A MESSAGE FROM THE EDITORS

We meet again...

MOST OF US won't remember VE Day. Some who do write for us in this issue, even if they were barely in short trousers at the time. Men such as David Dimbleby, who reminds us in our cover story this week of the importance of remembrance as well as celebration, and General Sir Mike Jackson, who provides our Viewpoint on page 7. Their memories are understandably hazy.

Unlike Dame Vera Lynn, who was not only very much a witness to history but also provided the soundtrack to it. You can read her interview on page 12. Then, of course, there are those of you whose own memories of 8 May 1945 will this week come sharply into view. We are privileged to share a selection of them on page 10.

The BBC was vital to the nation's spirits then and is marking the event now with an evening of programming. We hope you are able to use our coverage as a guide as to how to share a moment of reflection and celebration, even in isolation.

Since most of us are still stuck indoors, here again are the three ways to guarantee you Radio Times without leaving home.

HOME DELIVERY

Many newsagents will deliver your copy.

A TEMPORARY SUBSCRIPTION

For the next 12 weeks we will deliver Radio Times to your door, for the usual price and without a direct debit. Turn to the inside back cover for details of this no-strings offer.

WHAT I'M WATCHING...

DAME VERA LYNN

‘I’m keeping up with current affairs,’ says Dame Vera. ‘I think it’s important at the moment for us all to listen to the news and understand the government’s advice. I also enjoy old comedies and love murder mysteries like Miss Marple, Poirot, Murder, She Wrote and Father Brown, so I always keep my eye out for those.’

I’ll be singing too – page 12

DAVID DIMBLEBY

‘In lockdown, I follow my own news agenda so I mainly look at the BBC website and read newspapers,’ says the presenter.

‘Sometimes I watch a bit of Alice in Wonderland – aka the 5pm Downing Street press conference – and I like Emily Maitlis’s down-to-earth, you-can’t-fool-me approach on Newsnight.’

Celebrating VE Day – page 8

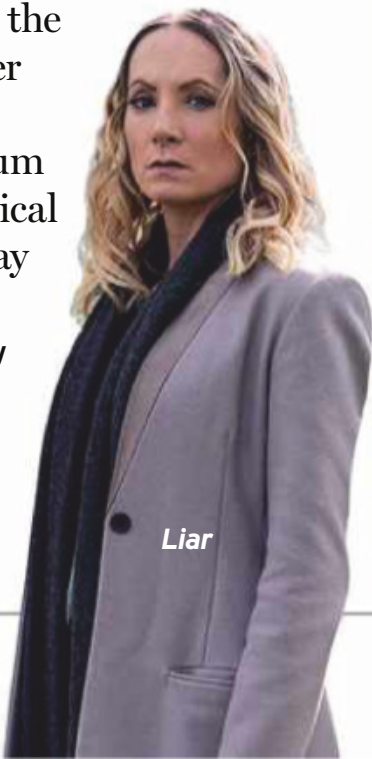

ANNA LAPWOOD

‘I like crime dramas and was hooked on the second series of Liar,’ says the new presenter of BBC4’s BBC Young Musician 2020. ‘My mum is a medic, so I love medical dramas, too. On Saturday evenings when I was a kid I’d watch Casualty with my mum while she did the ironing.’

You can help end avoidable blindness today

Set up a regular gift today to help end avoidable blindness.

Life with cataracts has not been easy for three-year-old Leah, living in East Africa. Unable to see, every morning she sits on an old car tyre, hearing the sounds of her brother and cousins going to school.

She feels left out and alone.

Leah's mother is heartbroken that her daughter is needlessly blind. She knows cataract surgery to restore sight can take just 45 minutes, but many families like hers in low-income countries cannot afford the £95 surgery.

No child should be blind just because they are poor.

You can change this by setting up a small monthly donation to CBM today. Public donations will support CBM's work transforming lives wherever the need is greatest.

A regular gift will help restore the eyesight of children like Leah and help them to attend school and play with their friends. Please help us give sight to children in the world's poorest places.

The new Blitz spirit?

We've changed our lives completely – but bigger decisions lie ahead

I AM JUST ABOUT too young to remember the Second World War. I was born in 1944 and a wartime baby myself; I'm obviously familiar with the ebb and flow of the conflict, not only as a former member of the British Army but also because I have been working on a documentary series to commemorate the 75th anniversary of VE Day this month. Some might find it overdramatic to use war metaphors at this time, but it's a description of this wretched crisis, although not an exact parallel.

Here I am incarcerated, no remission for good behaviour. I'm locked up with my wife, who isn't yet 70, but the poor darling has to put up with me and I missed a granddaughter's birthday yesterday. It's hard. You can't say to a friend, "I'll see you in the pub in half an hour"; we took that freedom for granted and now it's totally constrained. People are fearful and rightly so: it's a nasty way to go. So yes, this virus is an enemy.

In war you want to win, achieve dominance and success against your opponent, and it's true, of course, that we all want to see this thing off. But in a conventional war you have a human enemy, you understand how a human being works. The virus is quite different. We don't know exactly what it is, or only have very limited intelligence, but the friction involved in having to maintain distancing and all the other precautions makes normal life very difficult.

There is a degree to which Churchill's government in the Second World War was able to mobilise the whole people, and the reaction of our nation to these unprecedented circumstances has been heart-warming. But there is one big difference. The wartime government was attempting to galvanise the people to do certain things such as "Dig for Victory". I'm sure the allotments of Britain are being worked very hard right now, but it seems more of a question of getting the country not to do certain things, such as socialise and panic-buy.

THIS MIGHT BE more the territory of a psychologist than an old soldier, but I think the people of Britain have responded in the most commendable way to these privations; the complete volte-face in the way of life does remind me of the example of the generation whose sacrifice we will be commemorating.

I have the view that people aren't stupid, they understand what's at stake and are prepared to put up with a complete lockdown on their lifestyle and, in some cases sadly, their employment, for the greater good.

I think the information effort was pretty well handled during the Second World War and delivered to a more receptive audience because, until perhaps the Battle of Britain in 1940, people were facing an existential threat and worried about a knock on the door and finding a Nazi soldier standing there.

I don't exaggerate. It was the perception of that householder as to the threat that created that state of mind. I suspect that social media today makes the Government's job rather more difficult.

It will get harder and huge calls are going to have to be made not only in Britain but also by every government as to the degree of relaxation set against the risk of a so-called second wave and yet more deaths. It is almost a D-Day moment. Churchill made that decision on the back of his failure at Gallipoli, and it was an enormous decision. I do not underestimate the gravity of the decisions facing HMG. We need to be careful, and to understand, and wish those who must make those decisions good fortune and good judgement.

WHAT WE WATCHED

Cutting It returned for a second series, which once again explored the tangled love lives of stylists at a Manchester salon. Star Amanda Holden was on hand to explain to RT how to look like a real-life hairdresser: "It's all in the pelvis. They don't really move around. You keep your feet planted on the floor and sort of swing around." Other workplace dramas were being ranked for authenticity, with Lenny Henry's Hope and Glory described as "accurate" by a Watford teacher, while a police surgeon commented that Silent Witness was "usually technically correct, although the forensic work is invariably overwhelmed by soapy relationships".

WHAT YOU SAID

Was it style over substance on What Not to Wear on the Red Carpet (BBC1)? Jane Munro of Glasgow thought so as she complained about the way fashion gurus Trinny Woodall and Susannah Constantine "prodded and poked" Jo Brand and Sophie Raworth "like animals at an auction". She even had a suggestion as to how the hosts could connect with the real world: "Perhaps they should spend a week shadowing some care workers in a nursing home or cleaners in a hospital ward, who generally have neither the time nor the income to worry about how they look while doing their jobs!" DAVID BROWN

David Dimbleby on the power of Remembrance and why we must mark the 75th anniversary of VE Day – even in isolation

I WAS ONLY SIX years old at the end of the Second World War. My memories of it are hazy. I remember hearing the sound of a flying bomb overhead, seeing a crashed enemy aeroplane in a field and, at a time of severe rationing, developing a taste for mashed swede. VE Day passed me by, perhaps because my father was away in Germany reporting on Hitler's downfall and we weren't yet ready to celebrate.

In the years that followed I have worked on various programmes about the war, from Dunkirk to D-Day, describing the bravery of the armed forces. But it wasn't until I started doing the annual commentary at the Cenotaph 20 years ago that the human cost of the war really came home to me, as I heard year after year the voices of those who had survived and the families of those who had died.

There was a moment at the beginning of this century when I wondered whether the Cenotaph service still meant anything to a younger generation. The end of the Second World War was, after all, a long, long time ago. But then came 9/11 and the war in Afghanistan. Our television screens brought news of young men and women being killed in action or returning home severely injured. At the Cenotaph we saw the faces and heard the voices of those who had terrible injuries, witnessed the courage and determination with which they were rebuilding their lives and saw the distress of young families bereaved. It reminded us all of what earlier generations had suffered. No one could any longer think of war as something remote, something it was time to forget.

WE CAN STILL

So it seems fitting that, on this 75th anniversary of the end of the war in Europe, we take a moment to commemorate the sacrifices the country made. Friday 8 May was meant to have been a nationwide day of celebration, with a service in Westminster Abbey and other churches, and street parties. The lockdown has put an end to all that, but we will still have a chance to celebrate – not out in the streets, but at home, through television.

In VE Day: an Evening Celebration at 8pm on BBC1, we will hear again the speech that King George VI broadcast in 1945 from a London he called “war battered, but never for one moment daunted or dismayed”. He asked the nation to join him in an act of thanksgiving, remembering the men and women who had laid down their lives: “We have come to the end of our tribulation and they are not with us at the moment of our rejoicing... Let us salute in proud gratitude the great host of the living who have brought us to victory.” We were, he said, upheld through nearly six years of suffering by “the knowledge that everything was at stake: our freedom, our independence, our very existence as a people.”

EARLIER THAT DAY Winston Churchill had spoken of how Britain fought alone for a whole year, but “was not down-hearted and had no thought of quitting the struggle”. Of victory, he said: “In all our long history we have never seen a greater day than this.”

Both were at pains to acknowledge that the war was still being fought in the Far East, against Japan. “We may allow ourselves, Churchill said, “a brief period of rejoicing; but let us not forget for a moment the toil and efforts that lie ahead.”

The rejoicing on VE Day lasted for two days, with dancing and singing in the streets and the pubs open until late. Outside Buckingham Palace the Mall was thronged with crowds calling for the King and Queen, who came out onto the balcony to acknowledge the cheers eight times. Princess Elizabeth and her sister Margaret went down to mix with the crowd. “One of the most memorable moments of my life,” she said later.

In a more muted way we’ll be celebrating that victory again, joining in with singing some of the same songs, including Vera Lynn’s We’ll Meet Again [see next page]. Today we’re being called on to unite once again, to make a different kind of sacrifice, for our own self-preservation. But 8 May gives us a chance to pause in our isolation and remember the sacrifices a previous generation made; and to celebrate, as they did, the end of a long war and the 75 years of peace in Europe it brought us. ▷

CELEBRATE

VE DAY remembered

From hearing daddy was coming home to hanging out fairy lights, RT readers recall the day the blackout ended

My parents, Owen and Iris, met in Trafalgar Square. My father – a conscientious objector during the war and a member of the Fire Service – was lead trumpet player in a British jazz band called George Webb's Dixielanders, who were playing on one of the plinths.

My mother, who was still in uniform, had served in the Royal Signals Corps based in central London. She loved jazz and, when George asked for requests, she immediately called out, "Muskrat Ramble!" – whereupon my father picked her up and sat her on the corner of the plinth. They married seven months later.

My mother never told me this until I came home on 1 January 1966 to tell her that I had met the man I wanted to marry, at midnight on New Year's Eve... in Trafalgar Square!

Rebecca Bryce
Bristol

I was nine years old on VE Day and I can remember the gratitude and relief my mother felt at the knowledge that all those years of anxiety were now over, and my own excitement that "Daddy will be home for good". I remember the flags and the tables set out for the street parties, but I wasn't allowed to go to one. My mother said she would celebrate when the war with Japan was over, but not while our men were suffering in Japanese prisoner-of-war camps. I spent the day climbing trees and picking bluebells, and was very contented.

Sylvia Thompson
Romsey, Hampshire

My father had been killed in an air raid in 1940, so for us the end of the war didn't mean that he'd be coming home. I was 14 and living with my widowed mother. In the afternoon we took some flowers to the churchyard where my father was buried and in the evening we went for a walk to see how others were celebrating. We were thankful that there would be an end to the fighting and bombing, but I think it's important for people to realise that, for many of us, the end of the war didn't mean that life would go back to what it was before 1939.

Pamela Buckingham
Epsom, Surrey

I was just 13 on 8 May 1945 and had lived in Orpington throughout the war, sleeping in our air-raid shelter at the end of the garden during the Blitz. I took our Christmas tree lights (consisting of 20 12-volt bulbs, wired in series) and put them on the front of our house in a V for Victory sign. There was a bare wire and I had my first electric shock! That evening there was a celebratory party in a neighbour's garden and someone said to me, "Michael, you must always remember today." I do.

FATEFUL MEETING

Owen and Iris's wedding in December 1945 – they met in Trafalgar Square on VE Day

THE GREATEST DAY

Prime Minister Winston Churchill makes his victory radio broadcast on 8 May 1945

VE DAY
75th Anniversary

I was 18 and at secretarial college in London, and we heard Churchill's speech during prize-giving. Later, a handful of us went out into the West End to join the celebrations. Everyone was dancing and singing, but we had a teacher with us as a chaperone so we had to be well behaved!

I can remember being offered bottles of alcohol along the Mall, which I pretended to drink, and there was someone up a lamppost in Leicester Square who started stripping off and chucking his clothes down – but a shriek went up and he had to come down. We were out until about 3am, swept along with the euphoria of it all. Joyce Williams Newport, Gwent

Before VE Day I had never been out after dark. I was nine years old and had no knowledge of anything other than the blackout, so imagine my excitement at being taken for a walk when it was dark! My mother, my nanny and my sister set off through our village in Cheshire, all holding torches, and, oh! my goodness, the lights were on in all the windows and, magically, I could see people inside. Truly, it was one of the most exciting evenings of my life.

Everyone was talking about the war coming to an end but, for me, it was the beginning of something much more exciting – lights. I'm now 84 and it's all as vivid to me as 75 years ago.

Ann Holloway
Saffron Walden, Essex

I was ten years old and a few of us decided to build a giant bonfire in our village. The news spread and by mid-morning children appeared from all over with prams, carts and wheelbarrows loaded with all kinds of stuff. The local garage proprietor gave us two large oil drums, which were full of old sump oil, and a farmer donated a load of straw.

At 8pm as the sun sank below the horizon we lit our bonfire, to a huge cheer. Late in the evening as I climbed the stairs to my bedroom I halted on the landing and through the window could see, for the first time in years, the surrounding houses all lit up. Five and a half years of blackout had come to an end.

Lawrence Crisp
East Wittering, West Sussex

On VE Day I was at Meiktila in Burma with the 14th Army HQ. We had little to celebrate as our war wouldn't end until August. As a radio mechanic, I fixed up a loudspeaker system to broadcast Churchill's speech to soldiers who were not on duty. General Slim also addressed us, saying he hoped our victory would not be long in coming.

Dennis Newland
Purley, Surrey

I was born in February 1919 and worked in London from 1938 to 1949. I experienced the Blitz, the V1s and the V2s. On VE Day, as we made our way along familiar streets, we passed acres of desolate bombsites, ruined buildings and patched-up homes. We saw a middle-aged couple sitting on a wall, and the woman said, "What happens now?" Exactly our thoughts. A whole generation of young men and women weren't trained for peacetime employment. For young adults aged 18 to 24, where had those six years gone?

Mary Lawson
Kirkintilloch, East Dumbartonshire

I'm 81, but I can remember VE night so clearly, even though I was only six. My mother and I lived with my grandparents, and that night I could hear my mother sobbing and my grandmother trying to pacify her. My father had been killed in the war just a month before this.

In my childish innocence I didn't realise the full tragedy of it all, as I had only met him briefly, twice, when he was on his leave. Only as I grew older did I understand what had been the cause of my mother's wailing on that VE night.

Sheina Burns
Shaw, Lancashire

STREET PARTY

But one-year-old Ian Jones from Manchester was more keen on the cake...

I'm afraid I have no memories of VE Day, but apparently I was busy celebrating my first birthday. I've been told since that we had a great party in the street where I lived in Prestwich, Manchester – I'm the baby with the blond curly hair in the high chair!

Ian Jones Manchester ▷

The highlight of VE Day for me was the party tea. I vaguely remember jelly, which is all a young boy could desire. In the evening a huge bonfire was built in the road, the heat of which was so intense that it melted holes in the tarmac. A few yards down the street the Grand Dance [pictured above] was held. I think I went to bed very late that night.

John Smith
Stamford, Lincolnshire

My husband was in the Royal Navy and took part in the VE Day parade. In parts it was a difficult day because the people we were cheering were the survivors – and all you could think about were those who were lost.

We walked all the way home to Balham in south London (about five miles), but there were parties in every street so it wasn't a straightforward journey, and there was a lot of drinking done. I was all right as I'd spent over three years in the Women's Land Army and one of the many things we'd learnt to do was drink Scotch!

'I'LL BE SI

Dame Vera Lynn may be 103 – but she still has a song in her heart and it's one we're all invited to join in with

Do you remember how you celebrated VE Day in 1945?

I was at home in East Ham [in London] with my family and we celebrated in the garden.

When you first recorded We'll Meet Again, in 1939, did you have any inkling that it would be a big hit?

I never really thought about success or popularity when I was making a song, I just knew that I felt a strong connection with the lyrics straightaway. They really captured the mood and feeling of the country as we sent our boys off to war, not knowing when they'd return. It was so important that the lyrics were positive, and that they looked ahead to happier times when we could all reunite.

Why do you think it's endured all this time?

I never thought that people would still enjoy my music so many years later, but I'm delighted that We'll Meet Again has comforted people during many difficult times – not just during the war or this latest crisis. I think the fact that it has remained so popular should be a reminder to us all that tough times come and go, but hope remains.

What did you think when the Queen referred to the song in her address to the nation about the Covid-19 crisis, on 5 April?

I watched with the rest of the country and thought it was a great encouragement during these difficult times, but I wasn't aware that Her Majesty would use the lyrics at the end of her speech! I support her message of keeping strong together when we're faced with such a terrible challenge. Our nation has faced some dark times over the years, but we always overcome.

The song lyrics, by Ross Parker and Hughie Charles, were written for a wartime audience. Why do you think they're relevant today?

I think the lyrics speak to a universal feeling of loss, regardless of age, time or place. They remind us all just how important it is to keep hope alive. However bad things get, we will always all be together again. We need to keep smiling through and rely on one another to get through this.

We're all invited to tune into BBC1 at 8pm on Friday 8 May to sing We'll Meet Again together across the nation. Will you be joining in with a few bars?

I'm delighted that the BBC has found a way to commemorate the 75th anniversary of VE Day. I know there were many plans all around the world that have unfortunately been disrupted by the virus. It is wonderful that we can all still remember our brave boys, their sacrifices and their victory. I will definitely be watching and singing along. TERRY PAYNE

IF THERE'S ONE thing the current lockdown has reinforced, it's the British public's love of a good quiz. So it's arguably perfect timing for the BBC's The Great British Intelligence Test to hit our screens – a Horizon special that not only gives the viewing audience a chance to test their collective brainpower but also underlines quite how important it is to keep our little grey cells ticking over.

Or, as co-presenter Michael Mosley puts it: "Your brain is a bit like a muscle – and it's a case of use it or lose it."

The programme is built around results from an online test devised by leading scientists and billed as one of the largest of its kind ever undertaken: so far, 250,000 people around the UK have tried it (You can still try it for yourself, at bbc.co.uk/intelligence-test).

Those results include:

- Verbal intelligence – in particular the number of words we know – gets better with age, improving into our 70s and 80s.
- High fruit and vegetable consumption is linked to better verbal intelligence and problem-solving abilities
- Playing computer games – particularly the shoot-'em-up variety – improves spatial skills and so-called working memory

"What's nice about this test is that we are looking at a range of things that contribute to intelligence – everything from cognitive skills like problem-solving to memory and verbal ability – but also combining them with lots of supplementary questions, enabling scientists to make quite specific findings," says Mosley.

THE GOOD NEWS FIRST: while cognitive decline with age is inevitable, there is much we can do to slow it down: diet, exercise, learning to flex our brains in new directions – all of them are powerful tools in our personal armoury.

"Our brain is not this fixed object that we have no control over," says Mosley's fellow presenter, mathematician Dr Hannah Fry. "It's continually evolving and changing as we age – and we have the power to affect it for the good or the bad. That was a huge take-home for me."

Mosley adds, "You can't turn into a genius overnight, but the power is in your hands to stay sharp as the years pass and that in turn will assist your longevity: people who score well on intelligence tests tend to live longer, age better and are more likely to do well in life."

Mosley, 63, fared best in the verbal elements of the test while, surprisingly perhaps, Fry, 36, struggled memorising numbers. "I felt a little ashamed of myself given my profession," she laughs. Other discoveries, though, give pause for thought: not least the suggestion that modern lifestyles are starting to impact negatively on our mental acuity.

Michael's Tips

LEARN TO DANCE You don't need to be perfect, but the act of challenging yourself to do something different is very good for your brain. I took up Latin classes recently with my wife Clare.

GO FOR WALKS, BUT GET YOUR HEART RATE UP An amble round the block isn't going to do the trick – you do need to push yourself. Climb hills and vary your pace.

TAKE UP REGULAR RESISTANCE EXERCISES Squats and press-ups are really good for blood supply to the brain. There is a good correlation between grip strength and IQ – I was delighted to discover I have the grip strength of a 20-year-old because I do a lot of press-ups.

EAT A MEDITERRANEAN DIET It's the best-tested diet on the planet, shown to both delay the onset of dementia but also boost your overall physical and mental health. That means lots of oily fish, nuts, olive oil and legumes.

“One of the striking things that we touch on in the film and which I’ve known about for a little while,” says Mosley, “is that while average IQ scores have risen three points for every decade since the 1930s as a result of improvement in food and education standards, this stopped sometime in the 90s, and they have been going down ever since.

“Basically, we are eating more junk, we are fatter, we have higher rates of metabolic disease – and that means that the scores are beginning to fall.”

Another striking finding was the impact of social media. “I was taken aback by the incredibly close correlation about the amount of time you spend on social media and expressions of depression and anxiety,” Mosley says. “We’ve all imagined it’s pretty bad for our mental health – but no one has done a study this big. It makes you worry about the coming generation.”

‘Our brain is not this fixed object we have no control over’

Fry – a self-confessed social media enthusiast – was so spooked that she immediately deleted all apps from her phone. “And you know how your phone tells you the number of times you have used it over the week? Well, my usage dropped by 80 per cent in that week,” she says. “Then the lockdown happened and sadly that went out the window. But it has been at the back of my mind.”

For Mosley, meanwhile, taking part in the show has reinforced his long-standing conviction about the link between physical health and brain power. “Basically, what’s good for your heart is good for your brain – and the opposite,” he says. ISOBEL JAMES

READ MORE It doesn't matter what you're reading, but the act of reading in itself is such an important way of keeping the brain active.

LEARN A SECOND LANGUAGE This is something that really shows up in the studies: people who take up a language, no matter how late in life and how good they are at it, keep their brain thriving.

LIMIT TIME ON SMARTPHONES The link between use of social media in particular and anxiety and depression was striking.

GET A PET People who had cats tended to have better emotional intelligence. It's unclear whether owning a pet makes you more emotionally intelligent or whether those people happened to have a cat – but either way it seems it's a good thing to do.

MY A TEAM

Being different is a virtue, says The A Word's writer Peter Bowker, as he introduces his primetime stars, Leon Harrop and Sarah Gordy

'The A Word is better because Leon and Sarah are in it'

PETER BOWKER

HIS TABLET PRECARIOUSLY balanced on an ironing board, Peter Bowker is talking over videolink about The A Word's high-wire act: putting disability at its heart, without making a big deal about it. While his show is ostensibly about a boy with autism and his family's responses to it, actor Leon Harrop is carving out an increasingly prominent role as the show enters its third series.

He plays Ralph, a young man who, like him, has Down's syndrome and forms a close bond with his mother's new partner, played by Christopher Eccleston. While the first series tackled denial and the second reflected acceptance, the theme of the third is a celebration of independence, which is epitomised by Ralph planning a wedding and a future with his fiancée, Katie (his co-star Sarah Gordy).

Bowker worked as a special needs teacher for 12 years and has returned to the theme of disability repeatedly, from 2002's Flesh and Blood (with Eccleston as an adoptee discovering his birth parents have severe learning disabilities) to the 2014 Bafta-winning Marvellous, starring Toby Jones as a man who defies his learning disability through sheer force of personality. Even so, Bowker is surprised and heartened that a drama that might once have sat on BBC2 or Channel 4 is part of BBC1's primetime schedule, and a successful part at that.

"The increasing visibility of people with disabilities in the community and on screen opened the door for a drama like this," he says, "and it's been lovely to see television embrace a more irreverent approach to disability. Flesh and Blood was very much an issue drama, but Marvellous reassured the BBC that you could do something with disability at its heart that was playful and that people would respond to."

DOES IT SYMBOLISE the wider embrace of a one-time taboo by mainstream television? "I grew up in the era of Play for Today, where disability was part of a character's tragic trajectory and certainly not portrayed in any sort of positive light. Things have improved a lot since then, although you always have to be wary that people are writing a character and not a gimmick. There's a way to go in terms of representation on screen and in the crew."

Bowker has ideas on how to expedite that process, having taken part in a workshop for people with disabilities, run by wheelchair-using actor Cherylee Houston (Coronation Street's Izzy Armstrong). "Technology like voice recognition is definitely helping writers with disabilities, but we need to get to a place where they're submitting a script that isn't about their disability."

"Those with physical disabilities, some of whom were crew members or wanted to be writers or directors, said that non-disabled people shouldn't worry about getting the terminology wrong or be afraid to ask questions. Communication is the key."

Above all, the idea of difference as a virtue bears repeating: "Digging in the talent pool is no bad thing. The A Word is better because Leon and Sarah are in it." GABRIEL TATE

DANCE EVERY day," says Leon Harrop, talking alongside his mother Tania from their home in Royston, Greater Manchester. "Tragedy by Steps is my favourite. Pete saw me do it at the wrap party for the first series."

The part of Ralph came about after Leon worked with Bowker on his 2014 Philip Glenister series From There to Here, which itself came after a memorable TV debut.

"I liked acting because I wanted to work with different people," says Leon. "My special school got a call about [Jimmy McGovern series] The Street. I auditioned, got the part and worked with Stephen Graham and Maxine Peake, then it snowballed. Moving On, No Offence, The A Word, Brassic with Michelle Keegan, my favourite actress! That made my day to work with her."

"When he did The Street, everyone said, what else has he been in?" marvels Tania. "When we said it was his first time, they didn't believe us. He doesn't have a nervous bone in his body."

"I do like to show off sometimes," Leon admits. "I do like the attention."

Having clocked Leon's innate showmanship, naturalism and fine comic timing on camera, Bowker expanded the role to build on his mischievous, affectionate bond with Eccleston off screen. "I call him Bastard No 1 and he calls me Bastard No 2!" Leon roars. "He says he learnt a bit about doing comedy from me, that I steal all the scenes and they just stand by my side."

While he's never encountered prejudice at work, he has on occasion in public; those occasions are in part balanced by the number of selfies he's asked for ("I thrive on those"). Unlike Ralph, he has not yet considered independent living – "I've got my family, and I see my girlfriend at social clubs" – instead preferring to focus on the work.

His dream is to finesse his profile from The A Word into a part on Coronation Street. "They haven't called yet," he laughs. "It's my favourite show, so I'm still waiting. And I want to work with Dwayne Johnson, the Rock."

"You've got some high hopes," smiles Tania. "You've got to have dreams, haven't you?"

"Yes," says Leon, before pondering what advice he'd give to other young actors with disabilities. "Never give up, work on it and hope you get it. Learn the words. Never think you can't do something. I'm living my dream."

"BOX TICKING MAKES US LOOK LIKE CARDBOARD CUTOUTS. WE'RE NOT"

SARAH GORDY PLAYS KATIE

PROFESSIONAL ACTOR for almost two decades, Sarah Gordy is also a model, a dancer, Mencap's first celebrity ambassador with a learning disability, the first woman with Down's to receive an MBE and the first person with Down's to receive an honorary degree from a British university (Law, from Nottingham). She's also not inclined to rest on her laurels.

"The A Word is like a dream come true," she says from her home near Lewes, East Sussex, mum and acting coach Jane by her side. "Katie is a joyful part, although I had to do a lot of work to read her lines and see what her life was like."

Sarah's way into her characters is through their particular smell. For Katie, it was Lidl's own-brand perfume Suddenly, reflecting both her fastidiousness and necessary prudence. This love of building characters was fostered early.

"It started when my mum read books to me and my sister," she says. "I could picture the characters in my head, and we loved to make masks and perform for the family at Christmas."

Even so, acting for Sarah was as much about enjoyment and personal development as it was pursuing a professional career.

