pm BBC2) of the current series and, after 43 years, the last to be broadcast on BBC2.

After revved-up ratings, the show is set for a change of lane to BBC1. During the Chris Evans/Matt LeBlanc era (2016–18), when it featured an array of copresenters (remember Eddie Jordan?), ratings sank to a low of 2.4 million viewers. The current series has reached twice that.

Steering Top Gear to BBC1 has been suggested before, when the show was a global hit under James May, Richard Hammond and Jeremy Clarkson. But they resisted the switch, believing a move to the main channel would hamstring the show. The next series could reveal if they were right...

Last Tango in Halifax

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA Headteacher Caroline is aglow with excitement at the prospect of her head of English, Ruth, coming over for dinner. Clearly Caroline (Sarah Lancashire) considers that there might be romantic possibilities. Here's hoping Ruth feels the same way because if she doesn't, won't that be awful?

There are bizarre goings-on over at Glum Gillian's Cold Comfort Farm, when a Banksy-type mural appears on the side of the barn where she killed her abusive husband. "Nothing good will ever come out of that barn," Gillian (Nicola Walker) mutters darkly, before wielding a shotgun.

It's a busy episode that's often funny, and sometimes painful – but not too much, as Last Tango has the biggest beating heart on television. AG

Win the Wilderness: Alaska

9.00pm BBC2

REALITY There's a protracted final episode for this very odd series, as Duane and Rena Ose decide who will take over their log cabin in the Alaskan wilderness. As ever, there's endless repetition... Yes, we know you worked hard to build your house in the middle of nowhere, yes, we know it's a difficult decision.

But there are also so many gaps. What will the winning couple actually do all day, because I have to say life in the middle of nowhere sounds dead boring. When will all their stuff arrive from England? And what if they don't like it? Can they go home? Anyway, the two remaining couples visit the Oses, who get them to do a couple of tasks. AG

Homeland

9.00pm C4

DRAMA The shifting sands of international relations are sucking Carrie (Claire Danes) down again. Thrown into Afghanistan to keep the peace process on track, with reliability issues dangling over her head like helium balloons, she's since come face to face with her torturer, Yevgeny.

Meanwhile, Saul (Mandy Patinkin) is in Pakistan, where his old ally "Bunny" Latif (Art Malik) and Taliban leader Haissam Haqqani (Numan Acar) have both shown their hands. As for third wheel Max (Maury Sterling), will there be more for him to do than have his head rubbed for luck by the goon squad protecting him? The grand design of Homeland's final series is, as yet, enjoyably indistinct. MARK BRAXTON

NEMESIS
The Doctor meets the Master in the series finale

Doctor Who

6.50pm BBC1

DRAMA "This is going to hurt." Doctor Who series 12 concludes with a bang as the Cybermen march on, the Master's schemes roll out and the truth of the Timeless Child is finally revealed. But when the dust settles, will life ever be the same for the Doctor (Jodie Whittaker) and her friends?

After an upbeat, self-contained but occasionally anti-climactic first series in 2018, the Whittaker era of Doctor Who has come into its own this year with some brilliant plot twists – Sacha Dhawan's unmasking as the Master, the return of the Cybermen, the mysterious new Doctor played by Jo Martin – and a more interesting, darker tone.

Now, in an extended 65-minute episode, the Tardis team face their greatest challenge yet. Can they survive the experience?

My Left Nut

iPlayer/BBC3

A light but filthy comedy that starts off like a sort of Irish Inbetweeners: while his friends claim to be a success with girls, 15-year-old Mick (Nathan Quinn-O'Rawe) is worried about the swollen testicle he discovers while doing something unrepeatable in his bedroom... but then his dream girl does express an interest. Despite the toilet humour, there's an emotional last episode in store.

More Ghibli on demand

Spirited Away ★★★★ Netflix

The second of three monthly "drops" of Studio Ghibli movies on Netflix includes eco-fantasy Princess Mononoke (1997), quirky domestic comedy My Neighbours the Yamadas (1999) and Borrowers-style adventure Arrietty (2010). But the jewel in the crown is 2001's Oscar-winning Spirited Away. This tale of a sulky girl who must rescue her parents from a surreal fantasy world broke box-office records in Japan – and it still stands at number two in the list of the country's highest-grossing movies. TOM FOLLEY

Oldman in the shadows

P Killers Anonymous ★★ 10.15pm Sky Premiere

In this misfiring thriller, a support group for murderers meets in London on the day of an assassination attempt on a politician. As tension mounts and accusations fly between the members, the mysterious leader of another support group (Gary Oldman) watches from afar. Director Martin Owen is clearly aiming for the zest and attitude of early Guy Ritchie, but his film's lack of credible logic is likely to have viewers wishing the cast would just pull their guns on each other and put them out of everyone's misery. TERRY STAUNTON

A strikingly skinny Jake Gyllenhaal stars here as a calculating and possibly sociopathic loner who starts a career as a journalist, filming accidents and crimes and selling the footage to Rene Russo's TV manager. As his media career takes off, ethics quickly fall by the wayside, in this dark and entertaining neo-noir. DAMON WISE

MONDAY Choices

The pick of today's TV

THEY'RE BACK
Joanne Froggatt, Ioan Gruffudd and Katherine Kelly lead the Liar cast

PICK OF THE DAY Liar 9.00pm ITV

DRAMA It's been a long time since the first series of Harry and Jack Williams's thriller (which aired in September 2017) but Liar is back, and picks up where we left off. At least, I think it does; it's a choppy opening episode told largely in flashback, and despite an informative "Previously on Liar" montage, a quick catch-up on a few minor characters wouldn't come amiss.

But the immutable fact is that serial sex attacker, suave surgeon Andrew Earlham (Ioan Gruffudd) is dead in the Kent Marshes. He's been murdered, and the prime suspect is one of his victims, Laura Nielson (Joanne Froggatt).

For some reason the Metropolitan Police are investigating and the lead officer is Det Insp Karen Renton (Katherine Kelly), who makes a big thing of chewing nicotine gum and being all matey with everyone. She's not above coercive and oppressive interviewing techniques either, as she pieces together Earlham's last hours. ALISON GRAHAM

Jimmy McGovern's Moving On

2.15pm BBC1

DAYTIME CHOICE The market for one-off dramas on TV – what you could call plays – is slow these days, but Jimmy McGovern is keeping the flame alive. He is listed as story editor on this latest series of self-contained programmes featuring characters at a turning point. The first follows Joe (Tom McKay), a champion swimmer who we meet as he is released on licence from prison for a crime he insists he didn't commit. For now he is on home detention curfew, and must remain inside from 7pm to 7am.

As he strikes up a friendship at the swimming pool with single mother Lisa (Angel Coulby), keeping to that curfew – and being honest with her – only gets harder. DAVID BUTCHER

This Country

7.00pm BBC3, 10.35pm BBC1
(N Ireland: 11.35pm; Wales: 12.05am)

COMEDY Kerry's dreadful father Martin is living with Kerry and her mum Sue after his release from prison, "in return for a bit of DIY". But why is Sue singing in the shower when all Kerry's dad has done is "put up a loo roll holder"?

We must look to cousin Kurtan (Charlie Cooper) for the real reason: "I can hear Martin and Sue at it like a pair of greasy buffalo, and I live three streets away."

It's a twistedly sweet episode – Kerry (Daisy May Cooper) looks lost in the presence of her boorish dad (played, of course, by her real-life father), while Kurtan and the vicar (Paul Chahidi) help hapless Len, who's fallen in love online. AG

The Split

9.00pm BBC1 (Wales: 10.35pm)

DRAMA Everyone does a lot of crying as their carefully ordered lives crash around them. Once more Hannah (Nicola Walker) sobs in the bathroom after she angrily takes off her eye make-up now it's become clear that Christie is not afraid to detonate the incendiary information that's fallen into his hands.

Meanwhile, Hannah's husband Nathan mopes about wet-eyed and whimpering when the extent of Hannah's faithlessness becomes clear. You may wonder how any of these solicitors fit in any work amongst the bouts of angst and self-loathing, but we briefly see warring reality stars Fi and Richie (Donna Air and Ben Bailey Smith) as we learn Fi's festering secret. AG

Inside No 9

(N Ireland: Tuesday 11.45pm)

ANTHOLOGY My heart did a little skip when I saw Phil Davis and Maxine Peake in the guest cast. Both are always excellent and they are here, even though this edition is not one of the more successful entries.

Ostensibly a series of monologues, Thinking Out Loud begins promisingly with Davis as widower Bill, not exactly selling himself at a video-dating agency; and Peake, almost in Victoria Wood mode, as Nadia, a wife recounting an awkward dinner party. It then treads a peculiar path that I didn't quite buy, and ends nastily. But with such an ambitiously experimental format, No 9 can't please all of the punters all of the time. PATRICK MULKERN

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Marriage fever has hit Coronation Street (7.30, 8.30pm ITV), something that I reckon is down to the fact that bride Sarah Platt (Tina O'Brien) and groom Adam Barlow (Sam Robertson) look like they ought to be on the cover of one of those glossy magazines offering tips on how to have your dream wedding day. Amazingly, it appears that the two of them are going to get hitched without a hitch, which is more than can be said for the other residents thinking of tying the knot.

Maria and Gary, for instance, have excitedly agreed on a date, but she's currently unaware of the fact that he bumped off loan shark Rick Neelan in June last year and buried his body in the woods.

And then there's Daniel, whose proposal to Bethany on Wednesday will be marred by him being half-cut and in possession of the ring worn by his late wife Sinead, who's barely cold in her grave. And they say that romance is dead. DAVID BROWN

Baghdad Central

10.00pm C4

DRAMA There's a moving moment in tonight's visit to postwar Baghdad when we see how the norms of Iraqi society have been fractured – along with everything else.

At his apartment, Inspector Khafaji is called out by the local teenage thugs, who set up a roadblock. They regard him as a collaborator but when they threaten, he hits back: "I am your neighbour! Your elder, your grandfather's friend! And you believe you can point a gun at me?"

Waleed Zuaiter gives Khafaji real moral authority, where the actual Coalition Authority has none. The invaders' attitude is explicit in the mercenary who killed Zahra last week and says of the locals, "These are not real people." DAVID BUTCHER

The Accused: Damned or Devoted?

10.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY Religious extremism, where believers are willing to kill or be killed as part of their war against non-believers, is frightening enough. But in Pakistan, a 1986 blasphemy law legitimises such fanaticism, potentially leading to state execution for those found to have insulted Islam.

This often horrific documentary tracks the country's culture war as it intensifies, with both convictions and acquittals in blasphemy cases being met with protests, and violent threats made against not just the accused but the judiciary. Two protagonists emerge: cleric turned politician Khadim Hussain Rizvi, and Asia Bibi, who was accused of blasphemy during a workplace argument. JACK SEALE

The End

10.05pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA It's honesty time for the Brennans. Oberon's transition treatment requires parental consent, so his supportive mother Kate decides on a family trip to see father Chris. Their confessional chat breaks down when Chris admits he's not in favour. And grandma Edie is similarly old-school: "In my day you didn't have this problem." Separately, Edie is encouraged by her brash buddy Pam to come clean about her love life.

The in-your-faceness of The End means, ironically, that some viewers may not make it to the end. But, like an Aussie version of Weeds, it's unafraid of tackling taboos (suicide, sexual identity et al), and hits home with potent truths – and hilarious mischief on the soundtrack. MARK BRAXTON

SCREEN TIME Presenter James Fox in New York's Times Square

Age of the Image

DOCUMENTARY New series

We've never been more obsessed with images than we are today. How often have you been to a gallery or concert and wondered why people are so insistent on mediating what they're seeing via the lens of their smartphone? But why has this happened?

Art historian James Fox takes a cerebral but entertaining approach, explaining the revolution in visual culture that has turned us all into image addicts.

There are big hitters here – Cezanne, Einstein, Picasso, Buster Keaton – but this is more about how we all became able to make images as well as simply consume them. Take early French photographer Jacques-Henri Lartigue, who got his first camera as a kid, and had, in his own words, "an obsession with catching time as it passes". His clever family snaps are pure joy. GILL CRAWFORD

iPlayer (expires today)

Almost a sort of slow TV for art fans, this mesmeric film follows Peter Howson as he creates his epic oil painting Prophecy. From blank canvas to finished work, every brush stroke is explained by the artist as he goes, often leading to philosophising about Howson's thought process, life and career. It's fascinating.

Sky Women in Film & Sky Kids Books channels

She may have missed out at the Oscars, but there's no ignoring Saoirse Ronan in Mary Queen of Scots, one of today's highlights as Sky Drama becomes Sky Women in Film. This week-long celebration of female talent both in front of the camera and behind also features Aliens, Terminator 2 and Can You Ever Forgive Me? Meanwhile, Sky Family gets a literary spin to become Sky Kids Books, with screen adaptations of The Cat in the Hat, Matilda, Diary of a Wimpy Kid and a host of Harry Potters. ELLIE PORTER

P Terminator: Dark Fate ★★★ Sky Store/DVD

The sixth instalment in the Terminator franchise marks the return of original director James Cameron (as producer and co-writer) and Linda Hamilton as feisty Sarah Connor. The story finds her catapulted through time to save a young woman from a ruthless robot with the help of her former mechanical nemesis (Arnold Schwarzenegger). There's some explosive set pieces, and Hamilton convinces as the veteran vigilante, but Arnie's superannuated cyborg almost seems surplus to requirement. TERRY STAUNTON

Picture imperfect

P Mapplethorpe ★★

10.15pm Sky Premiere

New York photographer Robert Mapplethorpe was notorious for pushing the boundaries of how we perceive sexuality and religion. Sadly, this account of his life is rather dull. Matt Smith is likeable enough in the lead, but the film shies away from delving too deeply into the ideas that infused Mapplethorpe's work. JAMES LUXFORD

TUESDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

MYTHIC COMEDY Rob Brydon and Steve Coogan have some classic exchanges

PICK OF THE DAY The Trip to Greece 10.00pm, 10.30pm Sky 1

COMEDY OF THE WEEK The meandering, blokeish comedy-travelogue returns with Steve Coogan and Rob Brydon as prickly versions of themselves, this time on a journey in the footsteps of Odysseus, from Turkey to Greece. As before, the pleasure of The Trip is its apparent lightness. It's a soufflé, but with hidden depths. Sometimes it feels like an impressions show directed as an art-house movie; at other times it has takes on ageing and friendship that are all the more poignant because they come after the two men have competed to do the best Roger Moore.

Tonight our heroes sit in the garden of a lovely Turkish restaurant for some barbed exchanges about weak anecdotes or who would be mentioned if they crashed in a private jet with George Clooney. They imagine a CBeebies version of The Elephant Man and a meeting of Stan Laurel with Tom Hardy. It's good to have them back. DAVID BUTCHER

Back in Time for the Corner Shop

8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY The 1920s to the 1940s prove to be a tumultuous time. To begin with, all is sunny. A cash till on the counter means the Arderns' mental arithmetic is no longer pushed to breaking point. And bright branded goods on the shelves give the shop a bit of a lift. But then the Second World War begins and the family has to deal with food shortages and rationing. There's quite a contrast in sweet treats : pre-war, the store sells custard-flavoured ice creams (a big hit), but once the fighting begins, it's carrot lollies (not so much of a success). DAVID BROWN

Portrait Artist of the Year

8.00pm Sky Arts

ARTS Nine more artists, some professional, some amateur, turn up to compete in front of the public. "Get ready to shout at the telly," invites Stephen Mangan, touching on the show's key appeal – the chance to argue about which portrait is best and take issue with the (often baffling) judges.

This week the sitters are film director Mike Leigh and actors Ken Stott and Lydia Leonard – three of the kind of characterful faces this show thrives on. As the artists turn their paintings round, Stott is delighted – "I can see me everywhere!" – and the one he chooses to keep is remarkable. DAVID BUTCHER

Britain Underwater: Fighting the Floods

9.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY Flood victims surveying the soaked wreckage of their homes and businesses has become a pitiful, all too routine sight on the news as communities are hit by storm after storm. Here documentary crews visit some of the worst-hit areas, including Fishlake in South Yorkshire, which was flooded in November when the River Don burst its banks. Says one resident: "You work all your life to get your house nice and then you've got nothing. We are left with a shell. It's not our home any more."

Storms Ciara and Dennis have since wreaked havoc across the country, and cameras follow Environment Agency and emergency service crews as they prepare for the worst. ALISON GRAHAM

When Cain gave Marlon that talking-to on Emmerdale (7.00pm ITV) about toughening up in prison, I was hoping he'd emerge from his spell inside with a shaved head, biceps like bowling balls and a spider-web tattoo across his neck.

