A MESSAGE FROM THE EDITORS

Heroes in scrubs

WE SALUTE YOU
Marta Campbell, consultant anaesthetist at the Royal Free Hospital, features in Hospital

MOST OF US have never lived through a pandemic before and no doubt there are occasions when you, like us, have momentarily doubted the need for social distancing; perhaps even questioned the need for the lockdown.

If that's the case then you really ought to watch the BBC's remarkable documentary Hospital this week.

The Royal Free in London is the scene of this brilliant fast-turnaround film from the award-winning Hospital team, as it is overwhelmed with cases of Covid-19. It's a place of death and recovery, of fear and hope, and of remarkable stoicism and courage. This is public service television in its purest and most persuasive form. The final scene of the opening episode is one that you'll be talking about long after the final credits have rolled.

As we all try to do our bit – however small – to help those on the front line, RT has teamed up with The Big Night In to help raise funds for frontline workers (see page 7). We will be making a donation, as well as supplying free magazines to staff at the Royal Free and other hospitals, as we try to bring some light relief to their often fraught lives.

As life continues for the rest of us in lockdown, bear in mind our commitment to getting RT delivered to your door. Here is how to guarantee you get your copy...

WHAT I'M WATCHING...

LUCY WORSLEY

'I somehow managed to miss season eight of my beloved Homeland when it was shown on terrestrial TV recently and must work out how to catch up," says the historian and presenter. "Like a lot of other people, I'm listening to plenty of Classic FM and Radio 3 as soothing "working from home" background music.'

Homeland

DR RANJ SINGH

'I've just finished watching the third series of Stranger Things – that's been on my to-do list for a long time – and the documentary series Tiger King that everyone is talking about right now," says the TV medic and former Strictly star. "So, a lot of Netflix. But during the day, when I'm not at the hospital, ITV is on in the background.'

Viewpoint – page 7

LEVISON WOOD

'I don't watch lots of telly," says the adventurer, "but I have tuned into the new series of Killing Eve. It's not quite as gripping as the first two series yet, but give it time. It's a good old romp through the mind of a psychopath. Have I met psychopaths? Oh yes. There are lots of them out there...'

NHS ON THE FRONT LINE

DR RANJ SINGH

We're in this together

The Strictly star is doing his bit in A&E, now you can do yours

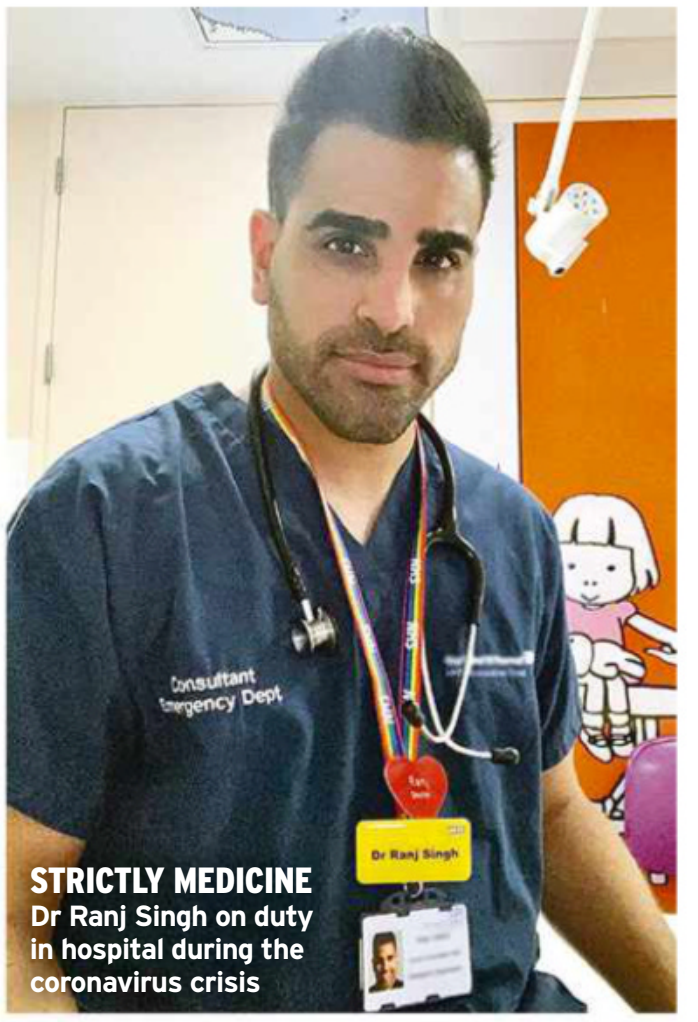
I've always worked in the NHS to some extent, but my clinical duties have obviously taken priority during the pandemic and I've stepped up my shifts at the Children's A&E Department of the Evelina London Children's Hospital in London, which is part of Guy's and St Thomas'.

Despite coronavirus having largely spared children, their lives have been affected significantly and they're understandably really scared about what's going on around them. We can reassure them mostly, but only time will tell how all this will affect them. And that's the thing about this situation: it's unpredictable and we're still learning a lot.

Over the last couple of weeks for example, there's been talk about a possible serious complication of Covid-19 in children that seems to be emerging. It's still very rare, but we've seen a number of children develop a pattern of inflammation around the body, similar to another condition called Kawasaki disease. It could just be coincidence, but we are being extra cautious while we learn more, especially as we know that children who have Kawasaki disease can have long-term heart problems if not treated properly.

'Frontline services must be recognised and funded better'

What I know for sure is that hospitals and staff have never experienced a pressure quite like this before. There have been smaller pandemics, like swine flu, but none of us have experienced anything to this extent. The pressure on the NHS and the changes we've had to make have felt quite overwhelming and intense. However, we've never seen a response quite like this either. And what I feel is that the country's decision-makers will have a lot to look back at and learn from in the future.



STRICTLY MEDICINE Dr Ranj Singh on duty in hospital during the coronavirus crisis

But given what was happening around the world, the reaction could have been faster. Very recently, Lord Deighton was appointed as the PPE [personal protective equipment] czar to the Government, so he's now overseeing procurement. This sort of management decision could have been made a lot sooner. But we can always look with hindsight and think how nice it would've been to have huge stocks of PPE ready and waiting.

The issue is storing it, the huge cost involved and the fact that it all expires. Thankfully, those decisions aren't up to me. We just have to make do as best we can. And there's no denying that the public support for the NHS has been fantastic. There's nothing quite as uplifting as seeing the Clap for Carers every Thursday and the huge efforts people have made to fund-raise for NHS-related charities.

But what I'd like to see is a situation where that isn't necessary. What we all need to remember is that the NHS is a tax- and public-funded body. That's not to say it gets enough funding or that the NHS has everything it needs. What coronavirus has taught us is the immense power of frontline services and workers and how important they are. But these are staff members who often bear the brunt of cuts. I hope the Government and those in power now recognise the value of these services and fund them better, so that in the future we don't end up in situations like this again.

At times like these, people do need a focus, a purpose, and they want to help in any way they can. However, let's not forget that there are lots of other organisations out there that also need our help – food banks, grass-roots charities helping local communities, domestic violence charities and those helping vulnerable children.

The NHS is always going to exist and be funded regardless – unlike some of these charities, which are at real risk of folding. So please keep giving generously and helping each other and, hopefully, we can take away some positives from this terrible situation.

AS TOLD TO DAVID BROWN

THE BIG NIGHT IN ISN'T OVER YET... YOU CAN STILL DONATE

The very reason we organised The Big Night In (23 April BBC1) was to help charities across the UK who had been in touch, saying how desperately they need financial support to be able to continue their work during this crisis.

The response on the night blew us away. Richard [Curtis] executive produced the show from our front room and it was watched by a huge audience. At a time when every single citizen is feeling the pinch financially we have somehow managed to raise £70m. I am in awe of the presenters, comedians, singers and actors who played their part, and so grateful to the UK for responding in such a kind, gracious way.

This money will go directly to our work helping vulnerable people who have been hit the hardest by Covid-19. Every pound the UK gives will be shared between hundreds of small charities who will use it to help get food to a hungry family or a prescription to someone unable to leave home. It will help the lonely and the isolated to stay supported, and protect those vulnerable to abuse.

If you haven't had a chance to donate and would still like to, we'd be unbelievably grateful for your support – and will use the money in the wisest and most effective way we can. Go to bbc.co.uk/bignightin for details.

‘We feel like we’re going to war’

As the Royal Free Hospital invites the BBC to witness life and death on the Covid-19 front line, ICU matron Sinead Hanton tells RT why everyone must watch this film – and how our clapping keeps her going

INTERVIEW BY ROSIE MILLARD

PIVOTAL
Sinead Hanton is the matron of the intensive care unit at London’s Royal Free Hospital: “People now realise how hard we work to keep our patients safe”

FOR ANYONE WHO doubts that clapping on your doorstep to support members of the frontline NHS staff has an effect, read on. This is the account of Sinead Hanton, matron in the intensive care unit at London’s Royal Free Hospital. “Every time I hear or see the clapping, it makes me very, very emotional,” she says. “We feel like we’re going to war, and every day I arrive at work I pray for strength to help me get through another day. On Thursday evenings I’m still at work. We gather on the fourth floor, open the window and listen to the clapping. It’s very emotional. There’s not a dry eye in the house.”

Matron Hanton’s strength, resilience and humanity will be displayed to the nation this week in the latest series of Hospital. The award-winning observational documentary, which over five series has sent crews into hospitals across England, returns for two fast-turnaround programmes made during lockdown at the Royal Free and its sister institution, Barnet Hospital, also in north London. The crews were in from day one and at the heart of the onslaught; they are by Hanton’s side in intensive care.

As one of the senior nurses in ICU, one would have thought this might have been the last thing Hanton would have wanted, but no. “We welcomed them in,” she says. “We wanted to show what goes on inside.” As the pandemic swept across the capital, she describes how, just as swiftly, the hospitals restructured to cope: staff were redeployed, reskilled, put into fresh teams, put onto the front line.

“When I look back on this moment and realise how many new things we’ve had to learn very quickly, and how we’ve got stuck in together, it’s been remarkable.”

Hanton’s role as matron, a position originally created to police the prevention and control of infection in hospitals, was clearly pivotal. “We redeployed surgeons, we brought junior doctors in. We started talking to surgeons and anaesthetists, dealing with them on a very human level. Intensive care is usually isolated from the outside world, but here we are working and coming together as a team. People now realise how busy intensive care is, and how hard we work to keep our patients safe.” Indeed, she thinks the altered hospital structure will be long-lasting. “After this, I think the teamwork is going to change.”

Didn’t she find the cameras intrusive? “I’m quite a shy person, but television does give an insight into how we work. It’s an excellent platform to show people what goes on, how patients are looked after on a 24-hour basis, that someone is with them all the time.”

Even those closest to Hanton, it seems, have no idea what actually goes on in her ▷

BEHIND THE MASK
Sinead Hanton: "I try to keep my distance from my son, who is four. I miss him"

KILLER VIRUS

SAVED

The numbers of patients who have died or been treated successfully at the Royal Free since the virus outbreak in March. Statistics correct at time of going to press

◁ day. "When my husband saw Fergus Walsh's reports on the intensive care unit at University College Hospital in London [see page 12], he said, 'Gosh, I didn't realise it was like that in ICU. Do you actually work like that?' I told him, 'That is a normal day for us.'"

These "normal" days will be condensed into two nights' viewing on Monday and Tuesday. The programme's executive producer Jackie Waldock said very strict filming protocols were agreed with the Royal Free before her filming teams moved in. "My crews didn't go into areas where full personal protective equipment [PPE] was needed, because we didn't feel it was appropriate to use the hospital's equipment. We filmed outside the clinical areas and then, when we wanted to go in, we gave a couple of the clinicians a Go Pro camera and they would film specific patients for us. We never asked them to stop working and we didn't get in the way."

Can everything be shown just in two episodes? Waldock can see the value in continuing the shoot. "We are in talks with the BBC about another series. I don't know if that will happen. But if we do go back, it will still be ongoing, and it would be fascinating to see how the NHS manages to get back to treating people with all the medical complaints that have had to be postponed."

What the films will show is Sinead Hanton's ward almost doubling in size from 38 to 69 beds, and even with redeployment of staff the pressure is clearly very real. "In intensive care we typically give one-on-one nursing. We are now obliged to have a ratio of one nurse to three patients, but with extra nursing support. There is still someone with them at all times. When patients are so sick that their relatives can't be there, that is very tough. But even when people are dying, we reassure the relations that we are there. Always."

Death has become an all too familiar reality of this pandemic and the Royal Free Trust has suffered a higher body count than most – though, of course, comparisons with Trusts of differing sizes isn't useful. At the time of going to press there had been 437 deaths attributed to Covid-19. On the Trust's worst day, on 7 April, 30 patients died. On the plus side, 785 patients who tested positive for Covid recovered after treatment and have been discharged.

SHE HOPES THE public will take away two vital things from the programmes. First, that at the Royal Free NHS Trust, at least, there is enough PPE to go round in intensive care. "The PPE is reviewed daily and taken very seriously. We have never run out. We're working hard to make sure our staff are made to feel supported, and when we see headlines like staff are exposing themselves unnecessarily, that [in our case] is wrong."

The other thing? That when the general public sees in the programmes just how many patients are gravely ill, that the overarching message about social behaviour will be at last drummed into our heads.

"You see people still going to parks," says Hanton, with incredulity. "And that is very upsetting. Once this programme has aired, I think it will show people how important it is to distance themselves. It's really stressful for the staff and upsetting to see what is happening to our patients. It's really important to get the message out. I knew we would have a spike a couple of weeks after Easter, because we knew that people were going out socialising and having parties. And that is exactly what happened. People don't see, they don't understand the impact to the hospitals on staff and patients."

'When people are dying, we are there. Always'

How does she cope with the daily impact? "I have a debrief with the other matrons and senior staff members at the end of each day. We talk about what went well or what didn't. We often have a little cry. Then I go home. I try to keep my distance from my son, who is four. I stay in another room from him, and I miss him. But I unwind at home. My husband is a musician and he plays lots of music and sings songs he has written for the NHS. We live in the country, and I take my dog Benson for walks. He's a staffie crossed with a boxer and weighs around 40kg. When we get back, he sits on my lap."

What? "Yes, I know. It's like having a mini horse on my knee. I got him from Battersea 11 years ago. He's my therapist. I have dog therapy."

HOW THE CRISIS HAS CHANGED FERGUS WALSH ▶

‘I got in my car and cried’

INTERVIEW BY ROSIE MILLARD

For millions, he is the calm, slender figure of information, clarity and not a little reassurance at the top of the BBC bulletin most days and nights. Fergus Walsh has been imparting medical and scientific information in clear, understandable language on the BBC for more than 25 years; in terms of contagion, he has reported on bird flu, swine flu, Sars, Mers and Ebola. Yet it is the Covid-19 virus that has made him a household name.

“My career has prepared me for this story,” Walsh acknowledges. “It is the event I always feared might happen. Although I wish it had never happened.” A self-acknowledged “champion sleeper”, he admits he now has broken nights. “I haven’t been sleeping as well as I was. I go to bed thinking about coronavirus, and I wake up completely awake, thinking about coronavirus, although that is as nothing compared to the medical teams who are doing 12-hour shifts.”

Back in the day, I sat alongside Fergus Walsh as a fellow correspondent in the BBC’s Social Affairs Unit. Without question, he was the most tenacious of a deeply pushy bunch. Ambitious, single-minded, dogged, he would fight for his stories to appear on the one, six and ten o’clock bulletins, unconcerned about who he might elbow past in the struggle for airtime. Is he now quietly thrilled to be at the top of the running order, alongside his counterpart Hugh Pym (the BBC’s health editor), night after night?

“I would be very happy not to be top of the bulletin, as long as this virus went away,” he says, and I believe him. We are FaceTiming, and his pale face looks tired out. Is he going to take some days off? “My managers have been incredibly supportive and have pushed me to take time off, but I haven’t done that yet. I’m able to process [the pressure] because very soon afterwards I talk about it. I worry more for the long-term impact on NHS staff and patients. I’ve been around long enough to know that to articulate it and talk about it is fine.”

‘Staff begged me to tell people to stay at home’

When you have to consider every single word and remember you’re addressing the worried and the bereaved, talking about it on live TV is a challenge. Before lockdown, while not exactly downplaying the virus, Walsh was keen to remind people that it was usually manageable. As it galloped ahead, the tone had to change. “As the threat became larger, my tone had to modify. It still is the case that in most cases the symptoms will be mild, but for a minority it will

INTENSIVE CARE
"It is harrowing to see the devastation caused by coronavirus," said Fergus Walsh in his April report, "and humbling to witness the resilience of nurses and doctors" become serious and you will be hospitalised."

It was his two ground-breaking reports from inside the intensive care unit at University College Hospital in central London in early April that I think he will come to see as, if not the finest, then certainly a signal moment in his 36 years as a reporter. "No camera team had been allowed inside any hospital during the outbreak, and no camera team had ever been allowed into intensive care." Walsh credits his cameraman and editor Adam Walker and producer Nicki Stiastny with jointly achieving the scoop, and while television reporting is unquestionably a team effort, it's also clear that it was his quarter of a century building relations within the NHS that gave UCLH the confidence to let Walsh into the heart of the struggle.

Crucially, he saw it as a moment to wrest the story away from the Downing Street machine. "The epidemic was categorised around the daily Number Ten briefing," he says. "That is important, but it was becoming a political story, and I was keen to get it back to see what the pandemic was doing, and why we were being asked to stay at home. Fortunately, people trust me, and I have a relationship going back many, many years with the hospital. That was what got us in."

The coverage was aimed to hit hard at the viewing public. What Walsh was unprepared for was the way it hit him. "It doesn't matter who is in the bed. Everyone gets that incredible care. Because there is no proven drug treatment, the doctors and nurses found that turning patients helps get oxygen into the lungs. The patient is on a ventilator, with a lot of lines coming out of him or her. Turning the patient involves eight members of staff. The level of delicacy and care that they showed to very gently turn this patient, that was a point when I became quite emotional.

"I've been detached from every story I have ever done; I didn't manage it with this. I walked over to the window and saw normal life going on outside in Euston. It made me think, 'Do people know what is coming?' Afterwards, we came out. Adam and I didn't talk very much. On the way home, I rang my middle daughter Saskia, and I cried as I was driving home. I don't think I've ever done that before."

Like millions, I watched those reports, and afterwards, when Walsh spoke live in the studio, I could see there was something different that night about my old friend. This was a man deeply shaken by what he had seen. "It's the overwhelming sense of responsibility," he says. "I had to tell the public the stark reality of what coronavirus can do, and why social distancing has been brought in, and why all the staff at UCLH begged me to tell people to stay at home. I felt this massive weight on me. We have seen the virus in Italy and China, but seeing it in an NHS hospital is different. I felt a great responsibility to tell the story faithfully and truthfully, and to choose the right words, tell it how I see it, without putting my opinion out there."

How does he cope with this responsibility? "I talk to my wife and three grown-up children about it. I have a drink. I think about it – a lot. That helps. I also think about going back and being the person I was. Prior to this, editors would ask me for positive news stories; things about healthy ageing, healthy living. I would be so happy to get back to all of that." Not in the immediate future, however.

"I don't think any of our lives will be like they were before for quite some time." I suspect his will never be the same.

Without intending to be, Walsh is unquestionably part of the coronavirus landscape, helping us understand, manage and come to terms with this defining, historical event.

THE RT INTERVIEW BY MARK LAWSON

Charlie Brooker is our favourite dystopian thinker… but what did he do when his bad dream came true?

Picture a world in which governments ban touching of strangers or the old; police-style tape on supermarket floors tells shoppers where to stand, and urgent TV advertisements give tips on staying alive. Charlie Brooker imagined societies like this in his dystopian series Black Mirror, and his collapse-of-civilisation E4 drama, Dead Set. Many people, during the Covid-19 pandemic, must be thinking how very Black Mirror or Charlie Brooker it all seems.

"It really is like the stuff I've written," he says over the phone while taking his daily permitted hour's exercise in west London, near his home. Some questions have to be repeated because of interruptions: "A jogger just ran past. Certainly not maintaining social distance. Whatever was in his lungs, I breathed it."

But, while admitting to being a "big worrier" and a "hypochondriac", Brooker has found his past fiction helpful in dealing with present reality. "Because I've really always expected something like this to come along, I think maybe I'm not going through quite the level of psychological adjustment as some other people. If you've spent years anticipating the worst, oddly, when the worst happens, you can stop worrying about that possibly happening because it has. So I'm dealing with this on a personal level far better than I would have anticipated."

He is even slightly optimistic: "If you look at what happens in classic dystopian fiction – where everyone turns on each other immediately – so far that hasn't happened. It's not to say it won't. But I pivoted quite early to an optimistic view that this is terrible but, at the end of it, there's a possibility that we'll have the stomach to realign society a little. Is this forcing our hands to address financial inequality and climate change? You hope that's the outcome, rather than that it makes psychotic strongman politicians more secure."

When lockdown was imposed in March, Brooker was about to start making a new series featuring the gullible reporter Philomena Cunk (played by Diane Morgan), which would have involved exterior shooting, much of it overseas.

"That was pushed back by a whole year," he says. "So we were looking for ways to keep ourselves active, trying to come up with things that might be made under home working."

They realised Brooker's Wipe brand, which ran on BBC4 or BBC2 in various guises for a decade from 2006 and largely involved Brooker shouting about TV from a sofa, "actually works pretty well under lockdown conditions". He had also noticed, while working on the Wipe reviews of the year, which aired from 2014–16, that there was an anticipatory element for the audience: "People would say, 'I can't wait to see what you say about a particular event.' So this seemed a good one to do. We're just swapping a studio for a room in my house. I'm finding the lockdown side of it fairly easy because really, I've been in training for years. I don't go to the pub much, I'm quite a home bird."

However, two weeks ago, halfway through the production period, Antiviral Wipe ("The title was too good to resist") almost had to be abandoned for medical reasons, but not those currently paralysing everyday life. Brooker has a pull-up bar, hanging from a door frame. Upping his workout intensity under lockdown, he was doing some lifts when "it snapped out and I fell backwards on to a hard wooden floor, still holding the bar, so I couldn't break my fall. My instant thought was 'I'm going to die' because I'd never hit my head so hard."

Although the Government is encouraging people still to use the NHS for non-Covid conditions, Brooker was reluctant to trouble his GP or A&E, but was able to seek help through a chain of media degrees of separation. His wife, broadcaster and author Konnie Huq, is co-writing a series of children's books with TV executive James Farrell, who is the husband of Adam Kay, a former doctor who became a comedian and author of the hospital memoir, This Is Going to Hurt. Konnie asked James to ask Adam if he would have a phone consultation with Charlie.

"Adam said that, although he hadn't practised as a GP for ten years, as I hadn't lost consciousness, was able to talk, and wasn't bleeding or vomiting, I probably wouldn't get admitted to hospital at the moment. But he, and later, my own GP, were sure that I had concussion and said I mustn't work for a week."

During the pandemic, many are limiting the amount of news they watch because of the risk of depression or despair. But is Brooker having to watch it all? "Actually, one of the reasons I stopped doing the end-of-year Wipes is that I was getting sick of having to relive the previous 12 months, watching one depressing event after another. So I can absolutely understand that it's a sensible thing to do for people to ration their exposure to news at the moment. It's like taking vitamin C: it's only helpful up to a point, beyond which it can become dangerous. So, actually, I have been limiting what I watch."

Despite some media reports that a sixth season of Black Mirror was interrupted by the virus, Brooker was surprised by this, and the situation may be complicated by a recent rearrangement of his production company.

However, he says, "I've been busy, doing things. I don't know what I can say about what I'm doing and not doing. At the moment, I don't know what stomach there would be for stories about societies falling apart, so I'm not working away on one of those. I'm sort of keen to revisit my comic skill set, so I've been writing scripts aimed at making myself laugh."

As a cultural commentator by profession, Brooker finds much material in the weirdness of our lives now, noting, for example, that "time is somehow both accelerating and decelerating at the same time. If you have something to do, it's suddenly 5pm and you haven't done it yet. But, if you don't have something to do, it's always 11am, no matter how often you look at your watch."

And pre-plague TV programming, he finds, now often seems reckless, shocking: "I've decided I really, really like Gregg Wallace. MasterChef is my comfort watch. But I watched an episode in which they were all eating off the same plate; contestants were making food with their bare hands! People shaking hands or standing around in crowds looks weird now."

As well as explaining the strangeness to themselves, parents have to decide what to say to children. What have he and Konnie told theirs?

"I hope we've done a good job of not scaring them, while impressing the need to wash their hands, and explaining why we can't get in the car and go to the woods or whatever. Our eldest is called Covey, which sounds uncomfortably close to Covid. So I was worried he'd get picked on at school. But, luckily, no one caught on to that before the schools closed.

"For them, every day is like a weekend when we don't go out. Which was most weekends anyway. Although our eight-year-old made an Easter card for his brother, saying: 'Happy Easter! I wish Corona wasn't real.' Now that was a bit dystopian."

According to Government guidelines, he has six minutes left to exercise, so walks fast home, through a city like something from his mind.

The royals' secret weapon

Lucy Worsley explores the power of photography to make – or break – royalty

What's the most powerful weapon in the possession of the British monarchy? The armed forces? Centuries of tradition? Well, no, I'd argue that it's a photograph that can make or break a king or queen. Over the past two centuries, it's the camera that's allowed our sovereigns from Victoria to Elizabeth II to build up a following among their subjects, and to send out visual messages to the world at large. You'll rarely see members of the royal family in the flesh. Nor even, despite radio and TV, will you often hear their voices. But what you will see, almost every single day, are photographs of them, each one speaking a thousand words.

QUEEN SUPREME

Henry VIII had Hans Holbein the Younger to create his image for posterity; Elizabeth II had Cecil Beaton. The official portrait taken just after her coronation in 1953 shows a marvellous chemistry between artist and sitter in one of the most powerful images of the British monarchy that exists.

Beaton had long been a photographer of models, celebrities and film stars before he got his royal gig and knew how to flatter. He used strong lighting and theatrical sets to place his sitters in a magical world of their own. This isn't Westminster Abbey; it's a printed backdrop he installed in Buckingham Palace.

But there's enormous depth to Beaton's work because he'd also studied art history to understand how portraits were painted in centuries past. His photograph has film-star glamour, but it also references the grand "coronation portrait" commissioned by all previous kings and queens to mark the start of a reign. Beaton combines ancient tradition with Hollywood pizzazz to create a timeless image of a young and beautiful queen.

FROM QUEEN VICTORIA TO PRINCE LOUIS ▶

THE UNROYAL ROYALS

Queen Victoria and her husband Albert were "early adopters" when it came to the new technology of the camera. As well as sitting for photographers, they also installed their very own darkroom at Windsor Castle.

In pictures like this one, they look rather stiff and grumpy simply because of the lengthy exposure periods – often up to a minute – required by early cameras. You simply couldn't smile or relax, because you wouldn't be able to hold the pose for long enough.

But you'll also notice that Victoria and her husband look surprisingly "normal", rather like regular middle-class folk, without any crowns, thrones or robes. That's partly because they really were surprisingly downbeat, for royalty, in the ways they dressed and behaved.

Unlike painted portraits, photographs could capture this and make them look real and "relatable". Their subjects loved it.

Millions of Victorian Britons went on to buy the little prints of the queen called "cartes de visite" and propped them up on their mantelpieces. It was almost as if they were welcoming the queen into their own homes.

The monarchy's new "superpower" – the photograph – had started to do its work.

DOWNFALL OF A DUKE

Edward VIII's relationship with photography shows how it could all go wrong.

This picture was taken just before his abdication from the throne in 1936. At the start of his life, the future Edward VIII was treated with deference by a fawning press.