"You can learn anything through storytelling," says Jane. "Sarah was comfortable on stage from her first nativity, happy to play Mary or a sheep – there's never been any ego. She switches between the two programmes running in her head, one for her character and one for herself. And you totally believe everything you say in character, don't you?"

"Yeah," nods Sarah. "I go into a different world. It's nothing to do with my Down's syndrome, it's about the person."

A growing reputation in amateur dramatics brought Sarah to the attention of ITV when they were casting an episode of Peak Practice. Since then there have been parts in Doctors (in which she brought the crew to tears), Call the Midwife, Upstairs Downstairs and Strike, while on stage she's performed at London's Arcola and Manchester's Royal Exchange. Bowker watched her in Ben Weatherill's Jellyfish at the National Theatre, playing a woman with Down's attempting to hide her relationship with a non-disabled man from her domineering mother, and knew from her "luminous presence" that he wanted her as Katie.

Sarah's antennae are acutely tuned to any sense of being patronised. "Box ticking makes us look like cardboard cutouts, but we're not. We're all capable of doing what we can do."

While her abilities are clear, the problem remains one of opportunity, but Sarah says there are more openings now than there were in her childhood, when she saw no one like her on television.

Accordingly, she has big ambitions, hoping to work with Judi Dench, play shepherdess Phoebe in As You Like It, bring her character from Jellyfish to television and bag a part in Fantastic Beasts. But with success, Jane worries, comes greater potential for disappointment. "The more respect she gets and the more she becomes like just another actor, the more likely it is that someone will write a really horrible review. She'll have to take it in her stride."

"I will," adds Sarah. And who would doubt her? GT

WRITER JEFF POPE is well used to depicting real-life events in his work, having previously brought the Hatton Garden heist and the Moors murders to the screen. But never before has he been tasked with dramatising the news at this kind of pace. ITV's Isolation Stories have been conceived, written, shot and now broadcast within the space of a month, a process that Pope admits has been "a mad scramble".

The inspiration came after he, his wife Tina and three sons all contracted the Covid-19 virus, with Pope spending sleepless nights monitoring Tina's accelerated breathing as she lay suffering in bed. "She got it very bad. It was frightening. Thankfully, she's now recovered, but it got me thinking about these vivid incidents that have happened to people during isolation."

The result is four short dramas produced by Pope about life in lockdown, filmed in the homes of stars he's worked with before, like Sheridan

'My wife got it bad; it was frightening but got me thinking'

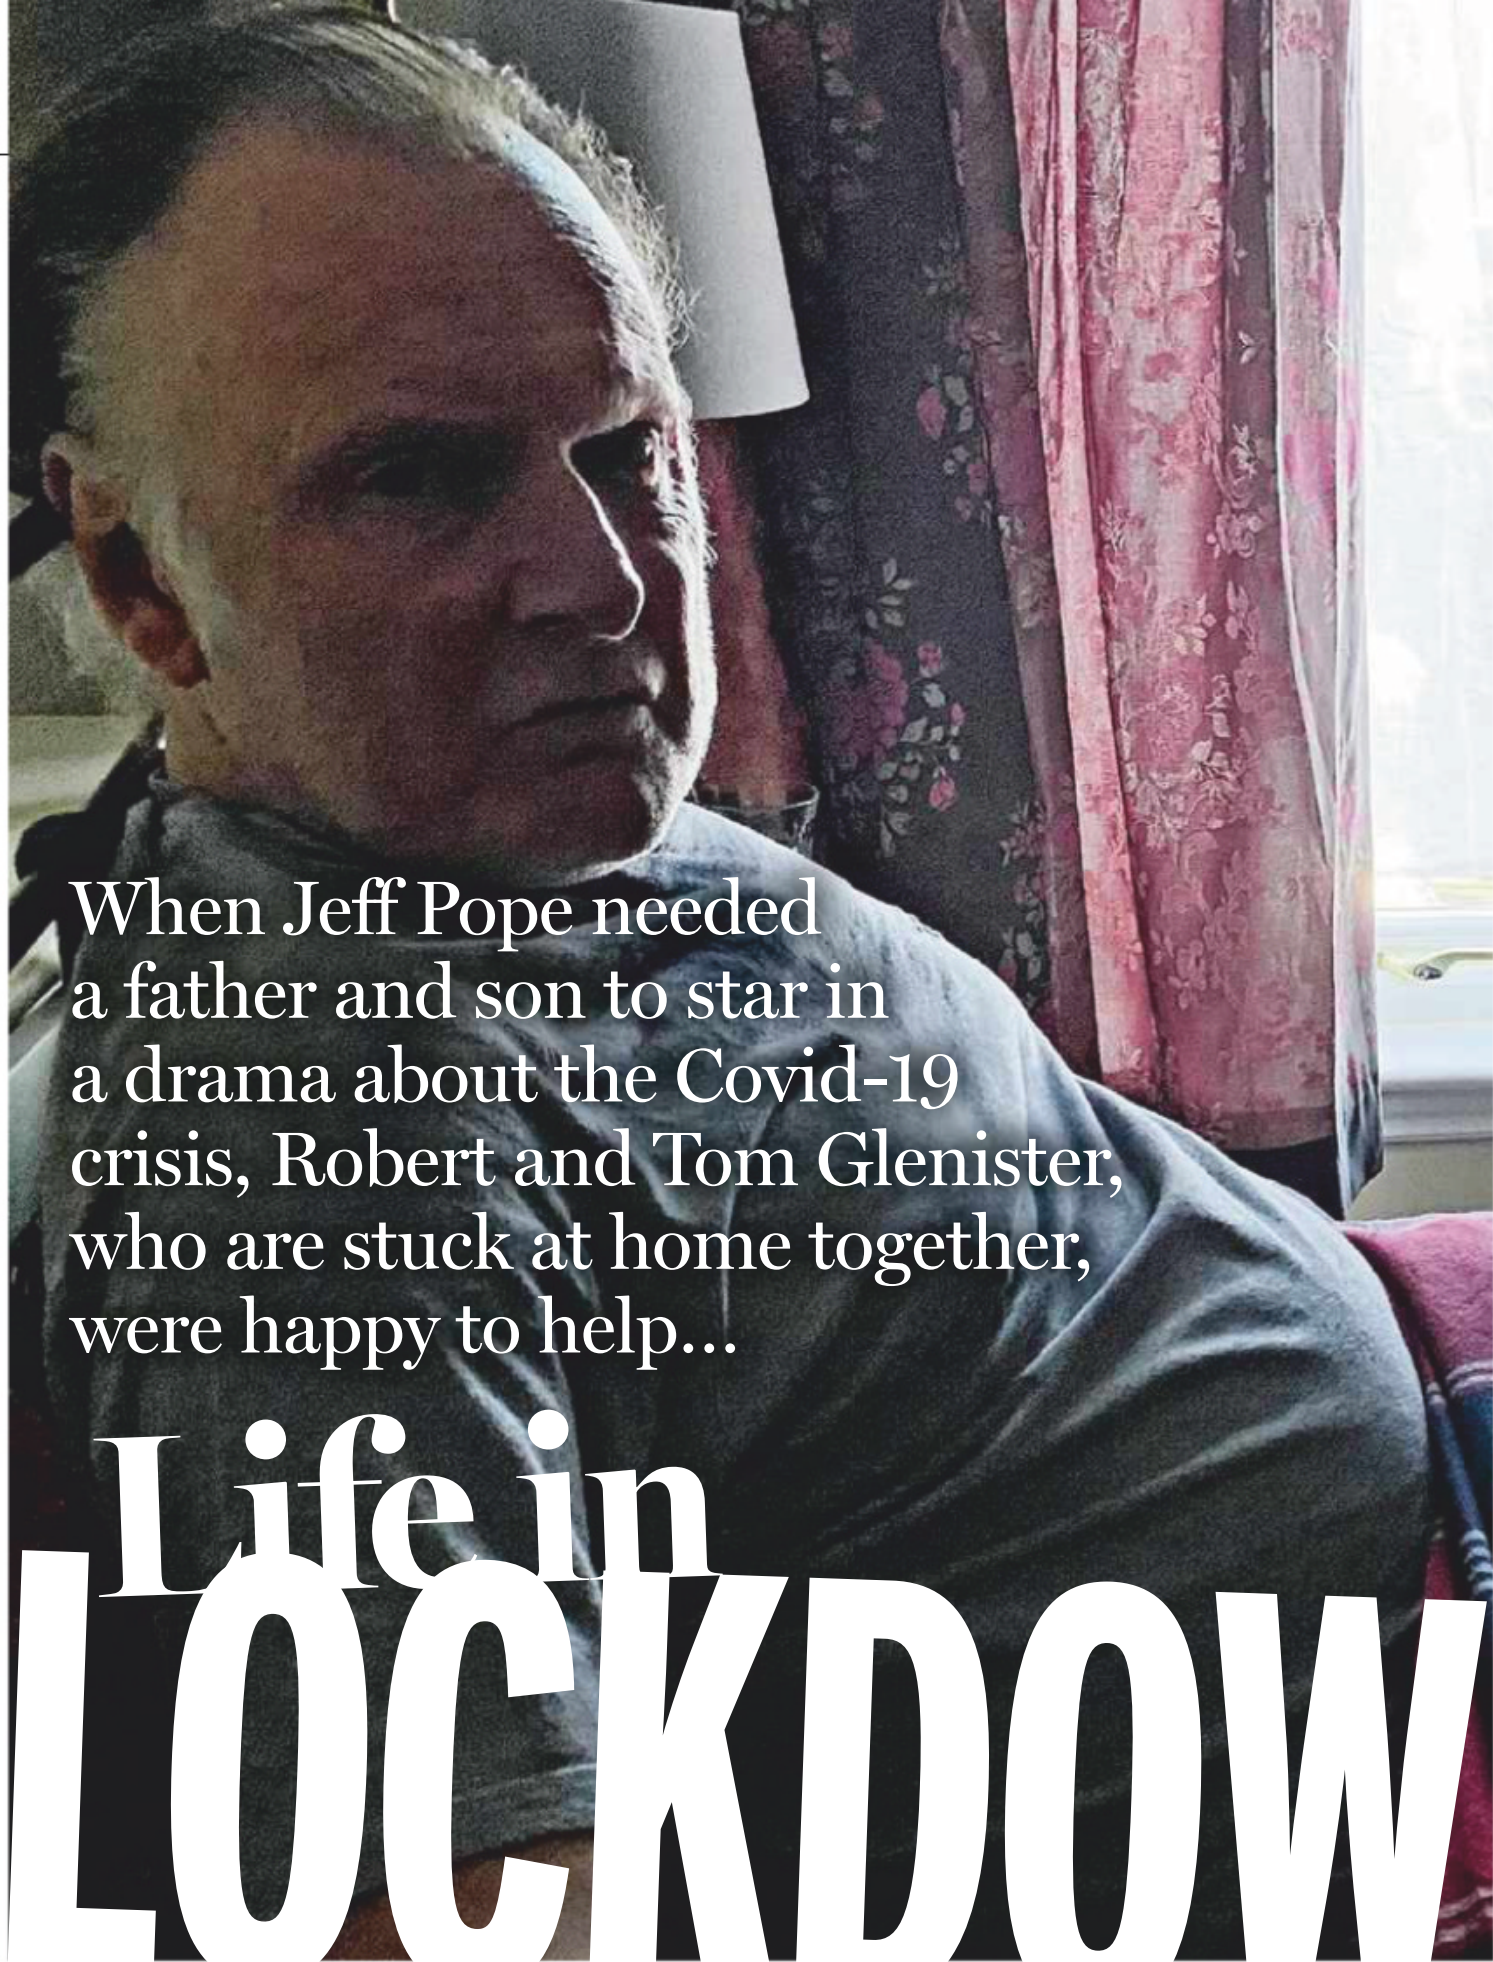

JEFF POPE

Smith, who plays a heavily pregnant woman isolating alone; Eddie Marsan and his kids are taunted by his father-in-law (David Threlfall) through the window; Darren Boyd is a paranoid hypochondriac talking to his therapist (Angela Griffin) online; and – in the one Pope himself has written – bickering father and son Robert and Tom Glenister.

But how did his team manage to make the films while practising social distancing? "We delivered equipment that we'd sterilised to the homes of the actors," Pope explains. "The families involved would then sterilise it again. And, with each drama, we had to make sure there was someone in the house who could operate the camera and take instructions through an earpiece from the director. Talk about a cottage industry – each household was taking care of make-up, wardrobe, props and lighting."

Could Pope have created problems for himself

When Jeff Pope needed a father and son to star in a drama about the Covid-19 crisis, Robert and Tom Glenister, who are stuck at home together, were happy to help... in the future, with production companies expecting everything to be made at such speed if the end result is as slickly produced as Isolation Stories? "Well, I don't think there's any danger of it looking too slick," he laughs. "They're going to appear rough around the edges. We wanted to make some drama about this crisis and show it on the telly during lockdown. So, in the circumstances, I don't think viewers will be too hard on us for having had a go. It's all about reflecting this shared experience and, hopefully, relieving some of the pressure that we're all living with."

'WE'RE GREAT BELIEVERS IN NEPOTISM IN OUR FAMILY!'

ROBERT GLENISTER

THE CREATIVE SPIRIT is alive and well in the Glenister household in south London, where Robert, his wife Celia de Wolff and their 23-year-old son Tom are all living under the same roof.

"Thankfully, we all get on," says Robert. "And we have a garden, albeit a small one, so we're able to get outside. We're doing a lot of quizzes. Tom's very musical, so he also occupies himself with that. I've got my drum kit. And Celia's a radio producer, so she's converted a room into a studio with soundproofing. I feel very fortunate, especially compared with people who are stuck on the seventh floor of a block of flats."

And lucky, too, in comparison to Ron and Russell, the fractious father and son that he and Tom are playing in Isolation Stories. In the

TOO CLOSE FOR COMFORT?
Robert and Tom Glenister star as father and son Ron and Russell

'I DIDN'T THINK I'D WORK ON TELLY WITH MY DAD SO SOON'

TOM GLENISTER

THE HOUSE IS a complete tip – the living room has been turned into Pinewood,” grins Tom Glenister, referring to the fact that his home is now a trail of cables linked to cameras, tripods and laptops. Prior to being booked to co-star alongside his real-life dad Robert in Isolation Stories, he'd spent the past few weeks steadily adjusting to life in quarantine with his family.

“I started by rearranging my bedroom, and then I thought I'd try and use the time sitting at the piano trying to write a masterpiece. But once I got that idea into my head, I couldn't write a thing.”

Salvation came thanks to casting director Amy Hubbard and her assistant Amy Jackson, who were looking for a father and son in lockdown together for Jeff Pope's latest project. The fact that the young actor had moved back home while studying at the Guildhall School of Music and Drama meant that he and his father were a perfect fit. “I didn't think that I'd be working with my dad on telly so early in my career. And I was more nervous doing this than I was doing my first TV job on Doc Martin or on Vera. There's that added feeling of wanting to hold your own and not let your dad down.”

‘I wanted to hold my own and not let my dad down’

FOR TOM, THE desire to enter the family business wasn't something innate in him from an early age. “I'm not one of those people who've wanted to be an actor since they were born. When I was at primary school, Hustle had just started, and I did love it when people would come up and say that they'd seen my dad on TV. But it was only really after I played Thénardier the innkeeper in a school production of Les Misérables at the age of 17 that I started to investigate drama schools.”

He's aware that some people may come away from Isolation Stories feeling that he only got the gig thanks to who his father is. “In the back of my mind, I'm thinking that people are going to judge me and that feeling's always going to be with me. But as long as I always feel that I'm where I deserve to be and have earned it myself, then I'll be happy.”

drama, their shared confinement results in old wounds being reopened, before the pair are forced to learn “patience, tolerance and understanding” in this enclosed environment.

Thankfully, the Spooks and Hustle star, now 60, hasn't had such a steep learning curve while acting with his son: “I love working with him. We've done a few things on the radio together that Celia produced because we're great believers in nepotism in our family! He's very relaxed and professional and we each anticipate what the other is going to do without having lengthy discussions. Which is great in this particular instance because there just isn't the time.”

He's confident that Tom will thrive in the industry, thanks to his realistic attitude. “My worry was that, since he was little, me and Phil [Robert's brother, star of Life on Mars and Belgravia] have been doing OK, so he'd have a rose-tinted view. But he's a smart cookie. He knows it's overcrowded and competitive. And it's not been easy – in his third year at drama school he came back home because, even in normal circumstances, it's tough and expensive. But at least it didn't come as a shock, spending all this time together. We're used to it.”

What Robert has had to adapt to, though, is a new way of working. He and Tom had less than a week to familiarise themselves with Jeff Pope's script, while the interior of their home had to be refashioned to suit the drama. “Usually, when a film crew takes over a house, they'll gut the whole place and then put everything back when they're finished. But props guys obviously couldn't come to us, so we had to do things ourselves, like putting curtains up with crocodile clips where we usually have window blinds.

“If things carry on like this, we might reach a point where people start wondering why we've been spending £250,000 a week making TV shows when we can do things in a far simpler, quicker fashion.

“It's certainly been like nothing I've ever done before, but I do like working at home as opposed to getting up at 5.30 in the morning to be driven to the middle of nowhere in the freezing cold!”

Play like me

PICTURE A CHURCH organist. What does that person look like? Definitely not young. Certainly not female. And not sitting at the keyboard with two toilet rolls balanced on her head. Wait. What? Two toilet rolls? “On my head, yes,” grins Anna Lapwood. “During lockdown at home, I’ve been trying to improve my playing posture. So I stacked two loo rolls on my head to see how long I could play without them falling off.”

She’s become pretty good at it – but that’s Lapwood for you. Aged 11, she could play 20 instruments. Having first played organ at 16, two years later she was the first female to be awarded an organ scholarship in the 560-year history of Magdalen College, Oxford. At 21, she became the youngest ever director of music at an Oxbridge college, conducting the Pembroke College Chapel Choir at Cambridge.

She performs dozens of recitals across Europe each year. A regular on Radio 3, she hosts a weekly classical show on BBC Radio Cambridgeshire, and is about to make her TV-presenting debut as host of BBC Young Musician 2020... and she’s still just 24. Small wonder her website describes her as a trailblazer.

MUSIC MATES
Jess Gillam joins Anna Lapwood in

smiling via a video-link from her flat in Royston, 13 miles south of Cambridge. “When I first got the job, people said it was because I’m female – not to my face, of course. If you’re doing something that hasn’t been done before, people aren’t necessarily going to understand.

“My whole thing is trying to make both choral music and the organ relevant, so I post a lot on social media. Organ is traditionally introverted, and a lot of people I respect have made it clear how they feel every time we talk. Yes, they’re all male. Some male colleagues are supportive. The majority are on board, although it’s taken them a while to get used to it. There are exceptions, and as those are the ones whose opinion I almost value most, I find it so difficult that they don’t approve.”

When organist Anna Lapwood was told to play like a man, she took a stand. Meet the face of Young Musician

There was little in Lapwood’s background to signal a career in music. At the family home in Oxford, her father Robin was a school chaplain, her mother Susie worked in paediatric palliative care. “I can’t remember a time when I didn’t play an instrument,” says Lapwood. “I was in church every weekend as a kid because of my dad’s work, and that got me interested in music. I was competitive with my brother, who’s two years older. He’d take up an instrument and I’d copy him, before he gave up. He’s a boatbuilder now.”

But her course was set. She was already principal harpist with the National Youth Orchestra when she first attempted organ. “I only gave it a go because Mum said that organ scholars at Oxbridge get a piano in their student rooms. I was 16. Most boys take it up three years earlier as choristers, when their voices start breaking. But girls aren’t in that position so take it up later or not at all, which feeds into the scholarship gender discrepancy – boys have more years to get good at it, while girls self-select out of it.

“I disliked organ at first because it’s so hard. I was used to picking up instruments quickly. I’d taken Grade 8 piano, but organ is more complex and frustrating because of using your feet [on the pedalboard]. It was a year before I began loving it. I was halfway through my scholarship before I knew it was what I wanted to do. I love community music-making. The joy of organ is that it incorporates working with choirs and conducting.”

When a friend showed her the ad for director of music at Pembroke, Lapwood leapt at the opportunity. “I pinch myself because I feel so lucky being taken on by a college prepared to take a huge risk. Not all colleges are like that.”

As in every industry, however, being young, blonde and beautiful brings problems of its own. Has she been patronised? “Oh gosh, the whole time – not at Pembroke but from the wider community. At a big organ competition when I was 19, a judge told me I needed to play more like a man. He meant with more power and authority. His musical point was valid, but characterising it as unique to men was the mistake.”

In response she adopted the sports hashtag #playlikeagirl for her own social media. “I don’t want to make a name for myself as someone who bangs the gender drum. But there’s an immense sense of responsibility towards the next generation who need a role model. If it weren’t for that, I would’ve stopped two years ago because the way people talk can get to you.”

Women, funnily enough, are more supportive. Lapwood is close friends with young stars such as saxophonist Jess Gillam and cellist Laura van der Heijden. “We reinforce one another,” says Lapwood. “We’ve been in touch a lot during lockdown, keeping each other sane.”

It was only in the week before lockdown began that she completed filming the Young Musician category finals. Fronting the competition is a perfect fit and she was thrilled to be asked. “It’s the thing young kids watch if they want to go into classical music. I want to engage them as much as possible. That was one of the best weeks of my life.” The grand final was scheduled to follow this spring, but of course couldn’t go ahead and is now pencilled in for the autumn.

MEANWHILE, WHEN LOCKDOWN arrived, Lapwood had been dating Andrew Forbes, Glasgow Cathedral’s 27-year-old director of music, for three months. “We met when I did a recital in Glasgow. Organ is an incestuous world. We’re not at all competitive, though – he’s a far better organist than me. It was too soon to move in together, and it’s been nice having Skype dates. There aren’t many young, attractive male organists, so I did pretty well!”

She does, however, have a new companion in her loft apartment – a £7,000 digital organ bought just days before lockdown. “The delivery guys needed an hour to get it up the stairs, but without it I would’ve gone mad. I’ve lost all my work. Pembroke is closed. I had 20 concerts lined up in the next four months – all gone. The positive is that I’ve been practising eight hours a day, which I haven’t been able to do for years.”

Her relaxation from music is more music – jazz, which she listens to while cooking. “I’m big into stews,” she says. “The act of chopping stuff is very therapeutic. When you live for work and it disappears, it’s very odd. What I miss the most is being able to make music in real time with other people. Work is my life. I can’t be myself without it.” KATE BATTERSBY

ELVIS ENTERED THE GI induction building at Fort Chaffee, Arkansas, on 24 March 1958, two weeks after his third Ed Sullivan Show appearance. Aged 23, he was already a chart-topping, epoch-defining, swivel-hipped pop sensation, a southern-fried pivot upon which the story of the 20th century still spins, pressed into military service identical to that of every other eligible American male between 18 and 26 – if you discount a two-week leave in which to record five songs in Nashville.

Whether Sergeant Presley's spell in the army was the making of him or his undoing is moot. For desperate fans his discharge couldn't come soon enough; historians with a longer lens maintain that Colonel Tom Parker turned his boy into a battery hit machine thereafter, until the pills and butter-fried bacon did for him. The case against seems to rest with the 30-odd films Elvis made between 1956 and 1969. Vehicles for his existing song-and-dance skill-set, they weren't exclusively kitsch, however.

TAKE THE NOIRISH King Creole (1958), to my mind one of his best efforts, its channel premiere a jewel in the crown for vintage film-and-TV trove Talking Pictures. Shot for ripped-from-the-headlines vérité in black-and-white by director Michael Curtiz from a novel by Harold Robbins, Elvis took pride in his performance as Danny Fisher, a high-school dropout mixed up with gangs in New Orleans. Walter Matthau and Vic Morrow's thugs help fulfil the poster's promise of "a story pulsing with the heartbeat of today's youth!" Exteriors of the Big Easy are ennobled by a chorus of local market traders advertising their wares before Elvis croons his first number.

Talking Pictures – a family business, curated and broadcast on Freeview since 2015 – have announced that any lockdown surge in viewing figures is offset by a plummet in vital travel advertising revenue. The best we can all do is trumpet the wares of a beloved channel at a time when most of us are unable to follow Elvis and leave the building.

FETCHING PERIOD TREAT

A Room with a View ★★★★★ Sunday 4.40pm Film4

Last shown on TV in 2013, this definitively fetching, lightly satirical Merchant-Ivory production opens with a fuss over rooms booked not to overlook a courtyard, but the river Arno, which passes through both Florence and EM Forster's 1908 novel concerning haughty Englishfolk abroad. Helena Bonham Carter, then 19, blooms as the inexperienced romantic Lucy Honeychurch, who finds herself in a clinch with Julian Sands's George Emerson on a dappled hillside (having earlier fainted at a stabbing). All parties return to Surrey, where the scenery is lush and the drawing rooms tall, and further intrigues blossom. Simon Callow's Reverend, Daniel Day-Lewis's snob and Maggie Smith's chaperone complete a very pretty picture. AC

COMEDY Judy Holliday and, making his film debut, Jack Lemmon, are paired to delightful effect in this original, satirical romantic comedy, faultlessly directed by George Cukor. Holliday is small-town girl Gladys Glover who arrives in the crowded anonymity of the Big Apple. Longing to be a "somebody", she hires a prominent billboard on which she has her name displayed. Soon the whole town's talking about her, including businessman Peter Lawford who covets Gladys's prime advertising site. The leads are superb, and the movie is just short of a perfect classic. RK (US 1954, BW)

You've Got Mail ★★
2.10-4.30pm C5 PG

ROMANTIC COMEDY Director Nora Ephron reunites with her Sleepless in Seattle leads Tom Hanks and Meg Ryan for what was billed as the screen's first internet love story. It is, in fact, a reworking of The Shop around the Corner, in which the stars play rivals in the bookshop business who unknowingly fall for each other in an online chat-room. But it's rarely as amusing as it should be and, for the most part, is frustratingly unromantic, with the leads coming together more like merged files than infatuated lovers. Ephron's combination of battle-of-the-sexes comedy and the struggle between community and capitalism lacks social resonance, but it is all slickly staged and played with consummate ease. DP (US 1998, edited for language, HD)

SCI-FI Five freaks of nature, not unlike those classic science-fiction icons Mothra, the Blob, the 50 Foot Woman, the Fly and the Gillman, are released from US government security to stave off an alien invasion in this funny and ingeniously detailed cartoon caper. The focus is mainly on Susan (voiced by Reese Witherspoon), who is hit by a meteor on her wedding day and grows into the huge Ginormica. The film is a valentine to B-movie creature features, with smart scripting and superior craftsmanship. Discerning adults and children alike will be entranced by the action-packed dazzle and visually enthralling delights. AJ (US 2009, HD)

BLACK COMEDY Nicole Kidman and Sandra Bullock star in this uneven adaptation of Alice Hoffman's novel, playing sisters who are descended from witches. There are nice performances from Stockard Channing and Dianne Wiest as the sisters' witchy aunts, but director

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

The Guernsey Literary and Potato Peel Pie Society ★★ 8.30-10.30pm BBC2 12

DRAMA Frankly, if you can make it past the wilfully twee title of this film – lifted from the 2008 novel by co-authors Mary Ann Shaffer and Annie Barrows – you'll be glad you did. During the Second World War, the Channel Islands were uniquely and comparatively genially occupied by the nevertheless hated Wehrmacht. This story unfolds after hostilities have ended, with journalist and author Lily James going on a fact-finding mission to Guernsey after her interest is piqued about the secret society of the title. James falls for one of the locals (Games of Thrones' low-powered Michiel Huisman) and learns how the islanders managed to resist their oppressors – as well as unearthing some less palatable secrets. Tom Courtenay, Matthew Goode, Jessica Brown Findlay, Katherine Parkinson and Penelope Wilton bring ruddy life to the islanders. Guernsey itself also provides some lovely scenery – what a pity it was largely shot in Devon. (UK/Fr/US 2018, HD)

Griffin Dunne – who made the blackly comic Addicted to Love – fails to make this either a moving comedy romance or a funny romantic comedy. It's like The Witches of Eastwick with its humour and sizzle removed. JB (US 1998, edited for violence, language, HD)

Sinbad and the Eye of the Tiger ★★
6.40-8.50pm Horror Channel U

ADVENTURE This is not quite up to the standard of the previous two Sinbad adventures in the hands of director Sam Wanamaker; it's too long and Patrick Wayne is a distinctly charisma-free hero. But there's still plenty of pleasure to be had from the special effects of Ray Harryhausen, who enhances this romantic exotica with his distinctive brand of visual thrills. Highlights include a chess-playing baboon, axe-wielding ghouls, a sabre-toothed tiger and a horned troglodyte. These all help to pass the time agreeably between the frothy Arabian Nights nonsense that makes up the plot. AJ (UK/US 1977)

One Fine Day ★★
6.50-9.00pm Sony Movies PG

ROMANTIC COMEDY A warm-hearted but underwritten tale, this stars George Clooney as a reporter saddled with parental responsibilities when he's forced to look after his five-year-old daughter while his ex-wife is on honeymoon. Into his life comes Michelle Pfeiffer, who's struggling to hold down a job and bring up a child, and the couple reluctantly agree to help each other out – only to find that what can go wrong naturally does. Clooney, Pfeiffer and Mae Whitman (as Clooney's daughter) are suitably charming, but they are all let down by a bratty and irritating performance from Alex D Linz (of Home Alone 3 fame) as Pfeiffer's hideous son, and the uninspired direction of Michael Hoffman. JB (US 1996)