The newly released Marlon (Mark Charnock) isn't quite that, but there is definitely now a harder edge to him. Yesterday, for instance, he was left seething when he discovered that angelic daughter April (Amelia Flanagan) was being bullied at school by kids who branded her dad a "murderer". And the anger settings of the Woolpack chef look set to go from simmer to boil tonight when he finds out that it was Charity who stole Kim's money and then sat on evidence that could have led to him being freed from jail sooner.

If you're looking for EastEnders and Holby City, they've both made way for football. But there was double Holby last week and there's an extended visit to Walford on Friday. DAVID

Royal History's Biggest Fibs with Lucy Worsley

9.00pm BBC4

HISTORY If your image of Queen Anne is shaped by Olivia Colman's Oscar-winning turn in The Favourite, that's understandable. It's also wrong. Lucy Worsley doesn't address the film directly until the last five minutes, but her whole programme rubbishes the idea of a feeble puppet-queen having her strings pulled by others.

In fact, Worsley tells us in the final part of the series, Anne – who was largely forgotten before she was traduced by Hollywood – was a very shrewd operator. She won a crucial war and united England and Scotland in a new European power, Great Britain. But as she was unglamorous and shy, history – including her own successors – belittled her. DAVID BUTCHER

Ben Fogle: Make a New Life in the Country

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY Londoners Hani and Sarah have upped sticks and left the Big Smoke with their two children, using all their savings to fulfil a dream. They want to create their own brewery in the Malvern Hills in Worcestershire – even though they have no background in brewing: Hani worked in finance while Sarah was a teacher.

They've found an old chicken shed; now they just have to convert it into a functioning brewery. Sarah will be head brewer and create beers that might actually sell, while Hani takes over most of the daily childcare. A visiting Ben Fogle chips in to clean barrels and check out what the neighbours think. GILL CRAWFORD

Your RT Travel: page 148

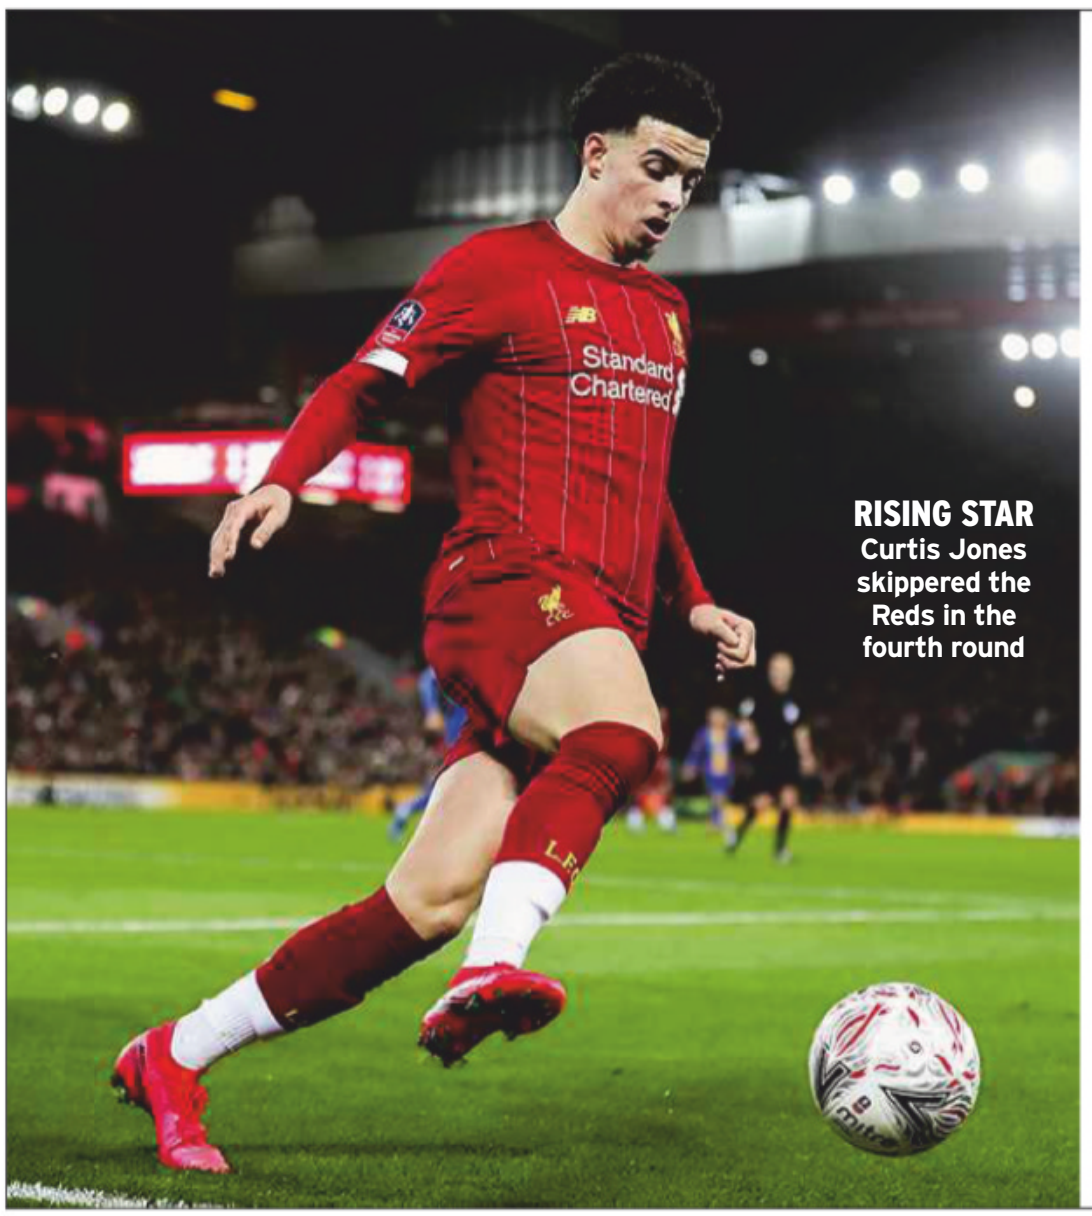

The Windsors

10.00pm C4

COMEDY Time for Charles and Camilla to slum it: they're at the Middletons' for the weekend, where the horrors include cocktails served at the bar in the "lounge", and a painting of Kate's parents (Simon Day and Julia Deakin) that turns out to be a photo printed on canvas.

But worst of all are the simpering attempts by Wills – nicely played by Hugh Skinner – to banter with his commoner father-in-law. Could the future king's new love of football bring down the monarchy?

Meanwhile, Fergie (Katy Wix) takes her daughters to Glasto, where a misunderstanding in the VIP area leads to a dilemma that becomes a cheerfully tasteless parody of Sophie's Choice. JACK SEALE

RISING STAR
Curtis Jones skippered the Reds in the fourth round

FA Cup Football

7.30pm BBC1

SPORT The fifth round is being played across four weeknights as a result of the introduction of a mid-season break. Tonight's big match is Chelsea v Liverpool (kick-off 7.45pm). It feels as if the Blues have been flying under the radar in this season's competition, booking their place in the last 16 with a minimum of fuss thanks to victories over Championship sides Nottingham Forest and Hull City.

The Cup has been less of a priority for Liverpool, but their dreams of a potential treble were kept alive when their youngest-ever first XI, captained by 19-year-old Curtis Jones, pulled off a 1-0 win over Shrewsbury Town in the fourth-round replay. Jürgen Klopp needn't fret about rearranging his diary if it's level after 90 minutes tonight, though: it's straight to extra time, and penalties if necessary.

Press the red button to see West Bromwich Albion v Newcastle United (k/o 8pm). CHRIS HUGHES

7.30 FA Cup Match of the Day Live
RT Chelsea v Liverpool
A finely poised fifth-round contest could be in prospect at Stamford Bridge tonight (kick-off 7.45).

The statistics point in Chelsea's favour – they've won six FA cup titles this century, including their last FA Cup encounter with Liverpool in the 2012 final. And after comfortably beating Hull City 2–1 in this year's fourth round they are vying to reach the quarter-finals for the fourth time in five seasons.

But will Frank Lampard's men face the full might of Jürgen Klopp's runaway Premier League leaders or the young line-up whose cup run has advanced thus far under the aegis of Under-23 coach Neil Critchley?

FA Cup Football

Over the next two evenings, the BBC is serving up a feast of FA Cup football past and present.

For starters tonight there's a fourth-round match from 1997 between Chelsea and Liverpool on the red button at 5pm, which mirrors their live game on BBC1 later. An alternative live option, on the red button and online, sees West Brom host Newcastle.

Tomorrow's menu kicks off on the red button with a replay from 2007 between Manchester City and Sheffield Wednesday, who also meet later in the live game on BBC1. The Spurs v Norwich City live game is also showing on the red button.

By way of a dessert, tomorrow's live games will be followed by the quarter-final draw. Bon appétit!

8.00 Back in Time for the Corner Shop
RT 2/5. This week the Arden family simulate running a shop during the 1920s, 30s and 40s, when professional grocery skills reached their zenith. The shop now has bespoke fittings, a cash register and new branded products, tempting customers in with eye-catching window displays and home-made ice cream. But when hard times hit Sheffield, the Ardens offer goods on "tick", start to deliver by bike and raise their credentials with a professional qualification. Worse is to come during the Great Depression as shopkeepers sell scraps to the poor, such as bacon rind, and food vouchers are introduced. Economic respite brings a chance to help people get the Hollywood look before the Second World War brings fresh challenges. See page 80.

Love deconstructed

P Straight Up ★★★★ 10.15pm Sky Premiere

Deconstructing the idea of love and examining its parts, this smart romantic comedy offers the notion that, in the long run, compatibility may be more important than passion. Writer/director James Sweeney also stars here as an openly gay man who begins to doubt his sexuality, leading him into a relationship with an actress (Katie Findlay) with whom he has almost everything in common. Straight Up freshens up tired genre tropes, making it a rom-com for people who think they've seen it all. JAMES LUXFORD

New to Prime this week

The Aeronauts ★★★ Amazon Prime

This high-flying drama reunites The Theory of Everything stars Felicity Jones and Eddie Redmayne to tell the story of James Glaisher's record-breaking 1862 balloon trip. Though the background to the flight is thinly sketched, the film soars when it follows the intrepid adventure of the candy-striped aircraft. The journey is fraught with immersively shot incident: an encounter with butterflies is a delightful surprise, while plummeting temperatures and raging storms provide basket-shaking peril. EMMA SIMMONDS

Fonda stands alone

12 Angry Men
★★★★★ 11.25am TCM

Sidney Lumet's striking feature debut stars Henry Fonda as a lone juror holding out for a not guilty verdict while the remaining 11 are ready to convict. The action takes place on a single claustrophobic set, and Fonda gives one of the performances that defined his career.

WEDNESDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

WHAT'S THE GOSS? Jill (Julie Hesmondhalgh) and Maggie (Dawn French)

PICK OF THE DAY The Trouble with Maggie Cole 9.00pm ITV

COMEDY DRAMA New series There is absolutely nothing challenging or thought-provoking about The Trouble with Maggie Cole, but then neither is it bleak or visceral. In fact it's good fun, a light, frothy cautionary tale about small towns and big gossip.

Dawn French's Maggie Cole keeps everything bobbing along nicely; she's a Lynda Snell-type busybody who sees herself as the social centre and beating heart of her small coastal community, Thurlbury.

Maggie knows everything about everyone, but she wouldn't see this as being nosey, even though most of the villagers can't wait to shake her off when she latches on to them wanting favours or volunteers.

Maggie is so excited about Thurlbury's 500th anniversary celebrations she does a local radio interview under the influence of far too many gin and tonics. As the broadcast begins, Maggie gathers the villagers in her garden so they can listen together... ALISON GRAHAM

7.30pm (k/o 7.45pm) BBC1

SPORT Sheffield Wednesday may sit comfortably mid-table in the Championship, but the Owls have had a topsy-turvy season. They beat promotion hopefuls Leeds at Elland Road in January – then promptly went six league games without a win. A result against Manchester City, who play their second game in four days tonight, would surely be the jumpstart Garry Monk's side needs.

On the red button, there's Tottenham Hotspur v Norwich City (k/o 7.45pm). The Canaries ran Spurs close twice in the league, and the Londoners currently lack firepower – could it be third time lucky for the Yellows? Remember, there are no replays: these fifth-round ties will be settled tonight. HANNAH SHADDOCK

Saving Lives at Sea

8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Scotland provides most of the drama this week, from a holiday yacht's snapped mast on Loch Ness – a vast body of corpse-cold water that can turn from placid to roiling in a moment – to a dog stranded on a coastal weir in Kinghorn. There's also a look back at the spectacular 1999 rescue of the stricken, and potentially highly explosive, chemical tanker Ascania.

That "shout" was national news, but this series' most moving moments are small stories. Tonight, for instance, a sailor who nearly wrecked his boat at Appledore in Devon marvels not so much at being saved, but at how much kindness the RNLI volunteers showed him back on shore. JACK SEALE

A Very British History

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY Therapist Rachel Nguyen's parents arrived in Britain 40 years ago as Vietnamese "boat people". Keen to rebuild their lives, they settled down in south-east London to work and bring up a new generation. Nguyen looks through the archives and talks to members of the British Vietnamese community to see how their settlement has affected a second generation.

It's an affecting story; not just hearing refugees' stories, but also about the trauma that many suffered and passed down to their British-raised children in the form of emotional reticence. How do you talk about your feelings when you don't have the language skills to share them? GILL CRAWFORD

The Great Pottery Throw Down

9.00pm More4

ENTERTAINMENT Back in the very first series of the Throw Down, in 2015, the contestants were given an unlikely challenge – to create a decorative hand basin. The results were a riot of colour and shape, and the memory's clearly lingered with the programme-makers, who have returned to sanitary ware for this week's semi-final.

In a Victorian-themed edition, the four remaining potters have to make a fully functioning toilet. After the giggles that ensued during the Greek nudes episode (OK, maybe not for everyone), you can imagine the hilarity. Previews weren't available, but I hate to think how they're going to test out the final results... GC

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

It's beggared belief that Bethany would have opted to stay on Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV) for so long. For the first 15 years of her life, she enjoyed an enviable, sun-kissed life in Milan. But then she rocked up in Weatherfield and, in no time at all, was feuding with local gangster Callum and getting sexually exploited by Nathan, before being shamed by the likes of Beth and Tracy for her admittedly ill-timed flirtations with Daniel.

But then this is the path that most soap heroines seem to travel: arrive acting all carefree and bubbly, leave after being crushed and broken. So, I wish you well, Bethany. Here's hoping you'll be a little less cursed now that you've freed yourself from the shackles of the Street. And good luck to actress Lucy Fallon. It must be hard to make an impact in a screen family as well established as the Platts. But we, as viewers, never lost interest in Bethany, despite the writers often giving her far too much to cry about. DAVID BROWN

Home

10.00pm C4

SITCOM Don't read on if you haven't seen last week's episode – or watched the whole series on All4 long since. The kiss between Sami and Katy (witnessed by 13-year-old John) has put a lightning bolt through the household. Katy's response is to blank it. "It didn't happen," she insists. "It's Google Glass. It's Madonna falling over at the Brits." As repercussions unfold, alongside Katy's disciplinary hearing, we get the best of Home: quirky drama with depth and originality that comes dusted with great comic lines.

In a key scene, Sami comes face-to-drunken-face with John's father, Elliot: "You're huge, aren't you?" Elliot marvels. "But strangely unintimidating, like a whale. Or Canada." DAVID BUTCHER

Zoey's Extraordinary Playlist

10.00pm E4

DRAMA New series This is the kind of quirky premise that will intrigue some and have others run a mile. Zoey (Jane Levy) is a San Francisco programmer who develops a superpower: thanks to an MRI mishap she gains the ability to sense people's innermost thoughts – as songs. And not just songs, but sometimes big, Glee-like musical numbers.

In one scene she is pursued down the street by a crowd singing Help. In another she realises a colleague is unhappy as he sings Mad World. The biggest emotional pay-off comes when she sees her father, "shut in" by a neurological disease, break out and sing to her. It should be utterly corny, but it works. DAVID BUTCHER

Sandylands

10.00pm Gold

COMEDY DRAMA New series At the start of this seaside comedy, Sanjeev Bhaskar's character, amusement arcade king Les Vegas, goes missing, presumed dead, on a pedalo (the word "presumed" carries some weight there). His daughter Emily (Natalie Dew) turns up in Sandylands for Les's memorial and is assailed by local characters who suck her back into the world she fled to London to escape.

