UPTIME
THE DISK MONTHLY

Dear Commodore Enthusiast,

It was four years ago when I returned to the U.S. from Japan to start UpTime. I had been working there for several years on large-scale computer systems for the defense industry. Although I had grown to love the people and the culture of that country, I longed to apply my experience to the area of computing I found most exciting – personal computing. It seemed to me then (and still does today) that PCs should be a real source of personal enrichment for their owners, a kind of self-contained home entertainment center. It seemed that computer owners should be able to switch on their machines and choose to learn something new, rediscover the pleasure of a good challenge or gain a satisfying advantage in the area of finance or personal management. The only thing missing at the time was the software.

I founded UpTime to provide that variety of experiences and it's gratifying to know, through our subscribers' comments, that we have succeeded. Today, the UpTime team of Programming Editors are more selective than ever and every UpTime disk seems to offer a greater level of enrichment for our subscribers and friends.

I hope you enjoy UpTime every month, but in case you don't, or in case you haven't been with us very long, let me extend a personal invitation to look through our list of back issues. There are disks there I think you and your family will use again and again. And every single one is backed by our 110% satisfaction guarantee.

Happy Computing,

Bill Kelly