The Money Pit ★★
7.15-9.00pm Sky1 12

COMEDY There are belly laughs aplenty in this unofficial remake of Mr Blandings Builds His Dream House, but director Richard Benjamin runs out of inspiration after an hour and the film ends up being more in need of renovation than Tom Hanks and Shelley Long's new home. However, Hanks does enough to remind us he's capable of more than just serious drama, while Long's perfect timing leaves you wondering why the Cheers star never quite made the transition from sitcom to cinema. Joe Mantegna and Philip Bosco have sly cameos as contractors, and Alexander Godunov is fine as Long's smarmy conductor ex-husband. DP (US 1985, edited for language, adult themes, HD)

Valerian and the City of a Thousand Planets ★★★★★ 9.00-11.35pm C4 12

SCI-FI Beautiful and bonkers, this visually astonishing movie from Luc Besson (The Fifth Element) is the French director's Avatar. Valerian (Dane DeHaan, a bit boring) and Laureline (Cara Delevingne, truly excellent) are 28th-century operatives investigating a radioactive zone at the centre of Alpha City, home to a thousand alien species, including cabaret diva Rihanna. What they find there exposes a planetary cover-up affecting the fate of the entire universe. An eye-popping exploration of creative-design, Besson's ultra-hip meld of Star Wars and Solaris is a silly space opera of the bizarre yet exhilarating kind. AJ (Fr 2017, violence, swearing, HD)

Ride Along ★★
10.35pm-12.25am ITV 12

COMEDY Stand-up comic Kevin Hart plays a wimpish high-school security guard who, in order to marry Tika Sumpter, must get the blessing of her brother (Ice Cube), a hardcase Atlanta cop. Ice insists that Hart ride along with him on a nightmare 24-hour patrol where their main focus is hunting down criminal Laurence Fishburne, but Ice also contrives to throw Hart into other hairy situations to break his spirit. Much fairly obvious slapstick action ensues in an efficient rather than inspired buddy cop caper. DA (US 2014, violence, swearing, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

The King's Speech ★★★★★

10.30pm-12.20am BBC1

12

HISTORICAL DRAMA Is there such a thing as "too British to fail"? If so, this film demonstrates that empirically. The King's Speech eclipsed The Full Monty and Slumdog Millionaire in the public imagination as the definitive UK export in 2010, a homegrown success that was also independently funded. It tells the true story of the reluctant King George VI, who mastered a debilitating speech impediment in time to unite the nation against Hitler in 1939. There's royalty, period costumes, encroaching war and hardship overcome – all the boxes ticked. Colin Firth, Helena Bonham Carter and Geoffrey Rush are pitch perfect as the King, the no-nonsense Queen Mum-to-be and the daring Australian speech therapist who comes into their lives, while director Tom Hooper keeps the whole thing marching smartly along. (UK/Aus/US 2010, swearing, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?
The Queen Mother asked David Seidler not to write the story during her lifetime, saying the memories were too painful for her

Odette ★★★★★ 12.05-2.00pm BBC2 PG

WAR DRAMA There is an inescapable predictability about movies that feature wartime exploits, and director Herbert Wilcox has little new to offer in this depiction of underground activities. But there is no denying the achievements of people such as Odette Churchill who endured Nazi torture while working for the French Resistance. Playing Odette with more reverence than she accorded either Queen Victoria or Florence Nightingale, Anna Neagle suggests a certain stiffness in the upper lip region, but she is not at her best. DP (UK 1950, BW, HD)

The Flintstones in Viva Rock Vegas ★★★★★ 1.50-3.35pm ITV2 PG

COMEDY It's yabba-dabba-two time as Fred and Barney first meet Wilma and Betty in a belated prequel to 1994's live-action original. The first half is cuter and more child-friendly, though the second half could tax pre-adolescent patience as Fred seeks to win Wilma's hand by striking it rich in Vegas. The casting is variable: Mark Addy looks the part as Fred, but underplays it, and Stephen Baldwin is two feet too tall for Barney. The girls, though, are great, with Jane Krakowski a nicely traditional Betty and Kristen Johnston a voluptuous Wilma. DA (US 2000, HD)

Picture Perfect ★★★★★ 2.40-4.45pm Sony Movies PG

ROMANTIC COMEDY In this good-natured romantic comedy from director Glenn Gordon Caron, Jennifer Aniston plays a single girl who discovers that she needs a boyfriend to succeed at work. So she invents a fiancé using a photo of her with a stranger at a wedding. It's not long before her bosses want to meet the man (Jay Mohr), so she has to track him down, complicating the affair she's having with a corporate sleaze (a fun performance from Kevin Bacon). It's preposterous, perhaps, but sweetly done. JB (US 1997, edited for language)

Nevada Smith ★★★★★ 4.30-7.10pm ITV4 15

WESTERN Lethargic direction by veteran Henry Hathaway (The Sons of Katie Elder) lets down this potentially fascinating movie about a young man who tracks down the outlaws who killed his white father and Kiowa Indian mother. However, the film is redeemed by Lucien Ballard's lush photography and a fine cast, headed by Steve McQueen in the title role, with Karl Malden and Arthur Kennedy offering reliable support.

McQueen's production company, Solar, financed the film, and it was a major hit in its day. RS (US 1966, violence)

A Bridge Too Far ★★★★★ 4.35-7.55pm C5 15

WAR DRAMA Richard Attenborough's epic retelling of one of the Second World War's biggest debacles is impressive enough, with its eye-catching list of stars, fine parachute-drop sequences and superb Panavision photography from Geoffrey Unsworth. But the depressing nature of this moving story of human suffering and sacrifice makes for grim viewing, no matter how cleverly writer William Goldman has created drama from the event. Only Sean Connery and Edward Fox really shine in an all-star cast that includes Dirk Bogarde, Gene Hackman, Laurence Olivier, Elliott Gould, James Caan and Robert Redford, though Hardy Kruger and Maximilian Schell emerge with credibility as Germans. TS (UK 1977, edited for language, violence HD)

Night at the Museum: Secret of the Tomb ★★★★★ 5.35-7.30pm C4 12

COMEDY In this third film in the series, New York's Natural History Museum night guard Larry (Ben Stiller) comes to the British Museum to refresh the ancient curse that brings museum exhibits to life at night. With his cohort of historical characters from previous films, Larry must also deal with Rebel Wilson as a suspicious guard and Dan Stevens as a rampaging Sir Lancelot, not to mention his wayward teenage son (Skyler Gisando). Robin Williams, Steve Coogan, Owen Wilson and Ricky Gervais are as funny as ever, while Rami Malek as Ahkmenrah acts his pharaoh father Ben Kingsley right off the screen. However, the loss of its original writers shows – director Shawn Levy has to rely on a peeing monkey and Stiller in a dual role as a Neanderthal for laughs. KK (US 2014, some violence, HD)

Serenity ★★★★★ 9.00-11.00pm Sky Atlantic 15

THRILLER Matthew McConaughey is the captain of a fishing boat who is drawn into a sinister intrigue when his ex-wife (Anne Hathaway) appears with a proposition. Tied up in the zaniest of concepts, the star-studded revenge story loses its way in spectacular fashion, especially in a final act that is just plain odd. The stars fare terribly, offering over-the-top performances fed by corny dialogue. McConaughey seems to be on autopilot, while Hathaway's femme fatale is far from her best work. Serenity may appeal to those who like their films a little bit bonkers, but even they may find scant reward for their patience here. JL (US 2018, violence, swearing, sex scenes, HD)

Hercules ★★★★★ 9.00-11.05pm 5 Star 12

ADVENTURE Three Hercules movies were released in 2014, but this was by far the most successful, with director Brett Ratner finding the correct balance between humour, heart and epic action. Having completed the mythical 12 labours, Hercules (an imposing Dwayne Johnson) has turned mercenary. Hired to train the Thracian army to fight an evil warlord, the hero learns too late it's a double-cross by megalomaniac King Cotys (John Hurt). Hercules's companions barely register, apart from seer Ian McShane with his amusing death predictions, and the exposition plods here and there. But Ratner papers over the cracks with exciting battle scenes that send pulses racing. AJ (US 2014, violence, swearing, HD)

In the Line of Fire ★★★★★ 10.00pm-12.35am ITV4 15

THRILLER A sight you thought you'd never see: Clint Eastwood in tears. That's just one of the novelties in this hugely enjoyable thriller in which Eastwood plays a Secret Service agent who is not only visibly ageing – a fact that he admits to his younger lover, Rene Russo – but is also shamed by his past inability to save President Kennedy from assassination. That's why he's so obsessed with would-be killer John Malkovich. Director Wolfgang Petersen piles on the suspense with ruthless skill, while Eastwood reveals the same vulnerability that made Unforgiven so compelling and Malkovich makes a memorable, taunting adversary. TH (US 1993, violence, edited for some of its language, HD)

CRIME DRAMA Airless, generic title notwithstanding, this is a solid thriller from writer/director Paul Haggis (Crash) that asks the age-old question: what if you had 72 hours to save everything you love? Based on the 2008 French original Pour Elle, it exercises the ingenuity of Russell Crowe's mild-mannered, Cervantes-teaching professor – basically a Jimmy Stewart type who doesn't even own a gun – who decides to break his wrongly convicted wife (Elizabeth Banks) out of a Pittsburgh jail. With hands-on advice from old lag Liam Neeson and gradual pursuit by cop Lennie James, Crowe concocts a preposterous plan that involves lots of running, driving and writing things on a map. Look out, too, for the late Brian Dennehy in an unshowy role as Crowe's dad. (US 2010, violence, swearing)

THRILLER Drive scriptwriter Hossein Amini makes an admirable directing debut with this atmospheric 1960s-set thriller based on Patricia Highsmith's 1964 novel. Viggo Mortensen plays an American conman on the run in Athens with his wife (Kirsten Dunst). When he accidentally kills the private detective on his case, he persuades their scam-artist tour guide (Oscar Isaac) to help move the body, and the trio enter a high-stakes game with the authorities and one another. The Greek and Turkish locations are full of character, the period detail exemplary and the performances all high-calibre. True, it shares plenty with The Talented Mr Ripley but it's also a well-crafted gem in its own right. AJ (Fr/UK/US/Lux 2013, swearing, some violence, HD)

SPY DRAMA Rita Hayworth and Glenn Ford, stars of that electric film noir Gilda, are re-united in yet another spy tale set in a far-flung hotspot. The plot is some nonsense about spy rings, with Ford helping Hayworth find her husband's killer, but this movie's all about the chemistry. Alexander Scourby makes an effective villain, and veteran director Vincent Sherman is in his element. Hayworth is ravishing after a four-year acting break following her marriage to Prince Ali Khan. TS (US 1952, BW)

The Muscles from Brussels encounters his younger self (cue silly hairdo) when he's sent back in time to catch a sinister senator (Ron Silver) who's out to change the past for his own ends. Most sci-fi fans will find it outdated, but if you can follow the time-travel logic it can be dumb fun. Best exchange – Jean-Claude: "He read my mind." Jean-Claude's wife: "With your English, I'm not surprised." AJ (US 1994, violence, swearing, sex scenes, nudity)

SCI-FI This violent adaptation of writer Robert A Heinlein's classic 1959 novel about Earth battling alien bugs is popcorn exploitation at its lip-smacking, blood-spattered best. Whether portraying the chilling spectacle of millions of ugly giant insects swarming over the planet or the astonishing intergalactic warfare, the special effects are outstanding. It's when director Paul Verhoeven cuts to the teenage romance between Casper Van Dien and Denise Richards that his sensational cartoon carnage comes unstuck. But the dull bits don't last long enough to spoil the sheer enjoyment of this absurdly apocalyptic satire. AJ (US 1997, violence, swearing, a sex scene, nudity, HD)

THRILLER Fans of charismatic old-timers will enjoy this movie about a glamorous stage star (Lauren Bacall) pursued by a deranged stalker (Michael Biehn). The movie was given a boost on release as Bacall was enjoying a huge hit on Broadway at the same time, starring in Woman of the Year. The excellent James Garner appears as Bacall's ex-husband, and Maureen Stapleton plays her secretary. But it's Bacall's picture, and she has no problems convincing us she's a star. AT (US 1981, violence, swearing)

Scarface ★★★★★ 10.00pm-1.25am ITV4

CRIME DRAMA Rolling his Cuban accent around his mouth as if savouring a cigar, Al Pacino puts in a marker-flag performance as the 1980s reincarnation of Paul Muni's original gangster from 1932's Scarface – a character loosely based on Al Capone. The action shifts from black-and-white Chicago to the hyper-real pastels of Miami, where Pacino's panda-eyed Tony Montana builds an orgiastic empire on the buying and selling of cocaine, with the understanding that if your enemy brings a gun, you bring a chainsaw. An epic of excess and operatic violence from writer Oliver Stone and director Brian De Palma, Scarface reeks of its decade, and it also made a star of Michelle Pfeiffer. Unfortunately, it also reminds us that synthesiser scores, even by Giorgio Moroder, don't age well. (US 1983, violence, swearing, drug abuse, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

WAR DRAMA James Mason – an actor who will be remembered for playing charming villains – plays Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, known as a professional soldier rather than a cartoon Nazi sadist. Set in North Africa, the film begins as a wartime adventure then turns into a study of disenchantment as Rommel, beaten by Montgomery's 8th Army, returns to Germany and joins the plot against Hitler. There's a strong supporting cast – notably Jessica Tandy as Frau Rommel and Luther Adler as Hitler – and Henry Hathaway directs with solid assurance. AT (US 1951, BW)

Based on a true story, it concerns the Andrea Gail, a fishing vessel that, while sailing in the North Atlantic in 1991, was caught up in the 20th century's worst storm. A stubbly George Clooney and a smooth-talking Mark Wahlberg head the crew, while

BIOPIC This look at the life of the famous escapologist is the first of five films real-life couple Tony Curtis and Janet Leigh – the so-called "elite of the milkshake set" – made together. FILM OF THE DAY

Hunt for the Wilderpeople ★★★★★ 9.00-11.05pm Film4 12

COMEDY This charming comedy from Taika Waititi (Jojo Rabbit) combines warm characters and bags of deadpan humour. It follows tearaway teen Julian Dennison as he ventures into the New Zealand wilderness to avoid juvenile detention. He is tracked down by his tough foster uncle, Sam Neill, who helps him survive in the bush. Neill and Dennison form a delightful double act while eluding the authorities, and there are many witty exchanges and amusing moments: to quote Neill, it's magestical. Stephen Carty (NZ/US 2016, swearing, HD)

WAR DRAMA This is one of the most famous escape stories of the Second World War, in which PoWs use a vaulting horse to hide their tunnel. Scripted by Eric Williams (from his own bestseller) and directed by ex-documentary maker Jack Lee (A Town like Alice), it has a ring of authenticity that is reinforced by a splendid cast led by Leo Genn and David Tomlinson. However, the action only really becomes compelling outside Stalag Luft III as the escapees make a run for the coast. DP (UK 1950, BW, HD)

Van Helsing ★★★★★ 10.05pm-12.40am ITV4 12

ACTION HORROR Having successfully re-invigorated the Mummy franchise, writer/director Stephen Sommers creates an exciting, effects-driven romp that combines the pulling power of Dracula, the Wolf Man and Frankenstein's Monster. Dad's Army ★★★★★ 8.30-10.25pm ITV PG

WARTIME COMEDY Following a week of classic British war-movie matinees on BBC2, ITV establishes a bridgehead with the recent all-star revival of Dad's Army for VE Day itself. Set after the sitcom's final episode, in which Mrs Fox and Corporal Jones's wedding was interrupted by an air-raid siren, director/writer team Oliver Parker and Hamish McColl (Johnny English Reborn) pick up in 1944, with those probing Nazi triangles hovering around the White Cliffs. The platoon is niftily recast with Toby Jones (Mainwaring), Bill Nighy (Wilson), Tom Courtenay (Jonesy), Daniel Mays (Walker) and Bill Paterson (Frazer), while Catherine Zeta-Jones, playing a journalist from The Lady, sows romance and misinformation. With affectionate cameos for the late Frank Williams's vicar and Ian Lavender as a brigadier, it's no substitute for the original, but a well-intended theme-park ride for hopeless nostalgics everywhere. (UK 2016, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?

The Horse Whisperer ★★★★★ 1.30-4.55pm Sony Movies PG

ROMANTIC DRAMA In this adaption of Nicholas Evans's bestseller, Robert Redford directs himself playing a cowboy who cures traumatised horses. The film opens with a horrific accident that leaves teenager Grace (Scarlet Johansson) disabled. Mother Kristin Scott Thomas realises her horse is the key to her recovery. So, leaving husband Sam Neill behind in New York, they travel to Montana to see Redford. Guess what happens? Mixing a Disney wildlife film with adult romance feels bizarre and it's far too long. But the Montana scenery is stunning and, against your better judgement, you could feel a lump in your throat. AT (US 1998, swearing)

Danger Within ★★★★★ 7.00-9.00pm Talking Pictures TV U

WAR DRAMA Anyone who has seen Billy Wilder's PoW-camp classic Stalag 17 will find this workmanlike British imitation predictable. Co-written by Bryan Forbes, the story has a clever whodunnit element, but prisoners and guards alike are cardboard cutouts. Richard Attenborough and Bernard Lee come off best and Dennis Price reprises the fruity theatrical he played in Charley Moon. Director Don Chaffey sustains the suspense with ease. DP (UK 1958, BW)

Air Force One ★★★★★ 10.00pm-12.35am C5 15

ACTION Hollywood loves putting its president into movies. And who better to play him as a highly decorated war hero than Indiana Jones himself, Harrison Ford. Here, when the First Family is held hostage on board the presidential jumbo jet, Air Force One, by a ruthless gang of Russian terrorists led by Gary Oldman, President James Marshall (Ford) decides to fight back and escapes into the plane's hold. Meanwhile Vice President Glenn Close is left to take Oldman's phone calls in Washington. If you liked Die Hard 2, you'll enjoy the midair mayhem in this stunt-filled thriller that's brimming with nasty villains and daring deeds. SuR (US 1997, violence, swearing, HD)

8 Mile ★★★★★ 10.00pm-12.15am ITV4 15

DRAMA Director Curtis Hanson puts a new spin on the familiar triumph against the odds theme with this slick showcase for the talents of superstar rapper Eminem. The story follows aspiring rap artist "Rabbit" (Eminem), who hopes to escape his bleak life in Detroit's 8 Mile district. But, after losing his job and his (pregnant) girlfriend, he's forced to work in a soul-destroying factory and to live with his alcoholic mother (Kim Basinger) and her lover. While it doesn't break any new ground, Hanson's film is a compellingly gritty account of growing up in poverty on the city streets. But the real revelation here is Eminem, who delivers a honest and likeable performance. AS (US/Ger 2002, may be edited for language, violence, drug abuse, a sex scene, nudity, HD)

City of Tiny Lights ★★★★★ 10.35pm-12.20am BBC2 15

CRIME In this stylish movie, Riz Ahmed plays a noir-like London-based private detective. A simple assignment to find a missing Russian hooker lands him in an unholy mess of murder, political chicanery and radical Islam, with Billie Piper popping up as a blast from his past. The film is slickly made and is ambitious in its bid to transpose an American genre to a British setting. In fact, director Pete Travis (Dredd) and writer Patrick Neate (adapting his 2005 novel) go a little too far at times. But it's an enjoyable slice of Brit-noir with an impressive leading man in Ahmed. DA (UK 2016, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

Kinky Boots ★★★★★ 11.10pm-12.55am BBC1 12

COMEDY DRAMA The Full Monty put Sheffield on the cinematic map and Kinky Boots arguably does the same thing for Northampton. Mild-mannered Charlie Price (played by Australian Joel Edgerton) inherits an ailing shoe factory and, after meeting Soho drag queen Lola (Chiwetel Ejiofor), embarks on a bold new business plan, moving into the "specialist" male market. While the outcome – at a make-or-break fashion show in Milan – is as predictable as Charlie's romance with worker Sarah-Jane Potts, this is big-hearted stuff. AC (US/UK 2005, swearing, HD)

‘People like gentle books’

Author Alexander McCall Smith on life either side of lockdown

Literary events and book festivals have been among the casualties of coronavirus. With events cancelled up and down the country this summer, the BBC has stepped in to fill the gap with a three-day virtual festival event.

Forming part of the BBC’s Culture in Quarantine initiative, there will be video interviews, panel discussions, and in-conversation sessions broadcast for free at bigbookweekend.com, with a line-up that promises something for everyone.

Bestselling author Alexander McCall Smith is on the bill, and here tells RT about his period of self-examination and why he’s writing more than ever while in lockdown...

Lockdown isn't fun. Can a virtual book festival lift the mood?

It's a wonderful idea. I understand the cancellations of course, but I felt so sorry for the people who put such effort into organising these massive events. Having them scrapped is devastating. When I started lockdown at home in Edinburgh I went through a period of feeling tremendously sad, especially for young people. Finding ways round it is so important. We can't capture the full festival feeling but I'm so happy to have another way to be in contact with readers. It's useful to get their ideas on what might happen next in the series I write.

What's the secret of writing a bestseller?

I feel great good fortune in having a readership to whom my books seem to appeal. People quite like gentle books – mine tend to be social comedies and studies of the minutiae of people's lives. It's why I'm a fan of Barbara Pym and Jane Austen.

Volume 21 of The No 1 Ladies' Detective Agency will be published in September...

Yes, it's called How to Raise an Elephant. Mma Ramotswe gets new neighbours and isn't absolutely sure that they're getting on as well as they might; and someone asks for money who may not be telling the truth.

You're now 71. Does the idea of retirement send fear coursing through your veins?

I get such pleasure from what I do that I'm working harder than ever, producing five or six books a year. Many of my books are series, and I get terribly caught up in wondering what will happen to the characters next. I don't actually know how many books I have had published. That sounds like an affectation, but I tend not to count.

FESTIVAL HIGHLIGHTS

ROBERT WEBB will be in conversation about both his memoir and debut novel, while graphic novelist and mastermind behind Good Omens and American Gods NEIL GAIMAN discusses the inspirations behind his work. Bestselling fiction writer MARIAN KEYES talks about growing into her own skin over a 20-year career, while the author of Killing Eve LUKE JENNINGS will reveal how he created the female-centred thriller that became a television phenomenon. TIM RICE will discuss his life and career creating some of the biggest stage and screen musicals of all time, while there will be conversation and live readings, chaired by broadcaster CATHY NEWMAN, to mark the 200th anniversary of ANNE BRONTË'S birth.

DRAMA WITH BITE

Dracula Available now

The classic vampire story as retold by Steven Moffat and Mark Gatiss, creators of Sherlock – which means the familiar tale is ripped up and reassembled into a series of three stylish puzzles. Even the opening episode, which seems at first to be the normal routine of visiting Dracula (the formidably dark and enigmatic Claes Bang, pictured) in his castle, has big twists and sly reworkings everywhere. After that... what comes next is best left as a surprise, but it's quite a bloody ride. First shown on BBC1 in January this year. JACK SEALE

How has lockdown been for you so far?

I've been going through a period of self-examination. My diary is usually packed for a year in advance and suddenly the extraordinary luxury of time has opened up. I've realised how often I was away from home and asked myself if that's the best way to lead one's life – should I make more time for contemplation and writing? In lockdown I've written more than ever. There may be a spike in my output, much like the predicted baby boom!

What would it be like if, for some reason, you could never write again?

Writing is something I feel I have to do. If it were taken from me, I'd feel a very strange gap. I'd fill it playing more music; I'm not a good musician, but I play the baritone sax and the bassoon with the amateur orchestra I co-founded. And I'd read more.

No 1 Ladies... was adapted into a series by the BBC in 2008. Is it correct that 44 Scotland Street is also being dramatised, and that No 1 Ladies... is becoming a musical?

Scotland Street has been optioned, as have lots of my books, but the film and television industry is so strange. They spend years working on these things and then nothing happens. Graham Weir, formerly of Orchestral Manoeuvres in the Dark, has written some fantastic music for the No 1 Ladies... musical but the wheels move extraordinarily slowly.

I have lawyers working on the rights, which are terribly complicated.

UNMISSABLE MOCKUMENTARY Tourist Trap

Available now

Englishwoman Sally Phillips (above) is brought in to revamp Wales's tourist board, in a 2018 mockumentary that does nothing new, yet does it well. Characters include an information-desk warrior, a fervently patriotic IT manager, a creepily hands-on marketing supremo, and a husband-and-wife corporate liaison team who, in episode one's funniest scene, make quite a bad mistake when ordering promotional gifts. Originally shown in Wales, it deserves a national audience – iPlayer has both series.

COMPELLING PERIOD THRILLER Taboo

Available now

Tom Hardy has never been more Tom Hardy-ish than he is in Steven Knight's saga set in Regency London, first shown in 2017. A persistently excellent supporting cast – including Jessie Buckley, Mark Gatiss and Jonathan Pryce – contribute to a fruity, gloomy world in which Hardy, as dangerously single-minded businessman James Delaney, oozes testosterone and menace: his speciality is threatening people with primal grunts instead of words. It's a heady brew, however seriously you choose to take it. JS

At its height in the 1990s, ITV's drama about the firefighters of Blue Watch was attracting more than 18 million viewers. Originally it was a TV movie, shown in 1986 and written by the great Jack Rosenthal, with a focus on the personal struggles of firemen and women, at home and at work; in later years it became known for spectacular set pieces that put its characters in severe, sometimes lethal danger. UKTV Play has all of it.

COP A LOAD OF THIS!

The Bill Available from 1 May

A reassuring staple of 1980s, 90s and noughties telly, the ITV police drama is back on streaming. UKTV Play starts with the first five series and adds another each month. Set in and around the fictional Sun Hill station, it's an example of a type of programme-making that's now pretty much dead: self-contained stories, but with regular characters who grow and change with time, produced in high volume to a high standard. In other words, it's a trove of solidly rewarding TV, as well as a time capsule that might contain the odd glimpse of future stars.

SHOOTING TO THE TOP Soldier Soldier

Available now

Aired in the 1990s, this series found its groove with simple interpersonal and workplace drama, as well as covering the downsizing of regiments as the armed forces redefined themselves for a new era. That's the serious version of its legacy: the thing everyone remembers is that it made stars of Robson Green and Jerome Flynn, to the point where they were at number one in 1995 with a cover of Unchained Melody. Simpler times.

WAR STORY Birdsong

Available now

Originally shown on BBC1 in 2012, but now residing on Channel 4's streaming service, this dramatisation of Sebastian Faulks's novel is an opportunity to see Eddie Redmayne play a lead TV role, at the point when he was still merely a rising star. He and Clémence Poésy have top billing in a tale of illicit love interrupted by the First World War. Screenwriter Abi Morgan (who recently gave us The Split) created an intense slow-burner.

CEMENTING THE LAUGHS Lee and Dean

Available now

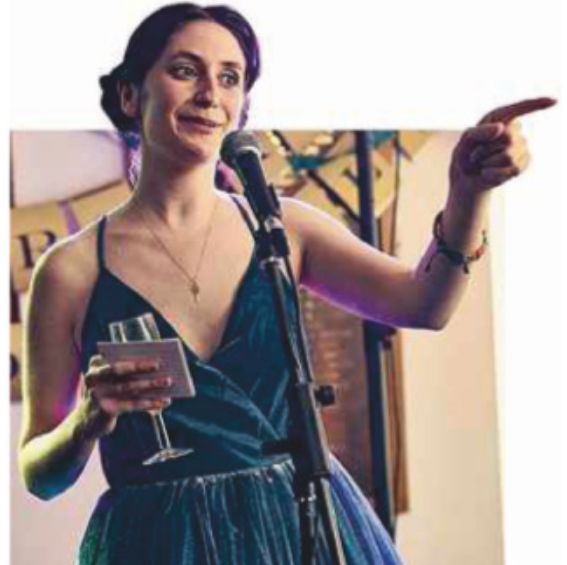

To the mean streets of Stevenage for this comedy, which ran for two series ending last year. Miles Chapman (Lee, above with Anna Morris) and Mark O'Sullivan (Dean) play builders who have been best friends since school, but there's a fatal imbalance in their relationship between capable Lee and shambling Dean. That's the set-up for a mockumentary that balances crude cringe with moments of pathos. The resulting show was a minor cult hit.

A POWERFUL MASTERWORK The Virtues

Available now

Co-writer/director Shane Meadows had shown TV audiences his immense talent with the epic This Is England series – also still available in full via All 4 – but this devastating four-parter, first shown last year, might just be his masterwork. Stephen Graham and the equally powerful Niamh Algar both put in Bafta-worthy performances as people living broken lives because of the traumas of youth. The last episode is simply incredible.

SEARING BUT SENSITIVE Pure

Available now

In 2019, Charly Clive made an impressive TV debut leading this comedy drama about a young woman finding herself in London. In addition to the fumbled romantic encounters and unexpected friendships, she has a form of OCD that plagues her with intrusive sexual thoughts – the show is generally highly attuned to mental health problems that TV drama rarely addresses. ALL THAT GLITTERS

Hollywood Available from 1 May

Murphy's lore

Hollywood hotshot Ryan Murphy and his sparkling CV

Is Ryan Murphy the most prolific writer in TV? Netflix hopes he'll continue to be one of the most talked-about: in 2018 it signed up the man behind Glee, Pose and many others (see right) in a deal worth more than £200 million.