In the parade of caricatures, David Walliams takes first prize as Pringle-jumpered B&B owner Derek Swallows ("Please don't make fun of my name"). It's as saucy as a seaside postcard but with real laughs and characters we'll enjoy cringeing at. More tomorrow. DAVID BUTCHER

BEHIND BARS
Aldo Kane investigates the tiger trade in Thailand

Tigers: Hunting the Traffickers

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK

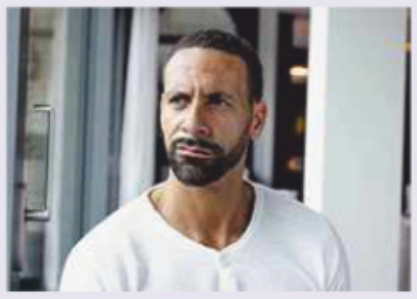

If you're lucky, you won't have heard of tiger-bone wine, which in China is thought to have medicinal value. At one stage in this investigation, presenter Aldo Kane visits a tiger zoo in China and, hidden from view, finds dozens of cases of the wine. Round the back of another facility in Laos he finds a chest freezer with, inside, three complete frozen tiger cubs. In Vietnam, a colleague purchases a block of tiger-bone "glue" (used as an aphrodisiac) for $7,000 a kilo.

And at every stage of his journey there are grim shots of captive tigers, kept in cages and enclosures, bred to feed the horrible trade in tiger parts, which, a conservationist says, "is completely out of control". It's a powerful, revealing film but you may want to skip the butchering scene at the end. DAVID BUTCHER

Rio Ferdinand: Being Mum and Dad

iPlayer (expires today)

Ferdinand's recent doc Becoming a Stepfamily, about his fiancée Kate Wright's efforts to form a unit with Rio and his three children, is excellent and is on iPlayer – but if you're new to Ferdinand's domestic life, start here. This film catches him just a year after he lost his wife Rebecca to cancer: it's a brave examination of parenting in the wake of a bereavement.

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK

9.00 Tigers: Hunting the Traffickers
RT Former Royal Marines Commando Aldo Kane is on a mission to expose the shocking secrets of the illegal tiger trade in South East Asia – and those who profit from it. Working alongside fearless wildlife crime investigators and covertly filming tiger traffickers, Aldo embarks on a perilous journey along key trafficking routes connecting Malaysia, China, Thailand, Laos and Vietnam. In this Natural World film, he reveals how the breeding and farming of captive tigers drives consumer demand for tiger products, which in turn fuels the poaching of wild tigers. Aldo's evidence is then presented to international decision-makers at the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES) in the hope it will bring about meaningful change. With fewer than 4,000 tigers left in the wild, Aldo's quest highlights the plight of a species on the brink of extinction. See p91.

One giant leap for film

P Apollo 11 ★★★★★ Netflix

This Bafta-nominated documentary presents mankind's historic first voyage to the Moon as it's never been seen or heard before. Director Todd Douglas Miller draws on carefully sourced audio and newly unearthed and restored film footage to allow the viewer to experience events as they unfold, with sweaty palms guaranteed as each hurdle is negotiated. The achievements of astronauts Armstong, Aldrin and Collins in July 1969 may be familiar to one and all, but they have never looked so epic. JAMIE HEALY

A Don Siegel double

Dirty Harry/Charley Varrick from 9.00pm TCM

Don Siegel shot the opening montage of Casablanca, and would go on to earn his spurs with films including the original Invasion of the Body Snatchers (1956). He sealed his reputation with five Clint Eastwood vehicles, notably Dirty Harry (1971), showing tonight in a double bill with Walter Matthau heist movie Charley Varrick (1973). After Siegel died in 1991, Eastwood paid tribute by dedicating his Oscar-winning masterpiece Unforgiven to both him and his other screen mentor, Sergio Leone. ANDREW COLLINS

PICK OF THE DAY ## Noughts + Crosses 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA OF THE WEEK New series An opening graphic sets up this sharply drawn version of Malorie Blackman's young-adult novel series. Since an African empire colonised Europe hundreds of years ago, Britain (known as Albion) has been under African rule, with a black ruling class of Crosses segregated from a white underclass of Noughts.

Against that backdrop we meet Sephy and Callum, friends since they were children (his mother is a servant in her parents' home) but now colliding again as teenagers with very different takes on the regime.

Her father (a masterful Paterson Joseph) is Home Secretary, while his brother and south London friends are fomenting rebellion against the police state. To their horror, Callum applies to a military academy opening its doors to Noughts for the first time. An involving fable on the mechanics of prejudice unfolds, wrapped in a story of star-crossed lovers. (The series will be on iPlayer as a boxset following the first episode.) DAVID BUTCHER See feature: page 16

EVENT Clare Balding hosts four days of elite pooch-wrangling, live from the Birmingham NEC.

Amid events including Flyball, Agility and Heelwork to Music, discussion topics range from dogs' contribution to mental-health treatments to life-saving dogs and the more general "me and my dog".

Plus there's a pleasingly random celebrity element, as we chat all things canine with former Gogglebox star Scarlett Moffatt and, er, some WWE wrestlers.

Balding is bolstered by roving reporter Radzi Chinyanganya and commentators Jim Rosenthal, Graham Partridge, Frank Kane and Jessica Holm. JACK SEALE

MasterChef

8.00pm BBC1

FOOD Chips. Are there enough of them in elite cookery contests? Not according to this round, which features chicken curry with chips as a signature dish, then later on sees three former finalists – this time it's the 2016 crop, led by series winner Jane Devonshire – served venison and chips. There's hearty fare, too, in the three ingredients test, which hands the contestants pork fillet, butternut squash and cavolo nero, and challenges them not to just roast the lot of it with garlic. Not everyone passes that test.

Most excitingly, a dessert in the last round prompts John Torode to exclaim: "We've never seen anything like that in 16 years of MasterChef!" JS

Secrets of the Museum

8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY As the V&A Museum prepares to move its stored items into a new purpose-built hi-tech home, items must be checked and catalogued. It's a monumental process, particularly for the costume department. Its curator Jane assesses the condition of a 1982 Elton John stage costume, while colleagues carefully examine the original 1935 scale model of Frankenstein's Monster, made for the film The Bride of Frankenstein.

The beast's ravaged clothes are in places threadbare with age, though his head, with its sickly green tinge, is still frighteningly vivid. He looks even more eerie when X-rayed and it's revealed he's held together by just a few rusty nails. ALISON GRAHAM

Warbird Workshop

9.00pm Yesterday

DOCUMENTARY New series Second World War aviation enthusiasts will be in hog heaven with this series, filmed at Biggin Hill, south-east London. The airfield is now home to a company that restores, and then provides leisure trips in, Spitfires. We see in detail how the most beloved of Britain's wartime aircraft works, as a team of professionals slowly rescues a "warbird" that was almost destroyed in a crash.

Unafraid as the programme is to get its hands oily, the most affecting moments are where personal bridges to the past are built. It's stirring to see the repaired Spitfire's combat pilot, 94-year-old David, shown around the workshop by budding expert Alex, just 20. JS

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

As grim as the outcome to EastEnders' (7.30pm BBC1) 35th anniversary week undoubtedly was, you can see why the writers decided that young Denny had to be the one to die. His demise certainly gives those left behind plenty of plotline fuel for the months ahead. We'll have Phil and Ben rueing their revenge mission against Keanu, while Sharon mourns the loss of her firstborn, while coping with the demands of a newborn.

And let's not forget Ian, who locked Denny in that cabin below decks, never guessing, of course, that within the space of 30 minutes, it'd start filling up with water. Having done such a rotten job at keeping some of his own kids alive, he now feels secretly responsible for the death of someone else's. So I doubt Kathy's advice tonight that he should be supporting Sharon will go down well. And what's the betting that deceitful Dotty will use this voicemail message of a desperate Denny pleading with Ian to let him out of the boat to her own advantage? DAVID BROWN

War of the Worlds

9.00pm, 10.00pm Fox

DRAMA New series So soon? Yes, BBC1's turgid adaptation was only last November, but now here's a US-French enterprise that barely glances at HG Wells's classic novel. Set in the present, it's been developed by Howard Overman (who created Misfits and Atlantis) and has attracted a distinguished cast (Natasha Little, Gabriel Byrne, Elizabeth McGovern).

The set-up episode doesn't dither; it quickly introduces astronomers in the Alps, middle-class families in London and an asylum seeker in Calais, then plunges them all into peril when the aliens (not Martians) attack. It's gripping. The aftermath in part two is mercilessly grim, especially when scurrying robots start zapping survivors. PATRICK MULKERN

Meet the Richardsons

10.00pm Dave

SITCOM Jon Richardson and Lucy Beaumont's marriage mockumentary has a sharpness to it, like the tartest of sherbet lemons. "The longer we're married, the less she seems to know me," grumbles Jon, as she dragoons him into judging a competition in their Yorkshire village. "She knows I don't like people," he sighs. "And she knows I don't like things. But she constantly makes me do things. With people." Nobody delivers this kind of miserabilism better than Richardson, and the format plays to his gloom.

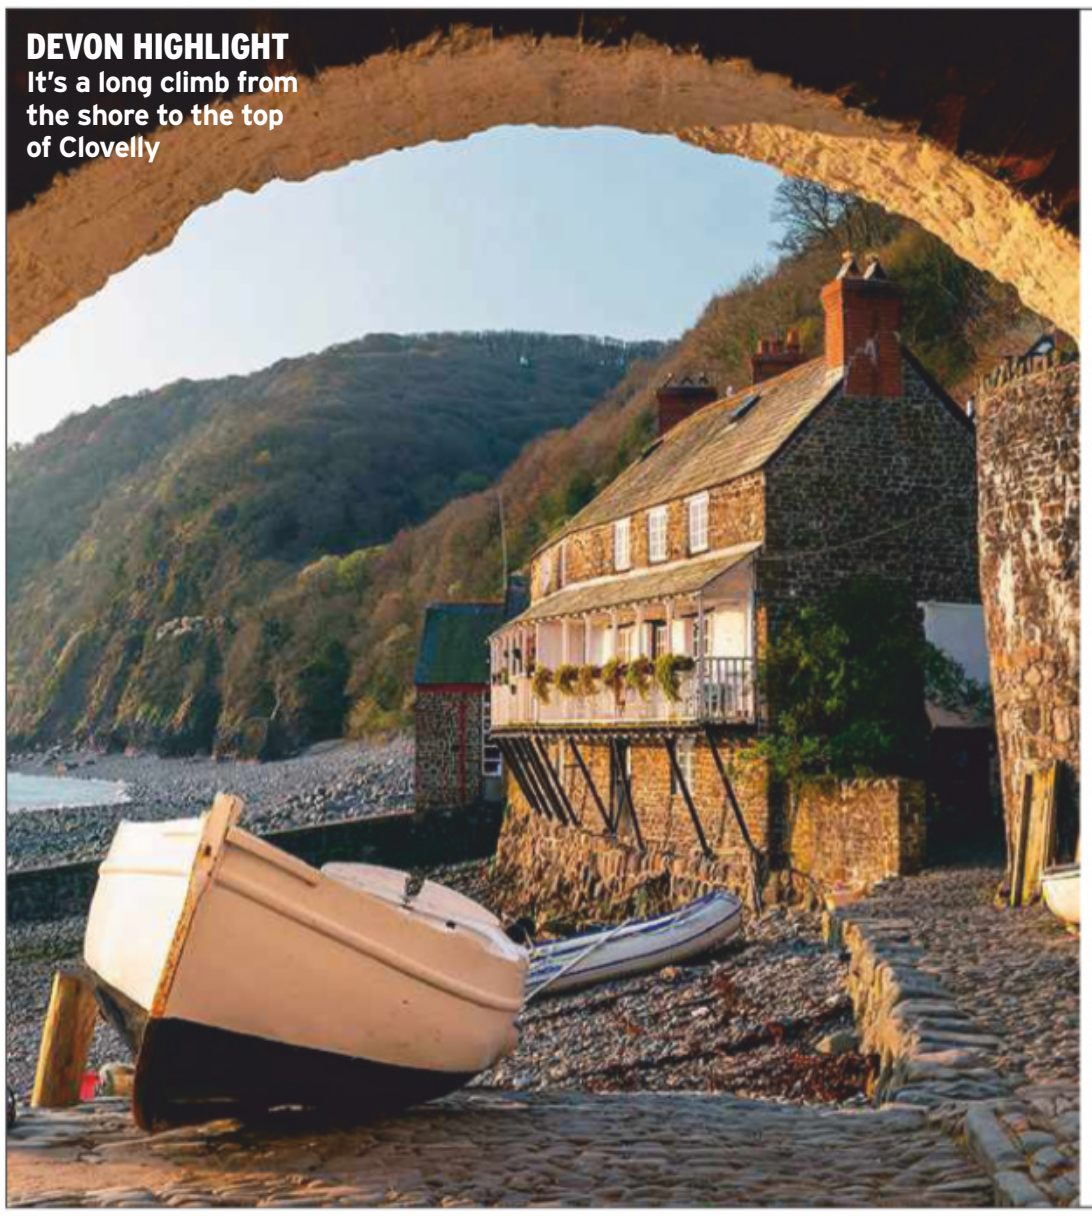

This week, Lucy worries that Jon fancies Susie Dent from Eight out of Ten Cats Does Countdown. Dent does a cameo as herself, proving more convincing than Jack Dee. DAVID BUTCHER

Women's Football

11.40pm (k/o 12 midnight) BBC2

SPORT USA v England Phil Neville had several objectives to juggle when compiling the squad that will compete in the US-based SheBelieves Cup, against the USA, Spain and Japan. England are the defending champions and won't want to relinquish that status – but Neville also has one eye on this summer's Olympics, as well as the 2021 Euros. That explains, then, why he's favoured youth over experience: West Ham defender Grace Fisk, 22, gets her first call-up, while Everton forward Chloe Kelly, also 22, is in the senior squad for just the second time.

It's unlikely either will get a run-out tonight, though – England will surely field their strongest XI against the reigning world champions. HANNAH SHADDOCK

DEVON HIGHLIGHT
It's a long climb from the shore to the top of Clovelly

Villages by the Sea

7.30pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY New series This is one of those series where every episode has already been shown in a TV region but which now gets networked for the rest of us. So apologies to readers in the South West and Channel Islands, who saw this documentary about Clovelly on the North Devon coast when it was shown in December. Archaeologist Ben Robinson toils up and down Clovelly's steep cobbled streets and explores how the idyllic-looking fishing village, tucked into a fold of the coast, was very much shaped as a tourist destination by a Victorian visionary – Christine Hamlyn.

It's an extraordinary story of one person deciding, because she owned the whole place, exactly how it would develop and grow, renovating fishermen's hovels with "an Arts-and-Crafts-y makeover". Crucial to the 150,000 tourists a year: no cars allowed, just "a steep stair of houses clinging to the cliff". DAVID BUTCHER

The Real T Rex with Chris Packham
8.00pm The wildlife expert on the huge beast

7.00pm Beyond 100 Days (S) (HD)
Followed by Weather (S) (HD)

7.30 The Yorkshire Dales
3/3. Paul Rose heads for Wharfedale, where he meets the butchers whose Yorkshire produce is being sold across the country. He takes time out with the original Calendar Girls whose naked calendar became a worldwide sensation, and has a close encounter with the bats along the River Wharfe. (R) (S) (HD)

8.00 The Real T Rex with Chris Packham
Despite enduring centuries of scientific speculation and Hollywood misrepresentation, the tyrannosaurus rex remains the most famous of the dinosaurs. Chris goes behind the myth to find out how the giant predator moved and the true power of its bite. He also gains an insight into the creature's social life and how bird-like it might have looked and sounded.
Director Mark Everest; Producer Ruth Roberts
First shown on BBC2 (S) (AD) (HD)

9.00 The Day the Dinosaurs Died
Experts suspect that the dinosaurs were wiped out after a city-sized asteroid hit what is now the Gulf of Mexico, but they haven't had any proof – until now. Biologist Ben Garrod joins a drilling expedition into the spot the asteroid crashed to find evidence, while Alice Roberts visits a fossil graveyard believed to date from the collision.
Producer Amy Maher; Executive producers Aidan Laverty, Peter Wyles and Sam Barcroft (R) (S) (AD) (HD)

10.00 The Stuarts
3/3. A Family at War. Clare Jackson examines how the Stuarts became fatally divided by religion, with brothers in opposition and two daughters supporting the overthrow of their father. After the Catholic James II was deposed by the Protestant William of Orange in 1688, Scotland lost its sovereignty and became part of Great Britain in 1707, while Ireland was reduced from a kingdom to a colony.
Director Clara Glynn
Series producer Richard Downes (R) (S) (AD) (HD)

The Royal Tenenbaums ★★★★★ 11.00pm Sky Greats

The trailer for Wes Anderson's new film The French Dispatch (in cinemas in August) promises another visually sumptuous romp with an all-star acting ensemble. The likes of Bill Murray, Anjelica Huston and Owen Wilson have been a constant since Anderson's 2001 breakthrough film, about a gifted but dysfunctional family that reunites when patriarch Gene Hackman feigns illness. As the variously troubled family members, Gwyneth Paltrow, Ben Stiller and Luke Wilson make it a quirky journey, but a warm one. ANDREW COLLINS

Game of bones

eXistenZ ★★★★ My5 FREE TO VIEW

David Cronenberg's virtual-reality thriller is now available as part of the Pluto TV Movie content on C5's catch-up service. It ducks the more explicit body-horror gore of the director's earlier Videodrome and The Fly, but it nonetheless involves pulsating computer-game consoles and handsets that plug directly into the flesh. The "is it or isn't it reality" question keeps the pace up, while there are impressive turns from Jude Law as a security guard and Jennifer Jason Leigh as creator of the eponymous game. AC

Now on Netflix

Hostiles ★★★★ Netflix

Director Scott Cooper breathes fresh life into that timeworn storyline of a white man and native American burying the hatchet. Christian Bale plays the army captain ordered to ensure the safety of Cheyenne chief Wes Studi, as he transports him on a perilous journey from captivity in New Mexico to his home in Montana. BRIAN PENDREIGH

FRIDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

ON THE UP
Michael Kiwanuka kicks off the 6 Music Festival weekend

PICK OF THE DAY Michael Kiwanuka at the 6 Music Festival 11.30pm BBC4

MUSIC Occasionally in pop there's a glorious moment when an artist who's been talked about for years crystallises their talent into a great album: long-term fans say see, we told you so, while naysayers have to admit there's something special there after all.