So when photographers snapped him and his mistress Wallis Simpson enjoying a holiday on a yacht on the Dalmatian Coast, British newspapers at first refused to print them.

Eventually, though, the pictures that seemed to prove that the man who was to be king was having an affair with an American divorcee appeared in the American press, and the British papers finally followed suit.

It was just a few days afterwards that Edward felt forced to choose between the crown and the woman he loved, and abdicated the throne.

The royals may live by the camera, but their reputations also die by it. When the wrong kind of photographs appeared, Edward VIII's short reign was over.

THE PIN-UP PRINCESS

How do you behave on camera if you're not the heir to the throne, but her little sister? While Elizabeth II would never allow herself to be photographed in a racy pose, her younger sister injected the monarchy with a much-needed spicy sizzle.

Often photographed in glitzy, alluring poses – smoking a cigarette, for example, or hanging out in a nightclub – the princess was so in love with having her photo taken that she even married a photographer. Her nuptials to Antony Armstrong-Jones became the first royal wedding to be broadcast on television.

He treats her like a model, not a princess, making her look as if she's naked, and catching her knowing, sexy look, which brought the tired old institution of the monarchy right into the Swinging Sixties.

Princess Margaret may have loved the limelight, but celebrity's a brittle thing. When her relationship with Snowdon broke down, her days as a pin-up were over, and the royal family was left reeling by a royal divorce. For princesses, playing with photography can be a bit like playing with fire.

FAIRYTALE MOMENT

KISS AND BREAK UP

Royal photographer Anwar Hussein had an unusual route into his profession. Brought up in Africa, he began by photographing wildlife.

When he came to England and joined the pool of photographers at official engagements and on royal tours, he used the same skills of patience and close observation to snap the tiny moments when his subjects finally dropped their guard and relaxed. That approach has made him a firm favourite of the royal family, with his photographs adorning many of their Christmas cards.

By the time Hussein took this picture of the Prince and Princess of Wales, it was late on in the day of their wedding.

The royal couple had been resisting the pressure from the crowd outside Buckingham Palace to give each other a kiss.

Some of the other photographers in the pack had decided that the moment must have passed and lowered their lenses. But when the royal couple finally gave in and smooched, Hussein was still ready and waiting.

The image has become celebrated because it seems to capture a moment of real intimacy and romance between a young couple who'd actually spent most of the day's formalities looking awkward, stressed and nervous.

What the nation wanted to believe about Charles, Di and their fairytale wedding could be summed up in Hussein's perfect snap.

PLAYING WITH FIRE?

A DUCHESS TAKES CONTROL

The reason that the papers are always full of royal photos, authorised or not, is because readers demand to see them. It's a fact that unscrupulous photographers have always sought to exploit. But the canniest royals have always understood it and have even made it work in their favour.

One hundred and 20 years ago, Queen Alexandra, wife of Edward VII, was a keen photographer, and used Kodak film to snap family and friends. She created a book of images of behind-the-scenes royal life, which was sold to raise money for charity.

Following in her footsteps, the Duchess of Cambridge has taken back some control over the image of her family by turning photographer herself, and using her skills to draw attention to causes she believes in. Just like Victoria and Albert, the Duchess of Cambridge has embraced the absolute latest technology and platform – in her case Instagram – to release very relatable images of family life.

Wood takes

Levison Wood loves to trek huge distances across epic landscapes, so you might think that living in lockdown would be torture for him. Wood made his name in 2014 when he became the first person to walk the 4,000-mile length of the River Nile. A year later he tackled the breadth of the Himalayas from Afghanistan to Bhutan, and in 2016 the ex-Parachute Regiment captain journeyed 1,700 miles on foot along the spine of the Americas, from Mexico to Colombia.

‘The crap people whine on about is nonsensical’

So to be cooped up in his London flat and permitted a solitary hour’s exercise a day could reasonably have him climbing the walls.

“Actually, from a personal perspective it’s been absolutely fine,” says Wood, before adding with a mirthless laugh, “Financially – bloody ruinous. I had loads of trips planned for this year, which are all delayed.

“Until lockdown, I tried to fill every moment. I was addicted to work, never saying no to any trip. But I’ve really enjoyed learning to be alone at home. I’ve caught up on lots of tasks, reading lots and doing plenty of writing. I’ve been running 5k a day to keep on top of fitness, and volunteering with Team Rubicon – a military veterans’ charity that’s been chipping in with assistance to the NHS. My flat is pretty poky but I’ve discovered the joy of a good lie-in – I didn’t get up until noon the other day.”

Wood is dutifully Secret Squirrel on where he was originally scheduled to be now (“these things always stay under wraps until I’ve done them”), but more forthcoming on Walking with Elephants, his account of following a herd on their 650-mile migratory route along Botswana’s Okavango Delta. Wood, a cameraman and the programme director walked for 27 consecutive days in the company of a local guide, with a support vehicle following at a distance.

“It’s only when you’ve got a really small team that you can have great encounters with wildlife,” says Wood, who’s just turned 38. “We walked upwards of 20 miles a day, on alert the whole time because you might be charged by a hippo, buffalo or elephant. The terrain was tough, but it was pleasant in the day – not 40 or 50 degrees as it was when I walked the Nile.”

As the trek begins, we see Wood’s local guide call on the spirits of his ancestors to bless the expedition. Wood joins in, namechecking Matt Power – the American travel journalist who joined his epic Nile journey to cover the story, and in the process was fatally overcome by heatstroke. Is Wood burdened by Power’s death?

“I do think about it,” concedes Wood. “Those of us who were with him when he died raise a glass to him every year on the anniversary, March 10th. It’s a real reminder of the severity of life on these journeys. It’s not a game.”

All the same, it’s the fulfilment of his boyhood dream. The son of two Stoke-on-Trent teachers, as a child he devoured tales of derring-do by Shackleton, Scott and TE Lawrence, gravely informing his school careers officer that he wanted to be an explorer. Bristling with Duke of Edinburgh awards, he hitchhiked to Iraq at 18; and having graduated in history from Nottingham University, hitchhiked from London to India while co-founding the adventure travel company Secret Compass. Next came his five-year spell with the Parachute Regiment, “a necessary stepping stone” towards his current career. His time in the Army concluded with a tour in Afghanistan.

"I think everyone is changed by that experience," he says. "I miss the soldiers under my command. At one point there were 90. They all came away in one piece, but there were lots of close shaves. It makes you appreciate how easily you can potentially succumb. Did I take life? That's a question you don't tend to ask soldiers. I certainly fired my weapon on a few occasions. You shoot in the general direction – I suppose it would be completely different at close quarters. After Afghanistan I felt I'd done my bit. I didn't join the Army to do paperwork."

Ten years after leaving, he is still a reservist and gets together with his Para ex-colleagues "for a few beers" every Remembrance Sunday – if he's in the UK. His travels occupy eight or nine months of the year. "While I'm away I'm with people who are grateful to own a chicken and a goat, then I get back and hear people complaining that their broadband isn't fast enough. We live in a very stable country where things generally work most of the time. The crap people whine on about here is nonsensical."

The drawback of his working life is that it's not conducive to domestic bliss. Two years ago he was quoted as saying he was planning "a wife hunt", but bridles now at the mention of it.

"Don't believe everything you read in The Guardian," he warns. "I keep my personal life personal, although I want a family. My life as it is has definitely put paid to some perfectly good relationships."

Still, every interview with him tends to include a phrase along the lines of "rugged good looks" – so not all bad? "It's a bit bewildering, actually. It can help in some ways, but can hinder people taking you quite so seriously. People think you're illiterate if you're on television."

Meanwhile, he "never wants to stop" travelling. "I'm not walking to escape anything," he says. "I just have a yearning for the freedom and simplicity of being outside. I do it because it's so natural, connecting spiritually with what humans are alive to do. It's what our ancestors did. The rest of the waffle we call real life is nonsense."

KATE BATTERSBY

"You might just get a word in," Ralf Little warns me at the beginning of our three-way conference call with Ricky Tomlinson. "Between the jokes and anecdotes that he's told you ten times already."

Somewhere, out in the ether, there's a snort of delight followed by laughter. "Hey Ralf!" demands Tomlinson, who played Little's on-screen father, Jim Royle, in sitcom The Royle Family. "Tell him about the black pudding you wouldn't eat. You're a traitor to the North!"

The encounter with a black pudding in Lancashire, along with turning on the Blackpool illuminations, playing cymbals in a Barnsley brass band and climbing all of the 199 steps up the hill to Whitby Abbey, is one of many manifestations of northernness encountered in Ricky and Ralf's Very Northern Road Trip, in which the two men drive a campervan the length of a region stretching from the Scottish border down to Manchester and the edge of the Midlands. The six-part series is the first TV the pair have made together since the final Royle Family Christmas special in 2012. "It had been blinking ages since we saw each other," says Tomlinson.

'I was too tall to play Poldark... imagine me with no shirt on'

RICKY TOMLINSON

Little was 17 when he first walked onto The Royle Family set in 1998. Tomlinson was famous for playing Bobby Grant in Channel 4's ground-breaking soap Brookside in the early 1980s; Little was unknown outside of Lancashire. "I was too young for Brookside," says Little, "but I knew Ricky from Cracker [in which Tomlinson played DCI Charlie Wise]. When I first heard his name my reaction was, 'Oh, my God, he's brilliant.'"

Tomlinson played pater familias Jim Royle, permanently ensconced in his armchair, remote control in hand. Little recalls Tomlinson balancing a cup of tea on his stomach. He is still full-figured, not that it bothers him. "Did anyone watch Poldark?" Tomlinson asks. "You know it was between me and Aidan Turner for that part, but I was too tall. Can you imagine me running along the beach with no shirt on?" There is the briefest of pauses before Little says, "Yes."

Sue Johnston – Sheila Grant in Brookside – also played Tomlinson's other half, Barbara, in The Royle Family. Caroline Aherne was daughter Denise, Craig Cash played Denise's boyfriend Dave, and Little was Jim and Barbara's youngest, Antony. Aherne, who wrote the show with Cash, died of cancer, aged 52, in 2016. It was Aherne's decision to cast Tomlinson and Johnston – the Brookside couple beset by tragedy and travail – as the TV-obsessed Royles, constantly getting "our Antony" to make a cup of tea. "God love her," says Tomlinson.

Jim's reaction to anything that displeased him, "My arse", became an enduring catchphrase that will be remembered long after Tomlinson has gone – a prospect that delights him. In the new series Tomlinson gets an entire football team in Preston to shout it in unison.

Just as Coronation Street had before it, The Royle Family presented a view of communal working-class life in the North that captured the wider public imagination, only this time the old social hubs of the workplace and the pub had been replaced by a three-piece suite, coffee table and TV set.

Now, 20 years later, the two actors – Tomlinson from Liverpool, Little from Bury, "cotton mill country in the foothills of the Pennines" – have gone out on the road to discover what remains of the North and northernness. "It's not a tangible thing, the North," says Tomlinson. "It's how you feel."

It's 23 years since Ricky Tomlinson and Ralf Little first met on The Royle Family – now they're back to talk ageing, comedy and the North

INTERVIEW BY MICHAEL HODGES

THE ROYLES
Denise, Barbara, Jim, Dave and Antony

For Little, living in exile in London, it's very much the people that make the North northern. "I know it's a massive cliché," he says. "In London you stick your head in your book or your phone and hope that no one talks to you. That's the way it is. You can't go five yards in the North without, 'All right, love! How's it going?' It's totally true."

For Tomlinson, who still lives in Liverpool, with his second wife Rita, northernness is also shaped by politics and economics. "I think there's a shared northernness that we didn't really want," he says. "Which is the economic divide between the North and the South, the disparity we still have."

Tomlinson has a radical history. A former plasterer and union activist, he was imprisoned for conspiring to intimidate co-workers in the 1970s – a charge that he's always denied. "I knew about that," says Little. "It's in his autobiography, but the truth is, you don't sit on the set of The Royle Family and in between takes, after you've made each other laugh, go, 'So, Ricky, I believe you were in prison, tell me about that!' So making this trip was a chance to talk properly about those things."

THE SERIES SHOWCASES the many natural wonders of the North and we get all the things we would expect – the Lake District in all its glory, the stark beauty of the North York Moors and Antony Gormley's giant and enigmatic Angel of the North looking down on Tyneside. We also get some things we don't expect, like a self-help group for lonely men in Leeds and footballing Sudanese refugees in Lancashire. At heart, though, it's an excuse for the two men to take up their relationship again.

However, as Little, now the star of Death in Paradise, points out, things have changed. "Ricky and I are close, but he lives up north, I live down south. It's not like we've been going round to each other's houses in the intervening years. I'm a proper grown man now, I'm 40 and Ricky has turned 80. This just felt like a lovely chance to properly hang out together."

What has he learnt about Tomlinson? "He's not a fan of much modern comedy," says Little.

"It's not that I don't like them," Tomlinson says, "I don't think they're funny! I think they should be done under the Trade Descriptions Act, the audiences are getting cheated. Ken Dodd could do five hours on stage! Some young comics can't do 15 minutes."

'I'm a grown man now. I'm 40 and Ricky's turned 80'
RALF LITTLE

Now the two men are back on their respective patches for the foreseeable future. Little is in London and Tomlinson with Rita in Liverpool, waiting for the pandemic to end. "I'm in the at risk group," says Tomlinson. "Without the NHS, I'd be dead. I've had open heart surgery, I've had asthma all my life, I've had both my eyes operated on and cataracts removed. I owe them my life. But I'm on medication and that makes me very susceptible. Still, at least one good thing has come out of this." Which is? "Me and Rita have decided we're not going to have any more kids." Another gigantic guffaw comes charging down the line from Liverpool.

"Told you," says Little. "Never stops."

The Eddy Available from Friday 8 May Netflix

Damien Chazelle is a former high-school drummer who directed Whiplash, an award-winning film about a high-school drummer, he's also a musician who reinvented the musical with Oscar-winning La La Land. But The Eddy, a new eight-part series about a struggling Paris jazz club (and Chazelle's first TV work), may be the closest thing to his heart yet.

"I did it because it personally resonated with me," he says. "Obviously, there's the music element, but I grew up partly in Paris and partly in America, so I had experienced my own version of the expat life in Paris. This show looks at that same French-American dialogue in music, in all its messiness and complexity. It felt like something that I could bring my own personal experience to."

The idea for The Eddy was first suggested to Chazelle six years ago, when he was premiering his breakout hit Whiplash at the Sundance festival. The producer Alan Poul and the composer Glen Ballard (who co-wrote and produced Alanis Morissette's classic 1995 album, Jagged Little Pill) came to Chazelle with an idea for a show set principally in a jazz club in contemporary Paris, following the lives of a group of local expats as they struggle to keep the club afloat. With Whiplash the most talked-about film at Sundance, Chazelle – who was only 29 at the time – was getting lots of offers, but The Eddy came with something extra.

"Glen had a group of musicians and a repertoire of songs he had been concocting – some of them are actually in the final show –and that got me intrigued. He'd fallen in love with modern Paris, too – he'd lived there. We wanted to use the band and the club to try and steer away from the picture postcard version of Paris and instead look at the messy, complicated modern city."

The resulting series, The Eddy, is not a musical, but rather a love letter to music. It's a show about musicians and the club they love, playing in the band and then going home to their own troubled lives. André Holland (The Knick) plays the club's owner Elliot, whose estranged daughter Julie (Amandla Stenberg, The Hate U Give) comes over from America, bringing problems of her own.

'We needed people who could play the songs on set so that we could do all the music live'

IN THE SWING
Chazelle on set with The Eddy stars Amandla Stenberg and André Holland

Much of Chazelle's work to date has been tied to music: from getting Ryan Gosling to play the piano in La La Land to filming Miles Teller drumming furiously until his hands bled in Whiplash. Even the soundtrack to First Man, Chazelle's 2018 Moon-landing epic and his first film since he won the best director Oscar for La La Land in 2017, is unusual, blending a woozy theremin and original Moog synthesizers with an Echoplex machine (a tape-delay device used in film scores such as Planet of the Apes).

For The Eddy, "We knew the whole thing would rise or fall based on capturing performance. The idea with jazz is that so much of it is improvised, what happens on stage one night is completely different from what will happen the next night, even if it's the same set of chords."

So to make the music scenes as real as possible it was obvious that they would need real musicians, "not actors faking being musicians. Basically, we needed people who could play the songs on set so that we would do all the music live. Then we could shoot it like a documentary."

The Eddy live band are thus characters in the story as well as performers on the soundtrack. They feature Randy Kerber on keys – he tutored Ryan Gosling for La La Land and has played on everything from Titanic to the Harry Potter films – and Joanna Kulig on vocals. Kulig starred in Cold War, which won Pawel Pawlikowski best director at Cannes in 2018, and was a trained singer before she turned to acting.

For Chazelle, though, The Eddy was a chance to get back to the streets. He's still only 35, yet his career has skyrocketed since Whiplash, granting him huge Hollywood budgets, taking him to the Oscars and then, with First Man, to the Moon.

"I've got to say that it was refreshing to come back to a more spontaneous style and a smaller crew. It was a kind of film-making I hadn't done since my very first movie, even before Whiplash [Guy and Madeline on a Park Bench, a black-and-white indie musical about – guess what? – a jazz trumpeter]. With this we would do things like sneak onto the Métro and shoot our actors from within crowds of people who didn't realise that they were being filmed. That meld of documentary and fiction was really fun and exciting."

And that, he says, was in keeping with the spirit of the story of The Eddy: "When you're in a band, sometimes you have to improvise. Sometimes those are the best bits." BENJI WILSON

JACK OF ALL TRADES

Jack Thorne (inset, right) is one of the UK's most in-demand scriptwriters and his name crops up on an eclectic mix of projects – he's won plaudits for TV series such as His Dark Materials, National Treasure and The Virtues, and West End play Harry Potter and the Cursed Child. But how did he come to write a drama set in a Paris jazz club?

"I do play the saxophone," he laughs. "Just not very well. And I happen to own ten per cent of a jazz club in Luton, but that's another story. The jazz genius is Damien Chazelle. The multiple Grammy winner is Glen Ballard. I did think I needed to up my game slightly, so the first thing I did was watch Ken Burns's documentary series Jazz."

Rather than for his musical chops, Thorne was offered The Eddy on the basis of his work on The Last Panthers, a 2015 Sky series set in France that looked at the underbelly of modern Europe. He was in Los Angeles not long afterwards when his agent said they wanted to send him a film by an exciting young director.

"That film was Whiplash. I sat in my hotel room watching it going, 'Oh my God...' It was one of the most astonishing films I'd ever seen."

'I play the sax – just not very well. Damien is the jazz genius'

But when Thorne met Chazelle and Alan Poul he wowed them with a pitch... about the Paris ring-road. "I'm fascinated by it. My dad was a town planner, so I'm interested in the way urban infrastructure influences the culture of a place."

Thorne placed the Eddy jazz club on the edge of that ring road, the Boulevard Périphérique, where one Paris – the City of Lights – meets the real Paris and the suburbs, or banlieues. "That boundary crystallises the inner Paris versus outer Paris – the included and the excluded."

Viewed this way, The Eddy fits perfectly on Thorne's CV – a piece of social commentary told through musicians and music. He particularly enjoyed writing for the non-acting musicians who ended up as key cast members.

"Having worked so extensively with Shane Meadows [on This Is England and The Virtues], I love working with non-actors who've got soul dripping out of them. These guys are brilliant."

But the main reason he took The Eddy was Damien Chazelle. "I watched Whiplash and I thought, 'I'd follow this guy into a fire.' If he said, 'I want to do the next Herbie film', I'd go, 'Great. I'll join you.'" BW

Britain expects

P Darkest Hour ★★★★
Saturday 7.30pm BBC1

WHATEVER YOU THINK of our current "wartime" leaders, strangers to action, badge-wearing box-tickers of buzz-phrases, all of them struggle to even genuflect before a caricature of Winston Churchill. Whatever your political persuasion – and Churchill was, essentially, a self-defining moderate centrist Conservative and a product of Empire who believed in coalition when it counted – what's impossible to dispute is that he has launched a thousand screen portrayals.

The most recent actor to don the prosthetic jowls and clamp his teeth around cigars as thick as a baby's arm was Gary Oldman in Joe Wright's Darkest Hour in 2017. Handicapped by his own lean face and given a run for his money by the closer build of Brian Cox in Jonathan Teplitzky's Churchill, released six months earlier, Oldman did, however, win the war. As if to neatly sum up the film's success, its two Oscars were for best actor and make-up.

NOW IN HIS early 60s, Oldman is only just growing into his own surname as his Winnie (who was then 65) rallies round the flag in 1940, when, a caption reminds us, the search is on for a replacement to PM Neville Chamberlain and "three million German troops are poised on the Belgian border". Lily James is the latest in a long line of actresses to play personal secretary to the barking, sometimes bath-bound Churchill, with Kristin Scott Thomas as his sensible wife Clemmie and Samuel West as Sir Anthony Eden. President Roosevelt, another leader to shame today's wonks, is heard on the telephone, but not seen (Working Title is reportedly saving him for a sequel). Dunkirk is re-enacted and Winston's "fight on the beaches" speech is delivered to a doomily united Parliament, without once using the phrase "ramped up".

Darkest Hour works as a briskly fanciful slice of history with a central performance around which everything and everybody else must orbit. Screenwriter Anthony McCarten is a master, like The Crown's Peter Morgan, of imagining dialogue, and if you can sit through the frankly preposterous fiction of Churchill's rogue trip on the London Underground for a diversity-friendly chat with the public, you'll consider it a victory.

RIP-ROARING CONCLUSION

★★★★★ From 4 May Sky Cinema Premiere, Disney+

Long ago, 43 years if you were lucky enough to live near one of the 30 American cinemas where it tentatively opened, Star Wars was released into a world without mobile phones, the internet or Tiger King. An overnight phenomenon whose merchandising mind-games became pan-generational, Star Wars was handed down like a favourite toy given new batteries every few years. The JJ Abrams-corralled showdown of the nine-film opus, The Rise of Skywalker, has now arrived on Sky and Disney+ to mixed reviews but vital nonetheless for those who've been there since the disco era. Tying up the battle royale between, well, good and evil, involving C-3PO's memory, another paternity suit, redemption, revenge and Ed Sheeran in a Stormtrooper costume, the force will out-market us all. AC

Monkey Kingdom ★★★
10.10-11.30am BBC2 PG

DOCUMENTARY Featuring a stunning score and enthusiastic narration from Tina Fey, this Disney production offers a gentle, family-friendly look at the natural world. It charts the efforts of toque macaque monkey Maya to provide for her infant son, Kip. Maya's journey is heavily edited to give it some narrative heft, but that humanises the story, while big subjects such as death are handled with a gentle touch. It may not be on a par with some of the greats of the documentary genre, but Monkey Kingdom acts as a fun introduction for youngsters not quite ready for David Attenborough. JL (US 2015, HD)

Practical Magic ★★
1.00-3.10pm C5 12

BLACK COMEDY Nicole Kidman and Sandra Bullock star in this uneven adaptation of Alice Hoffman's novel, playing sisters who are descended from witches. Kidman is the wilder sibling, while Bullock is the home-loving store owner who falls for detective Aidan Quinn. There are nice supporting performances from Stockard Channing and Dianne Wiest as the sisters' equally witchy aunts, but director Griffin Dunne ultimately fails to make either a moving comedy romance or a funny romantic comedy. Think The Witches of Eastwick but without the sizzle. JB (US 1998, edited for violence, language, HD)

The Battle of the River Plate ★★★
2.00-3.55pm BBC2 U

WAR DRAMA This true-life Second World War movie hardly rates alongside A Matter of Life and Death and The Red Shoes on the CV of writing/producing/directing duo Michael Powell and Emeric Pressburger, but it is a tale well told and features some impressive location work – not least at sea in the Mediterranean. Peter Finch plays a noble German officer (no mean feat in a British war film, even in the 1950s), captain of pocket battleship Graf Spee, the pursuit of which forms the basis of the action. Despite a surfeit of naval detail and some rather obvious shipboard sets, the climax in Montevideo makes it worthwhile viewing. AC (UK 1956)

Bruce Almighty ★★★
5.00-6.50pm C5 12

COMEDY Jim Carrey stars here as wacky TV news reporter Bruce Nolan, who is passed over for promotion, vents his anger live on air, is sacked and curses God for doing a lousy job. Rising to the bait, the Almighty (Morgan Freeman) gives Bruce the chance to see if he can do any better. Bruce is none too bothered with world peace or any of that stuff; he does what you might expect a Carrey character to do when given divine powers – enlarge girlfriend Jennifer Aniston's boobs, perform a Red Sea-style parting of his tomato soup and pull the Moon out of its usual orbit to create a romantic moment.