Murphy's latest – created with regular collaborator Ian Brennan – takes us back to Tinseltown in the late 1940s. We follow Jack Castello (David Corenswet), a hunky matinée idol type who can't even get work as an extra. The Golden Age of film-making is a time when most dreams are dashed, in a drama mixing fact and fiction, where Rock Hudson and Anna May Wong are among the characters.

The idea that Hollywood was riven by bigotry and betrayal gives the show its dramatic heft, but this is very much a Murphy production: fast, naughtily funny and draped in alluring, old-school glamour. JS

Glee

Murphy's mainstream breakthrough hit, about high-school Broadway wannabes who sing together after class, became a global smash.

American Horror Story

Often brilliant, always horrible, this anthology of stand-alone series is held together by an A-list cast that includes Kathy Bates and Angela Bassett.

The People v OJ Simpson

Proof that Murphy can do serious drama: his re-examination of the OJ Simpson trial places the case in the context of a toxic media culture.

The Assassination of Gianni Versace

Pose

A real ground-breaker, featuring the largest transgender cast in TV history (by far) in a dizzyingly vivid, often tragic saga set amid New York's 1980s ballroom culture.

The Politician

Murphy's first Netflix exclusive is a patchy but confidently stylish romp about a high-school student (Ben Platt) who feels he's destined to be US president.

The Child is protected by the Mandalorian bounty hunter

Behind-the-scenes docs are a trend right now. Netflix has intriguing how-we-made-it shows about its sensational factual series Tiger King and its superb drama Unorthodox; this week, Disney+ launches Disney Gallery: The Mandalorian.

The new eight-part series drops on Monday 4 May, aka Star Wars Day ("May the fourth be with you!"), and boasts unseen footage from The Mandalorian alongside interviews with showrunner Jon Favreau and his cast and crew. On the same day, the animated Star Wars: the Clone Wars ends after seven epic series (Disney+ also has the animated spin-offs Rebels and Freemaker Adventures). Meanwhile, The Mandalorian itself – a tremendously cool, taut creation where every episode is like a half-hour action movie – concludes its first series on 1 May. That completes the first batch of Disney+'s Star Wars content.

So what's to do while you wait for The Mandalorian series two? Disney+ hopes you'll start again by rewatching its full set of Star Wars movies... JACK SEALE

OPEN THE VAULTS

Prop Culture

Available from 1 May

Disney does like to burnish its own mythology and this new documentary series is self-congratulatory – but you won't mind if you're a fan of Tron, Mary Poppins, The Nightmare before Christmas, Pirates of the Caribbean, or any of the other films featured. Tackling one movie per episode, hyperbolic host Daniel Lanigan goes in search of the props and costumes that survive – an excuse to reminisce about how the films were produced and meet some of the people who made the "magic" happen.

FICTION WITHIN FICTION

High School Musical: the Musical: the Series

Available now

That arch title tells you this comedy is unusually tricky by Disney standards. It's set in the school where the 2006 High School Musical movie was shot – that is, the pupils are fictional but in a world where HSM is a fictional film. As they mount a stage version of the movie, the teen snark and pop-culture references flow freely, with theatrical backstabbing intensifying the normal rivalries of high school. If you can't stick how painfully self-aware it is, the teens in your household probably can.

"BLUMING" GOLD

The World According to Jeff Goldblum

Available now

The suave actor brings his quirkiness to a documentary series that proudly advertises how little research the host does before filming. Goldblum investigates a new topic in each episode, with everything from sneakers and ice cream to tattoos and barbecues on the menu – anything that's piqued his particular brand of nervous curiosity. As he charms every expert and influencer he meets, the show lands somewhere between a proper factual series and a celebrity jolly, creating an entertaining niche all of its own.

Streaming

NETFLIX

Price £5.99/month
(£8.99 for HD)

Why subscribe Netflix was the first name in original internet television, launching with political remake House of Cards. It has remained on top by expanding into every audience and genre.

How to get it It's hard to find a gadget that won't load Netflix – just open the main menu of a streaming device like the Apple TV 4K (£179) or Sky Q set-top box. Many modern TVs even have a Netflix button on their remote. netflix.com

AMAZON PRIME VIDEO

Price £7.99/month (included with Amazon Prime next-day delivery)

Why subscribe Amazon's original content is really just a "sweetener" to convince you to subscribe to Amazon Prime, which includes overnight delivery. However, they're willing to spend big money to make it – a billion-dollar Lord of the Rings series is in the offing.

How to get it The best way of watching Prime is on Amazon's own gadget. The Fire TV Stick (£39.99 with Prime membership) is a dongle that plugs into your television's HDMI port, and can be controlled with your voice. amazon.co.uk/video

DISNEY+

Price £5.99/month

Why subscribe Less a streaming service than a babysitter. Disney+ features everyone from Snow White to Darth Vader to Iron Man, and even Homer Simpson. Moreover, it's the only place to catch new TV series set in the world of Marvel and Star Wars.

How to get it Although it's new, this is a mega-budgeted Disney product, so the service will be available on pretty much every smart TV and streaming gadget from day one. You can also find it by searching on the Android and Apple app stores, so children can watch it on tablets or smartphones. disneyplus.com

NOW TV

Price Entertainment: £8.99/month (for HD), Cinema: £11.99/month

Why subscribe Designed for people who want to watch the occasional Sky programme, without drilling holes for a satellite. So if you want to watch the latest HBO shows on Sky Atlantic, you subscribe to the Entertainment Pass; for new movies, plump for Sky Cinema. (The Sports Pass is currently unavailable.)

How to get it The Now TV Stick (£24.99) is a well-made piece of kit that accesses other services such as Netflix as well as Now TV, although Sky hopes you'll use it to buy a few Entertainment Passes. nowtv.com

APPLE TV+

Price £4.99/month

Why subscribe A star-studded line-up – featuring Jennifer Aniston, Steven Spielberg, Steve Carell, Reese Witherspoon and Oprah Winfrey – has yet to produce a must-watch series, but Apple has the drive (and money) to make it work.

How to get it Apple TV+ is baked into most of their products, from iPhones to MacBooks. For watching on television, the confusingly titled Apple TV 4K (£179) is a swanky box that will give a pristine image. As a bonus, if you buy a new Apple device, you get one year of Apple TV+ free.

BRITBOX

Price £5.99/month

Why subscribe Just because streaming is new doesn't mean we have to abandon the classics. A collaboration between the BBC, ITV and now Channel 4, this features British gems such as Gavin & Stacey, Endeavour, Broadchurch, Peep Show and The Inbetweeners.

How to get it BritBox isn't ubiquitous yet, but it does have apps for Android and Apple devices. It is also available for Samsung and Panasonic smart TVs, but before you buy a new set, consider a Google Chromecast dongle (google.com/chromecast, £30). With this, you start watching something on your phone, press a button (the rectangle with lines in the corner) and it transfers to your television. britbox.co.uk JONATHAN HOLMES

How to stream TV

Confused by the many streaming services on offer? Doctor Digital is your helpful guide

AND HERE ARE SOME STREAMING SERVICES YOU CAN GET FOR FREE...

BBC iPLAYER

It's free to watch BBC shows via iPlayer (bbc.co.uk/iplayer). All you need to do is register with a BBC account to get access to a raft of programming that is also free to download. Access this either via an app through your TV, or simply watch via your computer online.

ITV HUB

ITV programmes are free to catch up with via ITV Hub. Look for the icon on your TV's apps section, or visit itv.com/hub to watch programmes from ITV, ITV2, ITV3, ITV4, ITVBe and CITV. It's free to register, but to download shows or watch without adverts, there's ITV Hub+ (£3.99 per month).

ALL 4

To catch up on Channel 4, E4, More4, Film4 and Walter Presents programmes, sign up for free for an All 4 account online (channel4.com). Similar to ITV, Channel 4 also have All 4+, which enables you to watch without adverts for £3.99 a month.

MY 5

Channel 5's shows are also available for free, either through the app on your TV or the website my5.tv, where there's not only programming from Channel 5 available to catch-up with, but also the likes of Blaze and the Smithsonian Channel.

Something old, something new

Delve into the drama

The Emmy-nominated Acorn TV Original series Queens of Mystery is a contemporary, warm-hearted spin on the whodunit tale. It follows perennially single detective Matilda Stone (Olivia Vinall, The Woman in White, Apple Tree Yard) and her three crime-writing aunts, who help her solve murder mysteries in the picturesque village of Wildemarsh. But, no matter how many cases they're able to crack, there's one mystery that still haunts Matilda – the disappearance of her own mother, a crime she'll never stop trying to solve.

This all-star adaptation of Agatha Christie's And Then There Were None is rich in mystery and suspense

Keeping Faith is the acclaimed and compelling mystery drama starring Eve Myles

Michael Kitchen and Honeysuckle Weeks star in the much-loved drama series Foyle's War

Acorn TV has a great offering of new series and classic dramas, from firm favourites like Foyle's War to the exclusive Queens of Mystery

As television moves into the streaming era, many channels are trying to offer something for everybody. Acorn TV, the leading streaming service for British and international television, isn't trying to offer something for everybody. This is something just for you.

The contract- and advert-free platform launches this week in the UK, offering the finest selection of TV drama, starting with the exclusive premiere of the colourful Queens of Mystery. The series follows a young policewoman working under the watchful eye of three crime-writing aunts who aren't afraid to meddle, for better or worse, when it comes to solving cases.

While Acorn TV champions bold and compelling new dramas, it also boasts a curated collection of British classics, like the much-loved Keeping Faith and Agatha Christie adaptations such as And Then There Were None and The Witness for the Prosecution. It also offers international fare, including the thrilling Finnish drama Black Widows, in which three women must bear the cost of their husbands' criminality.

You'll find that Acorn TV is really easy to access, too. It's available on devices such as Fire TV, Apple TV, Roku and Android and Apple mobile. Plus, it will soon be coming to Amazon channels. At only £4.99 a month and with brand-new shows and episodes set to be released every Monday after its launch, Acorn TV is everything you are looking for in the world of TV drama and mystery. There's never been a better time to dive right in.

Normal does me nicely

Alison Graham says this drama beats the book hands down

IHAVE CUT MY hair with nail scissors. I know, I know, this is a truly terrible idea. But I haven't done anything drastic, just a snip here and there. At the back, nothing obvious.

Frankly, I expect to emerge from lockdown with plaits, looking like an old, bad-tempered children's literature character. I won't have a flock of goats like Heidi, though, only because I'm pretty sure I won't be able to get them in the lift at RT's offices once we all return.

I'm sure we will all stagger into the light complete with not only new hair and goat-dreams but also with a whole new set of character quirks and silly habits.

I have developed some daft, "fooling myself" lockdown foibles. I've taken to shifting cushions on my sofa and sitting in a different place to con myself into thinking that, actually, I'm working somewhere different from my front room. I am still in my front room, of course.

Maybe I'll switch on this lamp, but not that lamp, just for a change. Or sit at the kitchen table watching repeats of Frasier while I'm having breakfast, rather than combing the BBC News website for doomy coronavirus stories.

Sometimes I watch Daily Kitchen with Matt Tebbutt and Jack Monroe, who keep talking about "leftovers". Leftovers? Who has leftovers? There are people who don't eat absolutely everything on their plate at once? They leave stuff?

Even I realise I've gone a bit soft in the head and I shall tell you why – I love Normal People (Monday BBC1 and on iPlayer).

This probably doesn't sound terribly revelatory, but I hated Sally Rooney's book, a brittle love story about two young people, Connell and Marianne, who fall for each other in the sixth form and find the road to and through love very rocky indeed. I ended up exasperated and wanting to knock their heads together.

Normal People, like Wolf Hall and Ian McEwan's Saturday, were books that I could not bear and finished out of what I can only describe as spite. I'm sorry about Wolf Hall, I really am, but it bored me to catatonia. As for Saturday, I recall vividly reaching a fork in the road where I either threw it at the wall or kept reading in a fog of black hatred. I chose the latter.

'I want Connell and Marianne to find lasting happiness'

As for Normal People, I was pounced upon by two charming booksellers in a well-known book chain in a northern city (Durham) as I hovered over the Normal People table. It was Christmas and the books were even wrapped in Normal People wrapping paper. It had become a phenomenon by this point.

No, no, it's not my kind of thing, I protested as these two young women fluttered around me, insisting that they loved it and I would, too. But it's about young people like you, I protested, I don't care about young people! But their sales pitch was irresistible so I bought it.

SO I READ Normal People and hated it. Yet the television version is rather lovely, mainly because it's brilliantly cast, with Cold Feet's Daisy Edgar-Jones as Marianne and newcomer Paul Mescal as Connell. I'm only two episodes in (the entire series is available on iPlayer) but unlike the book, I want Connell and Marianne to find lasting happiness by overcoming their obstacles of class, shyness and Connell's sheer bloody male-ness. You'll know what I'm talking about.

But as they approach their love, and their love-making (explicit but done sensitively and not in a pervy way) they are tentative and shy.

It's rare, I find, that a television version of a book improves on its source material. But I think Normal People could be a first.

WILL LOVE CONQUER?

Marianne (Daisy Edgar-Jones) and Connell (Paul Mescal) in Normal People

The pick of today's TV

ONLY JUST BEGUN?

Anna (Anne Regine Ellingsaeter) and Christian (Amund Harboe) at their engagement party

PICK OF THE DAY State of Happiness 9.00pm, 9.45pm BBC4

DRAMA New series If I tell you this Norwegian saga follows the way the oil industry transformed the coastal city of Stavanger from the 1960s onwards, you might decide to pass.

So picture it instead as Norway's answer to Mad Men: a beautifully mounted period story full of chic clothes, horn-rimmed glasses and carefree smoking. But with oil instead of advertising.

That comparison sets the bar high, maybe too high, but State of Happiness is seductive, and crisply written in a way that unfolds more like a novel than a drama. We start at the engagement party of youngsters Anna and Christian. Anna is a sheep farmer's daughter, but ambitious, hoping to get a job in the mayor's office; Christian comes from a well-heeled family, but has chosen to work as a diver on a North Sea rig.

Sadly, its American owners plan to pull the plug: they're convinced there's no future in it... DAVID BUTCHER

ITV Football Classics

5.00pm ITV

SPORT In these desperate, football-free times, ITV's Clive Tyldesley has been reduced to commentating on his wife cooking dinner on YouTube, so here's a welcome chance to hear him and his predecessors doing what they do best. For eight weeks, ITV will prise open their football archives to sate the appetite of a goal-starved nation, beginning with the 1987 FA Cup final between Wembley aristocrats Tottenham Hotspur and provincial underdogs Coventry City.

For anyone too young to remember it, we won't give any spoilers, but expect a proper old-school cup final featuring a gravity-defying header and an England defender writing himself into pub-quiz infamy by scoring for both sides. CHRIS HUGHES

The Dad's Army Story

6.00pm BBC2

DRAMA It's been feast or famine for the faithful: weeks of nothing and now a double header. The Dad's Army Story charts the meeting, partnership and battles with the Beeb of two of our finest comedy writers, Jimmy Perry and David Croft. Whisking us back to the smoky 60s – all brown and beige, big specs and high hems – writer Stephen Russell shows a lightness of touch and a deep affection for the sitcom. Paul Ritter and Richard Dormer are superb as flamboyant Perry and commanding Croft.

Dad's Army at 7pm is The Godiva Affair, with its wonderfully whiffly prologue and romantic intrigue. And on Friday, ITV is showing the 2016 film – Michael Gambon's Godfrey is the standout. MARK BRAXTON

Pointless Celebrities

6.50pm BBC1

QUIZ I doubt there's ever been a time when virtual pub quizzes have been so popular. Many home-made versions created in lockdown have Pointless to thank for inspiration, so there may be a few extra viewers tuning in to nick some quizzical ideas.

It's an 80s edition, which may challenge your memory banks as well as your brain cells. One pairing has a disastrous first round: surprising as it involves identifying famous faces from the 80s – I mean, really, could they have made it any easier? Amusingly, Jason Donovan (who also closes the show singing his hit Too Many Broken Hearts) reads out the questions for the head-to-head – including one about himself.

JANE RACKHAM

Casualty

7.40pm BBC1

DRAMA Receptionist Noel (Tony Marshall) rarely gets a storyline of his own and when he does, it's usually underwhelming. Remember the time it was revealed that he collected toy action figures? I know. I'm still reeling, too. But tonight, he's given a belated chance to shine – first, when he complains to Connie about being overworked, and then later, as he starts to get suspicious about an odd dynamic within a family.

There's also drama for pregnant paramedic Fenisha (Olivia D'Lima), who's heading to the clinic to get a termination. Only, wouldn't you just know it, she suddenly has to treat an injured single mum who's able to offer up some handily timed life lessons. DAVID BROWN

PRINCESS MARGARET ON SCREEN

The life and loves of the Queen's sister are recounted in the documentary Princess Margaret: the Royal Rebel (9pm Yesterday). But the story has also lent itself to drama, with viewers wanting to discover more advised to seek out the performances by Helena Bonham Carter and Vanessa Kirby in Netflix's The Crown.

Bel Powley co-starred in the frothy and fun A Royal Night Out, which finds Princesses Margaret and Elizabeth venturing out of Buckingham Palace to celebrate VE Day. Raunchy drama The Queen's Sister saw Lucy Cohu play a Margaret mired in drinking, drug abuse and depression. And Harriet Walter showed a caustic and cruel side to the princess in Patrick Melrose. At the other end of the spectrum, there's a portrayal of Margaret as a little girl in The King's Speech, with Ramona Marquez (aka Karen from Outnumbered) in the role. DAVID BROWN

Britain's Got Talent

8.00pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT We're around the halfway mark for this year's auditions and there have been plenty of memorable moments. Nurse Beth Porch's self-penned song struck a chord with the mood of the nation, while unicyclist Wesley Williams left hearts in mouths for a different reason. Granted, much of the jeopardy was probably added in the edit, but peddling around the stage on one wheel, 22 feet up, is no mean feat.

BGT is always eager to run the gamut of emotions and tug at the heartstrings, and the embodiment of this is surely the rumour that Captain Tom Moore could perform on the Britain's Got Talent final when it finally airs later this year. There won't be a dry eye. FRANCES TAYLOR

Outnumbered/ Gavin & Stacey

8.30pm/9.00pm, 9.30pm BBC1

SITCOM With Auntie Angela and step-cousin Misty already ensconced in the Outnumbered household, the sudden arrival of exchange student Ottfried prompts Sue to treat him to some Anglo-Saxon. Fun though the scripted chaos is, I love the child's logic of the sibling interactions, in this case, Karen (Ramona Marquez) talking to Ben about nightmares: "At night all the stuff wiggles around in your head and makes weird films for you."

Then it's the night of Gavin's stag do and Stacey's hen's, and Mick asks Pam who's going? "Chinese Alan... Budgie, Luggy, Gary and Simon, Dirtbox, Fingers, Smithy, Swede and Jesus." The parties are as raucous, then as tearful, as you'd expect. MB

VE Day: The Lost Films

8.30pm Channel 5

HISTORY Running through the week on different channels there's a conga line of programmes looking back to the celebrations in May 1945, and culminating on Friday, the 75th anniversary of VE Day. But for getting across the mood and flavour of the times, none of them will beat the clips assembled here, mostly from amateur film-makers and dug out after decades in storage.

High spirits and happiness radiate from the screen wonderfully as we watch kissing in Trafalgar Square, piggy-back races in Gateshead, a fancy-dress parade near Sheffield, a pipe band in Dumbarton, and in Kings Langley a hard-fought game between men, playing football, and women, playing netball. DAVID BUTCHER

IN THE FRAME

Lee Miller at the liberation of Rennes in France, August 1944

Lee Miller: a Life on the Front Line

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK

Photographer Lee Miller's son Antony Penrose is brutally frank as he talks of his mother: "I had known my mum as a useless drunk... a hysterical kind of person."

He and the rest of the world were to discover she was so much more when her photographic collection was unearthed in the attic of the family home, where Miller had packed it away and left it.

Miller, who died in 1977, lived an extraordinary life, as this excellent profile reveals. She was a model for American Vogue magazine, after its publisher Condé Nast had swept her out of the way of a car in New York. (Men generally fell at her feet.)

Miller went on to be the muse of photographer Man Ray before becoming a photographer herself, covering the Second World War for Vogue. Her images from the liberation of Dachau remain haunting and shocking to this day.

Sky's vampire weekend

Fangs at the ready for this sparkliest of Sky pop-up channels as, for the next two days, Sky Twilight shows all five films in the blood-sucking teen franchise. Taking the first bite is 2008's Twilight, in which lip-chewing high-schooler Bella (Kristen Stewart) falls for brooding classmate Edward Cullen (Robert Pattinson), only to discover he's a 108-year-old creature of the night. Their lovelorn saga plays out through New Moon, Eclipse and the Breaking Dawn two-parter. Wish Pattinson happy birthday next week, when he celebrates turning 34 years young. JOSH WINNING

The Bard's beginnings

Bill ★★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW
Members of TV's Horrible Histories make a promising feature debut with this ribald period romp that follows "Bill" Shakespeare (Mathew Baynton) as he leaves Stratford to make his fortune penning plays in London. But this writing lark is harder than it seems, and our Bard-in-waiting finds himself drawn into a plot by Philip II of Spain to kill Good Queen Bess. Among the cast, Simon Farnaby stands out as the foppish Earl of Croydon, while Helen McCrory cameos as a hilariously grotesque Elizabeth I. JAMIE HEALY

Charming ★★
5.00pm Sky Premiere
The best aspect of this middling animated fairy tale is its songs, some sung by Demi Lovato. Prince Charming (Wilmer Valderrama) is doomed until a spirited girl (Lovato), who's disguised as a boy, helps him on his bride quest. It's aimed at younger kids, and they may well be charmed. DAVE ALDRIDGE

GETTING THE HABIT
Van der Valk (Marc Warren) investigates a killing with religious overtones

PICK OF THE DAY Van der Valk 8.00pm ITV

DRAMA There's an unpleasant sequence at the start of the second feature-length episode as a young woman in her underwear (of course) is murdered in lingering close-up on a hotel bed.

The victim, who had very specific wounds, was a devout young Muslim woman with an interest in religious mysticism and erotica, appetites she fed at an Amsterdam library.

Police boss Piet Van der Valk (Marc Warren) and his band of archetypal side-kicks – the Unhappy Lesbian, the Inappropriate Oik, the Clever Underconfident One and a Maverick Pathologist Who Speaks With His Mouth Full – discover she had a friendship with a nun (Juliet Aubrey).

The Inappropriate Oik and the Clever Underconfident One visit a nunnery and of course the Inappropriate Oik flirts with one of the sisters. The story runs all over the place and is packed with creepy men. And they're not all cops. ALISON GRAHAM

Antiques Roadshow

7.15pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT How appropriate that painter Edward Burne-Jones's beautifully illustrated book of flowers is the first treasure brought in this week, because the Roadshow is at the National Botanic Garden of Wales.

But we then see an item that has Marc Allum "shaking with excitement": a bowler hat that allegedly belonged to Oddjob in the 007 film Goldfinger. It's a bit battered now because, as the owner says, so many young boys wanted to throw it like Oddjob did.

Later, Geoffrey Munn manages to contain his excitement when he's shown a tiny gold ring, even though it's so rare he calls it "the mother of all hen's teeth!" JANE RACKHAM

Race across the World: Revealed

8.00pm BBC2

REALITY The epic scramble across Latin America reached the finish line last Sunday, but by way of a victory lap, tonight's programme reunites all five couples to see how travelling 15,000 miles in 54 days by bus, train and kayak has changed them.

If ever a reality show could legitimately refer to its participants "going on an emotional journey", it's this one: the sequence of a visibly moved Emon and Jamiul attempting to help a homeless family in Sao Paulo remains one of the enduring moments of the series. Let's hope we also find out if the indefatigable Jen has finally recovered from wearing the same pants four days running. CHRIS HUGHES

VE Day in Colour: Britain's Biggest Party

8.00pm C4

HISTORY The opening frame to this collection of colourised footage invites comparisons with the present day: "Britain had been in lockdown" states a caption, before we cut to archive jubilant flag-waving outside Buckingham Palace. It's a scene that'll prompt viewers to project forward in their own minds to the day when current restrictions lift.

Away from celebrations in London, there are notes of caution – one resident of Norfolk recalls how she cycled to the coast once fighting had stopped, only to find the beaches out of bounds thanks to barbed wire and mines. But, in the main, this is a nostalgic hour purpose-built to raise spirits. DAVID BROWN

Homeland

9.00pm C4

DRAMA You need to wear a different hat to enjoy this once relevant spy drama now. After all, no threat to the world is greater than the one we're currently experiencing. That said, this final series, concerning a powder-keg situation in Pakistan, has been impressively staged. Carrie's recognition that she took poor, there-from-the-start Max for granted after his cheap dismissal was a significant moment. Because the writers did, too. But there again, perhaps Homeland has only ever been "The Saul and Carrie Show".

But deep distrust has replaced the former mentor-pupil relationship. In this last-ever episode, will Carrie (still impeccable Claire Danes) commit the ultimate betrayal? MARK BRAXTON

BBC YOUNG MUSICIAN 2020

■ Every two years we see this inspiring showcase for talented young players of classical music, but this time the contest may feel different.

■ BBC4 will be airing its usual highlights editions (7pm) of the category finals, in which we can hear extracts from performances and learn a bit more about the competing musicians. These shows are hosted by a newcomer, organist Anna Lapwood (see page 22).

■ In response to viewers who've called for entire concert performances to be shown, these will be available on iPlayer after the BBC4 editions have aired. Josie d'Arby (left) is hosting on stage.

■ The BBC will show all five category finals recorded before the lockdown. Tonight, it's the keyboard final.

■ The semi-final was also taped back in March, but is now being withheld till the autumn when – with luck – the grand final can be staged. Lots more time to practise, then... PATRICK MULKERN

David Stratton's Stories of Australian Cinema

9.00pm BBC4

ARTS New series The film industry is teeming with Aussies, from directors Peter Weir, Baz Luhrmann and George Miller to stars Nicole Kidman, Cate Blanchett and assorted Hemsworth brothers. In this 2017 series, film critic David Stratton provides an overview of how Australia developed its own cinematic style and was embraced by the world. The range is impressive, covering everything from schlocky "Ozploitation" films to the acclaimed arthouse hit Picnic at Hanging Rock.

The talking heads are a who's who of Australian cinema and they don't all agree – Muriel's Wedding director PJ Hogan is scathing about Crocodile Dundee: "I wanted the crocodile to eat him." DAVID CRAWFORD

Killing Eve

9.15pm BBC1

DRAMA Dasha's not happy with Villanelle: "You'd think that after the last managerial disaster [when she shot her protégée], you'd want to keep your head down!" she snaps, after the glamorous assassin dispatches another two people in an apparent fit of pique. Oh, and acquires a baby in the process.

Much of this episode, though, is about Carolyn, so the splendid Fiona Shaw gets some great scenes (the meeting held in her bathroom is especially fabulous). That these, and the occasional eviscerating line of dialogue, are so casually tossed into the mix is what makes Killing Eve so enthralling, although there's just the faintest feeling that it's trying too hard. JR

The Other Mother

11.05pm C4

DRAMA New series This Le Havre-set drama launches a French mini-season on Walter Presents, with one episode on Channel 4, luring us to the rest on All 4. Its opening instantly grabs you: a young boy tells a school psychologist that his parents aren't his parents. He has two mothers, he says, and one of them will die. Is this just a child's overactive imagination?

The psychologist thinks not, and takes the case to a ravishing female detective, with whom, this being a French show, he starts an affair. There are weird shifts of tone from supernatural thriller to 80s romcom, but you'll want to see how it unfolds. And the actor playing the kid is extraordinary.

PRECIOUS LIFE

A rare baby Tapanuli orangutan in Sumatra

Primates

8.15pm BBC1

NATURE The Tapanuli orangutan is one of the most recently discovered animals – and most endangered. It was only in 2017 that the species, confined to a forest plateau in northern Sumatra, was named, and immediately became the rarest of all great apes, with only 800 individuals left, and those under threat from logging and a new hydro-electric plant.

So enjoy the footage of it here while you can, as we learn about the bond between mother and infant as part of a programme on the theme of family ties. "Social living has been the making of primates," Chris Packham tells us, and we see how dusky leaf monkeys, golden lion-headed tamarins and other creatures with very cool names rely on family to survive. We also meet more of those poignant primate figures: the battle-scarred male past his prime and on the slide. DAVID BUTCHER

Boys Banged Up

BBC3, iPlayer

BBC radio presenter Stephen Nolan gains access to the youth wing of Hydebank Wood Prison in South Belfast, where offenders aged between 18 and 21 are the inmates in a revamped institution: after a string of negative reports, the jail has been re-imagined as a "college prison", where the "students" spend their days involved in training and education, even if they then spend their nights in cells like any other prisoners. Does it work? Nolan stalks the corridors to find out. All four episodes are available.

The Day Henry Met

6.20am Channel 5, My5

The weekend's brought two new 2D-animated stories about the curious boy who can talk to objects. Today it's Henry's first day at school, where he meets Apple – who is sitting on the desk of a teacher who feels unwell. With Apple's help, Henry steps up to teach the class and learn all about learning. JACK SEALE

FILM OF THE DAY

The King's Speech

10.30pm BBC1 (11.00pm Scotland, 11.30pm N Ireland)

Tom Hooper's acclaimed and moving period drama in which an unorthodox speech therapist (Geoffrey Rush) treats stammering new king George VI (Colin Firth) so he can talk to the nation.