Such a watershed happened last year when Michael Kiwanuka released his third LP Kiwanuka, a considerable upgrade on his previous work that saw his melding of folk, soul, gospel and much else besides click into place.

Kiwanuka's gig from earlier this evening, filmed at the Roundhouse, kicks off three days of coverage of the BBC Radio 6 Music Festival. All this year's concerts take place in what's arguably the alternative-music station's spiritual home, Camden in north London. JACK SEALE

The Yorkshire Steam Railway: All Aboard

7.30pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY It's the North Yorkshire Moors Railway gala weekend and steam buffs throng stations eager to board trains. But, of course, there are last minute niggles with some of the record-breaking 15 engines due to take part. Put-upon engine boss "Piglet" hurtles across the Moors to pick up coal for an engine that's been delivered without fuel and there are brake problems with another.

Everything is fine in the end – despite the weather, it pours on the last day – even though the maximum drama is eked out of the tiniest hiccup, including a lost bit of engine that's ended up in the bracken. Somewhere. ALISON GRAHAM

Wild Cuba: a Caribbean Journey

8.30pm BBC2

NATURE This Natural World tour of Cuba's wildlife has a leisurely, reflective air. We're in the company of wildlife cameraman Colin Stafford-Johnson, who explores how Cuba's isolation has made it a cradle of evolution. Half of the island's species are unique, including the world's smallest bird, the bee hummingbird. If you think the bird itself is beautiful, wait till you see its nest, an exquisite thing the size of an eggcup and decorated with lichen.

Equally fine is the Fernandina's flicker, a type of woodpecker of which there are only a few hundred left. Stafford-Johnson also witnesses the dramatic migration as thousands of crabs mate. DAVID BUTCHER

Modern Family

8.30pm Sky 1

SITCOM Not much in the dynamics of the extended family hasn't now been explored, worked through, mocked or made the subject of a knowing end-of-episode homily (how we don't miss those). So rogue elements have to be foisted on the plots to make them fly. This week that means Dylan's hippie mother, Farrah, comes to stay with Claire and Phil.

As she drives them mad with crystals and inappropriate nudity, they hit on the idea of setting her up with Claire's stepfather Jerry, a man so sensitive he appears in the house saying, "I would've knocked, but you know I abhor violence." Meanwhile, Mitch and Cam try to decide which of them should donate sperm to a lesbian couple. DAVID BUTCHER

Amazon Empire: the Rise and Reign of Jeff Bezos

8.35pm PBS America

DOCUMENTARY After a recent Panorama probed Amazon's data gathering, and founder Jeff Bezos announced plans to give $10bn to environmental causes, this US doc feels timely. It's a long, detailed, well-sourced look at how Amazon grew to where it is today – and at what cost to capitalism (American capitalism, that is; the programme has no interest in issues elsewhere).

One of the first names Bezos considered for his online bookstore was Relentless.com, and his focus on dominating whole sectors is described as "bullying with a smile" by one contributor. DAVID BUTCHER

I'm getting worried about the younger generation in EastEnders (8.30pm BBC1) as they all seem to be being either written out or killed off. Louise went to Portugal, Dennis drowned, Keanu left on the Tube and now Bex (Jasmine Armfield, right) is off travelling. If it carries on at this rate, it'll be just Ian and Sharon sitting in the Queen Vic listening to Dot's tales of Walford Past.

Mind you, I've perhaps been too quick to predict Bex's exit, because her passport has gone missing, just as she's about to head out the door. It's no surprise that it's Sonia who's responsible – after all, she does now have a reputation for being the household's answer to Fagin. And when Bex confronts her mum, Sonia remains adamant that Bex is making the wrong decision.

But as far as Bex's poor life choices go, this is surely an improvement on drug abuse and writing mournful ballads like Boxed up Broken Heart? DAVID BROWN

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Celebrity Britain by Barge: Then and Now

8.30pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY Anne Diamond, Jennie Bond, Pete Waterman and Bill Oddie continue their canal journey, starting with a treat for barge-TV fans: the spectacular Falkirk wheel, which lifts them in a slow semi-circle from one stretch of water to another high above. It also traps them together, and they talk so much it sounds like a comedy scene where everyone competes to have the last word.

Then they split up and relax, though Bond and Diamond don't when they undergo an immersive Burke & Hare theatre performance in a tunnel. But Waterman is in his element at a disused canal/railway transfer station. He's got a grainy photograph, and a willingness to dig for old metal. JS

Just One Look

DRAMA Eva Beaufils's trench coat is a touch too stylish to quite fit the image of the hard-bitten gumshoe, but she does a pretty good job as she searches for her husband, Bastien, picking up leads in unexpected places. Today a lesson in underrated 1990s French pop bands at a Parisian record shop appears to hold the key to the whole mystery.

As the series rushes towards its conclusion, the revelations start to pile up. But while Eva, the police and that nasty avenging angel Grégory inch towards the truth, poor old Bastien finds himself in a cold, dark place with only the merciless Eric Toussaint for company. It doesn't look good for him. DAVID CRAWFORD

Intelligence

9.00pm, 9.30pm Sky 1

SITCOM A final double bill concludes this fish-out-of-water comedy that has had enough snappy lines and engaging characters to be worth sticking with. The penultimate episode feels a little lazy as it reaches below the belt for laughs, but the final instalment ties together the questions that have hung over since episode one: just what did Jerry do to warrant being sent to the UK? As an FBI agent arrives to remove him on an extradition order, his secrets emerge.

David Schwimmer and Nick Mohammed make an unexpected yet brilliant comedy double-act, and the final scene leaves the door open for a second series – which is just as well, because Sky has already confirmed that it will be back. FRANCES TAYLOR

DEUTSCH MARKS
Gereon Rath (Volker Bruch) and Charlotte Ritter (Liv Lisa Fries) face the crash of 1929

Babylon Berlin

9.00pm, 10.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA This is the third season of the lavish Weimar-era drama that comes across like a Cabaret prequel on laudanum. It is said to be Germany's most expensive TV drama, and you can believe it, as the opening plunges us into the stock-market crash of 1929 with a nightmarish scene inside a bank where people are killing themselves and our hero, Gereon Rath, wanders from the building to be flattened by angry stockholders.

The set pieces are extraordinary, even when the plot that strings them together feels sketchy. Who cares when it looks this great? Later in the first episode (we have spooled back from that opening to five weeks earlier), a fabulous song-and-dance sequence at a film studio ends in a death worthy of Midsomer Murders. Berlin detective Rath arrives to establish whether it was an accident. Of course not. DAVID BUTCHER

Amazing Stories

Apple TV+

Like the original fantasy/horror/sci-fi anthology that was broadcast on American TV in the 1980s, this new set of one-off dramas is overseen by none other than Steven Spielberg, with help from the writing team behind fairy-tale saga Once upon a Time. The tales include stories of strange lights in the sky, a Second World War pilot travelling through time, and a grandpa who might be a superhero.

The anti-superhero

P Brightburn ★★★ 8.00pm Sky Premiere

The Gunn clan – Guardians of the Galaxy's James (producing here), brother Brian and co-writer cousin Mark – put a twist on the Superman mythos with this slasher horror. The set-up is familiar, with a couple in rural Kansas adopting a crash-landed alien tot. However, when Brandon (Jackson A Dunn) hits puberty, instead of truth, justice and the American way, he sets out on a path of destruction. Brightburn may lack psychological nuance, but director David Yarovesky keeps the action pacey and the gore flowing. JEREMY ASPINALL

Will they be famous again?

Bros: After the Screaming Stops ★★★

BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

Leaving iPlayer at the end of this weekend, this revealing documentary about late-1980s British boy band Bros has more going for it than just raking over the coals of their rise and fall. The film reacquaints us with the Goss twins, drummer Luke and singer Matt, as they attempt to put aside their differences to perform a concert at London's O2. It's hilarious and combative in equal measure, but the journey to restore the pair's relationship is the soul of the film. JA

In cinemas today...

The mythically elfin meets the comically mundane in Pixar's latest animation, Onward (pictured). Daniels Radcliffe and Webber attempt to break out of a South Africa jail in real-life thriller Escape from Pretoria. And Sharon Horgan and Kristin Scott Thomas start a choir in feel-good drama Military Wives, directed by Peter Cattaneo of Full Monty fame. STEVE MORRISSEY

6 Music Festival

Coverage begins on Friday at 4.00pm 6 Music

When I took part... Let's not be coy... When I won Celebrity Mastermind a few years back (36 points – still a record, thanks for asking), during the grindingly awkward "chatty" segment, John Humphrys informed me that I was a "professional northerner". With admirable speed and restraint, I thanked him but replied that I regarded myself merely as a gifted amateur.

Another response might have been to ask one of my fellow contestants to hold my coat while I "offered" John out into the car park. This, though, would surely have been too bitter, chippy and needlessly aggressive. Too northern.

I've been thinking about people's attitudes to the north and the south because this year's 6 Music Festival, an annual celebration of the independent, alternative music the station trades in, is about to take place across Camden in north London, largely at two famous venues – Dingwalls and the Roundhouse. Previously we have been to Bristol, Manchester, Newcastle, Liverpool, Belfast and Glasgow, so no one can accuse us of being "London-centric".

Such fun were these previous jaunts (who doesn't love a night at Glasgow Barrowlands, a 1940s ballroom with the best barstaff in Britain, and a tuck shop selling Tunnock's caramel wafers and Irn-Bru?) that it almost feels we are doing pricey, dirty, unlovely London a favour by hanging out there for a weekend. We will, of course, enjoy it, especially us northerners – professional, amateur or otherwise.

Bright lights, big city

Musicians have always been drawn to London, says Stuart Maconie – whether they like it or not...

Of course, there's no such thing as a "professional Londoner" – or no such phrase, anyway. There are Londoners, from cheery, shouty Lionel Bart to cheeky Barbara Windsor, from the Clash to Stormzy, from Chas and Dave to Charles and Camilla, Pearly Kings and Queens to actual kings and queens, Chelsea Pensioners to Chelsea FC. But it would never occur to us to think of these as such, just as no one ever calls Jonathan Ross or Claudia Winkleman "professional Londoners". London is the default media setting and so it's assumed that its operatives will, if not originate there, then relocate there as soon as common sense has prevailed.

For centuries, London has been calling; "calling" as the Clash put it "to the faraway towns". Tiny, insignificant, scattered hamlets like Manchester, Leeds, Birmingham, Liverpool, Newcastle, Cardiff and Glasgow, whence came the raw materials for the media, arts and entertainment industries of London town.

Ambitious, talented provincials have been drawn to the lure of the capital since Midlander William Shakespeare packed his quill and waited for the Elizabethan version of the Megabus from Digbeth coach station. The concept drives those 60s novels by John Braine and Stan Barstow, where angry young northern men go to London to learn about cocktails and be seduced by older women.

The desire to escape the straitjacket of those terraced streets was once the turbine that drove our pop culture. Billy Liar declares that "a man could lose himself in London" and dreams of leaving, but misses the train.

The protagonist of the Smiths' London, a song aching with every northerner's ambivalent feeling about the capital, catches his and embarks on a journey into the unknown. "You left your girlfriend on the platform… the train… Heave on to Euston…" wails Morrissey, "Do you think you've made the right decision?" Evidently, Moz thought so, as he had gaffs in Primrose Hill and Bayswater. Bronski Beat's Smalltown Boy "leaves in the morning with everything he owns in a little black case… Alone on the platform".

Time and again, they left, nervously checking the timetable, dreaming of nightclubs and art galleries, unprepared for the drool and armpits of the Northern Line.

I was only prepared to go so far. But I went. While working at a college in Skelmersdale I got a job at the NME, and for most of the 90s and noughties I wandered Soho, Waterloo and Fitzrovia. I know the West End of London better than I know the backstreets of Wigan. But I never became a Londoner, not even an adopted one.

I wasn't alone. True, the Beatles left for leafy commuter belt Surrey and swinging London as soon as funds allowed. Noel Gallagher may be spotted in the posh seats at Manchester City, but only when he can get down from Hampshire. But some musicians have always stayed true to their roots. Morrissey decamped to "the Smoke", but the Smiths' guitarist Johnny Marr still prefers Cheshire. New Order stayed in Manchester and ploughed substantial amounts of cash into the Hacienda nightclub for little profit. In a digitally connected new world, you can live anywhere, so Hampstead and Belgravia fills up with Russian oligarchs, while the pop aristocracy flees for Bucks and Hants and their poorer, artier cousins for Brighton and St Leonards-on-Sea.

'I never became a Londoner, not even an adopted one'

So things are changing. The kids of the driven youngster who came from Bradford or Bolton to north London can't wait to get to uni in Leeds and Liverpool, where the clubs are better, the flats are cheaper and the Sunday morning hangover air clearer and fresher. But old tropes die hard. Long before John Humphrys called me a professional one, Neil Tennant of Pet Shop Boys once called me a "comedy northerner", a bit rich for someone from North Shields, I thought.

But I forgive him, as he sang perhaps my favourite song about the lad from up country who becomes an exotic fixture of the West End. Pet Shop Boys' Sexy Northerner "came down from the North… You know the way they do… Got a cheeky smile… How does he do it?"

How indeed. Perhaps I shall open my Dingwalls show with it.

The 6 Music Festival takes place in Camden from 6 to 8 March and will be broadcast on 6 Music and BBC Sounds across the weekend. Performances will also be available to watch on BBC iPlayer and bbc.co.uk/6music, with highlights on BBC4 and BBC red button. Suart Maconie's show with Mark Radcliffe comes from the festival at 7.00pm on Saturday 7 March, and at 1.00pm on Sunday 8 March

PICK OF THE WEEK

The Decade of Distrust

Saturday 8.00pm Radio 4

Brexit taught us many things, not the least among them that the truth as espoused by a politician is rarely to be believed. Was it ever thus? Maybe so, but in this salutary Archive on 4, the BBC's political editor Laura Kuenssberg (below) traces our collapse of faith in politics – and in wider institutions – back to the events of the 2000s.

Starting with the conviction, in January 2000, of the GP and mass murderer Harold Shipman – if we can't trust our doctor, who can we trust? – Kuenssberg alights upon what for many people remains a moment they can never be reconciled to – Tony Blair's claims around Saddam Hussein's weapons of mass destruction.

WHO CAN YOU TRUST?
Laura Kuenssberg asks the big question

The expansion of the EU – ten new members in 2004, followed by Bulgaria and Romania in 2007 – was a development whose effects could also be endlessly disputed, and it was around this time, as Kuenssberg says, that "something seemed to be stirring". The next thing we knew, we were convulsed by the financial crash of 2008, and who was to blame for that?

Interviews with Gordon Brown and George Osborne help paint a picture whose full meaning is only now becoming clear.

AMBRIDGE DIARY

The Archers this week…

Robert's attempt to maintain calm doesn't go down well, as tensions remain high between his wife Lynda and Lilian. But we may just have reached a turning point in their war, with the ReBulls starting to lose interest in saving the name of the pub. And then Lynda makes a huge mistake where a colleague is concerned…

Plans are forging ahead for Kirsty and Philip's secret wedding, but the bride-to-be is wrestling with a dilemma about a potential guest. Later in the week, Philip's strange behaviour fuels Kirsty's paranoia – could history be about to repeat itself? But when Kirsty finally confronts her fiancé, she certainly isn't prepared for his response. DAVID BROWN

I've been dumped

It's the revenge of the TV nerds

Revenge of the TV Nerds – it sounds like a series on Channel 5 featuring angry owners of so-called smart TVs demanding their money back, wearing giant inflatable hands in the style of Kenny Everett's Brother Lee Love. "We can't upgrade the software! We have to plug everything into it and the wi-fi crashes! You sold us on the word SMART but it should have been DUMB." There would be more on the Feedback pages of RT.

