Biochemical and Biotechnological Applications of Electrospray Ionization Mass Spectrometry Ed. A.P. Snyder American Chemical Society, Washington, DC 1995
Hardback xii 601 p

This is a multi author book developed from an ACS symposium on electrospray MS which took place in 1995. There are twenty-six chapters concerning areas ranging from the technique itself, characteristics of electrospray to application to biological samples such as structural characterizations of lipids, protein sequence, Glycosides and even atmospheric pressure MS for environmental analysis. it is a useful contribution in a fast moving field.