Another side to Queen Vic

Victoria & Abdul ★★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

A little-known episode from the last years of Queen Victoria's reign provides the inspiration for this odd-couple tale. Summoned from Agra to present a commemorative coin, Abdul Karim (Ali Fazal) captures the attention of the ageing monarch (Judi Dench), whose open-hearted attitude towards this newcomer contrasts with the hostility of her household. Some of the comedy is a little too knockabout, but sly humour and genuine emotion abound as this fascinating true story emerges from the shadows of history. TREVOR JOHNSTON

Breakthrough ★★★ 5.00pm Sky Premiere

Based on a 2017 book by a devout American mother, this drama asserts that God and the power of prayer were key to the survival of a teenager who was trapped under a frozen lake for 15 minutes. The feature debut of TV director (and Star Trek: Voyager regular) Roxann Dawson will appeal mostly to the religiously inclined, but Chrissy Metz makes her presence felt as the boy's mum, and Topher Grace and Josh Lucas provide modest star power. However, the drawn-out ending will test even the most faithful. DAVE ALDRIDGE

See it first on MUBI

Ema ★★★★★ MUBI

This rousing and provocative film from Chilean director Pablo Larraín (Jackie) was denied a UK cinema release owing to the coronavirus pandemic, but arrives this weekend on MUBI. The entrancing Mariana Di Girolamo plays a dancer who uses her sexuality to manipulate those around her, as she strives to get back the son she gave up for adoption. EMMA SIMMONDS

HEARTBREAK
Is romance dead for Marianne (Daisy Edgar-Jones)?

PICK OF THE DAY Normal People 9.00pm, 9.30pm BBC1

DRAMA Anyone who has read Sally Rooney's bestseller about the barbed romance between Marianne and Connell will recognise that the pattern of their relationship is set in the first of tonight's two instalments (the full series is available on iPlayer). One of them does something emotionally bruising and unkind to the other, without any apparent reason, leaving the other humiliated and winded by pain.

Thus Connell (newcomer Paul Mescal, excellent) casually breaks the heart of his secret (from his sixth-form gang) girlfriend Marianne (Daisy Edgar-Jones, so good). Even Connell's mum, played by In the Woods's Sarah Greene, is furious at his callousness.

By tonight's second episode Connell has started his English course at Trinity College in Dublin, but he's finding it hard to fit in with his middle-class, articulate fellow under-graduates. Until one of them throws a party.

Richard and Judy: Keep Reading and Carry On

5.00pm C4

DAYTIME CHOICE New series For so many of us, being unable to browse our beloved bookshops is one of the hardships of lockdown. It might not sound like much, but a book-lover's connection to actual, physical books is deep and we feel bereft. Though we might not be able to leaf through a crisp new hardback in an actual shop, at least we can get together with Richard and Judy to talk about new releases and favourite reads as they return to daytime TV.

Richard and Judy's Book Club remains a powerful force in the industry so they have the clout to attract some good guests who will chat about what gets them turning pages. Every day until Friday. AG

The Great British Intelligence Test

9.00pm BBC2

SCIENCE What makes one brain smarter than another? Why do some brains age better than others? Why do studio-based shows include so much playful banter? Some of these questions are answered in a Horizon that packs valuable nuggets of science into a squishy format.

Hannah Fry and Michael Mosley air the results of an online experiment that was the largest of its kind – 250,000 Brits took part in tests of problem-solving, memory and so on. The main takeaway is that physical activity helps our brain power as much as our fitness. As to why Britain's best verbal skills are concentrated in Midlothian, science doesn't yet have the answer. DAVID BUTCHER

Celebrity SAS: Who Dares Wins

9.00pm C4

REALITY "Number seven and number one are at the top for fitness," says Ant Middleton as he appraises the remaining 11 recruits, although of course he adds a few F-words. "And number seven is a machine!" That may surprise you as he's referring to Paralympian Lauren Steadman and Joey Essex.

They aren't the most obvious team but, after being paired up for a forward-abseiling challenge, the Directing Staff reckon "they could annihilate everyone else on the board". However, the endurance trials are so brutal, it causes tension and earns them an ear bashing. Now the danger is they'll annihilate each other. JANE RACKHAM

How to Build British: Morgan

9.00pm More 4

DOCUMENTARY To give you an idea of the Morgan Plus Six, when Richard Hammond realised his next car might be the last before he went electric, he chose a Plus Six. It's a classic sports car with the vintage lines of something Toad of Toad Hall would go for. We see craftspeople get to work with hammers, chisels, planes and little saws to make it, using, we're told, "techniques as old as motoring itself".

The body-frame is made of wood, for heaven's sake, and the hood from mohair. It goes from 0–60mph in a shade over four seconds but doesn't bother with airbags or traction control – too modern. Poop-poop! DAVID BUTCHER

A mere fortnight ago, Whitney in EastEnders (8pm BBC1) was fretting about going to prison, little realising that she'd soon be being held captive by Maniacal Michaela, who is now admitting that she blames herself for Leo's death. Max and Gray, meanwhile, are springing into action to free Whit, who I'm sure will be thrilled to hear that her fate rests in the efforts made by a sex pest and an abusive control freak.

Neighbours (1.45pm Channel 5) is on a stripped-back thrice-weekly schedule,

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

airing on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. But production looks set to return to normal levels soon following a brief coronavirus shutdown. There are, though, new rules in place: no hand holding or characters kissing, cast and crew split into three groups, as well as a certain amount of camera wizardry to make it seem as though actors who are physically distanced appear closer together. See if you can spot the join in the months ahead, once the scenes make it to screen. DAVID BROWN

9.00pm 5USA

DRAMA Excavation work at a cemetery throws up a problem: the decaying corpse of a navy lieutenant has been found in someone else's coffin. So, who put it there? The team immediately starts searching for answers, but only after much fuss is made about the olfactory overload coming from the body. Mind you, if this episode were scratch-and-sniff, I think we'd all be having trouble keeping our dinners down.

In the midst of all this, Gibbs and McGee are having psychiatric evaluations following their harrowing experiences in Paraguay. One agent appears cool and collected, the other less so. But will you be able to guess which of them is doing their best to mask the trauma? DAVID BROWN

DRAMA David Collins is an angry man. After seven years in prison for murdering his wife Tara, he is freed on a technicality: a problem with the forensic evidence means the case against him is in tatters.

Chris (Unforgotten) Lang's 2018 drama is powerfully good and gets a welcome repeat, running nightly until Thursday. Lee Ingleby is David, seething with loathing for his sister-in-law Alice (Hermione Norris), who with her husband has brought up David and Tara's two children as their own since their mum's death.

It's an instantly absorbing story with a subtle central performance by Ingleby (who coincidentally returns to BBC1 in The A Word tomorrow) as a shunned, angry man. AG

PROPERTY New series If you've ever randomly channel-hopped, you may have come across the Property Brothers, toothsome Canadian twins Drew and Jonathan Scott, who gussy up homes for north Americans. Now they've got a new show, and it's a winning formula – celebrities help out someone close to them – although the churlish might find it patronising.

In this first episode, a laidback Brad Pitt wants the boys to makeover the Santa Monica garage of his long-time makeup artist and friend, Jean Black ("She's one of the good ones"). He's pretty hands on, and the result is phenomenal. No mention of budget, but Pitt – and Ms Black – are suitably blown away, though they're far too cool for tears. GILL CRAWFORD

Isolation Stories

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA New series Let's give ITV a bouquet (delivered from a safe distance of course) for bringing us a clutch of dramas based specifically on characters socially isolating.

It's a very quick turn-around, of course – there will be a 15-minute story broadcast nightly until Thursday – so there was nothing to see as we went to press.

But the whole project sounds very promising indeed, as it's produced by the excellent Jeff Pope (A Confession, Little Boy Blue, Hatton Garden) and features some tip-top names.

Sheridan Smith stars in the first episode, written by Gaby Chiappe (Shetland, The Level), as heavily pregnant Mel (Smith is heavily pregnant in real life).

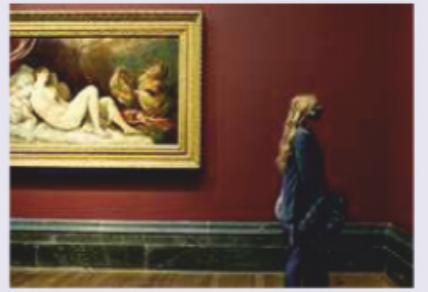

She's a woman facing up to a birth alone – and it's nothing to do with social distancing. The married father of her child isn't interested and her family has given her the cold shoulder. AG

Titian: Behind Closed Doors

iPlayer (expires today)

Strip fully naked, adopt an inscrutable expression, recline on a couch and enjoy this re-assessment of Titian's sextet of paintings based on Ovid's Metamorphoses. They were to be the subject of a National Gallery exhibition in London – instead, while cameras linger over the canvases, experts including Mary Beard discuss their import and origins, and the Gallery's director explains how hard it was to reunite all six masterworks.

KIDS' CHOICE

Star Wars: the Clone Wars

Disney+

Twelve years on from its first episode, the animated movie spin-off – set before the events of Revenge of the Sith – reaches its epic conclusion. With the galaxy in chaos, Ahsoka and Rex must use all their cunning to outwit the dangerous forces that surround them. JACK SEALE

1/4. Coming of Age. A remarkable generation of British men and women, now in their 90s or over 100, look back on their experiences of living through recession in the 1930s and the Second World War. Victory in 1918 imbued a robust sense of patriotism, yet the inter-war years were marked by inequality and unrest. Still, when war broke out once more in 1939, those of age were ready to risk their lives for King and country. But the evacuation of the British Army from the beaches of Dunkirk was a wake-up call for those who expected a swift victory. Next episode tomorrow 7pm. Celebrate Star Wars day

May the fourth be with you! Few film series merit their own date on the calendar – but then few are as worthy as Star Wars. To mark the occasion, Sky Cinema is devoting an entire channel to the saga's epic first six films, as well as animated spin-off adventure The Clone Wars. Meanwhile, Disney+ subscribers can enjoy their own streaming bounty: as well as the films from the saga (bar The Rise of Skywalker, which arrives later this year), there's the final episode of the Clone Wars series, plus a new documentary going behind the scenes on original series The Mandalorian. CALUM BAKER

A wee one to savour

Local Hero ★★★★★ All4 FREE TO VIEW

This comedy drama firmly established Bill Forsyth as a major British film-maker. It's a lyrical tale that follows the attempt of Texas oilman Burt Lancaster to buy up an isolated Scottish village to build an oil refinery, without bargaining on the village's strength of community. Local Hero avoids the whimsy that irked Forsyth's previous outing, Gregory's Girl: the scenery is gorgeous, the performances are ironic and moving (Lancaster is superb), and Forsyth brings a sure directorial touch. SIMON ROSE

New to rent today

Playing with Fire ★★ iTunes/DVD

Former wrestler and Bumblebee co-star John Cena grapples gamely with this harmless romp about a macho bunch of California firefighters forced to babysit three kids after they become stranded by a storm. Predictable chaos ensues in a broad comedy that will appeal to less discerning younger viewers. DAVE ALDRIDGE

DRAMA OF THE WEEK The Hughes family has imploded in the two years since we last saw them. Paul and Alison (Lee Ingleby and Morven Christie) are divorced and living a hundred miles apart – Paul's still in the Lake District, while Alison has a flat in Manchester. As Peter Bowker's warm, spiky, involving family drama makes a welcome return, the end of the marriage is proving hard for son Joe, who has autism. He needs the safety of his strict, set routines but dividing himself between two households is challenging and leaves him confused and disconnected. He even stops listening to music on his headphones – a bad sign. "I'm OK. Aren't I?" he wonders.

Bowker, whose script pulses with humour, heart and fun, keeps Alison's dad Maurice (Christopher Eccleston) at full tilt at the centre of the story as he draws everyone's lives together with his rough-necked, bull-headed lack of emotional intelligence. (The entire series will be available as a box set on iPlayer after the first episode goes out.) ALISON GRAHAM

Life and Birth

8.00pm BBC1 (10.45pm Scotland)

DOCUMENTARY There are many women, like yoga teacher Roo, who arrive at hospital laden with special music and candles because they know exactly how they want their birth to go. But it doesn't always go according to plan; 56 hours after Roo's labour started, the baby still hasn't arrived.

We also meet third-time mum Fay, who discovered she had cervical cancer when she was pregnant with her second child; and Hayleigh, whose induced labour is taking a very long time indeed. One of these women is remarkably honest and reveals that, after the birth, it took her 24 hours before she felt anything about her new baby.

Your Home Made Perfect

8.00pm BBC2

PROPERTY The genius of this show is that it has three "reveal" scenes. First, each of the two architects reveal their rival designs via the show's so-real-you-could-touch-it virtual reality – cue lots of "Wow!" and "Look at that!" from the homeowners. Then – once they've picked which one they want – we jump forward a few months for another knockout moment as we see the vision made real.

The only catch comes when the couple involved don't play ball: "I hate it," says Christine tonight as she sees what she and husband Dennis are being offered for their large house in Margate. She'll take some persuading. DAVID BUTCHER

The Architecture the Railways Built

8.00pm Yesterday

DOCUMENTARY Presenter Tim Dunn is endearingly, breathlessly excited boarding an engine belonging to the Ffestiniog railway in north Wales: "This is one of my favourite rides in the world!" He is so enthusiastic you want to ruffle his hair and give him candyfloss.

It's this very delight that makes this such a pleasure, a piece of escapism from the days when you could board a train without anyone asking where you were going and why.

Dunn jumps into a pit to check out one of the steam engines, or "iron horses" as he calls them, and visits a pretty trackside railway cottage once used for holidays by spy Kim Philby's eccentric dad. AG

Inside the Factory

9.00pm BBC2

FACTUAL Bill Jordan was a musician touring California 50 years ago when he developed a taste for the local hippies' granola. His family owned a flour mill, so when he got back to Britain, Bill decided to launch a version here, later compressing it into snack form and helping spark the 80s craze for "healthy" cereal bars.

Ruth Goodman meets Bill as we learn that Britons now eat 15 million cereal bars a week, and see Gregg Wallace jape his way round a factory in Essex where they're made. We also track the macadamia nuts involved, and visit the vineyard where the sultanas come from. Key fact: sultanas and raisins both start as white grapes. DAVID BUTCHER

Jean Slater (Gillian Wright, right) in EastEnders (7.30pm BBC1) may be all giggly on the surface, but as we've seen in the past, a darkness lurks within, especially when problems with her mental health resurface. At the moment, Jean's off her medication, so she's lurching from one fiery confrontation to the next, even going so far as to take on that old bruiser Phil Mitchell. No wonder a concerned Kush (Davood Ghadami) is desperately trying to ensure that she takes her tablets.

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Doctors (1.45pm BBC1) throws up one of those "Now where have I seen her before?" questions when a woman by the name of Joan writes to Emma at her Aunty Em radio show. Just so you're not left searching your memory banks, Joan is played by Roberta Kerr, one-time council mole Wendy, who got passionate with Ken on Corrie when he was owner of the Weatherfield Recorder. Can't you just hear Deirdre yelling, "Not Wendy flamin' Crozier!"? DAVID BROWN

Paul Hollywood Eats Japan

9.00pm C4

FOOD There are some screeching and abrupt changes of tone in the second episode of Hollywood's Japanese odyssey. He visits Hiroshima, visits the peace garden... but, hey, Hiroshima is a big foodie destination! Let's hunt its delicacy, a deep-filled pancake!

No one could pull that off comfortably but it's even more difficult for a travelogue with a jaunty narration and a man who just wants to find some nice bread.

It's a pity, as this is actually an entertaining tour of a land that produces some extraordinary food. Even snacks on Japanese trains are a cut above, as he meets an aficionado of railway bento boxes – 12 million a week are sold to passengers. AG

Miss Scarlet and the Duke

9.00pm Alibi

DRAMA "Why must everything lead to combat with you?" A question that the harassed DI William "the Duke" Wellington (Stuart Martin) asks of private investigator Eliza Scarlet (Kate Phillips). Is it perhaps because Lizzie proves far more capable of solving Scotland Yard's cases than any of its officers? Or because she is starting to get under his skin?

The last of Rachael New's short but entertaining series finally pegs down the plot's loose guy ropes – the forgery gang, the manner of Henry Scarlet's demise, and so on – and nudges the two leads a little closer together. It's all set up for series two, so the ball's in your court, Alibi...

MARK BRAXTON

Tintoretto: a Rebel in Venice

9.00pm Sky Arts

ART This lengthy study of the Venetian Late Renaissance painter begins, presciently, with a description of how the plague ravaged Italy in the 16th century – and how Tintoretto responded to the deaths of almost a third of his fellow citizens. From then on it's a straightforward run through his life, with a cast of art historians on rotation competing to see who can say "ground-breaking" most often as they go into painstaking detail over Tintoretto's style and techniques.

While his art is often described as cinematic, the documentary is shot in a painterly manner in direct contrast to the muscular style of Tintoretto's works, which the camera lingers over admiringly. DAVID CRAWFORD

Rob and Romesh vs Ballet

9.00pm Sky 1

COMEDY The bromantic travelogue returns with a premise so obvious you wonder why they didn't use it the first time around: squeeze two comedians into tights and make them train at a ballet school.

"Dancers have the best bodies in the world," says Romesh Ranganathan, articulating his insecurity. And, sure enough, the lads emerge from the changing room resembling the rhythm section in an over-the-hill heavy metal band. Much to Romesh's dismay, Rob Beckett takes to ballet like a duck to water. Or, more aptly, like a swan to a lake, as they prepare for the Birmingham Royal Ballet's production of Tchaikovsky's classic.

Sure, this is humiliation humour at its most basic – but it's effective. Look out for the scene where the boys have to dunk themselves in an ice bath. There's no faking that level of abject terror. GARY ROSE

Jerry Seinfeld: 23 Hours to Kill

Netflix

The old master of observational stand-up is back with a new special: he's 66 years old now, so it's hardly surprising that his recent work hasn't exactly been cutting-edge material, but Seinfeld has settled well into the slightly conservative late period of his career. Here, he brings his smooth delivery and expertly constructed comic rhythms to musings on, among other fripperies: buffets, restaurants, phone calls, texting and Pop Tarts.

KIDS' CHOICE

Operation Ouch!

5.25pm CBBC, iPlayer

It's the ninth series of one of CBBC's best programmes. Doctors Chris and Xand van Tulleken are brilliant at explaining medical matters to kids, using real children's mishaps and illnesses to demystify what goes on in hospitals. The title of today's episode suggests a change of focus: Virus Alert. JACK SEALE

FILM OF THE DAY

Roxanne

6.50pm Sony Classic

Fred Schepisi directs and Steve Martin adapts and stars in this super-charming update of Cyrano de Bergerac. Martin plays the fire chief of a small American town who falls for local astronomer Daryl Hannah, but will his nose get in the way of romance? See page 27

Treasure for the taking

Three Kings ★★★★★ 9.30pm TCM

This superb – though very violent – mix of comedy, drama and action unfolds at the end of the Gulf War, where US soldiers George Clooney, Ice Cube and Mark Wahlberg hear a rumour that Saddam Hussein has gold stashed away in bunkers. The trio sets out to grab the bullion and get rich, but their quest is diverted when they help some tortured Iraqi dissidents. Wittily scripted by director David O Russell, it boasts terrific performances (especially from Clooney) and remains as gripping as it is unmissable. JOANNA BERRY

Birds of Prey: and the Fantabulous Emancipation of One Harley Quinn ★★★★★ Sky Store/iTunes

After taking her bow in ensemble piece Suicide Squad, Margot Robbie's antihero Harley Quinn gets her own feature, now available to download ahead of its DVD release on 15 June. Quinn assembles an all-female posse, including Huntress (Mary Elizabeth Winstead) and Black Canary (Jurnee Smollett-Bell), to rescue a girl from Ewan McGregor's Black Mask. The pace stumbles and the plot baffles, but that's forgivable when the film is such a joyful thrill ride. TERRY STAUNTON

A Manhattan affair

5 to 7 ★★★★★ My5

FREE TO VIEW

Struggling New York writer Anton Yelchin begins an affair with a married French woman (Bérénice Marlohe) in this romance, available on C5's catch-up service. Wrapped in soft focus and a swooning soundtrack, this Manhattan fairy tale may not be realistic in the slightest, but it has enough charm to gloss over its flaws. JAMES LUXFORD

PICK OF THE DAY

The Great British Sewing Bee

9.00pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT Only one of the remaining ten stitchers has ever made children's clothing, attempted smocking or used the embroidery device on their sewing machine. "Ooh, I think they're between a smock and a hard place," jokes Joe Lycett who, for the first time this series, is called upon to comfort a tearful contestant. Not straightaway, though, because the children's smocked dresses they all produce in the first challenge are utterly charming – and, surprisingly, the best one is made by a complete novice.

The transformation challenge is hilarious: to turn a sleeping bag into a food-themed fancy dress costume. Incredibly, they make a cheeseburger, sushi, a bunch of grapes and a bag of crisps. "I'm going to send you home this week," a mock-exasperated Patrick Grant tells Esme Young after she fails to recognise an outfit that's supposed to be a slice of pizza.

They're fantastic – but a round of applause, too, for this week's sassy young models who show off the cute dungarees that have been tailor-made for them.

Great British Menu

8.00pm BBC2

FOOD It's probably something to do with my age, but I tend to exclaim, "What is it with chefs and tattoos?" as yet another heavily inked contestant/veteran steps up to the pass. Tom Brown, a former finalist, is another illustrated man, and this week the veteran chef casts his gimlet eye over chefs from the north east of England. I wonder if he'll fit the archetype – unsmiling, unforgiving, enigmatic or plain frosty – as he asks, "Do you think your sauce worked?" or "What marks would you award yourself?"

Tonight the chefs must produce a starter and a fish course based on the idea of "realism in children's literature". ALISON GRAHAM

Absolutely India: Mancs in Mumbai

8.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY The Thomas brothers – Ryan, Adam and Scott – are cheerful and charming and full of exactly the kind of beans this sort of featherweight travelogue needs. The format doesn't exactly stretch them. Mostly, we're treated to their spontaneous reactions to various Mumbai experiences, along the lines of "It's surreal!" or "That's intense!"

Best quote tonight goes to their dad Dougie. When a local barber sets Scott's hair on fire, Dougie deadpans, "I should've brought marshmallows."

Otherwise, they meet up with a long-lost cousin and visit a Buddhist meditation hall. Ryan reckons, "It has the feel of the Trafford Centre."

DAVID BUTCHER

Devs

9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA Devs writer/director Alex Garland uses music very cleverly. On the soundtrack of this penultimate episode, John Martyn's winsome Sweet Little Mystery accompanies a brutal sequence.

The whole series, which ends tomorrow, has been bonkers, but it's a brilliantly well-realised type of bonkers as young software expert Lily gets closer to the heart of the Devs operation, where a jumble of boffins led by weird boss Forest have found a way to see into the past. (Forest and his girlfriend Katie watch the Palaeolithic Lascaux cave painters at work.)

And we meet sacked employee Lyndon again. He really wants his job back. AG

The sight of Yasmeen (Shelley King) in her prison cell has me thinking that Coronation Street (7.30pm ITV) is set to do a fictional version of the Sally Challen case, jailed for nine years for killing her abusive husband. But do viewers have the emotional strength to cope with another campaign to Free the Weatherfield One? This storyline has been punishing enough already – both for Yasmeen and for us. Our only hope is that, as the police search No 6 for evidence, they come across the CCTV cameras that Geoff used to monitor his wife's movements. Fingers crossed there'll be footage of the coercive control Yasmeen was subjected to before she fought back.

Elsewhere, there's news for anyone who thought Nina was only concerned about going bat-watching. When a couple of lads heckle Asha, they're clocked by Nina, who marches over and punches one of them. With her affection for bats, might she end up becoming Corrie's caped crusader? DAVID BROWN

Run

9.00pm Sky Comedy

DRAMA After that revealing layover in Chicago, runaways Ruby and Billy (Merritt Wever and Domhnall Gleeson) are back on a train, heading to Los Angeles. Their plans are, as yet, woolly, and Ruby still has a heartline to her past life, especially when her husband tries to make contact. But they're not alone on their fugitive trail, as someone else is on the train who wants the contents of Billy's shabby backpack.

The tone of the show is shifting, as there are chases, confrontations and more revelations, including about the journey itself. "Are those cowboys?" wonders Ruby as she gazes out of the window at the great American landscape rushing past.

DRAMA Troubled US Army veteran Dex Parios (the splendid Cobie Smulders) has a case. She may not officially be a private investigator just yet, but her ever-helpful pal Gray has arranged for her to meet a sad sack who found the woman of his dreams in a bar, then lost her. It's easy for Dex to locate the woman (Girls' Zosia Mamet), but getting her money proves to be the least of her problems.

Dex isn't the only one in a heap of trouble, though. As we flash back to how she and Gray met six years previously, shadows from his past return to haunt him, too. It's all smartly plotted, there are neat hints to the show's comic-book origins, and Dex, with all her issues, is a real character to root for. GC

COMEDY The robocop comedy hits its stride in the second episode. As the murdered DI John Major, who has been resurrected in an AI-augmented reboot, Daniel Mays has real fun playing a gung-ho cop with a glitch in his brain – there's a great running gag about Americanisations creeping into his speech after a (US) software update and a hilarious scene where two rival detectives go to town on Major with all their best computer puns.

As Major's partner Carver, Stephen Graham is a perfect straightman and, along with Anna Maxwell Martin as Kelly, Major's wife and Carver's lover, imbues the show's emotional beats about their love triangle with a tender poignancy. DAVID CRAWFORD

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA The central conflict of Lennie James's towering drama, as it reaches its devastating conclusion, is that no one can rely on Nelly, yet everyone relies on Nelly. They have to, there is no one else with his bottomless heart and a soul that's never full. It can always find room for one more lost lamb.

Everyone needs something from Nelly and he can never say no, which means someone is going to end up disappointed. His daughter Jody, lost to the family for so long, is starting to open up about her terrible, unimaginable exploitation. She slowly gives a patient therapist small nuggets of information about her ordeal, though it is a long, difficult process that crushes her and her family.

But Nelly must also try to take care of Grace, the abused and trafficked girl he found at the end of series one, who is so angry and let down. She needs Nelly, but he can't be there. Yet, maybe he can... AG

Stacey Dooley on Lockdown Heroes

BBC3 (from today), iPlayer

Nothing can stop TV's most indefatigable documentarist from making programmes. Here, the BBC3 veteran uses social media to find people who are doing extraordinary things despite quarantine: a teacher in Wigan, for example, whose drive to make her own PPE for healthcare workers has grown into an operation where she manages 70 seamstresses. There's also an expectant mum, a junior doctor and a man dedicated to helping Glasgow's homeless.

9.00 The Great British Sewing Bee

RT 3/10 Series 6. It's children's week, so judges Patrick Grant and Esme Young kick off the pattern challenge with a classic for a little girl's wardrobe – a smocked dress. The task requires the sewers to make their own bias binding, a Peter Pan collar and, trickiest of all, a smocked bodice. Next, in the transformation challenge, the contestants let their imaginations run wild as they turn sleeping bags into food-shaped fancy dress. Finally, mini-models arrive for the made-to-measure, for which the brief this week is to make a pair of dungarees for a girl or boy that must be perfectly fitted while still allowing freedom of movement to play in. See p80.

Starter for tenor

Pavarotti ★★★★★ Amazon Prime

This documentary traces the life of Luciano Pavarotti, the operatic tenor whose voice reached an audience beyond the world of opera lovers. Director Ron Howard charts how the terrors of the Second World War and a near-tragic childhood illness foreshadowed Pavarotti's drive to break into the opera scene. Splendid archive footage highlights the star's particular combination of charisma and vocal potency, ensuring this feature will appeal to the cognoscenti and casual fans alike. TREVOR JOHNSTON

Ealing comedy on iPlayer

Three classics from the world's oldest film studio leave BBC iPlayer this week, so catch them while you can. Alec Guinness stars as a stifled inventor in The Man in the White Suit, notable as one of Ealing's more hard-edged satires, and the film in which Guinness performed his own mansion-scaling stunt. In Whisky Galore!, Basil Radford battles booze-smuggling islanders, while a railway line is reopened in bright comedy The Titfield Thunderbolt. A Tuesday Documentary special about Ealing is also available to stream on the service. Maximum laughs are guaranteed. JOSH WINNING

A beast of burden

Calm with Horses ★★★★★

Curzon Home Cinema

Now available to own, this debut feature from Nick Rowland stars Cosmo Jarvis as an enforcer for a criminal family in western Ireland. Tasked with carrying out a murder, Jarvis is forced to confront his conscience, which is when this predictable crime tale morphs into a triumphant tragedy. KAREN KRIZANOVICH

WELCOME COMMITTEE
Fred Sirieix and the team are ready for some more

PICK OF THE DAY First Dates Hotel 9.00pm c4

REALITY Georgia and Rachael are still on their dates with Blain and Robbie – but making eyes at each other across the restaurant. The conversation is flowing and there's even a spot of flirting, but poor old Blain and Robbie are clearly at a disadvantage. Keep watching until the very end for a big surprise.