But no. Sadly, "Revenge of the TV Nerds" is what I'm calling this week's column following shock developments at Radio Times. As you know, on occasion I have suggested a series of small improvements to the television section. Basically, I want the whole thing moved to the back of the magazine. All those features and photos would then be replaced by the radio section, which would return to the front. This column would then, most properly, become the first thing seen by readers in the magazine.

"I feel very humbled to be promoted in this way, but I accept this new column at the front on behalf of all my colleagues in radio, past and present," I would say – you know the sort of mock reluctance.

'I know how these TV people operate. They're ruthless'

In other improvements, the whole TV section could later be inserted as a pull-out in a compostable wrapper. For the front cover, I plan a Reader's Radio each week, and for Christmas I will allow a double smart speaker edition.

You've read these sort of things from me before. Well, it has clearly all hit home. Imagine my shock when I opened a recent edition to find that there had indeed been a change to the magazine… this column's listing had been quietly removed from the contents page! Obliterated! Expunged! Don't tell me that this was an accident. This was revenge, a dish served icy cold. Instead of my weekly round-up being available as the first thing for you, dear reader, there was the contents page staring out, and as for the wildly popular, must-read radio column in the RADIO Times, not a dicky bird.

I know how these TV people operate. They're ruthless. I was once hired as the face of BBC3. This is all so long ago now that like the youth channel itself, I've had several cosmetic changes, though instead of having my face lifted, I've opted to have my body lowered. Anyway, I'd been flown back from a happy life in New York to front a series of programmes on the BBC's dedicated TV channel for the under-35s.

Naturally, I was sacked just a couple of years later. The TV people put out a press release along the lines of, "We look forward to working with Paddy on a series of exciting new projects." In television, the phrase "exciting new projects" is code for "he's a dodo". It's a bit like that word "smart" attached to the sale of new TV sets.

Nearly 20 years have passed, and where are these "exciting new projects"? Have you seen me wearing a fleece, buying knick-knacks in the auction rooms? Have you been inside my attic? Did you miss me on First Dates? Infants at the time of this offer of "exciting new projects" have now grown tall and are flying planes, serving in uniform, saving lives in operating theatres. So what do we call all this? Like the lost column in the contents page… Revenge of the TV Nerds.

Paddy O'Connell hosts Broadcasting House on Sunday at 9am on Radio 4, and co-hosts the podcast Dogpod

Celebrity selfies? I'm not playing that game

Twenty-five years ago I was at a company conference being held at a hotel in Bournemouth. The "delegates" were the usual bumptious young media types, not shy when it came to introducing themselves to people. This would be particularly the case in the evening when they'd had a couple of drinks. Also staying in the hotel at the same time were not one but two very well-known people. One was pop-country silver fox Kenny Rogers. The other was national treasure Victoria Wood. The only reason I mention this is because as far as I know none of the people on the conference asked either of these stars to have their picture taken with them.

A curious ritual

In retrospect this seems amazing to me. It wasn't just the fact that 25 years ago mobiles weren't anything like as widespread as they are now. More to the point, there was no such word as "selfie" and since there was no word there was no custom that it could denote. There wasn't a term to suggest this curious ritual whereby you and another, more celebrated person should hunker together and look into a phone so that you're able to prove to your friends that you actually met the more celebrated person. When you think about it, selfies are pretty strange.

Simon Pegg's selfie lesson

If people as famous as the above were sharing a hotel with members of the public nowadays they wouldn't just have to pose for one selfie. Because once somebody sees somebody else getting a selfie they feel compelled to get their own. It would happen so often that they would soon become experts on the working of every phone camera on the market. Not long ago I passed actor Simon Pegg in the West End as he was patiently explaining to a couple of fans how to have their picture taken with him.

Are you a journalist?

I can't be the only person getting a little tired of seeing every case of a one-on-one radio interview being celebrated by its own official selfie. I can see why they do this, but the message of these selfies is always the same: here's me and my new best mate the famous person. You can always tell where the power lies in these pictures because one person always looks more pleased to be in it than the other. Selfies have the unfortunate effect of making the interviewer look a little bit more like a fan and a little less like a journalist.

Conversations on a Bench

Falmouth is shrouded in mist and drizzle, known locally as a "mizzle", but that doesn't deter Anna Scott-Brown from ensconcing herself on a bench to drink in the townsfolk's disparate musings on life. "It's a lovely place to be homeless, beautiful setting," says one soft-voiced lady. We learn that tourism flourishes in such a picturesque place, the large student population brings diversity, and "death is an adventure". Quite. What makes our Cornish eavesdropping feast all the more enjoyable are the whimsical words of poet Penelope Shuttle – "A bench thinks about its own 'benchiness'" – that bookend each observation. CHRIS GARDNER

6.45 Sunday Feature: The East Speaks Back In a quest to assess the East's perception of the West, Jerry Brotton heads to Turkey on the trail of one of the world's great travellers, Ottoman writer Evliya Celebi (1611–82), who described the places he visited in what has been called the world's first travel book – a fascinating insight into how the Ottomans viewed Western civilisation. Brotton hears from Turkish and Bulgarian writers and historians and traces Celebi's journey across Europe, posing a logistical nightmare as he makes his way from Istanbul through the Balkans to Vienna.

Today's Choices

OK, Boomer!
4.00pm Radio 4

If there ever was a sign that the generation gap has become a yawning chasm, then OK, Boomer! might be it. The withering putdown has become ubiquitous online, a backlash from so-called snowflake millennials against what they perceive as the condescending attitude of their elders. But is this generational animosity a new phenomenon – or the result of rapid social and technological change? This thorny question is here viewed through the lens of history; as in Napoleonic times, the world might just be moving too fast for its own good. That at least is something we can all agree on. TOM GOULDING

The Essay
10.45pm Radio 3

In the first of five episodes making the case for neglected female writers, academic Sophie Coulombeau champions Charlotte Smith. Born in 1749, Smith married at 15 and had 13 children, whom she eventually had to support on her own after leaving her abusive husband; she turned to writing, and was prolific, authoring three collections of poetry and ten novels. Also celebrated this week are Yolande Mukagasana, a Rwandan nurse, and Lady Mary Wroth, the first woman to write an English-language novel. HANNAH SHADDOCK

12.00 Composer of the Week: Florence Price (1887–1953)
1/5.* Florence Price Experiences Racial Prejudice Donald Macleod looks at the early years of the African-American composer and pianist and explores the impact of racial prejudice on her. Florence Price was born in Little Rock, Arkansas, in 1887 into a relatively well-off middle-class family, and at the age of four gave her first public recital as a pianist. Racial tensions were never far away, and when Florence was at university she changed her birthplace to Mexico. Her parents believed that her future career would be hampered when being identified as black, whereas it would be improved if she were considered of Spanish origin.

Art of Now: North Korea

The push and pull between creativity and profitability is always an interesting factor when it comes to commercial art – but what if you're also working under the yoke of a totalitarian government? That's the issue explored in this fascinating documentary about North Korea's Mansudae Art Studio, founded 60 years ago to make reverential propaganda but now employing 5,000 staff and selling pieces around the world. Can art and beauty still flourish under these constraints? HUW FULLERTON

2/5.* Florence Price and Marriage. Donald Macleod journeys through Florence Price's period of marriage to the New England lawyer Thomas Jewell Price. Although Price gave up her career as a performer, she continued to develop as a music teacher and composer. And she continued her study of composition, harmony and orchestration at the Chicago Musical College. But racial tensions in Arkansas were escalating, and Price and her family had to flee for their lives to Chicago, where she picked up her career again as a musician.

Beethoven's piano variations are a continuous thread which run through the whole of his composing life. The five sets of variations in Cédric Tiberghien's recent recital, from the earliest period in Beethoven's career, show what Beethoven could already do with a simple theme. Tiberghien has chosen to intersperse Beethoven's variations with music by 20th-century American experimentalists. Recorded on 23 February at Wigmore Hall in London and presented by Georgia Mann.

Mark Watson Talks a Bit About Life

6.30pm Radio 4

After a three-year gap, Mark Watson (above) is back to make the world a better place, although he admits he's failing because, since he began, things have definitely got worse and worse. The new series allegedly has a seasonal theme – the subject of the first show is spring – but Watson finds it hard to stick to it. He's simply very good at telling funny jokes about himself. Tonight he faces up to having just turned 40 and has particularly good fun with a life expectancy calculator app. Guests and music are, in my opinion, shoehorned unnecessarily into Watson's routine. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3

Beethoven was not conventionally religious and, unlike Haydn or Mozart, wrote little for the Church. His biggest work besides his opera Fidelio, the Missa solemnis is far from conventionally religious either. Like Verdi's Requiem, it's been criticised for its secularity, not least the graphic sounds of war that underscore its concluding prayers for peace. But Beethoven inscribed the score "From the heart, may it return to the heart", so maybe he was addressing us, not God, all along. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Today's Choices

Here's the Thing
11.00am/9.00pm R4 Extra

As David Hepworth wrote on these pages last week, the beauty of this series of interviews conducted by Hollywood actor Alec Baldwin – originally broadcast on WNYC Radio in New York – is his genuine interest in how the world works. Good on Radio 4 Extra for finding room for it in its schedules, and in today's edition – dating from 2013, and the last in the second series that the network has aired – Baldwin gets tremendous value out of two superbly witty, straight-talking guests. There's Lena Dunham, creator of TV drama Girls; and screen and stage star Elaine Stritch (above, with Baldwin), who died in 2014, aged 89. SIMON O'HAGAN

Ramblings
3.00pm Radio 4

The reliably level-headed Clare Balding explodes with uncontained amazement and joy on a walk to a labyrinth at the top of St Catherine's Hill, south-east of Winchester, Hampshire. The leader of this spiritual group ramble, Brian Draper – who may be familiar from Thought for the Day – stops to read a poem about a kingfisher. He's just got started when Balding interrupts with an astonished squeal. Flying into the trees is...a kingfisher. An extremely powerful radio moment. JANE ANDERSON

DISCOVER RADIO

24 Hours of Sunset

In a slightly faster-paced version of slow radio, Guardian journalist Laura Barton walks the length of Los Angeles's (in)famous Sunset Boulevard from Chinatown, via a sinful stretch in Hollywood, to its wild ocean end. JANE ANDERSON

Today's Choices

Drama: A Fair Shot

2.15pm Radio 4

Viv Groskop does double duty on this afternoon's drama: the writer also stars in her own two-hander about an entrepreneur-turned-politician and her younger, more idealistic speechwriter. Barbara Flynn (above) is 60-something Maria Wild, who sells her multimillion-dollar cosmetics empire and founds a new centrist political party; she recruits rising star Tamara (played by Groskop) to help her forge a speech that she will give at the UN, and which she hopes will launch her new career. Amid lots of debate about electoral reform and the language of political persuasion, Tamara begins to realise that her new boss isn't who she first appears.

6 Music Festival

4.00pm 6 Music

Now in its seventh year, the 6 Music festival makes its first appearance in London, taking over the pop-rich area of Camden and offering up dozens of gigs, Q&A sessions and DJ sets that will fill the station's schedules from this afternoon through to the end of Sunday. On page 120, 6 Music presenter Stuart Maconie considers the relationship that musicians from around the UK have had with the capital. SIMON O'HAGAN

Face behind the voice

Geoff Twentyman BBC Radio Bristol

Age 61 on 10 March
Current job Presenter of BBC Radio Bristol's Monday to Friday sports show (6pm–7.00) plus the Saturday sports show (2pm–6.00).
CV The son of a Liverpool footballer, he was born and brought up in Liverpool, attending Maghull grammar school. Played professional football for Preston North End and then Bristol Rovers, totalling 350 appearances. When injury cost him a place in an FA Cup tie against Liverpool, BBC Radio Bristol invited him into the commentary box, "And I thought, this could be my future". He quit the game aged 34, studied broadcast journalism at Bristol Polytechnic, then was offered a job sports presenting at Radio Bristol, where he has remained.
Best moment "Covering big matches involving the Bristol football teams and the Bristol and Bath rugby teams. The interview I remember most was with Eric Cantona – he was so charismatic. I admired him for being able to crack jokes not in his native language."
Worst moment "Early days when I pushed the faders on my microphone the wrong way and my sports bulletin was just silence. I was used to the faders we had on my polytechnic course, which went in a different direction."
Off air "I'm a father and a grandfather and live in the Rednal area of Bristol, only a 10-minute walk from the studios. I'm a keen golfer and I volunteer at a Save the Children charity shop."
First radio memory "Peter Jones's commentary when Liverpool won the old First Division back in the 1970s."
Favourite broadcasters "Peter Jones – he could paint pictures. And Zoe Ball. How she manages to be so cheerful so early in the day is amazing."
Ambition "I'd love it if I could commentate on either of the Bristol football clubs in the Premier League."
Dream job "I've been a professional footballer and a sports broadcaster. Anything else would be greedy."
Secret skills "My mother taught me to sew. I now teach my granddaughter."

Face behind the voice

Geoff Twentyman BBC Radio Bristol

Age 61 on 10 March
Current job Presenter of BBC Radio Bristol's Monday to Friday sports show (6pm–7.00) plus the Saturday sports show (2pm–6.00).
CV The son of a Liverpool footballer, he was born and brought up in Liverpool, attending Maghull grammar school. Played professional football for Preston North End and then Bristol Rovers, totalling 350 appearances. When injury cost him a place in an FA Cup tie against Liverpool, BBC Radio Bristol invited him into the commentary box, "And I thought, this could be my future". He quit the game aged 34, studied broadcast journalism at Bristol Polytechnic, then was offered a job sports presenting at Radio Bristol, where he has remained.
Best moment "Covering big matches involving the Bristol football teams and the Bristol and Bath rugby teams. The interview I remember most was with Eric Cantona – he was so charismatic. I admired him for being able to crack jokes not in his native language."
Worst moment "Early days when I pushed the faders on my microphone the wrong way and my sports bulletin was just silence. I was used to the faders we had on my polytechnic course, which went in a different direction."
Off air "I'm a father and a grandfather and live in the Rednal area of Bristol, only a 10-minute walk from the studios. I'm a keen golfer and I volunteer at a Save the Children charity shop."
First radio memory "Peter Jones's commentary when Liverpool won the old First Division back in the 1970s."
Favourite broadcasters "Peter Jones – he could paint pictures. And Zoe Ball. How she manages to be so cheerful so early in the day is amazing."
Ambition "I'd love it if I could commentate on either of the Bristol football clubs in the Premier League."
Dream job "I've been a professional footballer and a sports broadcaster. Anything else would be greedy."
Secret skills "My mother taught me to sew. I now teach my granddaughter."

Face behind the voice

Geoff Twentyman BBC Radio Bristol

Age 61 on 10 March
Current job Presenter of BBC Radio Bristol's Monday to Friday sports show (6pm–7.00) plus the Saturday sports show (2pm–6.00).
CV The son of a Liverpool footballer, he was born and brought up in Liverpool, attending Maghull grammar school. Played professional football for Preston North End and then Bristol Rovers, totalling 350 appearances. When injury cost him a place in an FA Cup tie against Liverpool, BBC Radio Bristol invited him into the commentary box, "And I thought, this could be my future". He quit the game aged 34, studied broadcast journalism at Bristol Polytechnic, then was offered a job sports presenting at Radio Bristol, where he has remained.
Best moment "Covering big matches involving the Bristol football teams and the Bristol and Bath rugby teams. The interview I remember most was with Eric Cantona – he was so charismatic. I admired him for being able to crack jokes not in his native language."
Worst moment "Early days when I pushed the faders on my microphone the wrong way and my sports bulletin was just silence. I was used to the faders we had on my polytechnic course, which went in a different direction."
Off air "I'm a father and a grandfather and live in the Rednal area of Bristol, only a 10-minute walk from the studios. I'm a keen golfer and I volunteer at a Save the Children charity shop."
First radio memory "Peter Jones's commentary when Liverpool won the old First Division back in the 1970s."
Favourite broadcasters "Peter Jones – he could paint pictures. And Zoe Ball. How she manages to be so cheerful so early in the day is amazing."
Ambition "I'd love it if I could commentate on either of the Bristol football clubs in the Premier League."
Dream job "I've been a professional footballer and a sports broadcaster. Anything else would be greedy."
Secret skills "My mother taught me to sew. I now teach my granddaughter."
SIMON O'HAGAN

Face behind the voice

Geoff Twentyman BBC Radio Bristol

Age 61 on 10 March
Current job Presenter of BBC Radio Bristol's Monday to Friday sports show (6pm–7.00) plus the Saturday sports show (2pm–6.00).
CV The son of a Liverpool footballer, he was born and brought up in Liverpool, attending Maghull grammar school. Played professional football for Preston North End and then Bristol Rovers, totalling 350 appearances. When injury cost him a place in an FA Cup tie against Liverpool, BBC Radio Bristol invited him into the commentary box, "And I thought, this could be my future". He quit the game aged 34, studied broadcast journalism at Bristol Polytechnic, then was offered a job sports presenting at Radio Bristol, where he has remained.
Best moment "Covering big matches involving the Bristol football teams and the Bristol and Bath rugby teams. The interview I remember most was with Eric Cantona – he was so charismatic. I admired him for being able to crack jokes not in his native language."
Worst moment "Early days when I pushed the faders on my microphone the wrong way and my sports bulletin was just silence. I was used to the faders we had on my polytechnic course, which went in a different direction."
Off air "I'm a father and a grandfather and live in the Rednal area of Bristol, only a 10-minute walk from the studios. I'm a keen golfer and I volunteer at a Save the Children charity shop."
First radio memory "Peter Jones's commentary when Liverpool won the old First Division back in the 1970s."
Favourite broadcasters "Peter Jones – he could paint pictures. And Zoe Ball. How she manages to be so cheerful so early in the day is amazing."
Ambition "I'd love it if I could commentate on either of the Bristol football clubs in the Premier League."
Dream job "I've been a professional footballer and a sports broadcaster. Anything else would be greedy."
Secret skills "My mother taught me to sew. I now teach my granddaughter."

