

Editorial

Our readers will find "Urological Research" somewhat changed in the near future.

Short editorials on pertinent urological topics will be published as soon as suitable material is received.

Readers will also find from time to time reviews on subjects of special interest, intended to provide information upon recent research in varied special fields; references will be included as well. The first review of this kind - on "Urodynamics" - follows on the next pages of this issue.

In other issues will be included reports upon developments in scientific urology in various countries.

More clinically minded readers will find more papers dealing with clinical research topics.

We hope that these changes will add to the interest of "Urological Research", and keep our readers more fully informed of events in scientific urology around the world.