The situation is unusual (a first for the series, I think) but then so are 26-year-old opera singer Hannah and 24-year-old antiques dealer Alex.

A quintessential English gent, he wears a suit and tie by the pool and confesses, "There must be someone who gets me... although I'm not sure I get me!"

You'll be crossing your fingers and toes for them because they're adorable, with their impeccable manners and old-fashioned ways – it's such a change from the usual tats and banter. Although elsewhere, there's textbook banter between East End cabbie Josie and Essex roofer Martin. JANE RACKHAM

Pride and Prejudice

8.00pm BBC4

DRAMA When it was first broadcast in 1995, Andrew Davies's adaptation of Jane Austen's novel became a national treasure almost overnight, and eventually secured a place as one of the most beloved of all British television dramas.

With a repeat run presumably designed to give the nation some cheer, we can wallow again in the bumpily burgeoning love between spirited Elizabeth Bennet (Jennifer Ehle) and snippy, chilly, infuriating Mr Darcy (Colin Firth).

They first meet unpropitiously at a ball, when Mr Darcy is downright but sexily rude, refusing to make any small talk. Elizabeth is not impressed. Oh come on, you know the rest...

ALISON GRAHAM

Devs

9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA Brace yourselves for a mind-bending final episode in Alex Garland's epic, pretentious, portentous drama. Devs' boss Forest is out of control, though in a very quiet, greasy-hair-bad-beard sort of way. He's been driven to create a system that looks into the past as a means of reconnecting with his wife and daughter, both killed in a car crash he blames on himself.

But it's up to Lily to force a confrontation with Forest and his barmy, terrifying system, which turns out to be even more sinister than anyone could ever have imagined. Lily, bereaved and frightened, must pick up the reins of her future as she comes face to face with her barking boss. AG

Florence Nightingale

9.00pm BBC4

DRAMA Laura Fraser rises above a lumpen script as spirited young Florence in this BBC drama from 2008. A tough cookie returning home from the Crimean War, she's furious at the ineptitude of Britain's military bosses. She's seen men die in so-called hospitals foul with disease, and demands to be made head of a Royal Commission looking into the conduct of the war. Sadly, it backfires, leaving her sick, defeated and suffering from a crisis of faith.

This isn't a revisionist hatchet job. It's solidly instructive, reminding me of BBC Schools programmes in the 1970s, full of clunky dialogue ("You played the piano... something new by Mr Chopin") and men with stick-on mutton whiskers. AG

Brooklyn Nine-Nine

9.00pm E4

SITCOM Like the regular Halloween heists, Brooklyn Nine-Nine's clashes between Detective Jake Peralta (Andy Samberg) and Craig Robinson's devilish car thief Doug Judy (aka the Pontiac Bandit) have become a classic component of the series. But now that Jake and Judy are best friends, is there any more story to mine?

Well, yes – because when Jake goes away on Judy's bachelor party, he has to pose as a dastardly crook in order to get along with his new pal's less-than-salubrious wedding party. And given that this is a Pontiac Bandit episode, a few surprise double-crosses may be in order – so will their budding friendship survive? HUW FULLERTON

Have you ever noticed how some soap characters end up with a completely different personality from the one they started out with? Believe it or not, Phil Mitchell in EastEnders used to be quite pleasant company, while his lovably hapless relative Billy was once a sadist who terrorised his young nephew Jamie.

But it's Corrie's Roy Cropper (David Neilson, right) who has undergone the biggest transformation of them all. He's now the closest thing Weatherfield has to a living saint. In fact, he may be the nicest man in the whole of the North West. But back when Roy made his debut in July 1995, he had definite stalker potential, and was seen regularly pestering his neighbour, Deirdre (Anne Kirkbride). As unthinkable as it now sounds, today's episodes of Classic Coronation Street (2.50, 3.20pm ITV3) see Deirdre increasingly unnerved by Roy's advances. Twenty-five years later, of course, that sinister side has been entirely smoothed away. DAVID BROWN

Gangs of London

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA This week we focus on Lale, the Kurdish gangster woman whose motivation is sketched in by a nightmarish pre-title sequence. Clearly, she has every reason to hate Asif, the Pakistani Mr Big whose drug operation she punctured in last week's episode and whose money is now being packed into boxes of cereal.

But they both owe loyalty to the over-arching Wallace family organisation, now under new management. Who will Sean Wallace (Joe Cole) side with? Actually, the thing is: we don't care much about the shifting factions; we care about undercover cop Elliot, who has another bloody megafight, this time against a psycho with an axe, in a bathroom. DAVID BUTCHER

Rick and Morty

10.00pm E4

SITCOM The offbeat adventures of alcoholic super-genius Rick and his milquetoast grandson/sidekick Morty return this week, debuting the second half of the fourth series (five episodes were broadcast in 2019, five will arrive in 2020) with a riff on the book and film The NeverEnding Story called Never Ricking Morty. You see what they did there.

After episodes in the first half of the series featured time-travelling alien snakes, a toilet planet, a crystal of endless deaths, parallel shrimp universes, an alien invasion via daring heist and a very creepy collection of dragons, it's hard to know what weird and wonderful corners of the creators' imaginations this show will indulge next. HF

Brassic

10.00pm Sky 1

COMEDY DRAMA Sparkily scripted by Danny Brocklehurst, this likeable caper about a bunch of small-town misfits is situated in a sweet-spot somewhere between Shameless, Trainspotting and Last of the Summer Wine, with added pickled eggs.

Our heroes are Vinnie (Joe Gilgun, also the co-creator) and his gang of slapstick criminals who, as the second series opens, are hoping to buy the lease on a pole-dancing club by robbing a circus with the help of a clown (John Thomson); the joke is that Vinnie's gang are themselves a clown-car of hopeless cases.

Incidental pleasures include Dominic West pretending to be a dog and the line, "We can't un-steal a lion!" DAVID BUTCHER

Outlander

9.00pm More 4

DRAMA Well, we're definitely not in Scotland any more. The opening credits and changing theme tune of Outlander usually give a good hint of things to come, and as series four opens there are tomahawks and forests, and hints of banjo and gospel choir in there, too.

It's now 1767, and time-traveller Claire (Caitriona Balfe) and her Highlander husband Jamie (Sam Heughan) are in North Carolina, where they fetched up after their ship was wrecked in a storm. The episode begins with a hanging and doesn't end much better, but in between intimacy is restored – "When my body dies, my soul will still be yours, Sassenach", says Jamie, affectingly – and major decisions are made about the future, although Claire worries that they'll end up on the wrong side of history, again. And we meet a very bad man, and a very big dog. GILL CRAWFORD

STREAMING CHOICE

The best of streaming and catch-up

Alma's Not Normal
iPlayer (expires today)

Since this pilot aired, BBC2 has made one of the easiest decisions its comedy department will take all year: in time we're to get a full series of Sophie Willan's vibrant portrait of three generations of Bolton women. Willan (above, second left) is Alma, a jobless and newly dumped dreamer with a troubled mum and tough dynamo nan – the way Willan wraps her reckless, heartbroken characters in both love and fabulously rude gags suggests the advent of a major new comic voice.

KIDS' CHOICE

Jamie Johnson

5pm CBBC, iPlayer

The schoolkids who dream of becoming professional footballers one day continue to chase their destinies, in a new series-five episode of the sporting drama. Today: can Jamie (Louis Dunn) lead the mighty Phoenix FC to a cup final? Or will Duncan's secret come back to haunt him? JACK SEALE

FILM OF THE DAY

Hunt for the Wilderpeople

9.00pm Film4

A teenage tearaway and his grumpy uncle (played by Sam Neill) are forced to become fugitives in this charming 2016 comedy from New Zealand.

6.30 Britain's Greatest Generation

4/4. A Better World. This episode follows the lives of some of the servicemen and women of the Second World War from 1945 up to the present day. Among those recalling stories and memories are Arctic Convoy survivor Austin Byrne, former Fleet Air Arm pilot and Scotland football manager Bobby Brown, and ex-prisoner of war Jim Purcell. A more culturally diverse postwar Britain emerged, but there were still many people in society who were victims of prejudice. A defining feature for others was a commitment to being part of their local community. (R) (S) (HD)

7.30 Lockdown Culture with Mary Beard

Ep 4. Broadcasting under a new programme title to reflect the extraordinary times we're living through, Mary Beard discusses the power of poetry in a time of pandemic, with Game of Thrones actress Emilia Clarke, poet Lemn Sissay and historian David Olusoga. Plus poetry readings from Dame Helen Mirren and so-called "Poet Laureate of Twitter" Brian Bilston.

Series producer Mark Crossan; Executive producer Tanya Hudson (S) (HD)

8.00 Great British Menu

Susan Calman presents as the chefs from the North East serve up their mains and desserts inspired by children's literature. One chef offers a dish using oriental flavours inspired by the Chinese takeaway-loving title character in Skellig, while another creates a pork dish in honour of Smashing Saxons. The desserts see a pudding inspired by Jane Elson's A Room Full of Chocolate featuring a delicate chocolate egg, a second take on Skellig – this one using Newcastle Brown Ale ice-cream – and a dessert inspired by The Secret Garden, featuring Yorkshire rhubarb. Director Francois Gandolfi; Series producer Avril Beaven (S) (HD)

The 13th ★★★★★ YouTube FREE TO VIEW

Ava DuVernay, director of the acclaimed Civil Rights era drama Selma, offers a broader history of racial oppression in this documentary, which is among a wealth of Netflix original content being made available for free on YouTube. Using archive clips, plus interviews with academics, politicians and former prisoners, DuVernay briskly charts how the wars on crime and drugs have impacted most deeply on poor black communities, and her findings are backed up by some truly disturbing examples. TREVOR JOHNSTON

Die laughing

A Serial Killer's Guide to Life ★★★

11.45pm Sky Premiere

This mordantly entertaining road movie from writer/director Staten Cousins Roe sees self-help fan Lou (Katie Brayben) lured by Poppie Roe's snarky life coach into embarking on a road trip to meet a guru. But little does Lou know that her quest to "release the inner me" will actually involve a macabre cross-country cull. There are echoes of Ben Wheatley's Sightseers here, but it's the performances that stand out in a lean, mean indie gem. JEREMY ASPINALL

Huppert starts over

Things to Come ★★★★★

All 4 FREE TO VIEW

There's an irony in the title of this French drama, since lecturer Isabelle Huppert wonders if she actually has much of a future following her marriage breaking up and the passing of her elderly mother. With these misfortunes comes grief and loss, but also a sense of liberation. The story unfolds at a gentle pace, with Huppert at the top of her game. TJ

FRIDAY Choices

The pick of today's TV

LONDON, 1945
Revellers celebrating
Victory in Europe Day
75 years ago

PICK OF THE DAY

VE Day 75

2.45pm, from 7pm BBC1, 8pm ITV

EVENT In these bewildering times it's easy to forget that today is a bank holiday, planned to celebrate the 75th anniversary of the end of the war in Europe. It was then a day marked by joyful partying and victory speeches by George VI and Winston Churchill. For reasons we're painfully aware of, today's partying is cancelled but those two speeches will help define the BBC's swiftly curated day of remembrance and celebration (both pre-recorded).

It starts on BBC1 with a programme that pivots on Churchill's "we may allow ourselves a brief period of rejoicing" 3pm radio broadcast to the nation. Expect stories to stir the heart and military-band music to rouse the soul.

VE Day memories provide the narrative thread for the evening programme, interlaced with music and dance evoking the period. The curtain falls with extracts from the King's speech and a rendition of Vera Lynn's We'll Meet Again, including sung contributions from front-line workers all over the country. Song sheets and hankies at the ready.

Over on ITV, the hero of the hour, multi-million-pound fundraiser Captain Tom Moore provides a reminder that for many, like him, there was no time to celebrate. There was still a war in the Far East to be fought. Captain Tom's War is at 8pm. TERRY PAYNE See pages 8 and 144

The feud between young Arthur and Archie in Emmerdale (7pm ITV) takes a dangerous turn when interference with a campfire has incendiary repercussions. Someone on the writing staff must have watched long-forgotten 1993 Macaulay Culkin schlock thriller The Good Son (written by Ian McEwan, don't you know) because this psychodrama has definite echoes of it.

Actor Greg Wood must have a face that's been specifically sculpted for evil because he's played bad guys all over

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

soapland. As Brookside's drug-dealing Terry Gibson, he ended up impaled on a tractor spike. On Coronation Street, he was vicious loan shark Rick Neelan, who was bumped off by Gary Windass. And in Hollyoaks Favourites (6.30pm E4), there's another chance to see his exit as gangster Trevor Royle, who was stabbed to death on his wedding day. No doubt when EastEnders next needs a villain whom they plan eventually to kill in grisly style, they'll be straight on to Wood's agent. DAVID BROWN

Modern Family

8.30pm Sky 1

SITCOM At one point in tonight's episode – the first of a two-part finale that will see the Californian clan scattered to the winds – there's a very funny beat where a scene of warmth and loveliness is shattered by one bitter aside.

It's vintage Modern Family – the potentially sugar-sweet stories undercut by acid sarcasm and some nicely barbed wit. We wouldn't have them any other way. (And soon, we won't have them at all.)

As the swansong opens, the Dunphy house is in chaos, so Phil and Claire lay down the law: one of their offspring must leave home. Then, just as Mitch and Cam are revelling in their nice new house, Cam gets news that could upset the applecart. DAVID BUTCHER

Around the World by Train with Tony Robinson

9.00pm Channel 5

TRAVEL Following last week's unscheduled stop, Tony Robinson's final journey is through Scandinavia, which he hopes will involve more than "flatpack furniture and open sandwiches". Well, there are wolves for a start and he has a close encounter with a pack that he's unlikely to forget in a hurry. His face gets a good wash, though.

On his way down to Hamburg he shares a sauna with several middle-aged Swedes (not a pretty sight), spends the night in a glistening ice hotel and has fun in Copenhagen's Tivoli Gardens. At least this series has taught him to realise when his small talk with fellow travellers has failed abysmally. JANE RACKHAM

from 11.05pm C4

SITCOM Flatshare sitcoms had been done before this 1999 series, and have been since. But never like this. The premise of 20-somethings (co-creators Simon Pegg and Jessica Stevenson) pretending to be a couple to secure digs was a mere peg on which to hang delicious gags, twitchy yet lovable characters and an entire factory of Easter eggs (Star Wars is a clear favourite but the opener nods to Green Card and The Shining, too).

It was also a launchpad to the big time for all of its cast, while director Edgar Wright marked his card with cinematic visuals on a shoestring. But while later projects like Hot Fuzz caught the eye, there was a real purity and concision to these 30-minute masterpieces. MARK BRAXTON

The Last Leg: Locked Down Under

10.00pm C4

ENTERTAINMENT Lockdown has brought innovation to almost every aspect of television, and now it's not only given a rather snappy pun to the title of this very different version of The Last Leg – it's also brought another TV first. The topical show, usually broadcast with a studio audience, will instead be coming down the line from the living rooms of Adam Hills, Josh Widdicombe and Alex Brooker – live.

Not only are the comedians in different postcodes, they're in different hemispheres. As Josh and Alex dial in from London and Huddersfield, Hills will be live from Melbourne. Talk about social distancing.

There will also be celebrity guests joining the conference call giving their perspective on the news. FRANCES TAYLOR

SATIRICAL DISTANCING

Josh Widdicombe, Adam Hills and Alex Brooker will be far more than 2m apart on the night

STREAMING CHOICE

The best of streaming and catch-up

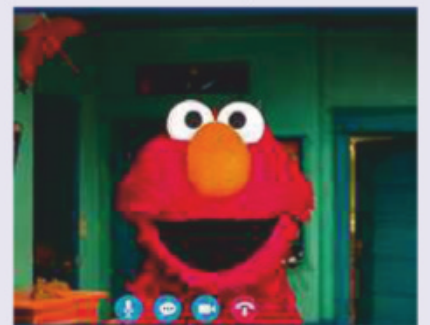

Dead to Me

Netflix

Christina Applegate and Linda Cardellini form a pleasing comedy odd couple in a bingeable black dramedy about grief: they're new friends who are both mourning the death of their partners, albeit in radically different ways. As they live with the shackles off and hunt for closure, their unreliable reporting of their own pasts leads to a series of surprises and big twists, in among telling smaller moments of sadness and joy. After the somewhat bewildering series one finale, here's series two.

KIDS' CHOICE

Sesame Street: Elmo's Playdate

5.15pm CBeebies, iPlayer

Elmo welcomes you, along with Sesame Street pals including Grover, Cookie Monster and Abby Cadabby, to a playdate filled with music, dancing and fun. There are celebrity guests too: Anne Hathaway, Hamilton creator Lin-Manuel Miranda and Black-ish star Tracee Ellis Ross all drop by. JACK SEALE

FILM OF THE DAY

Dad's Army

8.30pm ITV

Toby Jones, Michael Gambon, Tom Courtenay and Bill Nighy are all on great form in this fond, flag-waving and a tiny bit ramshackle big-screen reboot of the much-loved TV comedy series.

Pint-sized perils

📺 Dora & the Lost City of Gold ★★★

8.00pm Sky Premiere

Based on the popular cartoon Dora the Explorer, this peppy action comedy is charming fun for parents who want to give their kids a safe introduction to Indiana Jones-like thrills. Isabela Moner stars as high schooler Dora, who jets off to Peru when her explorer parents (Eva Longoria and Michael Peña) go missing. Any peril she and her friends encounter usually ends with an inspirational message or a fart joke, making this firmly one for young children. JAMES LUXFORD

TCM goes to war

In commemoration of today's VE Day anniversary celebrations, TCM presents a day of classic war movies. The all-action Where Eagles Dare (pictured) sees Clint Eastwood and Richard Burton infiltrate a Nazi stronghold to rescue an American officer, slapstick humour abounds in PoW camp drama The Password is Courage, while Lee Marvin leads a squad of convicts on a suicide mission in The Dirty Dozen. Also rallying the troops for the Allies are George Segal in The Bridge at Remagen and Henry Fonda in Battle of the Bulge. To victory! JOSH WINNING

Men in Black on Sky

And the award for coolest office get-up goes to... yep, those Ray-Ban-loving, alien-busting forces for universal good, the Men in Black. They get their own Sky pop-up channel this weekend, with all four MiB films showing, from the Will Smith/Tommy Lee Jones originals to last year's Tessa Thompson/Chris Hemsworth reboot. The scum of the universe had better watch out. JW

A doctor's notes

Memoirs from the NHS frontline will shape tomorrow's health service, says DJ Taylor – just as AJ Cronin did nearly 90 years ago

The Citadel

Monday-Friday 10.45am/7.45pm Radio 4

AS THE NHS struggles to deal with the biggest crisis of its 72-year history, the focus is on the here and now: the saving of lives, the protection of the vulnerable and the testing of those exposed to the coronavirus. Before long, though, questions will have to be asked about the lessons we can learn from the pandemic, and the ways in which our health service can be better prepared to cope with future assaults.

Much of this will take the shape of official reports and medical testimony. But for first-hand reportage, we need look no further than to the medical memoirs that are doubtless taking shape in the minds of frontline staff coming home each night from their hospital wards.

When the first wave of coronavirus memoirs start to appear in bookshops, it's a safe bet that most will have been written by doctors. The medical autobiography is a popular 21st-century publishing staple – see Adam Kay's This Is Going to Hurt: Secret Diaries of a Junior Doctor – and the report from an A&E department or the journal of life on a cancer ward jostles for space on bestseller charts with celebrity chefs and sportspeople.

The great medical bestseller of the 1930s, however, was neither a memoir nor a piece of surgeon's reportage but a novel. This was AJ Cronin's The Citadel (1937), the latest tranche of whose serialisation is about to begin on Radio 4. It was both a piece of medical reportage and an argument for change.

As a young doctor working in the Welsh valleys, the author had seen the country's health-system failures at first hand. It was a controversial book, the message of whose second half – that a small group of London medics were fleecing their gullible patients – led to demands for it to be suppressed. Above all, it had the effect of transporting “medicine” on to the political agenda, shifting it into the popular imagination, encouraging ordinary people to think about the medical care they were being offered and the ways in which it might be improved.

Any junior doctor who, in six months' time, sits down with the aim of dramatising their experiences of the current crisis and establishing some of the lessons that need to be learned could do worse than take The Citadel as their template.

As a teenager, combing the shelves of the library in Norwich, I was obsessed with Cronin's idealistic young Dr Manson, who cuts his medical teeth in the poverty stricken South Wales township of “Aberlaw” before moving to London and tumbling headlong into the embrace of fashionable metropolitan medicine and consultations at a guinea a time.

I agonised with him as he fought the hostility of suspicious locals chary of his new-fangled attitude; I cheered him on when he declared that the only thing a miner was suffering from was “the effects of over-indulgence in malt liquors”; I laboured with him as he studied long into the night;

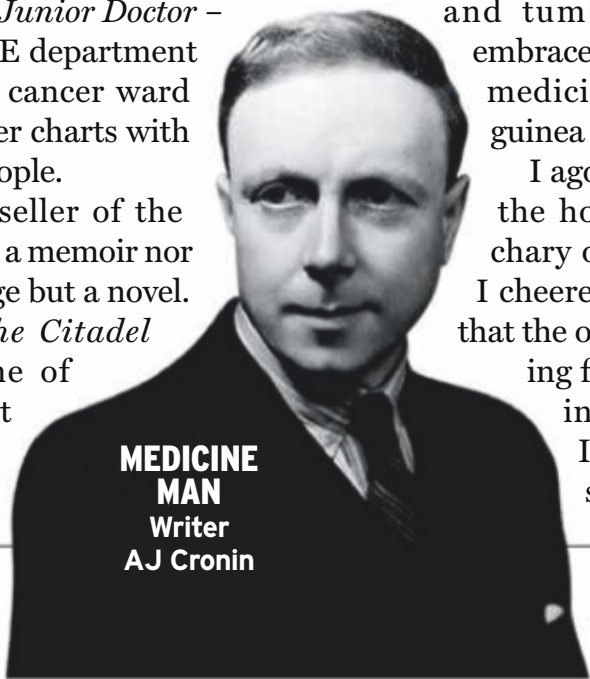

I envied him the tantalising Christine, met on a visit to a local school; and, as he surrendered to the wiles of the London fleshpots, I burned for him to get his life back on track and make those game-changing contributions to medical science that had always seemed to be his destiny.

Meanwhile, there was a shelf-load of other books to be getting on with as well. For Cronin was everywhere in the mid-1970s. He was the kind of writer your parents read, the kind of writer whose work – Dr Finlay's Casebook, The Stars Look Down – was adapted for TV and cinema, and whose death in 1981 prompted an editorial tribute in the News of the World.

Even the start of his literary career came hedged about with romance: the promising young medic diagnosed with a duodenal ulcer and ordered to rest who writes his debut novel, Hatter's Castle (1931) in just three months, and whose wife finds him, at random, a publisher who accepts it almost by return of post.

NOW AND THEN

In the end, though, it was The Citadel I always came back to: tightly plotted, crammed with incident and intrigue, comic and tragic by turns, wearing its moral seriousness like a masonic apron and, it turned out, having a literary and historical significance that went way beyond the grasp of the 13-year-old in the branch library.

There have always been plenty of doctors in literature: Anthony Trollope's Dr Thorne, for example, or George Eliot's Dr Lydgate. But however convincing they may seem on the page, Thorne and Lydgate are the creations of a non-practitioner. When Dr Manson sets out to diagnose illness or write up his theories, you sense that Cronin knows what he is talking about.

More important even than this is the social and political background against which Cronin set to work. This, after all, was the Depression-bound 1930s, a decade before the foundation of the NHS, when medical care cost money and the decision to call a doctor had to be balanced against the patient's ability to pay for treatment.

What part did The Citadel play in the creation of the NHS? According to the historian Raphael Samuel, Cronin's novel, with its advocacy of a countrywide health service, free for every citizen, helped to win the 1945 general election for Labour. "Aberlaw", Cronin admitted, was based on Tredegar, where he had worked in the 1920s and which operated a pioneering medical society funded by subscriptions from local miners and steelworkers. Here he met Aneurin Bevan, the future Labour health secretary and the NHS's founding father, but there is no record of any active collaboration, and many of Bevan's ideas about a state medical system were in circulation before the novel was published.

All the same, Cronin's advocacy of a better health service undoubtedly contributed to the shift in public opinion that found a ready audience for the Beveridge Report of 1942 and enabled the progressive legislation of the Attlee government to succeed. Three quarters of a century later, as the NHS begins to reshape itself in Covid-19's wake, you suspect that much of the real motivation for change will be found in the heartfelt testimonies of its frontline staff.

PICK OF THE WEEK

My Teenage Diary

Tuesday 6.30pm Radio 4

Rufus Hound (below) is a comedian, and the show he presents fills Radio 4's early evening comedy slot. But this is so much more than "light entertainment".

It takes a combination of courage and self-awareness to accept an invitation to the show and share extracts from one's pubescent jottings. Let's face it: most of us were a conglomeration of "poor me" self-indulgence, confused thoughts, unexplored desires and general irritation with our parents.

Hound's first guest is the comedian Shazia Mirza and, while there are certainly some laughs to be had over her ambition to be a world-class tennis player (or a biology teacher) and her decision to work in Halfords (because it's full of men), the overriding sense of her teenage years is incredibly sad, lonely and often angry. As she questions the authority of her parents, who allowed her no personal freedom whatsoever, Hound walks a delicate line between genial host and unpaid psychotherapist. It's a unique and powerful piece of radio.

AMBRIDGE DIARY

The Archers archive...

With new episodes of The Archers currently being recorded in its actors' homes, there will be a three-week prepping period during which Radio 4 re-airs pivotal moments from the past.

We begin with five episodes that could come under the umbrella title of Four Weddings and a Funeral, as they feature a quartet of nuptials and one memorable dispatch. It's the Grundys who are bookending events, with Sunday's visit to Ambridge finding Ed preparing to marry Emma, while Thursday sees the village bidding Joe a final farewell. But the highlight for many will be Tuesday's episode, from 2014, when Tom ditched Kirsty at the altar. Oh, that howl of anguish from the jilted bride! DAVID BROWN

Desperately searching for humour? Why not revisit a housebound Hancock, for a start

The Situation has produced its share of grim humour, as you might expect. However, most of that humour has arrived in the ephemeral form of the meme, through funny captions on pictures of people wearing unlikely protection equipment on public transport, or manipulated images of giant plastic yellow ducks bobbing serenely under Tower Bridge. With such a bountiful supply of topical jokes sourced from the crowd it's sometimes difficult to see where standard professionally written radio comedy fits in. The world is putting so much energy into entertaining itself these days that the pros are feeling frozen out. By the time radio makes a topical gag it seems that the internet has worked out the seam and moved on. On the plus side, there has never been a time when you could summon so much past and present laughter with just a couple of clicks.

HOW TO FIND A PODCAST Simply type the name of the podcast you are looking for into Google and listen on your computer. Most people, however, listen to podcasts on smartphones via apps such as BBC Sounds, Apple Podcasts, Stitcher or Acast. If there isn't already a podcast app on your phone, you can download a free one in seconds. Then search within the app for the podcast you want and "subscribe" to it. It won't cost you anything, and new episodes will turn up in your feed as they are published, which you can then play at your leisure.

SHOW OF THE WEEK

Hancock's Half Hour

As we gaze plaintively through our front windows, like housebound dogs with leads jammed hopefully between our teeth, there's no better time to acquaint ourselves with the definitive examinations of the housebound experience from the 1950s, available via BBC Sounds. Begin with Tony Hancock's memorable pronouncement on Hattie Jacques's cooking from Sunday Afternoon at Home. "I thought my mother was a bad cook, but at least her gravy used to move about."

CUTTING(S) HUMOUR

Tony Hancock made the nation giggle from East Cheam

My Favorite Murder

One woman recounts the story of a terrible crime while another woman listens, reacts and asks questions. It really shouldn't work at all. The fact that it's one of America's most popular comedy podcasts is difficult to explain. There are no belly laughs here, but there is the kind of humour that always lurks in even the darkest places. Furthermore there is, between presenters Karen Kilgariff and Georgia Hardstark, the kind of unforced intimacy that professional comedy finds it difficult to match.

The John Dredge Nothing to Do with Anything Show

It seems there has always been a comedy show on the radio that played games with the form and language of network radio, where the continuity announcer is always reading words they don't entirely understand and an Archers parody is never very far away. This latest one is by John Dredge, who deserves points for doing this podcast under his own steam rather than waiting for a Radio 4 commission.

Locked Together

According to the publicity, some of the UK's best-loved comedic duos, such as French and Saunders, Paul Whitehouse and Harry Enfield, and Sarah Millican and Jason Manford, invite us into their homes to give us a taste of their lives under lockdown, with Audible donating money to charities supporting the audio industry. What you find is that they have the same issues as the rest of us, but that even with the best will in the world, without writers it's difficult for even them to be genuinely funny.

I'm fizzing with quizzing

The Adam Buxton Podcast

Comics are a peculiar breed. They generally operate in an arena where you must kill or be killed. It can be interesting and also amusing to hear them reflect on what this is like. Nobody gathers these reflections better than Adam Buxton, who is happy to play second banana to comic royalty like Billy Connolly, Chris Morris, Romesh Ranganathan and David Sedaris, and understands enough about what's at stake to get them to explain what it's like in this killing zone.