FILM OF THE DAY

P Chappaquiddick ★★★
10.45pm-12.25am BBC2 12

DRAMA In this intelligently constructed drama, Senator Ted Kennedy recalls his father telling him, "Tragedy has a way of defining people." This was true for his golden-boy brothers, President John and Attorney General Robert, both of whom were assassinated. But this film from The Painted Veil director John Curran (also known as The Senator in the UK) puts a fallible Ted centre stage. It maps the pivotal night in 1969 when the inveterate playboy (played with due bulk and over-entitlement by Jason Clarke) drove a car off a bridge, killing companion Mary Jo Kopechne (Kate Mara). The attempted cover-up, or "containment", by an over-privileged political class takes us to a messy denouement after a botched attempt at using the Moon landing as a diversionary tactic. Bruce Dern brings ballast as paralysed Kennedy patriarch Joe, while comic actors Jim Gaffigan and The Hangover's Ed Helms do their most dastardly as Ted's advisers. (Swe/US 2017, swearing, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?
In an odd coincidence, Australian actor Jason Clarke was born on 17 July 1969 – just one day before the Chappaquiddick incident

The script wastes no time on deep theological questions; it's a return to Carrey the clown after public indifference to Carrey the actor in the likes of The Majestic. It has a neat premise and plenty of laughs, but it's not a film to stay long in the memory. BP (US 2003, edited for language, sexual content, HD)

The Devil Wears Prada ★★★
6.50-9.00pm Sony Movies PG

COMEDY Meryl Streep is the boss from hell in this glossy but shallow fashion industry satire, based on ex-US Vogue staffer Lauren Weisberger's bestselling memoir. Streep steals every scene as Miranda Priestly, the editor of New York style magazine Runway, who routinely destroys egos and careers with just one softly spoken put-down or withering glance. By contrast, Anne Hathaway's turn as Priestly's put-upon personal assistant feels like a crudely drawn, sitcom cliché. Although it has a similar exuberance to director David Frankel's earlier TV project Sex and the City, the film lacks bite, skimming over key emotional issues and making a morally triumphant conclusion feel like a cop-out. SF (US 2006, edited for language)

P Den of Thieves ★★★
9.00-11.45pm C4 15

THRILLER In Los Angeles, the bank-robbery capital of the world, thieves plan a daring heist while a maverick detective and his crew ("the Regulators") keep them under surveillance. It's a familiar tale, not least for fans of Michael Mann's much-admired Heat, and if Gerard Butler's bad-ass cop and Pablo Schreiber's ex-special forces crook don't quite carry the gravitas of Pacino and De Niro, they both contribute strongly to a worthwhile, if not startlingly original, genre offering. If you fancy a solid, watchable, old-fashioned crime picture, then director Christian Gudegast's feature debut gets the job done. TJ (US 2018, violence, swearing)

Gangster Squad ★★★★
10.30pm-12.25am ITV 15

CRIME DRAMA Subtlety flies out of the window in this action-heavy tale of cops and gangsters, in which Ryan Gosling and Josh Brolin play LA lawmen who take a stand against Sean Penn's Mob kingpin. Director Ruben Fleischer (Zombieland, Venom) takes a gung-ho approach to this adaptation of Paul Lieberman's book, but makes the most of his talent for blending flamboyantly staged violence with dark humour, and splashes the budget on a glossy re-creation of 1940s LA. Emma Stone also makes an impression as Penn's moll, in the second of her screen team-ups with Gosling. SP (US 2012, violence, swearing, HD)

Mississippi Grind ★★★★
11.45pm-1.30am BBC1 15

DRAMA A brace of fine turns from Ben Mendelsohn and Ryan Reynolds are at the heart of this bittersweet buddy movie. Mendelsohn plays a desperate gambling addict in hock to the local loan shark (Alfre Woodard), and together with Reynolds's free-spirited stranger embarks on a make-or-break trip to New Orleans. Mendelsohn skilfully sketches a complex character who can fascinate and frustrate at the same time, but it's Reynolds who impresses the most as a man whose apparent happy-go-lucky spirit disguises his own sadness. AS (US 2015, swearing, HD)

The Lunchbox ★★★★
12.25-2.05am BBC2 PG

ROMANTIC DRAMA Indian actor Irrfan Khan sadly passed away last month, aged 53. As well as appearing in the likes of Slumdog Millionaire and Life of Pi, he starred in this warm and witty film from writer/director Ritesh Batra. Set in Mumbai, it sees Khan play a grumpy accountant who enters into a relationship by letter with an unhappy housewife (Nimrat Kaur) after her husband's lunch mistakenly finds its way to him. As the pair share their secrets, hopes and fears, Batra artfully delivers his film's message: that variety is the spice of life. DP (Ind/Fr/Ger/US 2013, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

American Graffiti ★★★★★

9.00-11.20pm Sony Movies Classic PG

COMEDY DRAMA I came of age loving films and TV shows set in small-town America – themselves often about coming of age – Animal House, Happy Days, Grease. Little did this provincial ingénue know that these films were generally set in the past; to my mind, they were entirely contemporary. For film student and future Star Wars architect George Lucas of Modesto, California, this movie was personal, the sealing of his youth in cinematic amber. Set over one night in 1962 and built around the experiences of writers Willard Huyck, Gloria Katz and director Lucas himself, it traces the footsteps and tyre prints of a group of friends, cruising town, frequenting drive-ins and experiencing cute trysts, while college-bound Richard Dreyfuss tracks a chimeric blonde via local DJ Wolfman Jack ("as himself"). Brando-esque John (Paul Le Mat), going nowhere, ends up in a drag race against Harrison Ford's likely lad. The "where are they now?" ending remains desperately poignant. (US 1973, swearing)

King Kong ★★★★

12.25-4.00pm C5 12

ADVENTURE Director Peter Jackson's sensational remake of the 1933 classic honours the original with re-creations of exact sequences, embellished to recapture its thrilling escapism for modern audiences. The story sees Jack Black's maverick film-maker save dancer Naomi Watts from the Depression breadline to star in an adventure to be shot on mysterious Skull Island. But there she is kidnapped by natives who offer her to their living god, Kong. The relationship that develops between Watts and her jungle protector is touchingly conveyed and goes on to pay emotional dividends when Kong escapes after being shipped back to Manhattan. AJ (NZ/US 2005, edited for violence, language, col/BW, HD)

WAR THRILLER Scientist Kirk Douglas and resistance fighter Richard Harris have to overcome their hatred of each other, as well as the Germans, to sabotage an atomic bomb project in this brawny war story set in Norway in 1942. Director Anthony Mann avoids getting bogged down with technical information and sustains a nail-biting tension throughout the daredevil mission. The night sequences are particularly striking, although Robert Krasker's photography throughout will have you positively pining for the fjords. Preceded by a Talking Pictures special on war movies. DP (UK 1965, HD)

Lemony Snicket's A Series of Unfortunate Events ★★★

7.00-9.00pm E4 PG

COMEDY ADVENTURE This visually inspired movie combines the first three titles in the bestselling quirky children's series, and it unfolds like a Grimm fairy tale as imagined by Tim Burton. In one of his wildly over-the-top performances, Jim Carrey plays master of disguise Count Olaf, who's on a murderous mission to swindle three orphaned siblings out of their fortune. Although Carrey comes across as more silly than sinister, the children demonstrate real talent and charm, with the toddler twins playing the youngest offspring a particular delight. SF (US/Ger 2004, HD)

Sherlock Holmes ★★★★

8.00-10.40pm ITV2 12

MYSTERY Director Guy Ritchie approaches his take on Baker Street's finest in the action-packed manner of Lethal Weapon. Though this may rankle with fans of the original Conan Doyle stories, Robert Downey Jr at least brings his undisputed charisma to bear in his portrayal of the legendary detective. As Watson, Jude Law holds his own in the pair's verbal sparring matches, and the two leads share a mischievous chemistry. Mark Strong impresses, too, as Lord Blackwood, a killer reputed to be in league with the Devil. The views of Victorian London are just as seductive as Downey Jr, who exudes an aura of troubled genius – though there's rarely a moment for him to think between all the fights and explosions. SP (Ger/US/Aus 2009, violence, HD)

Hidden Figures ★★★★

9.00-11.35pm Film4 PG

DRAMA Three unsung heroes of the 1960s Space Race are given their moment in the sun in this true story. It's particularly inspiring, as these mathematicians and engineers were African-American women who had to jump through hoops at Nasa when racial segregation was still a fact of life. Director Theodore Melfi honours the can-do spirit of the ladies (played by Taraji P Henson, Janelle Monáe and Oscar-nominated Octavia Spencer), while conveying the often absurd realities of their situation. The portrayal of their white colleagues (Kevin Costner among them) is a little too pat, but, overall, this presses all the right buttons for a blast of enlightening, upbeat entertainment. SP (US 2016, col/BW, HD)

John Wick ★★★★

9.00-11.05pm 5 Star 15

THRILLER In this lean, propulsive, action-packed revenge tale, Keanu Reeves is reliably stoic as a formidable former hitman who is compelled to return to his old ways when a trio of Russian lowlifes break into his house and kill his adorable puppy. The body count escalates as the film moves from one bruising set piece to another, each of which is impressively choreographed and captured with a refreshing sense of clarity. There isn't much in the way of depth or complexity to the plot, but the constant violence is offset by some well-timed humour, which adds to the overall entertainment value. SC (US 2014, violence, swearing, HD)

Dirty Dancing ★★★★

10.00pm-12 midnight C5 12

ROMANTIC DRAMA This feel-good dance movie works a curious, charismatic magic. It was intended as a low-budget filler, a tale of sexual awakening at a Jewish holiday resort in 1963, but it became a huge hit, kick-starting major industry careers for its production team, and catapulting the then-unknown Patrick Swayze to stardom. The casting is perfect, with Swayze playing a sexy bad boy dancing coach and Jennifer Grey a feisty middle-class teenager, and their relationship never strikes a false note. But what really makes the film unmissable is the fabulous dancing – despite being highly erotic, it's never tacky. SH (US 1987, swearing, sex scenes, HD)

The Thomas Crown Affair ★★★

10.30pm-12.15am BBC1 15

CRIME Pierce Brosnan stars here as the millionaire who steals art in his spare time, with Rene Russo as the sultry insurance investigator on his tail. This loose remake of the 1968 Steve McQueen/Faye Dunaway movie is considerably steamier than the original, yet it's very stylishly handled by Die Hard director John McTiernan. Brosnan and Russo are a sexy and believable match, while Denis Leary and Dunaway herself offer fine support. Add to that a taut script, and this cat-and-mouse thriller is well worth catching. JB (US/Ire 1999, swearing, a sex scene, nudity, HD)

The Monuments Men ★★

10.55pm-1.05am C4 12

WARTIME DRAMA This affectionate caper movie has a remarkable fact-based premise: a 1945 Allied "treasure hunt" for millions of paintings and sculptures stolen by the Nazis. But despite the efforts of a terrific cast (George Clooney, John Goodman, Bill Murray), its dry fidelity to the story neutralises the chance of any rip-roaring entertainment. A token romantic subplot between Matt Damon and Cate Blanchett fizzles out, and the film plods from leadenly comic vignette to jarringly serious interlude without ever cohering into a satisfying whole. AC (US 2013, violence, swearing, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

The Enforcer ★★★★

10.00-11.50pm Talking Pictures TV PG

CRIME DRAMA Also known as Murder, Inc (named after the notorious organised crime syndicate), this 1951 knuckle sandwich begins with a tolling church bell and ends in an electric chair. Humphrey Bogart plays the assistant district attorney hellbent on plugging Everett Sloane's kingpin into the mains. Co-directed by French Broadway veteran Bretaigne Windust (credited) and Raoul Walsh (uncredited, as a favour), The Enforcer makes revealing use of flashbacks, one involving Zero Mostel's family man and killer. The grisly notion of killing for money runs throughout this very male film, which packs a lot of procedural into its running time. (US 1951, violence, BW)

DID YOU KNOW? This was Bogart's final film for Warner Bros, capping an iconic run – he would finally win an Oscar the following year for The African Queen

It Came From Beneath the Sea

★★★ 1.00-2.35pm Horror Channel U

SCI-FI Atomic testing spawns a giant octopus in this cult monster flick, which features stop-motion effects from the great Ray Harryhausen. As the "killer creature" rampages through San Francisco to destroy the Golden Gate Bridge, B-movie star Kenneth Tobey still finds time to battle biologist Donald Curtis for vampy Faith Domergue's charms. It's predictable tosh, but good low-budget 1950s fun. AJ (US 1955, BW)

The Importance of Being Earnest

★★★ 3.00-4.30pm BBC2 U

COMEDY DRAMA This adaptation of Oscar Wilde's famously witty play benefits from superb performances by Rupert Everett as Algernon (the cad, naturally), Judi Dench as Lady Bracknell and Colin Firth as Jack, who pretends to have a younger brother named "Ernest", so he can escape his stuffy country home for wilder times in London. Beautifully filmed by Oliver Parker (who also adapted Wilde's An Ideal Husband and Dorian Gray for the screen), the quality only dips in the casting of Reese Witherspoon and Frances O'Connor, who both look and sound far too contemporary as Jack's young ward, Cecily, and his intended, Gwendolen. JB (UK/US 2002, HD)

The Pink Panther ★★

7.05-9.00pm Sony Movies PG

COMEDY You've got to admire Steve Martin's courage. Having already tried to fill Phil Silvers's boots in Sgt Bilko, he now tackles the equally iconic Inspector Clouseau, a character immortalised by Peter Sellers. Martin does his best and certainly works hard, but this slapstick quasi-French farce just isn't that funny. Kevin Kline should have been a riot as Clouseau's long-suffering superior, Chief Inspector Dreyfus, but his subtle comic skills are wasted on a poor script that trades on obvious humour. Fans of the 1963 original would do well to avoid it, but younger viewers may well find this vague retread mildly amusing. The sequel is showing tomorrow. DA (US 2006, violence, swearing)

The Normal Heart ★★★★

10.10pm-12.40am Sky Atlantic

DRAMA Mark Ruffalo gives a heart-rending performance here as a gay rights activist attempting to raise awareness of the HIV/AIDS crisis in the early 1980s. The film is based on a play by Larry Kramer, and director Ryan Murphy (American Horror Story, Glee) occasionally struggles to make it work on the screen – but his passion for the project is evident, and he vividly and emotionally captures a key moment in history. An all-star ensemble cast (including Julia Roberts, Jim Parsons and Taylor Kitsch) also makes a powerful impression. JL (US TVM 2014, HD)

The Expendables 3 ★★★

11.05pm-1.20am C5 12

ACTION Sylvester Stallone retires his ageing crew of mercenaries in favour of youthful hotshots in this entry of the macho franchise. But when the new kids are captured, it's "the grey team" (including Dolph Lundgren, Jason Statham, Arnold Schwarzenegger and Jet Li) who come to the rescue. There's the usual winning mix of wisecracking banter and explosive combat action, but also more than a few dull stretches of soldier-of-fortune soul-searching. Fortunately, some solid new additions invigorate the old fogey fight club, with Antonio Banderas making the biggest splash. AJ (US 2014, violence, swearing, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

The Belles of St Trinian's

★★★ 3.00-4.30pm BBC2 U

COMEDY Today, it seems more cosy than chaotic, but back in 1954 nothing had been seen to compare with this anarchic adaptation of Ronald Searle's cartoons, which turned the traditional idea of female gentility on its head. Alastair Sim's Miss Fritton and George Cole's Flash Harry became icons of British comic lore, but the real star of the film is Joyce Grenfell as the delightfully dippy Sergeant Gates. There's more St Trinian's matinée mayhem tomorrow and Thursday. David Parkinson (UK 1954, BW)

The Missouri Breaks ★★★★

11.10pm-1.45am ITV4 15

WESTERN This film has a shambles of a plot but is still exciting stuff because of the ego battle between Marlon Brando and Jack Nicholson. Brando plays a hired bounty hunter pitting his wits against horse-thief Nicholson, and both actors twitch their way through an upstaging duel as mesmerising as it is brazenly arrogant. This clash of the titans plays out against director Arthur Penn's fresh, uncluttered vision of pioneer days, where you can almost smell the raw wood of log cabins. TH (US 1976, violence, swearing, HD)

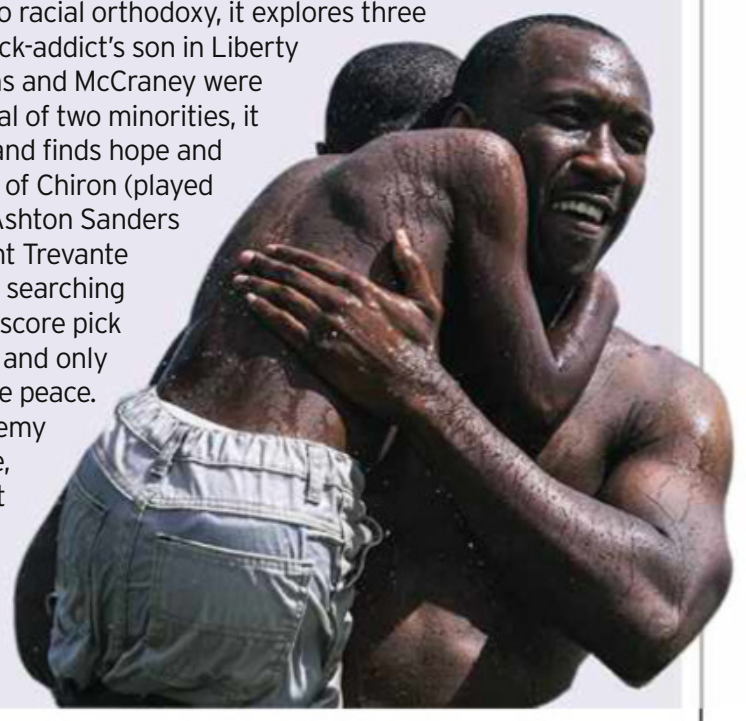
DID YOU KNOW? Adjusted for inflation, Moonlight has the lowest budget (only $1.5 million) of any best picture winner at the Oscars

ANDREW COLLINS

FILM OF THE DAY

Moonlight ★★★★★ 9.00-11.10pm Film4 15

DRAMA Barry Jenkins was little known when he adapted the future Oscar magnet Moonlight with playwright Tarell Alvin McCraney. In a challenge to racial orthodoxy, it explores three acts in the life of a gay crack-addict's son in Liberty City, Florida (where Jenkins and McCraney were raised). An honest portrayal of two minorities, it sidesteps "poverty porn" and finds hope and progress in the three ages of Chiron (played by Alex Hibbert as a boy, Ashton Sanders as a teen and a magnificent Trevante Rhodes in adulthood). The searching violins in Nicholas Britell's score pick at society's contradictions and only in the end credits allow true peace. Nominated for eight Academy Awards, the film won three, including best picture, best adapted screenplay and best supporting actor for Mahershala Ali. (US 2016, swearing, sex scenes, drug abuse, HD)



Hello Down There ★★

1.10-3.10pm Talking Pictures TV U

COMEDY New to Talking Pictures TV this week, this movie comes across as a sort of underwater Swiss Family Robinson, with Tony Randall as the designer of a submersible house who tests it out on his wife and children. The plethora of generation-gap jokes soon grates on the nerves, as do the bratty adolescent cast members (including a young Richard Dreyfuss). But there's no denying an ingenious premise that should dazzle youngsters. RS (US 1969)

Blue Murder at St Trinian's ★★★

3.00-4.30pm BBC2 U

COMEDY While enjoyable, the second of Frank Launder and Sidney Gilliat's adaptations of Ronald Searle's popular cartoons is a bit of a disappointment. The main problem is that there's only a fleeting glimpse of Alastair Sim as Miss Fritton, although the story about a tour of Europe and some stolen gems is also somewhat under par. The flirting between coach company owner Terry-Thomas and undercover cop Joyce Grenfell is a delight, but too many gags fall flat. DP (UK 1957, BW)

The Danish Girl ★★★★

9.00-11.20pm Sky Atlantic 15

BIOPIC The story of how Danish painter Einar Wegener became a woman named Lili Elbe is the focus of this emotionally powerful movie from Tom Hooper (Les Misérables). Eddie Redmayne gets top billing as Wegener, but the story is more focused on his artist wife, Gerda, played by Alicia Vikander. It begins in 1920s Copenhagen, with Gerda asking her husband to pose in women's stockings to enable her to finish a portrait. Wegener begins to experiment with cross-dressing, creating a female alter ego – but how far is he prepared to go? The facts might be moot, but Vikander is sensational in that rarest of things: a love story about a woman who finds her inner strength while letting go. DW (US 2015, sex scenes, HD)

Dad's Army ★★★

9.00-10.55pm Sony Movies Classic U

COMEDY With 77 episodes during its nine-year run, Dad's Army remains one of the best loved of all British comedy series. As with so many other TV spin-offs, the producers couldn't resist tinkering with the winning formula, and here we are treated to a Nazi invasion of Walmington-on-Sea that is somewhat at odds with the cosy incompetence that made the series so irresistible. Nevertheless, this is still great fun and it's a pleasure to see such gifted character actors as Arthur Lowe and John Le Mesurier at work. DP (UK 1971)

The Man Who Fell to Earth
★★★★ 10.00pm-12.45am
Talking Pictures TV 18

SCI-FI DRAMA This enigmatic and chilling mosaic of corporate satire and sci-fi from Don't Look Now director Nicolas Roeg presented David Bowie with his first major acting role. He stars as the Swiftian starman who becomes fabulously wealthy from his intergalactic inventions, but soon gets corrupted by his vices. An established cult classic, the movie has always divided the critics, but whatever you think, it remains a fascinating new-age fairy tale. Alan Jones

The Pure Hell of St Trinian's ★★
3.00-4.30pm BBC2 U

COMEDY Bereft of Alastair Sim, this third film in the St Trinian's series has its moments, but, sadly, all too few of them. With the school reduced to smouldering ashes, mysterious child psychologist Cecil Parker takes charge of the tearaways, in league with white-slaving sea captain Sid James. Woefully short on mayhem, the film spends too much time in the company of eventual castaways Parker and Joyce Grenfell. DP

RoboCop ★★★★★
9.00-10.50pm ITV4 18

SCI-FI Hi-tech meets High Noon in this deft masterpiece from director Paul Verhoeven, which delivers on both violent action and satirical fronts. Peter Weller stars as the Detroit cop of the near future who is gunned down and resurrected as a cyborg. As his human memory begins to return, he sets about hunting down the gang responsible for his plight. With its scabrous dissection of American social issues, sitcom culture and corporate greed, Verhoeven's comic-book opus emerges as a subversive and thought-provoking edge-of-the-seat treat. AJ (US 1987, violence, swearing, drug abuse, brief nudity, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

P Pawn Sacrifice ★★★ 11.20pm-1.05am BBC2 12

BIOPIC In 2013, Steven Knight's TV passion project Peaky Blinders was picked up by BBC2. Not a chap to take success for granted, he did what writers do when the ducks line up: he said yes to everything. Three of his projects reached the big screen in 2014: The Hundred-Foot Journey, Seventh Son and Pawn Sacrifice, and the best was the least promising. Pawn Sacrifice concerns the game of chess; specifically the 1972 world championship match between paranoid American prodigy Bobby Fischer (Tobey Maguire) and Russian grandmaster Boris Spassky (Liev Schreiber). It's also about the tension of becoming a champion and a cash cow during the Cold War. The tantrum-prone "rock star" of chess, Fischer was an up-himself jerk, but the fortuitously named Knight gets us inside his mind. As the tension ratchets up, becoming a pawn proves as dangerous as moving one about a chequered board. (US 2014, swearing, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?
Fischer played in his first tournament at the age of ten; with an IQ of 180 and an amazing memory, it feels that he was born to play chess

Brief Encounter ★★★★★
3.00-4.30pm BBC2 PG

ROMANCE Co-adapted by Noël Coward from his own one-act play Still Life, this is one of the finest films ever made in Britain. What makes the illicit love between doctor Trevor Howard and housewife Celia Johnson so memorable is their sheer ordinariness – they really could be anybody sitting in the dark of the cinema or in the comfort of their armchair. Romancing to the strains of Rachmaninov's Second Piano Concerto, the leads are outstanding, but credit should also go to Cyril Raymond, whose decent dullness as Johnson's husband makes those stolen Thursdays seem so special. DP (UK 1945, BW)

Dark Shadows ★★★
7.00-9.00pm Sony Movies 12

HORROR COMEDY Director Tim Burton layers on the quirkiness in this gothic romantic farce based on the 1960s supernatural soap opera. In his eighth collaboration with Burton, Johnny Depp plays vampire Barnabas Collins, who returns to his Maine stately pile in 1972 after two centuries of love-struck, witch-enforced hibernation and sets about restoring his family's fortunes. The actors certainly throw themselves into the nonsense, Burton's style is a visual treat, and the parade of cultural references – from the Carpenters to lava lamps – also provides amusement. AJ
(US 2012, violence, drug abuse, some swearing)

The Martian ★★★★
9.00-11.45pm Film4 12

SCI-FI Life on Mars requires ingenuity and a keen sense of humour if Ridley Scott's film is anything to go by. An Oscar-nominated Matt Damon plays astronaut Mark Watney, who is left for dead on the Red Planet after a manned mission is hurriedly abandoned during a ferocious storm. Despite his awful predicament, Watney proves to be good company, addressing the audience in video diaries that draw us deeper into his world. The use of "real science" to work through each life-threatening situation adds a fascinating dimension to the story, before the narrative takes a more familiar course as it switches focus to Nasa's rescue mission. SP
(US 2015, swearing, HD)

Taken ★★★★ 9.00-10.50pm E4 18

ACTION Liam Neeson energised his career when he turned middle-aged hero in this gritty thriller from director Pierre Morel. Ex-covert operative Neeson's brow is creased with furious intent as he runs, kicks, shoots and punches a bloody swathe through Paris in a race against time to find his kidnapped daughter (Maggie Grace). It soon becomes apparent that she's the victim of a sex-trafficking operation, but any attempt to engage with this serious issue is drowned out by the crash, bang, wallop of bad guys (invariably swarthy immigrants) being dispatched. The punishment Neeson inflicts is almost palpable, but to his credit it's never at the expense of conveying his own sense of pain. SP (Fr 2007, violence, swearing, HD)

A Cry in the Dark ★★★★
10.00pm-12.35am 5 Select 15

BIOPIC This is an absolutely riveting and at times harrowing dramatisation of the bizarre real-life story of Lindy Chamberlain, who claimed her baby was killed by a dingo at Ayers Rock in 1980. Meryl Streep's performance as Lindy is one of her best, a portrait of a tough, humourless woman who eventually earns our sympathy and pity. Sam Neill, as her morose preacher husband, is equally impressive. The material could have made for a dreadfully insincere TV movie, but Fred Schepisi's direction is clear-headed and unsensational. AT (US/Aus 1988, swearing, brief nudity)

Election ★★★★
11.15pm-12.55am BBC1 15

COMEDY Director/co-writer Alexander Payne's movie is near the top of the league table for high-school movies. Matthew Broderick (yes, Ferris Bueller) is inspired casting as the devoted teacher trying to prevent overachiever Reese Witherspoon from becoming student president. Pitted against jock Chris Klein and his lesbian sister (Jessica Campbell), Witherspoon's blend of corruption and compassion slyly satirises contemporary American politics. It's astute, offbeat and uproarious. DP

KIDS IN LOCKDOWN SPECIAL

GANG SHOW David Walliams is a sadistic headmaster in 2018's The Midnight Gang

FUN FOR EVERYONE

The David Walliams Collection

Available now on iPlayer

Walliams's world

His stories aren't just for Christmas, says Jack Seale

Dramatisations of David Walliams books have been a staple of Christmas TV for most of the past decade, but they're not Christmas stories: they're treats for kids at any time, and iPlayer has half a dozen.

The fun began in 2012 when an A-list cast brought Mr Stink to life: Sheridan Smith and Johnny Vegas were the unreliable parents of a girl (Nell Tiger Free) who invites a homeless man, played by Hugh Bonneville, to live in their shed. Then came Gangsta Granny, starring Julia McKenzie as the ageing jewel thief who dreams of nabbing the crown jewels.

Now established as a festive staple, the Walliams oeuvre returned in 2014 with what was actually his debut book, The Boy in the Dress. A daring but heartfelt tale about Dennis (Billy Kennedy), a budding footballer who likes to wear what are supposedly girls' clothes, co-starred Jennifer Saunders and James Buckley and was a charming hymn to outsiders. New Year's Day 2016 then saw the broadcast of Billionaire Boy, featuring a fine comic turn from John Thomson as a toilet-paper tycoon whose fortune doesn't make his son (Elliot Sprakes) happy.

Two years later Tom Courtenay, no less, starred in Grandpa's Great Escape and then, for Christmas 2018, The Midnight Gang told the story of Tom (Oliver Zetterstrom), a children's ward patient who has nocturnal adventures in the hospital corridors. The antagonist there was Walliams himself as a sadistic headmaster; the author's appeared in all the TV dramatisations of his books, as everything from a dad to a dinner lady.

We're a long way from Christmas, but a lot of households are looking for something the whole family can settle down in front of right now – here's the answer.

BACK TO SCHOOL

Malory Towers

Available now

One of the BBC's earliest responses to schools shutting down was at the start of April, when it brought forward the box-set release of this new version of Enid Blyton's spiffing boarding-school classic. We follow 12-year-old Darrell (Ella Bright) as she leaves home to attend Malory Towers, a place where she hopes to find friends and definitely will find dramas big and small, including the possible reveal of her secret past and whether the school has a resident ghost.

A JACQUELINE WILSON HIT

Hetty Feather

Available now

BBC iPlayer has all six series of this fine period drama, starring Isabel Clifton and Dasharn Anderson as two foster siblings who live in London's intimidating Foundling Hospital. Set in Victorian times and based on the book by Jacqueline Wilson, it's an emotionally epic tale – who is Hetty's real mother, and will she ever find her? – that hasn't shied away from the story's trauma and heartbreak. It came to a sad conclusion last month.

BRITBOX

STAND BY FOR ACTION!

BritBox, the relatively new streaming service that focuses on shows originally broadcast by the BBC, ITV and C4, is unashamedly backward-looking: yes, it has programmes that aired in the past few months, but its gems are much older. Up to now, the nostalgia trip hasn't encompassed the shows its core audience enjoyed when they were kids, decades ago – but that's changed with the arrival of a fistful of classics.

The headliners are Gerry and Sylvia Anderson, who created one of British TV's most beloved children's series when they unveiled Thunderbirds in 1965. Following the adventures of International Rescue in their thrillingly hi-tech aircraft, it marked the moment when the Andersons perfected their "Supermarionation" technique – that is, marionette puppets with virtually invisible strings and electrically powered eyes and lips. From 7 May, BritBox has ten of the best episodes, along with the 2008 documentary All about Thunderbirds.