Face behind the voice

Geoff Twentyman BBC Radio Bristol

Age 61 on 10 March
Current job Presenter of BBC Radio Bristol's Monday to Friday sports show (6pm–7.00) plus the Saturday sports show (2pm–6.00).
CV The son of a Liverpool footballer, he was born and brought up in Liverpool, attending Maghull grammar school. Played professional football for Preston North End and then Bristol Rovers, totalling 350 appearances. When injury cost him a place in an FA Cup tie against Liverpool, BBC Radio Bristol invited him into the commentary box, "And I thought, this could be my future". He quit the game aged 34, studied broadcast journalism at Bristol Polytechnic, then was offered a job sports presenting at Radio Bristol, where he has remained.
Best moment "Covering big matches involving the Bristol football teams and the Bristol and Bath rugby teams. The interview I remember most was with Eric Cantona – he was so charismatic. I admired him for being able to crack jokes not in his native language."
Worst moment "Early days when I pushed the faders on my microphone the wrong way and my sports bulletin was just silence. I was used to the faders we had on my polytechnic course, which went in a different direction."
Off air "I'm a father and a grandfather and live in the Rednal area of Bristol, only a 10-minute walk from the studios. I'm a keen golfer and I volunteer at a Save the Children charity shop."
First radio memory "Peter Jones's commentary when Liverpool won the old First Division back in the 1970s."
Favourite broadcasters "Peter Jones – he could paint pictures. And Zoe Ball. How she manages to be so cheerful so early in the day is amazing."
Ambition "I'd love it if I could commentate on either of the Bristol football clubs in the Premier League."
Dream job "I've been a professional footballer and a sports broadcaster. Anything else would be greedy."
Secret skills "My mother taught me to sew. I now teach my granddaughter."

BBC Radio Wales

Face behind the voice

Geoff Twentyman BBC Radio Bristol

Age 61 on 10 March
Current job Presenter of BBC Radio Bristol's Monday to Friday sports show (6pm–7.00) plus the Saturday sports show (2pm–6.00).
CV The son of a Liverpool footballer, he was born and brought up in Liverpool, attending Maghull grammar school. Played professional football for Preston North End and then Bristol Rovers, totalling 350 appearances. When injury cost him a place in an FA Cup tie against Liverpool, BBC Radio Bristol invited him into the commentary box, "And I thought, this could be my future". He quit the game aged 34, studied broadcast journalism at Bristol Polytechnic, then was offered a job sports presenting at Radio Bristol, where he has remained.
Best moment "Covering big matches involving the Bristol football teams and the Bristol and Bath rugby teams. The interview I remember most was with Eric Cantona – he was so charismatic. I admired him for being able to crack jokes not in his native language."
Worst moment "Early days when I pushed the faders on my microphone the wrong way and my sports bulletin was just silence. I was used to the faders we had on my polytechnic course, which went in a different direction."
Off air "I'm a father and a grandfather and live in the Rednal area of Bristol, only a 10-minute walk from the studios. I'm a keen golfer and I volunteer at a Save the Children charity shop."
First radio memory "Peter Jones's commentary when Liverpool won the old First Division back in the 1970s."
Favourite broadcasters "Peter Jones – he could paint pictures. And Zoe Ball. How she manages to be so cheerful so early in the day is amazing."
Ambition "I'd love it if I could commentate on either of the Bristol football clubs in the Premier League."
Dream job "I've been a professional footballer and a sports broadcaster. Anything else would be greedy."
Secret skills "My mother taught me to sew. I now teach my granddaughter."

Column Fruit Trees

Take Pride of Your Garden, Order Yours Today From Only £7.48 each*

All pictures are for illustration purposes only, actual product may vary

Kilos of ripe fruit bursting with flavour - the way fruit always used to taste - right there in your garden. A joy for children and adults alike.

Look forward to watching delicious fruit grow from the comfort and convenience of your own garden.
Our Column Trees were first developed by a head gardener of a prestigious castle in West Sussex with a passion for organic fruit growing. It took 20 years of development by the Agronomy Institute - the paradise of gardens - to turn their fruit trees into simple, resilient shrubs for planting. Thanks to their marvellous efforts you can now bring the delight of the Column Fruit tree to your garden at home.

Succulent fruits of superior - batch harvested - quality
Advances in agronomic research have allowed our professional growers to cultivate a more natural tasting fruit, one that has all the flavour of fruit as it used to be, before mass production and over farming changed things. Our column fruits are crisp, juicy, sweet and fragrant. You'll be pleasantly surprised to see the jealousy on the faces of your neighbours and relatives. They'll see column after column of succulent zesty flesh growing right on your balcony, terrace or garden – and those irresistible bright colours - all year round. Children (or grandchildren) will love watching your fruit grow, checking them for ripeness, choosing which ones to pick then filling up their baskets. Give your garden a little kiss from nature.

For patios, gardens or terraces - casual or professional gardeners alike. Just add water!
Making the most of your garden with luxurious Column Fruit Trees couldn't be easier. They don't require any special knowledge to plant or keep, all you have to do is add water! What's more they're 100% organic, growing fruit you can share safely with the whole family. It really is child's play! And the cherry on the cake is that they don't require maintenance. Of course if you wish to, you can restrict the height of your 70cm shrub by cutting it regularly: 1 metre, 1.5 metres, 2 metres - you decide.

How are we able to sell our trees from £7.48 when outlets and online retail up to £39 per tree?
The answer is twofold 1) We're driven by the passion that every superior Column Fruit Tree sold makes happier customers and smarter gardens. 2) Once we learned grower's secrets from 20 years of Agronomical research - how to cultivate these beautiful garden shrubs – we then secured our own supply chain. As a result of keeping resellers or separate distributors out of the equation, we can happily offer you our award winning Column Trees at an unbeatable price.

Don't waste a second
The planting period runs from January to April, so don't delay! Buy today and you could be harvesting your fruit very soon - just a few months after planting.

Pick sumptuous fruit ALL YEAR ROUND

INTRODUCTORY OFFER FROM ONLY £7.48 each

Why pay online prices ~~£39.99~~

Our "Bigarreau" column cherry trees (Prunus avium) produce sweet cherries with all the intense flavour of red fruits and unbeatable sweetness.

Our "Conference" column pear trees (Pyrus communis) pro-duce sweet and juicy fruits with green-yellow skin with an incredible fragrance.

Our "Idared" column apple trees (Malus domestica) produce crunchy, juicy, sweet and very fragrant apples.

GUARANTEED
We're confident you won't need it, but for your peace of mind these column trees come with our lifetime guarantee: If for any reason you are not satisfied, simply return your Trees to us at the address listed below - regardless of their condition - and we'll refund your money in full - so there is no financial risk!

10 reasons why tens of 1000's of customers choose our Column Fruit Trees over others

1) Pick fruit all year round
2) Fruit are full of traditional organic flavour
3) Harvest in bunches straight from the trunk
4) Large harvests produced very quickly, no need to wait for years

Dark laughs

Marina Lewycka found fame at 59 with a bestseller about tractors. Now she's taking on Brexit and cyber crime

AFTER MEETING NOVELIST Marina Lewycka, I rush home to change my bank passwords. Her latest novel, The Good, The Bad and the Little Bit Stupid, explores how easily we can be duped online.

Like most of us, Lewycka is constantly sent phishing emails telling her she's eligible for an inheritance. "I think they target me because I'm over 70, a woman and not terribly adept with technology," she smiles.

But actually the scammers don't realise they're dealing with an award-winning writer and academic. "I get these emails full of spelling mistakes and semi-colons instead of colons," she says sternly. "As an ex-English teacher, I know they've got it wrong. And most banks don't spot it."

Back in 2005, Lewycka found fame at the age of 59, with her debut novel A Short History of Tractors in Ukrainian, inspired by the experience of her Ukranian refugee parents.

A very funny black comedy about two feuding sisters who try to save their widowed father from marrying a much younger Ukrainian woman, it was shortlisted for the Orange Prize, longlisted for the Man Booker and won the Bollinger Everyman Wodehouse Prize for Comic Fiction.

It has sold more than a million copies in the UK alone and been translated into more than 30 languages. It's never too late to be a success, she jokes.

Since then Lewycka, now 73, has carved out a reputation for tackling Big Topics with wit and humour – including the exploitation of migrant workers (Two Caravans, nominated for the George Orwell Prize), the financial crash (Various Pets Alive and Dead) and the bedroom tax (The Lubetkin Legacy).

THE AUTHOR
Marina Lewycka at Bradford Literary Festival in 2016

It's not surprising, then, that Brexit was on her hit list. The Good, The Bad and the Little Bit Stupid is set in Lewycka's home town of Sheffield in 2016, just after Britain voted to leave the EU. "It's a state-of-the-nation book, very much written from a northern perspective," she says.

In the novel, when George, 79, reveals he's voted Leave, his wife Rosie, 59, kicks him out – driving him into the arms of the glamorous "Brexit Brenda". Cue a farcical love triangle.

