은 un, pcle. [after consonants; alternant shape after vowels is ·는, abbr. ·ㄴ] "as for" (marks the topic, reducing the emphasis on the preceding word or phrase in order to highlight the rest of the sentence for any of a number of reasons, e. g.): 1. Because the sentence is long, you choose some part or parts as the least essential, the most dispensable. 나는 지난 토요일 밤.에 공원.에 서 친구.를 만났다 I MET A FRIEND LAST SATURDAY NIGHT IN THE PARK. 지난 토요일 밤.에 나는 내.가 공원.에 서 친구.를 만났다 Last Saturday night I MET A FRIEND IN THE PARK. 공원.에 서 나는 지난 토요일 밤.에 내.가 친구.를 만났다 In the park LAST SATURDAY NIGHT I MET A FRIEND. 친구.는 지난 토요일 밤.에 공원.에 서 내.가 만났다 I MET my friend LAST SATURDAY NIGHT IN THE PARK. 지난 토요일 밤.에 나는 공원.에 서 친구.를 만났다 Last Saturday night I MET A FRIEND IN THE PARK (in the park). 달.은 한 해.에 열-두 번 돈다 The moon rotates twelve times a year. 나라.는 주권.과 영토.와 국민.으로 되어 있다 A nation is made up of sovereignty, territory, and people. 2. Because the item has already been mentioned before, you reduce the emphasis in repeating it. 복순-이.가 달.을 쳐-다 봤다; 달.은 매우 밝았다 Pokswun-i looked up at the moon; the moon was very bright. 복순-이.가 달.을 쳐-다 봤다; 그리고 그 애.는 슬퍼졌다 Pokswun-i looked up at the moon, and she became sad. 3. Some other part of the sentence demands stronger emphasis because it is interrogative or negative in meaning. 너.는 무엇.을 하는.야 What are you doing? 떡.은 누가 먹었.는.야 Who ate the rice cake? 김 선생.은 언제 떠-나시.는.야 When is Mr. Kim leaving? 구경.은 못 했.어.요? Didn't you do any sightseeing? 4. Two items in contrast are reduced in emphasis in order to play up the points of contrast. (NOTE: English emphasizes the items, not the contrasts.) 나는 부산.서 오고, 친구.는 마산.서 왔다 I came from Pusan, and my friend came from Masan. 이 것.은 좋지.만 그 것.은 나빠.요 THIS one is good, while THAT one is bad. 복순-이.는 부지런-하지.만, 아우.는 좀 게으르다 Pokswun-i is hard-working, but her little brother is a bit lazy. NOTE: The meaning of this particle is mutually exclusive with that of ·야/·이야 ('only if it be') and ·도 ('also, even'); the particle freely follows other particles and particle sequences, but ·이/·가 (subject) and ·을/·를 (object) drop. ㅈ [치읓] Ch, ch [chiuch], n. 1. a letter of the Korean alphabet, 10th in the usual order, typically pronounced by most speakers as a lax voiceless prepalatal affricate (by some, especially Northern, speakers as an alveolar affricate, especially before back unrounded vowels u, e, and a) with heavy and often velarized aspiration: [d͡ʑʰ]. A morpheme-final -ch is heard only before a particle or ending beginning with a vowel, or before the copula 이다; in other environments the -ch is replaced by -t or a reflex of -t. Many speakers treat noun-final -ch as if it were -s. In Seoul speech chi often replaces -th + i (-), so that 밭 이다 path ita 'it's a field' sounds like 밭치다 pachita. Words with ch are sometimes variants, or sometimes connotational synonyms (here usually called PARA-INTENSIVES), of corresponding words with c or cc. The sound ch is sometimes an automatic metathesis of a base-final -h with a suffix-initial c; thus 종지 coh.ci sounds like 조치 cochi. The combinations -pch-, -kch-, -mch-, -ngch-, -lch- all occur, but the expected combination -tch- reduces to a simple -ch-; thus 밭치다 path.chita sounds like 밭치다 pachita. 2. the 10th in an itemized series: J., K.