You can also revisit the pilot episodes of the Andersons' 1964 breakthrough Stingray; 1967's Captain Scarlet and the Mysterons, depicting a war between Earth and Mars; and 1968's Joe 90, whose tales of a child superspy had even more sophisticated models. JACK SEALE

FRONT-PAGERS

Press Gang Available from 7 May

Long before Sherlock or Doctor Who, Steven Moffat made his TV writing debut with this teen comedy drama, first shown on ITV in 1989. It's as good, maybe better, than anything he's done since. Rarely have fictional teenagers been allowed to be fledgeling adults, with serious concerns and opinions, to this extent without recourse to magic or fantasy: instead we have a local newspaper run by schoolpupils, led by headstrong high-achiever Lynda (Julia Sawalha). BritBox has the knottily plotted, coolly sardonic first series.

WARD STORIES

Children's Ward

Available from 7 May

BritBox has series one of a drama that was excellent in its own right on ITV for many years (starting in 1989), while serving as a breeding ground for major TV talent. In that first year the future stars were chiefly the creators, Paul Abbott and Kay Mellor. As important as the daily experiences of the patients are the problems that land the kids in hospital in the first place: abuse, serious illness, addiction and teen pregnancy among them.

EVERY DOG HAS HIS DAY

Woof!

Available from 7 May

"There was once a boy who turned into a dog – something that doesn't happen every day..." Once again we are heading back to 1989 – evidently a strong year for kids' shows on ITV – and the first episode of a comedy drama based on the Allan Ahlberg book. The appropriately named Edward Fidoe is Eric, a Birmingham schoolboy who persistently turns into a dog, which is the cue for a lot of cheeky adventures and cute filming.

We're not talking here about the 1986 TV movie, or indeed the recent BBC show, four series of which are still on iPlayer. This is the first series of ITV's 1998 version of the Jill Murphy books, with Georgina Sherrington (right) as clumsy trainee Mildred Hubble, future Theory of Everything/Rogue One star Felicity Jones as Mildred's snobby nemesis Ethel, and Una Stubbs as Miss Bat.

HOMESICK TOON-AGERS

The Hollow Season 2 available from 8 May

Netflix has a good roster of smart cartoons for pre-teens: Carmen Sandiego, Trollhunters, 3Below, The Dragon Prince and The Last Kids on Earth are all worth a look. This series starts with three sarky schoolkids who don't know each other, but who all wake up in a strange realm with no idea how they got there and no plan to get home. As the new, second series begins, they think they've escaped, but there are fresh tests on the way. It's spiky and imaginative.

PAST LAUGHS

Horrible Histories

Available now

You can't, of course, replace an entire day of homeschooling with television. That would be grossly irresponsible. But if you could, there'd be much worse options than the early, glory years of CBBC's history show, featuring the comedy troupe that went on to make Yonderland and Ghosts. Better written and performed than most adult sketch shows, it's worth it just for the fantastic parody songs – particularly in series five.

HARD TO BLEAT

Shaun the Sheep: Adventures from Mossy Bottom

Available now

Four years after its last new episodes aired on CBBC, one of Aardman Animations' most charming stop-motion creations was reborn on Netflix in March with an exciting, longer title and a clutch of new characters. At its core it's the same show, though, with its visual gags appealing to tots, older kids and – largely thanks to sly pop-cultural nods – parents, too. Netflix also has most of the old BBC Shauns. JS

Kung Fu Panda: the Paws of Destiny Available now

The spin-offs from the Kung Fu Panda movie franchise are myriad: Netflix has the short films, while Amazon has the Legends... TV series as well as this, its own creation. The newest KFP title, Paws of Destiny takes place after the story told in Kung Fu Panda 3. Po the Panda embarks on a new adventure when four panda kids acquire – from a magic cave – the skills and powers of ancient kung fu warriors. Can Po keep them all in line as they try to save the world together?

WE'RE OFF TO SEE THE WIZARD

Lost in Oz

Available now

That's Oz as in The Wizard of Oz, although this animated series puts the original L Frank Baum characters in a new, more modern setting. A girl called Dorothy, and her dog Toto, are whisked away to Oz after making a strange discovery at home in Kansas; before long they're on a quest with a streetwise young witch called West and a large munchkin called Ojo. Older viewers who love the 1939 classic movie will enjoy finding out how this new take relates to it.

WATCH AND LEARN

Tumble Leaf

Available now

There's no shortage of shows for pre-school tots, where the basic idea is "animal friends in a whimsical land learn stuff on their adventures" – but maybe this stop-motion animation, which has Emmies and a Bafta on its awards shelf, will be the one your child takes to. Curious blue fox Fig and his caterpillar pal Stick stumble happily upon basic science facts, as well as lessons on friendship, in a cartoon that promotes education via play. Amazon has made four series. JS

HOW TO STREAM TV

NETFLIX (netflix.com)

Price £8.99/month (for HD)
Why subscribe Netflix has remained on top by expanding into every possible genre, from food shows to The Crown.
How to get it These days, it's hard to find a gadget that won't load Netflix – just open the main menu of a streaming device. Many modern televisions even have a Netflix button on their remote.

AMAZON PRIME VIDEO (amazon.co.uk/video)

Price £7.99/month (included with Amazon Prime next-day delivery)
Why subscribe Amazon has original content like The Grand Tour, but it's also a "sweetener" to convince you to subscribe to their Amazon Prime membership.
How to get it The best way of watching Prime is on Amazon's own gadget. The Fire TV Stick (£29.99 with Prime Membership) is a dongle that plugs into your television's HDMI port.

DISNEY+ (disneyplus.com)

Price £5.99/month
Why subscribe Disney+ features everyone from Snow White to Homer Simpson. Moreover, it's the only place to catch new TV series from Marvel and Star Wars.
How to get it Disney+ is available on almost every smart TV and streaming gadget. You can also find it by searching on the Android and Apple app stores.

BRITBOX (britbox.co.uk)

Price £5.99/month
Why subscribe A collaboration between the BBC, ITV and Channel 4, this features British shows like Gavin & Stacey and Broadchurch.
How to get it BritBox isn't ubiquitous yet, but it does have apps for both Android and Apple phones and tablets and is available for Samsung and Panasonic smart televisions.

NOW TV (nowtv.com)

Price Entertainment: £8.99/month (for HD), Cinema: £11.99/month,
Why subscribe Designed for people who want to watch the occasional Sky programme.
How to get it For £24.99, the Now TV Stick is a well-made piece of kit that accesses other services like Netflix as well as Now TV.

APPLE TV+

Price £4.99/month
Why subscribe Their line-up features the likes of Jennifer Aniston, Steven Spielberg and Oprah – and it has the ambition (and money) to make it work.
How to get it Apple TV+ is baked into most of their products, from iPhones to Macbooks. For watching on television, the confusingly titled Apple TV 4K (£179) is a swanky box that will give a pristine image. As a bonus, if you buy a new Apple device, you get one year of Apple TV+ free.

ALISON GRAHAM

I don't want to lose you

There's nothing like watching TV together, says Alison Graham

DEAR READER, I am hanging by a thread. Our household lost television reception for three days recently because of an aerial problem and I nearly melted into a yelling, begging mess. For the first time in my life I actually put my head in my hands, like a character in The Split (insert the name of your preferred bad drama here).

Yes, of course I could still watch stuff on my laptop, on catchup, but IT'S NOT THE SAME. Can I stress this enough? I have my big, proper telly on all the time, even while I'm doing my work-watching (though of course it's on mute at these times, I'm not mad.)

Because I need to know that telly – broadcast telly that people watch as it goes out – is still there. Because that means the world I have always known is still there, too. Going without it, just for three days, left me adrift and touching the void. I'd lost My People.

An appalled Radio Times friend/colleague could only wonder, aghast, "No telly for three days? What did you do?" This was asked in a comradely spirit, from one TV nut to another. We work for Radio Times, of course we're TV nuts.

I watch heaps of old stuff on Lord knows how many channels, but it's so important to me to know that there must be someone else, somewhere, who is watching at the same moment as me, as it goes out, a 2004 episode of Location, Location, Location on More4, where Phil and Kirstie look and sound 15 and the couple who want a three-storey Georgian house with a garden and room for a basement disco are being picky about living near a bus stop. Or a 2012 edition of Escape to the Country on HGTV that features "Jacqueline and Martin who love cycling and are looking for a £550,000 property in Monmouthshire".

Or the idiotic Paranormal Lockdown on Really. Lockdown is now a much, much more loaded word than it ever used to be when I first started watching this daft show about two "paranormal investigators" who lock themselves overnight in "haunted" buildings so they can run around shouting, "Did you see that?!" No, we didn't, because there's nothing there. There is never anything there.

GETTY

'I love to roam daytime shows like a cheerful hiker'

Yet I just knew that there were others like me who at that very moment were watching a man with a beard chatting to a demon through a radio, which told him to "go to Pontefract", and it was a friendly, comfortable feeling. I'm not kidding about Pontefract, by the way.

I KNOW IN LOCKDOWN I should be reading Finnegans Wake or learning to make enamel jewellery rather than watching a five-year-old episode of Flog It!

But I love to roam particularly the daytime heartland of aged shows on my big telly like a cheerful hiker, stopping for a little rest at Antiques Road Trip and maybe a cup of coffee and a crumpet at A Place in the Sun.

I'm happy with my big telly, thank you, and what is now called "linear TV". It keeps me sane. I hope it's doing the same for you, too. Oh, and by the way, a lovely aerial man/electrician in a mask and gloves came out and fixed whatever went wrong as we stood well back, acutely sensitive of our social distancing. I don't think I've ever loved anyone more.

Stay healthy.

TOWERING TELLY

TROUBLED SPIRIT
Peter Sellers was besotted with his second wife Britt Ekland in the mid-60s – but their marriage soon failed

PICK OF THE DAY Peter Sellers: a State of Comic Ecstasy 9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Peter Sellers was the epitome of a troubled comic genius, professionally a prodigiously talented man with an extraordinary comic ability. But privately he was difficult and mercurial.

This documentary (there was no preview as RT went to press) promises to explore his tumultuous life and a career that began, of course, on BBC radio. It was as a star of The Goon Show in the 1950s that Sellers first displayed his remarkable aptitude for silliness, mimicry and sheer comic anarchy.

The film takes us through Sellers's early years as part of his parents' music hall revue, to the big time, the massive movie roles (Dr Strangelove), Oscar nominations, the worldwide fame and wild tales of his off-screen antics.

Sellers's second wife, Britt Ekland, and his daughters Sarah and Victoria talk about what he was like when the cameras stopped, and fans Michael Palin and Steve Coogan discuss his enduring comedy-legend status. Peter Sellers: Talking Comedy follows at 10.15pm.

Top Gear: Ambitious but Rubbish

4.00pm, 5.00pm Dave

MOTORING "Something's gone wrong with the handling," shouts Jeremy Clarkson as he tries to get his car under control. What's gone wrong is that one of his wheels has flown off. It then bowls across the test track, narrowly missing his co-presenters and crew. This is how Top Gear's engineering segments used to end – in messy chaos, as Richard Hammond recalls here.

Other segments from the show's early years include the time they turned a people-carrier into a convertible and took it to a safari park. Also, some remarkable presenting sang froid as James May drives a 4x4 up a volcano, while red-hot rocks fall around him and his tyres catch fire. DAVID BUTCHER

ITV Football Classics

5.00pm ITV

SPORT The latest rummage through the ITV archives turns up one of the most compelling finishes in Wembley history, as Arsenal face Manchester United in the 1979 FA Cup final, when three goals in the last five minutes swung this match one way and then the other.

Despite the presence of talents such as Liam Brady and Lou Macari, the first 85 minutes weren't quite as exciting, but fans of a certain vintage can bathe in the nostalgic glow of an era when hair was long, shorts were short and conquering Wembley heroes celebrated with a pint of milk rather than a magnum of Cristal. CHRIS HUGHES

Pointless Celebrities

6.10pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT Filmed some time ago (Gareth Malone talks about the making of the film Military Wives and Claire Richards reveals that Steps have reformed and are recording a new album), this family edition gets off to a hilarious start, thanks to mother-and-daughter team Andi and Miquita Oliver. Subjects to brush up on include Cluedo, nonsensical pop song titles (a good one if you're compiling a virtual pub quiz during lockdown) and US presidents.

Sometimes the celebrities' chats with Alexander Armstrong and Richard Osman can be a little awkward, but Kate Robbins reveals she has a very famous cousin. A question for that lockdown quiz, maybe? JANE RACKHAM

KEVIN WHATELY'S TV HITS

There's another chance today to catch the very first episode of Lewis (3.05pm ITV3), which attracted more than 11 million viewers when it was first shown in 2006. But star Kevin Whately wasn't expecting the pilot to be a hit, telling RT in 2018: "I was surprised by Lewis's success because I always thought of him as a sounding board for Morse. I didn't think it was a good idea to spin him off at all, but I was persuaded to do it and it took off."

Later, in an Oxford-centric evening, Whately's partnership with the late John Thaw can be seen in an episode of Inspector Morse at 7pm, with more Lewis at 11pm. Those wanting to watch both series in their entirety can find them on streaming service BritBox. And to explore Whately's TV CV further, head to on-demand service UKTV Play, where the first two series of comedy classic Auf Wiedersehen, Pet can now be streamed. DAVID BROWN

7.00pm BBC1

SITCOM Imperishable warhorse Dad's Army gets a promotion up the ranks from BBC2 to primetime BBC1 – and it's more than earned its stripes.

The occasion is marked with a reshowing of The Deadly Attachment, from October 1973, far and away the series' most popular episode: the one where we can all join in with the words.

Aside from a zinging Perry and Croft script, a big factor in its success was securing multilingual actor Philip Madoc. As the surly U-boat captain, he displays a keen sense of comedy that's almost the match of Arthur Lowe and the regulars. As creator Jimmy Perry put it, "He was marvellous." Watch Madoc deliver the line "I don't want any nasty, soggy chips" and you'll probably agree. MARK BRAXTON

Britain's Got Talent

8.00pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT Despite Simon Cowell's decree that he wanted this year's acts to feel more as they did in earlier series – unknowns walking onto the stage straight from their bedrooms – there still appears to be a glut of performers who seem a bit too professional. Take the nattily attired Kevin Quantum, for example, whose talent saw him set fire to, and then walk through, a giant Newton's cradle in motion. Hardly something he could hone at home.

Tonight, the auditions continue as more unknowns and semi-professionals step out to impress the judges and hopefully earn a spot in the show's live finals, which have been postponed but, so far, are still planned for later in the year. FRANCES TAYLOR

The Queen's Speeches

9.30pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY It's traditionally been the case that the Queen takes to the airwaves just once a year to give her annual Christmas address to the nation. But in these unusual times, she is being seen on screen more often, and has earned high praise for her efforts to bolster our spirits during the coronavirus pandemic. It was also announced, at the time of writing, that she would mirror George VI's historic 1945 broadcast with one of her own on VE Day 2020.

Here, royal commentators and insiders sift through more than half a century of speeches in order to discuss what prompts the monarch to reassure her subjects and how she sets about capturing the national mood. DAVID BROWN

UNHAPPY TOGETHER
Fredrik Nyman (Per Kjerstad) and wife Ingrid (Pia Tjelta)

State of Happiness

9.00pm, 9.45pm BBC4

DRAMA So far, my favourite character in this involving Norwegian tale is Fredrik, benign owner of a Stavanger fish-canning business that is going bust. It's not every day you get heroic sardine magnates featured in dramas – in fact it's almost as rare to have any kind of business boss portrayed as decent.

But Fredrik genuinely is, which makes me wonder if, as the North Sea oil boom takes off, he will end up corrupted and sell his soul (or throw his snooty, moody wife Ingrid off a cliff).

Tonight's opening episode is about what is for sale and what isn't, as a God-fearing community find themselves sitting on vast oil wealth. As always, young secretary Anna (who looks like an ingénue but is as sharp as a sardine can lid) is at the nub of things. More than any of the men, she sees how the future will open up. DAVID BUTCHER

9.00 Peter Sellers: a State of Comic Ecstasy

RT Exploring the life of the actor and comedian, from his formative years as part of his parents' music hall revue to The Goon Show and global superstardom in films such as Dr Strangelove and The Pink Panther series. Peter Sellers was a man who could play anybody – except himself. Tales of his antics with co-actors backstage were often more eye-opening than the scenes played out on screen, and his private life saw multiple marriages, chronic health problems, petulant rages and a long decline in his later years. As well as tributes from the likes of Britt Ekland, Steve Coogan, Nanette Newman, Michael Palin and Hanif Kureishi, Sellers's daughters Sarah and Victoria recall the challenges of growing up with their father's tempestuous mood swings. See p40.

State of Happiness 9.00pm Fredrik Nyman (Per Kjerstad) tries to save the factory

7.00pm Primates
2/3. Family Matters. Maintaining strong familial and social bonds is vital for primates, as shown by dusky leaf monkeys who together deter a python while babysitting an infant, and gibbons who love larking around in treetops. With family comes hierarchy, and those at the top are always wary of challengers. For a battle-scarred Hanuman langur, attack is the best form of defence when his troop is threatened by a band of bachelors.

New to Netflix

Book Club ★★★ Netflix

A distinguished cast heads up this ensemble comedy about four friends who decide that, despite their advancing years, they still have plenty of living to do. Refusing to bow to the pressure of "acting their age", Jane Fonda, Diane Keaton, Mary Steenburgen and Candice Bergen meet up every week to discuss a novel. When Fonda suggests they read Fifty Shades of Grey, the book makes an impact on each of their lives. Book Club may be pure escapism, but it's also nimble, empowering and funny. KAREN KRIZANOVICH

Watch along for free

Eddie the Eagle ★★★★★ YouTube FREE TO VIEW

To keep us entertained during lockdown, Lionsgate is streaming films for free every Saturday at 6pm on YouTube. This week, tune in to Eddie the Eagle, in which Taron Egerton soars as the British skier who set an accidental record at the 1988 Calgary Winter Olympics. Sports coming-of-age tale Bend It like Beckham and dystopian blockbuster The Hunger Games are showing in the coming weeks, and you'll be able to donate to NHS charities via the channel. Visit LionsgateFilmsUK on YouTube for details. JOSH WINNING

A bumpy ride

P Stuber ★★

10.30pm Sky Premiere

In this stuttering action comedy, a mild-mannered Uber driver (played by The Big Sick's Kumail Nanjiani) gets caught up in a police chase when he picks up a detective (Dave Bautista) recovering from eye surgery. While Nanjiani's comic timing is spot-on, the film never really gets out of second gear. TERRY STAUNTON

SUNDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

ROAMING AFRICA
Levison Wood is on the trail of migrating elephants

PICK OF THE DAY Walking with Elephants 9.00pm C4

NATURE New series Levison Wood seeks out adventure like a middle-class mum hunting down bread flour. He has the explorer's urge to find places where civilisation is remote and a mobile phone won't save your bacon if your bacon is endangered – which in his case it often is. He has walked the Himalayas, Arabia and the length of the Nile; now he visits Botswana in southern Africa to track the migration of elephant herds towards the Okavango Delta.

His excellent local guide is Kane Motswana, a member of the San people whose hunter-gatherer culture is one of the oldest there is. Early on in the trek, Kane imitates the call of an injured antelope and it summons a pride of lions like a dinner gong. Wood is keen to find how elephants and people can co-exist. But he gets a harsh reminder of how local farmers, who can see a year's worth of food destroyed in a night, regard them. One says plainly, "The solution is to kill them." DAVID BUTCHER

BBC Young Musician 2020

7.00pm BBC4

MUSIC Expect some unusual pieces in tonight's woodwind final by Vivaldi, Tchaikovsky, Jeffery Agrell, André Messager and Johann Heinrich Schmelzer. The five contenders are Daisy Noton (aged 16, on flute), Marian Bozhidarov (18, clarinet), Ewan Millar (18, oboe), Alice Gore (18, bassoon) and, returning from 2018, Eliza Haskins (16, recorder).

Sunny new host Anna Lapwood is in the chair with flautist Katherine Bryan, who was in the woodwind final in 1998, 2000 and 2002 and offers invaluable critique. If you're lured by the snippet of Haskins's contemporary two-recorder piece, complete performances can be found on iPlayer. PATRICK MULKERN

Antiques Roadshow

7.15pm BBC1

ANTIQUES There are no valuations in this VE Day special because the cherished objects, relating to Second World War events, are quite simply priceless. Among the items that Fiona Bruce reminds us about is the typewriter belonging to journalist Clare Hollingworth, who got the scoop of the century when she witnessed the Nazi invasion of Poland, and a shrapnel-damaged memento from the first great naval confrontation of the war (the Battle of the River Plate).

There are moving stories from those who experienced VE Day 75 years ago, including AR's Henry Sandon, and a peek into the BBC archives to see how it was celebrated around the world. JANE RACKHAM

Van der Valk

8.00pm ITV

DRAMA Piet Van der Valk looks distracted, even though Amsterdam's sustainable-fashion community is in uproar after the murder of a vlogger. His death, captured on his own camera, is flashed around social media. There's yet another fashion-related killing in such high-profile circumstances that you might laugh yourself daft when the cops insist it must be "kept out of the press".

But Piet has other things on his mind – grainy flashbacks to a road accident – in the final episode, while he and his boss Dahlman disappear for mysterious meetings. It's a baffling subplot, presumably designed to show us that there's a reason why he seems to be such a cold herring. ALISON GRAHAM

Primates

8.15pm BBC1

NATURE Among the scientists we meet in the final edition is Russ Mittermeier, a veteran primatologist who, as we track his visit to Tanzania, spots a rare kipunji in the treetops and becomes the first person ever to see all 79 kinds of primate in the wild. Russ believes ecotourism and primate-spotting are the best way to preserve their future, at a time when 60 per cent of primate species are, we gather, endangered or vulnerable.

Also, we watch Thai macaques opening oysters and we learn about the intriguing language of gestures among chimpanzees. An arm-scratch means "Let's go" and tearing leaves is roughly the equivalent of a saucy wink. DAVID BUTCHER

TV CV EMMA FIELDING

Of her role as police boss Julia Dahlman in Van der Valk (8pm ITV), Emma Fielding says: "I was thrilled that there was a part for a woman over 45 who isn't slightly sad in a cardigan and who is still effective in the workplace." The 53-year-old actress rarely appears to have been out of work since her TV debut in 1992 playing Mary Shelley in BBC2's Dread Poets' Society, a one-off drama co-written by poet Benjamin Zephaniah.

Since then, the Yorkshire-born performer has featured in such notable dramas as Unforgotten, Cranford and Les Misérables. And Van der Valk isn't the first time she's played a high-ranking detective: in Channel 4's 2005 The Ghost Squad, she portrayed Det Supt Carole McKay.

Asked in 2017 about whether there are fewer acting opportunities for women over the age of 40, Fielding said: "Things are slowly shifting. It's slow progress, but I'd still love to be doing this when I'm 80."

DAVID BROWN

David Stratton's Stories of Australian Cinema

9.00pm BBC4

ARTS Of all Aussie films, one that really resonates with David Stratton is They're a Weird Mob because when he arrived in Australia in 1963, the country felt alien to him too. His theme is outsiders so, inevitably, he starts by dissecting that famous Oz-flick Muriel's Wedding (apparently even Julia Roberts identifies with it).

He also talks – intelligently and with great insight – to Australia's film community about movies such as the "fearful beauty" of Wake in Fright and A Cry in the Dark (originally titled Evil Angels). Neither did well at the box office locally because "the mirror they held up to Australia's behaviour was too raw to stomach".

JANE RACKHAM

Killing Eve

9.15pm BBC1

DRAMA We fly all over the place this week – London, Barcelona, Moscow, Poland – like a bee determined to pollinate as many flowers as possible. It's all a bit disconcerting as is introducing the main characters with their names in large capital letters. Come on, by now I think we know who Villanelle, Eve, Konstantin et al are.

While Villanelle is waiting to be promoted to the role of Keeper, she does a small favour for Konstantin, although it's a murder with very little finesse. Dasha, too, is on a mission to drive a wedge between Eve and Villanelle. She, however, accomplishes that with a certain amount of chutzpah. Yep, you've still got it, Dasha. JR

Dave

10.00pm, 10.30pm BBC2

COMEDY OF THE WEEK New series

If the opening scene of this US sitcom bothers you, best stop there. It features our hero, Dave, giving a doctor way more detail on the back-story of his mystery rash than is called for, and it sets up Dave neatly as a neurotic dork with a tendency to overshare.

What we then discover is that he is also a hot YouTube rapper (in real life, Dave Burd, aka Lil Dicky, was just that) looking to break into the big time by getting a famous rapper to perform on his song. What follows is nicely excruciating, with the feel of a hipper Curb Your Enthusiasm (co-creator Jeff Schaffer worked on both shows) and shades of Atlanta – not a bad space to be in. DAVID BUTCHER

RELOCATION No studio for Romesh – he'll be in his garage

The Ranganation

9.15pm BBC2

COMEDY You could be forgiven for not being sure which of Romesh Ranganathan's on-going TV projects this is: it's the one with the topical comedy and the "Great British focus group" in the studio. Which, at this point, presents a special challenge because topical comedy only really has one topic and studio panels are out. So Romesh relocates to the comfort of his own home (the garage) and will canvas his opinion-formers via videolink.

Have I Got News for You has shown (after some initial clunkiness) that it's possible to keep the rhythms of studio comedy going, even when everyone involved is dialling it in, so hopefully Romesh and his downbeat, laconic gags can survive a lockdown shake-up. And in case of disaster, fans can be reassured that his mum will be on hand (at a safe distance) to save the day.

Gregory Porter's Popular Voices

iPlayer (ep1 expires today)

The jazz singer's 2017 documentary series on different types of superstar vocalists is once again on iPlayer in full, with later episodes covering crooners and "truth tellers" – the opening episode is all about "showstoppers". They turn out to span several decades and many genres, with Ella Fitzgerald, Mahalia Jackson, Freddie Mercury, Prince, Whitney Houston and Mariah Carey favoured. It's affable and insightful.

KIDS' CHOICE

The Day Henry Met

6.20am Channel 5, My5

In this weekend's second brand-new episode of the charming 2D animation for pre-schoolers, the highly inquisitive four-year-old meets... a rainbow! So begins a quest to find a pot of gold, which leads Henry to become a leprechaun. Soon he's sliding down the rainbow towards a pot of something children like more than gold. JACK SEALE

American Graffiti

9.00pm Sony Movies Classic

Nostalgic 1960s-set comedy drama in which a group of high-school graduates celebrate before going their separate ways. Directed by George Lucas and starring Richard Dreyfuss and Ron Howard. See page 28

The Bling Ring ★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

The fifth film by Lost in Translation director Sofia Coppola is a dryly funny and perceptive drama about a group of high-school kids (among them former Hermione Granger, Emma Watson) who become so obsessed with tabloid stars' private lives that they decide to burgle their houses. The movie addresses serious themes about our culture's obsession with celebrity, but there are also plenty of laughs, mostly from the gang's incursions into the real-life home of Paris Hilton. It's a rich and involving drama. DAMON WISE

An inspiring journey

Camino Skies ★★★★ Curzon Home Cinema

Fergus Grady and Noel Smyth's debut documentary offers a fly-on-the-backpack account of a group of Australian and New Zealand strangers who trek the 500-mile Camino de Santiago trail, from the south of France to Galicia, Spain. Each is hiking for their own reason, from unimaginable tragedy to age-defying determination. The movie is well-signposted, but it's a surprisingly jolly tale of briefly coexisting lives – and even when it starts to feel transfigurative, its boots remain on the ground. ANDREW COLLINS

6.05pm Sky Disney

We're all feeling a little boxed in at the moment, so now is the perfect time for a spot of escapism. This Pixar classic has that in spades, as a grumpy pensioner and a talkative boy scout go in search of a lost South American world. Cute dogs, acts of derring-do and a bird named Kevin should all inspire a smile or three. JOSH WINNING

MONDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

ON THE FRONT LINE

PICK OF THE DAY Hospital Special: Fighting Covid-19 9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK Britain is in the early stages of lockdown as the coronavirus pandemic increases its vicious grip on the country, and a registrar at the Royal Free Hospital in London has a difficult telephone conversation with the daughter of 88-year-old Peter, who is seriously ill with Covid-19. "I wish I could do this in person," says the registrar. "I wish I could do this differently." But he can't, the hospital has banned visitors and staff must be both carers and proxy family members.