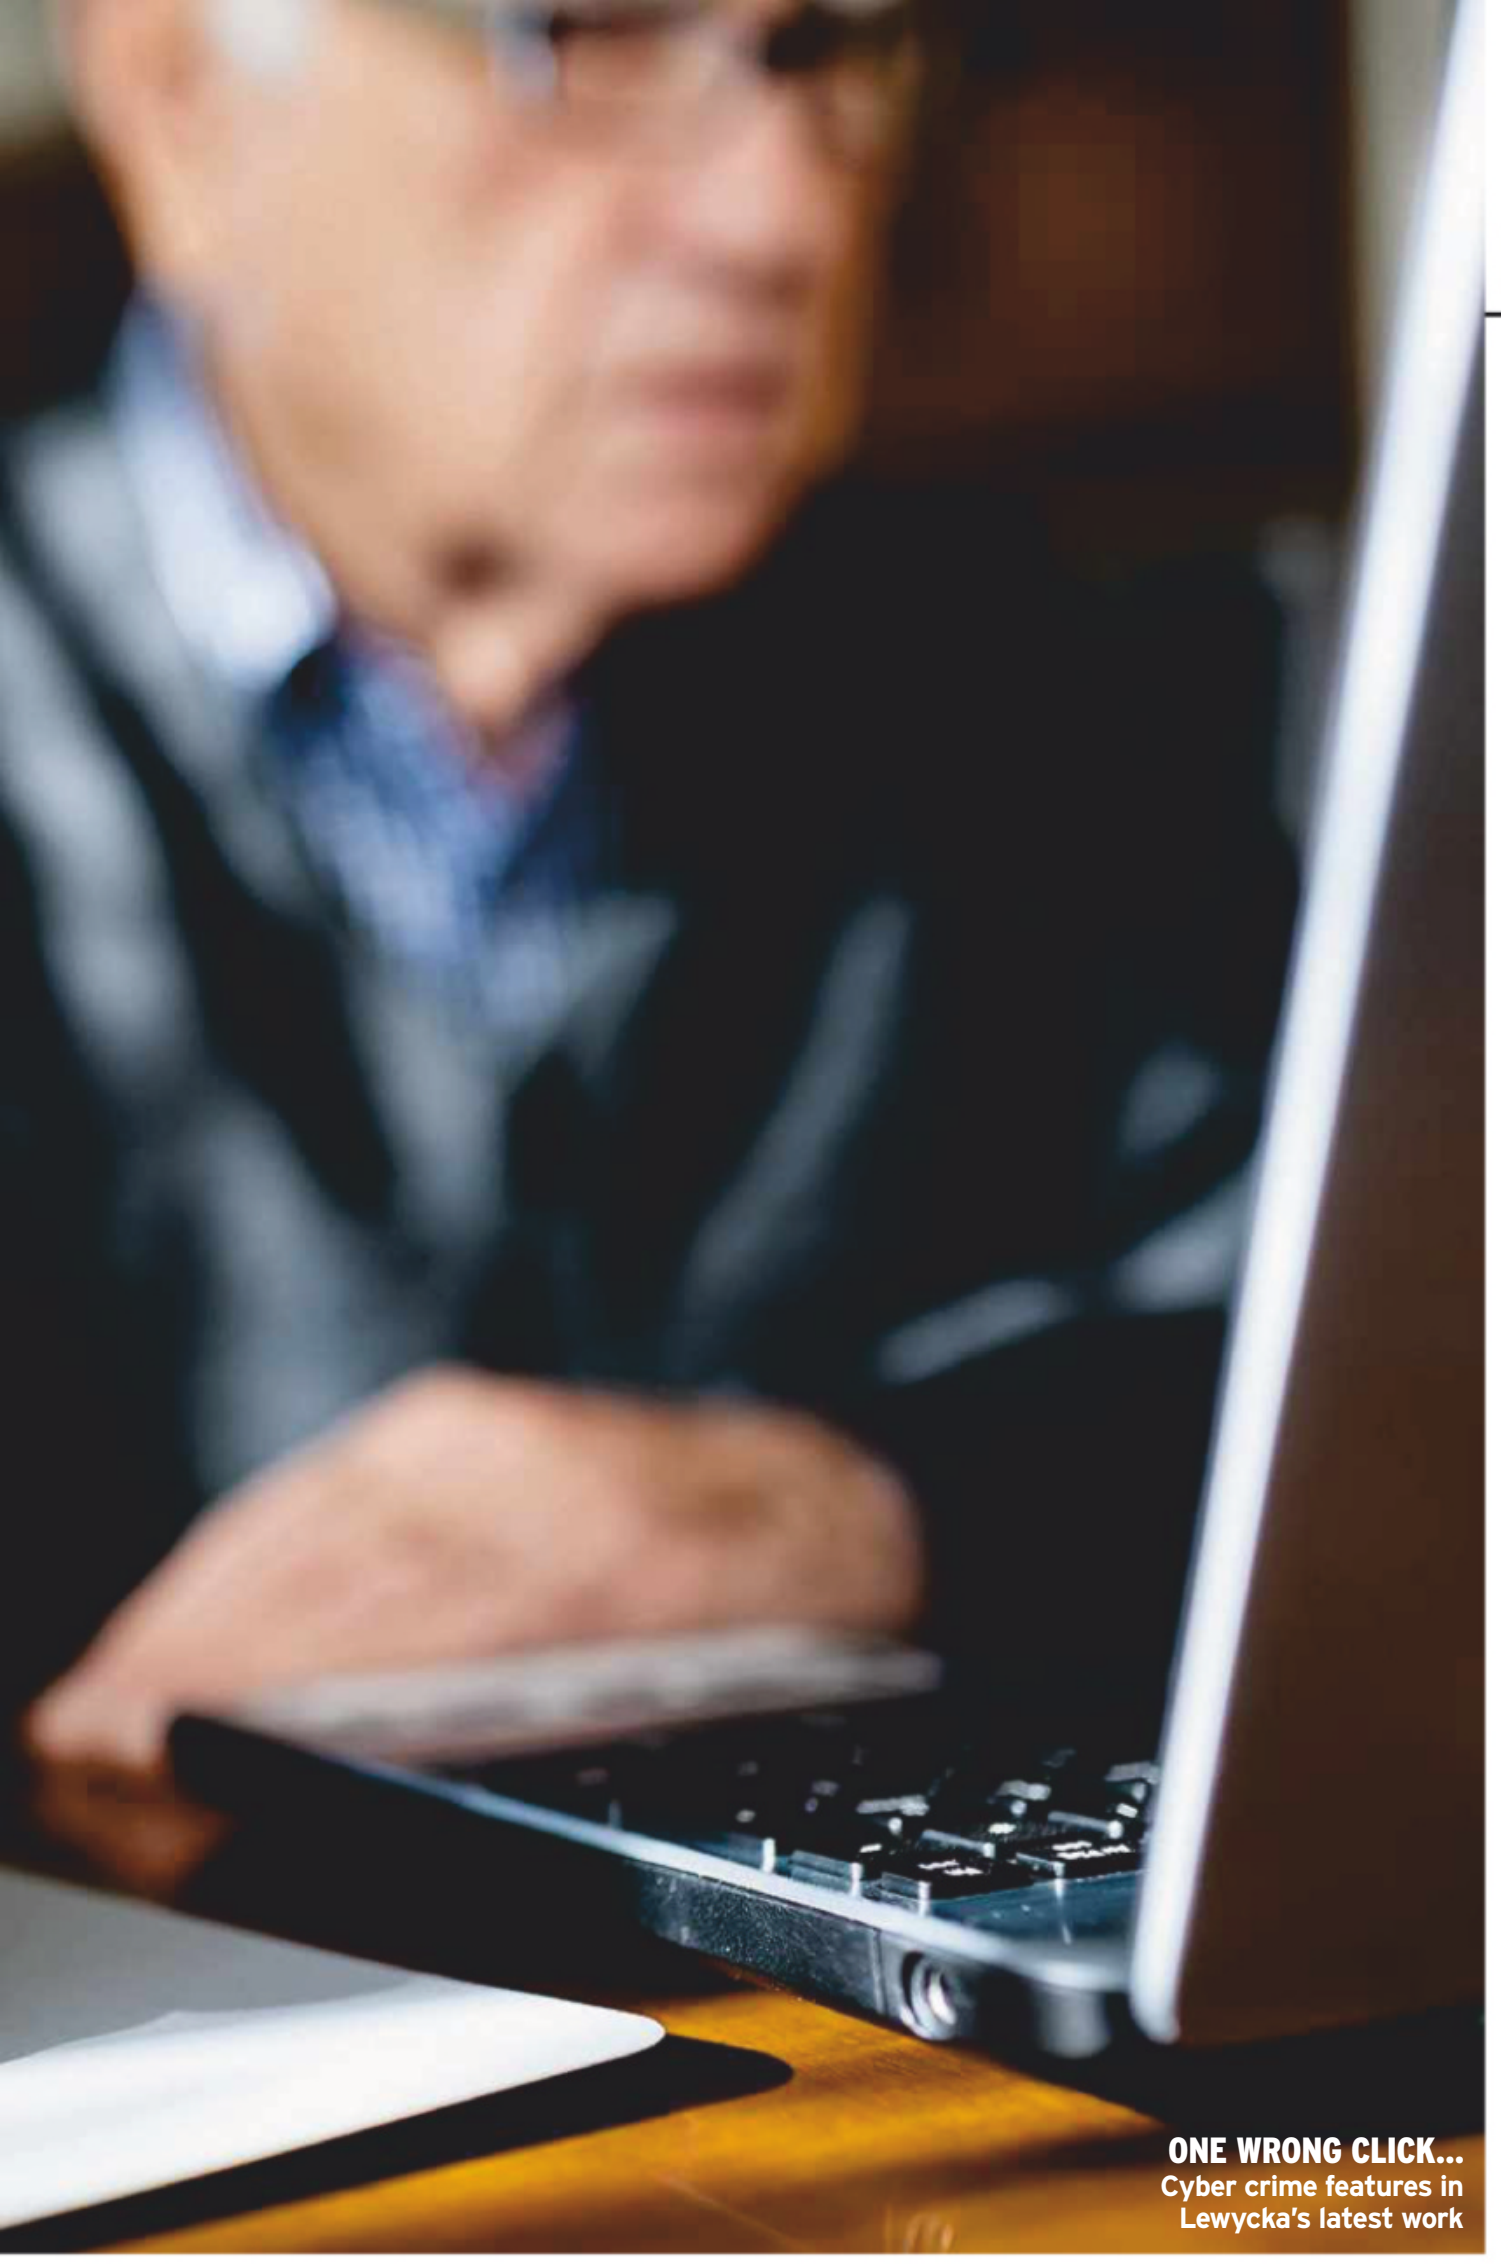

"Lots of people I knew fell out with their partners. The debate became very polarised and aggressive. I wanted to write about that lack of forgiveness, but also show there was a way of moving beyond that." The subject matter is serious, but Lewycka's approach is broadly comic. "I started off being Remain, but I so liked the character of Brenda that I made her stronger and stronger. And she ended up being rather heroic, but slightly crazy."

Initially Lewycka planned to write about the Bitcoin phenomenon in the novel, but while researching the financial industry she became fascinated by cyber crime and identity theft.

'Older people are much more interesting than young people'
MARINA LEWYCKA

Poor vain technophobe George is an easy target – especially when he wins millions on a Kosovan lottery that he only vaguely remembers entering. Pretty soon he has lots of visitors –

Cyber crime features in Lewycka's latest work

Albanian, Russian – desperate to know his mother's maiden name. "People are vulnerable to being fleeced and defrauded in all kinds of ways," says Lewycka, "and it seemed to be part of the corruption of public life in a way."

Born in a British-run refugee camp in Germany in 1946, Lewycka moved to England with her family when she was a baby. She grew up speaking English and Ukrainian, writing poems and short stories: "It was part of my secret world away from my parents."

Her great influences are Chaucer, Shakespeare and John Donne. But it's notable that many jokes in her novels are linguistic, involving mispronunciations and malapropisms from characters speaking English as their second language.

She studied languages at university and started a PhD, but only signed up for a creative writing course after 30 years of unpublished writing and a career lecturing in media studies. The book she began, A Short History of Tractors in Ukrainian, drew on the late-life romantic adventures of her father.

HER NOVELS OFTEN feature older characters who want one last adventure, however unlikely. "I think older people, on the whole, are much more interesting than young people," she says.

She writes honestly about ageing, but she is also dealing with her own frailty. A few years ago she developed a neurological disorder that affects her balance and movement, and her speech sounds slightly slurred. "The thoughts are there," she says, "it's just the words are slow."

It's clearly frustrating for such a vivacious woman: "On the other hand, I'm in my 70s now and I've had a terribly good life, so I don't so much resent it."

And for a novelist, it's a new way of learning about people. "I'm pretty dependent on people's help when I go about with this condition. I say: 'Do you mind if I lean on you as I cross the road?' So I choose them by their body weight – does this person look as if they're going to be solid enough to support me if I lose my balance?" she says, with a peal of laughter.

ONE IN THREE ARE RETIRING IN DEBT IN 2020

How can you finance the retirement you want?

Most of us have an idea of how we'd like our retirement to be. How to fund it, though, is often a different question. You may have been a modest saver over the years and have a reasonable income to cover your day-to-day expenses, but what if debt repayments are holding you back from being retirement ready? With the State Pension Age due to start moving to 66 for men and women this year, the question of how to deal with debt in retirement is becoming a bigger conversation than ever before.

ONE IN THREE RETIRING IN DEBT

Radio Times's partner Key Equity Release has undertaken a unique study into the finances and ambitions of over 1,000 people who are expecting to finish full-time work in 2020. The nationwide study showed that those retiring this year face significant debt.

Out of the one in three retiring in debt this year, the average owed is £17,460; the amount taking three-and-a-half years to clear. However, one in eight expect to owe money for nine years or more, and a third say they will never pay off the money they owe. Of those in debt, 48% still owe money on credit cards, 14% have an outstanding bank loan and 31% will still have a mortgage.

USING THE WEALTH TIED UP IN YOUR HOME

Currently, over 65s in the UK have more than one trillion pounds worth of unmortgaged housing equity and increasingly homeowners are using equity release to unlock the tax-free cash tied up in their home to help fund a better retirement. Remember, you should always think carefully before securing a loan against your home.

Key Equity Release plans involve a lifetime mortgage, which is a loan secured against your home. There are typically no monthly repayments to make, as the loan plus roll-up interest is repaid when the plan comes to an end. The amounts people release vary starting from £10,000, with Key customers accessing £90,000 on average in 2019 – you can release up to 56% of your home's value depending on your age and lifestyle.

Leading equity release experts Key always encourages discussing your decision with family as equity release will reduce the value of your estate and may affect your entitlement to means-tested benefits. However, some of Key's plans offer a guaranteed inheritance feature, allowing you to protect a percentage of your home's future value for your loved ones.

It's important to consider your options

Our partner Key Equity Release are encouraging people to consider their options when it comes to retirement financing. They understand we all have questions and are here to answer them.

CEO Will Hale said:

"It is vitally important that people are not prevented from considering how their largest asset, their home, can support them in retirement."

Property pitfalls

Selling your home? Beware of the changes to Capital Gains Tax, warns Paul Lewis

From April, people selling a home they don't live in could pay more tax and have to pay it more quickly.

Capital Gains Tax (CGT) is charged when you sell something for more than you paid for it. Most people never come across it because there are lots of exemptions and the first £12,000 of gains in the year are tax-free. But it can bite unexpectedly when you sell a home that's not currently your main residence.

The home you live in is always exempt from CGT when you sell it. But a property you don't live in as your main residence is not. So if you sell a holiday home or a buy-to-let, then CGT will be due on the profit, after deducting any expenses of owning it.

The tax can also strike people who have moved out of a home they once shared with a spouse, when that house is sold. And it can hit those who buy a home and move into it before selling their old one: since 2014 they have had just 18 months – it used to be three years – before CGT begins to be charged.

'Tax will be payable 30 days after selling a second home'

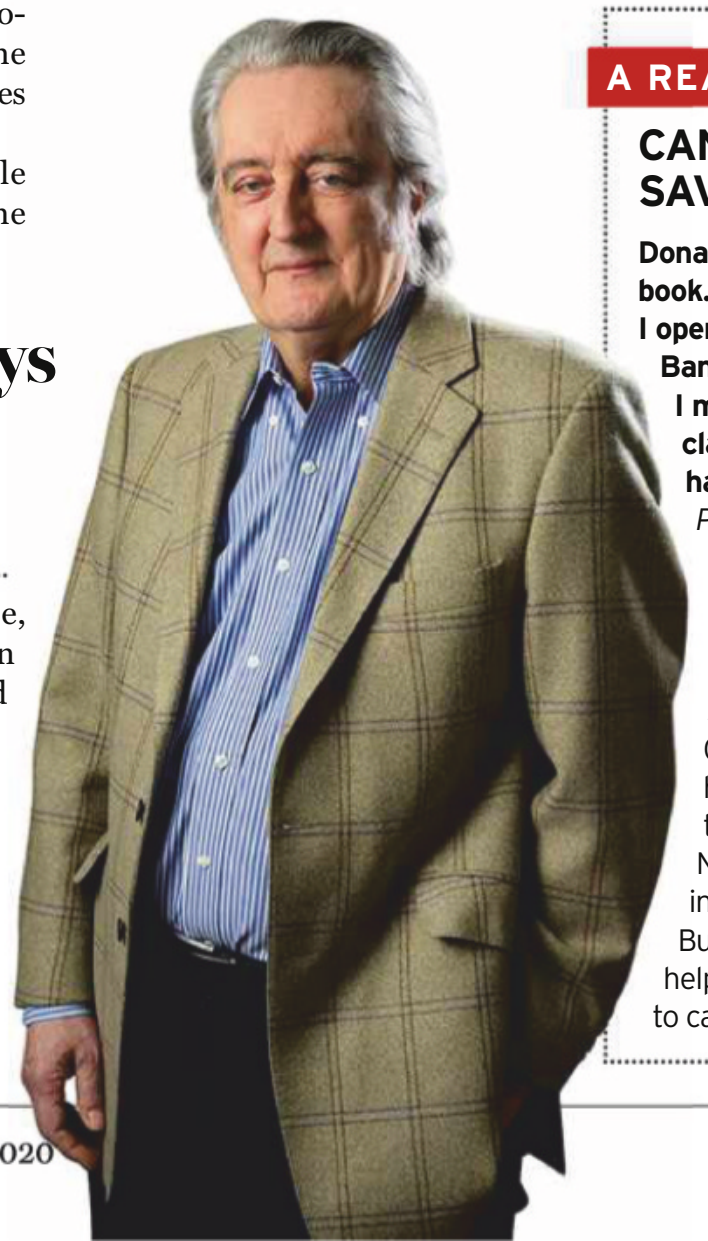

Two new rules apply to property sold on or after 6 April this year. First, the period before CGT begins to be incurred will be halved to nine months. If you own your previous home and your current one for longer than that, CGT will start being charged on a proportion of the gain on the old home, and will grow as time passes.

Second, the tax must be paid sooner. At the moment it's worked out and paid in the next self-assessment period, between ten and 22 months after the sale. From April the tax must be declared and paid within 30 days of the sale or penalties will be charged. That means records have to be kept up to date and the complex CGT calculations done swiftly after the property is sold.

So if you own a second property and plan to sell it, take professional advice and try to complete the sale before 6 April.

CAN I WITHDRAW THE MONEY FROM A 1970s SAVINGS ACCOUNT I'D FORGOTTEN ABOUT?

Donald has found an old bank book. He writes: "In 1973 I opened a National Savings Bank account. The last deposit I made was in 1976. Can I claim this money and would it have been earning interest?"

Paul Lewis says: The National Savings Bank was run by what is now National Savings and Investments (NS&I). So Donald's money is safe. He should call NS&I on 08085 007 007 (he'll need to verify his identity). Without knowing the exact account details, NS&I can't say whether interest will be applied or not. But again, the staff on that helpline number – which is free to call – will know the answer.

NS&I has a lot of information about finding lost accounts, including Premium Bonds, on its website nsandi.com. Just search "tracing service". Banks and building societies will also track down lost accounts for free through their own dedicated website, mylostaccount.org.uk.

After an account has been dormant for 15 years, the money is generally passed to the Reclaim Fund. It eventually goes to the Big Lottery Fund for distribution to good causes and charities. Nearly £600 million has been passed to it so far. However, anyone with a valid claim will still be repaid in full.

Ben Fogle: Make a New Life in the Country
Tuesday 9.00pm Channel 5

AT THE START of the new millennium 20 years ago, Ben Fogle was marooned on an uninhabited Outer Hebridean island for the BBC series Castaway 2000. The groundbreaking reality show documented the year-long efforts of 36 women, men and children to build a self-sufficient community on the treeless, windswept isle of Taransay. For Fogle, it was the start of an enduring love affair with the Western Isles.

"The real star of Castaway 2000 was the Outer Hebrides," he says. "It showed off a part of the world that people don't think about going to because of the weather, and the fact that it's relatively remote. But for me, the landscape and the weather were the highlights, and it gave me the chance to spend a year of my life living sustainably. We grew all our own crops. We harnessed our own energy with a wind turbine and a hydroelectric power dam. I learnt a lot about living a simpler, humbler life."

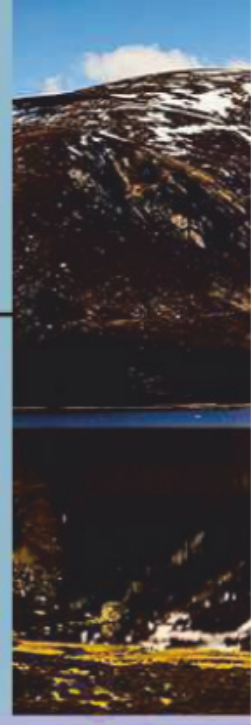

He's been back to Taransay several times – once for his honeymoon – and is planning a reunion with his fellow castaways this summer. In January, he visited the neighbouring island of Harris and performed his stage show Tales from the Wilderness on the beach, then joined 30 hardy swimmers for a dip in the sea. "I went up with my daughter and did a wild, free performance for the islanders as a celebration of the 20th anniversary, which was really moving. I love Harris and that beach, Luskentyre, is one of the most beautiful in the world – and I've been to a lot of beaches."

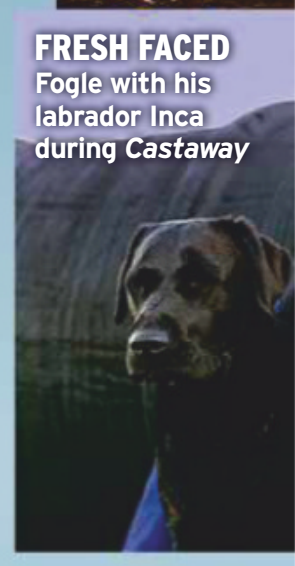

Fogle has another reason to look back fondly on his year as an islander: it launched his TV career. His latest series follows people who have quit the rat race to move to the country. His favourite filming location for the series was in the Highlands, visiting a couple who relocated to an abandoned 200-year-old hotel in a village on the banks of Loch Tummel. "It was just outside the Cairngorms National Park, which is especially beautiful in winter when the peaks are snowy. I've been lucky enough to film pretty extensively around Scotland, and the Highlands are always a highlight. I'm a quarter Scottish myself – my grandfather was Scottish."