No Such Thing as a Fish

Not everything on the radio has to be a comedy, but it increasingly seems everything has to be comic, whether the show is ostensibly about politics, sport or, as is the case here, general knowledge, given the characteristic twist you would expect from the writers of TV's QI. The Elves, as they're known, gather round and try to catch each other out with unlikely facts. They're doing it remotely nowadays but it's better on the earlier shows, where they're in the room together and you can enjoy feeling the warmth between them.

A FISHY BUSINESS
Every week, the QI Elves try to stump each other with unlikely facts

The fact that millions tuned in to watch Quiz – James Graham's drama about the scandal of the coughing major in Who Wants to Be a Millionaire? – proves that nothing beats a quiz. Especially when you're bored. So, the fact that this week's column is fizzing with quizzing could be a reflection of lockdown torpor. Or it might be because I fervently believe radio should never be outdone by television. Either way, fingers on buzzers, please...

Q1 What was the title of the 1986 Diana Ross number one written by the Bee Gees?

In just such a way, millions of us are passing a happy half hour every weekday morning with the country's biggest music quiz. PopMaster on Radio 2 is more popular now than ever, according to none other than its honey-toned superstar host, Old What's His Chops. You know the man. The Scotsman. What's his name? Oh dear, it's so hard when you're under pressure. KEN BRUCE! That's the one.

Broadcasting from his home, Ken's been keeping us all sane while we're locked in ours, with producer Ricky Marshall keeping the show on the road from Radio 2's BH HQ, an eerily deserted Wogan House.

Q2 In 1967, which father-and-daughter act topped the charts with Somethin' Stupid?

Bruce has been part of my life for more than 30 years. I am his number one fan. In fact,

'Quizzing is the perfect antidote to Fake News'

I may be his original fan. I discovered him as a student on Radio Scotland in the early 1980s, and followed him around the dial when he moved south to Radio 2.

Q3 Lonnie Donegan achieved a number one hit in 1960 with a song about a refuse collector. Name it.

Bruce is one of the few radio presenters capable of talking to listeners about their hobbies and families like he actually cares about the answers. This last week I've met, courtesy of Ken, Betty from Barnstaple, who likes to cook and was quite a rock chick in her time. She's expecting to get 18 points...

Q4 Name the radio presenter who had a northern soul hit in 1978 with his version of Doris Troy's I'll Do Anything.

And Mick from Musselburgh is fine on anything from the 1960s but can't remember anything else.

Q5 Who topped the charts for seven weeks in 1966 with Green Green Grass of Home?

For a pop buff this is compelling stuff, as anyone who tackles the version of the quiz every week in the puzzles pages of this magazine knows. The questions are set by Phil Swern and Neil Myners, who really do know their music. Right now, theirs is one of the few passions which is blooming. The You-Know-What can't infect it in any way. Hah!

Q6 In which 1956 movie did Frank Sinatra and Celeste Holm sing the Cole Porter classic Who Wants to Be a Millionaire?

So, here are the ingredients for great radio. A live quiz with tough questions for people who love the subject, set by people who feel the same, with a radio ringmaster who's a decent human. Quizzing is the perfect antidote to Fake News. There is a right answer and everything else is wrong. It's as simple as that.

Paddy O'Connell hosts Broadcasting House, Sunday at 9am on Radio 4

Answers Q1: Chain reaction; Q2: Frank and Nancy Sinatra; Q3: My Old Man's a Dustman; Q4: Tony Blackburn (under the name Lenny Gamble); Q5: Tom Jones; Q6: High Society

3.00pm Radio 3

The movie still above is from the startlingly original 1982 classic Koyaanisqatsi, now considered an environmental masterpiece on account of its depiction of a natural world desecrated by human intervention, all set to one of Philip Glass's most haunting scores. The film thus qualifies to be included in Matthew Sweet's round-up of films and film music for these strange times, as Sound of Cinema returns for a new series. Also featured is A Field in England – released in 2013, filmed in black and white, set during the English Civil War and notable for the work of sound designer Martin Pavey and composer Jim Williams. SIMON O'HAGAN

3.00 Drama: How to Flee from Sorrow
Alessandro Stradella (1639-1682) conjured music of sublime formality out of a life of chaotic violence. At a time when composers were expected to abase themselves before their patrons, Stradella swindled his, and seduced their mistresses before falling foul of hired assassins. These central characters – all real historical figures – are brought back to life in Frank Cottrell-Boyce’s drama, starring Trystan Gravelle as Stradella. At the heart of the story is the love affair between Stradella and Agnese (Alice St Clair), the “niece” of the Doge of Venice.

Today's Choices

Bookclub

4.00pm Radio 4

There are books that fall foul of people's need to categorise them as one genre or another, and US writer Rebecca Solnit (above) finds a nice response in this edition of Bookclub by describing her 2013 work The Faraway Nearby – a collection of essays and stories in which her mother's Alzheimer's forms a central element – as an "anti-memoir". Talking down the line from San Francisco, taking questions phoned in by listeners, she says of the present crisis that "we will all come out of this with a transformed sense of ourselves". SIMON O'HAGAN

Drama on 3: In the Native State by Tom Stoppard

7.30pm Radio 3

First aired in 1991, this repeat marks the recent death of its director John Tydeman, a legend of radio drama whose discoveries included Joe Orton, Caryl Churchill and Sue Townsend. This production – later reworked for stage as Indian Ink – features Stoppard regular Felicity Kendal as poet Flora Crewe, a free spirit who travels to India in 1930 and is charmed by the men she meets. And in another time, on another continent, Peggy Ashcroft as Flora's sister gives the commanding final performance of her career. FIONA HUGHES

7.30 Drama on 3: In the Native State by Tom Stoppard

RT Tom Stoppard's award-winning 1991 drama starring Felicity Kendal and, in her last dramatic performance, Peggy Ashcroft. John Tydeman directs the play set in India in 1930 and England 60 years later, with Saeed Jaffrey starring as Rajah. Stoppard later adapted the work as a stage play, Indian Ink. A young poet with a scandalous reputation sits for a portrait while in India for her health. Sixty years later, the portrait sparks difficult conversations about Indian history and the story behind the painting itself. Tydeman, who died last month, aged 84, became head of BBC Radio Drama in 1960. (R)

11.30 Slow Radio: The Halyards of Woodbridge

This instalment by Iain Chambers journeys from the boatyard in Woodbridge in Suffolk, along the River Deben towards Melton and back again. Alongside field recordings of the estuary's curlews, dunlin, plover, redshank, avocets, lapwings, and sandpipers, the programme ventures into a hidden sonic world made possible by contact microphones. These recordings capture the wind as a character itself, playing the taut halyards of boats, or exciting the large wire fences that border the river. Producer Iain Chambers

47 Years Without a Clue – A Tribute to Tim Brooke-Taylor

6.30pm Radio 4
This is going to be so wonderful but so sad – a tribute to the deeply loveable comedy giant Tim Brooke-Taylor (above), who died last month with coronavirus at the age of 79. Fellow Goodie Graeme Garden presents, with the emphasis on TBT's immense contribution to the other great show they teamed up on, I'm Sorry I Haven't a Clue. "The Tim I knew was fuelled by nervous energy," longtime Clue producer Jon Naismith tells me. "It was this underlying state of mild panic that not only made him enormously relatable to audiences, it led to some of the show's funniest moments."

SIMON O'HAGAN

The Essay: Let Me Take You There

10.45pm Radio 3
This week five writers yearn for places far from their present self-isolation. Tonight's essay from Alan Hollinghurst has the most resonance – and not just because the Booker Prize-winner for The Line of Beauty creates the most elegiac word pictures of a childhood haunt. As long ago as 2011 he stated, "I have to isolate myself for long periods." DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Today's Choices

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3

A "Schusterfleck" (cobbler's patch) is how Beethoven dismissed the little waltz tune that the Viennese publisher Anton Diabelli had sent him, hoping he'd contribute a variation on it to an anthology he was commissioning from Austria's leading composers. Yet the tune clearly got under Beethoven's skin: he eventually composed not just one variation but a grand set of 33. Master of all its moods, from the playful to the profound, Paul Lewis (above) plays it tonight in a recital recorded last October at London's Royal Festival Hall. MARK PAPPENHEIM

10.45 The Essay: Let Me Take You There

2/5. Five writers share the secrets of their internal place of sanctuary in times of crisis. In this instalment playwright Inua Ellams recalls a place that no longer exists – the Grand Hall of Battersea Arts Centre in London, which once, long ago, before it was burned down, offered him refuge at a time when he believed all was lost for him and his family. He takes the listener back to that place and time, and to a small cat, Pluto, who brought him new hope – hope that was soon to be fulfilled.

Today's Choices

Tim Key's Suspended Sentence

10.30pm Radio 4 Extra
Edward Bulwer-Lytton (above) set the bar low in 1830 with “It was a dark and stormy night”, but writers such as Jane Austen and Charles Dickens turned the opening line into an art form. Here, comedian and frustrated novelist Tim Key bravely shares some of his own, freely admitting they’re a rum bunch. “He didn’t want to open his tent door.” Hmm, that roundly sums up Key’s literary predicament, no need to quote any more. But his quest to nail an intro is great fun, especially the exchanges with his put-upon literary editor. After much analysis, the consensus is itself far from eloquent: don’t try too hard. CHRIS GARDNER

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3
A bagful of balletic dolly mixture from the BBC Concert Orchestra: suites from Delibes’s Coppélia, in which the heroine gets her man by dressing up as a life-size doll, and Gavin Gordon’s Les Noces Imaginaires – in which a chorus of dolls celebrate the “imaginary wedding” of the unacceptably named pairing – follow an extract from the coronation ballet that Malcolm Arnold wrote for HM the Queen. She famously grew up with a life-size Wendy house. MARK PAPPENHEIM

His guests include the historians Daniel Lee and Ludivine Broch. Producer Robyn Read

10.45 The Essay: Let Me Take You There

3/5. Five writers share the secrets of their internal place of refuge in times of crisis. In this instalment Bangladesh-born Tahmima Anam describes an empty plot of land which she and her American husband own in rural New Hampshire. They have long hoped to build a house there, but now she plans it for real, and pictures herself and her family there. She concludes with an image of a courtyard house where “the trees will rustle and cast patterned shadows over us as we sit on the porch with our iced teas”.

Today's Choices

The Forum

10.05am BBC World Service

Every few years the woman who could play two pianos simultaneously is rediscovered on social media. Comments are always the same: "Insanely gifted...what a goddess!" Hazel Scott (above) gained fame in New York in the 1930s for "swinging the classics" then for refusing to play to segregated audiences. Later she shook up Hollywood, bringing her black female dancers out on strike because they were dressed as maids. One studio boss said she'd never work again. Rajan Datar assembles a fine forum of experts including Karen Chilton (Scott's biographer) and Loren Schonberg from the National Jazz Museum in Harlem.

DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Crossing Continents

11.00am Radio 4

Another episode from this excellent series with a local angle on a global issue. Electric cars are hailed as the future of eco-friendly transport, but there is a problem. Their batteries use lithium, extracted from Andean salt flats in a process that uses huge quantities of water in an already parched area. Now locals are fighting back over the loss of a valuable natural resource. Linda Pressly reports from Argentina on both sides of the argument. DAVID CRAWFORD

Sound Walk

1.00pm Radio 3

From reindeer herding to a leisurely trip down the Avon Canal, BBC4's Slow TV offering has in recent years proved a refreshing tonic to the relentless pace of modern life. On the radio, too, there is space to be unhurried; this programme, first broadcast in 2017, follows writer Horatio Clare on a real-time ten-mile walk along Offa's Dyke on the Welsh border, from the edge of the Black Mountains to the literary Mecca of Hay-on-Wye. This journey, punctuated only with the sound of wildlife and the ruminations of local artists, is a breath of fresh air after weeks stuck indoors. TOM GOULDING

The Full Works Concert

8.00pm Classic FM

Amid constant comparisons between this global pandemic and the last world war, Classic FM marks the 75th anniversary of VE Day with a selection of war-themed music presented by Winston Churchill's grandson, the former Armed Forces Minister Nicholas Soames. Beethoven's Fifth Symphony hammers out the famous "V for Victory" call-sign, alongside such modern classics as Walton's Spitfire Prelude, Addinsell's Warsaw Concerto, Copland's Fanfare for the Common Man and Vera Lynn singing We'll Meet Again. MARK PAPPENHEIM

1.00pm Sound Walk
RT An immersive "slow radio" soundscape of the British countryside, based on a recording of Horatio Clare's ten-mile walk along part of Offa's Dyke on the border between England and Wales, skirting the Black Mountains, travelling north and ending up in Hay-on-Wye. Clare comments on the landscape as he progresses, and the programme also features the voices of local artists and writers (poet Christopher Meredith, artist Susan Milne, folk singer Sam Lee and novelist Tom Bullough) musing on the inspirations they find in this landscape, as well as orchestral music by Welsh symphonists William Mathias and Alun Hoddinott. Alex Clatworthy reads from literature about the region. First broadcast May 2017. Producer Philip Tagney (R)

Face behind the voice

Dan Noble Absolute Radio

Age 22
Current job
Presenter of Absolute Radio's late-night weekend shows (Fri/Sat 10pm, Sun 12 midnight).

CV Born and raised in Surrey, he caught the broadcasting bug early by going into work with his father on their local station, Radio Jackie. He worked on community radio as a teenager, went travelling after his A-levels and returned determined to make a career as a presenter. After stints on Jackie and Juice (in Brighton), he landed a job on Kerrang! Radio (where he still works) and started at Absolute in January this year.

Best moment "It has to be doing the opening link for my Absolute show. I have listened to the station since I was a kid. It was very much a 'pinch me' moment that I don't think will ever fade away."

Worst moment "When Juice was bought and rebranded, I lost my job and it felt like the worst thing that could happen to me. It was actually the turning point that got me on to national radio."

Off air "I live in the family house in Surrey while saving up for my first property. We have a couple of cats and my cockapoo puppy, Jess, has undoubtedly made herself heard since I had to start recording

'It was a "pinch me" moment that will never fade away'

all my shows from home [because of the coronavirus pandemic]."

First radio memory "It's got to be watching my dad, John Noble, doing his radio show for Jackie. I must have been about five and to see him talk up the vocals and press all those buttons made me think that this was the coolest job in the world. And it is."

Favourite broadcaster "Iain Lee and James O'Brien are at the top of their field in talk radio. The same applies to Chris Moyles and Christian O'Connell when it comes to breakfast shows."

Ambition "Surely everyone in radio is aiming for the breakfast show? It's the holy grail. I'd love to be surrounded by a team and make the mornings fun – but I'd also like to try out some new ideas with the format."

Dream job "Doing music festivals for television: being a punter but chatting with your favourite artists. In my case that would be Biffy Clyro and Paul McCartney."

Secret skills "I have been in loads of bands and have way too many guitars, but my newly discovered talent is for cutting my own hair. My dog could be next, although I don't know if she'd suit a skin fade..." JANE ANDERSON

BBC Radio Scotland

Face behind the voice

Dan Noble Absolute Radio

Age 22
Current job
Presenter of Absolute Radio's late-night weekend shows (Fri/Sat 10pm, Sun 12 midnight).

CV Born and raised in Surrey, he caught the broadcasting bug early by going into work with his father on their local station, Radio Jackie. He worked on community radio as a teenager, went travelling after his A-levels and returned determined to make a career as a presenter. After stints on Jackie and Juice (in Brighton), he landed a job on Kerrang! Radio (where he still works) and started at Absolute in January this year.

Best moment "It has to be doing the opening link for my Absolute show. I have listened to the station since I was a kid. It was very much a 'pinch me' moment that I don't think will ever fade away."

Worst moment "When Juice was bought and rebranded, I lost my job and it felt like the worst thing that could happen to me. It was actually the turning point that got me on to national radio."

Off air "I live in the family house in Surrey while saving up for my first property. We have a couple of cats and my cockapoo puppy, Jess, has undoubtedly made herself heard since I had to start recording

'It was a "pinch me" moment that will never fade away'

all my shows from home [because of the coronavirus pandemic]."

First radio memory "It's got to be watching my dad, John Noble, doing his radio show for Jackie. I must have been about five and to see him talk up the vocals and press all those buttons made me think that this was the coolest job in the world. And it is."

Favourite broadcaster "Iain Lee and James O'Brien are at the top of their field in talk radio. The same applies to Chris Moyles and Christian O'Connell when it comes to breakfast shows."

Ambition "Surely everyone in radio is aiming for the breakfast show? It's the holy grail. I'd love to be surrounded by a team and make the mornings fun – but I'd also like to try out some new ideas with the format."

Dream job "Doing music festivals for television: being a punter but chatting with your favourite artists. In my case that would be Biffy Clyro and Paul McCartney."

Secret skills "I have been in loads of bands and have way too many guitars, but my newly discovered talent is for cutting my own hair. My dog could be next, although I don't know if she'd suit a skin fade..." JANE ANDERSON

BBC Radio Ulster

Face behind the voice

Dan Noble Absolute Radio

Age 22
Current job
Presenter of Absolute Radio's late-night weekend shows (Fri/Sat 10pm, Sun 12 midnight).

CV Born and raised in Surrey, he caught the broadcasting bug early by going into work with his father on their local station, Radio Jackie. He worked on community radio as a teenager, went travelling after his A-levels and returned determined to make a career as a presenter. After stints on Jackie and Juice (in Brighton), he landed a job on Kerrang! Radio (where he still works) and started at Absolute in January this year.

Best moment "It has to be doing the opening link for my Absolute show. I have listened to the station since I was a kid. It was very much a 'pinch me' moment that I don't think will ever fade away."

Worst moment "When Juice was bought and rebranded, I lost my job and it felt like the worst thing that could happen to me. It was actually the turning point that got me on to national radio."

Off air "I live in the family house in Surrey while saving up for my first property. We have a couple of cats and my cockapoo puppy, Jess, has undoubtedly made herself heard since I had to start recording

'It was a "pinch me" moment that will never fade away'

all my shows from home [because of the coronavirus pandemic]."

First radio memory "It's got to be watching my dad, John Noble, doing his radio show for Jackie. I must have been about five and to see him talk up the vocals and press all those buttons made me think that this was the coolest job in the world. And it is."

Favourite broadcaster "Iain Lee and James O'Brien are at the top of their field in talk radio. The same applies to Chris Moyles and Christian O'Connell when it comes to breakfast shows."

Ambition "Surely everyone in radio is aiming for the breakfast show? It's the holy grail. I'd love to be surrounded by a team and make the mornings fun – but I'd also like to try out some new ideas with the format."

Dream job "Doing music festivals for television: being a punter but chatting with your favourite artists. In my case that would be Biffy Clyro and Paul McCartney."

Secret skills "I have been in loads of bands and have way too many guitars, but my newly discovered talent is for cutting my own hair. My dog could be next, although I don't know if she'd suit a skin fade..." JANE ANDERSON

Dan Noble Absolute Radio

Age 22
Current job
Presenter of Absolute Radio's late-night weekend shows (Fri/Sat 10pm, Sun 12 midnight).

CV Born and raised in Surrey, he caught the broadcasting bug early by going into work with his father on their local station, Radio Jackie. He worked on community radio as a teenager, went travelling after his A-levels and returned determined to make a career as a presenter. After stints on Jackie and Juice (in Brighton), he landed a job on Kerrang! Radio (where he still works) and started at Absolute in January this year.

Best moment "It has to be doing the opening link for my Absolute show. I have listened to the station since I was a kid. It was very much a 'pinch me' moment that I don't think will ever fade away."

Worst moment "When Juice was bought and rebranded, I lost my job and it felt like the worst thing that could happen to me. It was actually the turning point that got me on to national radio."

Off air "I live in the family house in Surrey while saving up for my first property. We have a couple of cats and my cockapoo puppy, Jess, has undoubtedly made herself heard since I had to start recording

'It was a "pinch me" moment that will never fade away'

all my shows from home [because of the coronavirus pandemic]."

First radio memory "It's got to be watching my dad, John Noble, doing his radio show for Jackie. I must have been about five and to see him talk up the vocals and press all those buttons made me think that this was the coolest job in the world. And it is."

Favourite broadcaster "Iain Lee and James O'Brien are at the top of their field in talk radio. The same applies to Chris Moyles and Christian O'Connell when it comes to breakfast shows."

Ambition "Surely everyone in radio is aiming for the breakfast show? It's the holy grail. I'd love to be surrounded by a team and make the mornings fun – but I'd also like to try out some new ideas with the format."

Dream job "Doing music festivals for television: being a punter but chatting with your favourite artists. In my case that would be Biffy Clyro and Paul McCartney."

Secret skills "I have been in loads of bands and have way too many guitars, but my newly discovered talent is for cutting my own hair. My dog could be next, although I don't know if she'd suit a skin fade..." JANE ANDERSON

There's no time to lose!

With restaurants in Armenia in lockdown, the caged bears they keep to attract tourists no longer serve any purpose. These sad bears are now unwanted, unloved and at serious risk of starving to death.

International Animal Rescue has been given the go ahead to take in these abandoned bears. But we must act fast!

The bears have been left hungry for weeks already...

We urgently need your help to rescue these bears right away. Please make a donation to help free them from their misery and give them the lives they deserve. They have been locked up long enough.

Can you claim credit?

Paul Lewis explains who is and isn't eligible for Universal Credit during the Covid-19 crisis

MILLIONS OF PEOPLE will not be helped by either of the new Government schemes to give employees and self-employed people 80% of their past pay for the next few months if coronavirus affects their work.

The Government says anyone in need can claim Universal Credit. This means-tested benefit provides an income and contributes towards rent. The amount depends on income and savings, age, disability, and whether you have a partner or children. Over the last month more than a million new claims have been made.

Here is a brief guide to Universal Credit. It is £343-£1,916 a month, but will be reduced by other income and savings over £6,000.

Age Those under 25 get less. If you're over state pension age (both of you over it, if you are in a couple) you cannot get UC – claim pension credit instead.

Partner If you live with someone as a couple, then your income and savings are counted together. Only one of you can claim and be paid. The couple's allowance is about 1.45 times the single allowance.

Disabled people and carers There are higher amounts for some disabled people and carers.

Children There is extra for a child. If there are more than two children, no extra is paid for those born from 6 April 2017. There is also an overall cap on the total amount of benefits you can get.

Savings If savings exceed £16,000, you cannot get Universal Credit. If they are over £6,000, your UC is reduced by £4.35 a month, then another £4.35 for every £250 over £6,000. If you are part of a couple, your savings are added together.

Tax Universal Credit is tax-free but every pound of other income can reduce the UC paid by 63p.

Claim Online only in almost all cases via www.gov.uk/universal-credit. You will need a telephone meeting and there are long delays before they can be arranged.

Payment Once a month (can be twice in Scotland). There is at least a five-week gap between the claim and the first payment. You can get an advance payment, which you pay back out of future payments.

UC helpline Call 0800 328 5644 (but expect a very long wait).

BECOME ONE OF OUR HUGE SAVERS TODAY!

Radio Times readers have now saved over £1m on their energy bills

Altogether, our readers have now amassed over £1m of savings on their energy bills, all by switching suppliers with the Radio Times Switching Service. You might think a lot of effort goes into switching, but you'd be wrong. All it takes is a couple of minutes of your time to tell us a few of your details, either online or over the phone, you then choose the cheaper tariff you'd like to switch to, and we handle the rest.

Customers who remain with the same supplier and pay little attention to their tariff are often put on the most expensive default tariffs available, little to their knowledge. The real way to ensure you save money and are paying the most competitive rates for your energy is to switch, and the Radio Times Switching Service is here to help you do just that.

AVERAGE BILLS INCREASING

Due to social distancing measures, more people are staying at home, which means household bills are rising across the country. Findings by Octopus Energy's analysis team state that average electricity bills are increasing between £1.34 and £2.85 per week, and gas bills between £1.65 and £1.93*.

SWITCH AND SAVE UP TO £461*

You can offset the increasing costs of your energy bills by switching and saving, as thousands of readers already have. Together, active energy customers across our readership have saved over £1m. No one compares more UK energy suppliers than us, so you can trust us to show you the best deals out there. So, what are you waiting for? Call us or visit us online today.

Call 0800 083 6528 or visit radiotimes.com/energy to start saving!

Book of the Week: Broken Greek

Monday–Friday 9.45am (FM), 12.30am Radio 4

WHEN ROCK JOURNALISTS write books, it often feels like a quest to rebrand themselves as the coolest kid in school. Pete Paphides's Broken Greek, in contrast, proves that we don't choose the songs we love.

A warm and welcome corrective to the typical music-themed coming-of-age tale, it is scattered with Valentines to the critically derided acts the author worshipped as a child of the 1970s, among them the Barron Knights, the Wombles, Leo Sayer and Brotherhood of Man. "I was really relying on these records to help me figure some stuff out," he says. "To me, writing about uncool records was one of the joys of the book. It was like walking through fresh snowfall. If I was having a bad week, I felt a little better going back into that world."

When Paphides embarked on Broken Greek, he envisaged that 80 per cent of it would focus on his specialist subject. He ended up writing something quite different, a 600-page childhood memoir in which the musical motifs dance around a more complex melody concerning identity, family and clashing cultures.

It is both a conflicted love letter to his immigrant parents, and a softly sung cry of freedom.

His mother, Victoria, was born in Athens, while his father, Chrystakis, was raised in the Greek-Cypriot village of Saint Ermolaos. They moved to Birmingham from Cyprus in the 1960s, tempted by the promise of work at the Longbridge car plant. Instead they opened a fish and chip shop, and found themselves "coming to terms with the fact that they were here for good", says Paphides. "And the reason they were here for good is that they had two sons who saw themselves as British."

Born in 1969, their younger son was christened Panayiotakis, Takis for short. Later, he decided he wanted to be called Peter, a symbolic name change for a child struggling to find his place. Squeezed between the sometimes stifling weight of his Greek heritage and the stimuli of 1970s pop culture, negotiating his own path was traumatic.

Between the ages of four and eight Paphides was a selective mute, refusing to speak to anyone but his parents, brother and teachers. Even now, he isn't quite sure why. "I couldn't honestly tell you there was one specific cause, but I remembered, writing the book, this sense of inarticulate guilt that seemed to saturate everything. I realised that the majority of that guilt was partly to do with not talking, but an even bigger factor was that I was turning into something very different than what my parents expected me to be."

Measuring out his early life with great gulps of Radio 1, Dial-a-Disc and Top of the Pops, music played a vital role in that process. "It became the driver of the realisation of who I was, and the fact that I was different from my parents," he says. "Pop music became a proxy by which I was able to figure out my situation." It was time well spent. Writing about music has provided the former Times critic with a vocation for the past 30 years.

He wrote the book in cafés near his home in north London, where he lives with his wife, the bestselling journalist and writer Caitlin Moran, and their two teenage daughters. "I felt a bit like an imposter at times," he laughs. "Your incredibly brilliant, successful and productive wife asks, 'What did you do today?' 'Well, I wrote about the time I went to see the Barron Knights in cabaret, for a book that might never come out!' I have to say, she was absolutely brilliant. The fact that I have a successful wife was the reason I could do it, because she's the breadwinner."

Broken Greek strikes a particular chord right now. A book that understands the way we use music not just to make sense of ourselves, but as a source of solace in times of confusion and isolation, resonates powerfully. Paphides has found that his needs have shifted during lockdown. "I usually try and listen to new things, but at the moment it's purely comfort all the way," he says. "Records that sound great when I'm preparing the tea in the kitchen, that make you realise it's good to be alive. I've noticed my kids doing the same in their rooms, as well. This situation intensifies music, without a doubt."

His recurring picks include Billy Joel's An Innocent Man – "it's informed by simpler times, a celebration of the jukebox classics he grew up with" – So Tough by St Etienne, and Stevie Wonder's "monumentally great" Uptight. The other day, he found himself making a Beatles running playlist. "I called it Let's Go Running with John, Paul, George and Ringo," he says. "Just when you think you've listened to them one too many times, they blindside you with their brilliance once again." We need the Beatles more than ever right now, I suggest.

GROW YOUR OWN

IN PREVIOUS WEEKS I've focused on potatoes, salad leaves, peas and beans, so now it's time for other easy edibles. Any frosts will soon have passed (by mid- to late May), so you can plant out tender plants grown indoors, or sow directly into the ground or in pots.

CARROTS Grow carrots in stone-free sandy or loamy soils, or deep containers. Sow outside now: three carrot seeds per hole, 2cm deep and 5cm apart. Remove the two weakest after they've grown a bit, leaving one plant to mature. It's the same process for parsnips, but space wider – about 15cm apart.

SWEETCORN Start off indoors in small pots (one seed per pot, about 1.5cm deep), harden off (see below) and then plant out in blocks of 4, 6 or 9, spacing seedlings around 30cm apart. Or plant directly in the ground now, in blocks, not rows, to ensure good germination. Feed and water regularly and harvest when the tassels go brown – when you give an individual kernel a squeeze, a milky juice comes out.

COURGETTES Sow indoors, one seed to a pot (they're flat, so plant on edge), 1.5cm deep, or sow outside from late May. Harden off plants grown indoors and plant in well-prepared ground (add lots of compost) 30cm apart, or in large pots or growbags (one per plant) with fresh compost. Feed and water regularly. Once they produce, keep picking and they'll keep coming!