This incredibly moving two-part documentary (which concludes tomorrow) unsparingly shows hospital staff giving everything to rise to the challenge of a brutal, little-understood virus.

I was in pieces by the end, but it is a documentary (part one is directed by Dan Dewsbury and Charlie Slade) that will make you proud of humanity, of our resilience, and of the bravery of some very, very special people. ALISON GRAHAM

A Place in the Sun

3.00pm C4

DAYTIME CHOICE Traditionally, it's been easy to mock A Place in the Sun, as house-hunters expected the team to be able to find two bedrooms, an open-plan kitchen-diner and a sea view (or one of mountains) for virtually the same price as a budget flight and a pitcher of sangria or rum punch. How times have changed... Now it seems like delicious fantasy. So put your feet up and enjoy a new weekday run of the property staple.

In today's episode, Danni Menzies shows Cath five properties on Spain's Costa Almería that might be perfect both as a holiday home for her and daughter Kate, and a literary bolthole. What can she get for £170,000? GILL CRAWFORD

Great British Menu: the Finals

8.00pm BBC2

FOOD Susan Calman is a great addition to the show, adding judicious dashes of humour to a kitchen that too often in the past has threatened to become bogged down by po-faced veteran judges and their doomy pronouncements.

There is still that Cassandra element: "Has he/she got the time to produce his/her dishes?" (yes, always, stop worrying), but Calman's playful touch lightens the mood.

It's finals week, and nightly until the grand banquet on Friday, chefs will compete to put their starter, fish course, main and dessert before the starry guests. As restaurants remain closed indefinitely, it's heartening to see a bit of communal dining. AG

Ricky and Ralf's Very Northern Road Trip

8.00pm Gold

TRAVEL New series As Antony on The Royle Family, Ralf Little spent his teenage years on screen running errands for Ricky Tomlinson's Jim. And now, more than 20 years after he was cast in the sitcom, Little is driving his TV dad around northern Britain in a campervan for this new celeb travelogue series.

Not that this is a chore, what with a spry 80-year-old Tomlinson being such good company as he yells in terror on the ghost train at Blackpool Pleasure Beach and goes full Mike Bassett at a soccer school in Preston. Only as the sun sets do the pair start to channel their Royle alter egos. It's no surprise when Little insists he should use the loo first. DAVID BROWN

George W Bush

8.45pm PBS America

DOCUMENTARY New series You might think no one needs a series-length profile of George W Bush, but this is sharp, insightful and fascinating. It begins with a taut account of how 9/11 unfolded for Bush's inner circle, then spools back to show his early life, and how little in it prepared Bush to be Governor of Texas, let alone president.

Friends and critics sketch out his youth as an affable ne'er-do-well, the black sheep of an elite dynasty who never found his way until he took up religion (and gave up booze) in middle age. His contested election in 2000 had to be decided in the end by the Supreme Court, which the film suggests opened up lasting divisions. DAVID BUTCHER

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Prior to EastEnders (8.00pm BBC1) suspending production, actress Jessie Wallace had been temporarily written out, with Kat seen hurriedly exiting after receiving a mystery call. It was a rather abrupt way of bundling the character off-screen and it's now also starting to seem as though a marker pen was taken to scripts so that all dialogue originally given to Kat could be reassigned to Kush (Davood Ghadami, right). There's not really any other explanation for why he'd be so heavily involved in this current plotline about Jean and the medication she's not taking, which now sees Kush reveal his worries to Shirley. You can expect both him and Shirl to have taken matters into their own hands by the time the credits roll.

Elsewhere, Mitch is desperate to see his son Keegan exonerated, but Jack insists they wait for the bodycam from the night in question to be repaired. Can't they just watch the footage back in the relevant episode of EastEnders on iPlayer like the rest of us? DAVID BROWN

Celebrity SAS: Who Dares Wins

9.00pm C4

REALITY If you watched Strictly a few years back, you'll remember that Brendan Cole was always considered the argumentative one who didn't take criticism well. So it's quite surprising that, after getting what he calls "a good verbal slapping" from Ant Middleton for messing up on the torturous endurance test known as "surf immersion", he doesn't storm off. However, it's another recruit who's constantly struggling to control his anger that really worries the DS.

Frankly, I think it's astonishing that so few of the celebs crack when they're being pushed to their physical limits in the freezing rain while being shouted and sworn at by these SAS tough guys. JR

NCIS

9.00pm 5 USA

DRAMA It's a ho-hum case of the week, as a stakeout goes awry and the prints of a long-believed-dead detective are found at a crime scene. But never fear, because tonight's B-plot is of far greater interest.

Ducky (David McCallum) is being honoured at the University of Edinburgh and wowing the students with the grisliest stories from his mortuary slab. He also gets a tempting offer that might result in his colleague Palmer being left to fly solo in the lab.

The only distracting aspect to this storyline are the Scottish accents – it's as though the guest stars have been listening to tapes of Hamish and Dougal from I'm Sorry I Haven't a Clue. DAVID BROWN

I Know This Much Is True

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA New series Mark Ruffalo has had rave notices for his double performance in this harrowing serial. The first episode was only broadcast yesterday in the US and no previews were available as RT went to press, but anyone who loves Ruffalo's subtle, soulful style (or who has read Wally Lamb's 1998 doorstop of a novel, on which the drama is based) should love it.

Like BBC4's recent Twin, it is the tale of very different twin brothers, both played by Ruffalo, and their intertwined, often tragic, past. Thomas is a paranoid schizophrenic, who at the start of the story commits a terrible act of self-harm in a public library. His brother Dominick can only do so much to help. DAVID BUTCHER

OUT OF HIS DEPTH
Connell (Paul Mescal) finds himself lost for words

Normal People

9.00pm, 9.30pm BBC1

DRAMA OF THE WEEK Ex-lovers Marianne and Connell (Daisy Edgar Jones and Paul Mescal, both brilliant) meet again by chance at university in Dublin. The pair are tentative and shy, Connell is particularly hesitant, notably when he's round Marianne's largely insufferable friends. And he's a loner, working in the library and achieving a certain star status as an outstanding writer, while Marianne is a brilliant planet at the centre of an adoring universe of pals.

This is such a gorgeous drama (adapted from Sally Rooney's bestseller) that so sure-footedly tracks a deep romance that has to be yet, somehow, cannot be. Both Marianne and Connell are flawed and, sometimes, profoundly thoughtless.

No scene is wasted, no word is superfluous, as Connell and Marianne re-establish themselves as a couple. But Connell comes adrift and, for someone who is so skilled at the written word, his ability to say what he feels is painfully lacking. AG

Lockdown Showdown

6am BBC3, iPlayer

Online quarantine culture makes its way to proper telly with this game show, hosted by Hot Property presenter Yung Filly (two series of that show, in which singletons choose who to go on a date with by snooping round potential partners' homes while they're out, is also still on iPlayer). Teams of housemates from around the country answer questions, complete challenges and indulge in TikTok-style dance routines, all of it co-ordinated by Filly from his south London flat.

Can he sit still for long enough? Joe Wicks, who's become the nation's lockdown fitness instructor via his daily YouTube workouts, bounces energetically into the storytelling chair to recount Would You Like a Banana? by Yasmeen Ismail – about a gorilla who absolutely refuses to eat a banana! JACK SEALE

The Enforcer

10.00pm Talking Pictures TV

Riveting Warner Bros crime drama from 1951, which features Humphrey Bogart on the right side of the law for once, as he closes in on a gang of professional killers.

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK

9.00 Hospital Special: Fighting Covid-19
RT 1/2. Filmed inside the NHS from the first day of the lockdown, this programme follows staff and patients at the Royal Free Hospital in London as they tackle Covid-19. Among them is 88-year-old Peter who is struggling for breath. He's put on oxygen and his consultant begins a difficult conversation with him and his family about his prognosis. In the maternity unit Sabina, 22, is Covid-positive and 36 weeks pregnant. Her oxygen saturation levels are dangerously low, so her obstetrician decides she needs an emergency caesarean, the first on a coronavirus patient that the staff have done. All of them must wear full PPE and be sealed in the operating theatre during the procedure, to prevent the spread of infection. Concludes tomorrow 9pm. See p60.

P Jojo Rabbit ★★★★★ Virgin Movies/DVD/Blu-ray

Taking a controversially comedic approach to a hugely sensitive subject, Taika Waititi writes, directs and stars in a dramatisation of Christine Leunens's novel Caging Skies. He plays a most improbable imaginary friend – a fatherly version of Adolf Hitler – who appears to a young member of the Hitler Youth, Jojo (Roman Griffin Davis). As Jojo confronts the horrific reality of his idol's actions, Waititi – who is Jewish on his mother's side – deftly alternates sincerity with eccentricity for an unexpectedly compassionate film. EMMA SIMMONDS

A Beatle in the making

Nowhere Boy ★★★★ All4 FREE TO VIEW

The teenage years of John Lennon are revealed in this blend of biopic and coming-of-age story. In 1950s Liverpool, schoolboy John (played by Aaron Taylor-Johnson) is brought up by his stern Aunt Mimi (Kristin Scott Thomas), only to discover that his mother Julia (Anne-Marie Duff) lives nearby, and his reunion with her prompts jealousies and heartache. In her directorial debut, British artist Sam Taylor-Wood expertly balances emotive drama and pop history with evocative period detail. TREVOR JOHNSTON

TUESDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

TEACHER KNOWS BEST
What's troubling Joe? His teacher (Julie Hesmondhalgh) tries to find out

PICK OF THE DAY The A Word 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA Young Joe is adrift… his parents are divorced and he's living in two different homes, with mum Alison in Manchester during the week, and dad Paul in the Lake District at weekends. For a boy with autism who needs routine, it's difficult. But Joe's problems have multiplied since his sister Rebecca's news and he's become trapped in his world of ritual, his comfort when the world outside changes too fast. His new head teacher, the kindly Heather (terrific Julie Hesmondhalgh) does her best to unlock Joe's fears. Yet, unwittingly, she encourages Joe to latch on to her as a walking, talking place of safety.

It's another great episode of Peter Bowker's drama, one that deals with complex issues in an adult way. That's not to say it's grim: there are some well-placed little laugh-bombs that Bowker detonates to great effect. ALISON GRAHAM

Life and Birth

8.00pm BBC1 (10.45pm Scotland)

DOCUMENTARY Like birth plans, programme scheduling sometimes goes awry, so you may have noticed that the first two programmes were swapped after RT went to press.

Tonight – hopefully – we meet Melissa who, at 44, is thrilled to be pregnant for the second time and has taken her unborn son's diagnosis of Down's syndrome in her stride. Hearing there are any problems with pregnancy is devastating, so your heart goes out to Nat and Chris when they're told their unborn baby has a dangerously blocked kidney that requires emergency foetal surgery.

You also feel for Laura, who's understandably anxious because, tragically, her previous baby was stillborn. JANE RACKHAM

Life Drawing Live!

8.00pm BBC4

ART During lockdown, some of us have taken up painting or drawing to while away a few hours and stimulate the creative juices. Grayson's Art Club on Channel 4 has already delighted amateur artists; now BBC4 sets up its easel for another live-streamed life-drawing class.

Even if you didn't try sketching a nude yourself last time, it was fascinating to watch and to hear Lachlan Goudie, Diana Ali and Nicky Philipps offering tips and critiques to the amateur artists as they wrestled with perspectives, proportions and that all-important negative space.

This time the participants will be adhering to social-distancing rules in the studio – so lots more negative space than usual, then. JR

The Architecture the Railways Built

8.00pm Yesterday

DOCUMENTARY Tim Dunn is full of surprises. As he slogs up the stairs to the lantern of the clock tower above King's Cross station he exclaims, "When I was tiny, I wanted to be a horologist, a clock-maker." Blimey, railway enthusiast and clock-lover. Whatever next?

In another cheery escape back to the days when we travelled by train, Dunn uses the word "iconic" a lot as he gazes in awe at Kings Cross's fan-vaulted ceiling, centrepiece of its £500 million refurbishment. There's also the fascinating story of Clifton Rocks Railway, whose sad façade lies beneath the Clifton Suspension Bridge. There's a treat inside: the remains of a funicular railway. AG

Hospital Special: Fighting Covid-19

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK Stanley is 73 and has been a patient at London's Royal Free Hospital for some weeks, struggling with Covid-19. Like Peter and Nancy in last night's episode of this brilliant documentary, Stanley is one of those no-nonsense older people who pushes hard to get well: "You have to be determined with this [the virus]; if you don't, you're going nowhere." Elsewhere, oxygen supplies throughout the Trust's hospitals are under serious strain as they run at full capacity, while, sadly, body bags are in short supply and mortuary capacity is almost full.

But there is hope, a real glimmer of light, as clinical trials of a drug used to treat Ebola begin. AG

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Phil Mitchell in EastEnders (7.30pm BBC1) turns 60 next year but still seems intent on repeating the same mistakes. Here's a tip, Phil: perhaps you're not going to find much happiness in life either from owning the Queen Vic or by being a gangster. Even now, on the day of his son Ben's operation, he's sharing details about some upcoming nefarious "job". Come on, man, you're not Don Corleone. Put your feet up. Watch a bit of Homes under the Hammer.

And speaking of offerings on daytime TV, we're rewinding back to 1993 on Classic EastEnders (1pm, 1.35pm Drama), which finds an upbeat Mark, Michelle, Clem and Shelley (yeah, you're not alone in failing to remember those last two characters) heading off on their trip to Amsterdam. But who's the redheaded newcomer flirting with Sanjay back on the Square? It's only the Walford debut of Bianca Jackson (Patsy Palmer) – glassware across the country would soon be shattering at the sound of her shrieking. DAVID BROWN

Paul Hollywood Eats Japan

9.00pm C4

FOOD The final, hugely entertaining episode of this Japanese culinary odyssey is full of mind-boggling figures. There's the giggly gentleman who sells strawberries for upwards of £350 each (Hollywood is in raptures when he eats one, so maybe they are worth it).

Then there's the Japanese people's love affair with, of all things, Kit Kats. There are 400 flavours produced in Japan, and there's a special pink version to coincide with the cherry blossom season. Five million Kit Kats are sold DAILY in Japan.

Possibly most extraordinary of all is the Japanese love of televised eating contests. Hollywood watches, aghast, as twin YouTube stars knock back 300 bowls of noodles each. AG

I'll Get This

10.00pm BBC2

ENTERTAINMENT Johnny Vegas wanders into the I'll Get This restaurant complaining that he lost two teeth yesterday, eating, of all things, pâté at his mum's house.

His mum, too, was puzzled as to why he would take part in a television show where he might have to "pay for everyone's food". Vegas inevitably dominates the table as he maunders on about his teeth, but fellow guests Sue Perkins, Fleur East, Mike Tindall and John Barnes all try to get a word in during the parlour games.

It's a half-hour of complete silliness, of course, but there's also a strong nostalgia element, seeing people sitting together, in a restaurant, eating and having fun. Ah, the memories... AG

Rio Ferdinand: Being Mum and Dad

11.45pm BBC1 (12.15am N Ireland; 12.45am Scotland)

DOCUMENTARY This is the 2017 film that won a Bafta for its producers and a whole heap of newfound respect for its grieving subject. Rio Ferdinand's wife Rebecca died from breast cancer in 2015, at the age of 34. Ferdinand opens up here with piercing honesty about the effect on his family, including his own suicidal thoughts: "I can see how you sink into a mad place where you think, 'D'you know what? Forget this.' But I've been lucky."

As we see him meet other widowed dads and bereavement experts, he bares his soul to an amazing degree. It makes for a film that is therapeutic for him and full of practical wisdom for the rest of us about grief. DAVID BUTCHER

I'M 'AVING 'OOPS!
Rob Beckett and Romesh Ranganathan go head to head on a basketball court

Rob and Romesh vs NBA Basketball

9.00pm Sky 1

COMEDY In now typical style, this episode starts with the lads cruising around in an SUV, squabbling like chalk-and-cheese cops and discussing why they're afraid of/uninterested in their upcoming task.

This week they're in Los Angeles to become basketball "stars". "I'm NBA curious," admits Romesh, cautiously. A promising start then.

There's no better place to accentuate the comedic properties of Britishness than LA. Surely only the British would end up, as Rob and Romesh do here, having their colons cleansed "out of politeness". And then giggle their way through the procedure like naughty kids in the headmaster's office.

Weirdly, the colonic scene takes up a fair chunk of the episode. Maybe Rob and Romesh vs Enemas would have been a better title. Or Slam Dump!, perhaps. GARY ROSE

STREAMING CHOICE

The best of streaming and catch-up

Netflix

The first big sitcom hit of the streaming era ended in January, with an air of finality – it spooled forwards four years to show us the characters' future, then a caption said "THE END" – but nevertheless, it's back! This one-off apes the interactive storytelling of the Black Mirror episode Bandersnatch: Kimmy's getting married, but only your decisions can help her have a happy day. Oh, fudge! Daniel Radcliffe co-stars.

KIDS' CHOICE

Blue's Clues and You

5.30pm Nick Jr (Sky 615, Virgin 715), NowTV

Today, in the reboot of the 1990s educational series Blue's Clues: it's an exciting day for Blue's puppy friend Magenta. She's getting glasses! When she does, young viewers are encouraged to join in with the usual interactive fun and games. JACK SEALE

FILM OF THE DAY

The Belles of St Trinian's

3.00pm BBC2

Alastair Sim's Miss Fritton and George Cole's Flash Harry became icons of British comedy in this anarchic adaptation of Ronald Searle's cartoons. Co-starring Joyce Grenfell.

"I am not an animal!"

The Elephant Man ★★★★★

BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

This poignant drama is probably the closest director David Lynch has got to the mainstream outside of the unwieldy Dune. It's based on the true story of the disfigured John Merrick (a superb, unrecognisable John Hurt), who battled the prejudices of Victorian society. It's enhanced by Freddie Francis's striking black-and-white cinematography and the excellent playing from a top-drawer cast, including Anthony Hopkins, Anne Bancroft and John Gielgud. JOHN FERGUSON

Young at heart

P Adam ★★★★ 9.45pm Sky Premiere

In this bracing yet tender walk on the wild side of sexual and gender politics, Nicholas Alexander plays Adam, a high-schooler spending the summer of 2006 with his lesbian sister in New York. When he meets a young woman (Bobbi Salvör Menuez) at a queer party, he allows her to assume he is a trans man to win her over. One of many LGBTQ+ people in front of and behind the camera, director Rhys Ernst (himself a trans man) confidently unspools this story of getting things hopelessly rather than maliciously wrong. STEVE MORRISSEY

Stranger than fiction

Catfish ★★★★

Netflix

Billed as a "reality thriller", this documentary follows the misadventures of New York photographer Nev Schulman. He begins an online correspondence with a Michigan family, and soon finds himself very much involved with their lives. The unfolding events prove unsettling, creepy and, ultimately, poignant. TREVOR JOHNSTON

WEDNESDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

LUCY I
Re-creating Cecil Beaton's coronation portrait of Elizabeth II

PICK OF THE DAY Lucy Worsley's Royal Photo Album 9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY Lucy Worsley hits the dressing-up box early as she poses in a nice hat while being driven down The Mall in a carriage at the start of this jolly canter through the royals' relationship with the camera.

Queen Victoria and Prince Albert were the first to embrace photography, though they always looked starchy and miserable. Worsley learns that this, however, was probably due to the interminable standing stock-still that was required.

They were canny, too, when it came to getting images out to the people, and pictures of various members of Victoria and Albert's family did a roaring trade at stationers' shops.

As Worsley moves up to date, she looks at the sexy photos taken by Lord Snowden of his wife, Princess Margaret, and of course she ends with Princess Diana, a woman who knew the value of a shot.

ALISON GRAHAM

The Repair Shop
8.00pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY Right now a careworn nation can't get enough of these visits to the workshop of dreams. Who cares if it's a repeat? This edition first went out last July and features Dominic Chinea fixing up a weather vane that once stood on the roof of the village church in Gosport, Hampshire. Battered by decades of rain, wind and frost, the weather vane is now little more than a rusted wreck – but not quite beyond Dom's metalwork skills.

Then saddler Suzie Fletcher enlists the help of teddy bear expert Julie Tatchell to rescue a leather rhino who bears the scars of a tangle with the family cat but has, of course, huge sentimental value for his owner. DAVID BUTCHER

Absolutely India: Mancs in Mumbai
8.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY Celebrity siblings the Thomas brothers (Ryan, Adam and Scott) and their dad Dougie are getting a taste for Indian life now, and in each episode another local relative emerges for a tearful reunion.

This week, it's Uncle Darryl (Dougie's long-lost cousin), who introduces them to a dance culture that is a long tradition among Anglo-Indian families – jive. Otherwise it's more shopping trips and tuk-tuk rides and cries of "This is what life's about, man!" as they explore the streets of Mumbai. The highlight is a visit to Dharavi, the city-within-a-city where Slumdog Millionaire was filmed, for more dance – this time, Bollywood style. DAVID BUTCHER

The Great British Sewing Bee
9.00pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT The big no-no on a rugby shirt is a messy placket. Not that the non-sewers among us will even know what a placket is. Luckily, the remaining nine competitors do, but once they've finished with that, they're transforming cagoules into toddlers' onesies. I'm not sure where that fits into the sportswear theme, but it certainly tests their creativity.

There's no doubting the sporting relevance of the tennis dress challenge. A couple of stitchers serve up an ace but one makes a fabulous outfit that's totally unsuitable for the tennis court – although Esme Young rather fancies this super-stylish but impractical outfit. JANE RACKHAM

The Country that Beat the Virus: What Can Britain Learn?
9.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY "The approach is to hunt the virus down: find it, contain it and kill it," says one contributor, as Krishnan Guru-Murthy reports on South Korea's aggressive anti-Covid-19 tactics. It's interesting to see how (learning lessons from the 2015 Mers outbreak) politicians and scientists there moved astonishingly fast.

Authorities checked infected patients' movements (via their phones) and credit-card data – even CCTV in restaurants where they had eaten, to trace people they had been in contact with. But the mass services of a Christian sect proved a challenge too far. DAVID BUTCHER

Had Coronation Street (7.30pm ITV) anticipated that we'd be experiencing a collective sense of Covid-related distress, I doubt it would have plotted such downbeat storylines. Just when you thought it couldn't get any bleaker than Yasmeen getting banged up for glassing her abusive husband with a broken bottle, we now get Steve and Leanne left fearing that their son Oliver may die.

After all this, you may want to watch something slightly more light-hearted, like Bicycle Thieves or Threads.

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Classic Coronation Street (2.50pm, 3.20pm ITV3) has a better mix of drama and comedy, with pompous Derek Wilton fretting about who's pinching his garden gnomes, while Deirdre puts little Jamie up when his mum Tricia fails to return home. The actors playing the last two have had notable post-Corrie careers: Joe Gilgun has been in everything from Preacher to Brassic, while Tracy Brabin has been MP for Batley and Spen since October 2016, following a by-election after the murder of Jo Cox. DAVID BROWN

Run

9.00pm Sky Comedy

DRAMA This episode begins with farce, as runaways Ruby and Billy take a literal leap into the unknown in pursuit of Billy's former assistant, Fiona, who's been on their tail since Chicago, and now has his money. Things soon take a much darker turn, but not before Billy puts his foot in his mouth again, and we learn exactly why he texted "RUN" to Ruby when he did. Shame on you, Billy.

Meanwhile, Ruby's husband Laurence (Mad Men's Rich Sommer) is piling on the pressure for her to return. "Do you get the feeling we're walking away from something we can never walk away from?" Billy asks her, after they've met an unlikely roadside taxidermist. Frankly, they're in a mess. GILL CRAWFORD

Stumptown

9.00pm Alibi

DRAMA If Dex (Cobie Smulders) wants a PI licence, she has to put in the hours with a real private detective, so she bowls up to the office of former Portland cop Artie Banks (the great Donal Logue) to pitch herself to him as his apprentice – cue a 70s-style dream sequence, with big hair, big cars and snappy dialogue. He's grizzled and cynical, but she persuades him to take her on. But their first case, helping the ex-wife of a notable local philanthropist, takes a turn for the unexpected.

And barkeeper Grey is looking beleaguered after an ex-prison buddy turns up dead. Dex notices, but so does that jazz-loving policeman, who might be able to help her with her case. But who's playing who? GC

Code 404

10.00pm Sky 1

COMEDY There's a lovely scene in tonight's episode, when all the silliness and punning stills, and the full emotional weight of the love triangle between DI Major, his wife Kelly and his partner, DI Carver, hits you. It's beautifully underplayed by Daniel Mays, Anna Maxwell Martin and Stephen Graham. That the gags resume straight after with hardly a missed beat is testament to the superb writing of Daniel Peak.

As Major and Carver continue to hunt for whoever killed Major – while an AI ethics committee questions whether to pull his plug – Graham gets all the best lines; his deadpan delivery as he glances at May's gormless face is superb. DAVID CRAWFORD

VIENNESE WHIRL
Oskar (Juergen Maurer) and Max (Matthew Beard) try to cut through the confusion

Vienna Blood

9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA If you missed this heady period detective show last year, it's worth a look now. We're in 1900s Vienna – a rich, escapist setting if ever there was one – and our hero is young Dr Max Liebermann, a disciple of Sigmund Freud.

Max is assigned to observe policework and forms an unlikely bond with gloomy detective Oskar Rheinhardt, as they set about solving the murder of a beautiful medium.

Max's thing is to use psychological insights to read clues that escape the blundering Vienna police – who naturally want quick results but are appalled when suspects turn out to be socially well connected.

Try to overlook the dearth of female characters (the women are dull or sex workers or, in the parlance of the time, hysterical) and enjoy instead the plush setting and Sherlock-ish central pair. DAVID BUTCHER

Sisters in Country: Dolly, Linda and Emmylou

iPlayer (expires today)

Thirty-three years ago, three superstars and longterm mutual admirers united: Linda Ronstadt, Dolly Parton and Emmylou Harris formed a harmonising country supergroup for an album called Trio, which sold millions of copies and won two Grammy awards. This vibrant documentary, first shown in 2016, tells the tale of how they all individually achieved fame, and what happened after their collaboration.

KIDS' CHOICE

Dog Loves Books

9.15am CBeebies, iPlayer

Bookshop-managing friends Dog and Pug (John Thomson and Craig Cash) disappear into another book to go on a brand-new animated adventure. Today, there's a power-cut in the shop. That makes Dog and Pug want to know what life was like before electricity, so they travel to an old lighthouse – where the keeper needs help. JACK SEALE

FILM OF THE DAY

Moonlight

9.00pm Film4

Barry Jenkins's beautifully intimate Miami-set coming-of-age story, starring Ashton Sanders as a black gay youth with few role models. Co-starring Tre'Rhodes and Naomie Harris. See page 30

Love on trial

If Beale Street Could Talk ★★★★★ Amazon Prime

With Amazon still offering a 30-day free trial on its Prime streaming service, this 1970s Harlem-set love story is an excellent reason to dive in. Based on James Baldwin's novel, the film depicts the blooming relationship of Tish and Fonny (KiKi Layne and Stephan James), while Oscar winner Regina King is outstanding as Tish's righteous mother. The source material proves the perfect fit for writer/director Barry Jenkins, whose Oscar-winning breakthrough, Moonlight, is showing tonight on Film4. ANDREW COLLINS

Priceless entertainment

Deception ★★★ My5 FREE TO VIEW

Cinema Paradiso director Guiseppe Tornatore takes the Hitchcockian romantic thriller route with this classy mystery set in Europe's high-stakes art world. Geoffrey Rush is splendid as an eccentric auctioneer who is asked to evaluate a priceless antique collection – and ends up falling in love with the secretive seller (Sylvia Hoeks). Tornatore overdoes the symbolism somewhat, but this is still a reasonably absorbing confection of neuroses, glamour and hustle in the old-school tradition of Vertigo. ALAN JONES

A matter of faith

P Corpus Christi
★★★ 11.45pm
Sky Premiere

A study of faith, vocation and redemption, this Polish drama follows a troubled 20-year-old (Bartosz Bielenia) who poses as a priest and inspires a surge in church attendance. The plot can feel contrived, but Jan Komasa directs with conviction and Bielenia is mesmerising.

THURSDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

QUIRKY QUARTET

PICK OF THE DAY

The Real Marigold Hotel 9.00pm BBC1

REALITY After their disappearance from our screens last week, the Marigolds return, although Chuckle Brother Paul still hasn't acclimatised to India: it's too hot and sticky, he's still got stomach issues yet he's lusting after a steak and kidney pie. He's such an Anglophile, you've got to wonder why on Earth he decided to do this trip.

Henry Blofeld, however, is loving it: he's impressed by a yoga therapy class (mainly because he manages to fall asleep on his back for the first time in years) and relishes getting a wardrobe of new handmade clothes, but then, joy of joys, he's invited to watch a cricket match. "Wouldn't have missed it for the world," he says, about almost everything.

Meanwhile, a few of the oldsters (including Britt Ekland, who clings on to her "arm candy" Duncan Bannatyne like a limpet) travel 200 miles south to join in the colourful and noisy Chithirai street festival. It's an assault on all the senses, so Zandra Rhodes, with her shocking pink hair, loud outfits and over-sized jewellery, fits right in. JANE RACKHAM

You've Been Framed!

7.00pm ITV

COMEDY The longest laugh I've had since lockdown began was a You've Been Framed! clip of a woman skier losing her skis, falling on her back then pivoting to career head-first down a slope. It was brilliant.

Presumably this makes me a rotten person, but if so I'm not alone as You've Been Framed! has been doing very well on ITV these past few weeks (it runs by the yard on ITV2). I have no idea what's in this new episode, but there are bound to be people falling over at weddings, drunks on trampolines, and mishaps with over-filled paddling pools.

With Harry Hill narrating there is, believe me, nothing funnier on Earth. ALISON GRAHAM

First Dates Hotel

9.00pm C4

REALITY You should always be careful what you wish for. "Proper Scouse girl" Stacey wants a man who doesn't take longer to get ready than she does. Her date Paul definitely doesn't spend much time over his appearance – he hasn't even remembered to bring a pair of trousers with him.

Meanwhile, avid gamer Reece admits he's got a little problem, in that his lack of height puts girls off. Will pocket-sized Chelsea fit the bill?

Also waiting nervously for his date is Jonathan, a slightly eccentric music professor, who reveals he's looking for magic in a relationship. It's something barman Merlin strongly believes in – well, he would, with a name like that. JR

Outlander

9.00pm More 4

DRAMA After the horrors of the previous episode, things are a bit more sedate as Claire and Jamie arrive at the palatial home of his Aunt Jocasta (Maria Doyle Kennedy), who's done very well in the New World, and now owns a sizeable plantation called River Run.

This being 1767, there aren't just fertile fields, there are slaves, too. Jocasta's proud of the way she looks after them, but that won't wash with Claire, who has a very 20th-century perspective on such things (Caitriona Balfe's good at signalling disapproval).

But things are never quiet for long in Outlander. Claire's medical skills are soon called upon, and there's a serious moral dilemma. GILL CRAWFORD

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

You may have noticed that Casualty isn't on this week, as the BBC tries to eke out the supply of new episodes it has left. However, instalments of Classic Casualty (11.00am Drama) continue to air on weekdays, with this morning's reminding us of the ceaseless horror that was endured by Josh Griffiths (Ian Bleasdale), one the show's most fondly remembered paramedics.

Part one of a two-part story from October 2000 finds him climbing down a quarry to rescue a patient, only to be dramatically buried by a landslide. For most of us, this would be considered a disaster. For Josh, this is actually a relatively good day, since three years previously he'd lost his wife and two children in a house fire. And seven years after the avalanche, he almost bled to death after being stabbed in the neck. When Josh made a one-off return to Casualty in August 2016, he hadn't lost his knack for attracting misfortune: his visit coincided with a helicopter landing on the hospital. DAVID BROWN

Brooklyn Nine-Nine

9.00pm E4

SITCOM After a prank goes wrong and no one's willing to admit blame, there's only one thing for it – a quest to find out whodunnit. Or, as Andre Braugher's strait-laced Captain Holt prefers, "Who has done it?" It scans better grammatically.

To identify the culprit, Holt calls in old friend Frank Dillman – played by Oscar-winning actor JK Simmons, in one of the series's trademark casting coups – whose sleuthing skills soon make Jake (Andy Samberg) feel insecure about his own abilities, even if the matter-of-fact Dillman is more Inspector Lewis than Hercule Poirot.

In classic Agatha Christie style, there are a few fun red herrings before we find out who was responsible... HUW FULLERTON

Gangs of London

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA There's generally a moment in any undercover cop storyline when the cop who is under cover must prove his loyalty. Not to the police, obviously (he's already done that by sacrificing family life and losing his grip on morality), but to the bad guys, who smell a rat.

For undercover uber-cop Elliot, the hero of this saga, the moment comes tonight, as henchman Mark orders him to teach a lesson to some thieves who robbed a protected jeweller's.

It's horribly violent, in a way that we've come to expect from this floridly brutal series, but it's not a patch on what's coming a scene or two later. Whatever else, Gangs of London delivers on the gore front. DAVID BUTCHER

Brassic

10.00pm Sky 1

COMEDY DRAMA Small-town reprobate Vinnie (Joseph Gilgun) is a man reborn. This fact is marked by a fantasy song and dance sequence on the streets of his Lancashire market town that, like everything else in this action comedy, is done with so much energy and gratuitous skill, you can't resist.

The plotlines are beyond daft, like a slapstick parody of a Guy Ritchie film, but a fine cast gives them a galloping comic conviction. This week's involve model trains, peacocks, 1980s dolls, a stolen 2CV and an undertaker called Abracadaver. Guest star Bill Paterson plays an ageing financial wiz whom Vinnie and co must deliver to the local drug lord. It goes as smoothly as you'd expect. DAVID BUTCHER

ANTIDOTE
Charlie Brooker is back holding a mirror to our times

Charlie Brooker's Antiviral Wipe

9.00pm BBC2

COMEDY The last time Charlie Brooker produced one of his Wipes, at the end of 2016, the headlines were dominated by Brexit and Trump, and "haunted art gallery owner" Theresa May had only been prime minister for a few months.

But with the news increasingly resembling one of his dystopian Black Mirror screenplays, it's fitting that Brooker is returning for a one-off Wipe looking at life in lockdown and dissecting the TV coverage of the crisis. For anyone wearying of comedians scrambling to "put a smile back on the nation's faces", a dose of Brooker's bleakly sardonic commentary should be a welcome antidote.

We're also promised the return of resident talking head Philomena Cunk (Diane Morgan), doubtless offering her own take on "this thing called social distancing". CHRIS HUGHES

Glow Up: Britain's Next Make-Up Star

from 7pm BBC3, iPlayer

Stacey Dooley returns with the talent contest where budding make-up artists try to prove themselves the best young MUA in Britain. The first time around, two things were clear: by "make-up" the show means a lot more than lipstick and mascara, encompassing instead a range of cosmetics and prosthetics; and under pressure, the participants are prone to entertainingly wild emotions. In this year's opener, they help a sports retailer with its Christmas ad.

KIDS' CHOICE

Blue Peter

5.30pm CBBC, iPlayer

Lindsey Russell (above), Richie Driss and Henry the dog present a very special edition of BP: they're welcoming a brand-new presenter, the show's 39th. As we find out about them, and some of their predecessors offer tips for success, the newcomer is thrown straight into a dance challenge. JACK SEALE

FILM OF THE DAY

The Man Who Fell to Earth

10.00pm Talking Pictures TV

Nicolas Roeg's unsettling 1976 sci-fi drama stars David Bowie as an alien who comes to Earth seeking a way to save his dying planet, only to be corrupted by the vices of humanity.

Out for the Count

Dracula ★★★★ 8.05pm TCM

This seminal classic from director Tod Browning is one of the most famous horror movies ever made, but by modern standards, it is rather talky, stagebound and bloodless, with most of its important chills occurring off-screen. However, it remains the most subtly romantic rendition of Bram Stoker's tale about the Transylvanian count, with Browning orchestrating the opening scenes to macabre perfection. Character actor Bela Lugosi shot to fame, recreating his starring Broadway stage role. ALAN JONES

Agent for change

Imperium ★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

Available now on iPlayer, this tense, thought-provoking thriller stars Daniel Radcliffe as a bookish FBI agent who is recruited by his superior Toni Collette to infiltrate a gang of white supremacists and earn the trust of the organisation's key players. First-time director Daniel Ragussis moves the plot forward in a way that will feel familiar if you've seen your share of undercover movies. But the film has a sense of authenticity (the story is credited to a former FBI agent) and Radcliffe is convincing in the lead. STEPHEN CARTY

Prehistory lesson

Dinosaur ★★★

Disney+

Celebrating its 20th anniversary this month, Disney's ambitious CGI outing remains an absorbing dino-venture. The plot sees a baby Iguanodon raised by lemurs until they have to flee during a fiery meteor storm. DB Sweeney and Julianna Margulies voice the dino and his friend.

MUSIC MAN
Jools Holland returns to provide us with some lockdown sounds

PICK OF THE DAY

Later... with Jools Holland 10.00pm BBC2

MUSIC You can't help feeling some intensely introspective music will emerge from this lockdown as artists are left alone with their thoughts; their emotions stripped bare. What effect will the lack of face-to-face contact have on their psyches? Is social distancing a force for creative expression or stagnation?

Hopefully, we'll discover the answers to these and more questions in this new series of Later... with Jools Holland, which has been reformatted into an isolation-friendly, podcast-style shape, based in Jools's south London studio.

Tonight's main guest is Héloïse Adelaïde Letissier, aka Christine and the Queens who, in a recent 6 Music interview, told how she's treating isolation like a spiritual retreat, where she's making music as a coping mechanism for intense feelings. Laura Marling will also be shooting us a track down the line, from her new LP Song for Our Daughter. GARY ROSE

The World's Most Scenic Railway Journeys

8.00pm Channel 5

TRAVEL There couldn't be a more pleasurable way to see South Africa than taking a 500-mile journey through the country on board a luxurious vintage train where the staff cater to your every whim. The trip starts in Pretoria and ends in Durban, having stopped off to see old British battlefields, prehistoric cave paintings and a game reserve, and the scenery is magnificent.

What's really special is the train's beautifully restored interior, which transports you back to a bygone era – it's like the setting for an Agatha Christie mystery. At a time when travel is restricted, it's a wonderful piece of escapism. JANE RACKHAM

Kermode and Mayo's Home Entertainment Service

8.30pm BBC4

ARTS New series Members of the Church of Wittertainment (as listeners to their Radio 5 Live show are called) already know how witty and erudite Mark Kermode and Simon Mayo are. The pair are now turning their gaze from the big screen to the small one, recommending various movies, boxsets and dramas currently being streamed and hearing what viewers are enjoying watching while in lockdown (this pair love a bit of audience participation).

Among the shows up for discussion are Netflix's The Eddy and BBC1's Normal People. JR

Portillo's Empire Journey

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY New series Michael Portillo is in his element, romping through the era when Britain ruled a quarter of the globe. This opener sees him, and his suitcase full of red trousers, taking a trip to the jewel in the empire's crown – India – where he chats to local historians.

But this is no rose-tinted retrospective of colonialism – it's a story of slavery, exploitation and narcotics trading. In Kolkata, Portillo explores the nefarious dealings of the East India Company, before dining like one of the Raj's big cheeses on a tiffin lunch with mulligatawny soup. It's a swift fly through an immense topic, but Portillo's enthusiasm shines through. GR

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Was I the only one to find it comical seeing luckless Will (Dean Andrews) being beaten up by Malone's thugs in Emmerdale (7pm ITV) while the kids at that school performance were singing The Land of Make Believe on the soundtrack? It had me wondering about which other recent moments of high drama could have been accompanied by hits from the Bucks Fizz back catalogue. Arthur and Archie starting the out-of-control campfire to If You Can't Stand the Heat? Two-timing Jamie wrestling with his feelings to Making Your Mind Up?

This evening, the despicable Malone (Mark Womack, left) is back in focus as we learn that there's more to his relationship history with cop-turned-vicar Harriet (Katherine Dow Blyton) than we first thought. All I'm saying is that Bucks Fizz reached No 10 in May 1983 with When We Were Young. It could potentially work a treat when the secrets of Harriet and Malone's past are revealed. DAVID BROWN

Thou Shalt Not Kill

9.00pm More4

DRAMA This is a dark tale in more ways than one because this week's Italian monastery setting is exceptionally gloomy. It's certainly no Inspector Montalbano.

A young Polish woman who cleans for the monks is found by the parish priest in her room at the parsonage. She'd been shot but, to be honest, the priest isn't great at lying so Inspector Ferro (Miriam Leone) soon realises the body had been moved there later.

The monastery – a refuge for men with serious issues – is seething with wickedness, secrets, cover-ups and barely suppressed violence, so "Thou Shalt Not Kill" is not the only Commandment that's been broken: most of the other ones get a hammering, too. JR

Big Zuu's Big Eats

10.00pm Dave

FOOD New series Big Zuu is a grime artist, a self-taught chef and a likeable front man for this knockabout cookery show. The idea is that he and his mates take their food truck to meet stand-up comedians and cook them custom-made menus for when they come off stage with the post-gig munchies.

In the first show, the lucky man is Jimmy Carr, who is genuinely bowled over by the dishes Zuu creates for him, including a vegan kebab (the "Jimmy Carr-bab") and "truffle ting with miso mushrooms". First, though, Zuu must find the truffles, so he heads out of town: "Apparently, they can be found in this place called the countryside where the streets are bare tiny." DAVID BUTCHER

Black Books

from 11.00pm C4

SITCOM *Black Book*s is up there with Spaced, The IT Crowd and Green Wing as one of C4's finest-ever comedy achievements, though it was relatively short-lived, running to just three series from 2000 to 2004.

The first is going out tonight in its entirety, which is the most fun anyone can have on a locked-down Friday night. So settle down to spend a few hours with bookshop owner Bernard Black (Dylan Moran) and his mates Fran and Manny (Tamsin Greig and Bill Bailey).

Bernard is a considerably more louche version of Basil Fawlty in that he hates the very people on whom he must rely for a living and prefers to fester alone in his shop, drinking and smoking. ALISON GRAHAM

LAST HURRAH It's the final get-together for the Dunphys and the Pritchetts

Modern Family 8.30pm Sky 1

SITCOM After 250 episodes it's time for a big goodbye. OK, so Modern Family never quite regained the genius of its early years, when it won the Emmy for best sitcom five years in a row. But it can still deliver a few belly-laughs and at least one lump-in-the-throat per episode.

There are more lumps than laughs in this final finale but several characters get great send-offs, including Phil (the peerless Ty Burrell) overestimating his bond to his father-in-law Jay (Ed O'Neill) one last time. He and wife Claire (Julie Bowen) are seeing all their kids fly the nest (Haley: "We still need to box up all our baby stuff, our linens, our book...") and turning the page on, as Claire wistfully describes it, "25 years of uninterrupted crazy".

As Mitch (Jesse Tyler Ferguson) and Cam (Eric Stonestreet) head off to the backwoods of Missouri, there are tearful hugs, then more hugs, then more. DAVID BUTCHER

STREAMING CHOICE

The best of streaming and catch-up

Amazon Prime

Viewers of the Netflix drama Narcos: Mexico will already be familiar with the fate of DEA agent Kiki Camarena, played on that show by Michael Pena. Now here's a four-part documentary on the case, which uses new interviews to re-examine the story of a law enforcer who, having struck a heavy blow against a powerful Mexican drug cartel, paid for his success with his life. As well as the details of Camarena's career and grisly demise, the programme looks at the CIA's possible involvement in his murder.

KIDS' CHOICE

Apollo's Tall Tales

3.30, 3.45pm Tiny Pop (Sky 617, Virgin 737), NowTV

Two new episodes of the animation about a plucky young cricket who's always helping out his garden friends. First, a butterfly needs training to improve its camouflage; then a bee is mistaken for a fortune teller. Apollo soon comes to their rescue. JACK SEALE

P FILM OF THE DAY

Pawn Sacrifice

11.20pm BBC2

One of the biggest battles of the Cold War was fought in 1972... between US chess prodigy Bobby Fischer (Tobey Maguire) and Soviet grandmaster Boris Spassky (Liev Schreiber). A handsome drama written by Peaky Blinders creator Steven Knight. See page 31

The past is a strange place

The Sense of an Ending ★★★

BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

A legal tussle over a bequest from an old friend stirs up unfinished business for Jim Broadbent's 70-something divorcee in this adaptation of Julian Barnes's Booker Prize winner, which recently premiered on BBC2. Director Ritesh Batra (The Lunchbox) delivers a film that's a contemplative reflection on our emotional lives, and the cast is impeccable, with Charlotte Rampling as Broadbent's old flame and Harriet Walter as the sceptical ex-wife. TREVOR JOHNSTON

Angel of death

P Alita: Battle Angel ★★ 8.00pm Sky Premiere

Adapted from a Japanese manga series, this dystopian action adventure sees Rosa Salazar's digitally-enhanced cyborg reconnecting with her pre-programmed fighting skills before entering the "Motorball" – the 26th century's deadly entertainment draw. Christoph Waltz supplies some humanity as a futuristic Geppetto-type father figure, but director Robert Rodriguez's film gets lost amid a surfeit of whizzy action highlights – and its relish for graphic violence makes it wholly unsuitable for younger children. TJ

Fright night

Amazon Prime

Co-written by Guillermo del Toro, this nicely retro horror anthology sees a bunch of Halloween teens battling such hoary tropes as a living scarecrow, a spider invasion and self-assembling body parts. It doesn't quite fulfil its early promise, but it's a slickly decent frightfest. DAVE ALDRIDGE

Michael Frayn's Magic Mobile
Wednesday 11.30am Radio 4

OUR VIDEO CALL is a disaster and Michael Frayn is delighted. "I sent you what were, on the face of it, absolutely fool-proof instructions by email," he says happily. "And you couldn't do it!" It's true, I've been having great trouble connecting with the author, dramatist, journalist and occasional philosopher, who is presently sitting in the study of his west London home. "And then," Frayn laughs, "It suddenly started working, but we don't know why!"

This is just the sort of thing that happens in Magic Mobile, Frayn's new radio series of short "monologues, dialogues and polylogues" that explore the misunderstandings, obfuscations and annoyances encountered in everyday life. Minor stuff, perhaps, but Frayn, whose work includes the ever-popular stage farce-about-a-farce, Noises Off, numerous novels including the Booker-shortlisted Headlong, and the 2014 collection of short-stories-cum-plays Matchbox Theatre, is a master of the ironic twist.

In one Magic Mobile story, for instance, it is the computer that loses its temper with the clumsy-fingered man at the keyboard – not vice versa.

Frayn is married to the writer Claire Tomalin, known for her literary biographies of figures including Charles Dickens and Samuel Pepys. She comes into the room to ask Frayn what he's doing. "I'm trying to talk to the Radio Times," he laughs again, still amused by our difficulties. "You see," he tells me, "I write about the inevitable absurdity of human behaviour. If things like video calls can go wrong, they will."

So, despite the title, Magic Mobile is not based on the delights of Android or iPhone but what Frayn calls a "no-fuss, non-digital entertainment system", that is, the book of the same name published this month. White-haired and trim at 86, Frayn has good reason to dislike technology. "The mobile phone has largely shot down traditional farce-plotting completely," he says. "In any situation now someone can just phone someone up and find out what's happening."

The first technology he remembers well is the radio. "If you were growing up during the Second World War, BBC radio was an absolutely vital part of your life," he says. "We listened to all the news broadcasts and a tremendous amount of entertainment. A lot of music-hall artists used to do radio broadcasts. There was a wonderful man called Robb Wilton, a gloomy northerner whose monologues all started with: 'The day war broke out…' It was a great national and unifying factor."

'We were the lucky generation and now the luck's run out'

Now in the latter stages of a literary career that began with a collection of his Guardian columns in 1962, Frayn is returning to radio, with the help of long-time collaborator Martin Jarvis. As well as Jarvis, the Magic Mobile cast includes Joanna Lumley, Roger Allam, Alfred Molina, Susannah Fielding and David Suchet.

Suchet plays God in two skits. In one, God gives a radio interview; in the other he appears to a Church of England vicar, much to the vicar's surprise. "I find God a great literary character," says Frayn. "He has a terrible temper and he sulks. There's a wonderful bit in the Bible where he tells David to slaughter all women and children, and David doesn't. God is so cross, he won't speak to David for another couple of weeks."

As played by Suchet, God reveals himself to be a understated middle-class Englishman. "I'm sure God has all the middle-class virtues," says Frayn, of whom the same could be said.

He was born in the London suburbs and has long been the darling of what some call the liberal metropolitan elite. "I can quite see why people outside London resent the idea of some sort of intellectual in London telling them what to do," says Frayn, whose father was an asbestos salesman. "I did come from a lower-middle-class background and I suppose I am now somewhere in the middle of the middle classes. But what can you do?"

The series was recorded before the coronavirus crisis and Frayn, although in the at-risk age group, is quite enjoying the lockdown. "I feel bad about this," he says. "It's killing a lot of people, it's destroying the lives of a lot of other people. If you work at home normally and you can go on working at home, life doesn't change all that much." He remains rueful about the disproportionate effect the crisis is having on older people. "We were the lucky generation because we were too young to serve in the Second World War," he says. "Then we had this really amazing new world to grow up in, it was possible to get educated, to have medical services and so forth. That was a terrific privilege. Now the luck seems to have run out, but for other people, the coronavirus situation is vastly worse than it is for me. We've got a garden to sit in. We go for walks. My wife and I can entertain ourselves with rows."

Is he going to write about the lockdown? "Some people have asked me to write sketches," he says. "It's very difficult to write about. Maybe suddenly some idea about the situation will come, it hasn't so far."

With the world in chaos, haven't human cock-ups become a much more serious subject? Is it, perhaps, time to put whimsy away and get angry? "You're supposed to be angry," he says. "People don't think you're serious if you're not angry about things, and there are a lot of things that are really terrible in the world, and I worry about them. But there are also a lot of ridiculous things and you can't help noticing them and laughing about them. Some things about the world are funny." MICHAEL HODGES

PICK OF THE WEEK

Girl with a Pearl Earring
Mon-Fri 10.45am/7.45pm Radio 4

Johannes Vermeer's 1665 painting, Girl with a Pearl Earring, is surrounded by so much marvel and mystery over its beautiful-but-unknown sitter that it's popularly known as "the Mona Lisa of the North".

The American novelist Tracy Chevalier imagined a life for this anonymous young woman that became a bestseller and was later adapted as a film starring Scarlett Johansson and Colin Firth. Now it gets its first radio adaptation, with Libby Mai, a second-year student at London's Royal Central School of Speech and Drama, making her BBC debut as Griet, the servant-girl-cum-model.

Mai joins an experienced cast that includes Eleanor Bron as Vermeer's worldly-wise mother-in-law and Hattie Morahan (below) as the artist's jealous wife.

The attention to historical detail is impressive, from the making of 17th-century paints to an outbreak of the plague. But the heart of the matter is Griet's discovery of the politics of sexual power – both in her own exploitation by men, and her realisation that beauty holds its own strengths.

AMBRIDGE DIARY

The Archers this week...

The theme for this week's archive repeats is the importance of homes and farms, and the episodes don't come timelier than the one that's being rebroadcast on Sunday, which finds Brookfield in lockdown. Back in 2001, though, the cause wasn't coronavirus but an outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease.

Wednesday's drama also feels fitting, as it has echoes of this year's other big news story: the floods. In Ambridge, of course, the banks of the Am burst in 2015 – and there were early signs that Rob Titchener was up to no good. And tears were shed on Tuesday when, in a poignant highlight from 2000, the Grundys were evicted from Grange Farm. DAVID BROWN

Walk this way

If you're yearning for the joy of a ramble, these audio adventures will take you there...

In retirement, my father-in-law would walk a mile every morning, just to look to the sea. In the evening he would return, presumably to check it was still there. Back then I was young and foolish and couldn't understand why anyone would want to do this. Now, I can't imagine anything I'd rather do. In the present situation, I fancy I'm not the only one yearning for space, the open road, the feeling of the wind on my face, the joy of a ramble with, in the words of Chuck Berry, no particular place to go. While that remains off the table, we could all do worse than put on our headphones and try some of these podcasts and on-demand programmes about Walking in the Great Indoors.

HOW TO FIND A PODCAST Simply type the name of the podcast you are looking for into Google and listen on your computer. Most people, however, listen to podcasts on smartphones via apps such as BBC Sounds, Apple Podcasts, Stitcher or Acast. If there isn't already a podcast app on your phone, you can download a free one in seconds. Then search within the app for the podcast you want and "subscribe" to it. It won't cost you anything, and new episodes will turn up in your feed as they are published, which you can then play at your leisure.

TAKE A HIKE
Enjoy a ramble with Clare Balding

Ramblings

This is the regular Radio 4 programme in which Clare Balding steps out with people who have something in common other than the walk. The archive (239 episodes) has her doing Glastonbury Tor with druids, Chorlton Water Park with LGBT ramblers and traversing the Malverns with an interfaith group. Balding gets them to talk about what drew them together and how, in so many cases, their personal stresses have been relieved by the simple act of putting one foot in front of another.

The WALKING podcast

Nature writer Jon Mooallem records the walks he takes through tranquil woodlands near his home in the Pacific Northwest of the United States. Each one starts with the sound of his marching feet and continues in the same way, the insistent rhythm of his march only occasionally punctuated by the sound of birds singing, cars going past and passers-by saying "hello". It is, believe it or not, strangely soothing.

Field Recordings

Rain forests in Sri Lanka, traffic in a small town in Japan, people saying "sorry" during a tennis match in Dorset, a thunderstorm in rural Ireland, dawn chorus in Essex, applause for frontline workers from Paris... All this and more can be found in this new podcast, bringing together the work of sound recordists all over the world. The result provides the blessed sensation of travelling somewhere in your head, while continuing to stare at the same four walls.

Dickens Audio Tour

One of the joys of reading Charles Dickens is that it opens up another London, the one whose streets he walked, whose ancient places provided the raw clay from which his stories were shaped, whose places still retain their ancient purposes. This excellent series of five walking tours of Dickens's city were done by The Guardian ten years ago to mark his 200th anniversary but they, and their accompanying maps, are still there on the paper's website for you to download and enjoy.

London Walks

These days Londoners may be rueing the fact that they always meant to take one of the many guided walks that explore the dazzling variety of the metropolis. Thanks to this podcast you can decide how you're going to rectify this when the all-clear sounds: will it be Wodehouse's London, Jewish London, Legal London, Hidden London or a London yet to be dreamed up? Here on this podcast is where the expert guides get to whet your appetite so that you're ready when the lights come on all over the world.

The Art Of....

Galleries and museums are increasingly aware of the need to reach out to people who can't be visitors. The Tate galleries have this series of podcasts which use their works as a jumping-off point. Here Dolly Alderton looks at the Thames in art, Emma Gannon explores Barbara Hepworth's St Ives and, best of all, in The Art of Slow Looking, Bumi Thomas tells us how to get more out of the experience of galleries by looking at fewer paintings for longer.