Does he ever daydream about starting his own business? "There's something attractive about the idea of being your own boss, but I'm under no illusions as to how much hard work goes into that. But, yes, I love the idea of having my own little boutique hotel in the Outer Hebrides."

In 2011, Fogle tried and failed to raise £2 million to buy Taransay when it came up for sale, but he hasn't totally given up on his ambition of being lord of his own isle. "I'm still fascinated by islands. Taransay is out of the picture, but that doesn't mean I don't still have dreams of one day having an island – maybe sharing it with a local community, coming up with a way of managing the land with minimal impact on the flora and the fauna. I'd love to do that."

FOR THE TIME being, he's happy to spend his weekends and holidays exploring the remoter corners of the British Isles with his wife Marina and children Ludo and Iona (who's named after the Inner Hebridean island). "As a father, I really want my children to understand the country that they come from, and I want them to have explored all of the regions. We encourage them to be close to nature and out in the wilds, and they love it. We're planning to walk all 630 miles of the South West Coast Path next year."

Like many people, he's also planning to do more staycations because he wants to take fewer flights. "I'm trying to reduce my carbon footprint. It's one of the reasons why making shows like this is particularly appealing, because I can remain on these shores and travel by train or ferry. It's far from perfect, but it's a start." CLAIRE WEBB

Every bottle tells a story

It's not just what's inside that matters, says Joe Fattorini

My friend Derek makes wine in Chile. But what most people first notice are his bottles. They don't have labels but are screen printed. And the tops are dipped in red wax over the cork. The bottle number is even handwritten in biro. Just good marketing? Well, it's what's inside the bottle that matters. But what's outside can tell a story.

Derek makes wines in a remote village, with local growers whose lives were changed by Chile's devastating 2010 earthquake. In the ruins of the village, rats ate the first run of labels. But they don't drink paint, so Derek screen-printed his bottles instead. A capsule machine to top the bottles was too expensive, so he just dipped each one in wax. Just before export, each bottle was given a handwritten number.

Baron Philippe de Rothschild was the first producer in Bordeaux to bottle all his wine, at his château in 1924. Everyone else had their wine bottled by merchants in cities like London. But Rothschild bottled his own and commissioned an artist to design the label.

During the war, Rothschild lost his château and was exiled in the UK. He returned to France in 1945 to find his home trashed and his estranged wife dead in a concentration camp. He commemorated the end of the war with a new label, with a V for victory at its heart. And the family has commissioned a new artist every year since (including Picasso and the Prince of Wales). But if you want to buy a bottle of the 1945 Château Mouton-Rothschild, you can expect to pay £10,000–£20,000.

GARY MOYES

Labels matter. A French wine with a picture of a château on the label "tastes" significantly better than the same wine without a château. The cork matters, too. Wine served after you've heard a cork "pop" tastes 15 per cent better than wine served after the "scrunch" of a screwcap.

We are happy to pay more for wines in heavy bottles, imagining they'll be more alcoholic and probably older vintages.

It's easy to dismiss wine packaging as flimflam. But then I think of Derek and Baron Philippe, and remember that sometimes, wine labels tell a story.

Joe Fattorini is a presenter of The Wine Show on Amazon Prime. The first two series are available now; series three is coming soon

Expression of the week – bags of mystery

Despite their reputation for being stern and humourless, the Victorians were fond of wordplay. Many of the terms they produced are descriptive and fun. An umbrella, for example, was a "bumbershoot", a hanky a "snottinger" and a drunkard an "arfarf'anarf" (who'd had more than a couple of halfs). Even their euphemisms could be tongue-in-cheek. The word "trousers" was unthinkable (because of what lay beneath), so they used "Unmentionables", "inexpressibles", "round-me-houses", and "sit-upons" – all verbal figleaves for a word considered far too vulgar to use.

Surely one of the best phrases from the time, however, is one used for sausages. The Victorians dubbed them "bags of mystery" – because, of course, you never quite know what's in them.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

The BBC's space odyssey

IN THE AIR
ISS astronauts can now watch iPlayer

An antenna sent up to the International Space Station means the astronauts now have a better internet service and can use iPlayer. I'd like to know why they're granted access when thousands of us fully licensed viewers are denied it when we're out of the UK?

The BBC's failure to find a way to let overseas users in is bonkers: wouldn't a full streaming service that you could pay to watch abroad provide much-needed revenue? I've heard the arguments about "programme licensing issues", but if the BBC stopped selling their shows to overseas channels they might find many Europeans are happy to pay for high-quality TV and radio in English.

Come on, BBC, roll out the Beeb worldwide and just watch it fly. It's already in space, after all!

Vanessa Farmery Brough, East Riding of Yorkshire

Vanessa Farmery wins a BOSE SoundLink Revolve speaker, in either black or silver. One of BOSE's best-performing portable Bluetooth speakers, it is water-resistant, has a rechargeable battery that plays for up to 12 hours and delivers true 360° sound, wherever you place it in the room. RRP £179.95. bose.co.uk

A PALE SHADOW?

Another Agatha Christie story massacred. The Pale Horse (BBC1) retained the original's 1960s atmosphere, but destroyed the story. I appreciate that to bring a book to the screen does mean some adaptation, but not a total reconstruction of the story.

The appeal of Agatha Christie is the credible story she tells, the subtle clues she gives and her varied and believable characters. For her fans, this version failed on all counts.

Lesley Pote
Ludlow, Shropshire

...I enjoyed Sarah Phelps's adaptation of The Pale Horse – Agatha Christie is the master of suspense and the BBC the master of period drama so it made a good combination. However, again the BBC seems to think that they know better than the bestselling author by including modern twists like swearing that aren't part of the original work. Still, Sean Pertwee, playing Inspector Stanley Lejeune, was wonderful.

Jennifer Shelden
Orpington, Kent

...Oh that effing Agatha Christie! What a potty-mouthed effer she was. Didn't realise she used such language until I watched The Pale Horse. Well, that's the effing BBC, upholder of British culture, for you. What next, Henry the effing Fifth telling Mountjoy to eff off? Not forgetting Doctor effing Who for the children. Is this what I pay my effing licence fee for?

TELLING THE TRUTH

Confronting Holocaust Denial with David Baddiel (17 February BBC2) was remarkable. At a time when the right wing is raising its ugly head again and gaining power in many places, we must retain vigilance and fight for the right to speak the truth.

Two moments struck me particularly: the old man who had lived in the village by the death camp. He said he was 14 when the war ended and told how he heard the screams... And the elderly woman survivor who described her aunt's death. So moving, so sad.

Frances Potter
Brentford, west London

LISTEN TO ZOE!

I am at a loss to understand why Zoe Ball (weekdays Radio 2) has lost so many listeners since she took over the breakfast show from Chris Evans (she spoke of this on Desert Island Discs, 9/14 February Radio 4). She has a great team, they are all involved and make it fun to listen to. There is an interesting mix of items, such as Show and Tell (the kids are brilliant!), Pick Your Own Playlist and the Why Workshop. And while I could never like all of her guests, I enjoy Friends Round Friday and the fact that a listener can go along to meet them. I don't know what else she can do.

Jane Smith
Hastings, East Sussex

... In Ian Wright's Desert Island Discs (16/21 February Radio 4) Lauren Laverne allowed the ex-footballer turned pundit to show his emotions in a most heartfelt manner. This was one of the most memorable and sincere episodes I have heard and I congratulate Radio 4 on it.

THAT'S LIFE

I thoroughly enjoyed the repeat of series one of 90s drama This Life on BBC4. Back then I seemed to think it was a little racy and remember introducing my mum to it when Dad went out!

Now, 20-odd years on, I still love it, and my older ears love the music – it was of its day and seemed like a part of Amy Jenkins's scripts, not just background noise. The scene changes, too, were used so well to indicate the passing of time: wonderful. Will series two be repeated next?

Helen Green
Bingley, Yorkshire

Series one was shown again as a tribute to executive producer Tony Garnett, who died in January. There are no plans that we know of to show series two – which is a pity, as we'd love to see it again.

IT'S ALL ABOUT ME

Watching MasterChef (Thursday, Friday BBC1), I shudder each time John Torode asks contestants to "cook for Gregg and I". Can't someone tell him?

HOME GROWN HIT

Writer and actor Rufus Jones should be applauded for his sitcom Home (Wednesday C4). The latest episodes have been as warm and hard-hitting as the delightful first series, gifting us that stunning combination of belly laughs, wide-eyed amazement and tear-jerking poignancy.

In recent years we have been spoilt with TV gold such as this and Detectorists and Mum, which all deliver laugh-out-loud moments then about-turn and hit you with drama to floor you. They are comedy gems with heart and soul and I love them!

MOOD LIFTER

Outside, under a darkened sky, the wind howls and the rain lashes my window. However, over the past stormy days I've enjoyed the perfect afternoon antidote to the winter blues. Shakespeare and Hathaway: Private Investigators (repeated on BBC1) has brilliant actors and lots of laughs. Please, BBC, give us more soon!

ONCE GOOD, TWICE BETTER

I loved the radio drama 24 Kildare Road (Radio 4), and listened to each episode at least twice, something I've never done before. The storyline – a hunt to discover the identity of an old woman found lying in the snow by two boys out sledging – kept me on tenterhooks. We met people she'd met and members of her family. It was very funny, but also very poignant, with that haunting piano music. It was also brilliantly produced and acted. And what a treasure we have in writer Katie Hims. This was a real gem.

Mary Paterson
Newport, Pembrokeshire

A number of other readers wrote to say how much they admired this drama. You can listen to all ten episodes via BBC Sounds.

IN IT TOGETHER

The latest series of ITV's Endeavour, albeit short, was all that it should be. And the 16 February episode, Raga, was quite a family affair. Not only was Roger Allam's son William in it, playing Gary Rogers, but also William's mother, Rebecca Saire, played the part of his mother in the story.

HALIFAX HEAVEN

I've just spent two weeks watching re-runs of Last Tango in Halifax in preparation for the new series (Sunday BBC1), and I'd forgotten how brilliant it was: the perfect combination of clever writing and talented actors. There wasn't one weak link, right down to the younger members of both families.

As Celia, Anne Reid manages to make a flawed character likeable. And her delivery and timing are perfect. Add to all that one of the most underrated and versatile actors on TV, Paul Copley as Harry, and I'm in heaven.

DRESS TO IMPRESS

Secrets of the Museum (Thursday BBC2) is a great series, showing all the hard work and planning that go into keeping our museums, like the wonderful Victoria and Albert in London, alive and so fascinating for visitors.

The interviews with the staff and the curators of exhibitions have also been full of surprise details, such as how an elderly lady gave her 50s cocktail dress (left) to last year's Christian Dior exhibition at the V&A. My family will certainly walk round any museum with a new sense of appreciation now.

Nigel Cox
Hinckley, Leicestershire

C4 CUT SHORT

For some time now Channel 4, across their various channels, have had the annoying habit of showing a single episode of a foreign-language drama and then moving the rest online. Now, after episode four of French drama The Passenger (7 February More4), they have dropped the series, apparently due to low ratings.

The remaining two episodes are available, I understand, on All4, but as I don't have home internet access I'm left, after investing four weeks in the series, not knowing how it will finish and if it's worth bothering to ▷

YOU ASK US

Who's that mystery man singing the hymns?

Who is the middle-aged man who appears in virtually every episode of Songs of Praise (Sunday BBC1)? In the programme of 9 February, he was in three different congregations, two in England and one in Wales.
Malcolm Jones, London SE26

Now you point him out, we notice this mystery singer turning up all over the country! And no, he's not a member of the production team taking the chance to belt out All Things Bright and Beautiful.

Songs of Praise's music producer Judith Sharp explains all: "Mr Jones has spotted Songs of Praise super fan Trevor who, alongside his wife Christine, regularly attends our Songs of Praise music recordings! Anyone can come along and join the congregation when we're filming, although most of those who do belong to the church we're in or to the local area.

FAMILIAR FACE
You can rely on one dedicated singer to turn up for Songs of Praise...

"Since 2008, when Trevor retired, he and his wife have been travelling from their home in Cambridgeshire to join us at congregations across the UK, from Belfast to Cardiff, Exeter to Penzance, the Isle of Wight to Stockport. Trevor and Christine have a strong faith, enjoy singing and have become part of our Songs of Praise family. It's always a joy to catch up with them at our recordings.

"If you would like to join one of our congregations, we'd love to welcome you – go to bbc.co.uk/songsofpraise and click 'Tickets' at the top of the page."

◁ watch future Walter Presents offerings!

Brian Stabler
Beverley, East Riding of Yorkshire

A spokesperson for Channel 4 replies: "Unfortunately, very occasionally in order to maximise overall performance, late scheduling decisions need to be made. Sometimes we are able to move the programme later in the schedule but in this instance this wasn't possible and the remaining episodes were made available on All4. We apologise to your reader who is without access to the internet for any inconvenience caused."

CORRECTION

Prize Crossword 9 in the issue dated 22 February unfortunately had a clue missing for 1 down.
The clue is: Caught Welsh boy on main road returning to Roman region (9).
Apologies for the omission. We are extending the closing date to submit your solution until Tuesday 10 March.

NOT-SO-GREEN

Did anyone else spot the irony in Our Coast (14 February BBC2)? Adrian Chiles lamented the amount of microplastic covering a beautiful stretch of coastline on Anglesey, yet when he and Mehreen Baig exchanged their customary souvenirs at the end of the programme, she produced a bar of chocolate for him from a plastic carrier bag and the fridge magnets he gave her were wrapped in plastic film!

Adrian, being a football lover, would surely have to agree this was a bit of an own goal.

IN THE FRAME

In Grantchester (14 February ITV) what was the painting above the fireplace in Will's mother's house?
Joe Hayto, via email

RT learns from the Grantchester production team that the picture is a print of a painting of writer and feminist Mary Wollstonecraft (1759–97) by Georgian portraitist John Opie. When she sat for Opie, Wollstonecraft was pregnant with her daughter, Mary Shelley – tragically, she would die giving birth to her. The original oil is on display at the National Portrait Gallery in London. Prints are available to buy at npg.org.uk.

View from my sofa

JOANNE FROGGATT

The Liar and Downton Abbey star on the power of great TV

What’s the view from your sofa?
It’s not ideal, but I watch a lot of TV on my iPad in bed because it’s often late by the time I get home from work. I watch TV on flights, too, because I move around so much. Last time I flew back from Australia I watched an entire series of Big Little Lies.

So no big comfy sofa set-up?
I do have a sofa that I love – it’s a velvet, grey, high-backed sofa. The colour is called “elephant”, which really tickles me.

What sort of TV do you watch?
I’ve just finished the third series of The Crown, which I loved. For a classic go-to I love Sex and the City or an 80s romcom. I also spend a lot of time prefixing my sentences with, “Well, I saw this documentary…” then coming out with a fact. I saw one at Sundance film festival called Crip Camp – it’s one of the most inspiring documentaries I’ve ever seen.

You moved to Hollywood after Downton Abbey, didn’t you?
I was there on and off for a couple of years and made a couple of independent movies. Waking up to the sunshine every day makes a big difference. It was a really positive experience, both for work and lifestyle.

What brought you back?
The first series of Liar. Work naturally brought me home. That’s the life of an actor: if you don’t like travelling, you’re in the wrong job.

And now you’re back with the second series?
Yes, it was so thrilling to be part of something that had such an effect on people, whether that’s people just saying, “We’ve been talking about it at work by the watercooler”, or women opening up to me about their own sexual assaults. It was a very meaningful job for me, that people were able to trust me with their experiences.

Your character Anna in Downton was also raped, but the reaction to that was rather different at first, wasn’t it?
Soap operas tackle subject matters that are intense and difficult and they are on much earlier in the evening, but I think people were shocked that it was Downton that was doing it. It’s important that drama doesn’t shy away from things that are happening in the world. That’s the power of television, to reach people through entertainment.

Which show are you more recognised for?
Day to day I look more like my character Laura in Liar. People only really recognise me from Downton when they hear my voice.

Both are really sympathetic characters with similarities – are those the roles you are drawn to?
I don’t know. I’ve played a killer and other much less sympathetic characters but I suppose those are the two that people remember. Anna was so lovely, I think that does stay with people a bit.

After the success of the first Downton Abbey film, do you think there will be another?
There has been talk of another one but we haven’t been approached about anything yet – I guess just watch this space!

Anna and Laura are intense roles. Do you ever hanker after something a bit lighter?

EMMA COX

Joanne Froggatt stars in Liar, Monday 9pm on ITV

NOTHING TO WATCH?

MY BOOK Eleanor Oliphant Is Completely Fine, which I loved. I think Reese Witherspoon’s company has optioned it.

MY HOBBY I learnt to kayak for Liar, but I haven’t managed to keep it up.

MY GIG Mumford and Sons.