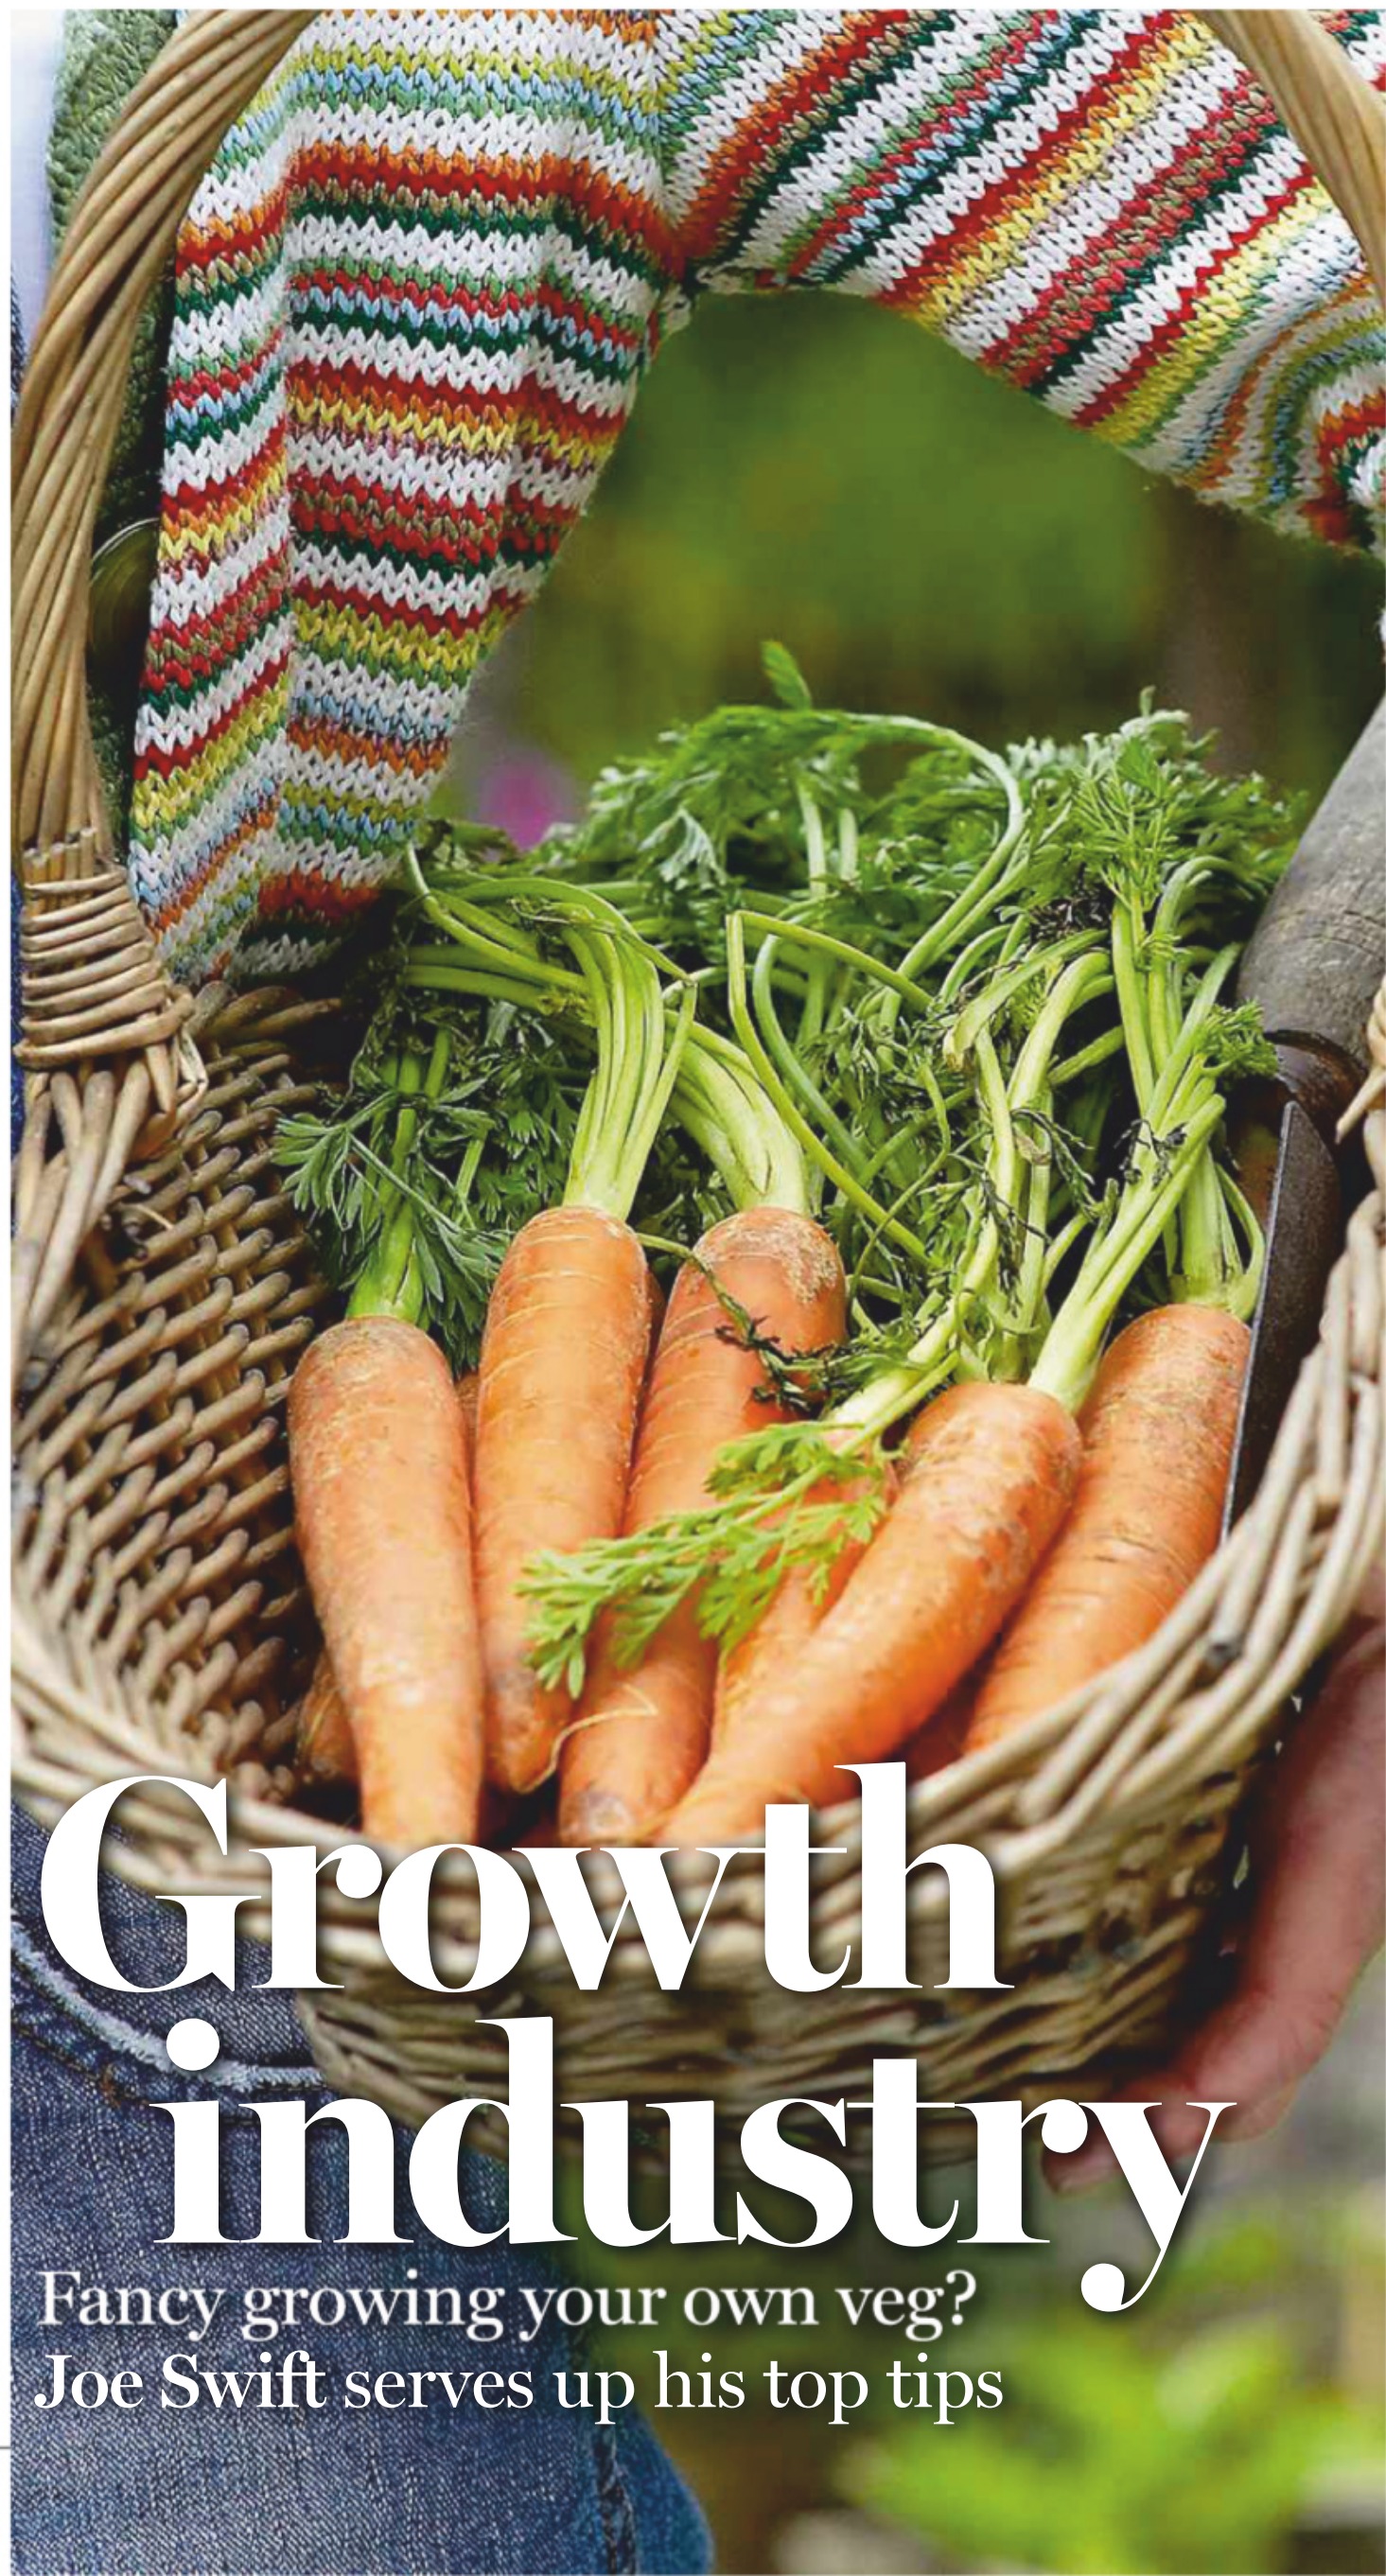

SPINACH Grows well in the ground or in pots. Sow seeds outside now, 2.5cm deep, 30cm apart. You can grow closer together in a container, or if you want to harvest the baby leaves. They like a little shade to prevent bolting (going to seed). Water regularly, feed occasionally and harvest young leaves as they appear.

HERBS Plant hardy herbs (rosemary, sage, thyme, bay, chives, parsley and oregano) and sow tender herbs (basil, chervil and coriander) in pots. Potted supermarket herbs will grow well if you split them into smaller plants and pot them up.

HOW TO HARDEN OFF

"Hardening off" prepares plants grown indoors to cope outdoors. If you have a cold frame, place the plants inside, open the lid during the day and close at night for a week. Gradually open for longer periods, into the evenings over a second week. Without a cold frame, place plants in a sunny, sheltered position in the day, covered with horticultural fleece to prevent the sun scorching young leaves. Take them inside at night for a week or so, daily increasing the length of time outdoors. In mild weather, leave them covered outside at night, before planting out.

HELP HEDGEHOGS

Hedgehog Awareness Week is from 3–9 May. Hedgehogs are not only lovely creatures, they also eat slugs, snails and insects. Sadly, they're in serious decline, but have benefitted from the recent lockdown as traffic reduction means fewer being killed on the roads. There are a few simple things you can do to encourage hedgehogs into your garden.

MAKE THEM A HOME

Leave an area of the garden wild, ideally with plenty of leaf litter and some logs (to attract the invertebrates that hedgehogs eat). You can make a simple hedgehog home by leaning a piece of board against a wall or fence. Be careful to check compost heaps before forking, long grass before strimming and bonfires before lighting.

FATTEN THEM UP

Treat them to meat-based dog or cat food or hedgehog food, so they build up the fat reserves that they need to hibernate from November to March. Don't feed them milk.

CREATE A WILDLIFE CORRIDOR

Make a ground-level gap in the fence or wall so hedgehogs can move between gardens more easily. A hedgehog will visit many gardens during the night in order to find food – if access allows.

LOOK OUT FOR HAZARDS

Avoid using slug pellets in the garden. If you do use them, keep them covered with a piece of slate and be sure to remove any dead slugs or snails as soon as possible, to stop them being consumed by a hungry hedgehog. Ponds with steep sides can be deadly traps for hedgehogs. Create sloping sides or build up the edges with stones or a chicken-wire ramp, so if one does fall in, it can easily crawl out to safety.

The art of lockdown

Explore famous museums, marvel at Old Masters or see a West End show – all without leaving home

THE UK'S MUSEUMS, galleries and theatres have been closed for weeks, but you can still marvel at their treasures, or see a hit play this week. Cultural institutions are finding ever more inventive ways of sharing their collections and programmes online, so it's easy to get your arts fix during the lockdown. You could take a virtual stroll around the British Museum in the morning, check out Tate Modern's Andy Warhol exhibition after lunch, and watch a National Theatre production in the evening. And there are advantages to a virtual day out: it's free, there are no queues, and you won't have to compete with other visitors for elbow room!

VISIT A VIRTUAL MUSEUM

The British Museum in London is the largest indoor space on Google Street View, and you can drop in to see the wonders in more than 60 of its empty galleries on the website. Or visit the virtual galleries, for a look at objects not on display from the Oceania Collection; or Prints and Drawings, with Old Masters by such famous artists as Michelangelo and Albrecht Dürer (britishmuseum.org). In the short, delightfully geeky Curator's Corner videos on its YouTube channel, you can learn about Ming porcelain, Iraqi lustreware and the "B-side" of Greek pots.

You could while away weeks taking virtual tours on Google's Arts & Culture hub, which gives you access to some of the world's most popular museums, including Amsterdam's Van Gogh Museum, Paris's Musée d'Orsay, Florence's Uffizi Gallery and New York's Guggenheim Museum (artsandculture.google.com).

STROLL IN THE SISTINE CHAPEL

Visitors to Rome usually have to queue for hours and then shuffle in a scrum of other tourists to gawp at Michelangelo's sublime ceiling in the Sistine Chapel, but the Vatican Museums' 360-degree virtual tours let you linger over it, or see Raphael's Rooms (click on collections then museums at museivaticani.va).

If you're fond of a day out at a stately home, why not enjoy Buckinghamshire's Waddesdon Manor from the comfort of your sofa? The manor, built by Baron Ferdinand de Rothschild at the end of the 19th century to house his collection, is crammed with treasures: portraits by Gainsborough and Reynolds, furniture made for the French royal family, Sèvres porcelain... (A VR headset is recommended, but not essential.) You can also "walk" around Waddesdon's gardens and sculpture trail (waddesdon.org).

SEE PAINTINGS IN PEACE

The National Gallery's Titian exhibition, which reunited the Renaissance artist's fabulously fleshy mythological paintings retelling Ovid's Metamorphoses, was open for only a week before the enforced closures. Head to its YouTube channel for videos on Titian's epic Diana paintings, unusual technique and a tutorial by Mary Beard. You can browse the National's whole collection on its website without blocking anyone else's view (nationalgallery.org.uk).

THE SHOW MUST GO ON

Theatre lovers can enjoy the Old Vic's bewitching production of Wise Children, which will be on iPlayer until early June. Director Emma Rice's dazzling all-singing, all-dancing adaptation of Angela Carter's bawdy last novel is a carnivalesque love letter to the stage.

The National Theatre is showing a production every Thursday at 7pm on its YouTube channel, available for seven days. From 30 April you'll find both versions of Danny Boyle's moving 2011 production of Frankenstein, in which Benedict Cumberbatch and Jonny Lee Miller alternate as the obsessive scientist and his lonely creature. Ralph Fiennes and a fiery Sophie Okonedo are also a magnificent, devastating match in Antony & Cleopatra, available from 7 May.

The Globe (shakespearesglobe.com) shows a new play every fortnight on YouTube: Romeo & Juliet until 3 May, then a jaunty take on The Two Noble Kinsmen from 4 May.

A free Andrew Lloyd Webber show also lands on YouTube every Friday at 7pm for 48 hours: from 1 May his 1998 50th-birthday tribute concert at the Royal Albert Hall.

The Royal Opera House (roh.org.uk) rolls out a ballet or opera on Fridays on YouTube, available for 30 days. Catch Jonathan Miller's Così fan tutte, Arthur Pita's thrilling version of Kafka's The Metamorphosis and, from 1 May, Christopher Wheeldon's enchanting ballet of The Winter's Tale. CLAIRE WEBB

BBC4's Museums in Quarantine visits the Warhol exhibition (27 April), the Young Rembrandt exhibition at the Ashmolean (28/29 April), Tate Britain (29 April) and the British Museum (30 April): bbc.co.uk/iPlayer

Words of the Week – lockdown lexicon

Covid-19 has spawned a its own lexicon, much of it light-hearted as a counterpoint to our sombre mood. One of the first to emerge was "covidiot" – someone who flouts the rules of social-distancing – but many of the words involve food and drink.

A "quarantini" is a cocktail made from ingredients found at the back of a cupboard, while a "snaccident" means inadvertently eating an entire packet of biscuits, and "Covid-15" is the 15 pounds gained from nervously nibbling our way through the day.

"Doughverkill" refers to the surfeit of home-baking pictures posted on social media, while a "dinfluencer" is someone who posts images of their lockdown-larder suppers. While not all the words will endure, they help raise a smile as we ride the "coronacoaster".

LOVE POEM
The NHS: to Provide All People featured actor
Eve Myles

One of the most inspiring programmes I have ever seen was The NHS: to Provide All People (BBC1). Described in RT in 2018 as “a love poem to the NHS”, Owen Sheers’s film was sublime. It brought to life the history I’d learnt for O-level: the dedication of staff, the medical advancements and the resolute insistence to be free at point of access, wrapped in a lilting narrative and punching a necessary political message.

Surely now is the time for this programme to be repeated so that, when this difficult period is over, the work of the NHS will never be downplayed, undermined, unappreciated or underfunded again?

QUIZ WITH NO ANSWER..?

What a treat Quiz was (Easter Monday–15 April ITV). Well written and with a stellar cast – full marks to the wonderful Matthew Macfadyen and Michael Sheen for their sympathetic portrayals of Major Charles Ingram and Chris Tarrant.

So, did the Major cheat or not? That episode of Who Wants to Be a Millionaire? was never broadcast, so we can’t judge for ourselves – and the film shown to the court was edited, which I thought made the prosecution case weaker.

Ironically, Ingram himself has praised Quiz, saying that it’s an accurate portrayal of events – a curious remark, given that they protest their innocence to this day.

Maxine Hopkinson Sheffield

...I really enjoyed Quiz, and I’m still astounded that, although found guilty, the Ingrams never went to prison. The best thing about this series was Michael Sheen. His impersonation skills are amazing: you could close your eyes and think it was Chris Tarrant. This was a great new drama to help us through the lockdown.

GREAT SERVICE

Many thanks to the BBC for broadcasting the inspirational Sunday Worship (BBC1) – and half an hour is exactly the right duration. Could we keep these services even after the Covid-19 crisis, please? No doubt many viewers would welcome this.

Janet and David Griffiths
Cardiff

KEEPING ME YOUNG

I’m bereft at the end of Trigonometry (BBC2). I have laughed and cried with the three lead characters (played by brilliant new young actors), their friends and family, and been wowed by the innovative camerawork and perfectly attuned music. It has made this 76-year-old pensioner feel young again.

Please can we have a second series, or at least more high-quality drama like this!

Gillian Eden Leeds

STOKING THE MEMORIES

What a fantastic idea of the BBC’s to rebroadcast Test Match Special’s coverage of the 2019 Headingley Ashes Test (8–11 April

5 Live Sports Extra), uncut, over the full four amazing days, including rain breaks! The match itself was so much more than Ben Stokes’s match-winning innings, and the TMS team deserve heaps of credit for taking us with them on the rollercoaster.

Sometimes, highlights shows just can’t do a match justice – and this event proved it.

Trevor Robertson

Findon, West Sussex

TASTY NEW MENU

I beg to differ with Bwalya Kangwa (Feedback, 4 April) as I commend the changes to Great British Menu (Wed–Fri BBC2), which have blown through the format like a breath of fresh air.

It has been pared back, with cleaner and sharper presentation, less repetition and fewer “meaningful” pauses. And there has been some great interaction between the chefs and the witty Susan Calman. One of my favourite programmes has come back bright and sparkling.

Lynne Carter

Oswestry, Shropshire

MOVE OVER, MONTY

No disrespect to Monty Don (or his dogs Nigel and Nellie) on Gardeners’ World (Friday BBC2), but Adam Frost is a real inspiration in these lockdown times – he has a fresh approach and his garden and cat are just wonderful! My husband and I have been gardening in our present house for 24 years – and we’re always looking for something new to tackle. Adam always gives us that.

Elizabeth and David Goose

...Perhaps in the present climate, Monty could change his “Jobs for the weekend” spot to “Jobs for any day of the week”.

And then we had Prue Leith: Journey with My Daughter (14 April C4), the touching story of her trip to Cambodia with Li-Da, who was born there and airlifted out as a baby. It was disappointing that Li-Da couldn't find her birth mother, but she may yet be found.

Prue Leith has such a genuine and friendly nature. She is already a CBE, I think it's time she was made a Dame.

REVOLUTIONISING RADIO

Ronan O'Rahilly, who died on 20 April, was the man who, back in 1964, launched Radio Caroline. It caused a sensation: DJs ad-libbing and nonstop music. More and more pirate stations started up off the UK coast, and at one point they had an audience of some 23 million.

Harold Wilson's government was outraged and raced through the Marine Offences Bill, which came into force at midnight on 14 August 1967. I left the ship just a few hours before that happened, to avoid being sent to prison. Today the station still broadcasts – legally this time.

Most of us DJs joined the BBC, which had to rethink its entire output. Ronan changed the sound of radio broadcasting. He also started me on my broadcasting career, which has lasted for well over 53 years. For that I am truly grateful.

Tom Edwards
Sleaford, Lincolnshire

SOUNDS FAMILIAR

As an avid listener to Radio 4 and 4 Extra, I'd like to sing the praises of actor Geoffrey Whitehead. He excels in radio. He does so many accents, all very well, but there is something about his voice that is always detectable. I don't know if there are special awards for radio actors, but he certainly deserves one.

John Backhurst

THANK YOU, TIM

Following Graeme Garden's tribute to the sadly departed Tim Brooke-Taylor (RT, 25 April), I recall an old episode of I'm Sorry I Haven't a Clue.

The teams were parodying the game show Call My Bluff and Tim Brooke-Taylor's word was "pandemonium", which he claimed was derived from the French pain de mon homme – "the bread of my man". He then added, "This might explain its peculiar shape." Cue probably the longest sustained laughter in the show's history.

David Miller Chigwell, Essex

GOODIE RULES OK
Tim Brooke-Taylor

...Long before I'm Sorry I Haven't a Clue, Tim Brooke-Taylor and Graeme Garden performed together (with John Cleese, Bill Oddie, David Hatch and Jo Kendall) in I'm Sorry, I'll Read That Again, which ran from April 1964 to December 1973.

It's still to be regularly heard on Radio 4 Extra and Tim's talents are displayed to the full: his Lady Constance de Coverlet and Tim Brown-Windsor often conferred, involving a lightning-quick change of voices. It was an amazingly funny programme.

Try to listen to the episode that contains a parody of Alice in Wonderland.

TRIBUTE TO A VETERAN

RT's VE Day cover star is not forgotten...

To celebrate the 70th anniversary of VE Day in 2015, RT spoke to Bletchley Park veteran Joan Fraser. Her only daughter, Janet Page from Surrey, had written to Feedback to tell us her story.

On 8 May 1945 Joan was 18, serving in the Women's Auxiliary Air Force as a teleprinter operator taking down coded signals at the Air Ministry in Westminster – working in a sub-basement office near Winston Churchill's – and unaware as she partied with the throng in Piccadilly that an aerial

Two decades later it appeared on the cover of Radio Times to mark the 20th anniversary of VE Day. Was she shocked to see herself?

"I couldn't believe it!" she told me. "You heard the planes going over, but no one knew we were having our picture taken. Of course, that's why it looks so natural."

Joan was at the heart of the war effort, so it was only fitting that in 2018 she was recognised for her work by a certificate granting her the Freedom of Bletchley Park. She took great pride in being a member of the Royal Air Forces Association and attended a number of veterans' events, thanks to the work of military charity The Not Forgotten. In 2014 she danced with Anton Du Beke at St James's Palace, and in 2017 met Prince Harry at a Buckingham Palace

UNFORGETTABLE
Joan (circled in the crowd) told RT that she felt "elated" on VE Day

She was one of the lucky ones, with a loving family, but The Not Forgotten does vital work combating loneliness and isolation among both veterans and sick or wounded serving members of the armed forces. They provide social activities and holidays, and keep in touch by phone during the current crisis. They also organise a free show called The Best Seat in the House – for anyone who needs some good old-fashioned entertainment.

Find the shows on their YouTube channel at youtube.com/user/TheNotForgottenAssoc (for more details go to their website, thenotforgotten.org).

LARKIN' ABOUT

Reading about the "Easter eggs" or allusions that writer Russell Lewis drops into episodes of Endeavour (Feedback, 18 April) brought to mind the moment I laughed out loud during the first-ever episode. Morse was being shown some lodgings by his prospective landlady who, opening the door, said, "This was Mr Bleaney's room". These are the first words of a Philip Larkin poem. Perfick! (as another Larkin, in The Darling Buds of May, might have responded).

PAUL HOLLYWOOD

‘I’ve been firing arrows’

The Bake Off judge likes lockdown archery – and “chucky eggs”

What’s your TV set-up?

I watch TV in the sitting room, lounging on my sofa. My TV is Ultra HD and my sofa is wingback, so I can lift my feet up on to it and watch the television lying down, very relaxed.

Have you been watching more TV than usual recently?

Yes, lots of box sets. I’ve finally got round to watching Killing Eve, which is a great series: the characters and music are fantastic, and it’s very stylish. I’m really into motorsport, but only one race has gone ahead this year – World Superbike at Phillip Island in Australia – so I’ve watched that about eight times!

How else have you been keeping yourself entertained?

I’ve set up an archery target and I’ve been firing arrows at that. I’m fortunate enough to have a fairly large garden and I’ve been going up and down it on a motocross bike, but I’ve run out of fuel so I can’t use it at the moment.

Have you done much baking, or have you been struggling to get hold of flour like many home bakers?

I had to go to several supermarkets to find flour and several places to find yeast as well. A neighbour gave me a pot of baking powder, and I’ve been using that to make banana bread. I like to sit in the garden with a slice of banana bread and a cappuccino, and I always have chucky eggs and soldiers made with my own white tin bread in the morning.

You eat your way around Japan in your latest Channel 4 series. Are the Japanese good bakers?

Their bakeries rival anywhere in Europe: their basic white tin bread for sandwiches is beautifully soft and their pastries are delicious. I was very impressed. They all got a handshake. Whatever the Japanese do, they master, and the food is impeccable.

Was there anything you didn’t like?

I ate a pickled plum in fish semen in a restaurant with three Michelin stars, which isn’t the best thing I’ve ever had, if I’m honest. They didn’t tell me what it was until I’d eaten it. They also gave me raw lobster and I couldn’t tell it was lobster. My western palate isn’t educated enough to know the difference between raw fish and shellfish, which is quite infuriating.

You’ve had to postpone filming the 11th series of Great British Bake Off.

Does that mean it won’t be back on TV in August?

It depends on when the lockdown is lifted. If we can get started, we could turn around the programme pretty quickly and still have it out in late summer or early autumn.

Did you know Sandi Toksvig was planning to step down as co-host?

No, it was a surprise and I was really upset. I’m very fond of Sandi. She was never too busy to sit down, have a chat and put the world to rights. We shared a couple of drinks and had some good times together. I’m going to miss her.

She’ll be replaced by Matt Lucas.

Matt’s going to be amazing. I’ve been a big fan of Matt’s for many years and I can’t wait to meet him. His humour gets me laughing out loud. I just hope Marjorie from Little Britain’s fat club comes to the Bake Off tent because I think that character is fantastic! CLAIRE WEBB