Mother Nature's mysteries

And the joys of Gardeners' Question Time...

All this spring sunshine has taken me outside to what I laughably call my garden. I have no expertise, save for my brief spell on a gardening phone-in on local radio. "Hello Mavis! What's that? You have a dahlia dilemma... a petunia problem... or is it slugs again?" The show's splendid host resembled a garden gnome. He had a great trick when playing for time on-air. When stumped by a caller, he'd always reply, "Ah, well, Mavis. The answer's in the soil."

The gnome sprang to mind as I was out doing my window boxes. Finding geraniums in lockdown is like scoring crack cocaine. My shady dealer at the local petrol station somehow sourced a tray or two. The perky pots, winking at me, perched next to the screen-wash and log nets. I suspect they'd been kidnapped from B&Q on the North Circular and trafficked by the bedding plant mafia, under cover of darkness, to the mean streets behind Broadcasting House.

Like cooking, gardening is said to be solace for the soul. In my case, my rolling acres consist of five window boxes and a back yard with a ten-foot high wall. I've lived here for nearly 20 years and for the first time, marooned at home by lockdown,

'Finding geraniums in lockdown is like scoring cocaine'

I decided to clean it up and replant. I pointed the pressure washer at the stone paving, blasting soil, moss and memories straight back into my face.

Next, I trained my nozzle upwards on the drainpipe. At once, all the paint flew off the plastic guttering above, raining glossy snowflakes down on my head. This is what lockdown does to a man – it encourages him to over-reach himself, with disastrous consequences. Pressure washers, like mandolins in the kitchen, should require a driving licence, with a compulsory theory test.

When the snow storm passed, I could see that last year's flowers looked miserable, though miraculously some had clung on to some semblance of life. How come?! Then I realised. The answer's in the soil! Both profound and useless. It's the perfect reply, and yet it means nothing at all of use. The answer is there in the soil, if only we knew what to look for.

Thus, Mother Nature reveals her mysteries. One of which is, why do plants and potting-on make compelling radio? Though I have never owned so much as a rhododendron, Radio 4's Gardeners' Question Time and Terry Walton reporting from his allotment on Radio 2's Jeremy Vine show have, for years, been my guilty pleasures.

In my fantasy world, TV's Question Time would be conducted like radio's GQT. I want civility, I want humility. But above all I don't want everyone thinking they've got the answer. "I'm sorry to ask the panel, but I just can't get rid of the leaf mould on my begonias. What am I doing wrong?" Over on Question Time, everyone SHOUTS ALL THE TIME AND IS ALWAYS RIGHT!

Nature is a great leveller. Plants have no respect for your opinions. Anyone can garden badly. Great gardeners learn their craft the hard way. They delight in saving a tiny sprig or taking a cutting, in over-wintering a hardy perennial or hardening off tender shoots.

My friend Wayne has invented an ethical slug repellent. The trick is Vaseline, coffee grains and something else, which is top secret. It sounds like a miracle. But, I tell him, he can't fool me. There are never any secrets in the garden. Ultimately, the answer's in the soil.

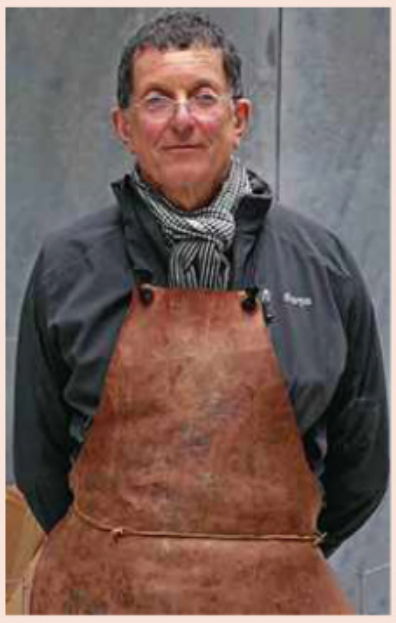
Today's Choices



The Poet Laureate Has Gone to his Shed

7.15pm Radio 4

This series really should be renamed The Poet Laureate Has Gone to His Shoffice. There's a warming stove inside Simon Armitage's garden workspace, along with comfy chairs and the poet's famous supplies of Amontillado sherry. "We've got the cream, we've got the fino," he tells the guest he has invited inside for this episode, Angel of the North creator Antony Gormley (above). They sound like a pair of dithering old blokes – "Do you want a little nip now?" "Why not?" "That's just the job." But then they step up a gear and Gormley ranges nimbly across themes of collective creativity, Lucian Freud and environmental responsibility. FIONA HUGHES

Drama: The Voyage of the St Louis

2.45pm Radio 4

Daniel Kehlmann's play, unmissably adapted by Tom Stoppard, tells the story of how some 900 Jewish refugees set sail from Hamburg in 1939 hoping to enter the US via Cuba, before their ship was turned away from Havana. The voices put to the names here make you sit up and listen, as an episode of antisemitism and political chicanery plays out. FIONA HUGHES

Spitfire: The People's Plane

6.30am/11.30pm
BBC World Service

It might be one of the most famous aircraft that ever flew, but how much do you know about the Spitfire? As we celebrate the 75th anniversary of VE Day, this new 10-part series deconstructs the story of the iconic plane piece by piece, beginning with the bombing of a Southampton factory that almost stopped production in its tracks. There's the same attention to detail that made 13 Minutes to the Moon such a joy, similarly acknowledging the efforts of the ordinary people who launched the aircraft into the history books. TOM GOULDING

Michael Berkeley's willing interviewee is novelist and journalist Andrew O'Hagan. Like the subjects O'Hagan has written about, which include Lena Zavaroni, Marilyn Monroe's dog and Julian Assange, his musical choices are a lovely mix – from the Meditation from Massenet's Thais, which gave the boy from working-class Ayshire the idea of joining the Scottish Ballet School, to American singer June Christy's Something Cool, which made him think of his mother as a young woman, off for a night out in Glasgow. FIONA HUGHES

7.30 Drama on 3: Unicorns, Almost Owen Sheers's 2018 one-man play starring Dan Krikler as Welsh playwright, poet and novelist Keith Douglas (1920–44), from his childhood through four engagements to his fighting in the Western desert, his accelerated education as a poet and his early death three days after the Normandy D-Day landings. It is the story of Douglas's Faustian pact with a war that would nurture his unique poetic voice before abruptly snatching it away. It is also the story of his desperate race to see his poems in print before his time on earth ran out. Ted Hughes, who cited Douglas as an important influence, wrote the introduction to Douglas's The Complete Poems.

11.00 A History of Black Classical Music New series. 1/3. The Blacke Trumpeter Jamaican-born composer Eleanor Alberga foregrounds the contribution that black composers have made to Western classical music. She begins with John Blanke, a court trumpeter to Henry VII, commissioned by the king to mark the birth of his son Henry in 1511. The programme considers the position of black people within the European population since that time, with particular attention to composers in England and France from the 18th century. This first programme ends with a look at the impact of black composers on Dvorak during his visit to America the 1890s. Featuring works by Meude-Monpas, Saint-Georges, Charles-Richard Lambert, Dédé, Lafitte, Burleigh, Will Marion Cook, Dett and others.

Today's Choices

The New Anatomy of Melancholy
1.45pm Radio 4

"There is no greater cause of melancholy than idleness, no better cure than busy-ness." So said Robert Burton in his ground-breaking 1621 work The Anatomy of Melancholy, and a moment of enforced mass idleness is a good one for the writer Amy Liptrot (above) to update the ideas enshrined in what she calls a prototype self-help book. Liptrot is a recovering alcoholic, but she looks more out than in, exploring such diverse aspects of the condition as poverty and want, a love of learning, and divine music. SIMON O'HAGAN

Happy Little Trees
8.30pm Radio 4

Bob Ross used to say there are no mistakes, just happy little accidents. It's a mantra that sums up the late artist, whose soothing landscape painting has, thanks to Netflix, garnered him a cult following among millennials decades after his shows first aired on PBS. With the Joy of Painting now a staple of the BBC schedule, 25-year-old Jack Taylor asks what it is that makes Ross so popular. TOM GOULDING

10.45 The Essay: Folk@Home
1/5. At Home with Greg Russell. In this period of social distancing, how is music helping us to keep connected to the things that matter? With its deep links to people, communities, land, nature and history, folk song has much to offer at this point. From her garage studio in Wiltshire, Verity Sharp calls up musicians who are rooted in traditional music and asks them to sing something that has been resonating with them during lockdown. She starts with Greg Russell, who with music partner Ciaran Alagar won the BBC Radio 2 Young Folk award in 2013.

Today's Choices

The Pebble in Your Pocket

11.00am Radio 4

I'm imagining producer Emma Walker pitching a programme about pebbles: "Granted, we've all picked one off the beach," says the commissioning editor, "but can you get 27 minutes out of this?" Surprise surprise. Yes. To sculptor Barbara Hepworth a pebble, millions of years in creation, was a "universal force." Jim Ede, who created a spiral of pebbles at his Kettle's Yard gallery in Cambridge, said, "You find a perfect pebble only once in a generation." Pebbles also connect to the supernatural and to healing – and don't think that Walker has forgotten the much-maligned pebble-dashed wall, because she hasn't. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3

"As you'll never hear the thing again, my boy, why not throw in a couple of brass bands?" So Thomas Beecham advised William Walton before the 1931 premiere of Belshazzar's Feast. It became one of the most popular pieces in the choral repertoire. Tonight, in a reversal of transatlantic stereotypes, Walton's Biblical belter is prefaced by the quiet simplicity and limpid lyricism of Aaron Copland's Appalachian Spring and Samuel Barber's Violin Concerto. MARK PAPPENHEIM

2.15 Drama: Holbein's Skull
Martin Wade's comic drama about art, relationships and sexuality, set in the London of a few hundred years ago. Hans Holbein is about to begin work on his painting The Ambassadors, the subjects of which are Jean de Dinteville and Georges de Selve. Margery Horsman, a lady-in-waiting to Anne Boleyn, takes a shine to Jean and is always at the ready with a good idea. Jean is in England to try and persuade King Henry that his actions regarding Anne Boleyn will jeopardise relations with France but by the time he arrives in London this is diplomatic mission impossible. Holbein has an intriguing suggestion, but things don't quite go to plan.

Today's Choices

Where To, Mate?

11.00pm Radio 4

Conversations between taxi drivers and their passengers exist in their own sealed-off realm, and like the cab itself could go in any direction. This series of semi-improvised comic dramas by Jason Wingard captures them in all their absurdism, casting the listener in the role of eavesdropper, and showcasing some tremendous acting talent from the north-west, which is where the series is set. It's a kind of Bunk Bed on the move, with strangers instead of room-mates. SIMON O'HAGAN

What's Funny About...

10.30pm Radio 4 Extra

In this rebooted series, first heard on Radio 4 but expanded for a run on Radio 4 Extra, TV powerhouses Peter Fincham and Jon Plowman invite people in the business to examine the winning comedy formula – if such a thing exists. Their first guests are Dawn French and Richard Curtis, who talk about the joy of making The Vicar of Dibley. Don't miss Dawn's tale of how she possibly broke the law by delivering Grace at a dinner in exchange for tickets on Concorde. JANE ANDERSON

10.00 Free Thinking
A Feminist Take on Medieval History. How does Chaucer write about rape and consent? What links Kim Kardashian West and Margery Kempe, the English Christian mystic and mother of 14 who wrote about her religious visions? Alicia Spencer-Hall, Elizabeth Robertson and New Generation Thinker Hetta Howes join Shahidha Bari to discuss the medieval period as seen through a feminist lens.
10.45 The Essay: Folk@Home
3/5.* At Home with Nathaniel Mann. From her garage studio in Wiltshire, Verity Sharp calls up musicians who are rooted in traditional music and asks them to sing something that has been resonating with them during lockdown. She continues with performer, composer, sound artist and sound designer Nathaniel Mann, co-founder of experimental trio Dead Rat Orchestra. He discusses an incident on his allotment that leaves him up a pear tree without a ladder, triggering a memory of his favourite folk song.

3/5. By Emily Brand. Today: the story of Lord Byron's great aunt Isabella whose glittering life as Countess of Carlisle and chatelaine of Castle Howard disintegrated into adultery, elopement, scandal and debt. A clever and attractive woman, at 21 Isabella married the fantastically wealthy 48-year-old Henry, Earl of Carlisle, who was already a grandfather. Despite rumours of Isabella's flirtations, it was a happy marriage, but after Henry's death, Isabella's turbulent love life and poor judgement led her into a life of spiralling debt and infamy in Britain, France and Italy. Read by Susannah Harker. For details see Mon Rptd 12.30am

Art of Now: Berlin's Nightlife

11.30am Radio 4

It's late morning, the dregs of elevenses, and you're washing the same mug a third time when suddenly Radio 4 has you in Berlin clubland – a refreshing window to the continent (just as certain doors are being shut). Soft-spoken, 65-year-old Dimitri Hegemann is discussing Tresor, the post-Wall techno club he co-founded in 1991. Its current incarnation is less hardcore than the original, but it remains a hotspot in a nightlife which in 2018 pumped €1.5 billion into Berlin's economy. The city protects its countercultural assets, and DJ Emily Dust (above) sees steps being taken – on and off the dance floor – to afford the scene status along the lines of opera and art. DAVID OPPEDISANO

Down the Line: Lockdown Special

11.00pm Radio 4

This coronavirus one-off, the first episode from the Down the Line team for seven years, was still in the edit as we went to press. All concerned were cagey about its content. "Breathe a sigh of relief, stop baking and let Gary Bellamy guide us out of the labyrinth of lockdown towards a brighter future," is all we're told. Surely Humphrey Milner and Graham Downs, both of whom must have underlying health conditions, will feature in the spoof phone-in. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

FRIDAY Radio

Today's Choices

Radio 3 in Concert
7.30pm Radio 3

As if he didn't have sufficient strings to his bow already, the much-loved cellist, broadcaster, author and educator Steven Isserlis (above) has been responding to the global cancellation of concert life by taking to Twitter to offer a daily musical recommendation, introduced with a winning mix of profound love, lightly etched insights and deep emotion, tinged with a perhaps inevitable air of "sad clown" melancholy. The same melancholic mood underscores Elgar's elegiac Cello Concerto, which Isserlis can be heard playing tonight in an RPO performance recorded two years ago at London's Royal Festival Hall. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Pandemic 1918
11.00am Radio 4

Virologist John Oxford's series must be one of the most comprehensive accounts of the world's worst pandemic. So-called Spanish flu (H1N1 had no specific relevance to Spain) probably killed 50 million of the 500 million people it infected between 1918 and 1919. Symptoms resembled those of Covid-19 – with a dreadful exception: around half of those who died were under 40. Oxford looks at how the plague came in waves, how authorities reacted, and finally the long-term effects. Essential listening. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

RT New series. 1/3. Origins, Symptoms and Spread. The so-called "Spanish flu" of 1918-19 is estimated to have killed more than 50 million people of the 500 million it infected. Professor John Oxford looks at the much debated origins of the H1N1 strain of flu. There are three theories – firstly it incubated in an army camp in the United States, secondly it originated from China, and thirdly that it probably began a couple of years earlier inside a military camp near the Western front in France. Oxford also looks at the symptoms, some of them remarkably similar to the ones we see today with coronavirus.

2.15 Drama: The Life Cycle of Ospreys
It's 400 years since ospreys have bred in the Peak District, and David takes his voluntary job of guarding the eggs very seriously. But he's none too happy about the arrival of Louise, his clueless new volunteer, who's only there under duress. Jane Wainwright's play stars Henry Goodman as David and Sally Messham as Louise. Wainwright is from Derbyshire; her debut play for Radio 4 was Wide Open Spaces, which aired in 2018 and was a bittersweet drama about an agoraphobic attempting to travel across London. Producer Pauline Harris

11.30 50 More Things That Made the Modern Economy
3/50. The Gyroscope. When HMS Victory (not Nelson's ship) sank in 1744, with it went an inventor named John Serson and a device he'd dreamed up. He called it the "whirling speculum", but we now know the basic idea as a gyroscope. Serson thought it could help sailors navigate when they couldn't see the horizon. Nowadays gyroscopes are tiny and, as Tim Harford describes, they are used to guide everything from submarines to satellites, from rovers on Mars to mobile phones. They are also integral to drones – a technology that some believe could transform how we do our shopping. But for that, they'll need to work in all weathers.

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Jo Good BBC Radio London

Age 65
Current job Presents the afternoon show (weekdays, 1.30-5pm) on BBC Radio London.

How has your show adapted to the Covid-19 crisis? "Everything has shifted in its own way. When I get to work, I think 'How will we make it different today?' But people own the show. We just listen to how to play it – you can judge the mood of the city. We keep the same framework, but it takes its own direction. I say 'This is how I'm feeling, how are you feeling?' We have daily rants – about joggers, cyclists, people walking too close. And then we say 'No more moaning now, let's just get on with it!'

I'm really proud of my new daily meditation slot at 4pm. People say it's lovely to just shut down and focus. We also play upbeat music and try to move around a bit. It's just easy exercise – marching on the spot and a few star jumps! We also have a slot where listeners overseas tell us what they can hear and see from their front doors – and we go there in our imagination.

The world has changed, it's shifted. There's all this extraordinary altruism. We are helping others, and gaining nothing for ourselves. I do think there's a lot of good that's going to come out of this. When we're clapping for carers, we meet the people who live near us for the first time. And I still see my postie every day – we are learning to appreciate what people do in life."

'Everything has shifted in its own way'

Best moments "Our daily on-air meditation is truly my finest hour! We do meditations to stop us panicking when we wake at 3am, meditations to calm us, lung-strengthening meditation. Something for everyone. Things like stargazing, listening to the birds, exercise – these things pull everyone together. It makes you feel part of a community. And there is so much birdsong! The simple everyday is so important right now."

Worst moments "Like everyone, my emotions come in waves. People email me about their shaky moments, and by the time I've read out a few, I'm very emotional. And then there's the technology – contributors are all on Facetime and Zoom, and just as they're getting to the nub of the interview, the link goes down!"

Off air "I live in a studio flat in the centre of London with my British bulldog, Matilda. My main concern, when I wake at 3am worrying, is my family. And my standards are definitely slipping – I'm sitting here, with my grey roots showing, getting a real 'broadcaster's bum'!

Coping skills "I'm having to learn patience – on air and in my private life. You'll have good days and bad days. Just don't think ahead. Don't panic. Get up and go for a walk. Do some breathing or relaxation exercises. Or dance around your chair!" CAROLINE MEYER

BBC Radio Scotland

Face behind the voice

Jo Good BBC Radio London

Age 65
Current job Presents the afternoon show (weekdays, 1.30-5pm) on BBC Radio London.

How has your show adapted to the Covid-19 crisis? "Everything has shifted in its own way. When I get to work, I think 'How will we make it different today?' But people own the show. We just listen to how to play it – you can judge the mood of the city. We keep the same framework, but it takes its own direction. I say 'This is how I'm feeling, how are you feeling?' We have daily rants – about joggers, cyclists, people walking too close. And then we say 'No more moaning now, let's just get on with it!'

I'm really proud of my new daily meditation slot at 4pm. People say it's lovely to just shut down and focus. We also play upbeat music and try to move around a bit. It's just easy exercise – marching on the spot and a few star jumps! We also have a slot where listeners overseas tell us what they can hear and see from their front doors – and we go there in our imagination.

The world has changed, it's shifted. There's all this extraordinary altruism. We are helping others, and gaining nothing for ourselves. I do think there's a lot of good that's going to come out of this. When we're clapping for carers, we meet the people who live near us for the first time. And I still see my postie every day – we are learning to appreciate what people do in life."

> 'Everything has shifted in its own way'

Best moments "Our daily on-air meditation is truly my finest hour! We do meditations to stop us panicking when we wake at 3am, meditations to calm us, lung-strengthening meditation. Something for everyone. Things like stargazing, listening to the birds, exercise – these things pull everyone together. It makes you feel part of a community. And there is so much birdsong! The simple everyday is so important right now."

Worst moments "Like everyone, my emotions come in waves. People email me about their shaky moments, and by the time I've read out a few, I'm very emotional. And then there's the technology – contributors are all on Facetime and Zoom, and just as they're getting to the nub of the interview, the link goes down!"

Off air "I live in a studio flat in the centre of London with my British bulldog, Matilda. My main concern, when I wake at 3am worrying, is my family. And my standards are definitely slipping – I'm sitting here, with my grey roots showing, getting a real 'broadcaster's bum'!

Coping skills "I'm having to learn patience – on air and in my private life. You'll have good days and bad days. Just don't think ahead. Don't panic. Get up and go for a walk. Do some breathing or relaxation exercises. Or dance around your chair!" CAROLINE MEYER

6.00am Our Lives with Michelle McManus
Langholm is the chilli capital of Scotland, if not the UK, and as Michelle McManus discovers this week, things are getting seriously hot down in the Borders thanks to chilli enthusiast Mark Hodgson. Plus Michelle hears from Dominique who had to leave her native South Africa to pursue her passion to be a vet and has now landed in the Highlands where she's doing the job she always dreamed of. Aria speaks to Michelle about her journey to become Miss Transgender UK 2019. Plus generous helping of chicken to keep the imagination well fed throughout the half hour.

Face behind the voice

Jo Good BBC Radio London

Age 65
Current job Presents the afternoon show (weekdays, 1.30-5pm) on BBC Radio London.

How has your show adapted to the Covid-19 crisis? "Everything has shifted in its own way. When I get to work, I think 'How will we make it different today?' But people own the show. We just listen to how to play it – you can judge the mood of the city. We keep the same framework, but it takes its own direction. I say 'This is how I'm feeling, how are you feeling?' We have daily rants – about joggers, cyclists, people walking too close. And then we say 'No more moaning now, let's just get on with it!'

I'm really proud of my new daily meditation slot at 4pm. People say it's lovely to just shut down and focus. We also play upbeat music and try to move around a bit. It's just easy exercise – marching on the spot and a few star jumps! We also have a slot where listeners overseas tell us what they can hear and see from their front doors – and we go there in our imagination.

The world has changed, it's shifted. There's all this extraordinary altruism. We are helping others, and gaining nothing for ourselves. I do think there's a lot of good that's going to come out of this. When we're clapping for carers, we meet the people who live near us for the first time. And I still see my postie every day – we are learning to appreciate what people do in life."

'Everything has shifted in its own way'

Best moments "Our daily on-air meditation is truly my finest hour! We do meditations to stop us panicking when we wake at 3am, meditations to calm us, lung-strengthening meditation. Something for everyone. Things like stargazing, listening to the birds, exercise – these things pull everyone together. It makes you feel part of a community. And there is so much birdsong! The simple everyday is so important right now."

Worst moments "Like everyone, my emotions come in waves. People email me about their shaky moments, and by the time I've read out a few, I'm very emotional. And then there's the technology – contributors are all on Facetime and Zoom, and just as they're getting to the nub of the interview, the link goes down!"

Off air "I live in a studio flat in the centre of London with my British bulldog, Matilda. My main concern, when I wake at 3am worrying, is my family. And my standards are definitely slipping – I'm sitting here, with my grey roots showing, getting a real 'broadcaster's bum'!

Coping skills "I'm having to learn patience – on air and in my private life. You'll have good days and bad days. Just don't think ahead. Don't panic. Get up and go for a walk. Do some breathing or relaxation exercises. Or dance around your chair!" CAROLINE MEYER

It's just easy exercise – marching on the spot and a few star jumps! We also have a slot where listeners overseas tell us what they can hear and see from their front doors – and we go there in our imagination.

The world has changed, it's shifted. There's all this extraordinary altruism. We are helping others, and gaining nothing for ourselves. I do think there's a lot of good that's going to come out of this. When we're clapping for carers, we meet the people who live near us for the first time. And I still see my postie every day – we are learning to appreciate what people do in life."

'Everything has shifted in its own way'

Best moments "Our daily on-air meditation is truly my finest hour! We do meditations to stop us panicking when we wake at 3am, meditations to calm us, lung-strengthening meditation. Something for everyone. Things like stargazing, listening to the birds, exercise – these things pull everyone together. It makes you feel part of a community. And there is so much birdsong! The simple everyday is so important right now."

Worst moments "Like everyone, my emotions come in waves. People email me about their shaky moments, and by the time I've read out a few, I'm very emotional. And then there's the technology – contributors are all on Facetime and Zoom, and just as they're getting to the nub of the interview, the link goes down!"

Off air "I live in a studio flat in the centre of London with my British bulldog, Matilda. My main concern, when I wake at 3am worrying, is my family. And my standards are definitely slipping – I'm sitting here, with my grey roots showing, getting a real 'broadcaster's bum'!

Coping skills "I'm having to learn patience – on air and in my private life. You'll have good days and bad days. Just don't think ahead. Don't panic. Get up and go for a walk. Do some breathing or relaxation exercises. Or dance around your chair!" CAROLINE MEYER

Where there is a will...

Don't let social distancing put you off seeing a solicitor to make a will, says Paul Lewis

AT A TIME of great uncertainty, one of the most loving things you can do for your close relatives is to make a will. If you don't make one before you die – and I hope that will be many years away – then those you love and care for will not necessarily get the share of your money, home and property that you intend.

Dying without a will – intestate, as it's called – is subject to strict legal rules about who gets what. The details are complex and differ in different parts of the UK.

Your spouse or civil partner comes first, your children next, then other relatives in order. But even a spouse or children won't necessarily get everything, depending on what your estate is worth. Only by making a will can you ensure who gets what. And please be aware that if you live with someone who is not your spouse or civil partner, they will get nothing if you haven't made a will.

Lawyers make a lot of money out of relatives who contest badly drawn wills, so do not do it yourself. Go to a lawyer. They are subject to strict rules that protect you.

You also decide who will deal with your affairs after you die – these are the executors and they should be people you trust, and they can also be beneficiaries. You can name a bank or a lawyer as executors, but they will charge your heirs hefty fees.

In England and Wales a will must be signed by you and witnessed by two adults who are not beneficiaries. In Scotland, you must sign every page and only need one witness. Witnesses do not read the will, they just sign to say they have seen you sign it. At a time of social distancing this can be done through glass or at a safe distance. Use your own pen and wear gloves. Your solicitor will make sure it is done safely and legally.

WORRIED ABOUT THE VALUE OF THE POUND?

A market order is one of the tools that helps you make the most of your money overseas.

If you have international payments to make, you may wish to consider a tool called a market order. This allows you to specify a particular rate and if and when that rate is reached, your funds are automatically transferred. There are no guarantees with this approach because it relies on the movements of the market. You can, however, pair this with a stop-loss order which specifies a minimum acceptable rate that suits your budget to protect against losses if the pound drops further.

Book of the Week:
The Fall of the House of Byron
Monday–Friday 9.45am (FM), 12.30am Radio 4

Outrageous aristocrats

Lord Byron was a poet, rake and adventurer – but his ancestors were even more reckless, reveals historian Emily Brand

On 10 July 1823, George, 6th Lord Byron, penned a furious letter. The cause of his discontent was a new French biographical essay. It was filled with the usual tawdry tales and already half-mythical events of his life – his rise to fame as a poet, the sharp wit and brooding air, the endless amours. (That with his half-sister goes tactfully unmentioned.)

But this familiar catalogue of grievance and gossip was not what offended him. The essay's author extended the insult to Byron's ancestors, describing his father as a vicious, cruel husband, branding his great-uncle – the 5th Lord – a violent recluse, and declaring that "bizarrerie" was a hereditary disease. "He may say of me whatever of good or evil please him," fumed the poet, "but I desire that he should speak of my relations only as they deserve."

Byron's relationship with his ancestry was intense and creatively productive. The estate he inherited at just ten years old – Newstead Abbey in Nottinghamshire – inspired some of his earliest poetry, and in his paternal forebears he identified echoes of his own hot-headedness, love for the sea, and tendency towards bad luck. In darker moments he even contemplated the inheritance of mental instability. In truth, though the poet looms large as one of history's great rakes and adventurers, his efforts pale in comparison with those of his Byronic predecessors.

Byron's less admirable qualities were certainly matched, if not surpassed, by his debauched father Jack and great-uncle William, 5th Lord Byron. The scandal for which Jack was most famous – seducing and impregnating the married Lady Carmarthen at the age of 21 – was just the beginning of an unabashed career of profligacy. On the death of this first wife, he married Catherine Gordon of Gight for her fortune, before abandoning her and their child (the future poet) when his son was just two.

Jack's letters paint a picture of a heavy drinker and wheedling liar, boasting of physical violence towards his servants and repeatedly hinting at an incestuous affair between himself and his sister Fanny. His parents footed the bill for his endless spending until they were forced to sell their London townhouse, and Jack eventually left England to escape his creditors. At his premature death from a lingering consumptive disease (possibly tuberculosis) less than a year later, he left nothing but debts to his infant son.

The poet's great-uncle and lordly predecessor William, known since the 19th century as the "Wicked Lord Byron", was no better. His irrepressible and reckless spending not only ravaged his own family's fortune and that of his wife, but eventually caused the ancestral estate at Newstead to fall into ruin. He (allegedly) attempted to abduct an actress, didn't attend his own son's funeral and had a trick for charming the elderly into rewriting their wills in his favour. Most famously of all, he stabbed an old friend in a petty tavern dispute and subsequently became the centre of a spectacular murder trial. For actual blood on his hands, the 5th Lord Byron easily surpasses his more famous great-nephew.

But the Byron gene pool wasn't just a mire of noxious entitlement. In his yearning for adventure, the poet found more positive inspiration in his grandfather Admiral John Byron, known as "Foul-weather Jack". This shipwreck survivor and wartime commander had in one trip in the 1760s not only claimed the Falklands for the British crown but also completed what was at the time the fastest circumnavigation of the globe and paved the way for the voyages of Captain Cook. He was a "gallant hero" for the British (if not exactly for anyone else).

Poetry and the pursuit of beauty were also a strand that had wound through the family since the 17th century, finding its champion in Isabella, Lady Carlisle – sister to "Foul-weather Jack" and great-aunt to the poet. Her insatiable appetite for the mountains, lakes and glaciers of Europe was perhaps exceeded only by her incurable penchant for falling in love with baronets a decade her junior. Her desperation to find true love would eventually prove her undoing, and prompt a self-imposed European exile in an attempt to escape society gossip – the poet would surely have sympathised.

'His great-uncle 'Wicked Lord Byron' was no better'

It's impossible to know how far the poet was shaped by his Byron blood, but his formative understanding of both himself and his place in the world was coloured by his admiration for his ancestors and their deeds, celebrated or scandalous. In 1823 he strove for his own greatness by joining the Greek struggle for independence – a tragically ill-fated scheme that saw him slip into a coma and die after contracting a fever before reaching any sort of battle, aged only 36. Nonetheless, he carried the Byron motto on his helmet, fulfilling an old promise made in his youthful poem, On Leaving Newstead Abbey:

"Abroad or at home, your remembrance imparting
New courage, he'll think upon glory and you."

Uncovering the truth

A powerful memoir about the Holocaust

I WANT YOU TO KNOW WE'RE STILL HERE
ESTHER SAFRAN FOER
Saturday Live 9.00am Radio 4
Esther Safran Foer's parents were the only members of their families to survive the Holocaust, and her powerful memoir recounts how she unearthed their tragic history. She's the mother of Jonathan Safran Foer, whose bestselling novel Everything Is Illuminated was inspired by her story. In I Want You to Know We're Still Here (HQ, £16.99), Safran Foer recalls how she combed through databases, sent off DNA samples and travelled to Ukraine, armed with only a hand-drawn map and a photograph, in search of distant cousins and the truth about her ancestors' lives and deaths under the Nazi regime.

TAYARI JONES
Open Book Sunday 4.00pm Radio 4
Last year US author Tayari Jones won the Women's Prize for Fiction for An American Marriage, and her 2011 novel Silver Sparrow has just been published in the UK for the first time (Oneworld, £16.99). Against a backdrop of 1980s Atlanta, Jones weaves a tale of family deceit and sisterhood. Two young women become close friends while navigating their teenage years, but one of them knows that they're half-sisters because their father has two families. It's an affecting story about family, love and marriage, and a film adaptation is in the pipeline.

GIRL WITH A PEARL EARRING
TRACY CHEVALIER
Girl with a Pearl Earring
Mon–Fri 10.45am, 7.45pm Radio 4
It's more than 20 years since Tracy Chevalier published her novel Girl with a Pearl Earring (HarperCollins, £8.99) inspired by Dutch master Johannes Vermeer's oil painting. Seamlessly blending history with fiction, it's been translated into 39 languages, adapted into an film, and is now a Radio 4 drama. It's set in 17th-century Delft, where a servant, Griet, catches the eye of the master of the house and is tasked with assisting in his studio. What follows is an intimate portrayal of the relationship between muse and artist. Chevalier's most recent novel, A Single Thread, is set in the 1930s and was inspired by the women who embroidered "kneelers" in Winchester Cathedral. RHIANNON THOMAS

JOE SWIFT OFFERS

Go wild!

Sow your own small flower meadow – it'll only cost you a few packets of seeds, says Joe Swift

NATURAL WILDFLOWER MEADOWS studded with cornflowers, corncockles and poppies are a summer delight and proof that nature, when left to its own devices, never disappoints. They're fabulous for wildlife, too. Sadly, they're in decline due to modern farming methods, but gardeners can make a difference.

It's often thought that to sow, grow and manage a wildflower meadow requires a lot of land. It certainly looks great large-scale, but the beauty of these plants is that they thrive in small patches of a few square metres, so are ideal for neglected areas or somewhere you're planning to do something with in the future. Sowing a small flower meadow isn't expensive either – just the price of a few packets of seed.

If you have an area of very poor soil in full sun, it's ideal for growing perennial wildflowers such as meadow cranesbill, field scabious and greater knapweed. They can be sown as seed, and are slower to establish, but once they get going, they come back year after year.

In most gardens, the soil has been beefed up over the years and made as fertile as possible; too fertile for many wildflowers to grow, while weeds and wild grasses enjoy the nutrients and tend to take over. If you have an area like this in full sun, it's ideal for a one-off seasonal fix: an annual flower mix can be sown now and will flower this summer.

PICK AND MIX

There are plenty of seed companies selling ready mixed packets, or you can choose a few that take your fancy and mix your own. The classic flowers are corncockle (pink, below left), cornflower (intense blue), corn chamomile (white daisy), corn marigold (yellow daisy), corn poppy (red) and California poppy (orange). Many others are just as easy, such as the gorgeous white Ammi majus and yellow tickseed.

Some companies sell mixes for specific soils (heavy clay, chalk, limestone, acidic), which are worth considering, as are 100 per cent native mixes, if that's important to you. There are also ornamental mixes based on colour shades, if you want to match them to your garden furniture.

HOW TO GROW

Dig over, weed and rake the soil, and sow directly at the rate the packet instructs. Don't be tempted to oversow. Lightly rake the seed in and water thoroughly. Water during dry spells while they establish, and remove any weeds. Try not to stand on any seedlings while weeding – it's a bit like playing Twister!

BRIGHT AND BEAUTIFUL
A wildflower meadow in full bloom is hard to beat

WATER WELL

Sustainability includes good water conservation. Established plants grown in the ground perform better and are able to cope with dry periods if their roots prospect deep into the soil. Young and newly planted ones, those grown in pots and many edibles do require a regular drink!

HOW TO WATER

Light sprinkling is a big no-no – you're often better off not watering at all. If only the surface soil is wetted, the plant's roots are drawn up to the top, discouraging strong root development. Water thoroughly, deep into the soil around the roots. A hose with a nozzle lets you stop the flow instantly, leading to less wastage. Scratch the surface of the soil; it may be dry on top, but nice and moist an inch or two below. Stand pots in saucers to prevent water draining away and place them out of the midday sun so they don't dry out so quickly.

WHERE TO WATER

Be efficient and water only where it's most needed, rather than randomly. Concentrate on pots and containers (which are free draining so may need watering even if it's rained), seedling plants and anything newly planted that's trying to establish a root system that could dry out and lead to a stressed plant. Leafy vegetables and moisture-loving edibles such as beans, peas, tomatoes and plants in the process of developing soft fruit also need good levels of moisture in the soil.

WHEN TO WATER

Water early in the morning or in the evening, so that the water doesn't evaporate in the heat of the day. I prefer the morning, as some softer plants may develop fungal diseases if left wet overnight. Avoid wetting delicate or young leaves in direct sunshine, as they may scorch.

DON'T WORRY ABOUT LAWNS

Lawns can be neglected during dry spells, rather than using tap water. The grass may go a bit yellow, but it won't die and will green up quickly after a decent rainfall. To retain moisture, raise the mower setting to cut it longer when it's dry.

BECOME A WATER COLLECTOR

If you have any shed, greenhouse or outbuilding roofs that can capture water, fit a water butt or two using a simple downpipe kit.

Great escapes

If you want to see Mexico's grand canyon, the South African savannah or Sri Lanka's tea country – let the train take the strain

The World's Most Scenic Railway Journeys
Friday 8.00pm Channel 5

THE CLOSEST YOU'LL get to a train adventure during lockdown may be by taking an armchair trip via The World's Most Scenic Railway Journeys. Soothingly narrated by Bill Nighy, each episode of this Channel 5 documentary follows a great rail trip from start to finish, with plenty of wide-open vistas soundtracked by jaunty music. The second series began with Scotland's Highland line (catch up via my5.tv), this week's trip transports us to South Africa – and there are more spectacular journeys to come...

RIDE OF A LIFETIME
Mexico's El Chepe runs through mountains and canyons to the Pacific

STEP BACK IN TIME ON SOUTH AFRICA'S LUXURY DURBAN SAFARI

Rovos Rail's lovingly restored vintage carriages have gleaming wood-panelled interiors and its private sleepers come with double or twin beds and en-suite bathrooms. This luxury operator does a range of three-day tours and The World's Most Scenic Railway Journeys takes us on its "Durban Safari": Pretoria to Durban via the grasslands of KwaZulu-Natal and past the brooding peaks of the Drakensberg Mountains.

You meander along at an average speed of just 25mph, and the itinerary includes excursions: a game drive at a private reserve where you can spot elephants, lions and rhinos, and a visit to Spionkop battlefield, one of the bloodiest spots in the Anglo-Boer War. In January 1900, British troops were left exposed on a mountain due to a tactical blunder and were massacred by Boer snipers. Among the survivors were Winston Churchill and Mahatma Gandhi, who was a stretcher-bearer for the Red Cross.

For more information go to rovos.com

The alternative South Africa's Blue Train is just as swish and rolls from Pretoria to Cape Town through vineyards, the peaks of the Western Cape and the Karoo desert, stopping at the diamond-mining town of Kimberley.

TAKE A ROLLERCOASTER RIDE ON MEXICO'S COPPER CANYON RAILROAD

Snaking through high peaks and plunging into North America's deepest canyon, northern Mexico's Chihuahua Pacifico Express – El Chepe for short – winds through the Tarahumara mountains and cavernous Copper Canyon, a series of six ravines that, combined, are four times longer than the Grand Canyon. The name Copper derives from the verdigris hue of its lichen-covered rock. The 653km line runs from near Chihuahua to Los Mochis on the Pacific coast, taking 16 hours.

Delayed by revolution, the challenges of the terrain and financial problems, the railway took a century to build and finally opened in 1961. Its engineering marvels include a vertiginous 180° loop inside a mountain and a 335ft-high bridge.

There is a choice of two trains: the ordinary commuter train that chugs all the way from Chihuahua; or, for 357km, taking nine hours and embarking at Creel, the Chepe Express, which has an open-air carriage and a restaurant car with domed windows. Its panoramic first stop, Divisadero, has a cable car that soars over two canyons and the world's longest zipline.

How much? A standard single on the Chepe Express is about £70, with first class £120.

SPECTACULAR
The Nine Arch Bridge viaduct between Demodara and Ella in Sri Lanka is nearly 100 years old and a marvel of engineering

EXPLORE SRI LANKA'S HIGH TEA COUNTRY BY RAIL

Sri Lanka's blue trains may not be as lavishly furnished as the trains in South Africa, but the views from the windows are second to none. Built by the Victorians to move the tea and coffee crops, the island's vertiginous railway wends from Colombo into the hills, stopping at the lakeside city of Kandy and climbing more than 6,000ft as it pootles through tea terraces and along misty ridges to the hill resort of Ella. From there, it's a short train ride to a viaduct so striking that it's become a tourist attraction – the towering Nine Arch Bridge.

As well as comfortable Chinese-built trains with air-conditioned first-class carriages, battered vintage trains with an observation car still run, too.

How much? A second-class seat is £2. First-class is £5 (which must be reserved through a travel agency).

The alternative India's Unesco-listed Kalka to Shimla line also offers glorious scenery at a sedate pace. Its "toy train" creaks along narrow-gauge tracks up to the hilltop station Shimla in the foothills of the Himalayas – the old summer capital of the British Raj.

Word of the Week – story

If there was ever a time to dive into the stories of film and books, it is now. The word "story" has a long history – and "story" and "history" were once fairly inseparable in meaning.

"Stories" were narratives of past events, accepted as true by virtue of age or long tradition. The word comes from the Latin historia, but was "reborrowed" into English after 1066, via the French word estoire. By the 1500s, "story" described dramatic representations of real events, eventually embracing both fact and fiction. We retain this ambiguity today as we read the story of a book, or a story in a newspaper.

"Storey", with the added "e", is essentially the same word, originally referring to decorated façades of buildings, depicting historical subjects – each storey telling a different story.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

Teacher's pet

LEARNING IS FUN
Karim Zeroual and Oti Mabuse (inset) are here to help

As a teacher, I've always found the BBC's education resources engaging to use in the classroom. But it's fantastic, during this period when so many children are having to learn at home, how quickly the BBC has made these resources easily accessible for everyone, through the Daily Lessons on the BBC Bitesize website. I direct my class to complete specific activities, and the children tell me how much they're enjoying them.

The daily Bitesize lessons on iPlayer are fun, too, and having familiar faces from TV (such as Karim Zeroual and Oti Mabuse) means that children are more likely to stay tuned! As a parent myself, I appreciate the wide range of age-appropriate material the BBC is providing.

DYSTOPIAN DRAMA

I would have by-passed Devs (BBC2) had I paid any attention to RT's lacklustre reviews, but as it was created by Alex Garland and I remembered his Ex-Machina, I tuned in. And Devs does not disappoint, with its extraordinary happenings in an ordinary setting, interesting characters, an underlying creepy atmosphere and a killer soundtrack.

Eve Levin New Malden, south-west London

ANYTHING BUT NORMAL

MR FIX-IT
The Repair Shop's Tim Weeks

I binge-watched Normal People (Monday BBC1/iPlayer)! There was no way I could wait, having got so involved with the two main characters, Connell and Marianne – beautifully played by Paul Mescal and Daisy Edgar-Jones – that I had to find out what happened.

This wonderful drama was a sensitively filmed, heartbreaking story of complicated young love, and the emotions portrayed were raw.

Fiona Quinn Bromsgrove, Worcestershire

...This adaptation creates a beautiful tension between the young lovers. The close-ups on their faces show both insecurity and intimacy and the actors are mesmerising as they chat, argue and love. Their relationship shows that life doesn't always go smoothly and that patience is a virtue: a good message for these times.

Gonca Cox Hinckley, Leicestershire

I'M TIM WEEKS

I am The Repair Shop's (Wednesday BBC1) gramophone expert and I was pleased to see myself mentioned twice in RT (25 April). However, the photo used was of a different Tim Weeks – the one mainly associated with Bargain Hunt. I can see how this happened; it is a bizarre coincidence that there should be two people with the same, not particularly common, name both appearing in BBC programmes about the antique business. But this is really what I look like!

Tim Weeks (the Gramophone Guru) Chichester, West Sussex

NAIL-BITING FINISH

What a terrific end to a thrilling series of Race across the World (26 April BBC2). It was a chance not only to see stunning scenery during the lockdown, but also to be part of the lives of some interesting competitors. I can't wait for the next series.

Peter Edwards Hayton, East Yorkshire

EVE'S A PUDDING NOW

Phoebe Waller-Bridge must be distraught at what has happened to her remarkable creation Killing Eve (Sunday BBC1/iPlayer).

Series one, which she wrote, was innovative and exciting. Series two, with a new writer, was good, but inevitably not quite as good. Now we come to series three, with new writers again, and it's a mess. That element of cheeky wickedness has disappeared. What a shame.

Terry Griffin Lancing, West Sussex

IT'S JUST SEW GOOD

The Great British Sewing Bee (Wednesday BBC1) is such a pleasure. The contestants are a delight, judged with kindness by Patrick Grant and Esme Young, who manage to see the positives in every garment. And Joe Lycett as the host is a joy. As someone who struggles to sew a button on, I am full of admiration at the skills on display, and the good humour sewn through every disaster or otherwise.

Judith Daniels Great Yarmouth, Norfolk

IS THIS LOVE?
Normal People's Marianne and Connell (Daisy Edgar-Jones and Paul Mescal)

LAUGH... AND CRY

I watched series two of After Life (Netflix) in one sitting. Ricky Gervais again made us laugh and cry, and cry all over again, covering the full spectrum of what makes us human – sadness, happiness, hope and loneliness. Although we can't currently reach out to people in the way we used to, we can't forget the power of reaching out.

Tegen Jones Worcester

...After Life is insightful and amusing, but why must it be so full of

BBC BITESIZE DAILY; RADIO TIMES ARCHIVE

PIONEER
Lynn Faulds Wood on the Watchdog set, 1985. Inset, right: with Sophie Raworth in 2014 when they co-presented Watchdog Test House

LYNN FAULDS WOOD 1948–2020

‘Lynn saved people’s lives...’

Sophie Raworth on her friend and role model

I’ve known Lynn since I was 14. My parents met her and her husband John Stapleton in the Caribbean in the 1980s. My dad was taking photos for a hotel. Lynn and John were on holiday with other famous TV types of the time. When my parents returned, they brought back with them pictures of faces I’d only ever seen on our television. I was star-struck.

As Britain’s first married TV presenters, they were fronting the BBC’s Watchdog programme and Lynn did it with the zest, energy and determination that burnt inside her until her very last day. When she saw a wrong, she wanted to right it. And she wouldn’t give up. Look around your home now. I guarantee there’s something in it that is safer because of her. Moulded plugs, kettles with short leads to stop young children pulling scalding water over themselves, biros with a small hole in the cap to stop people choking if they swallowed them. Lynn was behind those changes. She saved lives.

Not long after my parents met them, Lynn and John moved in next door. They both inspired me to follow in their footsteps. As a woman on TV at the time, she was pioneering. I admired her confidence, courage and tenacity. But she also had a huge heart. She was quite simply a great friend. I used to wander in and out of their back gate, dropping in unannounced for a cup of tea and a chat. We went on family holidays with them.

I still remember the shock we all felt when Lynn was diagnosed with advanced bowel cancer 30 years ago. Their son Nick was only three, and she was told she had a 30 per cent chance of survival. No one talked about cancer then – the word terrified us all.

I didn’t think she’d survive, but not only did she defy the odds, she used her experience of bowel cancer to save other people’s lives. At a time when people spoke in hushed tones about cancer, Lynn started talking loudly about poo and bowel habits, making sure people knew the early signs.

I last saw Lynn four days before she died. I was dropping food at my parents’ house and she popped up over the fence, chatting and laughing as she always did. On the Thursday night when she collapsed, she had been leading the applause for NHS and key workers. Just hours later, she would be in hospital herself.

I was at work and had to announce her death that night on the BBC News. It was surreal. I took a deep breath, dug my nails hard into the palm of my hand and read out the words I’d written.

Afterwards, I smiled. Lynn was funny about her age. She didn’t want people to know. Yet there I was, almost 40 years after I’d met her, not only discovering the truth, but also telling millions of people. I often laughed with Lynn. She had a great laugh. I think that would have amused her.

“language”? Time was when the f-word started to appear infrequently and in context, but now there is also the c-word – with even Penelope Wilton using it, which felt shocking.
Carol Hay Beverley, East Riding of Yorkshire

THE JOY OF GRAYSON

In these strange and stressful times, episode one of Grayson’s Art Club (27 April C4) was a ray of sunshine – funny, intelligent and inspiring.

Grayson Perry’s joy in art and laughter brightened my day. And his relationship with his wife Philippa was so touching and encouraging to see at a time when we’re acutely aware how important our loved ones are.
Sarah Eddy Bicester, Oxfordshire

...I could listen to Bob Ross in The Joy of Painting (Mon–Thu BBC4) all night. He has such a relaxing voice, and throws in some excellent tips, along with describing his “happy” trees and leaves... and the end result is always superb!

I looked him up and was sad to see he passed away in 1995 at the age of 52.
Jane Bozian Wem, Shropshire

...What a wonderful treat Museums in Quarantine (27–30 April BBC4) was, with arts programmes at a good time ▷

YOU ASK US

What's the poem read by Idris Elba?

Please could you print the words of the poem read in that video about the coronavirus, shown on the BBC? What is it called?
Olive Green, Northiam, East Sussex
The poem, Don't Quit by Edgar A Guest – a British-born American, known as "the people's poet" – was first published in a syndicated US newspaper column in 1921 and it's perfect for a time like this. The verses used by the BBC run:

When things go wrong, as they sometimes will/When the road you're trudging seems all up hill/ When the funds are low but the debts are high/And you want to smile, but you have to sigh/ When care is pressing you down a bit/Rest if you must – but don't you quit.

Life is strange with its twists and turns/As every one of us sometimes learns/And many failures turn about/When he might have won had he stuck it out/Don't give up, though the pace seems slow/You may succeed with another blow.

Success is failure turned inside out/ The silver tint of the clouds of doubt/And you can never tell how close you are/It may be near when it seems so far/So stick to the fight when you're hardest hit/It's when things seem worst that you must not quit.

AMBRIDGE'S FINEST

I'm pleased to have repeats of key episodes of The Archers (Radio 4) rather than miss out on my fix completely, but I wish I'd had the opportunity to nominate my favourite episode. My choice would be the one where Nelson Gabriel tried to get David's then girlfriend Sophie between his black satin sheets – it would be wonderful to hear Jack May's fruity tones again.

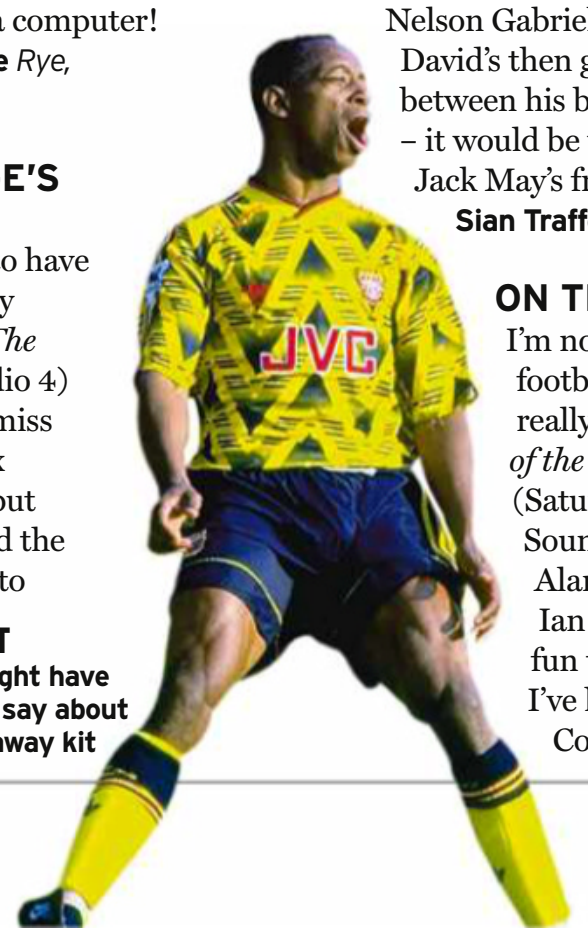
SHIRT ALERT

Ian Wright might have something to say about this Arsenal away kit



GETTY; SHUTTERSTOCK

ON THE BALL

I'm not much of a football fan, but I'm really enjoying Match of the Day: Top Ten (Saturday BBC1/ Sounds). Gary Lineker, Alan Shearer and Ian Wright are such fun to watch, and I've learnt a lot.
Could I suggest a top ten football strips – or better still, a top ten worst strips? It would be so interesting to look at the changes in length of shorts, garishness of shirt designs etc. Surely the lads would have something to say about the kit they were made to wear?

CHRIS HEMSWORTH

‘Home-schooling is a challenge’

TV or homework? The Thor star on an epic struggle with his kids…

What’s your television set-up?
We’ve got a nice, comfortable sofa that’s big enough for my wife [Elsa Pataky], three kids and me. Often, the kids [daughter India Rose, seven, and twin sons Tristan and Sasha, six] slump across the two of us while we all watch TV together.

Where is home?
We live in Byron Bay, a small coastal town in Australia. It’s a beautiful mixture of the tropical, rolling hills and farmland. I don’t think you get that unique diversity anywhere else in the world.

So what are the Hemsworths currently enjoying on TV?
When the kids are in bed, we’ve been diving deep into the third season of Ozark, we absolutely love it. It’s intriguing and intense, with wonderful performances and fantastic writing.

How much TV do you watch?
We’re trying to monitor how much we watch so we’re not glued to the screen all day. Instead, television is used as a reward for the kids if they get their schoolwork done or if they tidy their rooms. If not, the TV rights are removed!

How have you been coping during the lockdown?
The kids are keeping me busy – anyone with kids can identify with that! Home-schooling has definitely been a challenge. We’re attempting to do it, but most of the time is chewed up with negotiation to do the schoolwork. I have so much more respect for teachers now! My mother was a teacher, but I had no idea how tough it would be. Then to unwind, I’ve been listening to meditations with my kids. That’s been really helpful.

You’re now known as the star of the Thor movies, but you started your career with roles in Australian TV shows, including Home and Away. What do you remember from that time?
I learned so much from working on Home and Away. It was a fantastic learning tool because I was given little glimpses of fame during that experience. That show taught me a lot about the industry. You can read as many books as you want, but the vast majority of your learning curve and knowledge comes from being on a set.

Are you ready to return to work?
Now more than ever, I feel very motivated to return to work whenever that becomes possible. I’ve been talking to people in Hollywood and there’s a lot of fear and uncertainty out there. Nobody knows what’s going to happen after this, but I don’t think our appetite for film and television is going to go away. In fact, I think our appetite might be increased now, due to people wanting more of an escape.

Is it to tough to leave the family when you go away with work?
It never gets any easier, but it’s been interesting to do this press tour for my new Netflix movie Extraction from home. My kids have commented a lot about how much they prefer it rather than me being dragged away from home. I try to get in as many hugs and kisses and family time as I can prior to leaving for work. Plus, I try very hard to bring films here to Australia to shoot. We’re filming the next Thor movie in Australia, which I’m very pleased about.

What do you think the future holds for TV and movies?
People are looking into the logistics of filming and how we go about shooting after all this ends. Maybe we will have smaller crews and more isolated sets? I don’t know. There are people far smarter than me who are working hard to analyse that part of the industry. However, I do believe there is always going to be a need, a hunger and a want for art.

NOTHING TO WATCH?

MY HOBBY I can’t wait to get out surfing again. There are beaches open, but I’m social distancing.

MY BOOK The Boy, the Mole, the Fox and the Horse by Charlie Mackesy is an amazing read.

MY MOVIE Gladiator is one of my favourite movies. Russell Crowe is a big inspiration to me.
